TOKYO REBUILT

Strolling Down a Tokyo Lane.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

ONE who witnessed the destruction wrought by earthquake and fire in 1923, returned to Tokyo today, he would hardly recognize the Japanese capital, for on the former debris-strewn site has risen the new Tokyo.

Rebuilt Tokyo is a city of broad streets, of many splendid buildings, of spacious parks. For the tourist it has lost much of its charm; but, after all, it belongs to the Japanese, not to the tourist. Old property lines were obliterated to widen and straighten the streets, because bitter experience had proved that broad streets serve to prevent the spread of fire, and because new knowledge of hygiene taught that the public health demands light and air.

The buildings of the new Tokyo are solidly constructed, to resist both earthquakes and fire. The parks are spacious because the people have taken to athletics, because they still want gardens to wander in, and because huge parks make forever impossible that horror of 1923, when 30,000 people, fleeing with their possessions to a small open square, were caught there by the fire and burned to death. The old wooden bridges that spanned the many canals of the city have been replaced by modern stone or steel and concrete bridges, which, if less picturesque, will not burn and will carry safely the busses which go to all parts of Tokyo.

As most foreigners in Tokyo stay at the Imperial hotel, that is the natural place to start a cursory inspection of this strange new-old city.

Directly opposite the hotel is Hibiya park. Its great athletic field is almost constantly in use. Actually the boys begin to play baseball there as soon as dawn makes it possible to see the ball.

Beyond the azaleas is an artificial lake, with a great bronze crane and a wisteria arbor and dwarf trees—just what we think of as typically Japanese. Still farther along, there are playgrounds for children and tennis courts and an outdoor gymnasium, with parallel bars and all the usual paraphernalia. This part of the park is always crowded. You see some first-class athletic stunts and can watch excellent tennis, and you begin to wonder whether the artificial lake is not meant for the tourists and the tennis courts for the Japanese.

Girls in School Uniform. More of Hibiya park is devoted to the new Japan than to the old; so, also, among the crowds of people in the park, more are dressed in European than in Japanese clothes. The young men playing tennis are in flannels and sweaters; the old men watching them are generally in kimonos and heavy overgarments.

The girls, who so eagerly take part in some of the milder sports, are generally dressed in the blue uniform characteristic of the schools—a uniform which would be appropriate to any American school, if American schoolgirls cared nothing about fashion. If it is raining, as it so often is, these schoolgirls carry ugly black alpaca umbrellas. Their mothers, on the other hand, who are dressed in Japanese clothes, carry lovely, broad-spreading, paper umbrellas, gay in color and at the same time serviceable. If you look down from an upper window on a rainy day, the street seems strewn with lovely flat flowers.

The clothes in Tokyo are always interesting. Most of the people one sees in the main business section are dressed in European clothes, and a large proportion, especially among the young people, throughout the city; but there seems to be no hard and fast rule. You will see a man dressed exactly as he would be in New York talking with a friend who is entirely American as to clothes, except for wooden clogs; and perhaps the third member of the group may wear American shoes, a kimono, and a bowler hat.

But what do these people who have adopted European dress do when they go home? Perhaps the answer is in the architecture of the better class of recently built private houses. The rich man has his European house, but this European house almost invariably has its Japanese wing, where there are no chairs, but soft white mats on the floor; where there is no clutter of furniture and pictures; rather, a single picture, a single spray of flowers, a lovely, low, red lacquer table, and peace; where the beauty of the room lies in the satin texture of the wood used, in proportion, and simplicity and the almost exquisite cleanliness.

They Cling to Their Clogs.

There is no doubt that Japanese clothes are more comfortable than ours, except that the foreigner would always be worried by the shoes. And yet it is these wooden clogs to which the people seem to cling most tenaciously. Shoe shops are everywhere and are among the most interesting for a foreigner, since here are footgear for men and women, for girls and maidens and staid married women. Shoes change with the age of the wearer as much as with the purpose for which they are worn. Always of wood or straw, their trimming changes in color and material and shape, so that in a shoe shop you can study the fashions as they have been ordained by custom.

There are no Paris dressmakers or London tailors who set the fashions as they please. In Japan the cut of dress does not change from year to year, but only from youth to age. Little boys are dressed in sober colors, little girls in the very gayest of flowered kimonos. Then, as girls grow up, they adopt plain colors, subdued and lovely in tint, set off by elaborate obis, or sashes, of heavy brocaded silk.

The most famous shopping street of Tokyo, the Ginza, was utterly destroyed by the fire and earthquake. It is today by no means a beautiful street, its buildings of uneven height and of every kind of architecture.

Here are the great department stores, comparable with similar stores in the United States, often similarly arranged, displaying their goods attractively. They are rather more expensive than other shops, but carry only good quality and have fixed prices. For this reason they are popular with the Japanese and seem always to be crowded.

Bicycles Are Numerous.

The Ginza is banal except for the people; and, after all, it is always the people who make a street. There are very few streets in this world worth remembering empty. The Ginza is always crowded. There are trolley cars and buses and taxis, a few private motors, a rare jinricksha (generally containing a tourist), and countless bicycles. It seems as if most of the bicycles of the world were in Tokyo, and that most of those in Tokyo must be in the Ginza—that is, until you go into another street.

And there seem to be more trick bicycle riders in Tokyo than in all the circuses of Europe and America, only in Tokyo they perform on the street and do not know they are performing. Not only can a man on a bicycle wind his way unconcerned through crowds hurrying in all directions, but he can do it carrying aloft a three-tiered tray filled with bowls of soup.

One goes to the Ginza again and again, partly because it is the place one naturally goes to buy anything, from fruit to a Mikimoto pearl or an umbrella; but principally because it is a wonderful place to get a cross-section of the life of the city.

The Imperial palace, with its vast walled grounds, is the heart of Tokyo. This was originally the palace of the shoguns, who as war lords, felt they should be well protected. They built, therefore, a tremendous moat around the palace grounds, a length of perhaps two miles. Outside of this, several hundred yards from the inner moat, was another, the outer moat, and between the two no building was permitted.

Business Buildings Look Western.

In front of the double bridges leading to the palace is a broad expanse of tree-dotted land, a relic of the open space decreed by the shoguns. It is not cut by boulevards, but still separates the palace grounds from the Marunouchi, the important business section of Tokyo. Here are the railroad station, the great office buildings, the Imperial theater, the banks, all solidly built, all Western in architecture, but all with that subtle and indefinable touch which makes them Japanese.

The Marunouchi, the Nihonbashi, and adjoining districts of the city might be a part of Chicago or New York, except that, on account of earthquake conditions, no skyscrapers are permitted. One or two of the great banks are as fine as bank buildings anywhere, and in the vaults of the Mitsui bank it seems that much of the wealth of the world might be stored, and safely stored.

The new American embassy is a handsome building, on a hill about a mile from the palace, but very near the Gaimusho, or foreign office.

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

BLACK HAWK

When, in 1804, the Sauk and Foxes signed the treaty surrendering all their lands on the east side of the Mississippi river, it was not clearly understood by the entire people that they were giving up this part of the country. This was because they were allowed to remain there until after the War of 1812.

Black Hawk, Keokuk, the oily trouble maker, declined to interest himself in the matter, and with many of the people, moved across into what is now Iowa. Black Hawk, however, declared that he had been deceived regarding the terms of the treaty of 1804, and, with his followers, declined to leave. He tried to interest some of the other tribes in the region in an uprising, and managed to create so much trouble that the militia were sent against him. He and his people were forewarned of this move, and before the militia had reached his village, it was deserted. The empty lodges were burned as a token of the white man's displeasure, and a fortnight afterward, at a conference, Black Hawk signed an agreement to keep the peace, and to join his people on the other side of the Mississippi.

This was in June. The next winter was spent in negotiations with tribes in every direction. Black Hawk had signed the peace treaty because he must. Now he was trying to start war if he could, and because he did not understand the white man's ways, he felt himself justified in his conduct.

Spring came, and the Sauk chief began his campaign. Had the whites remained in ignorance of his movements a few weeks longer, so that he could have recruited more men from the other tribes, perhaps the story of the Black Hawk war would have been different, but four days after he crossed the river into the eastern territory again, he was discovered. The settlers were warned, and troops were mustered to pursue him.

The militia which assumed this duty was not the sort of troops to send against a man like Black Hawk. He routed them in an engagement on May 14, 1832, and then turned his attention to the settlements along the frontier, killing and burning, while the soldiers were almost powerless to do anything against the formidable band. It was not until July that the Sauk suffered any great loss, but volunteers under Gen. James D. Henry overtook him on the 21st of that month, and defeated him, with a loss of 68 warriors. This was the turn of fortune for the great Sauk leader. He retreated, but was overtaken by the troops, who again attacked him so determinedly that 40 of his men were captured, and 150 driven into the river. Those who crossed were cut off by the Sioux, who were their enemies, and the insurrection was definitely put down.

Black Hawk escaped to the north, but the Winnebago, whom he had endeavored to enlist in the cause, followed and captured him, and he was made a prisoner of the United States. He was held for more than a month at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, and then was taken on a tour of the eastern cities, where people crowded to see the fallen warrior. The United States Literary Gazette of Philadelphia, wrote him up in enthusiastic style: "Black Hawk was sitting in a chair, and apparently depressed in spirits. He is about sixty-five, of middling size, with a head that would excite the envy of a phrenologist—one of the finest that Heaven ever let fall on the shoulder of an Indian."

In 1837 Black Hawk, with Keokuk, again went east, and on his return he settled near Iowaville, and died there on October 3 of the next year.

The valiant Sauk was not allowed to rest in quiet. His body was stolen, and the bones prepared for articulation. Perhaps the skeleton would have been displayed to the curious as the living man had been, but the governor of the territory protested, and the bones were restored to Iowa. They were placed among the collections of the Burlington Historical society, where they remained until 1855, when the building containing them was burned.

In an old account of Black Hawk's life, we find the following lines by Freneau quoted: "What fiend could thus disturb the peaceful dead? Remembrance pointing to what last he said: 'Prepare the hollow tomb, and place me low, My trusty bow and arrows by my side; For long the journey is that I must go, Without a partner and without a guide.'"

Pensive Comment

"Some day you expect to go to heaven," said the earnest friend.

"Of course," answered Senator Sorghum.

"You deserve to be serene and happy at last."

"Yet it will be hard to shake off the habit of a busy life. I'm not sure there won't be more interesting material for investigation in the other place."

John's Mother Praises Doctor

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, headachy, half-sick, feverish, restless, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, you know that nine times out of ten it's a sign his little stomach and bowels need purging. And when you know that for over fifty years leading physicians have endorsed one preparation for this condition, there doesn't seem to be any reason for "trying" things.

Rich, fruity California Fig Syrup clears the little stomach and bowels gently, harmlessly and in a hurry. It regulates the bowels, gives tone and strength to them and to the stomach; and helps to give your child new strength, energy and vitality. Thousands of Western mothers praise it. Mrs. Joseph W. Hill, 4306 Bedford Ave., Omaha, Nebraska, says: "I'll never forget the doctor who got me to give my baby boy, John, California Fig Syrup. Nothing else seemed to help his weak bowels. That was when he was just a baby. He suffered a good deal before I gave him Fig Syrup, but it stopped his trouble quick. I have used it with him for colds and little upset spells ever since. I consider him a Fig Syrup boy."

Insist on the genuine article. See that the carton bears the word "California." Over four million bottles used a year.

Favors Love-Making School

Love-making should be taught, not learned by experience, declared Prof. A. E. Heath, of Swansea, Wales, in an address at the social hygiene council summer school. "We should not dare to play the violin without knowing anything about it," he said, "and yet we do not seem to think it necessary to learn this important art of love-making. There would be more hope if appeals to the younger people are made on esthetic rather than moral grounds," he added.

Power of Gases

Helium and hydrogen gases have the greatest lifting powers. Hydrogen is more powerful, although helium is the more satisfactory as it is non-inflammable and inert. Helium will lift 0.066 pounds per cubic foot under ordinary conditions, while hydrogen will lift 0.071 pounds per cubic foot.

Old Norman Trees

A tree census of Normandy disclosed the fact that there are many multi-centenarians in the forests. A yew tree in the village cemetery of Saint Ursin (Manche) was planted 900 years ago. There is also a colossal yew tree 32 feet around at Blondiere which is known to have been growing in the Seventh century.

Explaining Sympathy

Sympathy is in great degree a result of the mood we are in at the moment; anger forbids the emotion. On the other hand, it is easiest taken on when we are in a state of most absolute self-satisfaction.—Lew Wallace.

Halo Long Employed

There is evidence that aureoles or halos were in use in earliest times as an attribute to the deities. Aureoles have been found with the pictures of the gods on some of the coins of the Indian kings Kanishka, Huvishka and Vasudeva, 58 B. C. to A. D. 41. They are also found in the depiction of Egyptian deities, from which their use spread to the Greeks and Romans.

Lake Dwellings

The name "lake dwelling" is applied to human habitations built usually upon foundations of piles or posts, but also constructed of trunks of trees, brush, earth or stone, and erected on the shallow borders of lakes, rivers, the other inland waters. These structures abounded in Switzerland and adjacent parts of Italy, France and Germany in the Stone and Bronze ages, but are known to have existed in many other parts of the world.

As They Descend Trees

The opossum, like the bear, raccoon and most tree-climbing animals except squirrels, comes down a tree tail first by preference, although he may reverse the method when in a hurry. The coati, a relative of the raccoon found in Central and South America, is the only tree-climbing animal of any size which regularly comes down a tree head first.

Army Officers Lose Soft Positions in Washington

Swivel Chair Corps Ordered to Serve With Troops.

Washington.—In the ranks of the swivel chair officers' corps here in Washington there is a gloom befitting the loss of a major engagement. But the casualties are ahead of them, instead of behind. For specific instructions have been issued by the War department on the orders of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, ousting valiant lieutenants and doughty colonels from a scene where a uniform is a passport to society, and sending them back to supervise "squads east" and "squads west" on dusty drill fields. The order is in keeping with the program laid down two years ago by the then Inspector Gen. Hugh A. Drum, who conceived the idea of having officers actually serve with troops. Not Effective Until Next Year. The order is not as harsh as it might have been, however, for it provides that the reduction is to be accomplished in the process of normal relief and need not be completed until the end of the present government year, June 30, 1933. Despite the order a total of 893 officers out of a total authorized strength of 12,000 will still be detached on special duty, most of them in or near the National Capital. When Representative Ross Collins (Dem., Miss.), chairman of the house military affairs committee, and other members of congress renew their drive at the next session of congress to cut the officer personnel of the army from 12,000 to 10,000, the large number of officers taken away from troops and given socially pleasant posts will, it is understood, furnish one of their points of argument. Changes to Be Made. As an example of the gaps that are going to be created in the Washington military sector, 16 officers will be taken from the War department general staff, some 50 from the offices of chiefs of arms and services, 39 from the Third corps area and department headquarters, 145 from the staffs and faculties of the various schools, 342 from their studies at service and civilian schools. Under the new regulations the judge advocate general's office loses 8 officers, the adjutant general's office 5, the inspector general's office 1, the quartermaster general's office 5, the surgeon general's office 2, the chief of finance's office 1, chief of engineers' office 1, the chief of ordnance's office 3, the chief signal officer's office 2, the chief of chemical warfare service's office 2, the chief of the military bureau's office 5, the chief of cavalry's office 1, the chief of field artillery's office 3; the chief of coast artillery's office 1, chief of infantry's office 6, and the chief of air corps' office 14. There is no reduction in the allotment for the offices of the chief bureau, of insular affairs nor the chief of chaplains. Even with the new cut in effect the number of officers not serving with active troops will still number 893, or nearly one-twelfth of the army's officer strength.

IGNORANCE

Mary, aged five, coming home from an afternoon's association with a companion of her own age expresses in forcible and unmistakable terms her surprise and her dissatisfaction over her young friend's lack of acquaintance with what to her erudite mind are the simplest facts of life. "Why, she don't know anything," Mary informed her mother. "Ethel's awful ignorant. She don't even know that Christ died or that he rose again, or that paper is made of rags." It seemed indeed inexcusable ignorance for one living for five years in a civilized, not to say Christian, community. I have myself, however, at an even more mature age than five, been quite shocked at what seemed to me then the most appalling ignorance of people whom I met. What is ignorance, anyway? I suppose, if the truth were told, the ignorant person is the one who doesn't know the things that you know. We measure knowledge by our own training or experience. I was quite surprised the other day to find that Tilden, who has always before this time seemed a well-trained person, did not know the meaning of rocco. Two or three years ago I dropped into the little town of Segovia, where two thousand years ago Caesar built an aqueduct that is standing in perfect condition today. I could speak no Spanish and the natives were completely unacquainted with English. They tried their best, with only moderate success, to make me understand this and that and the other. I am sure they thought me very ignorant, as indeed I was, of everything from how to order a meal to how to manage the stubborn donkeys which trudged along the narrow little streets. I have no doubt but that if I had visited my city cousins at the time they visited us, I should have seemed quite as ignorant to them as they did to me. I had at that time never ridden on a railway train; I had never been in a city—I had not seen an ocean or a mountain. I knew nothing but the farm, and the broad prairies which stretched endlessly in all directions. I was quite ignorant. © 1932, Western Newspaper Union.

Twenty-Eight Inches Is Life Margin in Head-on Motor Car Collision

Scientist Uses Ruler in Automobile Collision.

State College, Pa.—The difference between death in a head-on collision in an automobile traveling 30 miles an hour and safety is about 28 inches. The accident which proves this, and the modifications in motor car construction which it suggests, are described by H. L. Yeagley, physicist of Pennsylvania State college. "I was climbing the side of Nittany mountain," he says, "when a car came around a curve at 30-mile speed, with the driver asleep at the wheel. "It dashed head-on into a concrete abutment. Though the car was a total wreck, its driver was only bruised." The scientist made measurements to account for the seeming miracle, and found it was no miracle at all. Examination revealed first that the car moved about two feet between the time the bumper hit the concrete and complete stoppage. The steering wheel, which had supported the head, arms and chest of the sleeping driver, had been bent forward about six inches. "From this," says Mr. Yeagley, "it is apparent that the man was stopped through a distance of about 2 1/2 feet (30 inches). This is about the same as falling into a fireman's net from the fourth floor." He calculated that any person sitting in the front seat beside the driver must have pitched forward at nearly full car speed across the space between him and the windshield.

By the time the passenger struck these objects the car would have been so nearly stopped that his body would have only about 2 inches to travel forward while there was still left any of the cushioning forward motion of the car. This impact, Mr. Yeagley calculates, would be a "probable killing force." It is 28 inches less than the driver had for stopping. The scientist observed that often the driver escapes injury, while a passenger is killed.

All Around the House

Add a pinch of salt to coffee when it is being heated to improve the flavor. When frying fish roll in cornmeal instead of flour and it will never stick to the pan. If a small pan of water is placed in the oven with bread when baking the loaf will be larger and crust more tender. When making muffins in iron pans grease and heat pans in oven before putting in batter. Muffins will then be much lighter. Add about seven drops of lemon juice to a pint of cream and it will beat up firm in about half the time otherwise required. A delicious raspberry preserve may be made of equal parts of sugar and berries. Crush every berry. Fill hot sterilized jars and seal. When washing colored silks adds a little ammonia to the next to the last rinsing water and let the garment soak in it for two or three minutes. This will revive the color. To frost glass window panes make a strong solution of rochelle salts and warm water and apply with a brush. Soap and warm water will quickly remove it when it becomes scratched.

Government Makes Saving

The estimates show that there is a saving of one-third in the cost of production by the use of the smaller size of paper money. One-third less of the highly-expensive and distinctive paper is required and weight is reduced by a third. A 50 per cent saving is effected in the actual printing process. Notes are printed in large sheets and afterward cut into single notes. The old size bills were printed eight to the sheet. The new size are made twelve to the sheet.

What the lengthened life of the smaller notes will be as the result of less folding, creasing and cracking must be determined by experience, but it is expected a substantial saving will result.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

Officers was an inspiration to all who saw the work. The Grand Chapter Ladies' Quartette furnished music during the work. After chapter was closed, reports were received from the committees and gifts were presented to the Worthy Grand Matron, Grand Electa M. Beatrice Fuqua, and a gift of gold was presented to the Worthy Grand Patron from the several chapters of the A. I. A.

At 6:30 a fine dinner was served in the Masonic Temple to the guests. Both the dining room and the annex were used but it was necessary to set some of the tables a second time. The Baptist Ladies Aid did the catering.

About 9:00 in the evening everyone assembled in the Community Building in East Tawas for a reception where the following program was given:

Plano Trio—Mrs. Giddings, Mrs. Edgewood, and Mrs. J. F. Mark; Address—Mrs. Selma A. Brown, Worthy Grand Matron; Reading—Mrs. M. Beatrice Fuqua, Harrisville; Group of four songs—Mrs. Nyda Campbell-Leslie; Address—James F. Mark, Worthy Grand Patron.

After the program the guests were introduced and then led under an arch of chrysanthemums and evergreens, formed by the officers of Tawas City and East Tawas chapters, to the reception line where they were greeted by many of those present.

The meeting terminated with a dancing party.

It was the consensus of opinion that Tawas City Chapter and the A. I. A. are capital entertainers and all guests pronounced the meetings as very much worth while.

Besides the guests from the eight chapters of the A. I. A. and from West Branch, Bay City, Saginaw, Midland, and other cities outside of the A. I. A. territory, the following visitors were present: Worthy Grand Matron Selma A. Brown, Glenn C. Brown and daughter, Dorthella, of Birmingham; Associate Grand Matron Georgina Bauer and Leon Bauer of Hastings; Associate Grand Patron Glenn A. Tupper of St. Johns; Grand Secretary Genevieve M. Nauman of West Branch; Grand Treasurer Gertrude A. Lewis of Ashley; Grand Conductress Flora Sutherland of Benton Harbor; Associate Grand Conductress Cassa L. Howe of Grand Rapids; Grand Sentinel Winfield A. Gardner and Mrs. Gardner of Manclona; Grand Marshal Nan Johnston of Detroit; Grand Chaplain E. Alberta Coburn and son, Ashley, of Detroit; Grand Organist Emma H. Tappan and Ivan Tappan of Battle Creek; Grand Adah Edythe Rochester of Ionia; Grand Ruth Anne Ball of Traverse City; Grand Esther Ethel Parker and son, Roscoe of Otisville; Grand Martha Marie B. Calkins of Sebevaug; Grand Electa M. Beatrice Fuqua and C. B. Fuqua of Harrisville; also Past Grand Patron W. Bush, Chairman of the Finance Committee, and Mrs. Bush of Flint; Past Grand Patron Otto W. Bishop, Chairman of the Jurisprudence Committee, and Mrs. Bishop of Alpena; Past Grand Matron Mrs. N. Belle Pike, President of the Villa Board, and C. F. Pike of Wyandotte; Mrs. Anna Kuhn, member of the Jurisprudence Committee, of Interlochen; and Mrs. Ida Elstone and Mrs. Mame Glosser of Detroit and Mrs. Muriel Horton and Mrs. Emmelie Mark of Tawas City Chapter, the members of the Grand Chapter Ladies' Quartette.

Twenty-eight of the visitors were entertained at a 12:30 luncheon at the Iosco Hotel. All of the visitors were entertained for the night by members of Tawas City Chapter and have since expressed themselves as of the opinion that the Tawas hospitality has not been surpassed by any other city in the state.

The May meeting of the A. I. A. will be held at Standish.

talk on "New Type Tests" at a faculty meeting held Wednesday.

A general school entertainment is planned for Tuesday, December 6. The admission will be 10c and 25c.

The Seniors were pleasantly entertained Halloween night at the home of Miss Dora Mark in East Tawas. The rooms were decorated appropriate to the occasion. There were about sixteen present. Various interesting games were played during the evening. Dancing was also enjoyed by some. Refreshments were served, after which everyone left, having said they enjoyed the evening immensely.

The Sophomores will initiate the Freshmen Friday night at a party in the school building. Efficient committees are at work to make the party a success.

The Junior typists are now taking weekly ten-minute tests. Those this week who typed for ten minutes without errors were Rose Depoty, Velma Hager, Leta Daley, Geraldine Fox, and Melvin Groff. Those having only one error were Earl Davis, Ruth Cholger, and Mary Krumm.

In Senior typing Rose Watts had only two errors for fifteen minutes while Robert Hamilton made the high net score of 56.6 words per minute with four errors.

Music and Art Notes

At the coming P. T. A. meeting which meets Thursday, November 10, all art work throughout the school will be exhibited for the benefit of the parents.

Music work of Miss Brown's room will be heard at that time. The song was composed by this grade room. The words for the three verses were made up from suggestions of various pupils; while the music was composed in the same way. This should prove interesting to the parents.

Other exhibits will include books, charts, drawings, tables. The room was decorated with pumpkins and cornstalks. This was the first time the room has been used, and the students enjoyed it very much on that account.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

We have only two tardy marks in our room during the month of October.

The seventh grade geography class is studying about the region bordering on the Mediterranean Sea. Many interesting special reports about the history of Rome, Greece, Jerusalem and Egypt are being given by pupils in the class.

The eighth grade is learning Alan Dreyer's "I Have a Rendezvous With Death."

In the eighth grade there were six honor students for the month of October, and seven in the seventh grade.

The following students had perfect spelling papers for the past week: Seventh grade—Raymond Boos, Thelma Herman, Elsie Wozahn and Richard Ziehl; Eighth grad—Isabelle Dease, Laurie Frank, Betty Holland, and Effie Prescott. We are having a contest between these two grades by seeing which grade has the largest number of perfect spelling papers each day, and which grade has the most misspelled words.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

The boys and girls enjoyed a Halloween party Monday afternoon. Recitations were given by Ruth Clark, Mary Cunniff, and Dorothy Elust, Betty Davis, Myrtle Bowen, and Leonard Brown took part in a little play written and directed by Norma Musolf. Everyone took part in stunts planned by the game committee. Prizes were won by James Brown, Arnold Rollin, Charles Cecil and Eugene Wegner.

Charles Cecil won our spelling contest last Friday afternoon.

The following people are on our honor roll for this month: Dorothy Blust and Margaret Davis in the fifth grade; Betty Davis, Norma Jean Musolf, and Vernon Blust in the sixth grade.

We have five new wall maps to use in our room. They were bought to replace the worn-out ones in our map case. They are up-to-date and the boys and girls enjoy using them.

Third and Fourth Grades

The following people were on the honor roll last month: Lucille Bow-24, Irene Cunniff, Elna Herman, Janet McLean, Junior Musolf, Marion Musolf, Mary Sims, and Harold Wegner in the fourth grade. Jack Bradley, Warren Hughes and Richard Prescott in the third grade.

We enjoyed a Halloween party Monday afternoon. Jack Bradley, Junior Musolf, and Marion Musolf entertained us with a little play, after which we played games and guessed riddles. Later popcorn and apples were served.

The third and fourth grade pupils told some very interesting Halloween stories for their language classes last Monday.

Primary

The following pupils are on the honor roll for October: Ellen Bradley, Maxine DePotty, Neil Libka, Harry Rollin, Norma Lou Westcott, Wayne White, Marian Clark, Ruth Giddings, Lyle Hughes, Betty Lou Nelson, and Richard Sievert.
