IOSCO ROAD MEN ATTEND LANSING MEET

W. J. Grant and Ernest Crego, commissioners, and J. N. Sloan, engineer, have just returned from a meeting of road commissioners and engineers held at the Olds Hotel in Lansing on January 16 to discuss proposed legislation and other matters of interest to those engaged in highway work.

Governor Comstock gave an address in which he stated that he favored a moratorium on any extensive road building for the next two years but added that he was strong for no changes in the present road laws. He stated that already the immense reduction of 86% had been accomplished in highway taxes for road purposes and some time was needed to determine the good and bad points of the present Holbeck-McNitt law before more changes were made.

There was considerable discussion of the proposed reduction of the license plate or weight tax to one dollar and instead to raise the gas tax another cent. It was pointed out at this meeting that if the present weight tax, which was passed in lieu of a personal property tax, were repealed, the automobile will then be subject to a personal property tax that generally will amount to more than the present weight tax and in some cases several times as much. The present weight tax is not as high as a personal property tax would be, in fact, with the exception of very old and worn-out cars the tax is a very reasonable one on personal property. The proposed reduction of the license plate tax to one dollar would be one way of making it possible to increase our taxes now limited by the 15-mill amendment. Thus we might have the increased gas tax and a personal property tax on automobiles, the latter alone amounting to more than the present weight tax.

State highway officials advised that they expect to be able to start work soon under the R. F. C. loan applied for, of which approximately $40,000 was allotted to this county. The upper peninsula loan has been approved and work already started. Approval of the upper part of the lower peninsula loan, which includes Iosco county, is expected soon.

MICHIGAN SCHOOLS ARE CONFRONTED WITH GRAVE CRISIS

Governor Comstock's first message to the state legislature contained the following statement: "Due to the adoption of the fifteen mill constitutional limitation, our Primary School System is threatened with disruption. This system which has been the pride of our state and the model for educational institutions the world over must be maintained." Governor Comstock referred to the amendment which was voted into the Michigan constitution by the people last November.

The Michigan Education Association has completed two months of study and research in regard to the future effect of the above tax limitation upon the schools of Michigan. The Association states: "Half-day sessions and curtailment of all public school service by one-half or even more, in many Michigan cities and smaller districts, are inevitable for the incoming school year under the present tax limitation on real property. Michigan will have many closed public schools next year unless a source of revenue other than the property tax is provided for maintaining a reasonable program of public education."

From the local standpoint, the present tax rate, per thousand dollars of valuation, for each political division in Tawas City is approximately as follows: State, $2.81; county, $4.86; city, $22.37; school, $16.15. This makes a total tax of about forty-six dollars per thousand of valuation. The amendment provides that taxes levied for debt service, if the debt is incurred previously to the passage of the law, is not affected by the limitation amendment. This leaves a balance for operative service in our city of approximately forty dollars per thousand of valuation. As the total amount of taxes for operative purposes assessed against property in any one year shall not exceed fifteen dollars for the above valuation, the total amount of income derived from property tax next year to operate all departments of the government in our city must necessarily be not more than about thirty-eight per cent of the amount levied this year. While it is not yet known what portion of the fifteen dollars each department of the government will receive, it should be noted that the total amount of tax possible to be levied upon property, at the present valuation, in the city next year is somewhat less than either the city or the school tax this year.

By order of the City Council, I have been instructed to extend the time on tax collections without the 4% penalty until February 10, 1933. Get busy.

Chas. Duffey, City Treasurer.

School Notes

High School

The annual convention of the Michigan Education Association for this district will be held next year in Flint, October 20 and 21. These dates are on Friday and Saturday, respectively, thus taking but one school day rather than two. This is an attempt of the Association to conserve the time for the children, as it is possible that many schools will find it necessary to run on part-time during the ensuing year because of the 15 mill real property tax limitation.

Semester examinations are being held this week in all grades above the fourth. The results of these examinations as well as the final mark in each subject for the semester, will appear upon the report cards when issued next Wednesday.

Walter F. Gries, as member of Michigan's State Prison Commission, speaks as follows: "We are still spending much more for investigation and punishment of crime than we are for education, and yet education is the strongest crime deterrent known to modern society."

BIGELOW—BOUDLER

A very quiet wedding took place last Saturday, January 21, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Bigelow when their daughter, Dorothy Jean, and Reginald Boudler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boudler, were united in marriage. Rev. Frank Metcalf performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a gold color crepe dress with accessories to match and wore a corsage of sweet peas and rose buds. Pearl St. Martin, the bridesmaid, wore a pale green crepe dress with accessories to match, and also wore a corsage of sweet peas. Arthur Bigelow attended the groom. Only the immediate family were present. The wedding supper was served at the Lakeside Tavern.

The young couple will make their home in Glennie, where Mr. Boudler teaches school. They many friends wish them happiness and success.

SIMS—BARNES

SOLOMON SHELLENBARGER

Solomon Shellenbarger died Tuesday, January 10, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mary E. Staley, of Hale.

The deceased was born near Columbus, Ohio, November 6, 1844. His parents moved to Iowa, where he lived until he was 18 years of age. They then came to Michigan, where he spent the remainder of his life in different parts of the state.

He also leaves one daughter, Mrs. Irvin Bisslow of Homer, Michigan; 14 grandchildren, 16 great grandchildren, one great great grandchild and numerous other relatives.

FOUR BIG LOVE AFFAIRS IN 'THE MATCH KING'

Four beautiful actresses are cast as the victims of a financial genius in First National's most remarkable romance, "The Match King," which shows at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, January 28, 29, 30. They are Lili Damita, Glenda Farrell, Juliette Compton and Claire Dodd.

They are all held in mesmeric fascination by the personal charm and magnetism of a colossal schemer, a part played by Warren William, and are eventually sacrificed to his ambition.

This remarkable story is taken from the novel by Einar Thorvaldson. The story is so astounding that it outdoes the wildest fiction and would not be credited if the blazing newspaper headlines that had suggested the story hadn't already established the authenticity of the details.

Warren William's role is that of a man absolutely unscrupulous and ruthless with women. He makes love first himself and then, by some strange hypnotic power, forces them to entangle men of political power for his own ends and to their ruin.

EAST TAWAS STORE

Fire which partially destroyed the Barkman building at East Tawas and menaced the business district Tuesday morning was extinguished after a three hour battle by East Tawas firemen. The fire caused a large amount of damage by water and breakage to the Carter Miller glass variety store which was located in the building.

The blaze started shortly after the Miller store opened in the morning. The alarm was immediately turned in, but the fire gained headway so rapidly that the fire-fighters were unable to check it for three hours.

The firemen were assisted in their efforts to save adjoining property by the lack of wind. Extent of the damage to the building could not be estimated but was partly covered by insurance. The stock and fixtures in Miller's store were not insured.

The evening program will be held at the M. E. church and both Mr. Coggan and Dr. Musser will be speakers.

EAST TAWAS MERCHANTS DOWN HARRISVILLE QUINT

"Kiki" Cuyler and his Harrisville Independent basketball team suffered a 30-23 set-back at the hands of the East Tawas Merchants in the feature attraction at the Community Building on Wednesday night of this week.

During the first two quarters the lead changed hands a number of times and the half-way mark found the Merchants on the long end of a 17-13 count. Although the Harrisville boys threatened to overcome them in several instances, the Merchants managed to keep a fairly safe margin during the remainder of the contest. Feature honors of the game went to Siglin, while DeLong played an important part in the Merchants' line-up during the second half. Cuyler's pass work made him the outstanding star of the Harrisville quintet.

The East Tawas Independent girls defeated the Oscoda Independent girls in a hard-fought preliminary, 16 to 10.

TOURNAMENT ENTRIES CLOSE MONDAY NIGHT

Seventy-two bridge players attended the third evening of the Tawas Auction Bridge tournament last Monday. Other new entries are expected next Monday which will be the last evening on which players may enter and be able to play the nine evenings required in order to be eligible for the championship title and other prizes.

Next Monday's play will be held at the City Hall in Tawas City. Entrants are requested to arrive promptly at 8:15 Eastern Time and be ready to begin play at 8:30. In the event that there is an odd number of couples present, the last couple to pay their fee will not play, their fee for the evening will be refunded, they will be given credit for one evening's attendance, and they will be given a standing of two rubbers won and two lost for the evening which if they actually play nine evenings they will have the option of either including or not including in computing their final percentage standing. Payment of the fee for both players will not qualify the partnership for play unless both players are in the hall.

The percentage standings of the leaders to date are as follows:

EAST TAWAS HIGH CAGERS DEFEAT STANDISH

East Tawas high school basketball teams gained a three-game victory over Standish last Friday evening at the Community Building. A large crowd of fans was present to see the two schools, long rivals, give battle.

The first contest of the evening saw the East Tawas Seconds, after trailing during the first half of the game, come from behind to down the Standish Seconds by a 15 to 7 score.

In the second game, the East Tawas girls romped off to a large lead early in the affray and had a comfortable margin in their favor at the end of the first half. The Standish girls did not give up without a fight, however, but staged a big rally in the second half and came very near overtaking their opponents. The final score was: East Tawas, 19; Standish, 16.

The East Tawas varsity boys' team had little difficulty in conquering Standish in the feature contest of the evening, winning by a 30-14 count. The East Tawas boys played their usual class ball, with Schanbeck enacting the leading role, and were never in great danger throughout the game.

'FAST LIFE,' WITH WILLIAM HAINES, HAS THRILL-A-MINUTE

A "thrill a minute" is no exaggeration in the speed epic of the water, "Fast Life," that brings motorboat racing to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, January 31, February 1-2, with roaring reality and an exceptionally fine cast headed by William Haines.

Here is a film that has a punch for every type of theatregoer. There is fast-moving action, romance, drama and a generous portion of side-splitting comedy that is packed with entertainment value. Every effort has been made to keep the offering very light, but at the same time plenty of eye and ear-filling spectacle has been included.

William Haines as Sandy the mechanic has a role that gives him many opportunities for flippant comedy. In dramatic scenes he shows unusual strength in contrast to his usual wise-cracking. Cliff Edwards scores with his likable portrayal of Bumpy, the assistant who keeps things in a continual uproar. Madge Evans is her own charming self in a sparkling role as Shirley, daughter of the boat builder. Excellent work is also contributed by Conrad Nagel, Arthur Byron, Warburton Gamble, Kenneth Thomson, Albert Gran and Ben Hendricks.

1932 SEES CHANGES IN WORLD GOVERNMENTS

Spain and Iraq Most Important Nations Affected.

Washington.—Removal of mandate restrictions from Iraq and its erection into an independent state, was one of the outstanding changes affecting the world's family of nations during the past year, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society's headquarters in Washington. Among the other important changes listed in the summary are the creation of Manchoukuo, the setting up of Catalonia as an autonomous unit within the Spanish republic, and the granting of a constitution by the king of Siam.

"Iraq is the first of the group of mandated territories established following the World war to graduate into the group of independent nations," says the bulletin. "Great Britain gave up all of its special privileges as holder of the mandate, and the new state became a full fledged member of the League of Nations."

"Following Japanese occupation of Manchuria, that territory, together with the Province of Jehol to the west, was made into the state of Manchoukuo with Pu Yi, one-time heir to the Chinese empire, as ruler. Western powers have not officially recognized the new state."

"Catalonia Given Autonomy. The granting of autonomy to Catalonia, made up of the four provinces of northeastern Spain, fulfilled the aspirations which the Catalonians have held for centuries. The newly empowered state has a unique status among the major divisions of the Spanish republic. It has its own president, parliament, cabinet, and courts, and will collect its own taxes. Foreign affairs, however, will remain under control of the central government at Madrid."

"After an almost bloodless revolution during the past summer, King Prajadhipok of Siam promised a constitution. This new charter for the Siamese was made public on November 19."

"In Arabia no major changes in boundaries or sovereignties took place during the year, but the principal state of the peninsula received a new name. The country embracing all of central Arabia and extending from the Red sea to the Persian gulf, formerly known as the Kingdoms of the Hejaz and Nejd, was, early in October, given the title, 'Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.'"

"Ararat, one of the most famous mountains in the world, changed hands during 1932. The mountain was traded to Turkey by Persia in exchange for a strip of territory along the Turkish-Persian border to the south."

"Next to the fighting in Manchuria, the longest continued military conflict during 1932 over boundaries or sovereignties has been that in the Gran Chaco of South America between Bolivia and Paraguay. Each contestant demands that its title to this large region south of the center of the continent shall be recognized. In late weeks spirited fighting has continued along the string of forts which extends through the center of the Chaco."

"Merry-Go-Round in Chile. Since June 1, Chile has had five changes in presidents, and for a time was ruled by a socialistic regime. The changes have all been effected other than by elections, but little fighting has occurred."

"The latest armed contest over territory in South America began in August on the Putumayo River, one of the headwater streams of the Amazon system. The dispute was initiated when Peruvian citizens seized the town of Leticia from Colombia. The community is still in the hands of Peruvians."

"In the Near East a dispute between Syria and Iraq over their common boundary line between the Euphrates and Tigris rivers was advanced toward solution by a report of the Syro-Iraqi frontier commission to the League of Nations, recommending a line which lay between those claimed by the two contestants."

"A frontier contest which involved the operation of customs between France and Switzerland was settled amicably by a decision of the Court of International Justice at The Hague (s Gravenhage) during June. The decision was in favor of Switzerland and operated to permit a free customs zone near Geneva, but in French territory. France formally accepted the decision in September and ordered the withdrawal of her customs officials from the zone."

"Work toward solution of the boundary dispute between Guatemala and Honduras in Central America, was carried toward a decision by an arbitration commission headed by Chief Justice Hughes. The United States War department played an important part in this work by assigning army air corps flyers last summer to prepare an aerial map of the disputed line."

"The controversy between Norway and Denmark over portions of the east coast of Greenland is still under consideration by the Court of International Justice at The Hague."

He's 'Too Nice,' Rich Bride Sues

Unfailing Consideration Is Too Much to Bear.

Cleveland.—If the decision of Judge Alva Corlett in an annulment case involving a wealthy society girl is to be taken as a criterion, it's just as much an offense against a wife to smother her with kindness as it is to shower her with blows.

The unusual ruling arises out of the annulment suit involving Marion Connelly and William Graham Abell of Warren, Ohio, who married in haste and apparently repented soon afterward.

Marion, daughter of Brig. Gen. L. S. Connelly, of the Ohio National Guard, and popular debutante, married young Abell last March. She quickly found out it was all a mistake.

Her young husband, she complained to her parents, simply was "too nice"

Declared Dead by Court, He Returns

Kenton, Ohio.—George F. Romy of Des Moines, Iowa, arrived here after an absence of 16 years to visit his mother, Mrs. S. H. Runyon. Romy some years ago had been declared legally dead.

Sixteen years ago Romy left Rich Hill, Mo., to attend the United States Naval academy. After three and a half years he left the academy to work on a Pacific coast merchant ship.

A short time ago he went to Des Moines, Iowa, as an accountant for a New York firm.

In the meantime he had been declared dead by a court at Rich Hill on the petition of his father, who sought to collect a $1,000 insurance policy. The father and mother were divorced many years ago.

English Doctor Stops Fights Among Africans

London.—An African chief eating kola nut with pepper and salt from the edge of a razor blade during an inter-tribal peace ceremony is among the things witnessed by Dr. Melville D. Mackenzie during a recent visit to Liberia as special commissioner of the League of Nations council.

Mackenzie, a Scottish doctor on the league secretariat, co-operated with the Liberian government in a successful effort to pacify Kru tribes who, having come into conflict with the government and with each other, had fled into the bush. Forty-four towns had been burned and at least 12,000 men, women and children were in a state of advanced starvation as the result of the disputes.

The success of Mackenzie's mission involved settling tribal quarrels about land, women, canoes, and palm trees. Finally he managed to stop all fighting and disarmed the natives. He taught them how to mark out boundaries and build houses, and himself carried out their first land survey.

Coopersville, Mich.—Her own wedding ring, lost 38 years ago, was among the "gifts" received by Mrs. G. Schiele when she and her husband celebrated their fortieth wedding anniversary here recently. ### Graf Zeppelin May Be Put Into U. S. Service

Philadelphia.—The possibility of using the Graf Zeppelin as one of the units of an air-water-air trip from almost any city in the United States to Europe is being considered by officials of the Transcontinental and Western Air. ### Former Desert Pest Now Valuable

ONCE a bristly desert pest, the cactus plant is now one of California's commercially valuable crops. Not only has it become a prime cattle fodder, but several delicious varieties of candy are made from its fruit, the cactus pear. Many a rancher who hopelessly tried to exterminate this plant, now declares a dividend from it. Norma Adkins, shown in the photograph, is holding one of the pears at a cultivated cactus patch near Pomona, Calif.

OUR CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE BREEZES DECIDE TO HELP STRIPED CHIPMUNK

HAPPY JACK SQUIRREL and his cousin, Chatterer the Red Squirrel, stared at each other, and for a few minutes neither could find a word to say. What had become of all those brown nuts which the Merry Little Breezes had shaken down from the top of the tall chestnut tree, and over which they had quarreled and fought so bitterly? Not one was to be found. It was just as if there never had been any. The Merry Little Breezes knew what had become of them, and they chuckled. Sammy Jay knew what had become of them, and he chuckled the most of all. In fact, Striped Chipmunk was at that very minute tucking away the very last of those brown nuts in his secret storehouse. No wonder he chuckled.

Of course, Happy Jack and Chatterer soon guessed that while they had been so foolishly quarreling, some one else had found those brown nuts and taken them away, but who that some one was they didn't know. What do you think they did after staring at each other for a few minutes? It sounds too foolish to tell, but they began to quarrel again. Yes, sir, Happy Jack and Chatterer began to quarrel again.

And then they went at it again, quarreling as bitterly as before and quite forgetting that there were more nuts in the trees waiting to be gathered. The Merry Little Breezes had been shocked at first, and now they were disgusted, very much disgusted. "And I thought we were going to help!" exclaimed the Merry Little Breeze who had first suggested shaking down the brown nuts that Happy Jack and Chatterer might be saved the trouble of climbing the trees for them. "I'll never shake down another nut for those fellows if I know it!" "But we did help!" cried another Merry Little Breeze. "We helped Striped Chipmunk. Wasn't it funny to see him get all those nuts while his cousins were quarreling about them? I tell you what, let's go hunt up Striped Chipmunk and help him and leave those two bad-tempered fellows to get their nuts any way they can."

No sooner was it proposed than off rushed the Merry Little Breezes to look for Striped Chipmunk. They found him running along the edge of the Green Forest looking for more nuts.

"Hello, Striped Chipmunk! Come play with us!" shouted one of them, mischievously, knowing just what Striped Chipmunk's answer would be. "Can't! I'm too busy," replied Striped Chipmunk, snapping his bright eyes at them.

"Will you play with us after your work is done if we will help you do it?" asked one of the Merry Little Breezes.

Striped Chipmunk paused to sit up and chuckle, as only he can chuckle. "I'd like to know how you can help me?" said he.

"How do you think all those brown nuts happened to be on the ground, the ones you have just hidden away while your cousins were quarreling?" demanded a Merry Little Breeze.

"Why, I suppose they just dropped down," replied Striped Chipmunk wonderingly.

"You're wrong!" shouted the Merry Little Breezes. "We shook them down for your cousins. But we wouldn't have done it if we had known that they would quarrel over them. Now they may climb the trees and gather the nuts for themselves for all we care."

"That is something I can't do very well," said Striped Chipmunk. "You know I am not much of a climber. I have to depend on what I find on the ground, and sometimes it is pretty hard work to find enough. I didn't know you shook those down, but I'm glad you did. Now I must get busy. When my work is done I'll play with you." Striped Chipmunk started to hurry on.

"Wait a minute," cried the Merry Little Breezes. "We are going to help you. You follow us and we'll shake down the nuts for you, but we must go where Happy Jack and Chatterer will not see what we are doing. What do you say to that?"

"Splendid!" cried Striped Chipmunk, chasing his tail from pure happiness. "Do you really mean it?" "We certainly do!" cried the Merry Little Breezes. "Come on!"

DESSERT, FISH, MEAT SAUCES

A DELICIOUS sauce to serve on a cottage pudding or any steamed cake is:

Butterscotch Sauce.
To one cupful of boiling water add one cupful of brown sugar, two tablespoonfuls of flour, a dash of cinnamon, and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt thoroughly mixed. Cook until the flour has lost its raw taste and the mixture thickens, stirring to prevent lumping. Beat in two tablespoonfuls of butter and remove from the heat, adding one-half teaspoonful of vanilla or coffee extract. This is good served hot on ice cream, custard or baked puddings.

Hard Sauces.
Cream together one-fourth of a cupful of butter and three-fourths cupful of powdered sugar, add one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and one-eighth teaspoonful of grated nutmeg. Long beating makes a creamy, hard sauce. Add the sugar slowly. For variety substitute brown sugar and flavor with maple or grated lemon or orange rind.

Spanish Sauce.
Add two tablespoonfuls of chopped onion to two tablespoonfuls of butter and cook until tender and yellow. Add one chopped green pepper, one-half cupful of celery, two teaspoonfuls of minced parsley, one bay leaf, two cupfuls of tomato, one tablespoonful of flour and salt and pepper to taste. Blend the flour with a little butter before adding to the sauce. Cook for half an hour, remove the bay leaf,

THE WAY WE FIGURE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

PUT down two and carry one. So arithmetic was done. In a schoolhouse ten by twenty. When some simple rule is plenty. Now the schoolhouse is as wide as the world where men abide. And I find, with problems bigger, That ain't now the way we figger.

Harder problem, harder school, And it takes a harder rule. Seems today, with all our troubles, What's divided always doubles. Here is what we seem to do: Put down one and carry two. Though the rules are simply stated, Life is much more complicated.

Soon it's two in place of one, So our troubles are begun, For there aren't very many folks who never carry any. In life's school one rule is taught, That you never carry naught. Yet perhaps what makes 'em bigger Mostly is the way we figger.

Many Oriental Plants Grow in Wyoming Garden

Cheyenne, Wyo.—Many strange oriental plants grew in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. George Koga last season.

Koga, a Japanese plumber, has made a hobby of growing plants that are popular in Japan. The outstanding feature of the garden was a large bed of true oriental poppies, scarlet in color.

Many of the plants are grown for their medicinal value. One of these herbs is called gubo. It looks something like rhubarb. The Japanese people use the gubo plant as a remedy for rheumatism and other diseases.

The Kogas devoted a part of their garden to nobuka, or Japanese onion. It is similar to the ordinary onion except that it is much stronger.

DAILY IMPROVEMENT

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Late Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

Mr. Richard Lovell Edgeworth, the father of Maria of fictional fame, according to his biographer, was a man of tremendous energy. He was always taking up something new, always interested in some invention. He invented all sorts of things, and in a score of ways he did "almost pretty well." He had a theory that no matter how old or advanced one became one should improve himself daily.

"You can improve," Mr. Edgeworth used to tell his children, "every day of your life. With this power of improvement you may in time be anything; without it, you can be nothing."

It was a theory which he himself did not always carry out, but it is certainly one worthy of the serious consideration of everyone.

Huntley went out of business not long ago, bankrupt. And yet I can remember when he had the finest store in town, the biggest trade in the line of merchandise which he carried. He was looked upon as one of the most prosperous business men we had. But he never improved. While other men were remodeling their business buildings or adding new fronts with more attractive plate glass windows, Huntley made no change in the general appearance of his store. Soon it began to look like a back number—out of date, old-fashioned. He did not change his stock or his methods to meet new conditions. Some one came along and started a rival institution, and soon Huntley's trade fell off, his enthusiasm waned, he began to lose money and ultimately he was closed out, and all because he didn't give his mind to improving every day.

Burroughs, twenty years ago, was looked upon as a coming man in his department of teaching. His lectures were illuminating, the book he was getting out was the expression of the latest thought in his field. His friends were sure that by the time he reached middle age he would be recognized as one of the great men in his field of education. He gives about the same lectures today he did twenty years ago, and the things that were true then are not true today.

Discovering the Northeast Passage

The Sibirakov, the expedition ship of the Russian Soviet that recently set a new passage across the Arctic from Russia to Japan, stranded on the heavy ice floes of the Arctic during its journey when it lost its propeller blades. After grueling labors in the cold, icy waters, the crew succeeded in lifting up the stern of the vessel and fitting it with new blades for the remainder of the journey.

For Sunday Night Supper, or Lunch

Well to Keep Supply of Canned Delicacies on Shelves.

Whether you keep house seriously or "kitchenetly," as some put it, you are almost certain to keep a supply of canned crab meat, tuna fish, salmon and lobster meat on hand. They are called on then for main dishes and salad, for lunch and for Sunday night supper, and for canapes and for entrees—if you go in for formal dinners.

Of these four foods, lobster perhaps has the more distinct flavor. A very good brand of canned lobster must be selected on this account. Packs of lobster vary more than packs of the other fish unless it is the crab meat, which is of two distinctly different kinds. The Japanese crab meat comes in larger pieces, keeps its natural flavor, and is packed in such quantities that it is used largely. It is particularly good for salad whenever large pieces are desirable. Personally, a household authority says, I like both lobster and crab left in "airy large pieces when a salad is prepared. At least a third as much celery as fish is used for these salads, and mayonnaise is mixed with them. Tiny capers or minced green olives improve these salads. Tuna may be used the same way. When salmon is used as a salad, it is better left in larger pieces—as it comes from the can. Plenty of mayonnaise should be arranged, with hard cooked eggs—cut into lengthwise eighths—around the salmon. Eggs are, of course, often used to garnish the other fish salads. Any one of these fish may be put into an aspic jelly with celery and sliced stuffed olives. A ring of salad of this sort may be served with cucumbers cut into dices and mixed with mayonnaise or with a mixed vegetable salad dressed in the same way.

For canapes, the fish is usually finely minced and well seasoned before it is spread on rounds of toast or fried bread. Sometimes the salad mentioned above is molded in tiny molds not more than one inch in diameter. When these are turned out of the mold they are put on toothpicks and eaten with canapes, as an appetizer.

For a creamed dish, or for its richer relation the Newburg, lobster and crab are the favorites. The creamed fish is served on toast in patty cases, or is put in ramekins or in a large baking dish, covered with crumbs and browned in a hot oven. When high seasonings and pimentos and green peppers are added to a creamed dish

- It is sometimes known as "deviled."
- Any of these fish make delicious timbales and souffles. One is as good as the other. Sometimes a Hollandaise or a Tartar sauce is served with these hot dishes.
- One other delicious use for these sea foods should be mentioned. They make such delicious cream soups as "bisques," as they are called. Of course, they are a little heavy for dinner, but I know of one household where this is a specialty of the hostess and where guests are always hopeful of having a meal begin with her famous lobster bisque.
- In either of the recipes given, of product can be used to better advantage, but we are quite likely to find good use for them often in their canned form.
- Salmon Timbales.
- 2 tablespoons butter
  - 2 tablespoons flour
  - 1 cup milk
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt
  - 1/4 teaspoon chopped parsley
  - 1/4 teaspoon onion juice
  - 1/4 teaspoon white pepper
  - 2 slices pimento
  - 1/2 cup ripe olives, minced
  - 1 cup flaked salmon
  - 1 cup bread crumbs
  - 1 tablespoon butter
- Heat two tablespoons butter and add the flour, gradually add milk and stir until it thickens. Add salt, parsley, onion juice, pepper, olives, pimentos and salmon to mixture. Pour into buttered ramekins, cover with crumbs over which one tablespoon of melted butter has been poured. Place ramekins in a pan of hot water and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) until the crumbs have browned. Garnish with parsley. This recipe may be doubled for a luncheon dish.
- Spinach Ring Filled With Lobster and Crab.
- 3 cups cooked or canned spinach
  - 1 teaspoon grated onion
  - 1 tablespoon butter
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
  - 1/2 teaspoon paprika
  - 2 eggs
  - 3 cups cream sauce
  - 1/2 cup fine bread crumbs
  - 1 cup flaked lobster meat
  - 1 cup flaked crab meat
- Chop spinach fine and add grated onion, which has been browned in butter. Season with salt, black pepper, paprika and add the well-beaten egg yolks. Mix the spinach with one and one-half cups of cream sauce and fold in the well-beaten egg whites. Place in a buttered ring mold and dust with bread crumbs. Place in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for twenty minutes. Loosen the spinach by pressing from the side of the mold with a knife, turn out on a hot platter and fill the center with lobster meat and crab meat heated with rest of white sauce. Garnish with strips of pimento or slices of lemon or hard-cooked egg.

ATHEISM CAMPAIGN OF RUSSIA EXPOSED

Details of Five-Year Plan Never Fully Published.

New York.—Details of a "five-year plan of atheism," never published in full by the Soviet government, were made known by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The organization received a report on the plan, it was said, from a European correspondent.

The anti-religious decree, effective last May 15, appeared in part in the Advance Guard of Youth, described as the journal of the Pan-Unionist Commission Extraordinary for the Fight Against Religion, according to the correspondent. The complete decree is said to have 118 articles divided into five sections, corresponding to the five years. During the first year measures were to be taken to close all religious schools, academies and Catholic seminaries and to discontinue the teaching of theology.

Ban All Churches.

During the second year, the edict is quoted as saying, the campaign is to be conducted to the end that "from May 1, 1937, there shall not remain a single house of prayer in Soviet territory. The very concept of 'God' will be expelled from the Soviet Union as an instrument to oppress the working masses."

From 1933, there is to be organized a drive against religion in the home and in the old convents, the correspondent says. "By October," he adds, "it is expected that all Soviet institutions will be 'purified' through the absence of persons holding religious beliefs. The printing of religious books, brochures and reviews for the use of religious bodies will be rigorously forbidden. The preparation of objects necessary to religious worship will be punished with extreme severity. Special attention will be given to the inculcation of 'intelligent irreligion into the psychology of the masses.' Among the things to be used are atheistic films, of which at least 150 have already been created.

Speed Up Atheism.

"During the third year greater activity is to be organized in atheistic groups. During that year all who give religious instruction who shall not have renounced their religious posts are to be expelled from Soviet territory.

"During the fourth year all churches, synagogues and houses of prayer are to be put in the hands of official institutions for the organization in these buildings of cinemas, clubs and other means of enlightened entertainment."

"During the fifth and final year, the previously achieved results in the struggle against religious mentality will be consolidated and developed."

Traffic Ticket a Month Too Much for Nerves

New York.—After being ticketed 13 times in as many months for traffic law violations, Mrs. Alice Sarkis, one of New York's few women taxicab chauffeurs, says she is sick and tired of what she says is persecution, and plans to quit.

Mrs. Sarkis claims to be a descendant of Pocahontas.

She says she has been harried so much with traffic tickets that she is going back to the Mattaponi reservation in Virginia, where, she asserts, her father, Chief Costello, presides over a remnant of the once powerful Algonquians.

She says she will find fishing back in Virginia not so hard on the nerves as New York traffic policemen.

New Yale Coach

Reginald D. Root has been appointed head football coach of Yale to succeed Dr. Marvin A. Stevens. Root, who graduated from Yale in 1926, was freshman coach during the past season, and also has been coach of varsity lacrosse. He is twenty-nine years old and has been instructor in political economy at Yale for more than a year.

How Old?

He doesn't look a day over fifty. And feels like forty. At the age of 62.

That's the happy state of health and pep a man enjoys when he gives his vital organs a little stimulant!

When your system is stagnant and you feel sluggish, headachy, half-alive—don't waste money on "tonics" or "regulators" or similar patent medicines. Stimulate the liver and bowels. Use a famous physician's prescription every drug store keeps. Just ask them for Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin.

This appetizing syrup is made from fresh laxative herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. One dose will clear up almost any case of headache, biliousness, constipation. But if you want to keep in fine shape, feel fit the year 'round, take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin every few days. You'll eat better, sleep better and feel better in every way. You will never need to take another laxative.

Give the children a little of this delicious syrup two or three times a week. A gentle, natural stimulant that makes them eat and keeps the bowels from clogging. And saves them from so many sick spells and colds.

Have a sound stomach, active liver and strong bowel muscles that expel every bit of waste and poison every day! Just keep a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin on hand; take a stimulating spoonful every now and then. See if you don't feel new vigor in every way. Syrup pepsin isn't expensive.

FAMILIES KEEP THEIR MOTORS

Shrinkage in Licenses Less Than Was Expected.

New York.—That the automobile industry has a firm basis for recovery is indicated in a report issued by James Dalton, editor of Motor. The experience of 1932 shows that there is still in operation one car for every six of our population. The figures show that the American people regard their cars as an essential part of their lives and cling to them as long as possible. The record of 1932 car registrations reported by Motor discloses that there are still 20,929,001 passenger cars in operation in the United States. Counting the 3,253,292 trucks that are in operation, the total is 24,182,333 vehicles. This represents a decrease of 1,631,720 car registrations, or 6.1 per cent, from 1931, but since 1932 marks the culmination of the business recession, the decline was less than might have been expected. The trucks registered in 1932 numbered 3,253,292, which is 6.1 per cent under 1931.

A drop of only 2,192,498 car licenses from the 1929 peak is an unexpectedly small shrinkage and provides substantial evidence of the importance of individual transportation.

The editor of Motor points out that the losses in passenger car registrations since 1929 reflect with fair ac-

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

- To remove peach stains cover stain with wet salt and let stand for 24 hours. Wash then in lukewarm water.
- A pair of tweezers close by while doing ripping or pulling threads will prove quite indispensable.
- Take cooked starch left after a washing and wipe the surface of linoleums. It renews the colors and affords a varnish-like protection and polish.
- Turn a thoroughly heated bowl over butter that is hard. This will soften the butter throughout and may be used to spread when making sandwiches.
- After cleaning your kitchen range go over the enamel part with water containing a little vinegar, then polish with a dry cloth. Your range will look like new.
- If you have an old clock that refuses to run, just soak an old cloth with kerosene large enough to place in the corner of the clock.

Halo Long Employed

There is evidence that aureoles or halos were in use in earliest times as an attribute to the deities. Aureoles have been found with the pictures of the gods on some of the coins of the Indian kings Kanishka, Huvishka and Vasudeva, 58 B. C. to A. D. 41. They are also found in the depiction of Egyptian deities, from which their use spread to the Greeks and Romans.

EX-THIEVES BEST OF ALL GUARDIANS

Odd Qualification for Watchmen in India.

Few countries have any really good method of pensioning off burglars and other thieves when they get too old to carry on their trade profitably, but in India an easy and honorable calling is at their disposal. I refer to the occupation of chaukidar, or watchman.

In a country where doors and windows must be left open to admit the night breezes and where the houses are practically all built as bungalows, on but one floor—I am speaking of up-country stations far away from the large presidency towns—you have to employ a chaukidar if you do not wish to part with some of your property.

Moreover, thieves usually come naked, with their bodies made slippery with oil to prevent their being captured, and carrying a knife, which they do not hesitate to use if interfered with. So respect for your skin is added to desire to retain your possessions.

It often happens that a retired member of the criminal caste is chosen in India for the post of chaukidar, because professional etiquette will prevent attempts at theft where a caste brother is employed and may suffer because of them.

The chaukidar, hoary-headed old rascal that he is, makes little or no pretense of even keeping awake during his hours of watchfulness. But let him sleep, noisily, through the night on your veranda, and you may feel sure that both your life and your cherished goods are safe.—Lieut. Col. V. Prescott-Westcar, in Asia.

Landis lowered his pistol, but held it in readiness. "Why did you stop here?" he asked.

The man jerked his head toward the open cowl of the car, where a disconnected ignition wire offered the reason for a stop.

"Go ahead and fix it," said Landis curtly. Then he picked up the dropped rifle by the barrel and struck it against a boulder, shattering the stock. "Just to keep you yaps from getting careless with somebody else," he snapped, tossing the two pieces of the disabled weapon into the tonneau of the flivver. "Now couple up that wire and get out of here. And do it quick."

While the men were working at the wire, he motioned to Wally.

"Look in the car and see if they've got any more artillery," he said; and he and Markham followed it up to where the "Tennesseans" had parked the roadster.

They waited beside the road until after the car had limped on around the next gulch looping. Then they got into their own car and headed for Brewster.

"Well," Markham said, after they had left the scene of their late adventure a mile or more to the rear, "what's the answer? Is that wreck in the gulch what is left of the Fleetwing?"

"I couldn't be sure. But it was an Eight. You saw that much, didn't you?"

Markham nodded. "Next, what's the answer to the two men in the flivver? Have you figured that out?"

"No; though I more than half believe they were lying. It's lucky for them that I wasn't sure."

"Gosh!" said Markham with a laugh. "A little while ago I said something to the effect that you might be lacking a few of the red corpuscles. I take it all back—every last word of it. Why have you never shown me the fighting side of you before, Owen? You haven't, you know."

Landis' smile was a mere tightening of the lips.

"You've heard the old saying 'Beware the wrath of a patient man,' haven't you? I'm patient, Wally—too d-d patient, I guess. As I said, I'm fed up. From this time on, by the Lord Harry, I fight for my own hand! I've been robbed and sandbagged and shot at, and the next man that tries it is going to get the best I've got in the box!"

"Gosh!" said Wally again; and this time he did not laugh.

On the flight down the mountain nothing happened until they were on the stretch approaching the side road leading to Canby's mine. Here, however, there was a near accident. As they ran down they saw a heavy truck backing out of the road leading to the mine. Markham sounded his horn, but the driver of the truck held on in a way to place the heavy vehicle fairly across the highway.

It was too late to stop, and Markham did the only thing there was to do if a collision was to be averted; stepped on the gas, and with a quick twist of the wheel whipped the roadster around the rear of the backing truck with no more than inches to spare between a deep roadside ditch and the trundling menace.

No word was spoken until they were speeding over the mesa road toward the city. Then Markham said, "We ought to have shot that truck driver, Owen. It would have been justifiable homicide, don't you think?"

"I don't think; I know," was the grinning reply. "That was one of Canby's trucks; I saw the name 'Quavapal mine' on it as we came up. It's running in my mind that we'll have to kill a few people out here, yet, before we're through, Wally. And by heavens, I'm telling you, right now, if they keep on asking for it, they'll get it!"

The Louisville Three

In the evening Landis briefly announced his intention of going to call upon Betty.

"The Stillings live away over in the western suburb," said Markham. "You'd better take a taxi, or the roadster."

"For safety's sake, you mean? Not so you could notice it. I'm not dodging anybody or anything to-night."

"Got your war paint on, have you? Don't want me along?"

"No thanks; I'll go alone."

Left to himself, Markham lighted a cigar and picked a quiet corner of the lobby in which to read. Soon Landis returned, the frown of his departure deepened to an unwonted scowl.

"No luck?" said Wally, noting the scowl.

"No. She'd gone out somewhere—with Canby."

"You didn't see the professor?"

"No; he has gone to the fossil fields, wherever they are. I visited with the Stillings—mostly Mr. Stillings, in his den."

"Just friendly gossip?"

"Not altogether. Betty's been talking about us and that broke the ice. The Stillings don't quite like the way she's letting Canby cut in."

"That's the aftermath of his scampishness out here last summer, I suppose."

"Not so much that as other things. Stillings thinks Canby is fixing to pull off something else; and that he is using Betty in some way."

"But how could Betty figure in any of his schemes?"

"God knows. But it's plain Stillings believes she does—innocently, of course. He was cautious until he found out where we stand; then he intimated that it was up to us to put a spoke in Canby's wheel."

"Good. You'll do it?"

"We'll both do it. As you remarked, I have my warpaint on, now."

"Anything happened to stir you up afresh?"

"Yes. That shooting this afternoon was a planned attempt to kill us. As I was coming back across town just now I saw a car with running-board of camp dunnage going through by the back streets. There were two men in it, and I saw them as the car came under the crossing electric.

Markham Slowed Down, and as He Did So, Two Men Stepped Out and Signaled Him to Stop.

They were the men who were shooting at us. They were no tin can tourists; they were gunmen, hired to follow us. They made a roundabout drive some way, and have just got back to town."

"All right; dope the rest of it out, if you can."

"It's clear enough. My black box is here, and the men who have it know we have followed them, and that they won't be safe until they get rid of us."

"Can you carry it a step farther?"

"I think so. There are four men in it, and Canby is the fourth."

"And the three others—are they the men who ran their car off the road and burned it? How can that be if they are what they have appeared to be, all along—three well-known business men of Louisville?"

"I don't know. But never mind that. What we have to do first is to cut Betty out of it. Let's get to bed."

In accordance with the program which Landis—with his warpaint on—had mapped out, the two of them promptly laid siege to Miss Betty Lawson. In a week-long contest thus ushered in, Canby fought stubbornly for place, and there were numerous collisions—which seemed to afford Miss Betty no little quiet amusement.

On the seventh day, when Markham, taking his turn, had her out in the blue roadster, she said, "What makes you and Owen freeze up and refuse to talk when I say anything about Bert, Wally? What has he done to make you hate him?"

"We have never had much to do with him, either of us," Markham evaded. Then, bluntly, "Are you going to marry him, Betty?"

She laughed. "Do you know of any reason why I shouldn't?"

"Perhaps not any reason that would appeal to you."

"That is dodging," she retorted brightly. "As a friend don't you think you ought to tell me if there is a reason?"

"Yes; and get myself written down in your black book! No, thank you, my dear."

"All right; don't then. I'll ask Owen. I often wonder if boys, nice home boys like you and Owen, know how beautifully transparent you are."

"Thanks; glad you find us so. It's all right to wear a glass front when one has a clear conscience, you know."

"But your consciences are not clear."

"What makes you think so?"

"Perhaps it is the transparency we were speaking of." Then, "Why won't you tell me why you and Owen are out here, Wally?"

"I have told you. Can't we have a vacation as well as other folks?"

"That is exactly what Owen said yesterday; and it means just as much—or as little. Let me tell you something, Wally, dear; in this little round world we're living in, you get just as much as you are willing to give—and no more."

"Meaning?"

"Meaning that if you and Owen can't trust me, I can be clammy, too."

"Now you have got me climbing up a tree," laughed Markham. "Why shouldn't we both trust you?"

"Why, indeed? I'm sure I don't know. Where are you taking me today?"

"Out to meet some friends Starbuck has found for us; the John Smiths."

"Distinguished name," she giggled. "But I know who they are. Mrs. John is the daughter of Col. Dexter Baldwin, the Timanyoni wheat king."

"Right. And the colonel's home, and the Smiths—Hillcrest—is a show place."

"But I understand they are not at home."

"They are not; they're touring the Yellowstone. It's the Smiths we're calling upon. They are running the big ranch in the colonel's absence."

In due course the blue roadster was parked in the Hillcrest garage, and in Corona Smith Miss Betty speedily found a kindred spirit. And when Smith came home and added his insistence to Corona's urgings that the callers stay to dinner, Wally rejoiced afresh. For Betty accepted the invitation, calling the Stillings house over the phone to let her city hostess know where she was.

After she was through telephoning, Markham called up Landis.

"Any developments?" he asked.

"No," came the answer. "Where are you?"

"Out at Hillcrest, and we are staying for dinner. You're not forgetting that this is the showdown day—the twenty-eighth?"

"No; but nobody has turned up yet. I'm watching the register."

"Right again. I'll be with you later. Call me if anything breaks loose."

After Smith had smoked an after-dinner cigar with his man guest in the colonel's den, he said regretfully that he'd have to excuse himself; that he was due to meet the westbound Flyer which was bringing some of his business associates from the East.

"It's perfectly all right," Markham assured him. "We'll have to be going, too. I promised Mrs. Stillings I wouldn't keep Betty out late."

When the goodbyes were said, Smith went with Markham to the garage.

"You'll beat me to town," he said; "I'll have to stop and fill up. And that reminds me; there's been a good bit of whisky running from the hills north of us lately, and today the sheriff gave me a tip. It's likely he and some of his deputies may be on the road between here and town. If you're stopped, just take it easy. Harding won't be rough with you."

"Much obliged for the hint. I'll be law-abiding."

After they had driven out of the Hillcrest grounds, Markham told Betty of the warning Smith had given him.

"Just so you won't be scared stiff if we should happen to be stopped," he added.

"I don't scare so easily as all that," was the ready answer. "Didn't Mr. Smith say he was going to town, too?"

"Yes; but he had to stop and fill up with gas."

It was not until the distant lights of Brewster came in sight that their headlights showed them an unlighted car half hidden under the roadside cottonwoods. Markham slowed down, and as he did so, two men stepped out and signaled him to stop.

Miscalculating his distance slightly, he ran a little way past the men, and when they came up he was ready with an apology. Before he could make it, the door on his side was jerked open and he was seized and dragged out of the car, one of the pair clamping him in a vise-like grip while the other threw a blanket over his head. It was done so quickly that he was half smothered before he realized that this didn't at all square with what Smith had told him of the sheriff and his methods; that he had to deal, not with officers of the law, but with the mysterious assailants who had tried from time to time to efface him and Landis. And then the fight was on.

With his arms fast clamped in the grip of the man behind him, Markham could not get out of the holstered pistol under his coat. But his legs were free, and a swift kick doubled the blanketholder up and made him lose his hold long enough to enable Markham to shake his head free of the stifling folds. Instantly he backed the clumper violently against the standing car, bending him over the fender until he was forced to let go to save himself from having his back broken.

At that, Markham got his weapon out, but now the two were between him and the car and he couldn't fire without taking a chance of hitting Betty. The thugs saw their advantage and flung themselves upon him, the shorter of the two crouching low to grab at his legs while the other darted into a clinch and tried to twist the automatic out of his grasp. There was a whirlwind wrestling match, and in the midst of this there came a glare of light and the raucous blast of an auto horn. Markham saw the headlights of an approaching car and saw Betty running to meet it, frantically waving her arms to stop it.

That ended it. As the oncoming car came to a brake-squealing stand and Smith sprang out of it, the two ran for their car, gained it, flung themselves in and were gone.

When Smith and Betty came running up, Markham was beating the dust out of his clothes. For Betty's sake he tried to laugh the incident off.

"Thought you said the sheriff's men wouldn't roughhouse me, Mr. Smith," he chuckled.

"Good Lord—those fellows were not Harding's men; they were just plain holdups! Are you hurt?"

"No; just warmed up a bit, that's all. Scare you half to death, Betty?"

Nias Island

Masked Dancer of Nias Island.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

ALTHOUGH it has been nearly 1,100 years since Nias Island, lying in the Indian ocean off the coast of Sumatra, was first mentioned in history by the Mohammedan merchant Soleyman, today it shows less progress than many more isolated spots on the world map.

Neither wireless nor cable connects the island with civilization, and only when an occasional boat calls does it have contact with other lands. Yet there flourished an ancient civilization.

Nias is about 80 miles in length. The north end of the island is rather barren and uninteresting, and at times the traveler's ardor is somewhat weakened by the intense heat, hard-baked trails which are steep and slippery, and the meagerness of food and shelter. But all these hardships are forgotten when he reaches the rich cities in the South and is lost in admiration of this present-day example of a long-ago civilization.

Centuries ago adventure and possibly shipwreck brought inhabitants to these shores; and here, cut off from the world through generations, these people developed their own laws, their own art and methods of warfare.

Here primitive people built great cities with paved streets, carved enormous stones where ghosts of their ancestors were wont to sit; and here, even today, warriors wear metal armor, while their chiefs have coats of gold dedicated to use by human sacrifice. Yet comparatively few people have ever heard of the island of Nias.

In their early trade with the Spice Islands, European ships sought the sheltered waters along the east coast of Sumatra, passing through the Strait of Malacca; and today this same route is taken by the richly laden ships plying between the East and the West.

Island of Gold.

Soleyman tells us that the early Nias people were rich in gold; that they ate coconuts and covered their bodies with the oil; that when a man wished to marry he had to take the head of an enemy. If he took two heads, he could take two wives; if he obtained 50, he could have that many wives.

In manuscripts of later periods, chiefly Arabic, occasional references are made to this island. Ancient maps locate an Island of Gold near the present site of Nias, and the Portuguese in 1520 outfitted an unsuccessful expedition to search for it.

Except for minor visits, Nias attracted little attention from the Dutch until the middle of the Nineteenth century, when they established stations at several points in the North and South. But nature came to the aid of unfriendly natives in keeping the island isolated. In 1861 a series of earthquakes, accompanied by a great tidal wave, destroyed the coast settlements, and a little later uprisings drove the Dutch from the greater part of the island. It is only during the last 20 years that the white man has really ruled the land.

Little villages with palm-fringed beaches are on the eastern shore of the island. Inland, through the heat haze of the valleys, one can see clumps of coconut trees on the hillsides, almost hiding the brown-roofed houses of other villages. Occasionally the green background is pierced by the white spire of a German mission.

The houses in the villages are sound, raised high above the ground, and the bamboo-barricaded windows, as well as raised portions of the roofs, are filled with men, women and children. They are a sickly looking lot, their yellow color suggesting undernourishment and much malaria. Half the year these people live on rice and half on sweet potatoes, but there is never enough of either.

Money Means Little to Them.

Undervalued as they are, they have little ambition to cultivate the fruit and vegetables which might give them more vigor. Money is of little use to them, pigs for the most part taking the place of currency, and to obtain carriers is a real problem for the traveler. The natives do not want money and can see no use in working. Occasionally they go down to the coast and buy a bit of cloth from the Chinese traders, but in the interior money has little value.

When a man buys a wife he pays for her with pigs. The theft of a pig is punishable with death.

Throughout the Dutch East Indies there are, at intervals, government rest houses where weary officials or other travelers may spend the night. A man, or a native "boy" who knows more or less about cooking, is in charge. In Nias, outside of Goenoeng Sitoli, a coast village, there is just one of these houses, a large building which formerly was the home of a German missionary.

Lolowua, which is reached during the second day's travel inland, is an interesting place. The chief is an old man, but a lively one. Recently visitors found him wearing a wonderful upstanding mustache of gold, a high headdress with golden ornaments, and an enormous earring.

When he danced with the other men, leaping high in the air and performing strange antics with the greatest agility, one could well believe the reports that he had had his fun at taking heads. He fondly stroked a worn and weathered old wooden figure which stood in front of his house and explained that it was his grandfather.

Ancestors are not dead, according to the Nias idea. They live somewhere else, but are still interested in their descendants. Through offerings and sacrifices made to the small wooden figures, the advice and assistance of the dead are sought by the living.

In some sections, after a death, the relatives and a magician gather at the grave and invoke the spirit of the deceased to come to the wooden figure which has been prepared for the occasion. All watch intently for a spider, for it is in this form that the soul will become visible on the grave. When at last the insect is caught, it is taken to the house and placed near the figure into which it is expected to disappear.

These wooden figures are not only intermediaries between the living and the dead, but are guardians of the homes, custodians of matrimony, and protectors against curses of the enemy.

Magicians Are Numerous.

Almost every village has at least one magician or medium, a man or woman who can talk with the spirits through the wooden images. These magicians must learn all the formulas, must know the names of all the spirits to be invoked, and during the ceremonies they must carry out all the instructions of the spirits. They are believed to be able to cause rain or make the sun shine, to foretell the future, and to bring good crops. They can determine which are the lucky days for marriage, for cutting bamboo, for starting a journey, or for any other undertaking.

When a Nias chief has a pain in his stomach, he believes that some spirit in the other world is trying to get control of him, and it is necessary to sacrifice a chicken. If the pain is extreme, he might have to sacrifice a man.

Lature, a deified ancestor, fishes with a net which is the rainbow, and when the people see this they are greatly alarmed, for they know that he will catch them if they do not at once offer sacrifices.

The old chief entertains some travelers royally. He brings warriors with spears and shields to perform mock battles and give weird dances. To the accompaniment of drums, he sings the visitors' praises at great length, the warriors shouting their approval at the end of each line.

Coconut trees are the Nias substitute for a soda fountain. A coolie scrambles up a tall tree and throws down green nuts. With a few strokes of his long knife, a man deftly cuts away the husks, making a small hole in the nut. With mouth pressed tightly against this, one drinks the sweet water.

Lolowua was once a city of 2,000 inhabitants, whose houses, erected in two long rows, faced a paved court.

In front of the houses are stone slabs, polished like glass and wonderfully carved, beneath which the people place the skulls of their ancestors. Tall pillars of stone form backs to the "seats," and, resting on these places of honor, the souls of the ancestors, it is believed, take part in the festivities of the mortals.

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1116 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny."

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully!"

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way.

Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Jane McCrea

OF ALL the women who have in one way or another influenced the destinies of nations, none, perhaps, did so more truly, or with less recognition by later historians than Jane McCrea, whose death in 1777 proved the turning point of the American revolution.

In the late spring of that year Gen. John Burgoyne with an army of 7,000 British and Hessians and a large number of Canadian and Indian allies invaded New York from the north by way of Lake Champlain. He won easy victories at Ticonderoga, Crown Point and Fort Edward, forcing the main Colonial army under Gen. Philip Schuyler to retreat southward. At Albany he was to meet Sir William Howe advancing north by the Hudson from New York city, thus completing a barrier between New England and the rest of the colonies and, in all likelihood, putting an end to the rebellion.

Near Fort Edward, in the cabin of a Mrs. McNeill, a handsome girl of twenty-three, whose long dark hair was famous throughout the countryside, was dressing herself in wedding finery. She had no suspicion of danger. Mrs. McNeill was cousin to Brigadier General Fraser of Burgoyne's army, and the lover whom she was preparing to marry was also an officer in the loyalist troops.

But Jane McCrea had not counted on the ferocity and lawlessness of Burgoyne's Indian allies. Having attacked a picket guard of Americans, killing their commander and taking one prisoner, they swooped down upon the McNeill cabin and dragged out the two women. Jane they seated on a horse. Mrs. McNeill proved to be too bulky to be thus manipulated, and they contented themselves with stripping her to a single garment, and thus later handed her over to the astonished brigadier general.

Just why Jane McCrea was killed nobody knows. But it is certain that somewhere between the cabin and fort she was shot, scalped, and her body brutally mutilated. The scalp, with the lovely long dark hair that was his pride and joy, later came to the hands of her waiting lover. And it is also certain that this deed, proving to luke warm patriots that the British commander was either afraid or only half willing to restrain the atrocities of his Indian mercenaries, roused a storm of feeling throughout the colonies. "Remember Jane McCrea" became a rallying cry under which the morale of the colonists was so strengthened as to make possible their victories at Fort Schuyler, Bennington and Saratoga, thus defeating Burgoyne's well laid plans and turning the tide of the Revolution.

Sacagawea

IN THE journal of their famous expedition across the great Northwest to the Pacific, Lewis and Clark between them manage to spell the name Sacagawea in no less than eight different ways. But, however they spell it, they use it only to express admiration for its owner, the Shoshone Indian girl who played so heroic a part in their "magnificent adventure."

Sacagawea, or Bird Woman, was but sixteen when she became a member of the Lewis and Clark expedition. Five years before, during a Blackfoot raid in Montana, she had been captured and carried eastward into the Dakotas. Here she had been sold to the French-Canadian voyageur Toussaint Charbonneau, who later made her one of his wives. When Lewis and Clark engaged Charbonneau as interpreter, it was arranged that his wife, because of her knowledge of the Shoshone language and country, should accompany him.

The first mention of Sacagawea in the journal of the expedition records the birth of her son, Baptiste, which took place in February of 1805, under the administration of two rings of the rattle of a rattlesnake, "broken into small pieces with the fingers and added to a small quantity of water!"

The Indian mother's part in the success of the expedition was a real one. Charbonneau turned out to be a poor sort after all. Captain Clark notes: "I checked our interpreter for striking his woman at their dinner." Once, when several of the party were caught in a ravine during a cloudburst and almost washed away, Charbonneau saved his own skin, leaving the rescue of his wife and child to Clark. And again, being the "most timid water man in the world," he almost capsize the pirogue during a squall, and but for his wife, who fished them from the river before they were carried away, the party's most valuable records would have been lost.

It was Sacagawea who guided the expedition finally to the Three Forks of the Missouri, the land of her childhood, and turning aside the animosity of the Shoshoni, which might have proved fatal to its plans, secured instead their aid in crossing the mountains. On the return trip Sacagawea once more turned guide, leading the party through Bozeman pass. Once back in the Blackfoot villages of Missouri, Lewis and Clark left Charbonneau and Sacagawea behind, but not without a parting testimonial in the journal to one who had been "particularly useful."

Howe About:

Another Stingy Story
Rise of the Poor Boys
People in the Audience

By ED HOWE

IF TOO many "stories" were not printed already, I would write another, and it would be a true one. It is being said of a man I know well that he has given away more than any other citizen of his town. He became a philanthropist.

For forty years he has been a merchant and banker, known as stingy, and a hard worker. Also for forty years it has been admitted he has paid his debts, educated his children and built a comfortable home for his family.

Always he has had brisk competition, and, in greedily meeting it has been forced to be liberal in extending credit. In the course of forty years he has been beaten out of so much that it is gossip among the town men who know most about its affairs that no other citizen has helped an equal number of poor people.

About all he has left now at seventy, the men further say, is a good home, a bank and general store he is able to keep open with difficulty, credit, and the reputation of being his town's greatest philanthropist.

Moral: A man cannot give away anything, or be robbed of anything, until he works hard, and saves something.

Nothing impresses me more in reading the history of the human race than the great number of poor boys who have become useful, respected and famous. Stephen A. Douglas is an example; Abraham Lincoln, who was a poorer boy, and became a greater man, is another.

I have never lived in a town where its most useful and respected citizens had not started as poor boys. The poverty of man is never so great it is not natural and easy to somewhat work out of it.

The world is very old; Einstein, said to be the greatest living scientist, lately added seven billion years to its age. And through it all the poor boy story persists. Look at history as far back as we have record, and nine out of ten of its conspicuous figures have been poor boys who wouldn't tamely submit to unnecessary poverty and ignorance.

A reporter wandering about looking for the unusual ran into three noted moving picture people. A man in the party had never been on the screen, yet in his "story" the reporter said this man was by far the most interesting personality in the group.

Another compliment for the people in the audience. In every entertainment there are people in the audience smarter than the entertainers; every book is read by men smarter than the writer.

If the people in the audience could somehow effectively organize, they could get more for their money in everything.

I have been reading accounts of rioting all my life, and noted that when it begins good citizens lock their shutters and doors, and hide. . . . This is a mistaken policy. Nearly always rioting is engaged in by the most mistaken and useless of the minority. When it begins, good citizens representing the majority should promptly engage in and suppress it, instead of hiding.

So far as my poor judgment is able to direct me Bernard Shaw is a man of very unusual intelligence, and of all the men now writing he is very near the top in use of the pen. Thus he drew in the lottery of life not only one talent, but two; he is like a double-purpose horse which trots in harness, single-foots under the saddle, and sells for an extra price.

Mr. Shaw lately confessed, at the age of seventy-three, that he has accomplished nothing with his writing, and that the world is now in more danger than it was when he began giving it advice.

His weakness is he has never written simply, candidly and truthfully. He has used his terrific power of invective to unjustly abuse, sell his writing, and make a fortune; he is one of the worst of the money grabbers he denounces so incessantly, and usually so unjustly.

He is weakening a little, as a result of old age, but before the world finally quits him, I wish he would write his Confessions as candidly as Rousseau promised to do in the first pages of his famous book. Shaw might thus wash up and quit work with a burst of usefulness he has long been capable of and as long neglected. And to accomplish this great success in old age he need only tell the truth everybody knows—Shaw a little better than anyone else. Let him write as honestly as he thinks in every one of three hundred pages, and he will not again say he has accomplished no good in the world.

When I was a child it was said of a thin boy in our neighborhood he ate so much it made him poor to carry it; that his eyes were bigger than his stomach. . . . That is the trouble with most adults and nations now.

During my life I have encountered few downright villains, but many shiftless, careless men who have caused a villainous lot of trouble.

ODD WAY TO PUT END TO DROUGHT

African Rainmaker Makes Use of Snake.

Weird myths and strange superstitions concerning snakes, believed in by various native tribes of Africa, are related in "Serpent Worship in Africa," publication issued in the anthropological series of Field Museum of Natural History, Chicago. Wilfrid D. Hambly, assistant curator of African ethnology, who led the recent Frederick H. Rawson-Field Museum Ethnological expedition to Africa, is the author.

One of the most amusing tales related in Mr. Hambly's book is that concerning the use of a snake to break a drought. When rain is needed a tribe known as the Gagesu sends a rainmaker and a priest to a spring in which a snake lives. Nearby they construct a large trough which they fill with beer. When the snake comes out to attack them it gets drunk on the beer, and while in a helpless condition its fangs are removed by the men. From the well it has left unguarded they fill pots with water.

The water thus drawn is believed to attract rain, which will continue to fall until stopped by the priest. When it is desired to stop the rain the snake is again tempted to indulge too freely in beer, the water pots are then overturned, the rain ceases and the sun shines to ripen the harvest.

Many of the African tribes attribute to sacred serpents a fondness for beautiful girls, and many instances of sacrifices of the most attractive maidens are cited by Mr. Hambly. Corollary to this was a superstition that once prevailed in Dahomey that the sacred python appeared to the most beautiful girls to induce madness, whereupon they were obliged by tribal laws to enter the service of the snake temple. As a result of this, certain roguish priests of this temple are reported to have persuaded girls to feign frenzy so that they would be sent there.

Among certain tribes snakes are regarded as the reincarnation of the souls of dead people and treated with ancestral reverence. There are also beliefs in the affinity of certain living people's souls with those of snakes whereby the persons involved derive special powers, usually for evildoing. Large sums are paid to magicians to introduce a python into men and women desiring such attainments.

provided, however, that no duplication of prizes will be made in event that a partnership is higher than any one individual. In other words, if one player attains an exceptionally high individual percentage standing by playing with various partners he will be awarded an individual championship prize if his standing is higher than that of any partnership. In any event, the highest partnership will be awarded a partnership championship prize in duplicate.

All entrants who play nine evenings will be eligible for the individual championship irrespective of partners. All rubbers played by each player will be used as the base in computing individual standings. In order to be eligible for the partnership championship, partners must play together nine evenings or more. Only the rubbers which they play together will be used in computing partnership standings.

The committee has definitely ruled not to allow visiting players after next Monday evening except those who come as substitutes. This decision was made in order to avoid the delay incident to drawing new couple numbers.
