REUBEN WADE DIES, PIONEER, AGE 86 YEARS

Reuben Wade, last G. A. R. member in Isosco county, died Sunday, December 11. The deceased was a pioneer of Tawas township and was considered one of the most successful farmers in the county previous to his retirement. He was 86 years of age. A military funeral was given Tuesday afternoon by Jesse C. Hodder Post, American Legion, assisted by Audie Johnson Post, East Tawas. Burial was made in the Tawas City cemetery.

Reuben Wade was born in Macomb county in 1846. In 1864 he enlisted in Company K, Eleventh Michigan Volunteer Cavalry, in which he served until the end of the Civil War.

On his return to civil life he spent some time in the oil fields of Pennsylvania, later moving to Tawas township. He settled on a home-stand, which was eventually built into one of the finest farms on the Hemlock road. In 1907 Mr. Wade retired from the farm and made his residence at Tawas City. He did not retire from active life, however, for he took a keen interest in his business until a short time before his death. Among the things in which he was interested were extensive holdings in resort property at Sand Lake. Much of the development at that place was due to his enterprise.

In 1868 Mr. Wade was married to Emma Kelly, who preceded him in death about ten years ago. The deceased is survived by one son, Frederick, of Detroit, also three grandchildren.

Mrs. James A. White

Mrs. James A. White of Prescott died Friday evening, December 9, at her home after an illness of eight years. The funeral services were held Monday at the home of her sister, Mrs. Charles Beardslee, in this city. Rev. Charles E. Edinger officiated. Interment was made in the Tawas City cemetery.

She is survived by the husband, two sisters, Mrs. Charles Beardslee of this city and Mrs. L. H. Barker of Elkhart, Indiana, three brothers, James Robinson of Tawas City, Alex. Robinson and Edward Robinson of Reno township, and a host of other relatives and friends.

Bernice Robinson was born August 29, 1892, in Reno township, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Robinson. She was united in marriage to James A. White of Reno August 14, 1917. The family lived in Reno township until Mr. White entered as a soldier in the Great War. On his return from services they made their home at Tawas City and later moved to Flint.

Following this they lived at various places where it was hoped that Mrs. White's health would improve.

In 1923 Mr. and Mrs. White went to Prescott where they were engaged in the gasoline and oil distribution business. Mrs. White took a very interested and active part in this business.

The bereaved husband has the sympathy of his many friends throughout the county.

School Notes

High School

Preparations for Christmas programs are underway in all departments. These programs will take place on Friday, December 23, immediately after the noon intermission. All are invited.

The twelfth grade economics class is busy these days studying money. Many different kinds of money of the United States and other nations have been brought by the members of the class. A five dollar bill issued by the Confederate States in 1864 is among the interesting exhibits.

The senior class recently voted to give a class play during the year. While no selection has yet been made, the work upon the play probably will be begun soon after the holiday vacation. A drama is generally regarded of considerable benefit.

HER PAST ROSE UP TO CONFRONT HER

They were so much in love. Up to the moment they met their lives had been a sequence of tragedies. Now they wanted a home together and a child to make their happiness complete. Then came the other woman, out of his past, a woman with a claim neither could ignore.

So runs the theme of "Rockabye," Constance Bennett's newest picture, playing at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Sunday and Monday, December 18 and 19.

In it Miss Bennett has one of the most colorful and appealing characterizations ever written for the screen, according to critics; a sensational actress, suddenly projected into fame and headlines from an unfortunate girlhood, unwilling and unable to break the links that chain her to her past, desiring the experience of domesticity and motherhood more than anything else in life.

The picture, from Lucia Bronder's play of the same name, was directed by George Cukor. Joel McCrea and Paul Lukas are featured in Miss Bennett's support.

Somebody Is Coming

ATTEND ROAD MEETING AT TRAVERSE CITY

W. J. Grant, chairman of the Isosco County Road Commission, and J. N. Sloan, engineer, attended the state conference on employment relief called by the Michigan committee for trade recovery at Traverse City December 12 and 13. Ways and means of obtaining R. F. C. aid were discussed, with the thought in mind of making every dollar spent an asset to the community instead of a debt.

Particular stress was placed on the necessity of each and every community official exerting his utmost to get R. F. C. aid and put every man to work.

It was proposed that the 25 northern counties of the lower peninsula cooperate with the State Highway Department in obtaining $2,000,000 from the R. F. C., using future federal aid money as collateral. It was pointed out that it was necessary to act quickly as this collateral is being rapidly taken up.

Fourteen counties in the upper peninsula have already organized and petitioned for an equal amount. Under the able direction of Professor Sweet they are also organizing many self liquidating projects and he states that it is their aim to soon have every man at work.

Interesting talks were given by Col. George B. Walbridge, Col. A. S. Douglas, both of the Michigan committee on trade recovery, and E. C. Brandt of Pittsburgh, Pa., Major John P. Hallihan and Clarence W. Hubbell, members of the R. F. C.

State highway officials advised that widening and drainage projects involving approximately $22,000,000 in labor in Isosco county could be carried out in the next ten months if this relief is obtained.

The commission plans to consult with members of the board of supervisors on plans for financing the county's part to obtain this money.

SMITH-WARREN

On Thursday, December 8, at 2:30 o'clock, the home of Mrs. Reuben Smith was the scene of a pretty wedding when her daughter, Celia Irene, was united in marriage to Marshall Warren of Omer. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank Metcalf of Tawas City, the ring service being used.

The bride was prettily attired in a dress of blue crepe. The bridesmaid, Miss Hazel Burt, niece of the bride, wore brown. The groom was attended by Ralph Burt, nephew of the bride.

After the ceremony a bountiful lunch was served to about forty guests. The young couple left immediately for a ten days motor trip through the southern part of the state.

Among those present at the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Clare Smith and son of Flint, Mrs. John VanWagoner of Millington, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Warren and children, Mrs. and Mrs. Wilson Hatcher and son and Miss Margaret Warren of Omer, Rev. and Mrs. Frank Metcalf of Tawas City, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Fraser, John Burt and family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pfehl and family and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Herriman and family.

Best wishes of the entire community are extended to the young couple for a long and happy married life.

ASK FOR BIDS ON OSCODA-EAST TAWAS ROAD

Cheering news has been received by all those interested in the completion of the new Shore road to Oscoda. Sealed bids have been asked by the State Highway Department for the paving of 6.295 miles starting at Oscoda and continuing south toward East Tawas.

The work, which will consist of reshaping and paving a strip twenty feet wide, must be completed by July 1, 1933, according to the announcement.

HONOR ROLL OF WHITEMORE HIGH SCHOOL

The following students have earned an average of "B" or better in subjects carried during the past six weeks marking period:

Forty present at CHIL'D HEALTH MEETING

The regular County Child Health and Welfare meeting was held December 13th at the Ladies Literary Club rooms at East Tawas. About forty were present, including the teachers and county normal students.

The following program was given: An excellent talk on care and prevention of rheumatism—Dr. S. E. Somers (this is one of the U. S. E. extension course lectures); a bed-making demonstration and how to give a patient a bed bath—Miss Cowgill; three Christmas songs—County Normal chorus; two selections by brass quintet, directed by Miss Huhtala; saxophone solo—Fred Wilson; regular Red Cross report—Miss Worden. A light lunch was served to the members.

All present considered themselves well repaid by being present for it was a very instructive meeting.

INFORMATION FOR MAILING OF CHRISTMAS CARDS

Because of the number of inquiries regarding the mailing of Christmas cards the following information is given:

For local delivery if sealed (mailer must reside in city where mailed, and if there is no city delivery)—1c; for delivery anywhere outside of city (if sealed)—3c; if envelope is left unsealed (anywhere in the U. S. Flaps must be slipped in envelope)—1½c.

When mailing for 1½c, mailer must be careful that no written message is on the card. Only such writing as "Merry Christmas," "Sincerely yours," or the like with name of sender are permissible. Disregarding this rule will tend to hold up delivery of your cards and perhaps cause late delivery.

M. C. Musolf, Postmaster.

A complete line of Elgin watches—ladies' and gents' wrist watches. Basil Quick, jeweler, East Tawas. adv

CONSIDERABLE INTEREST SHOWN IN TAWAS AUCTION BRIDGE TOURNAMENT

Considerable interest is being shown in the Tawas Auction Bridge tournament to be held this winter, according to the committee in charge. The majority of those players who were entered in last winter's elimination tournament are anxious to avail themselves of another opportunity to play in organized competition. The new plan whereby each partnership may play as many evenings as they wish is especially attractive to those who were eliminated in the early rounds last year because of adverse cards and to those players who did not enter last year because they did not feel qualified to play against strong competition.

The new plan provides that the final standing will be determined for each player upon the percentage of rubbers won and lost by that player. A partnership may thus lose four rubbers on the first evening of play and offset this loss by winning four rubbers in subsequent play.

Monday night has been selected as the night on which play will be conducted each week. The first evening's play will therefore be held on Monday, January 9th, and play will continue for twelve consecutive weeks. Entrants are required to play only nine evenings in order to be eligible for prizes. The entrance fee will be twenty-five cents per evening with the provision that after players have paid for nine evenings of play they will be exempt from any further payment.

J. WILLIAM HAMILTON

J. William Hamilton, 88 years old, died Tuesday, December 13, at his home in East Tawas. Old age was the cause of death. He had lived in the same home for 51 years.

The deceased is survived by three sons, John and Will Hamilton of Port Huron and Clark Hamilton of East Tawas, who has always made his home with his father; also several grandchildren and other relatives. His wife preceded him in death a number of years ago.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon, with Rev. W. A. Gregory officiating. Burial was made in the Greenwood cemetery beside his wife. All relatives were present at the funeral.

LOTS OF EXCITEMENT IN "CENTRAL PARK"

A man's battle for life with an enraged lion in its cage, a panic on a ballroom floor when the ferocious beast leaps into the midst of the dancers, a chase for the escaped animal in the darkness of a park forest, are among the exciting incidents said to make "Central Park," a First National picture, coming to the Family Theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, December 20-21-22, one of the most thrilling dramas ever depicted on the screen.

No more ideal characters could have been selected to play together in the leading roles of this picture, which is packed with thrills and romantic interest. Both Miss Blondell and Mr. Ford, in their days of trouping, have undergone the exact experiences of the characters they represent.

The lion sequence not only carries a thrill but is an important development in the highly romantic plot in which a boy and girl, stranded and broke in the big city, accidentally meet and become sweethearts.

The story all takes place in New York's great playground from which the picture title is taken.

GAME ANIMALS INCREASE IN HURON FOREST

Reports of forest officers indicate that game animals have increased in numbers within the Huron National Forest during the past year, according to G. K. Fenger, Forest Supervisor.

Relative to deer and other big game animals, the opinion is that the increase is due to the influence of game refugees which afford the desired protection. There has also been a wider general interest and appreciation of game and the laws applicable to its protection. Comments on the past hunting season indicate that there were not the customary number of hunters, but the percentage meeting with the success of bringing home a buck was decidedly greater. This is attributed to a better season for hunting and to the increase in numbers. Although some criticism of the one buck law has been noted, its retention seems desirable, at least for the present.

It is interesting to note that elk seem to be increasing. A cow elk with two calves was seen the past summer in the vicinity of Five Channels dam by a forest officer, and others have been seen near Curran.

Pheasants, grouse, and partridge were quite abundant. During the summer coveys of fifteen and twenty were commonly noted. While the breeding stock has been depleted, (Turn to No. 4, Back Page)

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT TO BE GIVEN AT EAST TAWAS M. E. CHURCH

A Christmas pageant, "The Miracle," is to be presented at the East Tawas M. E. church Sunday, December 18, at 7:30 p. m., E. S. T.

Beginning with the army scene, in which the expected Christ is portrayed as a warring Messiah, through the time of Malachi, prophet of the rich, and Isaiah, prophet of the common people, the story comes down the age to the manger cradle of Bethlehem.

Wise men and shepherds, the holy family and their friends at the inn, the announcing angel and the heavenly host, are all portrayed in pantomime, assisted by a narrator and a chorus choir.

Elaborate lighting effects and costumes add much to the beauty of this Christmas pageant in which about sixty-five people take part. The public is very cordially invited to attend.

TAWAS CITY LODGE NO. 302, F. & A. M., ELECTS OFFICERS

At the regular meeting of Tawas City Lodge No. 302, F. & A. M., held Tuesday evening, December 13, the following officers were elected for the coming year:

W. M.—Chas. Beardslee.
S. W.—Ray Tuttle.
J. W.—C. E. Tanner.

Treasurer—F. F. Taylor.
Secretary—Wm. Fitzhugh.
S. D.—John R. Forsten.
J. D.—Ronald Curry.

STARTS PLANT FOR BUILDING OF BOXES

C. E. Tanner of this city is erecting the machinery for a plant to build fish boxes, and saw lath, shingles and lumber. He expects to have the mill in operation within a short time. It is located on the Wilson Grain company's old flouring mill property.

"ME AND MY GAL" IS RICH COMEDY

"Me and My Gal," a Fox comedy-romance, will be shown Saturday, Sunday and Monday, December 17-18-19, at the State Theatre. It is played by a brilliant and competent cast, the story holds interest from beginning to end and the direction is all that could be demanded.

Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy, who have not appeared together in a picture since they were co-featured in "She Wanted a Millionaire," enact the leading roles and both give refreshing characterizations.

The story revolves around the romance of a worldly-wise cashier in a restaurant of the lower strata and a wise-cracking young detective attached to the radio car division. As the romance flourishes, the detective discovers an escaped gangster hiding in the home of his sweetheart's sister when her paralytic father-in-law, by signs made with his eyes, reveals the presence of the gangster.

"Me and My Gal" depends, for the greater part, on its comedy. A few of the situations are of side-splitting quality.

Miss Bennett and Mr. Tracy are supported by a cast that includes many favorites. Splendid work is done by J. Farrell MacDonald in the role of the irrepresible father, Marion Burns as Miss Bennett's sister, George Walsh as the escaped convict, Henry B. Walthall as the paralytic, and Noel Madison in one of the crook roles for which he is famous.

Christmas Never Grows Old

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying:

Glorious to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.—St. Luke 2:8-14.

THE hope of the world is that Christmas does not grow old-fashioned. The world may be cynical, life may be hard, hand may be raised against hand and breast opposed to breast in the bitter struggle of men for the goals that entice them. Looking on that struggle and the oppression and injustice that accompany it, it is easy to say that human love and charity have departed from the hearts of men.

But it is not so. All human relationships are founded on the qualities that Christmas typifies in man. No human society could exist without them. Laws could not govern hearts that knew not love, nor force constrain the acts of men who knew not mercy. These qualities are inherent in man. He cannot divest himself of them. They are the heritage of his divine origin and nature. They distinguish him from the beasts.

Christmas is his recognition of his own divine attributes. He cannot ignore the worship that is in him for those same qualities that his baser nature may often seek to overcome, to deny, to banish from human relationships. But it is the history of man's conquest of life, which often has seemed ruthless and savage, that no triumph of materialism, no pursuit of wealth, no indulgence and greed have ever separated him finally from that first altar of his worship—from the love and mercy that have taken form in his observance of Christmas.

With kings and counselors of the earth, with princes that had gold and filled their houses with silver, and with the lowliest in their huts of desolation it is ever the same; together they must worship what is in the nature of all that breathe, for without it one man would forever be a beast of burden and his brother a beast of prey.

Christmas, then, brings home to us our common heritage. We cannot escape it if we would. As the flower holds up its chalice to the raindrops, so does man, obeying an impulse as instinctive turn to Christmas to receive the reviving forces that are in the human love it brings. Then does he lay aside all that is unworthy of him and partake anew of the spirit that alone can give purpose and dignity to his life on earth. As long as he turns in worship to this beauty that really is of himself, though often through his own failings removed from him and preserved only as an image or symbol, he is not lost to some sense of his own divine nature. He can still bring it back and receive it renewed and live by it.

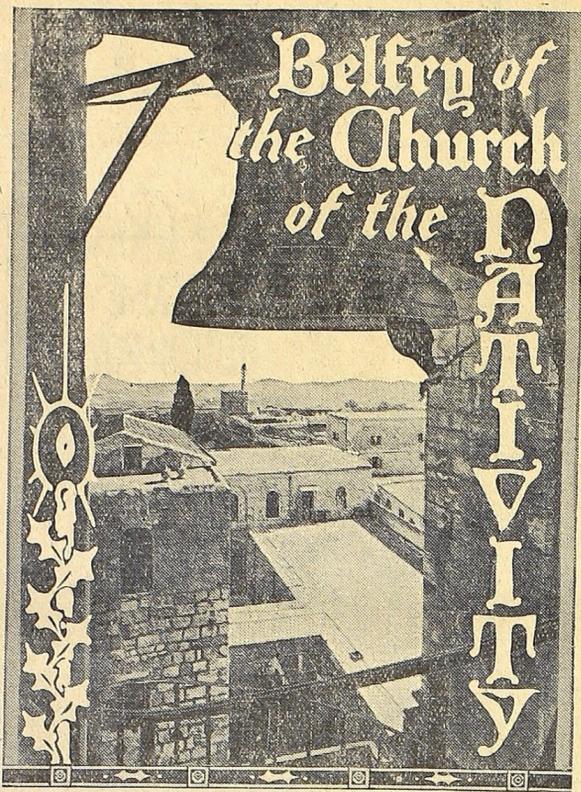

Thus is Christmas never outworn, nor its reviving force exhausted. It cannot be while man has worship in him and gives it to that which he recognizes as the ultimate to which his nature aspires.

No, Christmas never can grow old-fashioned and in that is the hope of the world.—Kansas City Times.

UNDER THE MISTLETOE

Marion—Jack is getting near-sighted Myrtle—It doesn't follow that there is anything the matter with his eyes because he can't see you under the mistletoe.

THE CHRISTMAS DINNER

WHO among us can affect to despise the gastronomic delights of the family Christmas dinner? The most sophisticated person must admit our festive board at Christmas is a place where the gods might love to linger. What a picture it presents to the eye. The big turkey browned to a golden crispness; the heaping dish of mashed potatoes, which need only the addition of the delicious gravy to convert them into manna, and the dressing, seasoned to just the right proportions. Then there is the crisp pleasing salad, the golden sweet potatoes, the big dish of creamed cauliflower; the celery, olives, pickles, and cranberry sauce; the mince and pumpkin pies, the rich, fragrant coffee, and the raisins, nuts and other goodies that follow. Kings and emperors in the past have conferred high honors on those who set some especially wonderful meal before them, but no king nor emperor of any age ever sat down to a dinner that looks and tastes as good as that which is set on the tables of the great American home on Christmas day.—Katherine Edelman.

© 1932, Western Newspaper Union.

THE origin of the Christmas tree is much disputed and there are many popular legends concerning it. One popular tale pictures Martin Luther as attempting to describe the beauty of the snow-covered forest under the wintry sky. Suddenly the idea suggested itself. He hurried to the garden, cut a little fir tree, dragged it into the nursery, put some candles on its branches and lighted them. This was supposed to have happened on Christmas eve and the tale seeks to explain the origin of both tree and candles. One of the most popular German engravings represents Luther and his family grouped about the tree.

Another older German legend says St. Winifred is the originator of the idea. One day while surrounded by crowds of converts, the Saint was having a giant oak saved down for use in Druidic worship. Suddenly a great wind rushed past the tree and sent it crashing backward where it destroyed everything in the path except a small fir tree. Because of the seeming miracle, St. Winifred decreed the fir tree be known as the Holy Tree, the tree of the Christ Child.

Still another authority declares the tree comes from the ancient Egyptian custom of decking houses at the time of the winter solstice with branches of the date palm—the symbol of life triumphant over death and an emblem of the starlit firmament. At the same time the Egyptians were decking houses with date palm branches, the Jews were celebrating the Feast of Chanukah, in which lighted candles were a feature. A Greek festival at about this time is called "The Feast of Lights" and the Chinese festival of a corresponding period is called "The Feast of Lanterns." During the old Roman festival, pine trees were decorated with images of Bacchus, and the Christmas tree is believed by some to be a relic of this old custom.

The French have an interesting legend. In the Thirteenth century a huge tree was found, the branches were covered with candles, some of which stood erect and some upside down. On the top appeared a vision of a child with a halo around its head. When asked to explain this extraordinary tree, the pope exclaimed: "The tree represents mankind, the child is Christ and the candles are meant to indicate the good and bad human beings." Thereafter, according to this myth, the Christmas tree was used at Christmas time to bring happiness and good cheer.

Now with all these vague traditions blended together we have as a final result the permanent establishment of the Christmas tree. Germany first decorated the tree with gifts. Not until the time of the marriage of Queen Victoria did the tree become a regular English institution. When the Germans emigrated to America, they brought the Christmas tree with them and we Americans borrowed it along with many other Christmas customs.—Indiana Farmer's Guide.

1932 Printed Christmas Card Was Issued Back in '43

THERE is more humanity about the Victoria and Albert museum than its stiff brick exterior suggests. The director has sent me a Christmas Picture Book, says a writer in the London Star. It reveals the fact that the first Christmas card ever printed was issued only as recently as 1843.

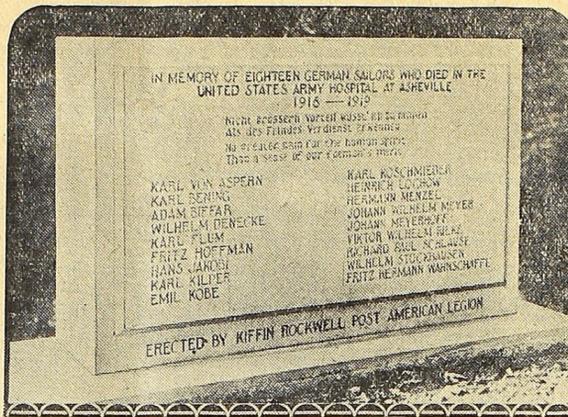

The card, which was printed for Sir Henry Cole, first director of the South Kensington museum, is reproduced, along with many other efforts by artists, to celebrate the nativity. They range from a walrus ivory relief from Cologne to a modern woodcut by Eric Gill. It is strange to see how the artistic wheel has turned full circle back to the medieval austerity.

But I can't help liking the first Christmas card, which "features," as the films say, a hearty meal. As the fat boy would say, "I likes eating best."

THE ONE ROAD

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

ONLY one road, after all, In a world of thoroughfares, Highways wide or pathways small, Only one for which one cares: Ev'ry road, however far, Joins another road more near, Joining other roads there are Leading home to someone dear.

Only one road, though it start Half around the world away, Only one road leads the heart, Calls the spirit day by day, It may pass some lone abode, Rise among the streets of Rome, Yet it joins some other road Leading to the road to home.

Only one road on the earth Crosses land and crosses sea, Only one road that is worth All we are or aim to be. Where it starts I know not of, But one way it always wends: To the heart of one we love And the fellowship of friends. © 1932, Douglas Malloch.—WNU Service.

WAYS WITH SALMON

AS SALMON fresh or canned may be found in most markets, it is enjoyed and served freely.

Salmon Loaf,

Take one cupful of salmon, three-fourths cupful of crumbs, the juice of half a lemon, four tablespoonfuls of butter, two eggs, pepper to season and add a tablespoonful of finely minced parsley. Mix all together, adding the well beaten whites last. Steam in a buttered mold for one-half hour. Serve with a white sauce to which three tablespoonfuls of chopped pimiento have been added: chives or green onion tops finely minced may be used.

Salmon Entree.

Remove the stems and scoop out the centers of six large ripe tomatoes. Sprinkle the inside with salt and pepper and chill well. Steam or cook one pound of salmon until tender, then flake it. To the flaked salmon add three tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise and mix well. Fill the tomato cups with the salmon mixture, piling it well. Top each with one-half cupful of cream that has been whipped and mixed with four tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise. Sprinkle three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped pistachio nuts over the top and serve.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

JOHNNIE CHUCK DECIDES TO EAT A LITTLE MORE

"TO EAT or not to eat, that is the question," said Johnny Chuck as he nibbled daintily at a clover leaf. "You don't look to me as if there was any question at all," declared Sammy Jay, who happened along just in time to overhear what Johnny had said. "How any one so fat as you are can ever look at food is something I can't understand. If you eat much more your skin will burst. Don't you think of anything but your stomach, Johnny Chuck?"

"I'm not thinking of my stomach," retorted Johnny Chuck indignantly. "I wouldn't eat another mouthful if I could be sure that I'm fat enough."

"Fat enough!" exclaimed Sammy Jay. "Ho, ho, ho! If you get much fatter you won't be able to walk. How fat do you want to get?"

"I Am Not Thinking of My Stomach," Retorted Johnny Chuck.

"Fat enough to be sure of sleeping comfortably all winter and having strength enough left to take care of myself when Mistress Spring gets here again," replied Johnny Chuck, shortly. He didn't like being laughed at. "I wish I could know whether the winter is going to be a long one or a short one. If I thought it was going to be short I would stop eating this very minute."

"I don't see what the winter has to do with your eating," replied Sammy Jay, scratching his head in a puzzled way.

"It's got everything to do with it," retorted Johnny Chuck. Then he explained that getting fat was his way of storing up food and that it was very necessary that he should have enough to last him until the coming of Mistress Spring. Sammy Jay listened with something like very real interest. He began to understand why it was that Johnny Chuck was so anxious to know what the winter would be.

"Jerry Muskrat thinks it is going to be a long, hard winter," said Sammy as Johnny Chuck stopped speaking.

Johnny pricked up his short, round ears. "How do you know that?" he demanded.

"He's building the walls of his house thicker than I've ever known him to before," replied Sammy. "If anybody knows about the weather it is Jerry Muskrat. Then, too, his cousin, Paddy the Beaver, is cutting more wood than he did last year. You know he sinks it in his pond and eats the bark in winter. That looks to me as if Paddy thinks the same as Jerry. He knows he can't get any more food until the ice has melted in the spring, and he means to have enough. I don't believe he would work the way he is doing if he wasn't pretty sure that it was necessary."

Johnny Chuck sat up the better to look at Sammy Jay and make sure that Sammy meant what he was saying. "What more have you seen or heard?" he demanded eagerly, all the time chewing a clover leaf.

"Nothing much," replied Sammy. "Only that I heard Buster Bear say that his new fur coat is the thickest he ever had, and he wished cold weather would hurry up and come along because he's uncomfortable now. He's fatter, too, than I've ever seen him since he came to the Green Forest to live. This morning I met Reddy Fox and he was complaining about the thickness of his new coat. He said that Billy Mink and Little Joe Otter have the finest, warmest coats they ever have had, but are finding them a little uncomfortable just now. Do you know what I think?"

"What?" asked Johnny Chuck eagerly.

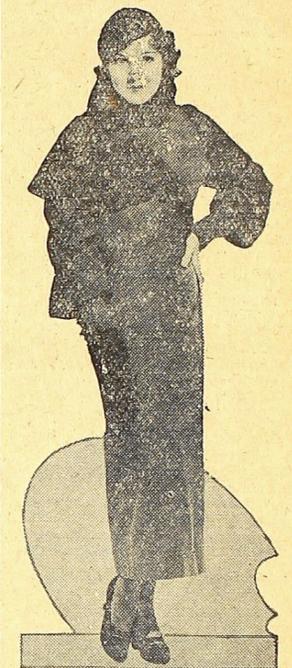

"I think," replied Sammy Jay, trying to look wise and knowing, "that if Old Mother Nature has given these fellow such a thick coat, it is because she knows that they will have need for it. I think that the winter is going to be hard and long. I'm almost tempted to move south myself."

"Thank you, Sammy Jay," replied Johnny Chuck gratefully. "I think just as you do. You have removed the last doubt from my mind. I don't think I'll turn in to sleep for the winter for a few days yet. A little more fat won't do any harm. There is nothing like being prepared. Too much fat won't hurt me, but too little may."

With this Johnny Chuck fell to eating as if he were half starved instead of nearly bursting with fat.

ITALY'S LARGEST COLONY

A Bedouin Girl of Italian Libya.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

ANCIENT places of worship with several hundred drawings engraved on rocks in the style of from 9000 to 4000 B. C., were uncovered recently by a German scientific expedition in the Fezzan district of Italian Libya.

Frequent reports of discovery of historic relics indicate that the Italian colony is becoming more and more a great archeological workshop. Early this year, the pages of history were turned back far into the pre-Christian era at Cirene.

Founded by Greek refugees from islands of the Aegean sea about 2,600 years ago, Cirene was born a humble settlement, unaware that in a century or two it was to rise to a city of power, the commands of whose rulers would be felt beyond the borders of Cirenaica.

Cirene once had a population of 100,000. From the ranks of its inhabitants came artists, poets, writers and philosophers who drew intellectual men from many parts of the civilized world of its time. Its medical school was famous; its buildings were architectural gems. It was called "The Athens of Libya."

Though culture saturated Cirene, the city never lacked men with an eye for business. Caravan merchants found Cirene a market for their goods; they also found the city a meeting place to exchange commodities with other "foreigners." Then sea trade beckoned to Cirene. A port town rose on the Mediterranean and a road was built to the city 17 miles inland.

Both land and sea trade flourished when the port was opened. With new revenues, Cirene, which was already a city of magnificence, continued its costly building. But progress was not to be perpetual. About two centuries after the first settlers arrived on the Cirene plateau, the dynasty that had led the city through an era of progress fell, and a republic was set up. The republic's path was strewn with tyrants, while nature added frequent severe earthquakes that threatened the city's foundations. In 96 B. C. Rome took over the government.

Cirene basked in glory among ancient cities nearly a thousand years, but nearly as quickly as it rose, a gem of ancient art, it fell into ruins. A dominant city became dominated. In the Fourth century A. D. it was left to the elements. By the Fifth century, Cirene was in ruins.

Largest Italian Colony.

Italian Libya is the largest of Italy's colonies. Five Italian "boots" could be placed on its map and not cover it completely. It was once divided into three parts—Tripolitania, Cirenaica, and the portion of the Libyan desert.

Old Roman writers described Tripolitania as extremely fertile. Perhaps they exaggerated, and perhaps also the climate and physical conditions have changed markedly. At any rate most of the country is now desert with its fertile strips and oases scattered in the wastes of sand and stones. There is much evidence that the region once knew better days climatically. Great avenues of stones set on end and numerous circles of monoliths and trilithons, like the famous Stonehenge of England, testify to a neolithic culture of importance in this section of North Africa, perhaps many thousands of years before Memphis and Babylon were thought of.

The Phoenicians began the recorded history of the country by establishing cities there, perhaps as early as 1500 B. C. The fact that these cities and their surrounding country thrive them, and that later Greek and Roman culture flourished there, indicates that the country was more favored then than now.

Sand dunes have encroached through the centuries on much land in the fertile strip along the Mediterranean coast. But the relatively poor condition of Tripolitania today is largely due to sociological and governmental factors. The commercial Phoenicians and the colonizing Greeks and Romans were able to make the most of the country. Since the region was overrun by the Arabs in 644 A. D., and since it passed under Turkish control later, however, it has been marked to a considerable extent by economic and cultural stagnation.

In places along the 1,000-mile coast of Tripolitania the arid sands come down to the water's edge, but between are fertile areas on which palms, olives, figs, oranges and other fruits flourish. Farther inland among the highlands occur some rather large patches on which olives and fruits and grain are grown. Then come the vast desert stretches.

The city of Tripoli has been called "the gateway to the Sahara." Three historic desert caravan routes have converged there for ages: the trail from Timbuktu, that from Lake Chad, and a southeastern route from the region of the Egyptian Sudan. These routes were of great importance for the bringing of central Africa of ivory, ostrich feathers, gold dust, and perhaps most valuable of all in a primitive environment, "black gold"—negro slaves. This traffic was ostensibly abolished by Turkey only in recent years.

Cirenaica Has Promise.

Cirenaica, situated on a bold promontory protruding into the crystal clear waters of the Mediterranean, is a dry, parched land with scarcely a stream or creek. A shelf of limestone hills, resembling a gigantic backbone, but hardly justifying the Arab epithet "Green Mountains," stretches across the base of the foreland. Between this ridge and the blue sea a fringe of fertile fields 60 to 70 miles wide, lying dormant for centuries, now teems with Italian colonists and migrating Arabs. With the help of modern irrigation methods it is hoped this region will merit its historical nickname, "bread basket of Rome."

Visitors to Cirenaica usually sail from Brindisi on steamers laden to capacity with Italian officers and their families bound for Bengasi, the principal seaport and capital. Because of a rocky bottom which prevents dredging in the mole-enclosed harbor, passengers disembark into small boats which bob precariously on the swell characteristic of these coastal waters.

First impression of Bengasi is of a bit of Europe transplanted. Since 1911 when Cirenaica was occupied by the Italians a new town on modern lines has been built alongside the old Arab section. Wide avenues shaded by date palms and lined with neat houses patterned after Moorish architecture border a public park planted with imported tropical plants and shrubs. Donkeys carrying nondescript loads, from hooded Arabs to bundles of firewood larger than themselves and camels "pad padding" along, vie with motorcycles and automobiles for right of way. Lovely, dark-hued debutantes fresh from Rome and Paris and proud army officers resplendent in the white tropical uniforms of Italy stroll along wide sidewalks in striking contrast to slow-moving burnoused Arabs, scurrying red-fezzed boys and veiled, Moslem women ornamented with gold coins.

Fine Sponges Found There.

From time immemorial sponge and tunny fishing have been the chief industries along the coast of Cirenaica. Greek divers swim down, holding a rock, pluck a sponge from the bottom and then upon releasing the weight, float to the surface. The Cirenaican variety being especially fine, it is sometimes transplanted to other parts of the Mediterranean. In ancient days, it is said, sponges were put in Greek helmets as "shock absorbers" for the warriors.

The principal agricultural and food crop is barley, quantities of which are exported to the motherland and Scotland. Henna, olives, vegetables, fruit and grapes are raised in the more fertile regions while dates, figs and skins brought in by caravans from the South are shipped to Italy, the last to be made into gloves and shoes.

A map-minded person might describe the Libyan desert as "the largest blank area on the map of north Africa with a cartographer's smallest marks indicating a few oases." It is shut off from the Mediterranean by a narrow populated strip which itself sizzles in the hot African sun. On the east the fertile Nile valley lends the Libyan owners moral support by showing what might be done with their sand-swept land.

POULTRY FACTS DAIRY

NEW "LAYING HOUSE" BIG PROFIT FACTOR

Makes "Biddy" Egg-Producing Machine.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Hens become laying machines and nothing more in the new apartment henhouses which are replacing the old type single-story laying houses on many poultry farms.

Some of these new laying houses are from two to six stories high and have a capacity of several thousand hens. The birds are confined in these modern houses and are never on the ground after they go into the houses as pullets in the fall.

The successful management of apartment laying houses requires careful attention. Rations must contain all the essential ingredients, properly balanced, because the hens have no chance to supplement their feed with greens, minerals, or grain found on the range. In one of the department's experiments a slightly deficient diet gave fairly good egg production with hens on range, but gave poor results when fed to hens confined in houses.

Ventilation in large laying houses is provided by mechanical ventilating systems. Many houses are insulated and are heated during the cold months. It is absolutely necessary that large houses of this type be kept clean and sanitary, or losses will be great.

Hen That Stops Laying Seldom Worth Keeping

It is easy to cull hens in the fall after they stop laying. The ones that stop laying first can be picked out by shrunken combs, yellow color of beak and legs, and by the fact that they immediately begin to molt.

It is an excellent plan to cull hens in the fall but it is better to cull continually throughout the entire year. The poultryman who watches his birds can tell very soon when a hen stops laying. Unless there is some good reason for this then is the proper time to get rid of her.

This does not take care of the low producers who lay regularly but infrequently. Much can be told about the producing ability of a hen by studying the depth and width of her body and the appearance of her head. Culling, of course, does not increase the ability of any individual hen to produce eggs. In addition to culling, a breeding program is needed through which the average producing ability of the flock can be gradually increased.—American Agriculturist.

Sand and Gravel

While no test work, to the best of my knowledge, has ever shown that the addition or omission of sand and gravel from chick or hen rations affected rate of growth or production, I thoroughly believe that grit has a place. Baby chicks that are to be kept off the ground the first few weeks of their lives are entitled to a chance to eat a little sand or gravel. The mere fact that they always crave it, even though a good mash containing plenty of calcium and phosphorus is available, is an argument that is hard to answer.

Of course, hungry chicks should not be encouraged to gorge on sand before they are given food and drink. But to give some sand and gravel at the start, and every week throughout their stay on our farms, is sound practice. I cannot but believe it makes for healthier, more vigorous chicks that will live and grow better.—Wallace's Farmer.

Poultry Facts

An Australorp hen is said to have produced 343 eggs in 365 days under strict supervision of an official laying test.

When green feed is added as a supplement to the regular poultry ration, the birds grow better and lay more eggs. All the vitamins essential for growth and health can be made available if a variety of green feed is used.

A 5 per cent solution of carbolic acid is valuable in treating scaly leg, a common and unsightly ailment among fowls.

Feed the pullets wet mash at least once a day in addition to having dry mash in the feed hoppers when they start to lay.

When plenty of clean litter is kept on the floor of the laying house, it serves as a door mat for the hens to wipe their feet upon before getting in the nest.

A dozen of eggs weighing 26 ounces contains 30 per cent more food than a dozen weighing 20 ounces.

Pullets will be better developed at a given age and ready for egg production earlier when they are separated from the cockerels at an early age and grown separately.

It is imperative that droppings from the fowls should be regularly removed from the dropping boards and properly layered with dry soil to prevent the escape of ammonia.

ONLY ONE WAY OF BUILDING UP HERD

Retain Offspring of Proved Producers.

The careful selection of cattle to bring about better and better butterfat producers during each succeeding generation has had a startling effect, when the figures from the inauguration of the movement in 1906 to 1930 are compared. In 1906 the average butterfat produced in a year by an average cow was 215 pounds. In 1930 this figure had increased to 302 pounds, or nearly a 50 per cent increase.

This figure for butterfat doesn't mean butter itself, because the yield of butter is always greater than the weight of the butterfat. For instance, figuring from the butterfat test in 40 per cent cream the total weight of the butterfat is multiplied by 1.2 and the resultant figure is the yield of butter. In the case of whole milk, the factor used in estimating the yield is 1.18.

To use definite figures, 1,000 pounds of 40 per cent cream would represent, of course, 400 pounds of butterfat. This cream, when churned, would yield 480 pounds of butter.

The manner in which the butterfat yield is increased is to take offspring of known producers of large percentages of butterfat and build up herds from them. In each succeeding generation those which show a retrogression or halt in the progress toward better yield are discarded and only the better producers used for breeding purposes. Of course, most of the effort is centered on sires which are offspring of big butterfat producers.—Exchange.

Ration's Effect on the Nutritive Value of Milk

When the feed supplied a cow does not contain enough mineral matter to supply the milk she produces with the mineral constituents normally found therein, she draws upon her own bones to supply the amount lacking. Some investigators hold that the addition of inorganic minerals to the ration does not help the cow, because she is unable to assimilate minerals in that form. But she can assimilate minerals held in organic combination. This is one reason why legume hays, which contain a relatively high percentage of mineral matter, are so valuable.

For two years the Ohio experiment station has been feeding milk to rats from cows that were fed a ration very high in protein and from cows that were fed a ration very low in protein, with identically the same results. This was merely another way of testing the nutritive value of milk secreted by cows fed different rations with respect to their protein content. Calves fed on this same milk did equally well. In other words these tests, conducted with a view of studying the biological qualities of milk, again demonstrated that its composition is not altered by the nature of the feed the cow consumes.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

Gold Medal Winners

Recent winners of American Jersey Cattle club gold medal awards are E. M. Sherman, Charles City, Iowa, with 514 pounds of butterfat in 305 days; J. N. Martin, New Providence, Iowa, with Ayredale's Pure Gold's Nina, with 764 pounds of butterfat in a year; Sir Owl's Countess' Cactus, owned by W. H. Eddy, of Howard Lake, Minn., with 620 pounds of butterfat in 305 days; The Elms Oxford Lady, owned by Elmer E. Keyt, of Lakeview, Mich., with 610 pounds of butterfat in 305 days, and Fomasa 2nd's Beauty, owned by G. H. McKinstry, of Washington, Pa., with 623 pounds of butterfat in 305 days.—Successful Farming.

DAIRY NOTES

Other things being equal, the more clover or alfalfa a dairyman gives his cows, the less protein he needs to purchase for balancing his grain mixture.

After calves are six months of age they will make normal growth on grain and hay. Pasture of good quality, abundant in quantity, is enough for heifers nine months or more of age.

Dairy rations do not need to contain as much high-priced protein as was commonly thought a few years ago, in the light of recent experiments of E. S. Savage of Cornell university, New York.

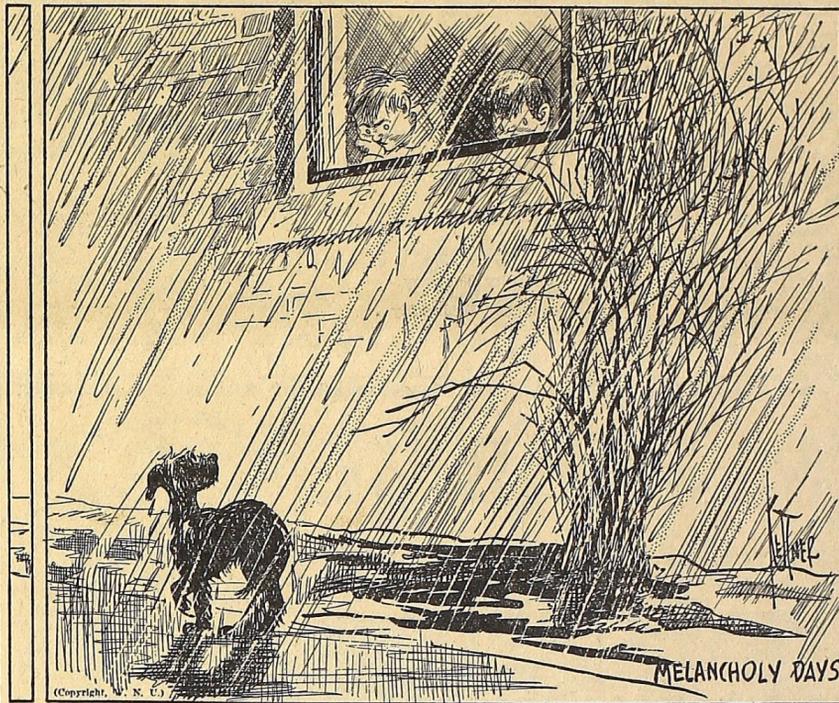

Legume hays and silage both produce the amount of grain required to produce milk and thus reduces feeding costs and increases profits.

Cows that go on pasture too early because of lack of available roughage are likely to be underfed throughout all the summer months.

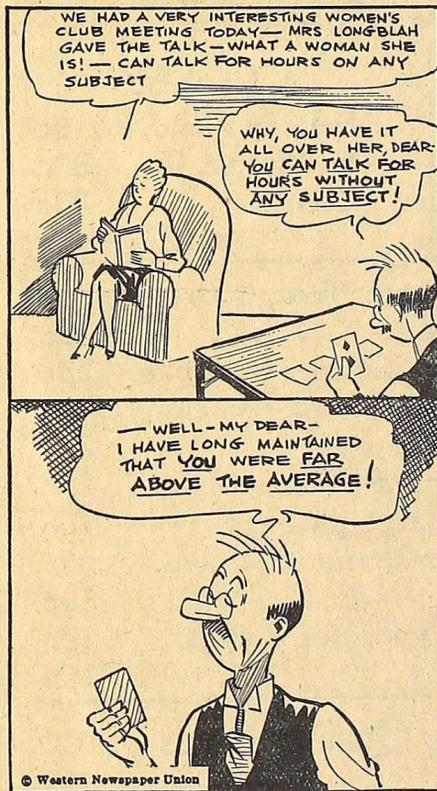

The better the feeder understands his cows, the characteristics of feeds and the general principles involved, the better able he will be to make the changes as the need arises.

STATE OF MICHIGAN
In the Circuit Court for the County of Iosco—In Chancery
No. 1276
Gustav Radtke, Plaintiff
vs.
Robert McMurray, Ernest Scholtz and Caroline Scholtz, or her unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, Defendants.

At a session of said court held in the Court House in the city of Tawas City, in said county, on the 14th day of November, A. D. 1932; Present: Honorable Nicholas C. Hartingh, Circuit Court Commissioner.

On reading and filing the Bill of Complaint in said cause and the affidavit of William J. Palmer attached thereto, from which it satisfactorily appears to the Court that the defendants above named or their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, are proper and necessary parties defendant in the above entitled cause, and it further appearing that after diligent search and inquiry it is unknown whether or not said defendant, Caroline Scholtz, is living or dead or where she may reside if living and if dead whether she has personal representatives or heirs living or where they or some of them may reside, and further that the present whereabouts of said defendant is unknown and that the names of the persons who are included therein without being named, but who are embraced therein under the title of unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, cannot be ascertained after diligent search and inquiry; on motion of William J. Palmer, attorney for the Plaintiff; IT IS ORDERED that said defendants and their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, cause their appearance to be entered in this cause within three months from the date of this order, and in default thereof that said Bill of Complaint be taken as confessed by the said defendants, their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that within twenty days plaintiff cause a copy of this order to be published in the Tawas Herald, a newspaper printed, published and circulated in said County, such publication to be continued therein once in each week for six weeks in succession.

Nicholas C. Hartingh,
Circuit Court Commissioner.
Countersigned:
Phyllis S. Schanbeck,
Clerk of Circuit Court.

The remains of Melvin Doan of Essexville were buried in the family lot in the Reno cemetery on Wednesday of last week. Mrs. Doan was a resident of Reno for a number of years, having spent her childhood here, and has many friends who sympathize with her in the loss of her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Robinson and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Robinson were called to Prescott Friday night by the sudden death of their sister, Mrs. Arthur White. Mrs. White had been in poor health for some time, but apparently was improving. The news of her death was a shock to her many friends here. The sincere sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved husband and relatives.

The community at large was shocked and grieved to learn of the sudden death Sunday evening of Mrs. Ernest Crego. She was in her usual health and the best of spirits, anticipating moving into their new home that had just been completed and where they had not been forward to comfort they had not been privileged to enjoy heretofore, when she suffered a heart attack which snapped the vital cord of life in less than two hours, leaving a heart-broken family to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother.

A number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Vary motored up from Detroit Sunday to order their Christmas turkeys.

Mrs. John White of Flint was an

TOMORROW CHEVROLET

PRESENTS A NEW SIX

Longer • Larger • Faster • Smoother • New in Styling • More Economical • And Featuring Fisher No-Draft Ventilation

TOMORROW will be Chevrolet Day throughout America. And the new car that millions have been watching and waiting for—the latest product of the world's leading builder of automobiles—will go on display: the New Chevrolet Six—at a new scale of low prices. Front, side, rear—inside, outside—everything about this new car is advanced, improved, exciting. Longer wheelbase makes it the biggest automobile in today's low-price field. The latest principle of car design, "Aer-Stream" styling, gives it a totally different, ultra-modern appearance. The new Fisher bodies are larger, wider—faultlessly streamlined—swung lower to the road—and offer the first basic improvement in travel comfort in over ten years: Fisher No-Draft Ventilation. Chevrolet performance in every gear is faster, flashier, more brilliant. The time-proved six-cylinder engine is more powerful as well as more economical. Improved Free Wheeling is combined with a "silent second" Syncro-Mesh gear-shift. Chevrolet engineers have developed a remarkable new invention that wins a complete victory over vibration: The Cushion-Balanced Engine Mounting. And as far as prices are concerned, several models now sell at the lowest figures in Chevrolet history. Chevrolet is able to do all this because Chevrolet has the advantage of being the world's largest builder of cars for 4 out of the past 6 years. Chevrolet builds cars in greater volume—buys materials in greater quantities—does everything on a bigger, more economical scale. Hence, Chevrolet is in a position to provide a better car at a better price than could possibly issue from any other source. The leader can accomplish what others dare not try!

FRANCE WILL TAKE CONTROL OF THE PRINCIPALITY OF MONACO

Republic Will Absorb Famed "Kingdom of Chance."

Washington.—Plans for the transfer to France of virtual control of the principality of Monaco, glittering "Kingdom of Chance," on the Riviera, are being discussed in their capitals, Paris and Monte Carlo. The proposed change would affect chiefly the tax situation. Monaco citizens, heretofore untaxed because contributions from the famous gaming casino were sufficient to meet the principality's needs, would pay the regular taxes of France.

"Eight square miles in area, and with more than two miles of coast line touching the bluest of seas, the principality of Monaco has been one of the most artificial of states," says a bulletin from the National Geographical Society. "Chance give it its riches. Chance has reversed its fortunes. Bigger gaming activities elsewhere and other amusements have robbed Monte Carlo not only of its profits but also of its lure. Moving picture palaces, open to all in scores of big cities, are now more ornate than the gilded rooms of Monte Carlo's famous casino. Amusements are varied.

"Long before the depression broke the bank which no player had conquered, Monaco had come to offer such a variety of amusements that 20 tennis courts, down between the mountains and the rock peninsula famous players stimulate an emulation which makes La Festa club a favorite rendezvous. Bathing is so lengthening the season that summer has many devotees. Into the Port of Hercules come the spotless yachts of many nations and, just outside, huge tourist steamers await the return of their guests before setting out once more on the path of the modern pilgrim of pleasure.

"Few visitors to Monte Carlo have known whether they were in the tiny principality or in France. France did nothing to emphasize the transition, and the law of competition triumphed over politics so far as the casual visitor was concerned. Monaco is today so full of tourist palaces, commercial hotels and pensions, that those who like the climate, the sports and the amusements of the place need not wait for the return of fortune to the gaming rooms she formerly favored.

Life Gay Under Any Flag.

"Monte Carlo is a beautiful, clean, peaceful resort. Even in the old days the streets were often quiet by nine. Once the theater and ballet or opera crowds had entered the garish portals of the combination casino and theater, Monte Carlo was quiet until the brief hustle of taxis at the close of the performance.

SUCCESS AND FAILURE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Late Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

Whoever generalizes upon the conduct of human beings will need to do so with great care and conservatism, for two people are seldom alike nor are they moved in similar directions by similar influences, and so he whose job it is to direct and manage a group of men and who announces that he impartially treats all his men alike is simply announcing in another way how little he knows about men and how very inefficient he is in his management.

Failure stimulates some men to greater effort; success in some others breeds still greater success. Scott and Lewis was each efficient and successful in his own way. Scott came away from a successful attempt with enthusiasm. He congratulated himself openly upon what he had done; he patted himself on the back; he glowed with pleasure as he recounted in detail the processes by which he had reached the conclusion of his efforts.

With Lewis it was quite different. Success made him thoughtful, more humble as it were, and keenly analytical of the processes which he had employed. When he accomplished anything well, he sat down calmly and reviewed the steps he had taken and the mistakes he had made.

He seemed to be most stimulated by dwelling not upon the cleverness of his previous efforts but upon the mistakes and blunders of which he had been guilty, and working out a system which would help him to avoid and correct these.

"I blundered pretty badly this time," he would admit to himself, "but you watch me in the future and you'll see

AIR PILOTS ARE TRAINED TO FLY BLINDFOLDED

Depend on Instruments and Directive Radio Beam.

Chicago.—A few miles to the west of the Chicago municipal airport an airplane appeared in the sky, the drone of its engine steadily increasing as it flew directly toward the field along the airway leading into the Windy City from the Pacific coast.

As the plane soared by the airport, a field attendant on top a hangar spoke into a radiophone: "Murray, you passed two hundred yards south of the field. Circle around." "O. K.," replied the pilot, who could see neither sky nor ground. The plane circled and once more headed for the airport. "You're coming straight toward the field now," the radio man advised, and in a moment the "blindfolded" pilot had guided the plane over the center of the airport.

Pilot John Murray of United Air Lines had flown the plane from Iowa City to Chicago without seeing anything except the instruments in front of him, for the cockpit was effectually covered by a hood. In another cockpit without a hood rode Ralph Johnson, also a United pilot, but he didn't touch the controls during the entire flight.

All pilots are now trained in instrument flying and the latest inventions for air navigation have been installed on company planes. The air transport company has recently been making use of its radio telephone communication between planes and the ground to lead the "blindfolded" pilots directly to airports.

With the aid of his instruments and the directive radio beam, the latter a series of code signals identifying the course of the airway, Murray was able to fly from Iowa City to Chicago without deviating from his course. When he arrived at Chicago, the airport radio operator was able to lead him directly over the airport.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Mary Jemison

A WHITE woman, stolen from the feast celebrating her coming marriage to a white man only to become the willing bride of an Indian brave: that was Mary Jemison, the "White Squaw of the Genesee," one of the strangest and most romantic of all American heroines. Some have it that she actually did return to her own people late in life, but the fact that she died on the Buffalo Creek Indian reservation disputes that; others maintain she refused to return because her people would not accept also her half-breed son; many claim she became reconciled to her red captors and their mode of life and preferred it. Certainly in the sturdy figure clad in fringed Indian garments, wearing her hair in two long braids and carrying her baby papoose-fashion on her back that the sculptor has prepared for her memorial in Letchworth park, on the Genesee river in New York, there is freedom, confidence, even peace.

It was in 1758, during the French and Indian war, and when Mary was seventeen, that the Senecas swooped down upon her pioneer home at March creek, in Buchanan valley, Pennsylvania, massacring all the family and carrying the girl off with them. At Fort Duquesne her captors turned her over to two old squaws, who took her with them to Ohio. Here, as Dehgan-nus, "all things good," she began her life as an Indian, and here two years later she wedded Shenjnee, warrior of the Delawares, and later bore to him her son, Thomas Jemison.

The next spring, her son strapped to her back, this white girl set out with her husband, and two Indian brothers to sell furs at Fort Pitt. From there the brothers and Mary journeyed on to the Genesee, five hundred miles beyond over harsh wilderness trails, leaving Shenjnee behind to join them the next spring. Mary reached the Genesee, but she never saw her young husband again, Indian trappers brought her news of his death.

When the baby she had carried with her from the Ohio was four, Mary married again, Hiokattoo, known as a "bad" chief, but apparently a kind husband. By him she had six children whose sole claim to the attention of the historian it seems was in examples of inherited "badness." Hiokattoo died "of consumption" at one hundred and three. In 1797, at a Big Tree Council of the Six Nations, Mary was given deed to a tract of 17,000 acres, included now in Letchworth park. In 1825 the Senecas sold their holdings in this region to the whites, but Mary retained her property and lived on, surrounded by her children and grandchildren, an alien among her own people. A few years before her death, in 1833, she moved to the reservation, returning at the last to sanctuary among her adopted people.

Old Superstitions Died

With Use of Telescope

The uses of astronomy began about 4,000 years B. C., when the beginning of the new year, practically coincident with the inundation of the Nile, was fixed by observation of the heliacal rising of the giant star Sirius.

Egyptian instruments were adopted unchanged by the Arabs, Hindus and Chinese, but were improved by the Greeks. Only 2,000 or 3,000 stars are visible to the naked eye, and Ptolemy, with his simple instruments, listed only 1,022 of them.

Twelve centuries passed before the monk Copernicus in 1543 reaffirmed the correct planetary motion. Kepler removed the last doubt by showing that the planets moved in ellipses instead of in circles. But all these ancient astronomers worked only through the human eye and its tiny lens. Then came Galileo, who supplied the visual demonstration hitherto lacking, with his invention of the telescope in 1610, a slender tube 4 feet long, with a concave mirror 2 1/2 inches in diameter, which collected 80 times as much light as the human eye, and with it suddenly pushed out the boundaries of the known stellar universe, brought 500,000 stars into range, and shifted the sun from its traditional position as a satellite of the earth to its rightful place.

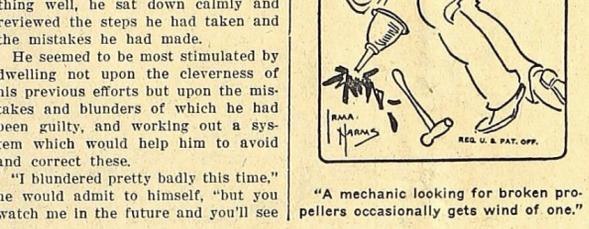

With this primitive instrument Galileo revolutionized human thought, established the Copernican theory for all time, marked the downfall of medieval superstition, and placed astronomy, the oldest science, on an unshaken foundation forever.

Baby of Congress

Joseph P. Monaghan of Butte, Mont., will have the distinction of being the youngest member of the next congress. He is only twenty-six years old, a Democrat, and an attorney. Once before Monaghan was a candidate for congress and was defeated, but this time he beat his Republican opponent by more than 15,000 votes.

"Monaco still has its devotees, many of whom will be glad to linger on in a beauty spot where man helped nature to an unnatural charm, even if they have to pay taxes. If France should swallow up the principality it would mean that big nation will underwrite the finances of the tiniest of states. The invisible, and usually ignored boundary will slide down from Beausoleil to include Monte Carlo and the Condamine. It has even been suggested that the high rock of Monaco, old Phocaean fortress, may be brought under a military tricolor.

"But these would be minor changes, of which the average visitor would remain ignorant. If the sun continues to brighten the world-famous terraces, if white-bodied yachts once more anchor in the Port of Hercules, if the tennis champions of the world meet on the courts of La Festa club, if warm beaches attract their share of bathing beauties, if shiny motor cars come to halt between casino, and restaurant to win their beauty prizes, the principality of Monaco will continue its gay, artificial life of leisure and beauty."

Dog Deserts Happy Home for Life in City Pound

Evanston, Ill.—When a dog runs away from a happy home and applies for re-admittance to the city dog pound, it must prove something. William Erlanson, dog catcher, believes.

"It shows," he said, "that I treat them better than their owners."

To substantiate his statement he pointed to the case of Buttercup, a dog that returned to the pound the day after its owner had taken it home.

Household Questions

A worn whisk broom trimmed down to its stiffest part makes a very good scrubbing brush for the sink.

Tinware will not rust if it is rubbed with fresh lard when it is new, and placed in a hot oven for an hour.

Bread dried crisp in oven is easily crushed when put in muslin bag and rolled with rolling pin, no crumbs litter the table or floor.

White sauce or cream sauce is the foundation for so many delicious, quickly prepared dishes every one should learn its secrets.

All ingredients used in making pastry should be cold. The colder the pastry is when put into the oven, the flakier it will be when cooked.

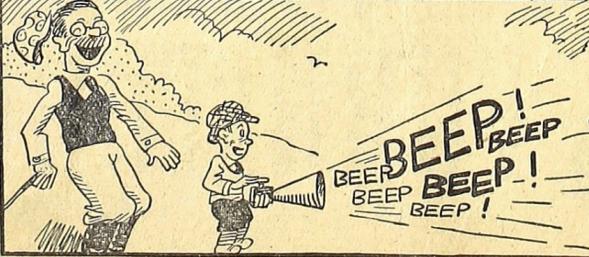

To renovate a soiled couch hammock try painting it any desired color. The canvas will take the paint very well. Two coats are generally needed.

Potatoes bake more quickly if placed on the broiler instead of the floor of the gas oven and the flavor will be much improved by quick baking.

Elizabeth Porter

A TALL spire in the Union cemetery, Kansas City, boasts that city's romantic link with the distant alarums of the Revolutionary war, fought on the remote eastern rim of the continent while Kansas City was a still unknown spot in the vast wilderness west of the Mississippi.

The country was new when Samuel Porter with his young bride Elizabeth immigrated from Ireland to make their home in Richmond, Va. Tennessee was still unexplored wilderness filled with dangers, beckoning to ambitious young people desirous of securing land of their own. So, presently, we find the Porters with their retinue of slaves migrating again, and setting up a home near Franklin, Tenn.

There was a war going on, they knew, but the rich, newly cleared lands of their homestead were at that time "farthest west" and many miles of wilderness and irregular communication made Bunker Hill and Brandywine seem safely remote. But the long arm of the British through their hired Indian allies reached even that far. And one day, when the men folks were far away in the forests, a whooping band of red warriors descended upon the little settlement at Franklin, took prisoner all the women, including Mrs. Porter, and set off with them through the wilderness.

Through endless miles of forest they marched the small band. The hardships of the journey were extreme, and it lasted for months. There were rivers to ford, dreary nights of discomfort in improvised camping grounds, and the constant menace of their silent but watchful red captors. Just why these women were not killed at the beginning and scalped according to the Indian custom, we do not know, though it has been suggested there were British officers along who prevented that.

At length the party reached Fort Niagara, a British stronghold in Canada, and there remained through the long winter. Not until the next spring were they returned to the Colonists and their homes.

Mrs. Porter's third migration was in 1829, when, a widow, she came to Kansas with her son, the Reverend James Porter, a circuit rider.

Beware the Cough or Cold that Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

SYNOPSIS

Owen Landis, young inventor, has developed an extraordinary "silencer" which is stolen from a safe in his laboratory. Landis tells Wally Markham, his chum, the only person, beside himself, knowing the combination of the safe, is Betty Lawson, with whom the inventor is in love. Markham takes a plaster cast of a woman's foot, and the combination of the safe, is Betty Lawson, with whom the inventor is in love. ## CHAPTER V—Continued

"All right; we'll cross that off. Next comes this shifty bit of business in Chillicothe yesterday; selling one car and buying another; and the split and pick-up at the town where the last bank was touched off. And, back of that there's the fact that we trailed them out of two other towns where smashes occurred. Rather too many coincidences, don't you think? We may have been chasing the wrong bunch; I'll admit it looks that way now. But the fact remains that we've been right on the heels of some bunch that has been raising Cain with these country-town banks, and doing it with the help of something that blots out noise. And the last of these car-raising is only a few miles—and hours—behind us right now."

"Well, where does that leave us?" "Pretty well up in the air, I'll have to admit. We've been concentrating so pointedly upon these three Louisville chaps that we haven't been able to see the wood for the trees."

A few minutes later, when they were settling their bill, the clerk said, "You were inquiring about these three Louisville gentlemen who left this morning. Are they friends of yours?"

"Not exactly friends," Markham evaded. "But we are slightly acquainted in Louisville."

"I see," said the clerk. "You may overtake 'em yet. Somewhere east of this their car gave out, and two of 'em decided to quit and take to the railroad. But the other was game; sold the disabled machine, bought another, and wired the train-takers to stop off and let him pick 'em up—which they did."

"That's that," said Landis, as they turned away.

"One little flaw in that story," Markham criticized. "It was the two train-takers who sold the disabled auto; not the one who bought the new one."

"I noticed that; but I guess it merely means that the clerk didn't get the story quite straight."

They found chairs in a quiet corner of the lobby. After a thoughtful interval, Landis said, "I'm on the fence again, Wally. What you said—that we've been right on the heels of these mysterious burglars—is the one fact that can't be ignored. But I don't want to drag you into it any further. Suppose you turn me loose and go on back home. It's like this; these bank-blasters, whoever they are, have my black box. I'm confident of it. The chances are they'll keep on going west. I can't quit while there is a chance of catching up with them; that's my responsibility. If you go home, I'll take the railroad and go on."

"Hub"—disgustedly. "Think I'd let you do that? Not much! We'll stick it out together, and, that being the case, we may as well get the car." The garage was at the rear of the hotel, and as they were turning the corner, Markham saw a handsome limousine pull up at the hotel entrance. Markham caught a fleeting glimpse of the driver.

"You go on, Owen," he said, "and let me go back and get some cigars. I forgot."

Landis walked on slowly, and in a few minutes Markham reappeared, saying, "You can't guess what I went back for? Did you see the car that came up as we came out?"

"I see," said the Clerk. "You May Overtake 'Em Yet—" seat and a third at the wheel. Far in the rear were a Nordyke limousine and a blue roadster. And though the two men in the blue car thought they were following the Nordyke, this order was reversed; it was the limousine that was following the roadster.

CHAPTER VI

Without Warning

Evening found the blue roadster at Marysville, Kan., where a stop was made for dinner. Inquiry along the way had proved that the Fleetwing was still on ahead; but of the limousine they had heard nothing.

Confident, however, that theirs was the rearmost of the three cars, they covered another hundred miles before stopping for the night in a small town. Since there was no public garage, they put the roadster under a shed in the tavern yard, where the innkeeper assured them it would be safe, and went to bed.

The next morning, at breakfast, the innkeeper burst in upon them to ask if they had locked the car before leaving it.

"I didn't," said Markham promptly. "Why?"

"'Cause it's gone, slick and clean! Whadda you know about that? My land! Nothin' like that's ever happened here before. You go on and finish eatin' an' I'll get to work on the phone."

"Which means?" Landis queried, after the landlord had gone.

"It may mean nothing more than an ordinary car theft."

Landis shook his head. "I'm afraid not. I'm thinking it means that somebody wants to leave us stranded."

"The three men in the Fleetwing?" "Hardly, you'd say. Apart from the fact that they've been identified as respectable citizens, unless everybody has been lying to us, they are hours ahead of us—and have been ever since we left St. Joseph. Canby is the man we haven't been able to locate."

"Oh, no, not Canby. You are forgetting that he has Betty and her father with him."

"I know. But, in spite of that, he is keeping tab on us, or trying to. Otherwise he wouldn't have asked about us in the St. Joseph hotel. That looks as if he might have been following us, doesn't it?"

"Why should he follow us?" "Landis shrugged. "I'm no mind-reader. There are times when I wish I were—and this is one of them."

Since the perturbed tavern keeper was likely to do everything possible to trace the car stolen from his premises, they took their time over breakfast. Then Markham told him he would pay a liberal reward for information; after which they went to sit on the tavern porch and smoke and wait for results.

"Not that there are likely to be any results," Markham offered. "I've a hunch that we've lost the roadster for good and all."

"Then we are ditched—out of the fight?"

"Not by a d-d sight!" was the snappy denial. "We are going to see this thing through now if it takes all summer! If we don't hear from the lost car soon, we'll take a train and ride it until we reach some place where I can buy another."

"But see here, Wally—I can't let you do anything like that! As it stands, I'm owing you the price of a car right now."

"Nothing of the sort. You may be calling this jaunt your funeral, but if it is, I'm driving the hearse and we don't stop short of the cemetery gate, at least. Here comes a boy, maybe he has turned the trick for us."

The boy came running up to the porch, fairly bursting with his news. "I've f-found your car!" he stammered. "It's in a gully on our farm! C-constable telephoned, and dad said, right away, 'at he thought he heard somethin' go 'squosh' in the night. It's in a deep place where it tumbled off the road."

"Good boy," said Markham. "The reward is yours. How far is it?" "It ain't far. C'me on and I'll show you."

A short half mile from town, by the side of a little-used country road, they found the blue roadster. They did not go down into the gully into which it had fallen. From where they stood they could see that it was a wreck.

"A clean job," Markham grunted morosely.

"What do you think?" Landis asked, when they had walked a full half mile in silence.

"Deliberate, of course. The tire tracks in the road showed plainly enough that the car had been stopped, backed and turned quarter way around to head it for the ditch."

"But who did it?" "I'd be willing to pay another reward to find that out. There's something doing, either ahead of us or behind us; something we're not to be allowed to mess in, if a wrecked car will stop us—which it won't."

Markham arranged to have the car salvaged and held subject to his order, and when the westbound train came along they boarded it. Markham consulted a time-card folder and passed the towns ahead in review.

"Colby, at two-fifty this afternoon," he said. "It's a junction point, and if we can't find what we want, we can get a train from there to Denver. Colby's our drop-off."

Accordingly they debarked at Colby, where Markham found he was able to replace the wrecked roadster with a later model of the same make. Starting without loss of time, they reached Limon, the point at which the two main auto roads, coincident west of Colby, split—one leading southwest to Colorado Springs, and the other northwest to Denver.

At the few stops they had made west of Colby they got no news of the Fleetwing or of Canby's car. But at Limon the lost train reappeared. The Fleetwing had passed through some six hours earlier on the way to Denver; and Canby's limousine had taken the same route three or four hours later.

Markham looked at his watch. "Both parties are probably stopping over night in Denver. If we push along we can be there by midnight. What do you say?"

"I'm with you. I can spell you at the wheel when you are tired."

It was well past midnight when the lights of Denver came in sight. Reaching the city, Markham turned in at the first all-night garage he came to, and they forthrightly, stiff, tired and dusty, to put up at the nearest hotel, and turned in at once.

The attempt to trace three newcomers—or at most six—in a city the size of Denver is much like looking for a needle in a haystack; and though they went short on sleep and were up early the next morning, eight o'clock found them still driving from one hotel to another, drawing blanks and losing time.

"There is simply no end to this, Wally," Landis protested. "We might keep on all day in a city with as many hotels as there are here. Our best chance is the open road. We know where Canby is headed for. If we trail him, maybe we'll find the Fleetwing in the same gallery."

"You didn't beat me to it by more than half a minute," Markham returned, spreading the well-used road map on his knees. "Here's the nearest cut to the Timonyoni," he pointed out. "We'll get the grips and try our luck in the open, as you say."

For a short run over the highway the trail refused to reveal itself. But later they came to a filling station whose keeper told them he had helped change an inner tube on a Fleetwing Eight between six and seven o'clock that morning. He said there were three men in the car, and he also recalled that the one he had helped with the tire had said they were from Louisville.

Questioned, he said he had no recollection of seeing a Nordyke limousine, but that it might easily have gone by without his noticing it.

Markham glanced at the clock on the dash as he flung the new roadster in the mountain grades.

"Three hours ahead of us; we're gaining on them, in spite of the Denver delay. Where do you suppose this chase is going to wind up, Owen?"

"I'm not so much concerned about the 'where' as the 'how.' I may as well confess that I'm on the fence again. There haven't been any bank blastings this side of the Missouri river."

NOTORIOUS SPY IS NOW TIBETAN MONK

No More Adventures for Trebitsch-Lincoln.

Berlin. — Ignaz Trebitsch-Lincoln, Europe's most colorful adventurer, hated and elusive spy during the World war, one time member of the English house of commons, rabbi, Bishop of the Church of England, press chief of the Kapp Putsch in Germany, intimate associate of Trotsky in Russia, adviser of Amanullah, found wherever a revolution is brewing, today is walking the streets of Berlin dressed in the long, peaceful robe of a Tibetan lama of Suddah.

Every newspaper man on four continents, every detective, in dozens of cities has at one time or other been either inspired or fooled or amused by Trebitsch-Lincoln. Dyed in the wool news gatherers tell wild into an airplane, and dropped miles out on No Man's Land. He was heard of next in Petrograd.

When the Kapp Putsch was brewing Trebitsch was in China, a country that has always appealed to him because of its transcendental mysticism. But he managed to get back to Germany and put his services at disposal of "Chancellor" Kapp.

During the war he served more than one nation, his enemies declare. Recently the colorful character had disappeared. Nobody knew what had become of him. In reality he was in Tibet, was actually made a priest by the nation that is most reluctant to make friends—the Tibetans.

And suddenly he is again in Berlin, to the utter and whole-hearted delight of all lovers of adventure. He wears the little black round cap of the Tibet priests, his black silk coat

Opening the New Highway in Rome

General view of the ceremonies which marked the opening of the broad highway cut by Mussolini's government across the stones of ancient Rome. The new road, which links the Colosseum and the Piazza Venezia, was opened on the tenth anniversary of the march on Rome of Mussolini's legions.

stories about him. For Trebitsch-Lincoln at one time devoted himself to adventure with the air of a fanatic, a man out for revenge on a civilization that killed his son as a spy, although he hastened from thousands of miles away to save him.

There is hardly a nation that he has not served and there is no country he has not visited. He has tangled with Colonel Lawrence of Arabian fame. He has been hunted like a dog by leading politicians. He has escaped the noose, the bullets of a firing squad, and the guillotine by inches.

Berlin correspondents met Trebitsch when he was press chief of the "Kapp" government, when this ruled Prussia for a few days. They fought with him about freedom of the press. Later when the adventurer was being sought by the police, a correspondent refused to reveal Trebitsch's whereabouts and thus helped him escape. It was a rather tense moment when a bearded man stepped into the newspaper office just a few minutes after a detective had called looking for Trebitsch, and the man said: "Don't you recognize me? I'm Trebitsch." Ten minutes later another detective marched in. "We know you know where Trebitsch-Lincoln is. We'll pay a high price if you'll speak." But the newspaper force did not speak and Trebitsch-Lincoln was not heard of in Germany for years.

There is the story of his stumbling into a German camp on the bleak plains of Lithuania, during the war. He was arrested and would have been shot, had not the German general peeped into the bottle a bit that night, and been feeling too gay for a court martial. Trebitsch was bundled comes up high under his chin, his feet are clad in sandals. He is recognized by all those in the political and social swim. And he is not loathe to be recognized. But he will not shake hands. His high dignity as a priest of Buddha forbids him to touch ordinary human beings.

He is not here to devote himself to political intrigue, or to mere financial undertakings. It is his present ambition, his only ambition, according to his own words, to build in southern Germany a Buddhist temple and a monastery for devotees. He does not yet have the devotees. But he is certain that there are many who will prefer the peace and mental harmony of the Buddhist faith to the turmoil of present-day life. He admits he has no money, but he is certain faith will move some one to endow the organization he is planning.

$500,000,000 REDUCTION IN TAXES

Retrenchment Is Forced by Municipal Drives.

Washington.—As the result of drives in larger cities and political subdivisions throughout the country on state and local taxes, the bill has been reduced more than $500,000,000 annually from the high point, it was disclosed by a special committee report of the United States Chamber of Commerce embracing a nation-wide survey.

If the lesser governmental units which have made little or no retrenchment follow the same course, the report indicated, another saving of $500,000,000 can be effected without impairment of efficiency, while if all the states were brought back to the 1926 level the cut would be $2,000,000,000. The committee estimated that two-thirds of government costs result from state and local taxation.

Specific steps to accomplish this purpose were recommended by the committee, headed by Junius P. Fishburn, president of the Times-World corporation, Roanoke, Va., and will be brought to the attention of business organizations throughout the country.

"Definite and substantial progress in the reduction of the routine expenditures of state and local governments," the report said, "comes from every section of the country. In many places where actual reductions have not yet been made, definite economy measures are pending."

"The steady increase in the intensity of the public demand that taxes be reduced is significant. Much of this demand, however, and much of the activity of new agencies advocating tax reduction, are directed at the large expenditures of the Federal government. This may tend to obscure the

Turks Are Ordered to Acquire Names

Istanbul, Turkey.—Millions of Turks are racking their brains to choose family names for themselves while the minister of interior prepared a law to enforce this latest western reform. Any names may be chosen as long as they are consistent with Turkish customs.

Heretofore family names have been nonexistent in Turkey, thousands of women being simply "Fatimas" and thousands of men "Mustaphas" or "Husseins." Sometimes men have added names indicating they are the sons of a six-fingered man or a fishmonger—just for distinction.

Recently the colorful character had disappeared. Nobody knew what had become of him. In reality he was in Tibet, was actually made a priest by the nation that is most reluctant to make friends—the Tibetans.

And suddenly he is again in Berlin, to the utter and whole-hearted delight of all lovers of adventure. He wears the little black round cap of the Tibet priests, his black silk coat

300,000 Canadians Quit U. S. for Native Land

Montreal.—More than 300,000 Canadians who went to the United States in search of better conditions, have returned to the dominion in the last eight years, it was learned at the Immigration department. Of these, 262,550 were Canadian-born and about 24,000 were British subjects with Canadian domicile. The peak of the movement back to Canada was reached in the fiscal year ended March 31, 1927, and, curiously, the smallest number of Canadians have come home since the depression set in.

Information received by the Department of Immigration shows that the number of Canadian-born persons in the United States last counted is 1,278,421, an increase of only 153,496 in ten years. Of these, 370,852 are French-Canadians and 907,569 are Canadians of British, German and other racial origin.

The foreign born population of the United States was given as 13,366,407, an increase of only 111,013 in ten years. There was a decrease in the English, Welsh and Irish people in the United States, but an increase of 39 per cent in the number of Scots. The report also shows there were in the republic 735,307 persons whose father or both parents were French-Canadians and 1,323,617 whose father or both parents were of other races born in Canada.

Rat's Gnawing Causes Police to Investigate

Visalia, Calif.—A sleepy telephone operator sat before his switchboard at 3 a. m. Suddenly the lights began to flash in an alarming manner. She plugged in the police station and screamed for help.

Officer Paul Finley buckled on his revolver and set out to find the cause of the trouble. He thought it must be caused by a bank robbery at least. Back in the exchange, the lights ceased to act queerly. The operator called the police station. "What was it?" she asked.

"O, rats," said Officer Finley, who had just returned.

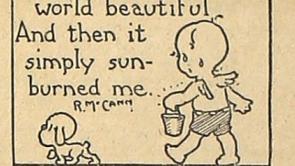

And that's what it was. The officer found a rat gnawing on the telephone wire in a downtown store.

Motorists Spend Two Billion on Vacations

Washington.—American motorists paid a bill of $2,000,000,000 for vacations with automobiles, according to figures compiled by the American Automobile association. The expenses consisted of car operating costs, including gasoline and oil, $400,000,000; miscellaneous retail purchases, $500,000,000; restaurants, $420,000,000; amusements, $120,000,000.

British Build Sea Wall to End Ocean's Ravages

Not since the Romans built their great fortification from the Tyne to Solway firth has such a wall been built in Britain as one under construction today.

The new wall has a very different purpose from the ancient one. It is a defense not against human foes, but against the sea. All along the east coast the sea is continually disturbing the contour of the land. Kings Lynn was at one time one of the busy ports of the country, and it has fallen from its high place because the sea has blocked the River Ouse with millions of tons of sand and has threatened to overflow its banks and transform the country into a marsh land. To remedy this, already much engineering work has been done, and a wall is being constructed to carry the river four miles out to sea.

Wednesday, December 21, the combined glee clubs will carol in various places throughout Tawas City between the hours of seven and nine p. m. They were very enthusiastic in their cooperation, and they hope to help spread the Christmas spirit to homes where there is illness, as invalidism. Should anyone care to have the carolers come to his home, please notify the school, a member of the glee club, or Miss Gulliford. Those wishing to hear the carolers may designate by a lighted porch or candle-light in the windows. The glee clubs are planning and hoping to make this a real success.

The various Christmas projects for gift purposes have been carried out with special stress on color-harmony. All of the work consists of the employ of entirely new art materials, such as the use of lacquer, shellac, crayon, show-card colors, and cut-paper work.

The high school Art class have some lovely examples of hot-pads, book-ends, letter-holders, and wastebasket holders for the Christmas project work. However, only show-card colors have been used.

Seventh and Eighth Grades
