"SHALL WE HAVE A NEW TAX?"

By Rep. Fred C. Holbeck
Shall we have a new tax? If so, what kind of a tax and what shall we do with the money? Perhaps no question is more discussed among members of the legislature at the present time.

Judging from the number of letters I am getting on this subject, the folks at home are doing some thinking along the lines of new taxation and I believe that it is proper that they should know just how their representative in the legislature feels about this matter.

Right on the start, I want to say that I was elected on a platform of "Less Cost and More Efficiency in Government." I intend to stick to this platform and shall insist that before I vote for any new tax, I be shown that the actual cost of government will be lowered. What difference does it make which pocket we pay the bill from? The main thing is, will the total amount we pay be less or more?

Many people have asked me how I stand on a general sales tax and I say without hesitation, that I am against it, unless I can be convinced that for every dollar we collect as a sales tax, we replace a dollar of tax that we are now paying. I may favor a sales tax on certain articles or commodities but I do not believe I ever would be in favor of a general sales tax, because, it gets the money from the people least able to pay.

The oldest and best argument against a sales tax, is that it falls most heavily upon the poor. In the last analysis, the man who pays the tax is the laboring man with a limited income and a large family. The man who has his hands full, rearing and educating a group of children. It taxes the market-basket of the masses and violates completely the basic theory that taxation should fall on those who can best afford to pay. I never will willingly vote for a tax on bread, milk, sugar, butter, meat, or the other bare necessities of life.

The proposed sales tax now before my committee, would be very burdensome on the small retailer. Many of these keep no proper books or accounts, build up no reserve, make no provision for taxes. Wages and bills are paid out of the till. Most of the proprietors of these businesses are living a "hand to mouth" existence and to be confronted with a tax bill each quarter, equal to 3% of their gross sales is equivalent to putting them out of business. I can conceive of no measure that will create greater resentment and dissatisfaction with government among this group of people.

School Notes

High School

School was closed Good Friday. The botany class has been observing an experiment dealing with osmosis. This experiment explains the reason for the entrance of soil water into the roots of plants.

The boys who expect to be in the baseball squad were given a physical examination last Friday. This examination, dealing mainly with the condition of the heart and lungs, is required by the Michigan High School Athletic Association before any candidate is eligible to participate in any form of athletics. There were twenty-five boys who took this examination.

The American history class has been studying the era of Theodore Roosevelt. There certainly are few characters in American history who are as excellent examples of "Americanism." An English visitor once said, "There are two powers in America that fill me with amazement. One of these is the Niagara Falls, and the other is Theodore Roosevelt."

"STATE FAIR" CAST INCLUDES EIGHT STARS

Eight stars, each playing the type of role in which he or she has won the greatest success, bring Phil Strong's popular novel, "State Fair," to the screen of the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Saturday. Sunday and Monday, April 15-16-17. Janet Gaynor, Will Rogers, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory are the stars of the Fox production.

Miss Gaynor and Ayres are the lovers of a romance between a little farm girl and a dashing newspaper reporter, and Miss Eilers and Foster are the principals of another affair, said to be as intense as it is unconventional. Rogers has what is reported as the greatest comedy role of his career, that of a Midwest farmer whose great ambition is to land a grand championship for his prize hog, Blue Boy. Miss Dresser takes the part of Rogers' wife, Craven appears as a country storekeeper and Jory portrays a carnival stand barker.

The action locales are Rogers' farm home and the grounds of a big state fair.

MRS. HARRIET CUSHAY

Mrs. Harriet Cushay departed this life at her home near Whittemore on Tuesday, April 4, at the age of 54 years, eight months and 22 days. She suffered a stroke about a year ago from which she never recovered.

The deceased was born in Rockdale, England, on July 12, 1878, and came to the United States at the age of 15 years. She was married to Mr. Firby in Canada, and to this union two sons, Herman and Harry Firby, were born. Herman was killed in France in the World War, and Harry, who resides in Detroit, survives her. Eleven years ago she was united in marriage to Edward L. Cushay, who survives her. They came to Whittemore about two and one-half years ago and settled on a farm one and one-half miles north-east of Whittemore, known as the Jos. Morin farm.

Besides her husband, she is survived by one son, Harry Firby, of Detroit, a sister, Mrs. Susan Oldham, and a brother, Thomas Taylor, both of Rockdale, England, besides a host of friends and neighbors.

Funeral services were held from the M. E. church Monday afternoon, Rev. H. Musser officiating. Interment was made in the Whittemore cemetery. Mrs. Cushay was a Gold Star Mother, and flags were used in the funeral service at the church. The deepest sympathy of the community is extended to the husband, son, and other relatives in their hour of sorrow.

RENO GROUP ENTERTAINS CHILD HEALTH COMMITTEE

The Isoco County Child Health Committee met at the Reno town hall last Tuesday, Mrs. Thomas Frockins and Mrs. Will Waters being in charge of the program and refreshments. The following program was given:

A health play by children from the Taft school; a report of Health Committee activities in Arenac county by Miss Wroten, Children's Fund nurse from Arenac county; a report by Miss Stone, a committee member from Arenac county; a play by children from the Cottage school, and a vocal solo by Mrs. Fred Latta.

The committee on the May Day program reported plans to have that program on May 9th at the Community Building in East Tawas.

LUTHERAN CHOR TO GIVE ITS SECOND ANNUAL EASTER SONG SERVICE

The Lutheran Concordia Choir, consisting of thirty vested singers, will render its second annual Easter concert at Emanuel's Lutheran church on Sunday evening, April 16, at 8:00 o'clock. Under the direction of Wm. Wolmann the choir will render the following program:

I. Easter Cantata—Immortality—R. M. Stults.
II. Chorals: Beautiful Savior—F. M. Christiansen; Savior When in Dust to Thee—M. Vulpins; O, Darkest Woe—Mayntz; O Bleeding Head and Wounded—J. S. Bach; O Lamb of God Most Holy—J. Jepp; Jesus Christ, My Sure Defense—J. Crueger.

"O come let us worship the Lord and sing praises unto Him! For surely He hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows—He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed."—Isaiah 53.

A cordial invitation to attend is extended to all.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank the citizens of Tawas City for electing me city treasurer. The office will receive my best efforts.

Charles Duffy.

WILL RECEIVE CROP LOAN APPLICATIONS

Applications for government crop production loans to farmers for the purchase of seed, fertilizer, spraying, tractor oil and gasoline are now being filed and those farmers who desire to procure government funds for this purpose should file their application at once as this loan will not be available after May first.

Applications for these loans must be filed in the county where the farm is situated and Isoco county farmers who are interested should get in touch with Waldo Curry, chairman of the county committee, for further information. O. F. Jensen, field inspector for this section of the state will be in Tawas City next Tuesday afternoon, from 3:00 to 5:00, at Judge Davison's office in the Court House, to receive applications for these loans.

TO GIVE BRIDGE PARTY FOR TOURNAMENT PARTICIPANTS

The American Legion of East Tawas and the Civic Committee of the Twentieth Century Club of Tawas City heartily thank all those who participated in the Tawas Bridge Tournament.

Through your cooperation the tournament was a grand success and in order to show our appreciation we invite all the entrants, substitutes, and teams that could not finish the series of games to attend a bridge party at the American Legion Hall, East Tawas, Monday evening, April 17th, at 8:15 o'clock. Progressive bridge will be played, scoring 125 points for game, and teams will not change partners.

The awards for the tournament will be presented during the evening. Please bring your cards.

TURNER BUILDING NOW BEING REMODELED

Roy Silverthorn of East Tawas has been engaged to remodel and repair the Turner building. Earl Turner, the owner, has not divulged the use to which the building will be made. It has been vacant for several months.

JUDGE SHARPE TO SPEAK AT I. O. O. F. ANNIVERSARY MEETING

One hundred fourteen years ago in the city of Baltimore, Maryland, Hon. Thomas Willey and a few stalwart citizens of Colonial stock conceived the idea of organizing groups to carry on mutual helpfulness. It was there that the independent Order of Odd Fellows was born.

On April 27th 1883, the local lodge received its charter from the hands of Grand Master Soule and was named Baldwin Lodge No. 377, of Tawas.

Fifty years have gone since David E. Emerson, Jesse Ingamells, Frank Huff, John E. Miller, Hubert McDonald, Joseph Flanagan, O. R. Gates, S. A. Flanagan and William Philin received this charter and admonition to do their best to make Tawas a better place to live. How well they have succeeded is past history.

To commemorate this birthday anniversary, the local lodge, with the cooperation of Irene Rebekah Lodge, will hold open house for its membership on April 28th. A banquet will be served at six o'clock Eastern time, and a program will follow at eight. The guest speaker will be Hon. E. M. Sharpe, Grand Marshall of the Grand Lodge and Justice of the Supreme Court elect. Miss Elsie Ahonen and the Odds Trio will render vocal numbers, with Torrey Osgerby's "Ottawas Revelers" furnishing melodies for the hour of dancing.

ANDERSON—FURST

A pretty wedding was quietly solemnized in the Abigail Lutheran church of East Tawas on the evening of March 30th, when Miss Lillian Anderson, daughter of Mrs. Andrew Herquist of East Tawas, was united in marriage to Leonard Furst, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Furst of Alabaster. Rev. Walter Voss, pastor of the Emanuel Lutheran church of Tawas City, officiated.

The bride was attractive in her gown of Roosevelt blue, and carried a corsage of sweet peas and tallis-man roses. The maid of honor, Miss Lorena Furst, a sister of the groom, wore an ashes of roses frock and carried lilies of the valley and sweet peas. Claude Benson of Alabaster served Mr. Furst as best man.

The altar of the church was beautifully decorated in spring flowers, and the church was filled to capacity with relatives and friends.

The members of the bridal party entered the church to the strains of a wedding march played by Mrs. John Anderson. The songs, "O Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly" were sung by Miss Selma Hagstrom, accompanied by Mrs. Anderson.

Immediately after the ceremony a bountiful dinner was served to 60 relatives and intimate friends of the couple in the church parlors, which were decorated in the bride's chosen colors, blue and white. The wedding cake in blue and white served as the center-piece of the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Furst were the recipients of many beautiful gifts.

Mrs. Furst was the honor guest at a miscellaneous shower recently given at the home of Mrs. Herman Johnson of Alabaster.

The out of town relatives who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. George Kimen and family and Mrs. Reuben Rydin of Detroit.

The many friends of the couple congratulate them and wish them years of happiness and success.

WHITEMORE STUDENTS WIN HONORS IN SUB-DISTRICT CONTEST

Miss Beatrice Barr of Whittemore high school won first place in the sub-district oratorical contest held at East Tawas last Thursday night.

Lois Charters of the same school won third place in declamation. Other schools participating in the contest, besides Whittemore, were West Branch, Harrisville, Oscoda, East Tawas and Tawas City.

MADAME VON AT TAWAS CITY FOR SHORT VISIT

Madame Von and sister, Miss Rosalie Steinhurst, arrived Thursday for a week's visit at the home of their father, A. Steinhurst.

During their stay, the Steinhurst sisters will give permanents here to the people of the Tawasess and surrounding community at a nominal charge.

An advertisement elsewhere in this issue gives full information regarding it.

LAST RITES GIVEN FOR JOHN MCCRAY

The funeral services of John McCray, vice-president of the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad company, were held Saturday morning at St. Joseph's Catholic church, East Tawas. Fr. E. A. Kirchhoff officiated. Interment was at Alpena. The burial party was taken to Alpena in a special train from this city. Mr. McCray's death last Thursday followed a heart attack. He had been ill earlier in the week with an attack of indigestion.

John McCray was born at Tawas City and was a graduate of the Tawas City public schools. He completed his education with post-graduate studies at East Tawas and a course at business college, fitting himself for the position of clerk in the Detroit & Mackinac Railroad company office. His services for the railroad company began July 1, 1897.

Several months ago Mr. McCray was promoted to the vice-presidency of the railroad, the honor coming as a reward for years of faithful service. His first position was that of clerk in the office of the late C. W. Luce, general superintendent, entering upon the duties July 1, 1897. Two years later he was made chief clerk, and he held that position until Mr. Luce severed his connection with the railroad. He served in the same capacity with H. K. McHarg, Jr., and was promoted to assistant to Mr. McHarg, when the latter became vice-president and general manager.

His next position was second vice-president and auditor, and with his latest promotion in April of last year, he had charge of all of the property of the company, under the president, H. K. McHarg, Sr.

Mr. McCray was the type of citizen that any community can ill afford to lose. He was held in the highest of esteem by his business associates and friends throughout this section of Michigan.

He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Jane, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCray of Alpena, a brother, Charles McCray, and a sister, Mrs. Robert Nenesewitz.

PREPARE SHORE ROAD FOR POURING CEMENT

Preliminary work to the pouring of cement on the grade of the Shore road is in progress. A crew of eight or ten men is working. The work entails the laying of a track from the grade to the D. & M. railroad. The track will run from below the Dead Sable. It is stated that in all probability the job for the balance of the cement between A-Sable and East Tawas will be let this spring.—Oscoda Press.

SUPERVISORS WILL MEET NEXT MONDAY

The newly elected board of supervisors of Isoco county will meet next Monday. The principal business will be the election of a chairman and organization.

REMODELS SERVICE STATION

James Robinson, this week, is remodeling his service station here. The front of the building has been changed and the service way widened.

DISCUSSIONS

AN EDITORIAL

By James Ruckman
The Tawas Auction Bridge tournament for 1933 has just ended. The closing weeks were marred somewhat by rumors which were gossiped about and all of which were unfair and unjust. These rumors were not confined to one or two players alone but various contestants came in for a portion of the criticism.

The writer would like to point out that since he has been in East Tawas he has assisted in the promotion of two bridge tournaments and two golf tournaments. To the best of his knowledge neither type of tournament had ever been held prior to his arrival and his only motive in assisting in the promotion of these was to bring to the community a type of entertainment not hitherto enjoyed. In every case he has paid the same fees that all other contestants have paid and in no case has he ever received or asked for one cent of remuneration for his services. All that he asked was that he be given the privilege of competing for the honors of the tournament along with other citizens of the community.

However, it goes without saying that it is discouraging to be subjected to unjust criticism because certain individuals are not pleased with the turn of events. It is indeed unfortunate that those individuals who have so much criticism to offer do not have the initiative to take their criticisms directly to the manager of the tournament and make an honest attempt to ascertain the facts before circulating erroneous and malicious gossip. Apparent.

TECHNICOLOR THRILLER, "WAX MUSEUM," AT FAMILY THEATRE

One of the strangest and most exciting thrillers, "The Mystery of the Wax Museum," will show at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 18, 19 and 20, with Lionel Atwill, Glenda Farrell, Frank McHugh and Fay Wray heading a large cast of sterling players.

The story, taken from the play by Charles S. Belden, deals with a series of mysterious disappearances of both living persons and human bodies and the appearance of a terrifying monster. The plot centers about a wax museum which has on display exceptionally life-like figures of personages of history and notorious criminals.

The picture is photographed entirely in Technicolor with unusual lighting effects used to heighten the fascination and mystery that dominates the production. The direction has been handled by Michael Curtiz, who is universally accepted as a past master in directing mystery thrillers. Curtiz, it will be remembered, handled the megaphone for the recent Warner Bros. picture, "Doctor X," which was a tremendous sensation last year.

In addition to its excitement and suspense there is a romantic love angle with no end of humor supplied by smart, witty dialogue between Glenda Farrell, the hard-boiled, wise-cracking reporter who is on the trail of the mystery, and her managing editor, a part played by Frank McHugh.

The Easter Bonnet

Easter Relic of Old Pagan Celebration

EASTER is largely a relic of the old pagan celebration of the beginning of spring, and this explains why some of those old customs and traditions are still linked up with it—such as the use of the egg and the rabbit as symbols. But in the religious senses Easter commemorates the resurrection of Christ.

The crucifixion took place at the time of the Jewish Passover, and this fixed the time so far as the Jews were concerned. But the Jews counted time by the lunar year of 354 days, while most other nations went by the solar year. Thus a confusion as to the actual date to be observed as Christ's resurrection at once arose. That confusion caused bitter controversies during the early history of Christianity and it remains with us today.

While at first Easter was observed by the Christians at the same time as the Jewish Passover, gradually they were weaned away from that practice and another date was proclaimed. Elaborate rules were adopted known in Latin as the "computus paschalis," by which to ascertain the date for Easter. These were based largely on the Jewish "paschal moon" but there were complications to the process and so the date does not necessarily coincide with that of the real or astronomical moon.

As the time of the actual full moon is different for different points on the earth, it is plain that some arbitrary rule would have to be adopted. It was the purpose of the church fathers not to have Easter ever fall on the same date as the Jewish Passover. However, in 1923, this did come to pass.

Easter is the first Sunday that follows this ecclesiastical or paschal full moon coming in or next after the nominal vernal equinox, March 21; if the paschal full moon falls on Sunday, then Easter skips to the following Sunday. The date of Easter is specially important because it fixes the times of the other movable feasts for the whole year.

Lent begins with Ash Wednesday and is the period of forty days (not including Sundays) preceding Easter. Shrove Tuesday is the last day before Lent and thus marks the end of the gay winter season, known in Europe as the "carnival" or "meat-farewell" season. The French term for Shrove Tuesday is "Mardi Gras"—meaning literally "fat Tuesday." This date is observed by feasting and revelry—hence the "fat."—Pathfinder Magazine.

The Stone Was Rolled Away

AND when the Sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the Mother of James, and Salome, had brought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint Him.

And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre at the rising of the sun.

"And they said among themselves, 'Who shall roll away the stone from the door of the sepulchre?'"

"And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away, for it was very great.

"And entering the sepulchre, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment, and they were affrighted.

"And he said unto them: 'Be not affrighted. Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified; He is risen; He is not here; behold the place where they laid Him.

"But go your way, tell His disciples and Peter that He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye seek Him, as He said unto you."

"And they went out quickly and fled from the sepulchre; for they trembled and were amazed; neither said they anything to any man, for they were afraid."

EASTER

By LEILA E. BRACY

(In Detroit Free Press.)

SPRING day in the morning;
The dew is warm and sweet,
Gray mists run from the rising sun—
Pale phantoms in retreat.

A young breeze, perfume-laden,
Soft quiet promise filled,
Swift shattered by a golden shower
From quivering bird throat spilled.

So Easter's gift, renewing
The light that cannot cease
To be, though world forgotten, brings
The healing touch of peace.

Though souls travail in darkness,
Yet does the earth endure;
The glory of the morn shall be
Of night's dim torture cure.

The world's way is a good way—
Earth seems to Heaven drawn
When Hope to weary hearts is born
In the hushed Easter dawn.

Resurrection Keynote

Christdom, at Easter, will resound with the resurrection message of the angel to Mary Magdalene. For more than 1,900 years the resurrection has been the keynote of Christianity. Preachers of faith in Christ as the hope of humanity have from the days of the Apostles based their messages upon this foundation and without the resurrection have regarded preaching as vain.

Thought Rabbits Laid Eggs

In the old days in Germany, the children built nests in the brush and thicket, even as they do in the United States today. When they ran to the nests on Easter morning, rabbits usually scurried from the bushes. And when the children found the bright eggs in the nests, they jumped to the conclusion the rabbits had laid them. Their parents did not disillusion them.

Island of Sark Is Feudal State

Once Haunt of Pirates, Now a Peaceful Place With Ancient Customs.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)—WNU Service.
WHEN the Dame of Sark recently went shopping in London, the event was news in at least two continents; for La Dame De Sark is the first lady of the only purely feudal state remaining in the world, the island of Sark in the English Channel.

Sark is the fourth largest of the Channel Islands. It lies 70 miles south of England and 22 miles from the coast of France. It is three and a half miles long and one and a half miles wide; and yet, because of its numerous bays and coves, it has 35 miles of coast. It is the highest land in the Channel Islands.

The cliffs, rising on all sides almost perpendicularly, are covered with innumerable varieties of rock plants and flowers, while below are sandy bays and wonderful caves, whose sea-bewn walls are covered with seaweeds and sea anemones of every color of the rainbow. On the beaches may be found semiprecious stones, such as amethysts, cats-eyes, and moonstones. The island is not without minerals; at one time mines were worked which produced copper, silver, antimony, and galena.

The interior of the island is undulating, with valleys full of wild flowers, and in the spring the whole is covered with a blaze of golden gorse, blue bells, and primroses. No venomous beasts live in Sark, not even a toad!

On landing at the Sark harbor, which is one of the smallest in the world, the visitor finds himself entirely surrounded by steep cliffs, and the only means of access to the island from there is by a road passing through a tunnel 200 feet long, pierced in the cliff, and thence by a steep, winding road which leads to the center of the island, where there are a few small shops and four hotels.

The highway continues to La Coupee, where the island is divided into two parts, Great Sark and Little Sark, joined by a huge natural causeway of rock nearly 300 feet high and 415 feet long, across which runs a road just wide enough for one cart and horse.

The Sark parliament is called the Chief Pleas, and it sits three times a year unless called by the Dame in an emergency. The forty holders of the farms allotted originally in 1565, plus twelve deputies elected among the rest of the inhabitants, who now number 675, are members of the parliament.

To "Sarkites" the king of England is their feudal lord, the duke of Normandy, and he has no more loyal and devoted subjects than they, who have from time immemorial been part of the Duchy of Normandy, whose duke, William the Conqueror, invaded and took England and was thereafter recognized as king of England, but to them has always remained duke of Normandy.

In point of fact, the Channel islands were never a part of England, but part and parcel of the Duchy of Normandy, and as such, no doubt, took part in the conquest of England. Sark is the smallest self-governing part of the British empire and the only part which has no public debt; in fact, it has a substantial credit balance.

The language of the island officially is French, though everyone speaks English, which is taught equally with French in the schools, so that everyone is bilingual. Among themselves the islanders always speak their own "patois," which is a survival of the old Norman French as spoken at the time of the Conquest. It is never written and cannot be understood by anyone not brought up in its midst. Sark has a boys' and a girls' school, in regard to which it is interesting to note that Sark was the first part of the British empire to adopt compulsory education. The Dame inspects both schools at examination time and asks the children questions in French and English and satisfies herself as to their general mental progress.

Motor Cars Barred.
A law against the importation of motor cars has been passed and this is strictly enforced. The Dame believes there should be one spot left on earth where modern transportation can be forgotten and where peace and quiet are undisturbed. She also refuses to allow the importation of any female dog, the ownership of such, except by the Seigneur, being forbidden under an old custom upheld by law for centuries. It is also the old right of the Seigneur alone to keep pigeons—an excellent law, as in this way their number is controlled and damage to crops is minimized. The large stone pigeon cote is an essential part of any feudal seigneurie.

Once Pirate Haunt.
Years rolled on and Sark became the haunt of pirates, said to be from Scotland, who were a constant menace to shipping in the channel and against whom expeditions from England were sent out. The island was cleared of their presence, but ruin was left in their wake. It was occupied by the French some time early in the Sixteenth century, and it was wrested from them by a ruse, the details of which were recorded by Sir Walter Raleigh himself, who was governor of Jersey some fifty years later, as follows:

A Flemish vessel arrived off the coast, and the sailors pretended that their captain was dead and asked leave to bring his body ashore for burial. On permission being granted, they carried the coffin up the hill to the little church of Saint Magioire, and there, closing the door, they opened the coffin, which was full of arms, turned on the French garrison and surprised them, killing some and taking the rest prisoners.

Soon after this the island was again deserted, until from the island of Jersey arose a man who was finally to establish the future constitution of Sark. This was Sir Heller de Carteret, the fifty-eighth seigneur of Saint-Ouen, in Jersey, to whom, in 1565, Queen Elizabeth granted the island conditionally by letters patent under the great seal of England. This royal grant gave to Sir Heller and his successors almost unlimited powers on condition that he colonize the island with forty families, to each of whom he allotted a portion of the land to farm. Each man was equipped with a musket for the defense of the island; so that to this day it is often spoken of as "the island of the forty," and even now, when a farm changes hands, it is still cited as one of the conditions of the deed of conveyance that a man with a musket shall be kept on the farm.

Though the De Carteret family still owns the Manor of Saint-Ouen, in Jersey, Sark passed out of its hands when, in 1732, it was sold, with all its rights and privileges, and eventually came to the great-grandmother of the present Dame of Sark, in 1852. For many years an artillery militia was maintained, consisting of about one hundred men; now all that remains are a few old cannon, lying disused and half hidden in bracken and gorse on the cliffs, while in the grounds of the Dame's house is a fine old bronze cannon which was presented to the first Seigneur of Sark in 1572 by Queen Elizabeth, and bears an inscription to that effect.

The Dame's house, or "Seigneurie," lies in a sheltered part of the island and, like all the old houses, is built of gray granite. The original or main part of the house, dating from 1565, stands on the site of the old monastery, and no doubt many of the stones used to build it were taken from the ruins. The fireplace in the hall bears the date 1675 and the sundial on the outside 1685. The gardens are opened to the general public, free of any charge, every Monday.

Appeal to the Dame.

Great privileges are always accompanied by grave responsibilities; so that the Dame's home may be described as the clearing house of all island controversy. It is open at any time to any inhabitant of the island who wishes to see her for any reason, and she sometimes longs for the leisure of the "tired business man" when often both sides of a difficulty are brought to her for final judgment. Discussions take place on subjects which range from whether bathers shall wear beach pajamas or whether the Chief Pleas shall pass a measure to deal with the prevention of infectious diseases among cattle.

A Little Thing Like Clothes

By JESSIE DOUGLAS

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

"THAT," said Tom Winship, knocking the ash from his cigarette, "is the primmest girl in this town."

They both looked after the retreating figure of Daisy Miller, dressed so neatly in her blue serge, with a black hat that was meant to cover, not adorn, the red-brown hair.

"If you give me a month I could have that girl so dead in love with me that any one could see it!" Arthur Baldwin offered.

"You've lost already, and I'll put ten on it, Art."

Daisy Miller's heart beat very fast as she washed the dinner dishes. She had really not seen anything of Arthur Baldwin since they were in high school together; she had thought less of him, and yet tonight he had telephoned her to ask permission to come over to see her.

"I don't see why he should want to see me," she thought, "I can't understand—" and yet she was flattered and she felt a new glow in the dullness of the gray days and an escape from monotony.

In her own room she surveyed her wardrobe critically. The gray challis was beyond redemption and her best crepe needed a patch under the arm; the only thing left was what she had on, the blue serge dress that had never been anything but useful.

Again she felt that strange new excitement when the bell wheezed and she opened the door to Arthur Baldwin. He stood a moment in the hall retaining her hand.

"I am glad to see you, Daisy!" he said, scrutinizing her white face.

There was an awkward silence for a moment after he had seated himself in the comfortable living room in the big chair across from Mr. Miller.

"How're you getting on with your law?" Mr. Miller inquired.

Arthur Baldwin found himself in the clutches of that inveterate old talker, and he listened to drowsy reminiscences of the '80's, while he fidgeted in his chair.

When at last he said good night he admitted it was one of the duller evenings he had ever spent and quite unsuccessful except for his last remark to Daisy.

"You certainly have wonderful hair, Daisy," he said as he took her hand in the hall as he left.

He smirked to himself as he remembered the slow, almost painful flush that touched her cheeks.

"I'm old enough to know better," Daisy thought the next morning as she scanned the paper; but a new inflection in the air had caught her and she explained to her father briefly that she was going to the city.

It must have been the hair that did it, but Daisy was unable to resist a hat that looked altogether alluring in one of the smartest shops on Fifth avenue.

But the hat made her suit look even older than ever; and Daisy plunged. She gasped when she saw herself in the new suit with its long, slim lines and its delicious golden brown color; with bewitching hat. But how shabby her shoes looked.

As a very last touch she bought herself a new pair.

"I'll take me years to save it all again," Daisy thought shame-facedly. "All the money that I put by for a rainy day!"

She settled herself down by the window in the train, feeling in her new clothes that she was too noticeable. She prayed that she would meet no one she knew. She moved over to a very margin of her seat as a big man sat down beside her; he looked at her casually and then cried, "Why! if it isn't Daisy Miller!"

"I used to be Bill when we were in school together," he laughed.

"Daisy looked up at him; perhaps it was the new hat, perhaps it was the consciousness of that smart suit, yet there was a charm about that shy, bird-like glance that touched William Armstrong.

"Just come back to civilization," he explained. "I'm going to surprise my people. It's a long run from Arizona to New York!"

"How wonderful!" Daisy exclaimed softly. "I've always thought that was about the most interesting place to live—" then for some unaccountable reason she blushed.

"Not for your kind!" Armstrong said gruffly.

He touched tentatively the rich fur on her coat.

"Oh, this!" said Daisy with disdain. "As if clothes matter!"

"When a girl's as pretty as you are, Daisy, I guess you're right!" he said heartily.

"I'd like to drop in and talk with you about God's country!" he said as he wrung her hand in farewell.

That was why two days later Daisy Miller, answering the telephone, said softly:

"I'm sorry, Mr. Baldwin, but I have another engagement tonight!"

"Congratulations!" Tom Winship cried, holding out his hand to his betting partner. "When it comes to a lady-killer, Art, I must admit you never fail!" He pointed a jeering finger to the notice printed in the evening paper.

"The engagement of Miss Daisy Miller to Mr. William Armstrong of Tucson, Ariz., was announced . . ."

Howe About:

Husbands and Wives Squatter Rights The Specialist

By ED HOWE

A MAN is disposed to believe that when he fights a woman, he should tie one hand behind him, because he is the biggest.

He is mistaken; the woman is able to care for herself.

The most natural controversy of all is that between men and women, and the condition of women has steadily improved since the dawn of history. What rule, custom or law is best for them? They have fought for it steadily, and won. If an old savage could be resurrected today, become twenty-five years old instead of a thousand, and be turned loose with the present crowds of manured and perfumed women, the other men would hang him in an hour because of his bad manners.

Anyone who reads of the past must constantly note the steady march of subjugation of men; anyone who looks about him now must note the same thing.

In the early days of the West squatter sovereignty was a recognized principle, to-wit: Settlers rushed into the country before it was organized, and squatted on the land. When it was formally opened to settlement, the settlers armed themselves, collected at the land office, and saw to it that every squatter had the first and only bid on the land he had settled on.

Squatter sovereignty is being practiced now in paying taxes. At tax paying time taxes are not paid, but when the properties are offered for sale by the sheriff for taxes, the owner of each tract is protected in his right to be the only bidder; sometimes the taxes and penalties on his property amount to a thousand dollars, and the owner gets a sheriff's deed to it for a trifle. It is being done in my community; look around, and you'll see it is being done in yours.

The ordinary man cannot become a specialist, and devote years of study to figuring out how far the more remote stars are from the earth. The citizen who makes an ordinary good living, achieves respectability in his neighborhood, rears and educates a family, and helps support the many specialists, must know many things, and know them well. A man of my acquaintance is not only able to make a respectable living as a farmer but cures hams and bacon better than the well-paid specialists of the packing houses. He can cut hair as well as a barber, and knows automobiles so well he not only fixes his own, but town men come to him for advice. People send for him from miles around to top their hay and wheat stacks, and, during the winter, he does very good work as a blacksmith at about half town prices. In addition, he reads enough to get about all there is of value in print, and has very excellent practical sense.

The specialists are well enough in their way, but should not be permitted to make laws for those who from necessity are all-around workers.

I was out in company lately, and among the guests was a husband with a deaf wife. Every little while he would go up to her, and bawl in her ear: "You are the sweetest thing in the world; you suit me," and the wife would seem pleased. Once he roared in her ear: "I just told Joe Holt I am not the sort of husband who fusses about being married. I like it; we get along, don't we?" Other guests told me the man was noted for appreciating his wife, and making a disturbance about it. If a man marries the right sort of woman, and she likes him and submits to him gracefully, he'll like her, whether she is old, stout, thin, wise or ordinary. It is the wife naturally opposed to everything her husband does that complains he no longer loves her.

When a widow writes a letter to kin begging for assistance in feeding her hungry children, she is compelled to pay an extra cent for the stamp, that this sort of waste may continue in thousands of other places. I wonder statesmen are not ashamed, instead of being the proud creatures they are.

The correct and moving reason for good behavior is because it is profitable; the surest way to avoid punishment. Any other teaching of good behavior is complicated, and less effective than sound teaching should be.

Everyone occasionally remarks the rapid flight of time. It becomes more noticeable after one becomes old; and an old man gets very much less out of the hours as they hurry by.

A man named Lecky is a famous historian, and quotes St. Jerome as saying that in olden times one man slept naked in a marsh to court the stings of poisonous insects. This he kept up for six months. A disciple slept at the bottom of a well, and when he walked about, carried on his back a hundred and fifty pounds of iron. Lecky fully documents these stories, and wonders what the explanation is. Many volumes have been written to provide explanations, but I can explain the stories in five words: They never happened. Most wonders are made up; we pretty generally know what really goes on, and why.

Russians Educated to Read Soviet Journals

Russia today has three times as many newspapers as under the czar, and ten times as many newspaper readers. Pravda, the Moscow organ of the Communist party, tops all other dailies with a circulation of 2,200,000. Izvestia, the official daily of the Soviet government, comes second with 2,000,000 circulation. There are 2,230 central regional and district newspapers, daily and others, with a total circulation of 33,000,000. With a total population according to the latest census of 154,000,000 and an average of literacy of 567 per 1,000, the total number able to read is about 86,200,000.

Pravda and Izvestia send matrices of their pages to many other cities where they are used the same day in producing local editions. Izvestia is sent from Moscow to Leningrad by a system of facsimile wire transmission and reprinted from photographs.

The Peasant's Gazette, issued in Moscow every three days, has a circulation of 3,000,000, and in addition to the Moscow issue, prints fifteen regional editions.

About thirty papers in all are printed in Moscow, including organs of the various government commissions and trade union publications. Letters from workers and peasants are among their chief features, and the government estimates 2,000,000 volunteer correspondents are contributing, telling of conditions on the farms, in the factories, in all parts of the Soviet union.

Sixty languages are used in publishing 600 newspapers which serve minor nationalities throughout European and Asiatic Russia. In Central Asia, which was practically without a press in pre-war days, forty-nine papers are published in the Uzbek, Tadzhik, Kirghiz, Turkoman and other tribal languages.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A CURE FOR OBSTINACY

JOHNNY CHUCK was stiff and sore. It was the day after the great fight. Johnny sat on his doorstep and he was in anything but a happy state of mind. In the first place, each separate wound made by the teeth of Reddy Fox had a separate and distinct ache. No one who aches all over can be in a very happy state of mind. Then, too, Johnny was nervous. He kept turning his head every two or three minutes to make sure that all was safe behind him. That stone wall which had seemed such a splendid protection when he built his house in the corner of it now seemed a constant danger. Johnny imagined he heard enemies creeping up on the other side of it. He expected to see the head of Reddy Fox or Mrs. Reddy bob up over the top of that wall any minute. No one as nervous as that can be in a very happy frame of mind. Also Johnny was beginning to be quite honest with himself and to admit that he wished he never had thought of leaving his fine home in the far corner of the Old Orchard. He wished he was back there. He knew now that it was the very best place in all the Great World. At least, it was the very best place for him. But he was still too obstinate to make up his mind to go back there. If there had been no one there he wouldn't have minded. But Polly Chuck was there and Johnny just couldn't make up his mind to go back and confess that he had been wrong in the first place. Of course, no one feeling that way could be in a very happy frame of mind. But what made him most unhappy of all was the fact that he was hungry and all the time growing hungrier.

He didn't go far enough away from his doorstep to get his breakfast, and he hadn't had much to eat the day before, nothing at all after the great fight. With longing eyes he looked over to the distant clover patch. After his experience of the day before he didn't dare go so far from his house. If he had been feeling all right he wouldn't have dared to. Stiff and sore as he was it was out of the question. He couldn't run and he couldn't fight.

He tried to eat some of the grass near his doorstep. It was thick with dust and so gritty and unpleasant to the taste that he managed to swallow only a little of it. So the morning passed and afternoon came. With every passing minute Johnny grew hungrier. The hungrier he grew the more he thought of the delicious sweet clover which grew so close to his old home in the far corner, and the more he thought of this the more he thought about going home.

Late in the afternoon Sammy returned to see how Johnny was getting on. An idea came to Johnny. He would ask Sammy Jay to keep watch while he hurried over to that patch of clover and get a bite or two. Sammy agreed at once. But Sammy is just brimming over with mischief, as you know. Johnny was only half way to the patch of clover when Sammy screamed. Back scrambled Johnny Chuck as fast as he could. When he found it was just a joke he scolded as only he can scold. This tickled Sammy Jay and he flew away laughing. You see, Sammy didn't know how very, very hungry Johnny Chuck was.

By the time jolly, round, red Mr. Sun went to bed behind the Purple Hills, hunger and fear had quite cured Johnny Chuck of obstinacy. He would start for home the first thing in the morning.

APPETIZING DISHES

IN THE spring and early summer green foods—fresh vegetables and fruit—are more appealing than more complicated foods. There are some roughage foods that are needed all the year round and an occasional use of bran in food, or taken in water as a drink, will keep the elimination good. For the children the bran may be given in small cakes, cookies and macaroons.

Bran Date Muffins.—Break two eggs into a mixing bowl and beat with an egg beater for two minutes; add two-thirds of a cupful of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth cupful of sugar and one-fourth cupful of softened shortening. Add two teaspoonfuls of baking powder to one cupful of flour, add one cupful of bran, one-half cupful of dates cut fine, and one-half cupful of nuts cut fine. Mix all as usual and beat well. Bake in well greased muffin pans for twenty-five minutes.

Calf's Liver Sandwich Spread.—Rub cooked liver with hard-cooked eggs through a sieve, using to one pound of liver three hard cooked eggs. Add one grated onion, salt and pepper to season. Mix well and spread on buttered bread. A layer of thinly sliced sour pickle will add to the sandwich.

Shrimp and Liver Sandwiches.—Take one cupful of cooked shrimps, one cupful of cooked chicken livers, one Bermuda onion and one green pepper. Remove the seeds from the pepper and grind with all the other ingredients; mix with a little mayonnaise or chili sauce. Use on buttered white bread for filling.

GRAPHIC GOLF

WEIGHT ON HEELS AIDS PROPER STROKE

KEEP the weight back on the heels is the advice handed out by MacDonald Smith. This allows the body to turn just enough to prevent retarding the arm movement as the clubhead is swept down and through with the arms. The shoulders are held back instead of coming around to the left ruining control and power. To offset too rigid legs in this position the knees should be bent slightly. A slight give here also keeps the golfer from stooping over too far. A fault of golfers in general is that they bend forward too far with the weight on the toes, a position in which it is difficult to pivot properly. One reason for this is that the ball is often too far away, necessitating

CRIBBAGE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HALF of the game is what you throw away, And what you keep, before you start to play. And life's the same, Same sort of game— Much like a hand of cribbage that you play.

Count up your cards, not after but before, Keep what will likely make the largest score. Some joy denied And thrown aside May, at the finish, make you even more.

Discard the useless from your heart and mind, The plans unworthy and the thoughts unkind, Old hurts, old hates, And selfish traits, And winning will be easy, you will find.

Yes, keep the right and throw the wrong aside, The little jealousies, the foolish pride, Consider, too, The things you do, The evil habits from the good divide.

For they will win who wisely will discard The useless action and the useless card, Watch life the same, Then play the game— And you will find the winning not so hard.

ABOUT 250,000 MEN WILL BE ENROLLED FOR WORK ON CONSERVATION PROJECTS

By Congressman Roy O. Woodruff
With but little real opposition, both Houses of Congress passed the Emergency Unemployment Relief measure last week and another step in the program of reconstruction has been taken. Under the terms of this act at least 250,000 men will be enrolled under the supervision of the Department of Labor's employment service, aided by state employment services and other agencies, for work in the National Forests and other conservation projects. In the administration of the law it is contemplated that transportation will be furnished from the place of enrollment to the assembly camps which will be furnished by the War Department. This department having equipment such as tents, camp kitchen equipment, clothing, shoes, etc., will see to it that the men are properly placed in self-sustaining units, and immediately thereafter, the U. S. forest service will take over the supervision and management of the new organization.
To be eligible for enrollment an applicant must show that he is a citizen of the United States and that he is unemployed. Inasmuch as there are so many more out of employment than can be accommodated in this work, enrollment will be allocated among the several states upon a ratio in accordance with the percentage of unemployed persons in each state.
The work to be done in the National forests consists of building fences, airplane landing fields, roads and trails, telephone lines and look-out towers, preparing the land and planting seedlings, etc., but the men may be put to work along other lines as the supervisors may direct. The men will be furnished, in addition to transportation, with food, clothing, lodging, medical care, and will be paid a wage that will be established by the President. Also they will have the protection of the U. S. employees compensation laws in case of injury while in the performance of their duties.

Some opposition to the original provisions in the bill limiting the wage to $30 per month in addition to the other allowances mentioned was made in the House and Senate in behalf of organized labor on the ground that if the government should write into law a wage as low as $1 per day, it would demoralize the wage standards existing in industry and business. Objection was voiced also because of the nature of such work calling men away from their families to remote places, and also because to some it appeared to inaugurate a policy of placing upon the government the responsibility of furnishing employment directly to those who cannot find work elsewhere.
To finance this program of work in the National forests, it is provided in the act that the unobligated monies from the public works program be diverted thereto, and that if additional sums are needed they shall be appropriated. This means that for the time being at least, the authorization of new post offices and other public buildings contemplated originally in the public works program, will be subordinated to the work of reforestation. For the same amount of money that would employ one man on public buildings for one year, at least six could be given employment in conservation work such as is contemplated in the National forests, and this is the sort of practical economy that must be practiced from now on.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas default has been made for more than ninety (90) days in the payment of interest and installment of principal of moneys secured by mortgage executed by James A. Farrand and Sarah Elizabeth Farrand, his wife, to The Peoples State Bank of East Tawas, Michigan dated September nineteenth in year 1931, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Iosco, State of Michigan, on September twenty-second in year 1931, in Liber twenty-seven of Mortgages on page 147; and
Whereas said mortgage does hereby declare the whole of the principal sum and interest thereon as now due and payable by reason of said default; and
Whereas the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage on the date of this notice for principal and interest is the sum of One Thousand Three Hundred and Twenty-one Dollars and Fifty-three cents and Thirty-five dollars as an attorney fee stipulated for in said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings having been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.
Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgagee will foreclose the said mortgage by sale of the premises therein described at public auction to the highest bidder, at the front outer door of the Court House in the City of Tawas City, County of Iosco, State of Michigan, that being the place for holding the Circuit Court for the said County of Iosco, on the Fifth day of June in year 1933 at one o'clock afternoon, which said lands and premises are described as follows:
The South-west quarter of the North-east quarter and the North-west quarter of the South-east quarter of Section Twenty-one, in Township Twenty-two North of Range six East, containing eighty acres of land more or less, Township of Grant, County of Iosco, State of Michigan.
Dated February 27, 1933.
The Peoples State Bank of East Tawas, Michigan, Mortgagee.
William T. Yeo, Attorney for said Mortgagee. Business address, West Branch, Michigan.

Rev. and Mrs. Harvey called at the home of Robert Buck on Wednesday.

Cigar Band's History

Visitors to Cuba visit a rich tobacco growing country. They learn, too, that Cuba introduced the band on cigars. Fashionable ladies years ago, afraid that the cigar would stain their fingers, brought out the cigar band for their protection.

Doing One's Best to the End

It was Robert Louis Stevenson who, I believe, said that if he knew he was to die tomorrow, he would go on just the same writing his story, finishing his book, striving to do something better than he had ever before done.

Saunders, who was entered in the two mile race, could see before he had done a mile that he was outdistanced by half the fellows who were competing with him. Some of the men who were outdistanced dropped out before they had completed the distance and lay on the grass to watch the finish. Not so, Saunders. He kept on to the end and sprinted his level best at the finish. He hadn't the ghost of a chance to win, but he was a sportsman who gave the best that was in him to the last second. Some day he'll win the race.

The last scholarship report showed that Collins was doing very poor work in his studies. He had not previously been an honor student, but he had at least done respectable work and I wondered what could be the matter with him.

"I can't come back next semester," he explained. "Father thinks it isn't wise for me to finish my course, and so I didn't see any reason for working hard. If I flunk out it cuts me no ice; I'm not coming back anyway."

FARM POULTRY

TO CHECK INROADS OF POULTRY LOUSE

Eradication Simple Matter, Specialist Says.

By R. E. GRAY, Extension Poultryman, Ohio State University.—WNU Service.

Controlling the inroads of the poultry louse upon the production of the farm flock is a relatively simple task. The first symptoms of lice infestation are droopiness, lowered wings, and ruffled feathers. In young chicks, diarrhea follows and chickens often die in a few days; or in older chicks they sometimes fall prey to various other diseases.

Mature birds sometimes are very heavily infested without showing much ill effects, but usually the egg yield is likely to decrease with a heavy lice infestation. In other cases, the mature bird may lose weight and die as a result of these little rapacious warriors.

Several different types of treatment have been designed for the control of lice; any one of which may be very effective. The big factor to be considered is the ease of treating the birds and the effect upon egg production.

Perhaps one of the best ways of controlling lice is by the use of nicotine sulphate. This material is applied to the top part of the perches just before the birds go to roost. The essential thing is to get as small a quantity as possible along the roosts and yet have some along the entire length of the roost. Although nicotine sulphate is very expensive, it has been found that a teaspoonful of the material is enough to treat the perches in a house with a capacity of 250 birds.

A second application should be made some eight or ten days after the first in order to destroy the newly-hatched lice.

Give Chicks Plenty of Room in Brooder House

"To successfully brood baby chicks a suitable brooder house and brooding equipment are necessary," says O. C. Ufford, extension poultryman for the Colorado Agricultural College.

"First of all, the brooder house should be large enough to comfortably accommodate without crowding the number of chicks to be brooded. A safe rule is to allow not over three chicks for each square foot of floor space.

Experiments have shown a direct relationship between death loss of chicks and the amount of brooder floor space allowed per chick.

"The brooder house should be constructed to conserve heat, but it should be arranged so there can be frequent changes in the supply of air.

"Sunlight is important for the normal growth of baby chicks. Sunshine is one of the best disinfectants. The brooder house should be so constructed that it will provide plenty of sunshine. Last, but not least, the brooder house should be made so it can be cleaned easily—so that every crack and crevice may be reached by disinfectants."

How to Make Cold, Damp Poultry House Warm, Dry

Recently it has been found that at very little cost except for labor half-monitor poultry houses can be transformed from cold and damp houses into warm and very satisfactory ones. First the windows at the top are entirely removed, and the south side of the roof is raised at the middle to meet the north roof, so as to make a two-slope gable roof. The whole side can be raised as a unit by loosening the rafters at the middle of the building and then several men lifting it up and splicing the rafters.

When the roof is completed, the windows which were at the top are put into the south wall so as to make it nearly all glass, stringers are put across about six feet above the floor, strips and a 12 to 18-inch layer of oats straw put on, and then slatted openings made in each gable end or ventilators put on the roof.—Prairie Farmer.

Sex Shown by Feathers.

At six weeks of age it is difficult, especially with the larger breeds, to tell sex. There are several "tests" offered among them this one: Pluck a few feathers from around the saddle and the base of the tail and hold them up to the light. If they are pointed they indicate a cockerel; if rounded, a pullet, it is claimed. Another way is to hold up the bird by the back of its neck with two fingers. If a male it will drop its legs; if a female it will draw them up close to the body.

Use of the Nest Egg

Nest eggs are not of any great value. The hens do not lay any better where they are used. Hens that are kept in a modern poultry house where there are sufficient nests and where the birds are fed and cared for properly do not need any nest eggs. Getting eggs is a matter of feed, and if there are plenty of nests, the hens will have no difficulty in finding them when they are in a laying mood, according to a poultry authority in the Montreal Herald.

Amnesia in Some Form Seems the Common Lot

Writes Waldemar Kaempfert in the New York Times:

"Since January, 1930, the New York Times has reported 64 cases of memory lapses as serious as that of Colonel Raymond Robins. There must have been hundreds more of which the press never heard. Men and women who forget who they are, and who wander about pathetically—totally new personalities so far as the world is concerned—are commoner than many of us suppose.

"The truth is that we all suffer a little from amnesia or loss of memory. Who has not had the experience of trying to recall the name of a person or place, apparently in vain, only to have it flash up vividly in the mind hours later and for no apparent reason? 'Normal amnesia' the physicians call the phenomenon.

"Luckily we have the power of reconstructing and synthesizing mental records of past events. It is only when the blankness covers long periods that amnesia is dangerous.

"Although they know little enough about the mind and its vagaries, psychiatrists classify amnesias. There are localized amnesias, which affect only certain groups of memories. A man may forget how to walk, for example, but not how to crawl or hop; his memory of writing may have gone, but he will still be able to talk.

"Then there are retrograde amnesias, in which it is impossible to remember what occurred immediately before some mental or physical shock. The victim of anterograde amnesia forgets experiences almost as fast as they occur. Paramnesias try to fill the gaps in the memory by illusions."

Art Criticism

A local primary teacher was giving the new 1B class its first lesson in art, which happened to be a picture of a little girl, and was to be drawn in crayon with the fewest possible strokes. She finished what she thought was a very good example and submitted it to the class for inspection. Her opinion of her own ability as an artist was somewhat subdued when one of her youthful pupils remarked:

"Teacher, it looks like you put gashes on this one!"—Indianapolis News.

AFTER 40 bowel trouble

Constipation may very easily become chronic after forty. And any continued constipation at that time of life may bring attacks of piles and a host of other unpleasant disorders.

Watch your bowels at any age. Guard them with particular care after forty. Whenever they need any help, remember a doctor should know what is best for them.

"Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is a doctor's prescription for the bowels. Tested by 47 years' practice, it has been found thoroughly effective in relieving constipation and its ills for men, women and children of all ages. It has proven perfectly safe even for babies. Made from fresh laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other harmless ingredients, it cannot grip; will not sicken you or weaken you; can be used without harm as often as your breath is bad, or when your tongue is coated; whenever a headachy, bilious, gassy condition warns of constipation.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

Black has come into prominence in decoration both in main features and in accessories. When used for the former decoration, black gives solidity and stability of almost a structural kind, as for instance when floors are painted or carpeted in the nubian tone. When used for the latter accessories, black subdues an over-brilliance of main features.

The present era of bizarre color schemes followed one of such drabness that the effect was often dreary. When the dullness reached its height, the pendulum swung to the farthest stretch of its orbit, and resulted in a blaze of bright hues. Because the riot of color was bewildering and confusing, something stabilizing was found essential. No color is so effective for this as black. It absorbs color. But it must be introduced with discretion and artistry.

Black has its peculiar characteristics, and these should be remembered. It emphasizes spots and dust. For example, a floor painted black is a good background for brilliant toned rugs or those of light tone, particularly when touches of black are found in the rugs. But black quickly shows dirt and "pussies," as little rolls of dust are called. The floor must be gone over frequently with a dry mop. Black carpets have not found much favor because they show up dust so distinctly. In rare instances decorators have used black for ceilings, but such treatments have not proved a happy one. Black in masses should be avoided.

"Neddy" Remains Faithful Servant

W. J. Much Spurious Currency Is Being Floated in U. S.

Counterfeiters Spur Activities in Depression.

Washington.—Depression and unemployment have brought an increase in counterfeiting and led to greater vigilance on the part of the United States secret service. Descriptive warning circulars of seventeen examples of counterfeit notes have been broadcast during the last fiscal year and about seventy unidentified productions of varying types and denominations have been circulated in different sections of the country for short periods.

"In all my experience I have never known a time when counterfeiting was so prevalent," said Chief W. H. Moran recently. The experience he referred to covers the last half century.

Idleness and hunger lead to desperation, and desperation has turned more than one honest man into a coun-terfeiter, according to Chief Moran, who observed that counterfeiting invariably increases in hard times.

Many Are Arrested.

The only real measure of the volume of counterfeiting now going on may be found in statistics relative to arrests and to the seizures of spurious money.

In the year ended June 30, 1932, counterfeit notes aggregating $540,538 and altered notes aggregating $24,215 were seized by government operatives of the service, and counterfeit coins totaling $49,773 were confiscated. About 2,000 persons were arrested charged with counterfeiting and passing counterfeit notes.

"The counterfeit notes captured during the year were largely used in evidence against the makers and passers," Chief Moran said. "In connection with investigations and arrests, agents captured or seized 900 plates and glass and film negatives for printing counterfeit obligations and securities, including five plates for foreign notes, 359 molds for counterfeiting coins, including three molds for foreign coins, and twenty-one dies, together with a

Church to Exhibit Crucifixion Coat

Trier, Germany.—Jesus' "coat without seam, woven from the top throughout," for which the soldiers cast lots after they had crucified him, will be shown from July 23 to September 3 in the Trier cathedral. This garment, one of the most valuable relics in the Christian world, is reputed to have been brought to Trier more than a thousand years ago by St. Helena, the mother of Emperor Constantine VI. It has been in the cathedral's treasure chamber since 1196. The coat has been exhibited a number of times in the last century—the last time in 1891, when more than two million Christians came from all parts of the earth to view it.

Information concerning counterfeiting operations is sometimes received by the secret service from anonymous sources; sometimes as a result of investigations of other crimes by local police; sometimes from persons seeking revenge. Capture of counterfeit money plants is thus sometimes possible before notes or coins actually have been put into circulation.

Only in rare instances does the counterfeiter escape. In normal times he is very soon caught. Under present conditions, Chief Moran said, he is able to remain at large for a longer period, because of the large volume of counterfeiting.

The public is warned from time to time by the secret service of the presence of bogus money in various parts of the country. Formal notices are given to the press together with a complete description of the spurious currency and the defects by which it may be detected.

"Oh. . . They fixed that in half an hour. Tiny was only a little late getting out. Of course, they're not our logs. What am I going to do?"

He was grinning. This was not the sort of thing to reveal wholly to a girl yet. Tactics such as this are men's affairs.

"I don't know. I've got to fix it up with Burke somehow. I don't see how we can use their logs legally; I don't see how they're going to get them out without jimmying us up. We'll have to go carefully, Ellen."

Her "Oh," he thought, was a bit dismayed.

"Don't worry," he assured her.

This was not Ellen calling again. It was Burke, as John had known the man would call or come.

"Steele? Burke talking. That was a nice one somebody pulled!"

"I'm with you! Why the devil can't your help block their loads so they're not running away and cluttering up other folk's mill-yards?"

"Say, you can force that line right now! You know—well that those loads didn't run away!"

"Well, if you know it all, prove something and suggest something."

"All right; we want our logs back!"

"Then go get 'em and send 'em around by the main line."

"Wh-what! Why, that's a two-hundred-mile haul. No, sir. We expect you to deliver those logs back to the crossing and stand a lawsuit if you put a single one of 'em through your mill!"

John grinned.

"We're no common carriers," he said. "You've got us on the haul in; you're no hold on us the other way. It's up to you to prove that those logs are anything but a nuisance to the Richards company. We can't litter the yard with 'em. If you don't get 'em out at once we'll have to saw 'em. Is that all?"

"Wait a minute!"

The man evidently turned aside and cupped his hand over the transmitter while he talked with another.

"I've got nothing else to say except this: we expect to have our logs back at the crossing by the end of the week!"

"And you tell whoever's there coaching you that logs are cluttering things up down below. If they aren't loaded out day after tomorrow we'll start in sawing 'em. Goodbye!"

He slammed up the receiver and turned away, eyes laughing.

He was on shaky ground, he knew, but he had misgivings on only one score: this was that he had been so firm in his stand that Gorbelt might take the matter out of Burke's hands and make his protest in person. He did not want to confront Paul Gorbelt yet; he was not ready to have his identity known in the country. He pondered the possibilities at length and finally decided that the general manager of an operation as big as Belknap & Gorbelt would not be chasing up the employees of another company. He would let Burke do the rest of the talking for him as Burke had done just now.

He would not have been so comfortable had he been aware of one incident which transpired after supper that night. He was in the office with Mark and Jack Tait when a light driving team came trotting silently into camp. The driver stepped down, tied the near horse to a sapling and approached the little building with a stride which bespoke determination. At the steps which led to the doorway he slowed, however. Light streamed through a window upon him; he glanced inside and stopped. . . . almost with a jolt.

John was standing where the rays of the hanging lamp fell full on his face, holding pipe in one hand and burning match in the other. The one outside watched John, closely, and after a moment he laughed softly to himself.

A man came out of the cook-shanty and walked towards the office. The visitor tugged at the visor of his fur cap and turned to meet him.

"Say, Jack," he said, "where's Steele?"

"Ain't he in the office there?" the other countered. "Sure he is! That's him, standin' up there."

"Oh, thanks," and with a muttered word about trying his team the man turned away from the buildings. He did no tying; he untied the one horse, mounted the seat and drove away smartly.

Then Paul Gorbelt pulled the horses to a walk and lighted a cigar. He smoked rapidly as he thought rapidly. He had gone into the Richards woods headquarters tonight to threaten and badger this stranger named Steele who was going so far in upsetting the fruition of a carefully laid plan. But he had not talked to him, had not thought of stolen logs from the moment he looked through the window. John Belknap, masquerading as John Steele! He removed the cigar from his mouth and laughed once, briefly and without mirth. Then he cut his team cruelly with the whip and drove on past his camp where he had planned to spend the night, speeding for Kampfest. . . . Let Burke handle the affair of stolen logs. Larger matters commanded his attention.

CHAPTER VII

His position had become untenable for John Belknap. A man can't make love to a girl when he has led her to think that he is another, can he? About such a situation, under the circumstances, was something unclear! A man does not want to tell a girl he loves only part of what there is to tell. He wants to tell it all, every sentence, word and syllable.

He had written the sheriff at length the night after DeYoung, the Belknap

He Slipped a Sheet of Paper Over the Penciled Lines.

& Gorbelt flier, had told his story, not trusting a word of that to script but setting down a theory as he had evolved it and outlining a program for the well-intentioned, likeable but slow thinking officer to follow. This afternoon Bradshaw had telephoned that certain investigations had been made and John rode in with the logs to determine what he had learned.

"Been waitin' for you," the sheriff said, scratching his head. "Sit, Steele. I done what you told me but it didn't seem to get us anywhere. Everything looks straight as a string."

"So? Just what'd you find?"

"Well, I did just what you suggested in your letter might be done. I went to Kampfest yesterday and made the point that the county didn't want to bury this lad and tried to locate his relatives."

his dark eyes glittering. Fear and hate and jealousy rode with him.

When he entered his office, however, he was controlled, apparently at peace with the world. He went to the Bank of Kampfest, gave orders to the cashier, visited a moment, and was in his office when the mill closed.

He stood in the doorway as the men streamed by and when Tucker approached he called the man to him. A girl came out, modestly dressed in a fur coat, a different sort of figure than those you will see on the streets of a northern mill town. Gorbelt broke his talk to Tucker.

"Oh, Marie!" The girl turned, showing a white face under the light, lips heavy with make-up, even, gleaming teeth. "I'll have some letters this evening. About eight!"

"All right," she said, and went on and Gorbelt turned again to Tucker.

When he had finished the man nodded.

"H—l, yes! You know, she's never been a hand to say much against folks. But I've heard her burn up old Belknap worse 'n if she'd cussed him out!"

More rapid mumbling from Gorbelt. "Front of Steele? . . . Why. . . I dunno. . . . Oh, yes! Once I did! She sure gave old Tom what-for to Steele! Day after we ditched your cars to tie 'em up." He laughed unpleasantly at recalling this act of treachery.

Gorbelt had told the stenographer to return at eight. He, however, was in his office again before seven, seated at his desk, writing slowly.

The outer door opened and closed; his office knob turned and the girl, Marie, came in.

"Lo!" she said in a half whisper. He smiled and spoke without looking up.

She took off her coat, removed the snug, felt turban, pulled off her galoshes and stood revealed, a silken-legged, low-necked, short-sleeved slip of a girl with eyes that might have been gentle, but were not, with a mouth that might have been tender, but was not.

"What's on?" she asked, fluffing her bobbed hair and approaching, laying a hand familiarly on Gorbelt's shoulder and leaning over to read what he was writing.

He slipped a sheet of paper over the penciled lines.

"Not yet!"

"What's the big idea?" she asked, hostility in the tone, drawing back.

He caught her wrist roughly and laughed as he drew her to his chair arm.

"Hot-headed baby!" he breathed,

John wondered. Usually when Ellen wanted to get in touch with him she left word for him to call. So it was with his curiosity roused that John left the train after its arrival, crossed the mill-yard and entered the street.

Lights were burning in the office, and he hastened in.

"Hello!" he said, opening the door and seeing Ellen alone at her desk.

She lifted her head slowly, and turned on him a face that was a mask of reserve. White, she was, and drawn, and her eyes smoldered.

"Hello. . . . Ellen! You sent for me. What's. . . what's the matter?"

She put down her pen slowly, opened a purse that lay on the desk beside her and took out a letter.

"Explain this," she said, and her tone was like ice. She seemed to be restraining herself, clinging with all her strength to her self-control.

Frowning, he took the envelope from her. Her name and address were written on it. The postmark, he saw, was Kampfest.

He shook out the single sheet of paper with hands that trembled.

"Dear Friend," he read. "In times of trouble it is up to women to stand together. I have known something for weeks that has been on my conscience. If you will look back you will see that most of the trouble which has come to you has been since the man who calls himself John Steele came to work for you. You may recall the things he apparently has done in your behalf; consider the things that have happened. This superintendent of yours conspired with Tucker, your roadmaster, to cause two wrecks on your railroad. He discharged Tucker to make his game seem convincing. Your barn was burned at his orders and a harmless tramp lost his life in it."

"Certain accomplishments have been placed to his credit. Your property, were it not for its being so heavily involved, would be on its feet. If your creditors should force you out now, they would be in a position to make the operation pay from the hour they took charge, thanks to what this so-called John Steele has done for them, under guise of doing it for you."

"All this may sound beyond belief, but just ask this Steele whether or not he is using his own name or if he is not known elsewhere as John Steele Belknap."

"Yours in sympathy,"

"A FRIEND."

His heart seemed to have stopped. Strength went from his legs.

"Why, that's a lie!" he choked.

"That's a black, infamous —"

"Wait a minute!" She had risen sent you in here!"

"Ellen, Ellen! Listen to me! He's a poor, old, ignorant man, Sandy. He's a man who's never written a letter of recommendation before. He simply forgot. . . . Don't you see?"

"Do you expect me to believe that?" she asked, suddenly calm.

He drew a deep breath.

"No," he said, and shook his head. "It sounds. . . . It won't do, true as it is!"

"And will any of the rest do? Can you explain all that's happened? You've done things, yes, but I see now why you did them. You did just enough to get the job in shape so that when your father and his partner and his son—hissing the word—'ruin this company, it will still be a going concern. You've made a showing in the woods; you've done just enough for the mill to keep the job afloat until you could close down on us!'"

She made a dismissing gesture with one small fist.

"I've been such a fool! I suppose it was all staged, that first encounter you had with Paul Gorbelt here. Well, you did it admirably. I'll give you credit for that. You fooled me; you worked me up emotionally until I was ready to grasp at anything for help. And I grasped. . . . at Tom Belknap's son!"

"It sounds logical," he said wearily.

"It sounds reasonable. It looks like a staged drama, yes. But, Ellen dear, won't you believe me when I say that I came to you that night determined to fight my father! That I had no inkling of the trouble here, that I stumbled into it and that when I found a woman was running this job I was bowled over!"

"Won't you believe that I jumped in, first, to settle a grudge against my father and that I have gone far enough now to be convinced that he has no hand in all this trouble that has been made for—"

"Stop! Stop! I beg of you, stop!" she broke in, stamping a foot. "Don't treat me like a child, John Belknap! If you'd come in here and told me your name, it would have been different, but you started with a lie, a lie! A carefully prepared lie! And anything founded on a lie must be evil; it doesn't need all the logic pointed out in this letter that came to me today to give it the color of evil!"

"Tom Belknap not fighting me? Tom Belknap not trying to ruin me? Tears sprang to her eyes. "Black is white, east is west. . . . Oh, John Belknap, what a fraud you are!"

She dropped into her chair, elbows on desk, hands over her face.

"Ellen!" He tried to touch her but she shook off his hand.

"Don't touch me! Don't come near me! Don't let me ever hear the sound of your voice or see your face again! To think. . . . to think that only yesterday I thought. . . . I hoped I. . . . I wanted. . . ."

"Oh, won't you get out?" She dropped her hands and turned her distressed, tear-wet eyes to him. "Won't you please go now?"—voice growing light and feeble. "Won't you please go away from me?"—one hand crumpling paper with jerky movements. "Won't you get me alone now, with what I've got left? Won't you. . . . if you have any decency left in you?"

Shaken, he backed away.

"I'll go," he said. "I'll go. . . . But I'll be near. I'll be helping you, I'm. . . . I'm what I am. Time may show it but. . . . I'm going. . . ."

He turned towards the door quickly, feet unsteady on the floor.

Balked at Court Decision

The saying "John Marshall has made his decision; now let him enforce it" was ascribed to President Andrew Jackson and its occasion was a decision of the Supreme court in one of the cases involving the Cherokee Indian nation and the state of Georgia. The Supreme court had found in favor of the Indians, but, as the interests of the United States, as well as the state of Georgia, were believed by Jackson to be superior, the Indians were gradually displaced from their lands in spite of the treaty subsisting.

Europe Easily in Lead With Christian Sects

Europe is the most Christian of the continents, figures assembled by Dr. Olaf Morgan Norlie, president of the American Lutheran Statistical association, and Dr. George Linn Kieffer, president of the American Religious Statisticians, have shown. Europe has more professing Christians than all the other world divisions combined, and the percentage of these to its total population is far higher than that of any other continent.

But all the Christians in the world total only 28 1/2 per cent of the population, the compilation says, their number being 558,027,965 and that of the non-Christians 1,416,049,560.

However, if Christianity is compared with the separate non-Christian religions instead of with the total, then it is easily in the lead. For its 28.27 per cent compares with 17.77 per cent for Confucianism and Taoism, 11.65 per cent for Hinduism and 11.09 per cent for Mohammedanism.

If, in turn, Christianity is divided into its major groups, the Roman Catholics comprise 15.08 per cent of the world's population, the Protestants 6.74 per cent, and the Orthodox Catholics 6.45 per cent, according to estimates which have had the indorsement of statisticians.

EVENTS LEADING UP TO THIS INSTALLMENT

"Tom" Belknap, big timber operator, ordered by his physicians to take complete rest, plans a three months' trip abroad. Promises of advancement he has made to his son John are broken, and the young man is indignant. Paul Gorbelt, Belknap's partner, is a bone of contention. Father and son part without an understanding. At Shoestring, his train delayed by a wreck, John is mobbed. After a fist fight, his attackers realize it is a case of mistaken identity. John learns his father is believed to be out to wreck the Richards lumber company. Bewildered and unbelieving, he seeks employment with that company. At the office he finds Gorbelt bullying a young girl, and throws him out. Gorbelt does not recognize him. The girl is Ellen Richards, owner of the company. A letter he carries gives John's name as John Steele, the Belknap being dropped, inadvertently, and John, knowing the feeling against his father, allows Ellen to believe that is his name. Ellen engages John as her superintendent. A series of attempts to handicap operations of the Richards company culminates in the wrecking of a snow plow. John, admiring Ellen's bravery, begins to have a sentimental attachment for the girl, which is returned. The Richards barn and stables burn. In the blazing structure John finds the dead body of a stranger. He realizes the fire was set, but refuses to believe his father could be a party to such an act. Steele and Sheriff Bradshaw arrange to work together on the case.

and kissed her arm. "It's a letter to another girl. But when you've read it through you'll understand. And I'm going to let you read it."

He patted her back and the temper receded from her face slowly.

"Well, ever since I caught you writing to this Richards party, and found out you'd been going to see her and lying to me about it, I've naturally been suspicious."

"Can't you see?" he pleaded impatiently. "You know the state things are in now! Let me get hold of this Richards property on my own, let me get things running here as they should go and I'll throw you a party, preacher and all, that'll startle even the picture crowd in Hollywood!"

"Well, seeing's believing."

"And what I've got on now is just about the knock-out. I want you to read this and hold your temper until you get to the end. I want you to copy it on plain paper and address an envelope. I'm going to mail it. . . . Read, Marie, a bomb-shell!"

"Well, for gosh sakes!" was her comment, blue eyes widening in amazement. "Is it a fact?"

"Sure as you're born!" He slapped the desk. "See what it means? See what it'll do?" He talked rapidly, eyes narrowed in earnestness.

The girl listened, and when he had finished she took a long breath.

"You're the cats when it comes to scheming!" She was silent a moment, thrusting out her lower lip. "If it was anybody else I'd be sorry for her. But her. . . . Pff! If you ever look at her again, I'll give her a boy-bob and no mistake. . . . And maybe trim you along with it!"

She took the chair he had vacated and drew writing materials towards her, preparing to copy what he had written.

Two days later, shortly after noon, as he entered the office, the clerk wheeled to John:

"Ellen telephoned. She said for you to come in with the loads tonight, sure."

now, and stood before him. "What," she asked, as though her voice would break, "what is your name?"

"Why, that's all right. I can explain it. I am John Belknap, I did—"

"And this! Explain this! I remembered, you see!"

She whipped a telegram from her desk, thrusting it towards him. It was from the State Bank of Ferryville, the nearest bank to Witch Hill. It read:

"Witch Hill Lumber Co. owned by Belknap Lumber Co., Chicago stop S. McIver is superintendent."

"Why. . . . why, yes, Ellen. That's all true. But, you see, I couldn't let you think I'm who I am. . . . I couldn't come in here and offer to help you, admitting my own name, could I?"

"Why not?" she asked bitingly.

"You wouldn't have believed me, feeling as you have about my father."

She laughed then, with a wildness which startled him.

"Right! How right you are! I wouldn't have believed, no! I wouldn't have let a Belknap set foot on my property! I didn't believe that anonymous letter when it came in; I didn't want to. My first impulse was to tear it up, forget it. . . . And then I remembered that my father always said a man who was right could stand investigation. I looked up Witch Hill, I telegraphed that bank and you've read the answer. . . ."

She paused, panting.

"But, Ellen—"

"Never mind! I'm going to talk now! It's a woman's privilege to talk, isn't it?"—a bit hysterically. "I've heard it said it's a woman's privilege to have the last word, too. . . . Well, I'm having it, John Steele Belknap."

"No, you didn't dare reveal yourself. So you have a superintendent write a lie. You may have worked as camp foreman for him, but not as John Steele. He knew you weren't John Steele. He knew your full name because it was your father's money that paid him, your father's money that I am fully aware of the fact that, under the new tax limitation of the constitution, some very close figuring has got to be done in order to get by and continue to run our schools and government. To do this we will have to curtail expenses in many places. I am convinced, however, that especially in the rural districts, we can come very close to getting under the wire. I feel sure the job could be accomplished if we could find a way to increase the Primary School Fund or create some other fund for helping the most needy districts. There has been a most persistent propaganda carried on by school organizations to the effect that the money available for education should not be decreased and that school activities should be kept up to present standards. I agree with the standard part of the proposition, especially in our primary and high schools. Information at my command, however, tells me that in 1931 teachers were paid salaries in Michigan amounting to $57,798,090.65, and that this item in 1933 will be under $40,000,000.00, and that other expenses connected with running the schools are correspondingly reduced. Therefore, the cost not only will, but already has, been reduced. I will continue to insist, however, that the ten million annually that we have been taxing ourselves for so-called higher education shall be very drastically cut. For years we have been spending millions to teach our young people how to get through life without work. I think it is high time we were teaching them that work is a privilege and not a disgrace.

Now to get back: The first step is to cut the cost. The state tax could and should be cut to below $15,000,000.00. Our school costs should and will be cut at least 25%. Now, if we could create a special fund of, say, five to ten million dollars with a beer tax, chain store tax, amusement tax or some luxury tax or a combination of all the above that would bring in about ten million dollars to be used for school purposes, it would be very much better than to start some new general tax to which there might be no limit and which we probably never would get rid of.

In any new tax we set up, we must keep in mind, first, that we do not increase the cost of government out of all proportion to the tax collected. For instance, the handling of the proposed sales tax would require hundreds of additional state employees. The tax collector would hardly be gone from your door, before the auditor or inspector would be stepping in. Look at the possibility of building up a political machine that would be practically unbeatable.

Without a question, we are now suffering from too much government. Let us not increase it. The total tax bill of the state last year was $475,000,000—within a few dollars of the total food bill which was $488,000,000, or $160,000,000 more than the total amount of all farm products. The amount received for all farm products in Michigan last year was $319,600,000.

Again I repeat, we must lower the cost of government first, and remember this cannot all be done at Lansing. Some of this must be done at home. The important thing at this moment is not a new tax, but less taxes of every kind.

"When trouble comes we turn to fundamentals. Home becomes dearer. Neighbors and friends mean more. We understand better the mission of the church. We appreciate the services of the school. If schools are a blessing in good times, they are an imperative necessity in bad times. They safeguard the health of the child; they fortify the home; they give hope and encouragement to citizens who are the victims of misfortune but who can take satisfaction that their children are cared for. The schools are ourselves (collectively) working together in the education of our children. When times are hard we need to make that education better—to take more seriously our common task of preparing the young for life.

Times which suggest retrenchment call for increased safeguards for schools. Next to food, clothing and shelter, they stand between us and chaos. Let us preserve and improve our schools. Let us keep the children first."—Centralight.

Seventh and Eighth Grades
Everyone in our room is looking forward to the vacation on Good Friday.

We are using the spelling books that were made in Art class, and Mrs. Bigelow says they are a great improvement over the old note books.

The following pupils had perfect spelling papers: In the seventh grade—Emma Sawyer, Raymond Boos, Kenneth Smith, Joy Smith, Richard Ziehl, Lydia Moore. Margaret Fox, Lucille Ziehl, Mahal Brown, Lucille Herman; in the eighth grade—Laurie Frank, Marion Lickfelt, and Effie Prescott.

Patsy Lovejoy visited our room on Monday, and Augusta Joppich on Wednesday.

We are sorry to have William Sims still absent on account of illness.

Fifth and Sixth Grades
Many interesting "Safety" talks were given by the members of the Busy Bee Health Club at the weekly meeting Friday afternoon. Those on the program committee were Martha Herman and Nina Lickfelt.

The sixth grade has been enjoying "Red Man or White" in connection with its history work. This is a true story of a white boy raised by Indians.

Third and Fourth Grades
The following people had perfect spelling papers last week: Lucille Bowen, Peter Pfeiffer, and Nona Frances Rapp.

Mary Sims was absent Wednesday forenoon.

We have started Nature Study and are studying about birds—their nests, eggs, colors, habits, etc.

Primary Room
Elsie Rollin and Gay Young of Alabaster entered the first grade Monday.

Harry Rollin, Lou and Neil Libka are back at school after having been ill with chicken pox.

ly the worst of this came from individuals who were not in the tournament and did not know what they were talking about and whose opinions were therefore based largely on personal prejudices.
The principal constructive criticism of the first bridge tournament a year ago was that many of the players were eliminated the first evening and that absences were not allowed without forfeiture. An attempt was therefore made this year to allow everyone to play as many evenings as they chose and to allow a reasonable number of absences without being penalized. This concession to the will of the players became the principal criticism of this year's tournament in that partnerships whose opponents were absent had to be matched arbitrarily and in such fashion that they would not meet twice during the tournament. If another tournament should be held it is to be recommended that some form of forfeit be set for partnerships which were absent and that the partnership which was to play the absentees should benefit by the forfeit without playing.
In any event, whether or not there are more tournaments must necessarily be decided by popular demand. If this form of entertainment is not enjoyed by those participating then it is obviously a waste of time and effort. But if such tournaments are desired and are held then those participating as well as their friends should refrain from allowing their personal prejudices to influence their opinions and criticisms of other contestants or the management. As long as tournaments are held there will have to be regulations to govern their general conduct and there will never be a set of regulations which will please everyone. The best that we can do is to try to please the majority and in the future to remedy the current faults which are disclosed by experience.
