"LOVE ME TONIGHT" COMES TO STATE THEATRE
"Love Me Tonight," a Rober-Mamoulian production, Maurice Chevalier's latest film, which comes to the State Theatre Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week, is a peculiarly delightful concoction of melody and humor, in which the famous French singing star has one of the best roles of his career.

Maurice, of the fantastic romance which serves as a story, is a Paris tailor, intent on collecting a long overdue bill from Vicomte Gilbert. But before that bill is paid, Maurice has posed as a baron, been the honor guest at the house of the Vicomte's uncle, and won the heart of the beautiful Princess Jeanette.

The famous Chevalier charm has never been more in evidence than in the role of Maurice; nor has Jeanette MacDonald ever been more beautiful. Charlie Ruzelka as the Duke, Charles Butterworth as the Count, Myrna Lov as the Countess and Elizabeth Patterson, Blanche Frederici and Ethel Griffies as the three aunts of the Princess Jeanette complete the cast.

TWO VETERAN RAILROADMEN DIE LAST WEEK

JOHN L. SWARTZ, Sr.
John L. Swartz, Sr., highly respected resident of this city, died at four o'clock Thursday morning at Samaritan hospital, Bay City. Mr. Swartz had been in poor health for several weeks.

John L. Swartz was born August 17, 1864, at Port Huron. He was united in marriage July 4, 1887, to Anna Wendt of Hope, Michigan. He has been an employe of the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad for the past forty years, being a senior engineer at the time of death. In addition to his vocation as engineer, Mr. Swartz had been interested in various business enterprises and was a valuable citizen to his community. In his long career as railroadman and many years of residence at Tawas City, Mr. Swartz had acquired many friends throughout northern Michigan who deeply sympathize with the bereaved family.

Rev. W. A. Gregory officiated at the funeral services which were held Sunday afternoon at the Tawas City M. E. church. Masonic services were given at the grave by Tawas City Lodge, F. & A. M.

Out of town relatives and friends present at the funeral were: Aaron Swartz, Dorothy Swartz and Ardith Swartz of Boone, Mich.; Herbert Swartz, John Swartz, David Swartz, Noah Swartz and Simon Swartz of Kitchener, Ontario; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene LaRue, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer LaRue, Mr. and Mrs. Earl LaRue, Mr. and Mrs. Denny LaRue, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas LaVeck of Midland; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Owens of Detroit, Miss Alma Hallman of Saginaw, and Miss Eleanor Newman of Toledo, Ohio.

George L. Bigelow, well known resident of East Tawas, died Thursday, November 10, after an illness of several months. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon from the Methodist Episcopal church at East Tawas. Rev. W. A. Gregory officiated. Last rites were given by Baldwin Lodge No. 274, F. & A. M. Interment was made in the Tawas City cemetery.

CAREERS OF THREE GIRLS TOLD IN "THREE ON A MATCH"

The engrossing story of three girls, starting as classmates in the same public school, and the various fortunes that cause their paths through life to intersect ten years later, is told in a fascinating manner in First National's production, "Three On A Match," featuring Joan Blondell, Warren William, Ann Dvorak and Bette Davis, which will show at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Thanksgiving Day and Friday, November 24-25.

Three more widely different girls than the trio portrayed in this vivid drama would be hard to imagine. One is the class beauty, a girl of wealth and position. A second is the honor girl of her class. The third is the school 'bad girl,' tomboy, hoyden and mischief maker.

MORE THAN 25 DEER KILLED IN IOSCO COUNTY ON FIRST TWO DAYS OF SEASON

"More than twenty-five deer were killed in Iosco county the first two days of the hunting season," states Conservation Officer Arthur Leit. He said that there were a large number of hunting camps in the woods this season and more hunters than usual, but owing to the cold weather there had been little activity since the first day. That many preferred the pleasure of playing a game of pinocle by the camp stove to the rigor of standing on a run-way.

"Compared with former years, there have been very few game law violations this season," the conservation officer stated.

MRS. BURNETT SMITH
Mrs. Burnett Smith, age 44 years, 11 months and 18 days, passed away Wednesday, November 9, at her home in Sherman township.

Caroline Victoria Ferns was born November 21, 1887, in Reno township. She was united in marriage to Burnett Smith in 1907, and to this union five children were born.

Left to mourn are the husband, one son, Marshall, four daughters, Gladys, Hattie, Leona and Opal; also a brother, Hamilton Ferns, and four sisters, Mrs. Samuel Hutchinson, Mrs. Timothy Kilbourne, Mrs. Elton Thompson of Reno township, and Mrs. William Jersey of National City.

The funeral services were held Saturday, November 12, at 12:00 o'clock at the house and 1:00 o'clock at the Reno Baptist church.

GORDON CULHAM KILLED IN TRUCK ACCIDENT

Death cast its gloom over Cabri and district early Wednesday morning when the news was spread that Gordon Culham had met his death in a car accident at Saskatchewan Landing last Tuesday night, October 25. It was hard to believe, that such a familiar figure was snatched from our midst so suddenly, but school plays and favorites, and thus another of Cabri's pioneers has been called to rest.

Gordy, as he was known to all, left town last Friday morning for New Meath, Sask., with a truck load of household effects for his son, Walter, who is taking up a homestead there. Gordy arrived there with the goods and after assisting in helping to get things lined up for Walter, who is still enroute with the stock, started home with a truck load of four foot poles which he intended using for firewood at home (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

MRS. G. A. PRESCOTT, SR. HOSTESS TO TWENTIETH CENTURY CLUB SATURDAY

Mrs. George A. Prescott, Sr., was hostess to the Twentieth Century Club last Saturday afternoon. The meeting was conducted by Mrs. May Dease, vice-president. Five new members were added to roll call, and the club voted a donation to the local Red Cross. The roll call was a verse of poetry, which brought out quotations from various authors. Mrs. Dease gave an interesting report on the Federation meeting held at Detroit a short time before. Vocal solos were pleasingly rendered by Miss Gulliford and Mrs. Nyda Leslie.

A beautifully appointed tea was served by the hostess, Mrs. Prescott. The tables were unusually attractive with yellow and bronze chrysanthemums with yellow wedge-wedged vases and candlesticks to match.

TO THE VOTERS OF IOSCO COUNTY

I wish to express my grateful appreciation to my friends everywhere for the splendid vote given me in the recent election. Your confidence in me I shall justify in every possible way. I shall, of course, continue to do everything in my power to bring about an early return to normal conditions in the country. (Signed) Roy O. Woodruff.

WM. POWELL-KAY FRANCIS PICTURE STRANGE ROMANCE

The future of Kay Francis and William Powell as a star combination has been definitely settled by the conspicuous success their latest picture, "One Way Passage," has enjoyed wherever it has been shown. No stranger or more fascinating romance has ever been pictured than the one mirrored in "One Way Passage," playing at the Family Theatre on Sunday and Monday, November 20 and 21. Both Powell and Miss Francis agree that the picture offers them the finest roles of their respective careers up to date.

Laid entirely on an ocean liner crossing the Pacific from Hong Kong to San Francisco—with execution awaiting the man at the end of the voyage—the drama is easily one of the most unusual to be enacted on the screen for many months.

Associated with the stars are such experienced players as Warren Hymer, Aline MacMahon, Frank McHugh, Douglas Gerrard, Herbert Mundin and Frederick Burton.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the neighbors and friends for their kindnesses extended to us during the sickness and at the death of our wife and mother; especially the National Gypsum company, those who loaned cars at the funeral, the choir, those who sent floral tributes, and Rev. Edinger for his words of comfort.

WHITTEMORE SCHOOL FAIR IS SUCCESSFUL

The "Fair" is over. The Whittemore school has again successfully staged its annual event through which friends, parents, patrons and students get together once a year for an evening of fun and good fellowship.

Early in the evening the ladies of the Parent-Teachers Association of the school served their annual supper. Everyone who ate came from the dining room with that speaks louder than words that they had eaten long and well. Some sorely tempted took just one more piece of cake as they passed from the dining room. Ladies of the P. T. A., the fame of your suppers has spread, for people from every neighboring town were present at your supper. That is as it should be. It is indeed a pleasure to have a sociable gathering at our school where we may meet our friends, chat with them, and go away after it is all over with a glad feeling inside and a friendly good-night to everyone.

After the supper, the guests divided, some going to the various grade rooms to see the displays of the pupils' work, others to the agricultural and floral exhibit, some gathered in groups to visit, and some to see what the side shows held behind their curtained booths. Most of the women saw the exhibits of needlecraft and many made purchases they did not have in their own fruit cellars. Children stood three-deep before the fish pond eager to fish up something to squawk or rattle which pleased them but caused their parents to give side glances and "Wait 'til I get you at home" expressions on their faces.

As the "fair" was held on Armistice Day and as Thanksgiving is not so far away, the evening's program was made up in honor of all of these days. The speech class gave two short comedies, which were well received by everyone. They were as good as the many other plays which Mrs. Harry Hill has coached. Mrs. Brookings had most of her pupils in.

A LAST MINUTE APPEAL TO CITIZENS OF IOSCO COUNTY

Do you realize that during this Red Cross Roll Call going on now and continuing until Thanksgiving that only 50c of every dollar paid in the national organization and all the remaining amounts stay in our county, and in the meantime the national organization is pouring into our county in the way of flour, underwear, hosiery, flannel and cotton cloth absolutely free. As long as we keep a Red Cross organization in our county going we are in line for anything we may ask for. Our quota this Roll Call is only 250 members and one-half of this amount or $125 is paid in to the national organization, while we have had hundreds of dollars sent to us and much more will come if we need it. So if it hurts to give, let it hurt a little, but give during these trying times when so many are having all they can do to exist. Let us show the Red Cross what Iosco County can do.

Yours for the full quota,
Frank F. Taylor, Chairman,
Iosco County Red Cross.

"POISONALITY, FOLKS— THAT'S HOW JIMMY DURANT DOES IT!"

That's how Jimmy Durant, bearded comedian who looks like anything but the answer to a maiden's prayer, explains his success with the feminine section of Hollywood movie colony.

For Jimmy undoubtedly has made good with the femmes of the flickers. You'd never guess it from seeing him on the screen—as you may, with George M. Cohan and Claude Rains, which comes to the State Theatre Saturday, Sunday and Monday—but Mrs. Durant's little boy has turned out to be one of the most popular gentlemen in Hollywood—at least as far as the ladies are concerned.

In "The Phantom President" he plays the role of a medicine-show barker, pal of Cohan, also a barker. But Cohan plays another role, too—that of a candidate for president apparently nominated throughly for the office, but lacking the "poisonality" to win votes. When politicians discover the barker to be a dead ringer for the candidate, they hire him to pose as the candidate to round up public support.

Aided by Jimmy, he goes to it with gusto, and, until the actual candidate and he come to blows over Miss Colbert, all seems to go along smoothly. Then follows a dramatic and comic climax that changes the entire course of events.

SUMMARY OF VOTES
CAST IN MICHIGAN

STATE DEMOCRATIC NATIONALLY FOR FIRST TIME IN EIGHTY YEARS

Michigan, the traditionally Republican state, went Democratic with a vengeance in the election November 8th. For the first time in 80 years a majority vote was given to a Democratic candidate for President.

The same avalanche of Democratic votes that preferred Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidency, swept Governor Brucker out of office in favor of William A. Comstock, who becomes the state's chief executive on January 1, 1933, the first Democratic governor since 1914, when Woodbridge N. Ferris was elected to a second term.

The Democratic victory carried with it all state officers but one, a majority in the State Legislature, and 10 of the 17 congressional seats. The lone Republican state officer to win re-election was Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, who won over his Democratic opponent Burnett J. Adams, by a majority unofficially estimated at 5,000 votes.

The Results Summarized
President—Franklin D. Roosevelt defeated Herbert C. Hoover with a majority of approximately 125,000 votes.
Governor—Wm. A. Comstock defeated Wilber M. Brucker with a majority of about 175,000 votes.

Lieutenant-Governor—Allen E. Stebbins defeated Luren D. Dickinson with a majority of about 69,000 votes.
Secretary of State—Frank D. Fitzgerald, lone survivor of the Republicans, remains.

Attorney-General—Patrick H. O'Brien defeated Paul W. Voorhies by more than 48,000 votes.
Auditor-General—John K. Stack, Jr., bettered O. B. Fuller by about 47,000 votes.

State Treasurer—Theodore I. Fry, received 77,000 more votes than the present incumbent, Howard C. Lawrence.

Amendments
Of the eight proposed state constitutional amendments, the vote for repeal of the state prohibition enforcement act was "yes" by an overwhelming majority of about 3 to 1.

Limiting taxes on real estate appeared to have been beaten although the vote was close and will not be definitely known until official tabulations are made. The same applies to Reapportionment of the State Legislature, and the amendment to limit the Governor's pardoning power.

The proposed amendment to exempt homesteads from taxation was beaten by a large majority; also the amendment imposing high taxes on dealers of oleomargarine. The one dealing with the change of voters residence received a clear majority. By a close vote which may still be changed by the official tabulation, the amendment to allow only property owners to vote on bond issues also carried.

Congressional
Only seven of the 17 congressmen elected in the Democratic landslide—six Republicans and one Democrat—are present members of the House. Nine Democrats and one Republican will be entering their first term. Six incumbent Republicans were defeated in the sensational overturn that carried Michigan into the Democratic column for the first time.

Michigan never before, in its recent history at least, has had a majority of Democrats representing it in the House. In fact, Michigan had never had more than one Democratic congressman at a time in the last 20 years. Now it has ten.

The Democratic landslide buried such prominent congressmen as James C. McLaughlin of Muskegon, Robert H. Clancy, Dr. Frank P. Bohn of Newberry, Earl C. Michener of Adrian, John C. Ketcham of Hastings and Seymour E. Person of Lansing.
The Democratic winners were George D. Sadowski, in the first; John C. Lehr of Monroe, in the second; George Foulkes of Hartford, in the fourth; Claude E. Cady of Lansing, in the sixth; Michael J. Hart of Saginaw, in the eighth; Harry W. Musselwhite of Manistee, in the ninth; Carl M. Weideman, Detroit, in the fourteenth; John D. Dingell, Detroit, in the fifteenth and John Lesinski of Dearborn, in the sixteenth.

State Legislature
Democrats will control both houses of the Michigan State Legislature. Unofficial returns show 17 Democrats and 15 Republicans elected to the State Senate and 54 Democrats and 46 Republicans elected to the House.
Michigan has not had a Democratic Legislature since the Administration of Gov. Edwin B. Winans in 1891. Among the outstanding figures that went down in defeat were Rep. Fred R. Ming, of Cheboygan, speaker of the House in two sessions; Senator Norman H. Horton of Fruit Ridge, Governor Brucker's floor leader.
Wayne County sent back only three Republicans in their delegation. They are John W. Reid, elected to the Senate from the Eighteenth District, and Reps. Edward F. Fisher, returned to the House from the Fifth District, and John G. McInerney in the Fourth District.

PONTINE MARSHES TO BECOME FARMS

Washington.—The Pontine marshes, renowned through history as a breeder of malaria, are being reclaimed in one of Italy's major engineering projects. Vast areas of fertile land only 30 miles from densely-populated Rome will be thrown open to colonization as soon as roads and rural centers can be built in the newly-drained sections. The land will be sold on easy terms in an effort to make the project pay for itself.

"While the Pontine marshes lie within 'commuting' distance of the capital of Italy, and are crossed by the Apennine way, one of the world's most famous roads, the region has remained one of the strangest and least-known corners of the Italian peninsula," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"The Via Appia, (Appian way) built by Appius Claudius about 300 years B. C., starts from Porta San Sebastiano, the southern gate of Rome, and leads toward Naples. For the first 65 miles it runs as straight as a taut string, until it reaches the town of Terracina, where it passes under the cliff of Monte Sant' Angelo that overhangs the sea.

Old Roman Monuments.
"When you leave the Eternal city on this classic road, you pass at first along a wonderful array of old Roman sepulchral monuments; then you climb up the Alban hills, extinct volcanoes of prehistoric times, and from there you gradually descend upon a great plain, some 30 miles from Rome, known to history as the Pontine marshes.

"On the left, as you travel toward Terracina, are the olive-covered Lepine mountains, of gray limestone, that at sunset are veiled by that beautiful purple haze one sees so often reproduced on the background of the early Renaissance paintings. To the right is the Tyrrhenian sea, along the border of which runs a large sand dune covered by an oak forest some 30 miles in length. Between the dune and the sea is a series of lagoons.

"At the extreme end a solitary mountain rises, to all appearances of the warmer seasons; the stagnant, lukewarm waters teemed with life of every description, and toward the month of July the treacherous anopheles mosquito dropped its filmy larval veil, rose out of the marshes, and flying around in search of a living for itself, sowed death upon humanity.

"By stinging a malaria-infected person the mosquito infects itself, and then, stinging some healthy individual, it communicates the disease to him. Malaria is not deadly in itself, but its repeated attacks so weaken the human organism that frequently fatal illnesses take hold of the fever-stricken body.

"The inundations in winter and the malaria in summer drove the population out of the plain; but the unparalleled fertility of the soil enticed some people back to defy the disease. The lowlands of the Agro Pontino are deserted; there are no cities or villages, but some lonely hamlets and, scattered here and there, farm buildings, in which a few persons live in summer.

"Many centuries ago most of the inhabitants fled to the mountains, built their towns on some steep hills, and from these vantage points made dashes into the plain to work the fields and tend the cattle. Soon these people will be able to take up permanent homes in reclaimed areas of the former marshes."

"GOD-MAN" OF INDIA TO BREAK LONG SILENCE

New York.—The charmed followers of Sri Sadguru Meher Baba, the "Messiah" and "God-man" of India, who has been here briefly and silently last May, will be interested in the disclosure that the Zoroastrian priest will return to this country next February to break his seven-year lingual fast—if long disuse has not atrophied his vocal cords.

The news that the Parsee mystic, who has not spoken for seven years, and who is now wandering silently about Europe in a "superconscious state" awaiting further astral instructions, will speak next year came from Mrs. J. G. Phelps Stokes.

Baba, athletic looking man of thirty-eight, with flowing hair and beard, came here in May and was lodged in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Schloss, at Harmon, N. Y. He was to break his silence here, and rescue America from "materialism."

But suddenly Baba, who says he is part human, part divine, and has contact with the Beyond, declared he had been directed not to talk here. He went to Los Angeles to talk, but there got another message to hold off until 1934.

From there he went to China for one day, then to Genoa, Italy, still silent.

While keeping his silence unbroken, Baba "talks" via an alphabet board he has hung around his neck. In his home country he is credited with performing many miracles such as starting or stopping rain, halting other forces of nature that threatened harm to mankind and the like.

Scientific interest in the baba lies principally in learning whether he still can talk after his seven years' silence. Experts declare that disuse may have rendered his vocal chords impotent to vibrate and that not even the yogi's "miraculous powers" may be sufficient to restore them.

Those who profess to know say, however, that the baba realizes all this and, having intended all the time to speak again some day, has "hemmed" and "hawed" and cleared his throat with a noiseless muscular action and practiced larynx callisthenics daily in order to keep the vocal cords from atrophying.

Florida Community Has Church Without Pews

Haines City, Fla.—The congregation of Bryan Memorial church listens to religious services from the comfortable embrace of hickory rocking chairs instead of from straight-backed pews.

Three hundred especially built rocking chairs fill the auditorium of the little house of worship, located a mile from the center of town.

It all came about because Eugene Bryan, former mayor of Haines City, was approached by a retired evangelist with a proposal to erect a church in one of Bryan's real estate subdivisions.

"I've never yet been comfortable in church," Bryan objected. "If I could take a rocking chair with me, it would be different."

The chairs were built to Bryan's order.

Clean Pockets Daily Now Are Made Possible

London.—Future fashions in men's clothes will be dictated, in part, by science, if the Lancet, British medical journal, has any influence in Bond street.

The Lancet comes out for removable pockets in coats and trousers. The editors argue that if cleanliness is next to godliness, every man is a sinner who puts his hands into pockets which are not cleansed every day or so.

Dr. Percy Edgewell has demonstrated a pocket he has devised for coat and trousers, capable of being removed, cleansed and disinfected by boiling, or otherwise, and replaced at will.

Famed Louvre of Paris Spreads Over 50 Acres

Paris.—The Louvre in Paris can easily claim to be the largest composite public building in the world, for it occupies an area of nearly 50 acres. But its size and even its architectural features are of far less importance to humanity than the superb art collections within its walls, which had their beginning in the reign of Francis I, the great art patron, who tried to make Paris the Mecca of the cultured world by attracting thither the leading artists of the day.

The second great importance is its importance as a home of great royal scenes, for here Catherine de Medic lived after Henry II was killed and it witnessed the marriage of Margaret of Valois to Henry of Navarre, later Henry IV of France.

Grand Champion Calf at Baby Beef Show

Democrats Control Both Branches of Congress

The next congress will be both Democratic and wet.

The house will be overwhelmingly Democratic, and a comfortable Democratic majority in the senate was assured by Tuesday's voting.

President Roosevelt should have a congress working harmoniously with him to carry out his program.

Among familiar faces that will be missing in the United States senate after March 4, it appears, will be the following:

- Hiram Bingham of Connecticut. Reed Smoot of Utah. Otis F. Glenn of Illinois. James E. Watson of Indiana. George H. Moses of New Hampshire. Smith Wildman Brookhart of Iowa. John J. Blaine of Wisconsin. Samuel M. Shortridge of California. Bingham, Smoot, Glenn, Watson and Moses lost in election. Brookhart, Blaine, and Shortridge were defeated in the primaries.

In Illinois Roosevelt's plurality is estimated at 410,000. Horner, for governor, led the Democratic landslide with an estimated 550,000 plurality over Small. The rest of the Democratic ticket, with the exception of a few congressmen and legislators, won by substantial margins. For United States senator Dieterich's plurality over Glenn is put at 225,000.

Indiana—Senator James E. Watson, veteran Republican legislator, was defeated for re-election by Frederick Van Nuys. Paul V. McNutt, former American Legion commander, Democrat, was elected governor.

In a neck-and-neck race Governor Roosevelt and President Hoover fought for the electoral vote of Michigan, which had not gone Democratic in 80 years. Latest returns gave Roosevelt a lead of about 5,000. For governor, William A. Comstock, Democrat, was victor over Gov. Wilber M. Brucker, Democrats led congressional races.

The Democrats swept Missouri's 13 house seats, all of which were elected at large. They picked up two in Connecticut, four each in Missouri, New York and Pennsylvania, one each in Rhode Island, Virginia, South Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma and Illinois, on the basis of incomplete returns.

Former Senator James W. Wadsworth, Republican, was elected to the house from the Thirty-ninth New York district.

Speaker John N. Garner was elected from the Fifteenth Texas district, but plans to resign from the seat when he becomes Vice President on March 4.

GARDEN of ASIA

A Szechwan Medicine Man.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

SZECHWAN province, China, center of recent disturbances, is one of the richest, most populous and picturesque regions of China. Marco Polo described it as a cultivated garden with great cities. A more modern sobriquet is "The Garden of Asia."

Chungking, the Yangtze port, is a great doorway to Szechwan. It is a walled city with 600,000 inhabitants, situated at the confluence of the Yangtze and the Kialing rivers. Through the fiction of a foreign treaty it is an open seaport notwithstanding the fact that it is 1,500 miles from the coast and 1,000 feet above the level of the sea. It is now the head of steam navigation on the Yangtze, the seat of maritime customs for the West, the point of distribution for all western-borne commerce and the assembling depot for all shipments to other parts of China and foreign lands.

The chief exports to America and other countries are paint oils of the tung-tree, medicines, bristles, feathers and hides, and, of manufactured articles, silks, satins and crepes of the finest grades.

Confined between its two rivers, this city, like New York, is growing into the air. It has no suburban lines to relieve its surplus population, and real estate has accordingly increased in the past decade from 100 to 200 per cent in value, making it profitable to erect fine foreign buildings, in which it excels any purely native city in China.

The English, French, German, Japanese, and Americans compete for its trade. United States trade is represented in kerosene, sewing machines, cigarettes, patent medicines, hardware, and nails.

From Chungking northward 300 miles to Chengtu, the capital, one travels by sedan chair, borne on the shoulders of two, three or four bearers, as one's avoirdupois requires or his Troy weight permits; for the rich ride in fairs by choice, as do the portly without option.

In addition to the chair-bearers, the foreign traveler requires a coolie to bear his cot and bedding, another to carry his food, and an attendant to cook it. A small party easily becomes a regiment, and if an armed escort accompanies it, as is usual, the party resembles an army.

City of the Dead.

Beyond the walls of Chungking the traveler enters the city of the dead. Here are square-built tombs of the Ming period; near by are the crowded lines of public graves for beggars and the very poor; and then, far away to the top of the hill, about four miles distant, are the regulation mounds of Chinese graves, with here and there beautifully carved, terraced mausoleums.

A more orderly section of broad extent, reserved for Mohammedan graves, shows that the followers of the Crescent are no mean or inconsiderable company among the city's population.

Over these sleeping camps the telegraph lines are now strung and the Chengtu railway will tunnel beneath them. Factories and homes are pushing them farther from the city, which is a sure indication that the hand of superstition is losing its grip, for a quarter century ago this would have spelled riot.

The Szechwanese from of old have been expert workers in stone, as is evidenced by the many tombs, homes and places of defense carved deep into the rocky cliffs along the rivers. Their Chinese conquerors have inherited this art along with their land, for the country abounds with artistically carved stone bridges, and memorial arches of massive proportions ornately wrought in stone.

One never sees a monument dedicated to a warrior, but many to virtuous widows, who refused to remarry after their husbands had died. Others reared by royal permit have the four characters Wu Kia Tung Tang, five generations living together in one home. This, though not common, is by no means unknown in West China, and surely, if five generations can live together in one home and live peacefully, they deserve recognition, and the Chinese accord it.

West China might be called "The Land of the Pagoda," for nearly every city has its towering sentinel from three to fifteen stories in height. They are generally placed upon some eminence overlooking the city they protect, and may have served as watch towers in times of trouble, but the real purpose of their erection most likely was to exert a benign influence upon the fung sui—the spirits of wind and wave that bring prosperity and ward off disaster.

Out from the crush and the hum of the city of the living and past the quiet camp of the dead, one comes to the country—not, however, the country of the western world; rather a mass of terraced paddy fields and farm gardens, with human beings always in sight. People are the only feature of the landscape that cannot be left behind or ignored; so one stops to glance at the inhabitants of Szechwan, who surpass in rugged diversity of race the variety of the province's scenery.

The People of Szechwan.

More valuable than its rich mineral deposits and superbly tilled lands, the people of Szechwan are at once its prime asset and interest.

Four epochs mark the Szechwanese and help to explain them:

First, the slow retreat of the ancient aborigines up into the mountains of the south and west and the occupation of the fertile land by the oncoming victorious Chinese.

Second, the ruthless Chinese wars, culminating in the ravages of the tyrant Chang, who, in accordance with his slogan, "Kill! Kill! Kill! Kill! Kill! Kill! Kill! Kill! Kill!" left many of its cities desolate and its fields without inhabitants.

Third, the repopling of the province by emigrants from the north, central, and southeastern provinces of China, who, fusing with the scattered Chinese and aboriginal inhabitants and with Mohammedan mercenaries from western Asia, formed the composite Szechwanese, styled "Chinese, with a difference."

Fourth, the contact of Christian life and thought upon these peoples, a period of reforms and revolutions, a transition from the old order to the New China of today and the China of promise of tomorrow.

Remnants of Many Races.

The western part of Szechwan might well be called the Museum of the Human Races, the as-yet-undiscovered happy hunting ground of the ethnologist and physiognomist. Here are to be found the surviving remnants in the most heroic struggle for existence that humanity has ever waged and who, for lack of a better term, are called the "Tribesmen."

As one crosses the Min river, which, flowing south divides the province into east and west, and moves westward, towards the snow-covered mountains, he comes upon the shambling homes of these people, hidden in impassable ravines or perched upon cliff or mountain side, of which they seem to be part and counterpart; for as the irresistible side-thrust of continental Asia pushed these mountain masses high into the snows and left them crumpled, broken, and isolated storm-swept peaks, so, evidently, a similar convulsion of powerful peoples of Asia, in their movements toward this center, have driven back the weaker or defenseless nations, which in their turn being compelled to follow into these inaccessible places, where, like the mountains to which they still cling, they may yet reveal stratum, the bed-rock of the race.

The Chinese call them "The Eighteen Nations," but it is believed that there are several times eighteen nations or tribes, each under its own king, council, or feudal lord, independent or semi-independent of each other and of the Chinese in whose borders they dwell.

Among the tribesmen are found representatives of the black, yellow, and white branches of the human family, and some of them, especially the dwarf peoples, are believed to be of very ancient origin.

Chengtu, Szechwan's capital, lies 700 miles from a railroad on the edge of the famous Chengtu plain. It is a city of 600,000 inhabitants.

DAIRY

CONTENT OF MILK CERTAIN TO VARY

Many Factors in Butterfat Production.

By FRED M. HAIG, Associate Professor of Dairying, North Carolina State College.—WNU Service.

While dairymen ponder the cause of variation in the butterfat content of milk from the same breed of cows and between individual cows of the same breed, investigation shows there are at least ten different factors associated in this cause.

When we consider the single milkings of individual cows, the butterfat content varies from about 2 per cent to 10 per cent. The first of these factors is of course the influence of the individuality of a cow. Seldom do we find two cows, even of the same breed, whose milk contains the same amount of fat. Then there is the influence of the breed. When the average of several cows in the same breed is taken, there will usually be a fairly uniform difference between two breeds. The age of the cow also has effect. The milk is usually less rich in fat with each succeeding period of lactation. As each lactation period advances, however, the amount of fat increases as the stage of lactation becomes more advanced. This is especially apparent after the third month.

In addition to these four influences, we find the difference in time between milkings has some effect, and milking at regular intervals gets best results. The last milk drawn from the udder is richer than the first few streams and shows why a cow should be thoroughly stripped. A cow in good flesh will produce more milk and fat than a thin one. Dairy cows should not be allowed to get too fat, but they should be kept in good condition.

Records of Purebreds

Well Worthy of Study

Purebred cows gave, on the average, 1,110 pounds more milk and 31 pounds more butterfat in a year than grade cows, according to a summary of the records of more than 30,000 cows in the New York state dairy herd improvement associations, reports Prof. W. T. Crandall of the New York State College of Agriculture. The study also showed that, on the average, cows make their best and most profitable production at from six to eight years of age. Forty-seven per cent of the cows in the associations were from two to four years of age and only 28 per cent from six to eight years of age. The replacement and depreciation in New York state herds could be reduced if more good heifers were raised and if diseases were better controlled, he says, for the good cows would remain longer in herds than they do nowadays.

Plan Ahead

"To be wise in time," says Professor Eckles, Minnesota specialist, "applies to cow owners as well as to the affairs of government. The farmer who waits until cold weather before planning what to feed during the winter, is not wise in time.

"Experienced dairy cattle feeders the world over have learned the foundation of a good dairy ration must be a succulent feed of some kind and a legume hay. To provide this foundation for successful feeding means either corn silage or roots for the succulent feed, and clover or alfalfa for hay.

"The farmer who neglects to provide in time for enough of these necessities will find himself next winter without a satisfactory ration, and must either be content with a small cream or milk check or be willing to go to the feed store and spend good money for feed to balance up his ration."—Exchange.

DAIRY FACTS

Milk absorbs odors quickly, therefore it should not be kept in the barn in open pails or cans.

The principle of correct feeding applies to all kinds of live stock, the same as to dairy cows.

If the separator is cold, a gallon of hot water run through it will warm it up to the proper separating temperature.

Most separators are adjusted at the factory to skim cream testing about 35 per cent butterfat, and this gives about the most satisfactory results.

Cream testing too high causes more waste by sticking to the separator bowl, buckets and cans; but may be better for special market conditions.

After calves have been fed whole milk for five or six weeks, they may be continued on calf meal gruel, grain and hay.

Corn may be cut at various stages of maturity and ensiled under varying conditions, and in most cases satisfactory ensilage is obtained.

A good quality of silage can be made from slightly frozen material of good quality. Apparently slight freezing has very little detrimental effect on corn for silage.

Lions Bred for Market

by Astute Californian

A farmer of El Monte, Calif., some years ago learned that there was a steady demand among circuses, zoos, and moving picture corporations for the king of beasts, so he purchased several adult lions and set up a lion farm. The original lions were imported from their native haunts in Kenya colony, Africa. The lions of the California farm have spacious runways, guarded by stout steel fences too high for them to hurdle. They have shelters to which they may retreat in rainy weather, though most of their time is spent basking under the rays of the warm California sun. The climate of southern California is very much the same as that of the high plateaus of Kenya, so the lions of the farm feel perfectly at home. There is a ready market for young lions.

Bronchial Troubles Need Creomulsion

Bronchial troubles may lead to something serious. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

Death Ring Story Revealed

What is the fatal influence of the ancient Mizpah ring worn by Frederick Vusthoff, who shot himself to death recently at his home on Newcastle-in-Tyne, England? That is what Newcastle police are trying to fathom. Unlike other Mizpah rings, which are supposed to bring good luck, this one has brought tragedy. Before Vusthoff acquired it, it belonged to a Newcastle merchant who dropped dead on the street. Its previous owner committed suicide.

Youthful Wine-Bibbers

School teachers in the Hungarian village of Lentihegy were shocked when their young pupils, some of them only five or six years old, staggered to their desks, began to bawl and shout and give every evidence of being drunk. They were. The village well, its only source of water supply, had dried up, and the children drank the rich Tokay wine of the district instead. Wine is cheaper than water in some parts of Hungary, and several cases have been reported recently of wine being used to put out fires.

Deaf Cruelly Condemned

So little was known of deafness in the golden age of Greece, that Aristotle taught that "the deaf have no souls and are little better than animals."

It's easy to be forgotten if you have no telephone

When friends plan parties and other good times, often "on the spur of the moment", they usually turn to the telephone to invite the "crowd". For telephoning is the easiest and quickest way. As a result, those without telephones miss many good times.

A telephone costs surprisingly little... only a few cents a day. It helps in finding employment. It is a social and business aid. And it is PRICELESS PROTECTION IN EMERGENCIES, enabling you to summon doctor, firemen, or police instantly, day or night.

Just one telephone call in an emergency may be worth more than the cost of the service for a lifetime.

HUDSON BAY PORT HANDED BLACK EYE

Fear City of Churchill Will Be White Elephant.

Ottawa, Ont.—When a grain-laden vessel smashed its nose against an iceberg in Hudson straits and went to the bottom recently, America's most northerly seaport, Port Churchill on Hudson bay, received a black eye. Canada had gambled to the extent of $54,000,000 on the navigability of her subarctic water route, and the dominion government had just succeeded in convincing the shipping insurance underwriters that no special dangers attached to the Hudson bay water route and that they could cut insurance rates materially.

The whole Hudson bay railway venture, together with its costly terminal and port facilities, is generally regarded by politically versed Canadians as a white elephant born of political exigencies.

Government statistics for the present grain shipping season show that the new port of Churchill has been active to the extent of 1,367,713 bushels of grain shipped out. This looks fairly impressive for its first year of operation alongside of Montreal's 10,814,072 and Vancouver's 4,710,206 bushels. But it does not constitute a fair commercial comparison, for the government in its efforts to establish Churchill, has been carrying the grain free of elevator and other usually incidental costs at the new port.

About six European freighters, each taking away about 250,000 bushels, have called at Churchill this year and taken out grain cargoes.

Iowa School Girl's New Outfit Costs 35 Cents

Ames, Iowa.—Mildred Baldus, seventeen, wanted a new ensemble, so she made it herself. The entire outfit, including dress, hat, under garments and a handbag, cost 35 cents. The skirt and short jacket of the two-piece dress were made from chicken feed sacks, dyed a rose shade. The blouse and under garments were made of flour sacks. The close-fitting hat and the bag were fashioned from pieces of osanburg left over when her mother made new chair covers. Dainty lace, given Mildred by her grandmother, trimmed the under garments. But when the outfit was shown at a boys' and girls' achievement exhibit here, her brother was not content to bask in reflected glory.

University of Illinois.

Martin has never been sick a great deal and has had little to do with doctors. He has not yet learned the modern practice of being overhauled by his physician once every so often to have repairs made or new parts inserted. Calling a doctor in his mind has always suggested the last resort when everything else had been tried and hope was growing faint. It was the way they had done it in the country where he grew up, and he had never, after he moved to the city, been in a situation which required him to change the practice.

In the country, when Martin was a boy, he never recalled anyone's calling a doctor in the daytime. If one got sick he was worked over during the day, and then about midnight or 2 a. m. some one was dispatched for help.

He felt pretty wretched one day last week, "took something" for it, but felt no better; tried to sleep and could not; called up the doctor about midnight and asked him to come over. The reception he received was not so cordial as he had expected. The physician's tones were cold; he showed no enthusiasm.

"Why didn't you call me during the day?" he asked. "It's a dreadful night to go out. Can't you get on until morning?"

It was not so with the country doctor. He came without complaint when he was called. He treated everything. Some one in his reminiscences of the old times was writing not long ago in my home-town paper of the country doctor whom I knew as a boy. He was a well-known figure in town, sturdy, rough in dress, blunt in speech, not overprepossessing in appearance, but he was a ministering angel to hundreds of suffering and needy.

"No road was too long, no night too dark, no storm too severe, to keep him from answering a sick call, even if he never got his pay. Old citizens of this town will ever hold him in grateful remembrance."

And there were scores like him.

Bagpipes Are Placed on Free List in Canada

Ottawa, Ont.—A great load was lifted from Scottish Canadians when the new tariff schedules on importations of British goods went into effect. Bagpipes, real ones from Caledonia itself, were placed on the free list. Heretofore they had been taxed 15 per cent. Not only that, but in order to insure Canadian pipers that their strathspeys and reels need henceforth be played only on pipes of genuine Scotch manufacture, tariff fees on other kinds were increased to as high as 35 per cent.

ALIENS TAKE FRENCH FARMS

Native Finds City Life More to His Liking.

Paris.—With a population of 41,834,923, France appears gradually resigning the problem of its regeneration to the foreign element, who, according to statistics, have twice as many children as the French, and who already are taking over thousands of farms abandoned by Frenchmen moving into the cities.

With an increasing population in the cities and virtually a stationary population in the country, France offers the least encumbered place in Europe for the neighboring countries suffering from too much politics and patriotism.

Spaniards, Italians, Poles, Belgians, and even Germans are crowding into France. Moreover, the French farms, abandoned by broken French families, are being manned by thousands of soil loving Italians. In 38 departments of France there has been a diminution of population. Curiously enough, the rich agricultural departments of the north, in Brittany, in the Ardennes, in Normandy, and in the regions about Paris, the population has greatly diminished. But in many of these deserted regions, the foreign population is noteworthy. In the Ardennes, there are 30,000 foreigners; Saone et Loire, 23,000; Gers, 15,000; Cote d'Or, 14,000; Aveyron, 13,000; etc.

The population of Paris is 2,891,020, with 279,111 foreigners included. The foreigner is welcome if he submits to French laws and pays his taxes.

Since 1930, the birth rate among these foreign elements is two-thirds compared to one-third native French. The best indication that the foreign element has come to stay is revealed in the fact that among employers and proprietors, there are 14,719 Italians; 8,405 Spaniards; 4,797 Belgians; 3,413 Swiss; 916 Luxemburgers; 416 Germans, and 141 Britons.

There are more than 24,000 Italian farmers operating properties on the share basis; more than 20,000 Belgians, 7,300 Spaniards and 4,700 Swiss.

Plant 155,000 Acres of Timber Lands

Washington.—More than 155,000 acres of the United States were planted with forest trees during 1931, state reports compiled by the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture, show.

In 1930, 138,970 acres were planted. The forest service planted more than 26,000 acres in national forests in 1931. State forest planting totaled 58,989 acres and new planting on other state lands, 3,321 acres. Reported planting by individuals amounted to 29,624 acres.

Other contributors to forestation included: Industrial organizations, 21,638 acres; municipalities, 11,561 acres, and schools and colleges, 1,114 acres.

Michigan led all states in planting and putting idle land back to work growing timber, the report said. New York was second, and Pennsylvania third.

The 1931 plantings, the Agriculture department estimated, brought the total area of artificially reforested lands to 1,953,394 acres.

"Electric Chair" for Insects

An "electric chair" for mosquitoes and other insects and pests was recently devised at a tree research laboratory. The "chair" is a large square with two sides made of extremely fine wire. A current is passed through these sides, killing all insects alighting thereon. A weak current is used, running from an electric bulb socket through a transformer into the wire gauze. During the day, bait is used to attract the insects; at night, a light is placed inside the "chair."—New York Times.

The Black Box of Silence

By Francis Lynde

Illustrations by O. Irwin Myers

(WNU Service)
 (Copyright by William Gerard Chapman.)

SYNOPSIS

Owen Landis, young inventor, in the little town of Carthage, has developed an extraordinary "silencer" which is stolen from a safe in his laboratory. Landis tells Wally Markham, his chum, the only person, beside himself, knowing the combination of the safe, is Betty Lawson, daughter of a college professor, with whom the inventor is in love.

"Naturally," Markham agreed, rather too readily, adding, "As you say, Betty probably forgot the figures as fast as you called them off to her. So far as that goes, there is now and then an expert who can open a simple lock like this by putting an ear against the door and listening for the sound of the tumblers as they come around into place. The question is, who did it in this particular instance."

"There is one thing certain, Wally. Whoever opened the safe knew what was in it. I'm convinced of that. Which means that the thing I feared most has come to pass. The thief knows what the black box will do, and it will be used to swell the sum total of crime in this crime-ridden town."

Markham straightened up, and as he did so he found himself facing the window directly over the laboratory bench.

"Don't you shut that window at night?" he asked.

"It is left shut all the time, excepting on hot days, and it is always fastened at night, as you see it now."
 "Yes, I see the fastening; but look here"—pointing—"see this crack between the two sashes? That is where your spy has been listening in. Suppose we go outside and see if he left a clew of any sort?"

The clew—or a clew—was there—a deep footprint in the soft soil under the window. Most unmistakably it had been made by a woman's shoe.

"I say, Owen, this thickens things up a bit, doesn't it?" said Markham. "I saw a magnifying glass on your bench just now; go get it, will you?"

Landis was back in a few seconds with the glass, and Markham studied the footprint. When he looked up it was to say, "You've got pretty nearly everything in this junk shop of yours, Owen; does the list include a handful or so of plaster of paris?"

"Why, yes; I use it sometimes for making small casting molds."
 "Right. Wet up a pound or so and bring it here."

Landis obeyed, and when the plaster came, Markham poured it into the footprint and left it to set.

"So much for a small preliminary," he said, as he got upon his feet. "When that plaster sets, we'll have a cast of the lady's foot—or shoe."

"I can't see what you hope to do with that plaster cast," Landis demurred, after they had returned to the laboratory. "A woman's shoe—any shoe, for that matter—would have thousands of duplicates."

"The footprint is a clew, a slender one, I'll admit, but still a clew. The plaster cast will preserve it, for whatever it may be worth—which may be just nothing at all. Let's dig out a few more details, if we can. Was the door locked when you came here this morning?"

"It was; but that proves nothing. It has only an ordinary lock which anybody could pick with a bit of bent wire."

"Sure. Getting into a building—any building—is the easiest part of a burglar's job."

"You think the woman who made the footprint was the burglar, as well as the spy?"

"As to that, it's all guesswork, of course," Markham asserted, "but one of my guesses is that the woman whose footprint we are embalming wasn't the spy, what ever else she may have been."

"What makes you think that?"
 "The position of the print, for one thing. It was made by the left foot, and it is parallel with the house wall and not at right angles to it, as it would have been if the owner of the foot had been facing the window. Apart from this, it was made by a person walking—not standing still; or I'm guessing it was. It is deeper at the heel than at the ball of the foot."

"What have you been doing, Wally, reading Sherlock Holmes?"
 "Not quite that," Markham denied with a grin. "Just one of my little sidishows. That footprint was made by somebody coming from the alley through the passage between this shack and the fence; walking, and not stopping under the window. Is there a gate in the alley fence?"
 "There is; yes."
 "Let's go and have a look at it."

Together they went around to the alley gate. It was properly hooked. Still, as Markham pointed out, this meant nothing, since the hook could be reached from the outside for its replacement. Upon opening the gate and stepping into the alley they came upon more footprints, in which a man's were interwoven with those of the woman, and the track of an automobile.

"How about these?" Markham asked. "Who uses the alley for a driveway?"
 "Nobody, that I know of. All the houses in both streets have driveways from the front, both for their own autos and for coal deliveries and the like."
 "All right; then we may venture another guess. Your thief—or rather, thieves, for we know now there were at least two of them, a man and a woman—came here in a car, got out, passed through the gate, and went through the passage on their way to the shop door. Any objections?"

 "None at all, that I can see. But why were there two of them, Wally? Why would a crook double his risk by fetching a woman along?"
 "That is the mystery, or at least one of them. Or wait; maybe the woman went in alone. Let's see about that."

A careful examination proved that the man and the woman had gone in together, and that the man had walked on the woman's right and in the weeds, which accounted for the fact that his tracks were indistinct.

By this time the plaster cast had hardened sufficiently to permit its removal and handling, and they took it into the laboratory and dried it slowly in the glow of the electric stove. When the cast was quite dry and hard Markham made a close examination of the sole of the plaster-copied shoe.

"What are you looking for?" Landis wanted to know.
 "See that faint line across the ball of the foot?"
 "Yes; I can see it without the glass."

"Good. Now all we have to do is to find a woman whose left shoe is marked in the same way, and we have at least one of your two housebreakers."

"You're a Dear, Wally; Always a Dear!"

Troubled as he was, Landis had to smile.

"Of course," he said; "Just as easy as that! There are only some twenty or twenty-five thousand people in Carthage, and only a due proportion of that number of women. Do we swear out search warrants and make every woman in town produce her shoes?"

"Well," Markham returned good-temperedly. "We shall see what we shall see. Meanwhile, we'll preserve this bit of circumstantial evidence"—putting the plaster cast into his pocket. "You haven't notified the police of your loss, have you?"
 "No; the only thing I've done was to call you up."

"That's sensible; let it continue to be the only thing for the present. If you should pull the police in, you'd have to tell them what was stolen; describe the black box and give it a name. If you should do that, you'd be set down as a lunatic or a liar. The thing to do is to sit tight in the boat and wait. Something may turn up if we don't roll the water too hastily. Don't you agree with me?"

"I guess so," said Landis, with the air of one who is still finding it difficult to bring calm judgment to bear. "I'll do as you advise, but the waiting is going to be desperately hard. You'll keep in touch, won't you?"
 "Surest thing you know!" Markham returned heartily; and with that, he started his motor and drove away.

CHAPTER III

Betty Lawson

Upon leaving the Landis place Markham drove to a florist's shop and got the box of congratulatory roses for which he had telephoned that morning.

With the box on the seat beside him he headed his car for the grounds of one of the oldest institutions for higher learning in the Middle West. He hadn't been entirely frank with Landis—couldn't be. In the circumstances—and the reason for the unfrankness dated back to a game of golf at the Country club; a round played with Betty Lawson on a drizzly day when they had both finished with damp clothes and wet feet.

After the game he had urged Betty to let him drive her home quickly for a change, but she had refused to be hurried. There was a cheerful open fire in the club lounge and they had sat for a time before this, toasting their feet at the blaze. He remembered that Betty had rested her feet on the hot fender, and he had told her she would burn the soles of her shoes. She had burned one of them, the left one; he had seen the mark when she lifted her foot to feel if the shoe were getting too hot.

This small circumstance was a sufficient reason for the drive out to the college campus. If Landis had not admitted that he had shown Betty how to work the combination of the laboratory safe, the mere fact that the magnifying glass had shown a faint line running across the ball of the foot in the soft soil imprint under Landis' window wouldn't have suggested the thought of connecting Betty with the disappearance of the black box. But the telltale mark, added to Landis' admission, seemed to leave little room for doubt, though even with the evidence thus all but conclusive, the thing was blankly incredible.

As he let the blue roadster amble along toward the college suburb, Markham tried to convince himself of the absurdity of the circumstantial evidence conclusion. First, it involved the assumption that, instead of going directly home after the play, Betty had delayed her return for at least an hour, since it was nearly midnight before the black box had been locked up in the laboratory safe. Again, the automobile track and the double set of footprints in the alley proved that two persons were concerned, and if Betty were the woman, Canby must have been the man, since he was her escort for the evening.

Reaching this point, Markham told himself that the thing was blankly unbelievable. Betty might play a trick on Owen; but that she would make a man her accomplice was ridiculously incredible. Also, there was the matter of the fire-marked shoe. Would Betty have worn a pair of golf shoes to the theater? Markham weighted the probabilities for and against, and the "againsts" had it by an overwhelming majority.

He parked his car in front of the Lawson house and ran up the steps with the box under his arm. When the maid came to answer his ring he was told that Miss Betty had gone across the campus on an errand for her father and would be back in a few minutes. Would he come in and wait?

He would and did; and after the maid had shown him into the parlor and had gone back to her work, a masterful temptation assailed him. With Betty, who was her father's housekeeper, out of the way, and the professor busy with his classes in the near-by college buildings, he knew he was alone in the house, save for the maid. He knew which one of the upper rooms was Betty's. At the prompting of an impulse quite as lawless as the one—Betty's or another's—that had led to the burglarizing of Landis' safe, he ran rapidly up the stairs to the floor above.

He hoped he might find the door of Betty's chamber standing open, and it was. Feeling more like a sneak-thief than anything else, he went in. There was a pair of shoes standing beside the dressing chair. Were they the shoes she had worn to and from the theater—changing, of course, when she costumed for her part on the stage? He was afraid they were, and he wished she had put them away; hidden them so that he couldn't find them.

Since she hadn't—he picked up the left shoe and examined the sole. It not only bore the telltale crease across the ball of the foot; to the concave front of the low heel adhered a visible trace of the black soil of the Landis back yard. Not to leave the smallest chance of uncertainty, he took the plaster cast from his pocket and compared it with the shoe sole. The marks were identical. While he was wishing heartily that he could discredit the evidence of his own eyes, he happened to glance out of the window, and saw the owner of the accusing shoe tripping across the campus toward the house. In frantic haste he replaced the shoe beside its mate, pocketed the cast and dashed down the stairs and into the parlor a breathless moment before he heard Betty fitting her key into the latch of the hall door.

"If I need an excuse for this early morning brush, here it is," he said, giving her the congratulatory box. "I wanted to be first in the field."

"Oh, how perfectly gorgeous!" she cried, when the box was opened. "You're a dear, Wally; always a dear! Why doesn't some nice girl find it out and make away with you?"

"Exactly what I've asked myself dozens of times," he laughed. "But while there's life, there's hope. How are you feeling after last night's struggle?"

"Oh—was it a struggle? Did it look that way to you? What made you and Owen take a stage box? Did you think you might be able to rattle me and make me forget my lines?"
 "Sheer devotion," he explained in mock tenderness. "We wanted to be as near you as possible. Your work was splendid. Not feeling any after-effects at all?"

She dropped into a chair and passed her hand over her forehead.
 "Sit down for a few minutes, won't you? After-effects, you say? I'll admit it was a bit of a struggle, last night. I had stage fright horribly, at first"—and she went on telling him just how the fright complex had attacked her.

Sitting opposite, Markham listened, and as she talked the testimony of the circumstantial evidence became still more unbelievable. Surely if she had taken the leading part in a burglary an hour after the play, she couldn't sit there chatting with him apparently without a single trace of self-consciousness. Yet there was the accusing footprint under Landis' workshop window and the confirmatory shoe in the room overhead.

"Weren't you pretty tired when the thing was over?" he asked.

FIND TUNNEL IN MONTE ALBAN ZONE

Excavators Uncertain as to Its Uses.

Archeologists who are clearing the ruins of Monte Alban, where an Indian treasure tomb was recently found, have come upon what appears to be a secret passageway in the ancient city.

A tunnel opening was located and an Indian penetrated it to a distance of about 250 feet. Within he found human bones and fragments of a curious pottery vessel thought to have been an incense burner. The tunnel entrance has been closed again until the next season's work, when its destination will be sought. It is possible that this was a secret passage connecting the Temple of the Tiger with the Hill of the Sacred Quetzal Bird.

Monte Alban is so vast a zone that generations of archeologists may find work there. The portion now being cleared is the vast North terrace, really the "acropolis" of Monte Alban. In the center of the North terrace is a sunken court where archeologists believe that secret funeral rites took place. Monte Alban is thought to have been a sacred cemetery city, and the entrance to the world beyond the grave, rather than an Indian metropolis.

On the right of the sunken court rises a pyramid which is faced with stone panels. On the left is another pyramid, with a buried temple in it. This temple was filled with stone and closed. Both pyramids were pedestals for other temples on their tops. Back of the sunken court are other mounds not yet excavated.

In clearing the terrace, six round stone trunks, like bases of giant columns have just been unearthed. They are more than six feet in diameter and are symmetrically placed at the top of a great stone stairway that led up from the ancient plaza.

The North terrace, with its sunken court and pyramids and mounds, is known to the laborers as the Temple of the Tiger. These laborers are Zapotec and Mixtec Indians from the villages on Monte Alban's flanks.

ing was the exhibit of the art material prepared by all of the grades and the art class of the high school. The exhibit was divided into two classes; that is, industrial arts and fine arts. The industrial arts, consisting of food, shelter, and clothing, were represented by charts of cotton products, woolen products, etc. It would seem that no one could observe the work without realizing the progress which has been made in the study of art in our schools since the subject was introduced slightly more than two years ago.

The social committee, composed of Mesdames John King, William Brown, and Frank Moore, served a luncheon in the newly prepared room in the basement. The general social time enjoyed at the hour of the serving of refreshments is certainly one of the important parts of the meetings.

The fifth-sixth grade room kept the flag and standard which is given each month to the department which secures the largest attendance at the meeting. The first-second grade room was a strong contender for the honor this month.

The next meeting of the association will be Thursday evening, December 8, at the school building.

this winter. He was accompanied on the return trip by his nephew, George Fahselt, Jr., and everything went fine until they reached the Saskatchewan river. They had decided to cross at the Saskatchewan Landing rather than the Cabri ferry and when nearing the bottom of the hill, the car, which was in low, began gaining speed and Gordy decided to put it into extra low in order to make the sharp turn just before reaching the approach to the ferry. In trying to do this he stripped the gears and realizing that the car could not be controlled, told George to jump. George jumped from the truck and escaped uninjured. What happened from then on will never be known. When George picked himself up he immediately started in search of Gordy, but could not locate him in the dark at first. When he found him he was unconscious, lying a few feet behind the truck, which was on its side. He immediately rushed to the call bell and aroused the ferryman, who brought the ferry over to the north side. They took Gordy to the ferryman's house and one of the men drove five miles where he phoned to Swift Current for a doctor, but medical aid arrived too late, Gordy passing away about an hour after the accident without regaining consciousness.

Gordon Culham was born in Galt, Ontario, October 16, 1884, moving to Tawas City, Michigan with his parents at the age of four years. In June, 1906, he was married to Miss Minnie Smith and came to this province in the year 1907 from Tawas City, Mich., and resided in Swift Current until 1910, when he homesteaded in the Battrum district. Here he spent the arduous years of the pioneer with his family until 1921 when he disposed of his farm and moved to Cabri to reside. He later purchased farm lands in this district, but operated them from his town residence up to the time of his death.—Cabri (Saskatchewan) Times.

a Thanksgiving playlet. We all know that there was lots of work in making these costumes and training your group, Mrs. Brookins. Good work. As usual, Mrs. Valley's little tacts, who showed us how the little old woman who lived in a shoe really lived, stole the show. There is something about those little tads acting their parts that makes you feel at peace with the world. We enjoyed your offering a lot, Mrs. Valley. Mr. Rollin's room staged a "Song Fest" and you should have seen the singers. Only a man with an imagination and ingenuity could have created such a motley group. Thanks for all of the laughs you brought forth, even from us grouchy-folks.

The entire program was under the supervision of Mesdames Harry Hill and Horace Powell. To them alone is due the credit that the program went so well and was timed so that it went on in two rooms at the same time without too much waiting. Both Mrs. Powell and Mrs. Hill did their work splendidly. Mrs. Powell also organized the orchestra which was so well received by everyone. I saw several staid, settled gentlemen from National City and Melvor shuffling their feet and looking over possible partners. I'm sure their wives would not approve, so no names will be mentioned.

The "fair" is over, but not forgotten. We cannot forget what a success it was financially, gastronomically and socially. We teachers and students were glad to have you parents and friends with us in our school for that one evening. We also wish to extend to you our thanks for your help in making our evening a success. Your efforts, contributions and attendance made that "fair" possible. Nearly five hundred of us, parents, teachers, students and patrons, worked together to make our party a success. Whittemore's "fair" is synonymous with cooperation, and cooperation means a better understanding between all of us. This understanding and cooperation has made our school prosper and gained us many friends of whom we are proud. Mav Whittemore school know of nothing but loyalty, cooperation and understanding at all times between students, patrons and teachers.

She also has received a certificate of membership in the National Rust Busters' Club, an honorary organization of boys and girls in the thirteen states who have reported to their state barberry eradication offices one or more new locations of the harmful common barberry bush. This certificate is signed by Governor Wilber M. Brucker and Donald G. Fletcher, executive secretary of the club. Ninety-nine boys and girls in Michigan have been so honored. The location reported by Elizabeth Ropert is northeast of the old D. & M. ball field, a portion of which was once the D. & M. Nursery.
