"WILD GIRL" IS FEATURE AT STATE ATTRACTION

"Wild Girl," the new Fox romance featuring Charles Farrell, Joan Bennett and Ralph Bellamy in the principal roles, will open at the State theatre this week. It is a stirring tale of the California mining camps based on the Bret Harte story, "Salome Jane's Kiss." Directed by Raol Walsh and filmed almost entirely in the Bret Harte country of the high Sierras, the production is said to have many unique features in addition to its imposing cast.

The story hinges on the tempestuous romance between a madcap mountain girl and a Virginia youth who has trailed his sister's betrayer to the California Sierras soon after the Civil war. The colorful episodes of the Harte tale are presented—the efforts of the girl's other suitors to attract her interest, the meeting of the stranger, the shooting of his enemy, the holdup of a stage coach, the forming of a vigilante posse, the capture of the stranger, the girl's fruitless endeavor to save him from hanging, his escape and the rapier series of crises that form the climax.

Not only do Farrell and Miss Bennett portray very different characterizations from the roles they have heretofore presented on the screen but the realism and color of the period together with the setting of the giant trees of Sequoi National Park are all said to make the picture more of the ordinary.

Bellamy enacts the part of a typical gambler of that era, and with Eugene Palette as a stage driver, Irving Pichel as the "menace," Minna Gombell, Sarah Padden, Willard Robertson, Morgan Wallace and Murdock MacQuarrie in prominent roles, the supporting cast is a notable one. The screen version was written by Doris Anderson and Edwin Justus Mayer.

Thirty-six enthusiastic delegates from the various townships and cities in Isosco county attended the Democratic convention held in this city Thursday forenoon. H. Eugene Hanson of East Tawas acted as chairman and Robert Dahne of Whittemore as clerk.

The principal business of the convention was to elect delegates to the state convention which will be held Friday at Grand Rapids. The following delegates were elected: H. Eugene Hanson, East Tawas; Eugene Bing, Tawas City; H. J. Jacques, Whittemore; James Hull, Oscoda; Charles Van Horn, Tawas township; C. H. Ridgley, Whittemore; P. N. Thornton, Tawas City; F. E. Bernard of Hale.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, that the delegates and citizens attending this Democratic convention stand with bowed heads for one minute in silent prayer for the safety of our President-elect, Franklin D. Roosevelt, his life having been threatened by a fanatic. He escaped injury, when he paused for a speech to be delivered at Bay Front Park, Florida during a public reception; and be it further

Resolved, that the President-elect be spared to the people of these United States that he may guide our destinies during his tenure of office, without harm or injury, that he may use his unlimited knowledge of national affairs to assist in the recovery of business in every manner possible, to relieve our present chaotic condition; be it further

Resolved, that the would-be assassin be punished to the full extent of the law for his cowardly act, in trying to take the life of the President-elect and injuring other persons seriously, and may this prayer be answered with continued safety for President Elect Roosevelt and the speedy recovery of those injured by gun shots; be it further

Resolved that we send our delegates to the state convention at Grand Rapids on the 24th of this month, uninstructed and act in harmony with the dictates of their own conscience.

Resolved further that we hope and trust for a good active representation to all meetings in our county.

RUTH CHATTERTON IN MOST DRAMATIC FILM

One of the most dramatic court scenes ever showed upon the screen takes place in the First National picture, "Frisco Jenny," which is showing at the Family Theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 21, 22 and 23.

Here it is that Ruth Chatterton, as "Frisco Jenny," is pilloried on the stand by her own son, who is ignorant of the fact that she is his mother. She sits silent as he accuses her of being the evil genius of the Barbary Coast, notorious for its evil dives and its illicit traffic in women. Nor does she open her lips when she is convicted of murder and sentenced to be hanged, for, paragon of evil that she is, mother love withholds her from making known the facts she knows will destroy him.

Ruth Chatterton's role in "Frisco Jenny" is by far the most emotional one she has had since Madame X. The picture affords her a rare opportunity to display that great histrionic ability which has elevated her to her present high estate.

This is a stirring tale of San Francisco's water front along the Embarcadero in the days when temples of pleasure and gambling dens flourished unmolested in all their gilded evil.

Our sincere appreciation is extended to our many friends and neighbors for their manifest sympathy and assistance during the long illness and recent bereavement of our dear wife and mother.

Fred Woyahn and family.

WINTER RELIEF WORK SUSPENDED ON HURON NATIONAL FOREST

Winter relief work which has been conducted since the middle of November has recently been suspended, according to G. K. Fenger, Forest Supervisor, because the funds provided for this purpose have been exhausted. The work was confined to the reduction of fire hazards along roads and firelines, through the removal and disposal of all dead material.

Prior to initiating the work, conferences were held with the respective county officials, and the purposes and intent of the work were explained. It was the opinion that maximum relief would be secured if the men required could be selected from those who needed it the most and required help to support their families.

This plan worked out very well, indeed, although it was found that neither the organization nor the funds were adequate to make it possible to employ all who applied for work. In a great many instances the county or welfare board provided transportation for men who did not have these facilities. The men worked three days per week except those working out of the Bryant camp where the government provided meals and lodgings and smaller wage in return for thirty hours work per week.

A total of 3539 man days labor was provided and in return 192 miles of firelines firebreaks, and roads were cleaned up. The cleanup of this material was of immense benefit not alone in reducing the fire hazard but it also made a place from which a much more effective stand can be taken by firefighters should this prove necessary.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation for the many acts of kindness extended to us during our recent bereavement. We also wish to thank Mr. Archie Colby and Mr. Charles Colby for the singing, also those who gave flowers and those who furnished cars.

NO PENALTY ON ELECTRIC LIGHT BILLS

JOHN BARRYMORE AND BILLIE BURKE IN BIG HIT

"Bill of Divorcement," playing at The Family Theatre, East Tawas on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Feb. 18, 19 and 20 was selected in the National Film poll as one of the greatest pictures of the season.

This picture makes history. No since Greta Garbo first flashed before screen audiences in "The Torrent" has anything happened like this Katharine Hepburn. This girl from the New York stage is not only a fine actress—she is a great personality. Not beautiful, measured by Hollywood's standards, she has something more than beauty—that thing, whatever it is, that makes the great great.

In giving her first mention, we do not mean to take the glory from John Barrymore who gives the greatest performance of his life. Billy Burke, who plays his wife, reaches dramatic heights of which you hardly would think her capable. David Manners and Paul Cavanaugh are excellent.

No human being can sit unmoved in the tidal sweep of this heart-pounding drama, magnificently played by these distinguished stars. Be sure you see this picture.

Unfortunately one couple was unable to play at the last session, due to there being an odd number of couples present. This was the first evening on which an odd number had been present and therefore the first time a penalty has been invoked for being late. Contestants who are unable to play are given a standing of two rubbers won and two lost for the evening which they have an option of either including or not including provided that they actually play nine evenings. If they only play eight evenings they must accept the standing of two won and two lost for the evening on which they were unable to play because of being the odd couple and these are included in the computation of their final percentage standing.

GRAPHIC GOLF

PUTTING SUGGESTIONS

TALES of Walter Travis' ability with a putter have become legendary. His methods, however, are as efficacious today as then. In lining up the putt Travis invariably picked out a spot in front of the ball in line with the hole, over which to putt. He would then relegate this point to his subconscious mind and promptly devote his attention to stroking the ball with the necessary power to reach the hole. Travis' actual stroke in putting showed his painstaking attention to the game. He used to imagine he was driving a tack into the ball on each stroke, a process calling for extreme accuracy. The blow, in effect not unlike the blow of a hammer, would follow through on line.

His judgment on greens was most uncanny. On the sloping greens, with the hole placed on the incline, he would gauge the borrow accurately. Here a fast ball was needed in preference to a slow putt, for the latter was certain to be more affected by the tilt and harder to judge. Hit straight at the cup with little momentum, it was almost certain to roll off line downhill.

Cambrie Tea.

What memories it brings of childhood! Put a loaf of sugar in the bottom of the cup, fill one-third full of hot cream, let stand one minute and add water directly from the tea kettle. Children enjoy this when their elders have their coffee. It is also good for those who like a hot drink and cannot take tea or coffee.

Ginger Ale Julep.

Put one and one-half cupfuls of sugar into a pitcher, add the strained juice of six large lemons, stir until the sugar is dissolved. Chill and turn into a fancy pitcher one-fourth filled with ice, shake vigorously, add one-half dozen sprigs of fresh bruised mint, now add two pint bottles of ginger ale and pour into glasses that have two tablespoonfuls of cracked ice. Garnish with fresh mint, frosted by dipping into powdered sugar. Serve at once.

Chocolate as well as cocoa should be cooked five minutes in water before the milk or cream is added, otherwise it is not palatable.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Cynthia Ann Parker

WHEN her relatives finally found her, and restored her to the birthright which was hers as a white woman of good family, Cynthia Ann Parker looked like an Indian, her skin burned brown under the hot sun of the western plains, her clothing a dirty blanket and worn moccasins, and she acted like one, meeting every advance with the sullen silence characteristic of her adopted people. She was one of the few examples in our history of a white woman gone completely Indian.

Here was a strange story. The Parkers came pioneering into Texas between 1835 and 1840, when Texas had just wrested independence from Mexico, and bands of hostile Indians and marauding Mexicans still roamed the sparsely settled plains. They settled near the present site of Groesbeck. Only a little later, during an attack by the Comanche Indians, Cynthia Ann and her small brother were captured and carried away.

Years passed before the whites learned of the fate of the little girl. Then a band of hunters, visiting the camp of the Comanches, now turned friendly, saw her there, grown to young womanhood. They finally persuaded the red men to allow them to talk with her. But it was an unsatisfactory interview. The girl refused to speak, maintaining a stolid silence and an expressionless face.

More years went by. The white girl was married, after the Indian custom, to a brave named Peta Nocona, and bore him a son, destined to become known throughout the nation as Quannah Parker, chief of the Comanches, one of the most noble and famous of the red men.

When Texas achieved statehood, military force was organized to clear her borders of the menacing red men. During an expedition led against the Comanches by Capt. L. S. Ross, Peta Nocona was killed and Cynthia Ann captured, carried away from her son and her red friends and restored to the whites. Still her face was an impenetrable mask. She seemed to have no recollection of her own language or people. Finally Captain Ross resorted to the happy device of relating to her, detail by detail, but as if it had happened to someone else, the story of her own childhood. When he told of the Indian raid and kidnapping, her face at last lit with recognition. Pointing a grimy finger at herself she said, "Me Cynthia Ann!"

At Austin, Texas, she was placed in the home of a brother. But she was here as restless as if in actual captivity, and only a few years later she died.

Day Dawn

AN IDYLL of the American forests is the story of Thu-Ren-Se-Ra. Day Dawn, a lovely Indian maiden who gave her life to save that of an unworthy and perfidious lover.

During the French and Indian wars the friendship of the American Indians was assiduously courted by both the French and the colonists. Colonel Schuyler with rare tact and judgment had succeeded in forming an alliance for the colonies with the most powerful Eastern tribes. The friendship between the white man and his red confederates had reached such success that the great chief of the Iroquois had accompanied the colonel on a trip to England, and there been highly honored and loaded by the ladies of the court with presents for his daughter, Day Dawn.

To undermine this alliance and secure for themselves the loyalty of the fighting red men, the French bent their efforts. Spies were dispatched in every direction from Quebec; Father LeMoine, a Jesuit priest, succeeded in winning over the Onandagas. And at length the French laid crafty plans to win also the powerful Iroquois.

Day Dawn was their victim; a dandy of Parisian court, DuValle by name, was their tool. DuValle contrived a meeting with Day Dawn in the forests, wooed her with gifts of game and wild flowers. And beautiful Day Dawn, slipping away from her tribe for secret meetings with him, lost her heart completely to this elegant Frenchman with the polished, foreign manners.

And then one night, when the moon was turning the Hudson to silver and the shadows along shore to black and silver bowers, a faithful friend came running down from the village to warn the lovers that Day Dawn's absence had been discovered and the braves of the tribe were almost upon them. DuValle jumped into his canoe, while Day Dawn untied it, and slipped away into the shadows under the river bank. From a covert near the shore the girl watched the pursuing braves arrive, heard them parley and then decide that DuValle had escaped and might be intercepted if they followed the bank up the river. If they did that, she knew, her lover was lost. Quickly she took up his cloak, still lying in the thicket, put on her head his discarded hat, and stepped out of her concealment, her figure black against the moonlight and a sure target. Her kinsmen let fly their arrows.

Thus Day Dawn unwittingly saved, not so much the life of a worthless lover, but an enemy of the American colonies.

POULTRY

POOR FEEDING CUTS PROFIT ON POULTRY

Balanced Ration Necessary, Expert Advises.

Instead of substituting, there has been considerable subtracting done in feeding poultry, and as a consequence, some poultrymen are falling to get the income they should get from their flocks.

Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department at North Carolina state college, says considering its great importance, feeds and feeding for poultry in generally less understood than any other phase of the industry. This lack of information is shown especially when an attempt is made to substitute certain feeds on hand at home for those which should be purchased or exchanged.

Mr. Dearstyne declares that poultry requires a balanced ration containing protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins in an available form. These should be given in the quantity and of the quality to maintain the bodily vigor of the fowls and permit them to lay according to their highest ability. It is important to give the birds plenty of water because the fowl's body is 55 per cent water and the egg is over 65 per cent water.

Animal proteins as supplied by fish meal, meat meal or milk products are also necessary. It is not enough to rely on the vegetable proteins supplied in certain of the grain feeds.

The fats supplied by grain feed are usually enough for poultry but minerals should be supplied by bone meal, oyster shell, limestone, rock phosphate and salt. Mineral deficiencies in the ration are common.

More Encouragement for Profit in Poultry Game

According to figures issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, the number of hens and pullets in farm flocks is from 4 to 5 per cent greater than one year ago. It is thought that egg production may not be larger for some time to come. The reason given for this estimate is the higher percentage of late hatched pullets, and also because it is doubtful whether this winter will be as mild as that of a year ago.

Aside from this, the storage situation is more favorable. Holdings of case eggs on September 1 were 34 per cent below those on the corresponding date last year, and 37 per cent below the average of the last five years. With this reduction in storage supplies, even if current production should prove larger than last year, there would still be a considerably smaller supply of eggs available for consumption during the next few months.

Egg shipments from the Pacific coast have been light for some time, and may decrease still further, because of a 13 per cent estimated decrease of chicks raised last spring and summer. The low price of feed will also be an important factor in bringing profitable returns from all flocks which are well bred and well fed.—Wallace's Farmer.

Hens That Do Not Lay Should Be Culled Out

If one could be certain that he has hens and pullets in his flock that would not lay any eggs until next spring he would not want to feed them all winter.

One way of reducing the feed cost of producing eggs is to cull out undesirable birds at intervals frequent enough to prevent their getting very much feed without paying for it. Among the laying flock there are hens of this class such as those that loafed through the summer, laying too few eggs to be profitable. There may also be diseased hens or those out of condition that should not be carried any longer. Among the pullet flock may be poorly developed, diseased, or otherwise unfit birds that should come out. It is not quite fair, nor good business, for a good hen to pay for the feed eaten by a cull.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Feed Hens Freely

If your poultry flock is not producing as efficiently as you know it should be, check up on the available feeding and watering space. See that there is plenty of room for all the birds to eat freely and see further that they are given a good balanced ration which will stimulate and maintain egg production. Poorly-fed birds will not be good producers. Hens will pay a better price for feed than any other kind of animals produced on the farm.—Prairie Farmer.

Poultry Must Be Meaty

Trying to raise poultry meat with insufficient feed has been a great disappointment to some beginners, says the Indiana Farmer's Guide. Wholesale buyers quickly run their fingers down the breast bones of the birds they buy. Roasters with razor breasts are quickly classed as No. 2 birds and buyers do not want them. At least the price per pound to the producer is too low to show anything but a loss. Thus there is proof that it pays to raise No. 1 birds.

To make Children

EAT

Don't force children to eat! The girl or boy who has no appetite has stasis—which means the child is sluggish. But cathartics have caused more constipation than they ever cured! The "California treatment" is best—just pure syrup of figs. Try this for a few days, then see how eagerly your youngster will eat.

Stimulate the colon and that child with a finicky appetite will devour everything set before him. Here's the simple treatment that does more for babies or older children than all the diets, fad foods, or tonics.

Nature has provided the "medicine" you'll need to stir your child's colon muscles into proper action. California syrup of figs. Pure, delicious, harmless. It acts on the lower colon—where the trouble is. It has no ill effects on the intestines.

Begin tonight, with this marvelous "California treatment." Any druggist has California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Use enough the first time to cleanse the clogged colon of every bit of poison and hard waste. Then just a little twice a week until the child's appetite, color, weight and spirits tell you the stasis is gone. Whenever a cold or other upset clogs the system again, use this natural vegetable laxative instead of drastic drugs.

WARNING! There are dealers who practice substitution. Be sure to protect your child by looking for the name CALIFORNIA on the bottle.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER RABBIT NEARLY FALLS INTO THE PIT

OF COURSE Peter Rabbit had no business in Farmer Brown's garden. He knew it. He knew that the delicious plants growing there were not meant for him. For a long, long time after he had been made so ill by eating cabbage leaves on which poison had been put to kill bugs he had kept away from that tempting garden. In fact, for some time he hadn't wanted to go near it. But time changes one's feelings just as it changes everything else. It was so with Peter. It was so long since he had been so ill that he had half forgotten how terribly he had felt.

So sometimes when he passed that garden on his way to the Old Orchard he would pause and stare at it longingly. He would sit up and work his wabbling little nose, and the delicious odors which tickled it would make his mouth water so that sometimes he would have to run his very hardest to keep from yielding to the temptation to visit that garden and try some of those plants growing there.

As time went on he got in the habit of sitting a little longer each night to stare through the fence into the garden and to sniff the delicious smells. Each night it was a little harder to go on. The longer he looked and the more he smelled the less danger there seemed. Until he had eaten that poison, which hadn't been meant for him at all, no harm had ever come to him in that garden.

"I know enough now," thought Peter, "not to eat poisoned leaves. It is safe, perfectly safe, for me to go there. I wouldn't eat a thing. I just want to see what it is like over there, and if things have changed much since I was there."

"Fie, Peter, fie!" whispered a small voice inside. "You know very well that you are safer outside that garden. You know you couldn't resist stuffing yourself with the things growing there."

"I could, too!" protested Peter. "I could go all through that garden and not taste a single thing."

"You couldn't do anything of the kind. You know you couldn't. Better keep out of temptation. If I were you I wouldn't ever come so near the garden," whispered the small voice.

Peter scowled. He didn't like that small voice. It was forever telling him not to do things that he very much wanted to do. "I'm going over there just once, so there!" declared Peter.

"If you go once and nothing happens you'll go every night, and then something may happen. Keep away," warned the little voice.

But Peter tried not to hear that small voice. He hopped a few steps nearer the fence on the edge of the garden. He looked and listened. It was very, very quiet over in there. Peter hopped a few steps nearer. "I'll just stick my head inside and see how it looks," said he to himself, "then I'll go on to the Old Orchard."

So Peter poked his head through an opening in the fence. My, how good it did smell in there! Peter's wabbling little nose wobbled faster than ever. "Cabbages!" muttered Peter. "And beets! Turnips, as I live! Oh, my goodness, I certainly smell carrots!"

Peter really didn't know just when his body did follow his head through that opening in the fence. But it did. For here he was right in the middle of Farmer Brown's garden. My, how things had grown since he had been there! He hopped this way and he hopped that way. He took a nip here and a bite there. The little voice inside was still now. It had given up.

So presently Peter came to the far corner where Farmer Brown's boy had dug that deep pit. Peter stared at the great pile of sand on one side. He didn't see the great hole; all he saw was the pile of sand. "Now what can that be for?" thought Peter, and went a little nearer. At first he was suspicious of it. After a little he made up his mind that it was perfectly harmless. It was nothing but a pile of sand. He would climb up to the top. It would be a splendid place from which to look all over the garden.

Up Peter scrambled and sat down on the very top. Then for the first time he saw the black pit below him. He stared down into it wondering what it could be for. Suddenly the sand under him began to slide. Hastily Peter turned to get back. The sand slid faster and Peter felt himself slipping down, down toward that black pit. With all his might he scrambled up, for he was right on the very edge of that pit. It was a narrow escape, a very narrow escape.

ONLY ALONE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WE SEEK so much for sympathy. And some receive—yet presently we find that we must take our cares. Our sudden griefs, our own affairs, Some other place a bit apart, Some sanctuary of the heart, Some private place to men unknown. And fight the battle out alone.

Only alone we dare to tell Ourselves the truth, and measure well The reason and the circumstance— For few misfortunes come by chance Only alone we dare to name The culprit, if ourselves to blame, Or teach our better selves to plead Forgiveness for another's deed.

We try our cases in the court Of friends, and there the truth discloses tort, But when we stand before the bar Of conscience, speak things as they are.

oft sympathy is hard to find, Or, found, is often far too kind, The care is ours, the cure our own, And we shall find it, but alone.

HOT AND COLD BEVERAGES

THE making of a good cup of tea, which is such a simple and easy thing to do, is often spoiled by standing. The best pot for tea is of earthen-ware. It should be scalded and hot and when the tea (a teaspoonful for each person) is put into the hot pot, pour freshly boiled water over it and allow it to stand three to five minutes to draw, then serve at once. For those who do not care for the tea so strong the freshly boiled water should be provided.

All sorts of trimmings are used these days for the tea. Jams, citrus fruits, marmalades and preserves such as pineapple, a teaspoonful dropped into the cup to suit the taste of those who like something different than lemon, cream and sugar.

One may add a bit of grated lemon peel or orange peel to the tea in the pot, giving a very distinctive flavor.

When making tea for a large company it is a good plan to put it into a cheese-cloth bag, then it may be re-

The Problem of the Railroads

THE difficulty of solving the railroad problem has been greatly increased by the development of competing means of transportation by highway, waterway and airway, which are aided by subsidies by our national and state governments, and by exemption from such regulation as is applied to the railroads. The importance of the railroads to the economic welfare of the country is such that constructive efforts to solve the problem must be made at once, confronted as we are by evidence of the effects produced upon the entire industry and commerce of the country by the decline in railroad earnings.

THE SERVICE OF THE RAILWAYS IS INDISPENSABLE FOR HANDLING THE GREAT BULK OF OUR COMMERCE.

HERE are the facts as to the decline in railway earnings during this depression. The gross earnings in 1929 were $6,360,000,000 while in 1932 they will approximate only $3,200,000,000. Railroad operating expenses are 45 per cent less than they were in 1929, a decline of $2,052,000,000. This was effected by the reduction in the number of employees by about 620,000 and in the total wages paid them about $1,325,000,000. Purchases of fuel, materials and equipment have been cut about $1,430,000,000. The total reduction in wages paid, and purchases, exceeds $2,750,000,000.

THE recovery of the railways is essential to the recovery of national prosperity and they cannot recover under government policies that promote every kind of competition with them and at the same time impose every kind of restriction upon the steam lines to prevent them from meeting this competition.

EXPERIENCE AND COMMON SENSE DICTATE THAT EQUALIZATION OF TAXATION AND EQUITABLE REGULATION ARE NEEDED IN ALL BRANCHES OF TRANSPORTATION.

IMMEDIATE, vigorous action by national, state and local executives and legislators is required. They alone have the opportunity and the power to enact and enforce the remedial legislation on taxation and regulation so necessary in this extreme exigency.

THROUGH forthright action the tide can be turned, and by bringing back the railroads' purchasing power, and by their larger employment of labor, all industry will be quickened simultaneously. Every man, woman and child in the country would be benefited by this correction of basic causes.

Blemishes on Face and Shoulders Almost a Year

Cuticura Healed

"For almost a year I was troubled with blemishes that took the form of pimples and blackheads. My face and shoulders were the affected parts. The pimples were large and red and my shoulders became sore from the rubbing of my shoulder straps. The pimples itched and after scratching them they festered and were so sore that I could not sleep.

"People suggested many remedies; I tried all but to no avail. Cuticura Soap and Ointment were suggested and I was completely healed, after using three cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Miss Helen Mann, 7515 Claridge St., Phila., Pa., July 21, 1932.

Bronchial Troubles Need Creomulsion

Bronchial troubles may lead to something serious. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

STIRS MEMORY OF OLD SCHOOL DAYS

Tingle in the Recollection of McGuffey's Readers

Glimpsing through the State Register for 1868 the other day we came across an item which recorded the adoption of the McGuffey Readers in the Springfield public schools. As we recall it, these famous readers were retained in the schools here until the late nineties and possibly a few years later. In any event, they are held in affectionate memory by whole generations of former school children, although the younger element today knows almost nothing about them, due to the vast changes which have occurred in the system of elementary education in the last quarter century.

Now, we read, Dr. William Holmes McGuffey, the noted American educator who was the author of this famous series, is to have a monument at Miami university, where a number of the books were prepared. Lorado Taft has been chosen as the sculptor of the proposed bust of Doctor McGuffey, the design for which includes a group of typical school children of the earlier period, reading from a book, at the foot of the supporting column. It is said that a subscription campaign for this statue has been in progress for some time.

The first McGuffey Readers made their appearance in 1836, a series of six being published a few years later. They were revised five times, the last revision being copyrighted in 1901. Up until a few years ago they were still being sold in certain sections of the country, but the main period of their popular use extended from the time of Martin Van Buren down to the Theodore Roosevelt administration. In that 60-year period they attained sales in this country exceeded only by the Bible. One estimate was that 150,000,000 had been sold since they became standard readers in the school.

McGuffey's Readers went far beyond the teaching of children to read. They incultured in pleasant fashion a wide variety of lessons in character building—relating to piety, obedience, truthfulness, industry, kindness, integrity, and general excellence of deportment. Through the medium of stories, illustrated with woodcuts, the virtues of right thoughts and right living were filtered into the minds of the younger hopefuls, with a lasting influence for good.

In the later readers, for older pupils, the moralizing was less evident. The object was to provide good reading matter and to elevate reading as an art.—Illinois State Register.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs. At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

"It's an abandoned mine; abandoned a long time ago, at that. As to where it belongs on the map, I don't know. You won't be afraid to stay alone for a few minutes, will you? I'm going to climb up and see where this bucket leads to. Just stay where you are until you hear me lift the bucket and drop it. Then climb in and shake the rope when you are ready for me to haul you up. Will you do that?"

"Yes," she agreed; and with that he laid hold of the rope and began to climb up.

When he had wriggled out at the top of the shaft and found, by groping around, that it was capped with a wooden windlass, he was willing to rest for a few seconds and catch his breath before giving Betty the agreed-upon signal.

At once he was answered and he began to wind. In a few minutes he had drawn the bucket and its precious freight out upon the windlass platform.

When the candle was relighted it became apparent that they had ascended to what seemed to be nothing more than an upper layer of the rabbit warren of bewildering passages and drifts.

"Haven't you any idea where we are?" Betty asked.

"Wait a bit," said Landis; and then, "I've got it! Hasn't Bert Canby told you about his mine—the Quavapai?"

"Yes."

"Well, there are two Quavapais; the new one that is being worked now, and a much older one," and he repeated for her Starbuck's account of the ancient workings. "That is about where we are," he concluded; "buried somewhere in those old workings. We'll keep on going while the candle lasts. There must be some connection between these old workings and the new. You're not too tired to tramp, are you?"

"I'm not tired at all, now. And we must get out if we can. We haven't been kidnapped and shut up in here for nothing."

"That was the beginning of a long period of fruitless wanderings in a maze that seemed endless.

It was not until their candle had dwindled to a half-inch that the really desperate character of their situation gripped Landis. With the light gone they would be utterly helpless.

"We are nearly at the end of things, Betty," he said soberly. "You see how much there is left of the candle. After it is gone we'll be just buried alive."

"I know; but I'm not afraid, Owen. It—it will be starvation, won't it? I don't want to die, but I'm not afraid. Let's sit here on this pile of rock and face it the best we can."

For a little while they sat in silence. When he spoke it was to say, "I'm to blame for whatever happens to you, Betty. If I hadn't brought you along—the devils, whoever they are, who kidnaped you, wouldn't have left you to starve at the bottom of that shaft."

"Maybe not. But you mustn't think of that now. You did what you thought was best; we both did. Do you think they've got Wally, too?"

"I'm afraid they have."

"If he is gone, there is nobody to miss us; not very soon, anyhow. The Stillings will think I was invited to stay overnight with the Smiths; and the people at the hotel won't miss you, will they?"

"No, I suppose not."

As he spoke, the remaining bit of candle wick fell over, to burn flickeringly for a few seconds before it went out.

After a moment in the Stygian darkness that followed the extinguishing of the candle, Betty said wearily, "I'm awfully tired; aren't you, Owen?"

"No; not very tired. But I know you must be. Put your head on my shoulder and go to sleep, if you can."

She did it, and after a little while he knew from her regular breathing that she had really fallen asleep. Before long he felt that he, too, was succumbing; and after a few efforts to fight off the lethargy of fatigue, his eyes closed in spite of his resolve, and he slept.

When he awoke Betty was still sleeping, with her head on his shoulder, and, sharp as was his desire to move and stretch and get the stiffness out of his muscles, he was unwilling to disturb her.

It was while he was sitting with wide-open eyes staring into the darkness that he saw, or thought he saw, a faint thinning of the darkness at a point directly opposite. He stared again and saw nothing. Then, in a flash, the faint thinning of the blackness came again, and his start at this repetition of the phenomenon awoke Betty.

"What is it?" she asked.

"I don't know. Look straight ahead; do you see anything?"

"Why—why, yes; it's light! Is someone coming for us?"

He rose stiffly and lifted her to her feet. "We'll see," he said, but he did not say it hopefully.

What they saw, when they crossed to the mouth of one of the passages leading out of the space where they had slept, was a thing that Landis was not remotely expecting to see. The passage mouth was the entrance to a long, gently inclined tunnel, at the lower extremity of which was a faintly glowing electric light.

"What does that mean?" Betty asked, whispering as if she were afraid the miraculous light might disappear if she spoke above her breath.

"It means that my guess was right. We've been lost in the old workings of the Quavapai, and that light is in one of the new workings!"

"Now that we know where we are, we can get out, can't we?"

"We can try mighty hard, anyway. We'll go down and see what's at the bottom of this rathole."

Approaching the lower end of the inclined passage, they could see that the light bulb was suspended from the roof of a much larger drift, through which ran a miniature railroad track. Landis asked Betty to stay behind in concealment while he went on to investigate. She consented, merely urging him to be careful.

"Don't worry about me; I'll hurry back after I find out whereabouts we are, and the way out."

Reaching the larger tunnel he found it empty. Though the working tunnel was lighted, it was driven on a curve which limited the view in either direction.

Since there was nothing to determine a choice, Landis turned to the left. Before he had gone very far he heard the rattle of a car on the rails behind him and hastily crowded himself into a niche in the tunnel wall. When the car came in sight he saw that it was pushed by a single man. A slight upgrade in the drift made the man put his head down and brace to his work, so he saw nothing as he passed Landis' hiding place.

Watching the car, Landis had a curious shock when, just before it disappeared, the squeaky rumbling of the wheels stopped abruptly. The car moved as silently as if the wheels and the rails upon which they were running were shod with velvet.

Convinced instantly that there could be but one reason for the sudden silence, Landis crept forward. The tunnel straightened itself and the scene he was more than half expecting to see was revealed.

In the tunnel heading a number of men were at work; two of them manipulating two big air drills which were visibly churning away at the rock face of the heading. But instead of the raucous clamor which this should have raised there was a silence as profound as that of the grave!

Fully aware now of the use to which his stolen invention was being put, Landis made a quick search for the hiding place of the black box. He had little difficulty in discovering it. It was half concealed in a shelf-like niche of the tunnel wall close at hand, the electric current for its operation being taken from the light wires overhead.

Landis saw that his time for action was short. In a few minutes, or perhaps seconds, the car would be coming out. Reaching up quickly, he opened a slide in the black box and did that which was needful to paralyze its delicate and intricate mechanism. Then, as the deafening, ear-splitting clamor of the chattering drills burst out in the heading, he leaped for a branching side drift.

The effect of the suddenly released din upon the men in the heading was astonishing. They had evidently become so well used to the abnormal conditions that the sudden resumption of the natural order of things precipitated a wild panic. While two of the men hastened to shut off the air pressure from the drills, the remainder came stumbling out, some with their fingers in their ears, and so on out of the picture.

A moment later the two who had run to stop the drills came along, but they were not hurrying. When they came under the nearest light bulb Landis recognized them at once as two of the three he and Markham had seen in the lobby at the Copah hotel, two of the trio who had driven westward from Copah to disappear so unaccountably and mysteriously.

"What the h—l do you suppose went wrong with the machine?" one was saying as they passed.

"It got me for a second," said the other. "I wasn't looking for it. Think it gave the snap away?"

"If it did, there'll be merry h—l to pay. The captain'll want to kill somebody. Today is the day when the big deal is to be pulled off."

This was all that Landis heard; and when he looked out he saw that they had taken the black box from its niche and were trying to make it function. Presently one said, "It's no good; she's gone out blink; burnt herself up inside somehow, I guess." Then Landis saw him open the slide in the side of the box and direct the beam of a pocket flash into the interior; saw him do this and heard his low whistle punctuated by the single word, "H—l!"

"What for?" queried his companion.

"Smashed all to the devil," said the investigator, replacing the box on its shelf.

"Say! Didn't the captain give orders that one of us was to keep a strict watch on that box every minute of the day or night it was in here? And that isn't the worst of it. Do you know who smashed it? If you don't, I do—d—d well! It was the fellow who made it—the fellow we locked up in the old Indian mine last night!"

"You're crazy. That chute is a good two miles from the place where we locked that fellow up; and, allowing that he had a light—which he didn't—he'd get lost a million times before he could find the way over here."

"I don't care. He's the only—"

There were two empty dynamite boxes lying beside the railroad track, and Landis, looking on and listening in his covert, saw one of the men suddenly push the speaker to a seat on one of them, planting himself quickly on the other, and saying as he did so, "Cut out the chin music! Here comes the captain with his goldfishes! We want to let him find us keeping watch on that box!"

Landis craned his neck to enable him to see farther down the tunnel. A group of four men was approaching, the one in the lead carrying a flashlight. As the four passed he saw that the light carrier was Canby; but the three men who were picking their way in Canby's wake were strangers.

As the four came up, Canby stopped and spoke to one of the workmen.

"Air quit on you, did it, Jim? It's all right, I was just about to send in to tell you to knock off a bit until I could bring these gentlemen in and show them what we've got."

Landis reasoned instantly that this was said for the benefit of the three strangers. Canby must have learned from the panic-stricken miners the true cause for the stoppage.

"Of course, you can't tell much about a gold mine by merely looking at it," Landis heard the speaker say to the three as they stood in the heading. "The assays tell the true story of the values, and, as you know, we have given your examiners a free rein."

"You have done everything you agreed to," said one of the three. "There is only one thing that puzzles us a bit; and that is, why you are willing to let go of so good a thing as this mine seems to be."

Canby laughed easily.

"I can give you the reason in four words, Mr. Fleming; I'm no mining man. A year ago I thought I was, and I let a bunch of scamps stick me for the old Quavapai. I found out pretty soon that I'd been 'done', but the extent of the old workings was sufficient proof that the mine had once been a producer. So I sent some good money after the bad, developing one of the old veins. Here is the result; but, good as it is, it hasn't made a mining man out of me, my interests now are all in the East, and I can't ride two horses at once."

There was more talk. After a time one of the three said, "Well, I guess we have seen all we need to, and I think we are pretty well satisfied. I guess we may as well adjourn to Brewster and have our lawyers draw up the papers. What do you say Fleming, and you, Cantrell?"

There was no dissenting voice, and a moment later the group of four was passing the mouth of the shallow drift on its way out.

For perhaps five minutes after the sound of the footsteps of the retreating quartette had died away in the distant reaches of the tunnel, the two men who were barring the way for Landis made no move, and his impatience to get back to Betty became a maddening obsession. Then one got upon his feet and began where he had left off when the interruption had come.

"I'm telling you that the fellow we locked up—the fellow that made that back-action loud-speaker over there—is the one that turned h—l loose on us a little while ago, and I'll make a ten-to-one bet he's hiding in that old chute right now. Let's go back and get him."

Then to Landis came the thought of what they would find in the inclined chute—Betty, waiting bewildered and dismayed. His groping hand reached backward and fell upon a miner's shovel, and with only this for a weapon he leaped up and darted out Berserk-like, to fall upon the retreating pair.

Fortunately for him the two men had their backs turned when he made his silent charge upon them, and before they heard him he had hit one a smashing blow over the head with his shovel, knocking him across the rails of the mine track. But before he could swing the shovel a second time, the other man had whirled, drawn his Colt and fired. It was merely a lucky chance that the heavy bullet struck the shovel blade and glanced aside to flatten harmlessly against the tunnel wall, but the chance sufficed. Before he could squeeze the trigger again, Landis was upon him, flailing at him with the shovel, mad with the madness that makes the fighting maniac invincible.

Driven back by the furious attack the man tried to cover his face. A chopping blow of the shovel made him drop his pistol. At this he sought to close with the maniac, but Landis lowered his clumsy weapon from cutting to thrusting and the sharp blade of the digging tool caught the charging enemy just above the belt. He gave a grunt and bent double over the thrusting shovel, but in falling he got his hands upon his lighter antagonist and dragged him down.

Dropping the shovel, Landis tore fiercely at the gripping hands. Like grim death his opponent held on, struggling desperately for the breath, the savage stomach thrust had deprived him of it. It came at last, and when it did, Landis knew that the fight was lost; the man had him down, while he groped with the other hand for the dropped pistol.

The body lay close to the rows of corn, and the sheriff was bending over it. Then he straightened up slowly and turned to Will Granger, the older of the murdered man's two nephews.

"You and Ruth and Tom Hathaway druv to church together in the car."

"Yes."

"You left your brother, Dan'l, and your uncle at home here—arguin'."

"They stayed home. Yes."

"Arguin'!" the sheriff insisted. "That can't be covered up, Will. Plenty people heard 'em, hot at it, as they went by to church. The winders was open."

"Yes, they was arguin'."

"And you three come home from church separate."

"Yes. Separate."

For the first time, the sheriff looked directly at Daniel. "And how about you, Dan?"

"We—got through arguin'; and I went for a walk in the woods."

The sheriff studied the lowered stubborn face of the twenty-year-old boy. Then he made a little gesture of distressed helplessness and began to lead the way toward the open shed door.

Once inside, the sheriff crossed the uneven plank floor to a broad workbench which ran along one side. Over part of the rough surface of the bench, smooth gray cardboard had been tacked. Cartridge boxes, powder cans, small tools, and a set of scales were neatly arranged on this clean surface. On two wooden pegs above the bench rested a Winchester repeating rifle.

From his pocket the sheriff drew an empty brass shell. "Taking a loaded cartridge from the nearest box, he compared the two. He did not make the obvious statement that the two matched; or trouble to remind the others that rifle, cartridges, and the reloading paraphernalia belonged to Daniel.

Instead he turned to Tom Hathaway, the tall spare elderly hired man. "I reckon you knew the old miser, Tom, jest about as well as anybody livin'."

"I reckon," the other agreed.

"You was workin' for him even before the boys' mother died, and they come to live with him."

"To live—on his charity," the other man amended. "As he always took pains to remind 'em."

"I guess there ain't hardly been one cussed meanness he's put on 'em you ain't know'd of, and tried to help 'em bear."

"I tried to help the boys just so far as I could, sheriff," was the calm reply.

"I tried to show 'em the way of patience," Tom went on. "Especially Dan and Ruth; after they'd fell in love, and was crazy to marry."

"And, this morning," the sheriff suddenly broke in, "their uncle told the boys—because of hard times—he'd have to cut down their triffin' pay. When they knew he had plenty, and more, hoarded in the bank. Money they wanted, now. Needed, now. Money Dan had to have, now. Ain't that what his uncle and him was arguin' over?"

"That can't be denied," Tom said at last, and his expression became deeply thoughtful. "My mind was running along them same lines, too, sheriff, as I sat in church. It seemed to me Dan and Ruth ought to have that money, some way. While they could still be young and happy with it."

"Sittin' there, I took a good look back over my own life—which all lies behind me now, any way you figure it, and it come to me how different things would of been, if I'd had any kind of a start. It all come to me plain. I would of married. Ruth might of been the daughter I never had. I'm mighty fond of them two, sheriff. So, all in all, I couldn't hardly blame Dan for the stand he took."

And, once more, the sheriff broke in abruptly. "That's jast the point, Tom. Just what I've been leadin' to. We all know you'd like to ease things for Dan. But here's where you weren't able to help any—and can't. Certain things the law says neither man nor boy can do. About your only way to help Dan now, is counsel him to come along with me, peaceable."

But Tom Hathaway merely looked at the sheriff in feigned surprise. "How so, sheriff?" he asked. "You appear to of forgot somethin'." We all come home from church, separate. We got here, separate. Dan's gun was here, for any of us to use. We all hated the old man, equal. How's the law goin' to tell—which of us to take along?"

"Just this way," the sheriff declared, with forced patience. "The gun's been cleaned and oiled. There'll be no finger prints on it, likely. That, I grant you. But it's a long reach, over the bench, to put it back on them pegs. A man would do it with his right hand. His left, he'd put flat on the bench—palm down—to steady his weight on. His hand would of been oily. There on the cardboard, is a clear fresh print of a man's whole hand."

The tense silence that followed this announcement was short. Dan sent a swift startled glance at his brother. Then he urged sharply: "Quick, Will! Rip that cardboard off. He can't stop us. Chuck it in the stove. Then they never can tell which of us it was."

It was Tom Hathaway, however, who moved, stepping forward to stand beside the sheriff.

"No, Dan," he said. "The sheriff's right enough. Certain things neither boy nor man can do. Not without pay. In' So leave the cardboard be. The print of the hand—is mine."

OLD AND NEW IN FIGHT ON LOCUSTS

And, Strangely, Both Methods Proved Effective.

The ancient and the modern continue to flourish side by side in East Africa, but perhaps no more striking example of that platinudinous observation was ever given than two incidents in Kenya recently.

A few days ago the manager of a large sugar estate near Nairobi rushed into town late in the afternoon and informed the directors that a vast swarm of locusts had settled in the sugar cane.

Thousands of pounds were at stake.

Two directors made a quick, desperate decision. Realizing the only hope was to disturb the swarm they hired a three-engined airplane and hurried in it to the estate.

The machine passed low over the cane, but there was not a single sign of locusts. Turning they flew a few feet from the ground with all three engines roaring.

Suddenly the locusts rose in a dense cloud. The machine shot into the sky and maneuvered over the swarm, which slowly moved to a swamp a few miles away—and the cane was saved.

But listen! A farmer in the Hoey's Bridge district, Kenya, who by desperate efforts had managed to save his maize during the past weeks, while all the crops around him had been cleaned up, was in despair when he saw a large swarm approaching.

Having done everything he could he finally remembered that one of his native employees was suspected of being a witch-doctor.

He invoked this man's help. The wizard, an elderly native clad in skins, and wearing the usual charms associated with the craft, pulled a maize stalk from the center of the healthiest part of the crop and slowly walked round and through the maize, using the stalk as a wand and muttering.

The swarm descended and the farmer cursed the witchdoctor, but the latter said "Wait and see."

The fact is that the swarm destroyed a small patch of inferior maize but left the large area of healthy crop untouched.

The government, of course, does not adopt either method. Its experts put poisoned bran bait on the ground, knowing that the greedy millions of young insects will feed on it.—Montreal Family Herald.

The Junior high grades have been studying perspective, as to its relation with angles and curves, thru the mediums of color chalks, and set-ups. Some excellent results have been shown, as to the pupils' talents along this line.

Seventh And Eighth Grades Effie Prescott and Laurine Frank were absent four days on account of illness and many others were absent on account of the zero weather.

The eighth grade is learning how to work compound interest problems. Those who have had perfect spelling in the eighth grade are: Isabelle Dease and Betty Holland. In the seventh grade the following have had perfect spelling papers: Margaret Fox, Thelma Herman, Grace Hill, Myrtle Leslie, Marguerite McLean, Lyda Moore, Emma Sawyer and Elsie Wojahn.

Our room was invited to the high school assembly Wednesday morning to hear Dr. Henderson talk. We enjoyed it so much that we hope more speakers like him could be obtained.

The eighth grade are writing biographies. They can have their choice about anyone whom they wish to write. Our patriotic program for February will be held Wednesday p. m. on the 22nd. At this time we will honor Lincoln as well as Washington.

Fifth and Sixth Grades Book reports were given Friday by Herbert Cox, Violet Carroll, Eugene Wegner, Vernon Blust, Margaret Davis and Allan Miller.

We had our Valentine box Tuesday afternoon. Norma Musolf and Betty Davis made a very pretty box for our room.

The newly elected officers of our sixth grade geography club are as follows: president, Ruth Clark; vice president, Herbert Cox; secretary, June Brown; assistant secretary, Eugene Wegner.

Dorothy Blust won our spelling contest last week. Charles Cecil was second to the last.

Third And Fourth Grades Lucile Boven and Betty Rapp are the only ones who had perfect spelling papers last week.

Janet McLean, Richard Prescott and Peter Pfeiffer were on the sick list last week.

Primary Room Notes

The cold weather caused many absences in the primary room Friday. Richard Sievert, Ruth Giddings, Vernon Hill and Billy Musolf had perfect spelling lessons all last week.

We enjoyed a Valentine box and party Tuesday afternoon.

During the week Dorothy White, Mary Anne Rollin and Virginia Ristow visited in our room.

We are glad to have Allan Clark back at school again after his long absence due to illness.

Jimmy Prescott is sick this week.

then. Money probably never was so cheap as it is now. There will be plenty of it when the right time comes. Then came the short depression of 1907, followed 13 years later by the unpleasantness of 1920, during which prices went down but wages stayed up.

Everyone of these depressions was preceded by a period of reckless speculation,—just like the last one—and while they were in progress thousands of people completely gave up hope. In duration, they varied from one to five years, but four out of the six ended within two years.

To give you an idea just how desperate the people felt in those days, and how the morale of the whole country was reduced, much as it is today, I want to read to you a few notations of the current expressions of prominent people in those former depressions. Over in England William Pitt commented upon the situation. That was just about the time of our Revolutionary War; you will remember who he was. He said about England, "there is scarcely anything around us but ruin and despair."

Wilberforce, in the early part of the 1800's when they were having a depression in England, said: "I dare not marry the future is so dark and unsettled."

The Duke of Wellington, after he had defeated Napoleon in 1815, and on the eve of his death in 1851, said he thanked God that he would be spared from seeing the consummation of ruin that is gathering about us.

Disraeli, in 1848, the smartest prime minister England ever had, in his judgment, said: "industry, commerce, and agriculture are lost, for them there is no hope."

Lord Shaftesbury, in 1848, said: "Nothing can save the British Empire from shipwreck."

Well, they were all wrong.

Now, let us come back to our own country, and consider for a moment the year 1837 and the depressions I just told you about. Many of our states repudiated their bonds, about nine-tenths of all eastern factories closed their doors completely, and every bank in the United States suspended specie payment.

That has not happened yet.

In the year 1857, the time of the big depression, an article appeared in Harper's Weekly, and I would like to read it to you, to show you how much it seems as though we were talking about the situation today:

"It is a gloomy moment in history. Not in the lifetime of most men who read this paper has there been so much grave and deep apprehension. In our own country there is universal commercial prostration and panic, and thousands of our poorest fellow citizens are turned out against the approaching winter without employment. In France the political cauldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty. Russia hangs as usual like a dark cloud, and silent, upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources and influences of a British empire are sorely tried in coping with the vast and deadly Indian insurrections, and with disturbed relations in China. No man can see the end."

In 1886, was published a report of the United States Commissioner of Labor. This came right out of the cabinet: "The nations of the world have overstocked themselves with machinery and manufacturing plants far in excess of the wants of production." That sounds like technocracy! (Continued Next Week)
