AUTO-STEALING NEW GANGSTER MONEY RACKET

Large-scale, organized automobile stealing, latest of the rackets to pay a dividend to the underworld, forms the basis of the plot of "The Devil Is Driving," drama booked for the State Theatre next week Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Edmund Lowe, Wynne Gibson, James Gleason, Lois Wilson, Dickie Moore and Allan Dinehart head the cast.

The methods of the auto-stealing gangs—the manner in which they pick up cars, smuggle them to safety, change their features so that they cannot be recognized, and dispose of them—are revealed for the first time in the picture.

Against this exciting background moves the equally exciting story of a good-natured, wise-cracking mechanic who breaks up the gang after his nephew and brother-in-law have been made innocent victims. His romance with an equally good-natured, equally smart-aleck nightclub hostess, runs through the picture.

TAWAS WINS LEAGUE OPENER

Tawas City opened its league campaign Sunday with a 4-3 victory over Gladwin. The contest was played at the local athletic field.

Effective batting in the early part of the game accounted for all of the locals' runs. Two counters were tallied in the second frame, followed by another in the third, and their final one in the fourth. At this stage of the game Adams, who had been handling the pitching assignment for Gladwin, gave way to Greer, who finished the contest without allowing another score.

Although Gladwin outhit the Tawas City crew, 12 to 9, they failed to come through at the proper times. They went scoreless until the sixth, when their first counter was tallied. Things were quiet again until the ninth, when the visitors chased up a big cloud of dust by scoring two runs. Moeller, local hurler, who had been very successful in holding down the Gladwin boys throughout the first eight innings, slipped somewhat in the ninth when victory was within his grasp. With Gladwin's tying run on third and one man out he settled down, however, and whiffed the last two batters.

During the course of the game Moeller collected a total of ten strike-outs. Adams had five to his credit, and Greer three.

STATE THEATRE WILL BE RE-OPENED SATURDAY

The State Theatre, which has been closed for several months, will be re-opened Saturday night. The interior of the building has been re-decorated and the front painted.

"Private Jones," with Lee Tracy as Private Bill Jones, the scrappingest doughboy who ever carried a mess kit, has been selected by the management as the re-opening picture. "Private Jones" will also be shown Sunday and Monday nights.

As a draft-dodger who couldn't see any reason to get killed for the sake of democracy, who couldn't feel the slightest pang of patriotism, who rebelled his way through the A.E.F., who was branded "yellow" by his fellow soldiers, who was everything that an American doughboy did not represent, but who proved his mettle when the time came in his scuffling, hard-boiled, devil-may-care manner, Tracy rises to heights of greatness never before approached. He'll thrill you, anger you, amuse you—you'll know him for what he is—the greatest war character, the most vivid personality of the dear old drab days ever presented on the screen!

Plan at once to see this genuine epic of the American soldier, to see Tracy, the incomparable, in a picture that will hold you and stay in your memory forever, Gloria Stuart, Bertton Churchill, Donald Cook, Frank McHugh, Russell Gleason, Emma Dunn, Shirley Grey—a great cast in the greatest human drama of their careers!

See the advertisement on another page of this issue of The Herald for special added attractions at the State Theatre.

McIVOR—FISHER

A pretty wedding took place Saturday afternoon, May 27, when Miss Gladys Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Fisher of Roseville, became the bride of Harvey McIvor, son of Mrs. Clara McIvor of Grant township. Rev. Joseph Kennedy of Mt. Clemens performed the ceremony at the Presbyterian church in Roseville.

The bride was attired in a dress of white crepe with a long veil and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Kathleen Bossett of Roseville acted as maid of honor and was dressed in pale yellow organdie and carried pink roses. Mrs. Inez Glaser, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a pale green organdie dress, and also carried pink roses. Little Margaret Roberts, as flower girl, was dressed in pink and carried a basket of roses.

Orval Brown of Tawas City served the groom as best man, and Harold Glaser of Roseville acted as usher.

Mrs. Clara McIvor, mother of the groom, Mrs. Will Brown and son, Orval, of Tawas City attended the wedding.

IOSCO COUNTY INDEPENDENTS WIN THREE GAMES IN ROW

The Iosco County Independents made it three wins in a row Tuesday when they defeated Whittemore at Sand Lake by a 10-6 score. The Ioscos collected a total of 14 hits off the offerings of the Whittemore hurlers, McPherson and Norton, while C. Frank, the I. C. I. moundsman, held his opposing batsmen to nine safeties. Frank whiffed 13 batters, McPherson five and Norton three. Delos Snyder, first man to bat for the Ioscos in the sixth inning, hit a home run.

On Sunday the I. C. I. defeated the Hale Tigers at Hale by a 5 to 1 count. Slosser for Hale and C. Frank for the Ioscos staged a fine pitchers' duel until the seventh inning, neither of them allowing a run until that frame. The Independents then put three men over the plate and followed up in the eighth by scoring two more runs. Hale's lone tally came in the ninth. Frank struck out eight of the Tigers, while Slosser retired four men by the same route.

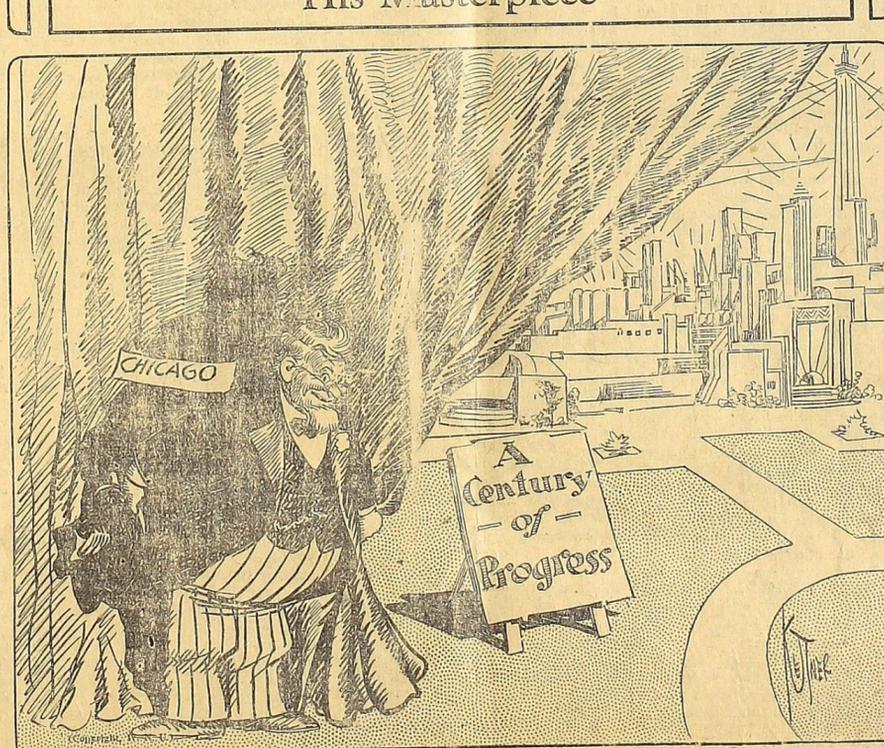

A week ago Sunday the Iosco County Independents nosed out the Alabaster nine by a 6-4 score at Sand Lake. A big splurge in the opening frame netted the Ioscos all of their six runs. Alabaster collected one run in the fourth and their remaining three in the seventh. C. Frank was the winning pitcher in this contest, and was opposed on the mound by J. Roiter. Frank fanned eleven men. Roiter struck out six.

HIS MASTERPIECE

TAKEN ON ABDUCTION CHARGE

Mr. and Mrs. Fred McDonald of Oscoda were arrested Saturday at Detroit charged with abducting Mrs. Katherine Cowley by coercion. Mrs. Cowley is the wealthy widow of the late Frank G. Cowley of Oscoda. She is ill and alleged mentally incompetent and her brother, Ernest Bailey, of Prescott had been appointed temporary guardian.

Complaint was made against the McDonalds by Ernest Bailey. At the death of Mr. Cowley the principal part of the estate went to Mrs. Cowley. It consisted of the well-known VanEtta Lake Lodge and other real estate which had been valued at about $200,000.00. Some time after the estate had been settled in probate court Mrs. Cowley gave McDonald power of attorney. Bailey and members of the Cowley family allege that McDonald is destroying the property. That in one instance sixteen cottages valued at $300.00 apiece had been sold at from $100.00 to $150.00 each. That in many ways the property had been dissipated with no benefit to Mrs. Cowley.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald were arraigned Saturday before Justice W. C. Davidson. A hearing will be held June 12. The McDonalds are held under a $1,000.00 bond.

At a session of probate court held yesterday before Probate Judge David Davison, Ernest Bailey, the brother, was appointed general guardian to conserve the property to Mrs. Cowley's interest. Mr. Bailey was also placed in charge of his sister. Attorney H. R. MacGillis of Detroit represented Bailey and the Cowley family at the hearing.

MRS. DAVID COOPER

Mrs. David Cooper, 55 years, six months and three days old, died Saturday, May 27, at the Omer hospital. Mrs. Cooper was taken to the hospital Saturday, May 20, and underwent an operation the following Wednesday. She had been ill for about five months.

Charlotte Isabelle Cooper was born in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, on November 24, 1877, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel DeGow. On July 2, 1901, she was united in marriage to David Cooper in Reno township, Iosco county, Michigan.

Besides the husband, she leaves five children to survive—Rex Cooper of Flint, Lloyd Cooper of East Tawas, Mrs. J. H. Jacobsen of Oakland California, Grace and George Cooper of East Tawas; also several grandchildren. Other surviving relatives are: Mrs. Alice Waters of Reno township, John DeGow of Birmingham, Mich., Mrs. O. S. Burton of Pensacola, Florida, and Miss Elizabeth DeGow of East Tawas.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the Christ Episcopal church, of which the deceased was a member. Rev. C. E. Edinger officiated. Interment was in the Reno cemetery.

The deceased was born September 28, 1885, in Detroit. He was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fernette, Sr., of East Tawas, and had lived in Detroit previous to his coming to East Tawas 21 years ago.

Those left to mourn his death are his parents, and the following brothers and sisters: Alfred Fernette of Corunna, Miss Josephine Fernette and Mrs. Elizabeth Jacobs of Detroit. Mrs. Josephine Fernette, Mrs. Nick Williamson, Mrs. Arthur Bartlett, Harry Fernette, Mrs. Oxel Johnson, Mrs. Lawrence Gregory, Joseph Fernette, Floyd Fernette and Madeleine Fernette, all of East Tawas, and Mrs. Clinton Kilpatrick of Tawas Point.

The funeral services were held Monday morning from the St. Joseph church, with Rev. Fr. E. A. Kirchhoff officiating. Burial was made in the Catholic cemetery.

Richard Dix comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday and Monday, June 4 and 5, in "The Great Jasper," with Wera Engels, Edna May Oliver and a large cast. The picture is an adaptation by H. W. Hanemann and Robert Tasker of Fulton Oursler's novel of the same title.

"The Great Jasper" is said to provide Dix with his greatest screen characterization, that of a free lance character who waded with no woman lover whose wick was able to resist, except his wife was able to resist.

His successful way with women is the means by which he climbs from the position of driver of a horse car to an Atlantic city fortune teller whose heart advice "to women only" brings him a fortune. The fascinating things about this Great Jasper is that no woman ever bore him malice. Even his own wife, to whom he couldn't be faithful, wished she had tried to understand him better.

A Romance of the North Woods

But a man with a job of work to do can't fail, can he? Not when failure means tragedy, can he? John Belknap struck hard; the blow landed squarely on Gorbels' mouth and John was free, with the sweet air flooding his throat, with the buzzing dying out, but as he rolled over the other kicked, his pac toe caught John in the side, threw him against the wall, knocking down an ax which was leaning there. He was free, but Gorbels also was free, and scrambling towards the stove, stooping over to retrieve the pistol.

He gave a crow of triumph as he whirled, weapon in his hand. He brought the muzzle to his mark but as he pulled he ducked because an ax was swinging towards him, swung hastily and none too surely. A man on his knees cannot seize an ax and fling it all in one movement and be sure. . . .

CHAPTER XIV

John found her cowering against the wall. He lifted her slowly to her feet. "It's all right, Ellen!" he said gently. "It's all over!"

He led her out into the wrecked room, which showed Paul Gorbels, bound hand and foot in a chair, leaning forward, sobbing, straining with futile movements against his bonds.

"That's what you wanted!" he croaked. "That's what you wanted!"—nodding at them as they stood, John supporting the girl by an arm about her shoulders. "That's why you came, eh?"

"No, Gorbels. I didn't know, or it would have been why. I came with a warrant that Nat Bradshaw tried to serve. And there'll be another for you by now. For murder, maybe, Gorbels."

"Murder? Murder?" His voice was shrill and he wrenched his wrists against the unyielding belt. "No, no! That can't be. . . . No murder. Mistake! Mistake, I tell you, Belknap! D—n mistake!"

"Tell you!"—licking his lips. "I'll tell you. . . . I'll trade with you, Belknap. . . . John. I'll trade. You got her now. . . . She's yours, when she knows. . . . I'll trade you what I know for this warrant you talk about!" He was panting, as if just in from an exhausting foot race. "Tell you, John. . . . I'll trade. Yes, she's what you want; she's more than anything else to you. More 'n a warrant; more 'n anything. . . . Let me loose. . . . I'll tell you everything."

out without a scratch; going to own the Richards company, too. . . . Yes! . . . I did it all, and put the bee on old Tom! Understand that? He never knew a whisper! He never guessed. Waited until he was on his way to Europe and then I squeezed!—nodding. "Squeezed! I wrecked trains and burned barns and the poor devil that . . ."

"Arson? . . . Arson, John? Got that warrant? Give it to me now. . . . I've come clean; you give me a break. . . ."

"Oh, don't! Don't let him go on!" Ellen whispered.

She buried her face on John's chest, and he gathered her close, turning his back to Gorbels whose chin now sagged low as he sobbed hoarsely.

"Hold it!" he whispered, mouth against her ear. "Hold it, old fellow! It's an ordeal but—"

"But worth it!" She caught up his word and lifted her face to look into his. "Anything's worth it. . . . To know . . . oh, John, John! How could I ever have believed it? What a silly, blind girl I—"

"Not that!" he broke in tensely, shaking her. "If it hadn't been for that, he might have gone unpunished. Understand that? It's only a few days, a few weeks out of our lives. . . . Don't you understand that, Ellen? And we're young! We still have so many days, so many weeks before us!"

"But I want them all. . . . I don't want to lose . . . even a second!" she said.

She might have said more had his lips not stopped her words. They stood so in that first, long kiss.

They did not hear the opening of the door, did not see Wolf Richards' amazed and truculent gaze sweep his room with its littered floor, the smashed chair, did not see him stare at Paul Gorbels nor at them.

But as he stepped in and stamped snow from his feet they sprang apart, wheeling towards him.

"S all right!" he yelled. "S all right! Don't mind me, young uns! H—I to pay here, I see! Place runt! Paul Gorbels under my roof where I'd never have him. Tied up, too, which means something! But S all right! S all right! Nothin' matters but what ails you two, for sure! Nothin' else matters a-tall!"

It was evening when that strange procession made its way into Kampfest, John Belknap in the lead, Wolf Richards behind him, dogs and toboggan with its bundled burden next and Ellen walking in the trail they made.

"This is it: 'Dear Johnny—If you read this, it will be because the doctors overlooked a lot of shakes and blow-downs when they cruised my insides two weeks ago. I've kept my mouth shut about being under the weather; time enough to worry folks when there's a cause, especially your mother. They tell me that three months of rest will put me spry again. I hope they're right for a lot of reasons, but only one of them frets me much."

"This is because if I hit the grade for the last time now you are going to beat me to finding out just how big a monkey I've been made in the Kampfest operation. Yes, son, things are wrong up there. I guess you were right in your estimate of Gorbels. For over a year I've been certain that a plenty is being put over on us. I can't run it down now; that is a job for a well man. I'm going off to get well so I can fix what I broke."

"If there's one thing I've prided myself on it was the picking of men. I took Gorbels on, first, because he had a hold on just the layout you and I needed for the Big Job; and, second because—spite of all of you—he looked good to me."

"There are some men who can admit mistakes, but a Belknap hates to. When we have to, though, we want to do it ourselves and not have somebody else finding out what fools we've been. Besides, any man with a son like you wants to be able to turn over the works to him without any messes to clean up. I don't even want you to guess that there's a mess until I get it fixed up. Then I can tell you and save my face. That is straining a point, perhaps, but if you ever have the sort of a son you should have—such a son as you are to me—you'll get the idea that the admiration and respect of a boy will keep his old dad hustling to be worthy of them."

"The thing that I especially want to keep is the look that used to be in your eyes when I used to drag you by the hand around through millyards and along skid roads. You were only about hopper-grass high then. You'd get hot in summer and cold in winter; the flies would bite you and you'd be tired and hungry. But it was always all right with you. Anything I did was all right. You believed in me. For you, I was durned near infallible and able to do anything I set out to do. I've got to hang on to that, Johnny; it's the real treasure I've had in life."

"You'll be in soon. For the second time I'm going to steer you away from Kampfest. It's going to break your heart and mine, too. But you're not going to show it; neither am I. The reason is that we're Belknaps, and the breed doesn't show hurts or affections much. It feels a lot, though, and so if the doctors are wrong and you have to get your explanation this way, please believe that I'm hurting you so I can have a chance to wash the clothes I've dirtied and by doing so keep your respect."

"And above all, you must realize this; that an old man has a devil of a time playing up to what a father of a son like you should be. I'm so proud of you it keeps me awake nights. Good luck; God bless you."

"TOM."

Harrington paused. His voice had shaken a trifle on the last.

John blinked his eyes and cleared his throat with a brave, long hurr-rump!

"Tll . . . I'll . . ." he began. "I guess I'll be d—d—weakly."

"But you should have heard him cheer, clear across the Atlantic, when I told him what the afternoon papers said, about all the double-crossing you'd forced Gorbels to confess."

"And he said for you to stay right there in Kampfest and run the job and that he was coming to ask for a chance to help—that's just what he said; to ask for a chance to help—as fast as boats and trains can bring him. Says that he feels fit as a fiddle and had already booked passage two weeks earlier than he'd intended to. You can use your own judgment, of course, but I don't know as I'd make any important changes until he gets here."

John reached out for Ellen's hand. "How long will it take him?" he asked, commencing to smile.

"Why, not long; ten days, say."

"Ten days! Don't you call that long? . . . What's that?"—leaning closer to the phone as the wire went bad for a moment. "Oh . . . the job! Sure, the job can stagger along for ten days without any changes. But there are other things up here, Harrington, so important that they make the job look like a joke. . . . And ten days? Man, for these other things, ten days is ages . . . and ages . . ."

THE FABLE OF HOW WEDDINGS HAVE SOLD OFF

By GEORGE ADE

IT CAME about that during this very October, Rosalie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Jellaby, was fairly dragged to the Altar by Walter Dingleforth, whose Father owns the Furniture Factory and pays a Jimcracking Income Tax, even if he does hire an Expert to protect him, so that on the Day when their high-grade Offspring left them forever (maybe), Mr. and Mrs. Jellaby could hardly refrain from doing Jig Steps.

The Architect who planned the Jellaby Home had not counted on taking care of 200 Guests at one time, consequently, when the big Doings were pulled off, about half of the Ringside Spectators were parked in Hallways or Closets or on the Stairway. When the Bids went out, no one was overlooked, because the Young People would need almost everything when they started in to furnish a large Apartment.

Mr. and Mrs. Jellaby decided to cut it wide and handsome because this would be their only Chance to make a Splash on the Society Page. Besides, they figured that it wouldn't cost any more to put on the Show than it would to keep Rosalie in Stockings for another Year. They were getting rid of the main Expense Account and could afford to bust over.

A Golden Gibble.

So they had a Strip of Red Carpet, Maiden-Hair Ferns, a special Harpist seated behind Palms, a Caterer who brought a wagonload of Indigestibles and a Rector who was so High Church that you couldn't understand what he said. Everything was Oo-la-la and right up to the Handle. A great Day for the Jellabys! You said it.

It was a Daylight Affair, 12 o'clock Central Time, with everything sped up because the Young Couple had to get the Limited so as to catch the Boat for Europe which Rosalie rather wanted to see, as she never had been east of Akron.

The Main Bout went off great. It had been rehearsed until it was as smooth as a Belasco First Night. They had Bridesmaids, who looked like festooned Marshmallows, and terrified little Girls strewing Posies and a freshly shaven Male Body Guard in Undertaking Costumes whose Collars were too tight. It was a regular Wedding. After the two Principals had been legally welded and the rabid Assemblage was fighting for Lobster Salad and Pimento Sandwiches, of course there were all sorts of Comments, mostly right out in the Open and favorable. Nearly everybody said that the Bride looked cunning and had done very well by herself in snaring a Gibble who probably had a million already, with more in sight, and was sufficiently educated to sign Checks, even if he couldn't read a Book. What you might call an Ideal Husband.

Kickless Punch.

Among those who were trying to last it out was a ruddy old Bachelor who dated back to the Happy Days when they locked people up for discussing Birth Control, but permitted them to drink Absinthe. He was sitting over in a corner with two ossified Crabs who could almost remember the Mexican War and he was telling them what a Hardship it was to get up at Sunrise in order to see some weak-brained Youth jump over the Precipice.

"It's all right if you suffer from Insomnia," said the unmarried Renegade, "but now that I am up, what am I going to do all the rest of the day? Whoever invented these 12 o'clock Weddings had a swell idea, with the reverse English. Wait till the Whistle blows and then hop to it. I am telling you that in the by-gone Era when Nights were not wasted on Slumber, it would have been impossible to have this Show at Noon. At that Hour the Groom was always in a Turkish Bath trying to get back on Earth after the Dinner for the Best man, the Ushers and all others who happened to be thirsty. As a Rule the Lads didn't come up for Air until 6 P. M. No one knew when the Ceremony would take place. After all the Stragglers had answered the Roll-Call, then the Preacher was given the High Sign and told to shoot the Works."

"Have you tried the Punch?" asked one of the Old-Timers. "I suspect that the Coloring Matter is Aniline."

"I have wrapped myself around five of them, hoping against Hope," replied the Bachelor. "All of the Women still look Plain to me, so I suspect that the Recipe was borrowed from the Rockefeller Foundation. If the Stuff carries a Message, it must be in Code, because I can't get anything out of it."

A Rough-House Meal.

"Things have come to a direful Pass when they got to have one Plain Clothes Man to watch the Presents and two to watch the Guests. The Refreshments may contain a lot of Vitamins, but they are shy on Mirth and Laughter. No one wants to make a Speech. The Bride hasn't been mugged up. The Decorations remain Stationary. I'll say the Party is a Flop."

In a secluded Apartment where the Ladies had stacked their Wraps a well-preserved Matron was letting off Steam.

the wedding Breakfast was a sitdown affair which lasted for Hours and all those present wouldn't have to eat anything for Days and Days after it was all over. Instead of putting 'R. S. V. P.' on the lower Corner of the Invite, they should put 'Cafeteria Service.' If you haven't trained for one of these Affairs the Chances are that by the time you get to the Trough there will be nothing left except Olives. The only safe Plan is to bring your own Lunch or else wear a Gymnasium Suit."

At this another Old Girl said that she could remember when Getting Married was an Event instead of a mere Incident. That is to say, when the Twain stood up to receive their Sentences there was much Weeping, because the Witnesses knew that both of them were in for Life.

"Why don't they change the Word—?" she demanded. "Instead of that antiquated Apple Sauce about staying on the Job until 'death do us part,' why not make it, 'until we get fed up on Each other?'"

"Lady, you put a whole Chapter into a couple of Lines," said the first Matron. "It seems only yesterday when all the Folks on the Side-Lines were worried about the little Pawn who was going to emerge from the Sheltered Life and assume the large Responsibilities of Life. Nowadays the Pawn is just as timid as a Bengal Tiger. She has looked up his Nobs in Dun and Bradstreet and she knows, to a Nickel, what she can shake out of him every Year. She is stage-managing the whole Spectacle and the Parents are taking Orders. If she seems Nervous it is because she is wondering if her Picture will show up all right in the Papers. I can even remember when the Brides used to faint. All that is out. Nowadays the Groom is the only one who looks as if he needed a Trained Nurse."

"Did you hear about the Secret Ballot taken at a School for Girls last Month?" asked her friend. "It seems that each of the Graduates was given a Questionnaire, in which occurred the Query: 'Would you Marry just for Money?' The Returns showed that 99 per cent of the Sweet Young Things answered 'You know it,' and then underlined the Words."

"When I married my Abner I knew that he had put his Roll into the $14 Spark Diamond and owed for the Suit in which he stood up but I took a Chance because I felt that his Love for me was such that he could go out and get anything not spiked down. We rode away in a Hired Hack and took a Day Coach to Springfield where we saw the Capitol Building and the first Electric Lights. When I go to a Wedding now I hear everybody asking, 'Which one of them has the Coin?' It seems to be taken for granted that Nobody will tackle Matrimony unless there is enough of a Sinking Fund to take care of the Overhead."

In the meantime the Caterer was packing up and he was heard to tell one of the Colored Boys that there was no longer any Salvage. He said that Weddings had become such a bore that the Mob tried to eat itself into Forgetfulness.

Cause of Earthquakes Still Puzzles Experts

Earthquakes are believed to result from a number of different causes, but the principal one is considered to be faulting or the slipping of one great body of rock upon another in the earth's crust or outer portion, says a writer in the Detroit News. After the California earthquake of 1906 it was found that along a previously known fault nearly 300 miles long, the strata had shifted horizontally from one to three feet. The usual points of origin for such changes in the earth's crust are estimated to be from 10 to 20 miles below the surface. Some earthquakes are caused by the violent explosions accompanying volcanic eruptions. Some are produced by the falling in of subterranean caverns, by avalanches, landslides and various slummings on the slopes of deltas and on the outer faces of the continental platforms under the sea. Great earthquakes are most numerous in volcanic regions, and particularly near the mountainous edges of continents, bordering on the ocean.

Many Species of Oak Trees

There are over 200 species of oak, of which fifteen are native of California. One of the most familiar trees in southern California is the native evergreen or live oak (Quercus agrifolia). While the native live oak is often used in street parkways, the holly oak of southern Europe seems to be better for all-around parkway use and particularly near the ocean, notes a writer in the Los Angeles Times. The native oak tends to mildew badly when near the ocean and it seems to be more easily attacked by the twig borer. The holly oak is straighter when young.

Old Post Regulations

On March 3, 1707, it was decided that "all letters to George Washington be received and conveyed by post during his life free of charge." The postal laws were revised in 1799, and flogging substituted for the death penalty for robbing the mails. The franking privilege was extended to John Adams in 1801. In 1802 an act was passed to the effect that "mail between Petersburg, Va., and Louisville, Ga., (should) go in mail coaches instead of on horseback." A general post office had been established in Washington on May 29, 1800.

"My Dear Annabel"

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service

"MY DEAR ANNABEL!" Foster Deming paused a moment to consider the three lies he had just penned. The girl wasn't his, she was decidedly more annoying than dear, and her name wasn't Annabel. It was Susan. Then he resumed his task determinedly.

"My Dear Annabel: 'I am sorry that you are sick of school but it would have been your father's wish. I know, that you remain there until you graduate. And put out of your mind any such thought as running away. You are too old for that sort of thing."

"As for this boy you frankly say you're infatuated with—cut it out. In the first place, he is undoubtedly just amusing himself, and in the second, you are too young for that sort of thing."

"This is rather a brief letter, as I am up to my neck in work. My treasure of a stenographer left me to be married and I'm having a hard time trying to replace her."

"To be a good girl and study so as to be a credit to the memory of your father."

Sincerely yours,
FOSTER DEMING."

Slipping the letter in the envelope, he felt the pleasing sensation that a man knows with a deferred duty performed. By the way, how old was the child, really? It had been four years ago that her father, given but a few weeks to live, had confided his daughter to his junior partner's interest.

"Her mother will be her guardian, but my wife is a busy woman and—well, I would like to think that Susan, I should say Annabel, would once in a while get the sort of advice or friendly letter that a father would give her."

Foster had known intuitively the things his friend would have liked to say. That his wife was so involved in this civic duty and that social obligation that her daughter would get but a very casual supervision.

It had been her mother who had encouraged the child's rebellion at her christened name of Susan—"too old-fashioned."

Four years ago Annabel had been—well, say, thirteen or fourteen—maybe fifteen. That would make her—oh, somewhere between sixteen and twenty. But he ought to have known, really, before he advised her as to being too young for this and too old for that. He might take a run down some time and see her, he supposed. Hard to picture some one he hadn't seen since she was an infant in bloomers and tam-o-shanter.

Three days later the telephone rang on Mr. Foster Deming's desk. As he picked up the receiver the agitated voice of a woman struck his ears.

"Is this Mr. Deming? It is? Well, Susan, or Annabel Wentworth has simply disappeared. She left a note saying she had eloped, but we can't think with whom. I've tried to get her mother, but they tell me she is at a convention somewhere in St. Louis. I'm so upset about it. In these days—"

He simply had to break in on the flow of words. "Don't worry. It's not your fault, I'm sure. I'll see what I can do."

But after he had hung up he sat for some minutes in irritation. If the girl's mother had been dead, he would have resigned himself to the trust. As it was, he had no authority in the matter. No right to interfere, other than the right any man has to protect any young and ignorant person.

"An applicant, Mr. Deming," an assistant broke in on his thoughts. "Send her in."

"She was the best looking one so far. Slender, of excellent carriage, well-bred in manner and a taste for clothes. 'Please sit down, Miss—'"

"I heard you needed a stenographer," she said quietly, ignoring the opportunity to give her name.

"Can you—er—spell?" he asked. "Try me," she said.

"Have you had any experience?" "That is my weak spot," admitted his caller frankly. "But you might try me out. If I don't make good, the remedy is in your hands."

Merits of Dried and Sweet Milk

Research Work Has Shown Food Values to Be Much Alike.

"I have noticed that you have sometimes used vaporated milk when giving inexpensive menus. Is evaporated milk as good as sweet milk and can it be used instead of it in any recipe? I always thought that some of the food value was taken out of it?"

This paragraph is quoted from a letter to a dietetic expert, who comments as follows: We have changed our attitude in regard to evaporated milk in the last ten years, since much research work has been done in the nutrition laboratories and in the baby hospitals. It has been found that both evaporated and dried milk change very little in food value, and also that the process of preparing them makes the "curd" which develops as soon as milk reaches the stomach, so much smaller, that the processed milks are more easily digested than fresh milk. Pediatricians are ordering these milks, or boiled fresh milk—some of them even use freshly soured milk for infant feeding.

Those of us who have been brought up on fresh milk, do not usually care for the flavor of evaporated milk for drinking. Dr. Lydia Roberts of the University of Chicago, in an experiment with children, finds that after a short time they will take evaporated milk cheerfully, if urged in the proper way.

In cooking, not so much difference is noticed, and in some dishes the flavor of evaporated milk is considered an improvement. I know a college girl who after years of making cocoa with evaporated milk, prefers it to sweet milk, and practically every one likes it as well. With caramel or chocolate flavor, it is always as good, or better. In a highly seasoned dish it seems to give little difference to the flavor. The fact that it can be whipped makes it an inexpensive substitute for cream in dessert. I have found that if a tiny bit of gelatine is added according to directions given, the time of whipping can be cut down to about three minutes.

The point in all diets of low cost or high cost that is important is to see that plenty of milk is used, because it is practically impossible to fulfill the requirements of nutrition without it. It makes no difference whether milk is drunk as a beverage, or whether it is eaten in soups, cream dishes, or desserts.

Once upon a time, before we knew so much about vitamins and minerals, milk was called the "perfect food." Now that term is modified to the "most nearly perfect" food. Children depend upon it for protein, calcium, phosphorus and a goodly share of the vitamin supply. Adults get their protein supply from other foods, but it is difficult for them to obtain the calcium they need from a milkless diet. It makes the question of vitamin—less difficult.

While adults are not building new bone or teeth, they need the calcium to replace the breaking down of hard substances of the body, which is constantly going on. The other day a business man who has not believed that grownups need milk, asked a famous nutritionist his opinion—the answer was trite and to the point, "Milk is an essential during the whole learning period."

HOLD ON
LEONARD A. BARRETT

From his library window the writer sees a robin nesting in a cedar tree. High winds blow and the rain dashes against the tree, but the little robin holds on. Only occasionally will she leave the nest for a bit of food, soon to return to the four blue eggs. Urged by a maternal instinct the robin just holds on and will continue to hold on until the baby robins ward her for her long-suffering patience and work.

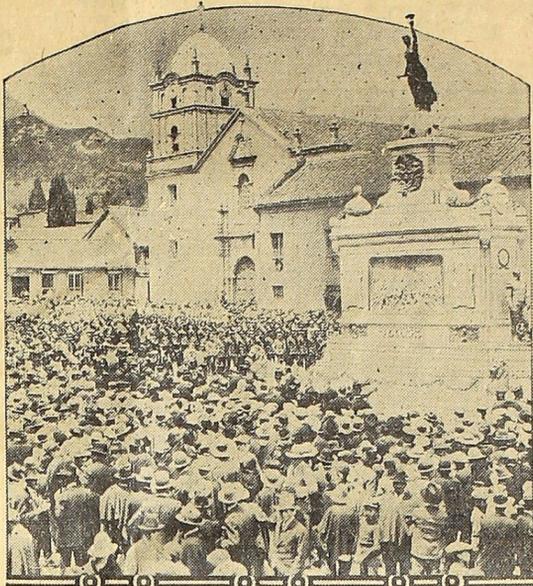

This matter of "holding on" is a very important consideration these days. The tendency on the part of a large number of persons is to grow discouraged with present conditions and lose heart. They can see no possible future in the economic order of today, and consequently are inclined to give up the ship in the midst of the storm. Such persons should learn a lesson from the robin nesting in the cedar tree. There would be no little family of robins if she refused to hold on. There certainly can be no future to any person who refuses to fight and easily gives himself a prey to the forces which are hurled against him. The easiest way out may be to succumb to fate, but that is not the way of the soldier. We are engaged in a war for the preservation of the social order. Every war costs. The late World war cost not only money but also the lives of many young men. These men paid for the war in blood, we are paying for it in the anguish of the soul. In this war there is no room for either the quitter or the coward; the soldier alone will fight, for he has learned how to "Hold On."

"Holding On," required a firm and unswerving trust in the fundamental principles of government. A republic will stand so long as its citizens are loyal and true. "Holding On" to the principles upon which our nation is founded and our Constitution adopted is a basic necessity. The momentous command of George Washington should be remembered by every true American, "Place None But Americans on Guard Tonight."

"Holding On" also calls for faith in the future of our economic order. Panics have come and gone. Depressions have existed before. From these we emerged, stronger than before. The present depression is no exception. Patience, hope and courage will open up the way before us. The indications of recovery are already visible—"HOLD ON."

Colombia Honors a Dead Hero

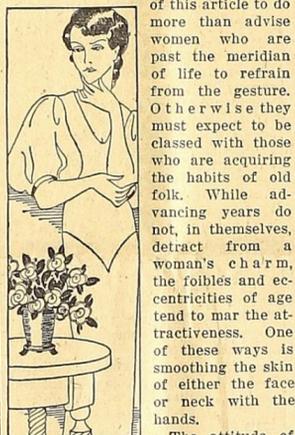

Scene in Bogota, capital of Colombia, when thousands gathered for the official funeral of Corporal Candido Leguizamo. Minister of War Carlos Uribe Gaviria, addressing the throng, told how Leguizamo, ambushed and mortally wounded by 27 Peruvian bullets, killed 6 and routed the remainder of a Peruvian patrol on the Putumayo river. Leguizamo, at his own insistence, was supported by two nurses and died "standing on his feet as a Colombian soldier should."

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

One thing which a woman who wishes to look young must avoid is putting her hand to her face. It is an old gesture, this caressing the face. Children never do it. Young folk seldom do it. Old folk often do it. Just why, remains for a psychologist to determine. It is not in the province of this article to do more than advise women who are past the meridian of life to refrain from the gesture. Otherwise they must expect to be classed with those who are acquiring the habits of old folk. While advancing years do not, in themselves, detract from a woman's charm, the foibles and eccentricities of age tend to mar the attractiveness. One of these ways is smoothing the skin of either the face or neck with the hands.

The attitude of a thinker was supposed to be one in which the face rested in the crotch of hand and thumb, or in which the cheek was supported by the curved digits. The arm was propped at the elbow on some table, chair arm, or other support. Here again one wonders. Was the brain considered so heavy that when in action of thinking, the entire head required to be held up, or what was the idea in associating this attitude with thinking? In any event the classic attitude was supposedly taken by those of mature years. Children and young folk in such a posture would be simply amusing. Yet they are among the keen thinkers, not with harried brains but with clear perceptions. To keep this clear mental vision into old age is a joy. It is wise with it to retain youthful gestures for they bespeak a young spirit.

Gesture of Thought.

Shading the eyes with the cupped hand is another old attitude. Young persons do this only when sunlight is so strong that it is dazzling, and the shade which the hand affords is welcome. Aged persons frequently as-ching into first stitch. An attractive ribbed effect will be secured if the hook is placed through the back half of the stitches. Continue to 'crochet, never adding stitches, until band is 6 1/2 inches high. It will be found that the extra 2 inches in length will be lost in the crocheting so that the band when finished will be just head size.

You can see how the straight band can be draped, folded, sewed, and tacked to effect this shape, or any other shape that may suit your own style or fancy.

sume the posture when they are trying to concentrate. It shuts out distracting sights which disturb the mind as too strong sunlight dims the physical vision. As a matter of fact, merely closing the eyes has the same advantage. So let this gesture of shading the eyes with the hand be scrapped for the sake of youthfulness.

There are so many delightful things which maturity alone can supply, that adults should give themselves the benefit of them, without letting gestures of age betray their advancing years.

A Spring Paean.

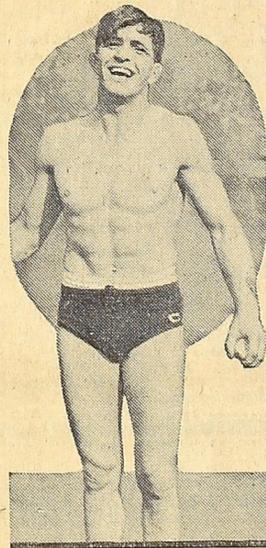

One finds it difficult to be grumpy when there is pean of thanksgiving ringing in the heart. It quiets depressing and disagreeable thoughts. The sight of spring flowers, the fragrance of blossom-filled shrubs, the sound of singing birds, even the patter of gentle raindrops which revive the earth and its gardens, all conspire to make one grateful. It is a time of happiness.

There is a natural affinity between happiness and gratitude. When a person is happy, the mind is grateful instinctively, and this attitude finds its reflection in a happy countenance. Such an expression sends a glow through the heart of those who see it. It is a friendly look the happy person gives, and it is a happy look which it invariably gets in response.

There is a glorious infection about fine things just as there is a miserable infection about disease-carrying germs. The germs of gratitude and thanksgiving are contagious. They are among the fine things of life. We pass good feelings along by happy expressions. They are inviting just as sour expressions are repelling.

What Girl in Her Teens Should Do for Good Health

By AMELIA H. GRANT, M. A., R. N.
Director, Bureau of Nursing,
N. Y. City Dept. of Health.

HOW TO HAVE SOUND TEETH

The secret of healthful and beautiful teeth lies in proper diet and proper care. Unless you eat the right foods you cannot expect to have pretty teeth or to be free of toothache and other dental troubles.

The teeth, like the bones, are made principally of minerals, especially calcium and phosphorus, which must be taken into the body with the food.

The substances necessary for bones and teeth are all contained, in various combinations, in fresh green vegetables, in fruits and cereals, and especially in milk and dairy products.

A quart of milk a day, taken either as a beverage or in foods that are cooked with milk, will give you an adequate supply of calcium and phosphorus. You should always take at least one large glass of milk at every meal for your general health and for the good of your teeth.

You should brush your teeth morning and night and after each meal. Any good tooth powder or paste will do, for all any dentifrice can do is clean the teeth.

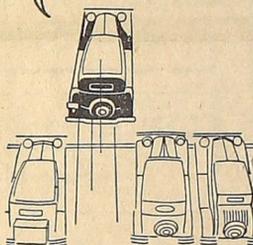

Visit your dentist at least once every six months; he will check decay and keep little troubles from growing into big ones.

Wisecracks and quips that make for publicity seem to be gaining popularity in Belfast, Ireland. A barber has set up in his window a sign reading, "We require your head to run our business." Then there is the slogan of a firm of tailors—"As ye rip so shall we sew." A dairyman attracts customers with these words printed on his vans: "You can whip our cream, but you can't beat our milk."

Ideal Life Sought for Men in Forestry Army

Sports Will Help Keep Up Morale of Workers.

Washington.—Work in the new reforestation camps—and there will be plenty of it—is to be well balanced with play. No one knows better than army officers, old hands at training large bodies of men, the valuable truth of the old adage, "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

Since President Roosevelt ordered the army to take charge of the men while they are in camp, Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, deputy chief of staff, and his aides, have been busy drafting a recreation program for the new army of labor.

Specific hours for play will be set aside and it will not interfere with the schedule of work. Rather, officials believe, it will add tremendously to the efficiency of the workers.

Baseball Heads List.

Baseball will, of course, head the list of sports for the quarter million unemployed city dwellers who are to be given jobs in the healthy outdoors. Each of the camps is to have 200 men in it, under tentative plans. Officials hope to develop a spirit of rivalry between camps located within a reasonable distance of each other to build up keen competition.

Camps will be located near a stream whenever possible, and this will provide another much-loved sport—swimming.

For the long, cool evenings in camp there will be indoor games of all sorts, and movies. Cards will be provided, and there will be checkers, dominoes and the inevitable jig-saw puzzles.

Secretary Dern has had a number of offers from college heads throughout the country, and as a result there may be instituted in the camps educational courses designed to prove highly valuable to the recruit when

Farm Administrator

George Peek of Moline, Ill., was selected by the President to be chief administrator of the farm relief act. As a farm equipment manufacturer Mr. Peek has long been a student of agricultural problems.

Free Medical Service.

Medical reserve corps officers will be stationed at the camps. Field medical kits will provide everything necessary for treatment of injuries except those of a major nature. In such cases, arrangements will be worked out to provide speedy removal of all patients to a medical center.

Vacationists who take to the woods when the mercury climbs into the upper brackets will find the 161,000,000 acres of national forest even more pleasant than usual this year.

New forest trails and roads, public camp improvements and a limited amount of tree planting are only a few of the additions to the vacationer's pleasure that President Roosevelt's civilian conservation corps will bring.

In the field of safety from fires there will be new telephone lines strung, new landing fields set out for airplanes, new fire breaks, lookout towers and observatories, and range water development. Also, the reforestation army will tackle the job of insect and tree disease control, and other range and forest work.

Octopus Receives Crabs by Airplane

Cleveland.—The secret of the continued existence of Oedipus, the octopus, chief attraction of the John G. Shedd aquarium in Chicago, at last has come to light. Oedipus gets his dinners direct by plane from the Battery aquarium in New York. The pilot of a transport plane revealed on a short stopover here that the ship carried a consignment of special crab for Oedipus. The octopus gained notoriety recently by continuing his healthy existence in spite of all rules of procedure to the effect that octopi in captivity soon go to taxidermists.

A new kind of hat for the crochet lovers, and even the crochet novices! Most novel, and yet most practical, simple, and smart, for these new crocheted hats are made in the newest of new spring styles.

The hat shown costs all of fifteen cents, or the price of one fold of crepe paper! It is made perfectly simple in a straight band and afterward shaped and draped as you like. Remember there are 48 colors in crepe paper, so you can have one for each of your pet costumes.

Here are the directions for making this sand colored hat, using one fold of sand crepe paper. Cut it across the grain into one-half inch strips, stretch and twist your strips loosely, and begin to crochet with a number 2 hook. Crochet a chain about 2 inches longer than head size. Make loop by cro-

Frankish Old Styles
Women had no monopoly of mean- ingless and ugly styles in the time of Queen Elizabeth, says an article in a Boston paper. Men, too, were tightly laced into wasp waists. Their legs were free, but their necks were held by a stiff ruff and the whole upper half of their costume was furbelowed and frilled until it was anything but a practicable garment.

A few expressions of appreciation of
FORLORN ISLAND
by EDISON MARSHALL

The following comments by reviewers of this remarkable story that is to appear serially in these columns, will give you an idea of its unusual interest.

"Perils and passion and Mother Nature on an Island way up North containing a group of lost people and the civilized survivors of the wreck of Felix Horton's yacht. Mr. Marshall elaborates his tale with action, emotion and what-not where they will do the most good."—New York Herald-Tribune.

"It is a fast moving story filled with exciting incidents and picturesque details of the natives and their life on the Island. It will not disappoint Mr. Marshall's readers."—New York Times.

"The plot simmers until it thickens and is then brought rapidly to a boil. The resultant dish is appetizing to say the least. The story is good entertainment."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"Hard adventure throughout. It feels good, too. The clean cold North... action is sudden, incredible, fierce and frightening... fine out-and-out stuff."—Washington Star.

"Edison Marshall has written another throbbing thriller. Most thrillers do not throb, and in most of them the love story is secondary. But with Edison Marshall the love story is the chief element, the leaven of the loaf, so to speak... For a throbbing thriller you won't find anything more full of throbs and thrills than 'Forlorn Island'."—Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch.

It is the kind of a story that will cause you to await with eager interest the appearance of each new installment. Be sure to start it with the opening chapter.

The actual seating capacity can be determined only by drawing the seats to an accurate scale on the floor plan and then measuring the linear feet of the pews. For approximate values six or seven square feet may be allowed for each seat.

Eroad "A" Not Irish
Professor Grandgent of Harvard university says the earlier English "ah" became short "a" by the sixteenth century. Until 1780 or thereabouts the standard language had no broad "a." Benjamin Franklin, who recorded in 1768 the pronunciation of his day, knew no "ah." Evidence indicates that it appeared again in London speech between 1780 and 1790. There is no basis for the statement that it originated with the Irish.

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.
May 22, 1933

I suppose that I may claim to be the first Ford Dealer. I not only made cars, but sold them and frequently delivered them myself. The "drive away" is not new; often I have driven cars from Detroit to towns in Ohio or Indiana or Michigan to make delivery. There were no good roads in those days, and the people where I drove had never seen a motor car before. My first really enthusiastic customers were Country Doctors. They were the first to realize the value of dependable transportation to a widely scattered practice. Even today I occasionally hear from some of those first Ford users. We had to teach local mechanics how to care for the cars. That is how Ford Service began, which is now found everywhere in the world. We believed from the beginning that a sale does not complete our transaction with our customer — it creates upon us an obligation to see that our customer's car gives him service. Ford Dealers know their duty to the public in this respect. I can say of Ford Dealers generally that they have been and are men of character and standing in their communities. Most of them have been with us many years, which indicates that we agree on basic business principles. The Company provides that the methods used to sell the Ford car are consistent with the self-respect of the Dealers who handle it. The present Ford V-8 is the peak of our 30 years experience. We have never made a better car. Its eight-cylinder engine is powerful and smooth running. The car is admittedly very good looking and has comfortable riding qualities. It is economical in operation because of advanced engine design and low car weight. It is the fastest, roomiest and most powerful car we have ever built.

Must you economize? Do it and STILL have a Lloyd carriage. This one is Loom woven of the same tough pliable fibre you'll find in the most expensive Lloyd styles. It has full upholstery, fully adjustable hood, hand brake for safety, colored non-skid balloon tires, wood artillery wheels, tubular gear and two-color blended finish. Last year this kind of a carriage would cost $00. Right now—if you come in while the limited quantity on hand is still on hand—it will cost you only—

KASHMIR VALE FULL OF CHARM

Srinagar Is a Lovely Place for a Vacation.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

AS WARM weather approaches, the Vale of Kashmir, one of the famous garden spots of the world, beckons to the vacationists of India. Its wooded hillsides don a new green which is reflected in the clear, blue, placid streams of the valley; and houseboats are put in order for a busy season.

The Vale of Kashmir lies among the lower Himalayas, north of the Indian Punjab. One reaches Srinagar, the summer capital of the native state known as the domain of the Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir, over a long route by rail and motor. From Bombay one travels northward by train, via Delhi and Lahore, to Rawalpindi, one of the chief army posts of British India. There the way to beauty opens.

Almost at once on leaving Rawalpindi the motor road begins to climb. Up and up through the deodar-clad slopes of the lower mountain the road twists and turns, the heated air of the plains grows cool and invigorating, until, when travelers make their first overnight stop at Tret, they feel captivated by a joyous holiday spirit.

Everything seems amusing and interesting. Ruffled punkas swing from the ceiling, though you may have no need of them. Your deft and turbaned servants patter barefooted about the rooms, unrolling your bedding on the stringed charpays, the fairly comfortable beds of India. Even the not-too-bad food served by the bungalow cook is a matter for hungry jest. Lovely, lovely world, with a summer of Kashmir ahead.

Native Chauffeurs Are Speedy.

The road from Rawalpindi to Srinagar is a well-built motor road, some 200 miles long, and it lies through the mountains north of the Pir Panjal pass. Snowy peaks rise high above you. The rushing waters of icy streams chatter noisily below. Hair-pin turns in the road make you catch your breath and curl your toes, for the ways of the native driver are his own and without fear, and, alas, you have not the knowledge of his language wherewith to express your feelings.

Soon, from the first traveling sahib, you may learn to say, "Ahista, ahista!" But you never succeed in making an Indian chauffeur drive slowly, slowly.

It is possible to make the trip to Srinagar in a day, but not ahista! Quite the contrary. You spend two nights in dak bungalows (resthouses) along the way, the second at Baramula, which lies at the edge of the great depression known as the Vale of Kashmir.

From Baramula one can go the rest of the way by boat, up the Jhelum river; but you may prefer to drive. The last 35 miles lie across a level stretch, the road bordered on either side by slender poplars.

The people passed along the way are quite different from those one sees in India. Ekkas and tongas, the two-wheeled horse-drawn vehicles of the country, draw aside to let you pass.

The Vale of Kashmir is a level valley about 80 miles long and averaging about 20 miles in width. It lies, a great oval, surrounded by mountains green with deodar and spruce on the lower reaches and white with snow until well into the early summer. Skies of an incredible blue complete a color scheme of fairy loveliness. Throughout the valley winds the curving line of the River Jhelum, along the banks of which straggle the streets and bazaars which form the ancient city of Srinagar.

Quaint Scenes in Srinagar.

Seven curious bridges span the river, and along the shore quaint old wooden houses lean sometimes at a rakish angle. Many of the city streets end in wide stone steps leading down to the river's edge. These stairways are usually animated scenes of native life. Here the laundry men wash the clothes; here the women come to fill their water jars. Children tumble and play about, and goats and cows ramble freely among them all. From the overhanging balconies lengths of dyed pashmina hang out to dry. All is colorful and gay.

Also there is the interesting river life. A large part of the population of Srinagar lives afloat. Odd, long, pointed boats, called dangas, with superstructures hung with mats of woven reeds, are the only homes which thousands of Kashmiris ever know. Sleeping quarters within, a kitchen of sorts open to the eyes of all, a few pots of brass or copper, and a poor Kashmiri's household is complete.

The native of more ample means has a better boat. Walls of wood replace the woven mats, and as better and better financial status is indicated, so the boats improve. The best are comfortable and well-furnished house boats, such as one might see upon the River Thames.

The English have made their contribution in the development of the house boat in Srinagar; for the Vale of Kashmir has become not only a favorite vacation land for the English army in India, but the permanent home of many retired officers and their families.

Servants All Are Men. One lives easily in Kashmir. A host of servants cost about as much as one good cook in the West, and they feed themselves. Each one has his appointed duties and does them fairly well.

All your servants in Kashmir are men. The women seldom work out. Even the little children of Westerners frequently have men servants to care for them. Your list may include a mangi, or head boatman; a khitmatgar (chief house servant), assistant khitmatgar, a bhisti (water carrier, sweeper—of lowest caste and doer of menial jobs), a khansaman (cook), a dhoobi (washerman), a dhurzi (sewing man), a mali (gardener), and three little chokers, the small boys who paddle the shikara, a small gondola-like boat in which you go everywhere you desire. It seems an ample list!

If you take guests for tea to Shalimar gardens, the houseman goes along and serves a perfect meal under the spreading chear trees. When you plan a morning in the bazaars, the houseman follows respectfully behind, your guide. Your days are carpeted with ease and your home is a joy, thanks to the willing service of an able houseman.

Where but in Kashmir could one call back to a houseman as one is leaving home for all day, "we will have guests for dinner tonight at nine o'clock," and return to find everything in perfect order, fresh flowers everywhere, the table set in holiday attire, and a course dinner perfectly planned?

Many of the Kashmiris are fine looking, the women especially having beautiful eyes and quite regular features. Like other native states of the Indian empire, Kashmir has an English resident, or advisory official, and through him more sanitary ways of living are gradually being introduced into the country. There is an excellent mission hospital and a zenana hospital, as the name implies, for women, and a school conducted by an English clergyman is doing wonders among the youth of the country.

Foreigners Like Kashmir. The foreign element in Srinagar increases yearly. From the terrible heat of the Punjab come English army people, seeking the cool air and health of the hills, and these bring with them the influence of English manners and customs, and, better still, of English fair play. There is not in all Srinagar a merchant who does not rely wholeheartedly on the honor of the English Sahib.

Shopping is a quaint pastime in this City of the Sun. As one strolls along the Bund, eager merchants press their wares. Mohamad Jhan assures you that not in all Srinagar—no, not even at Ali Jhan's, his rival—can you procure such embroideries, such fine pashmina, such beautiful designs. Will not the Lady Sahib buy?

Or, as the small shikara of a merchant is rowed alongside your boat, deftly trying to find you at home, he eagerly spreads his wares. He is insistent that you see his treasures. "Only looking, Lady Sahib. Not buying, only looking." The foxy merchant well knows his goods are tempting. He is sure that some time you will buy.

The native industries of Kashmir, alas, have cheapened and some have almost died out entirely. No longer, for instance, can one procure the very finest shawls, such as made the name of Kashmir famed throughout the world. One can get good shawls, soft and fine, but the exquisite, old-time shawls are hardly to be found outside of museums.

Pashmina is one of the loveliest products of the land. It is a soft cream-colored woolen cloth, made from the fine under-hair of the Tibetan goat. The finer weaves are incredibly soft and the shawlmaker, hopeful for your order, will show you how a length of it can be drawn through a finger ring.

A much heavier woolen cloth, something akin to Scottish homespun, is called puttoo, and the better weaves make splendid outing clothes.

Queen and Parliament in Ancient St. Kilda's

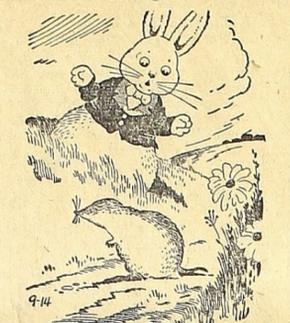

Two strange things about St. Kilda, which has been abandoned by its inhabitants, were that it had a queen and a parliament of its own. The first "queen of St. Kilda" was a woman from the mainland who went there as a domestic servant to the minister many years ago. She was the only person on the island, except the minister, who could speak English, and being a well-educated and intelligent woman, the St. Kildans thought a great deal of her. Partly in jest they gave her a royal title; and when she died tragically in a boating accident, the title passed to her daughter, and then to the prettiest girl or woman on the island. The parliament, as it was called, met every day in the open air to decide the work that was to be done, whether fowling or work on the land. Sometimes disputes were settled by drawing lots, but the business of the "house" was conducted in a friendly spirit.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

PETER TRIES TO CALL ON SHORT-TAIL

WHEN Peter Rabbit returned to the dear Old Brier Patch he could think of nothing but his new acquaintance, Short-Tail the Shrew. This was quite like Peter. Anything new arouses his curiosity so that he can think of nothing else. He would have liked nothing better than to gossip with some of his neighbors about Short-Tail and his affairs, but to do this he would have to admit that he knew little or nothing about Short-Tail, and this he couldn't bring himself to do. You see Peter felt very,

Joined Peter sat down and scratched his head in a puzzled way. "Now how am I to know which way to go?" he muttered. Finally he decided to stick to the one he had started on. Half a dozen jumps brought him to where this little path branched. Peter was stuck again. Finally he chose one of the branches and started on, only to have this branch lose itself in a whole lot of little paths, which crossed and recrossed and were seemingly all mixed up. Just looking at them made Peter dizzy.

"I'm not going a step farther," declared Peter. "What is the use? I don't know which path to follow and if I did, it would merely lead into another little path and I wouldn't get anywhere." A sudden thought struck Peter and caused him to sit up with a funny look on his face. "I wonder," said he slowly, "I wonder if Short-Tail was simply planning to have fun with me, when he told me to follow one of his little paths and perhaps we would meet. Anyway, I've tried to make a call, and that I couldn't is no fault of mine. Now I think I'll go home. My gracious! What a lot of mixed-up paths! Short-Tail must do an awful amount of running about."

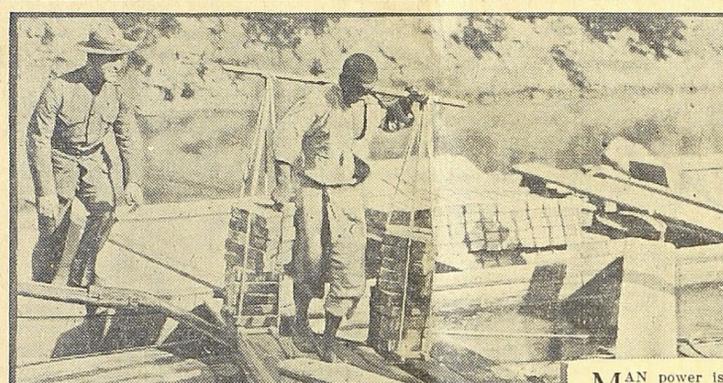

"I have to," snapped a sharp squeaky voice. "I'd starve if I didn't."

Peter looked behind. There was Short-Tail, darting along one of his little paths.

"Wait a minute!" cried Peter. But Short-Tail had vanished.

very foolish every time he thought of how Short-Tail had been one of his neighbors for so long and all the time had been mistaken by him for a member of the Mole family.

So Peter said nothing to anyone, not even to little Mrs. Peter, but resolved to make up for lost time. The very first chance he got he slipped over to the old log where he had met Short-Tail. He intended to make a call. Now Peter couldn't see under the old log, so he couldn't tell whether Short-Tail was there or not. He called but got no answer. He thumped with his feet. Finally he thumped right on top of the old log itself, and then looked quickly to see if anyone ran out. No one did. It was quite plain that Short-Tail wasn't there.

Then Peter remembered what Short-Tail had said about his private little paths, and jumping down from the old log he began to look for them. Now it didn't take Peter long to find a little path, for there was one leading right away from one end of the old log. It wasn't much of a path. Of course such a little fellow as Short-Tail wouldn't make much of a path. It was very much like one of the private little paths of Whitefoot the Wood Mouse. In fact Peter would have supposed that this was just what it was, had it not been for what Short-Tail had said. It was only about half an inch wide.

"He told me to follow his path and we might meet," said Peter to himself, there being no one else to talk to. So he started to follow the little path. Presently he came to another little path, and where the two little paths

ENOUGH

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE old home place is not as fine as lots of places up the line, if size is all you care about. But I can shut all that quite out: I know, within this house of mine. Or hers, or ours, that our own stuff. Though plain, has always been enough.

The old home place is just a farm. Dad cleared the brush with his own arm And sowed the seed with his own hand.

Well, other houses may look grand. With larger fields, and that's no harm— Unless we quit remembering That we've enough of ev'rything.

The old home place, or any spot, By this is judged, though big or not: If it has housed you, fed you, too. And both seemed good enough to you, That's all that matters such a lot.

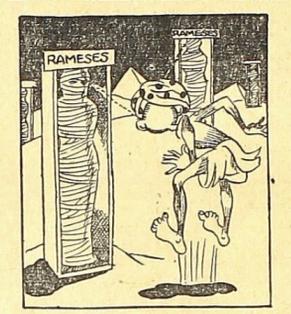

And this old place, through dry and wet, Has never really failed us yet.

The old home place has warmed and fed. And kept a roof above our head, So we can pass the others by Without a jealous look or sigh, And live contented, as I said.

Because, when times were good or tough, The old home place has been enough.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

REWARDS

THIS isn't a very good report, Rita. I see you have a poor mark in spelling and another in arithmetic and grammar isn't very good. I don't believe you are studying. Now I'll tell you what I'll do. If you study hard this month and get a good mark in everything, I'll give you that set of dishes you want.

"The nice blue ones in Daly's window? Oh, good for me. I'll get a hundred in everything. You see."

"Well, we will be satisfied with less than that. You do your best and you will get the dishes."

For a few days Rita works hard and the marks rise. Then she yawns a little and says she is tired studying. She wants to go out to play. Guess she'll rest now. She will do the words in the morning.

"Don't forget that you want those dishes."

"No, I'm remembering. I'll study by and by."

Less and less enthusiasm for study, more weariness, more need for play, more forgetting until finally her mother loses all patience and says, "Sit right down and study. Now, no more of this. I am not going to let you waste any more time. How do you think you are going to get the dishes unless you work?"

"I don't care. If I don't get them all right for you, I do work. I study hard as anything and the teacher gives me the hardest questions and makes me miss on purpose." Rita weeps at her own grief. The reward in store, has failed to pull her along the hard road of duty.

Rewards held in store for future payment rarely work. Bribing a child to work fails oftener than it succeeds. It is right to reward an effort. Rewards encourage children to push on when enthusiasms have died down. They stimulate the child to fresh hope and they renew his energy. But the reward must be immediate. It must follow the good deed promptly. Children live in the present moment. Their failures and hopes and struggles are all of the moment. To make a reward effective it must follow the performance immediately and be a surprise.

When a child finds himself rewarded for something he has done he is delighted beyond words. The feeling is not all caused by the thought of his personal gain. With it, and very strongly, is mingled a deep appreciation of your appreciation of his work and effort. Nothing so pleases us as to find that somebody was rooting hard for us all the time we struggled to win success.

Don't promise rewards for work far in the future. Make them immediate.

PLEASE THE BABY

MOTHER had been canning all afternoon and her feet were tired carrying her about. She sat in a rocker on the porch watching Edna May doing her home work in the short time before dinner. The baby had fallen asleep on the couch in the sitting room. Now he wakened and cried.

"Go in, Edna May, and see what you can do to please him. I'm so tired I can't move another step."

Edna May cheerfully went to the rescue. In a short time she came back. "He wants my red cap, mother."

"All right. Give it to him. Anything to please him."

Mother rested for a while and rose to prepare for dinner. Crossing the sitting room something caught her eye. The baby sat in the midst of a miscellaneous heap like a pirate among his treasure. "Give me," he commanded, and at once Edna May gave him.

"For pity's sake, Edna May, what is the matter with you? Here I am tired to death, I ask you to help with the baby for a few minutes and you completely upset the house. Pick every bit of that stuff up."

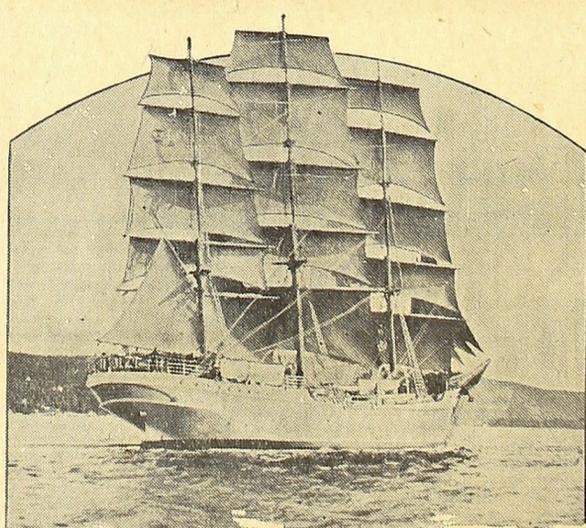

Edna May, quite crestfallen, began gathering up the loot. Each time she laid hold of an article the baby screamed and fought to keep it. Mother came swiftly, smacked both children and planted them firmly, one in his crib and the other on a chair. "Stay there and keep quiet if you can't do anything else." Both children were crying earnestly when father walked up the path.

It was all very natural. Mother was tired beyond words. Edna May was willing but unknowing. The baby had the chance of his life and he took it. The only way out that I can see is to have a couple of things handy for such an occasion. A ball tied to the baby's chair, a favorite Teddy sitting in a little chair, will serve the purpose. Then when baby is to be diverted for a few minutes the means are at hand.

Crying it out is not so easy when one's nerves are raw but it is better than having a scene, isn't it? It is cheaper in nervous energy in the long run. It won't do to teach the baby that he is to be pleased no matter what comes or goes. Sometimes he can't be pleased and the sooner he learns it the better. It does cost a few howls but most of us can stand that.

KNEW HER BIBLE

"So you attend Sunday school regularly?" said the minister to little Eve.

"Oh, yes, sir."

"And you know your Bible?"

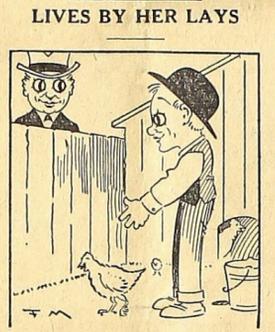

"Oh, yes, sir."

"Could you tell me something that is in it?"

"I could tell you everything that's in it."

"Indeed!" and the minister smiled.

The remaining 28 per cent couldn't make up their minds.

Wyoming Indians Given Buffalo Meat for Food

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—From near extinction to such numbers that Indians and relief agencies have been donated surplus animals for their meat supply, is the history of the Yellowstone park buffalo herd, now totaling more than 1,000 animals.

In 1902 official figures listed but 1,676 buffalo in the world. Emerson Hough, after a winter inspection trip, said there were but 22 of the animals in the park. That year funds were obtained for establishment of a protected herd, and by 1926 there were 764 buffalo in the park.

Careful feeding, strict enforcement of protective rules, and even vaccinations were required to develop the herd. In 1912, 1919, and 1922 a blood poisoning disease threatened to wipe out the herd, but vaccinations counteracted the epidemic, and since that time no serious outbreaks have taken place.

The herd now has reached such security that park authorities each year cull out the infirm, weak, and undersized animals, slaughter them, and give the meat to Indians, or relief agencies.

Too Much

As a special treat the vicar provided sausage-rolls at the tea party for the oldest inhabitants of the village. During the meal he walked around among his guests with a plate of rolls. Presently he stopped beside Mrs. O'Malley, who had taken the sausage out of her roll and left the pastry on the side of her plate.

"Don't you like the pastry, Mrs. O'Malley?" he kindly asked.

The old woman looked up and shook her head.

"Nay, vicar," she replied. "I've eaten the dog, but I can't manage the kennel."—Answers Magazine.

Another Mountain Joins Alaska's "Jack-in-Boxes"

Islands Play "Now You See Me, Now You Don't."

Washington.—Another mountain has joined the "Jack-in-the-boxes" off Alaska. Augustine Island in Kamishak bay, an indentation of Cook Inlet, is reported to have been the most recent island to present an act after the old stage formula, "now you see me, now you don't."

"When an Alaskan island seven miles in diameter and nearly 4,000 feet high erases itself from the map, it is front-page news everywhere except in Alaska," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"Alaskan residents know that the volcanoes along a part of the territory's seacoast have done strange things in the past. They can easily believe that a beautiful, cone-shaped mountain of today may be jagged peak tomorrow, or that an island of this month may be beneath the waves when the next moon shines.

Plays Hide and Seek.

"Bogoslof of the Aleutian islands, which belong to the same chain of volcanoes as Augustine, is famous for its Jack-in-the-box activities. The island was discovered in 1790 but its strange habits were not known until nearly a century later. At first Bogoslof was a single island. Then suddenly appeared a companion island which its discoverers call Fire Island. They were joined by a narrow strip of land.

"In 1900 the American navy reported that the 'hyphen' had disappeared and two unattached islands appeared above the water. In 1905 a new peak appeared at Bogoslof, thus adding another bit of land to Alaska, to which Bogoslof belongs. Two years later, however, Alaska's territory was diminished when McCulloch peak of Bogoslof disappeared, leaving a splendid harbor. Since, another peak has also disappeared in the sea.

"A nearer neighbor of Augustine than Bogoslof, however, is Mount Katmai, on the Alaska peninsula, whose explosion in 1912 was one of the most tremendous in history. Instead of sinking, it 'blew its head off.' Two cubic miles of mountain top were blown away. Some of the debris was scattered over hundreds of square miles of nearby land and sea; but a large portion disappeared, being blown to dust and ash which was hurled into the upper air and then whisked away by winds even to the far side of the earth.

"Though the inhabitants of the United States were unaware of the great explosion of Mount Katmai, they felt its effects, one of which was the cold, damp summer of 1912, caused by the interception of sunlight by dust from the eruption. Even the clear, cloudless sky of the Sahara desert region was overcast.

"Fortunately Katmai was remote from congested population centers. If the explosion had occurred in New York city, the sulphurous fumes would have polluted the air as far west as the Rockies and the noise

Tax Case Becomes Real Comedy of Errors

Paris.—This is a sad story of a taxpayer caught in the intricate net of the French bureaucracy. Besides the taxpayer it involves the sum of five cents and a tax collector poor at arithmetic.

M. Lesueur is a Paris dealer in hides and leather. On May 8, 1932, he paid his taxes, including a tax of 79 francs, about $3, which the government imposes for each apprentice hired by business houses. Having duly paid all asked of him, M. Lesueur thought he was through for 1932, but he was soon to learn that he had only begun.

In January of this year M. Lesueur's firm was notified that the 79 franc tax had been imposed in error and would be refunded, and the refund was made at once. Then another official got hold of M. Lesueur's tax bill and decided that the 79 francs should have been paid after all, so he invited M. Lesueur to pay it again, which he did.

But early this month tax official number three entered the scene. Discovering that 79 francs imposed in May, 1932, had been paid this year, he fined M. Lesueur for being late with his taxes. Having suffered a dozen annoyances because of his good intentions, M. Lesueur decided to undergo one more, and he resignedly agreed to pay the fine.

For reasons best known to the tax collector, the fine was calculated at 10 per cent of 14 francs, 40 centimes, but at this point the arithmetic entered. Instead of demanding 1 franc 14 centimes, the tax collector asked for 15 centimes, or 1 per cent, and that was paid.

Then the error was discovered, and the tax officials have informed M. Lesueur that he owes 1 franc 29 centimes more. Now the latter feels that he has had more than enough, and he refuses to pay. Seizure of his establishment has been ordered as a consequence, though the sum is 5 cents. He says he will let the bailiff put all the padlocks he wishes on his property, and let them take it to court.

would have reverberated like an artillery duel across the central states.

"An area around Mount Katmai, half again larger than Delaware, was covered with a foot or more of ash—enough to destroy all but the most hardy plants.

"Garden of Fireworks."

"America's Garden of Fireworks," as Alaska's volcanic region has been called, also includes the famous Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes, a volcanic phenomenon which has been carefully explored by expeditions of the National Geographic society. The valley lies near Mount Katmai. For a number of years after the Katmai explosion millions of columns of steam ascended from the valley floor. The steam jets are fewer now. The fumaroles, or vents, through which the steam escaped, disclosed encrustations of great beauty, variety, and color. There were masses of bright yellow sulphur, chunks of ash turned red and blue, and pure white encrustations of silicious material.

"Explorers of the valley cooked meals over the hissing jets, holding their long-handled frying pans down by main force against the uprushing steam. They found a natural bathing pool, one end cold and the other hot. President Wilson turned aside from the stress of war time to make this region a national monument."

Population Increase Is Put at 180,000 for '32

Chicago.—Population increase in the United States last year was the smallest since 1880 and the first year in more than a century in which cities did not show a gain, a report issued by the "American Journal of Sociology" disclosed. By 1940, the report predicted, the United States may have a population of only 130,000,000 and may show only a slight increase thereafter.

Rural population increased during the last year due largely to the depression, the report stated, but city population declined possibly as much as 470,000, it was estimated. The nation's population increased 180,000 last year, the report showed, a decrease of 5 per cent from 1931. Since 1923 there has been a decline of 60 per cent. If the growth continues at about 800,000 annually the rest of the decade, the report said, the population will be 131,000,000 in 1940, compared to 122,750,000 in 1930.

Mail Theft by Bluebird Foiled by Rural Carrier

McRae, Ga.—R. E. Flanagan, rural mail carrier, reports a daylight robbery of a rural mail box by a bluebird. He says when he drove up a bluebird sitting on the mail box flew away. Flanagan placed a letter in the box and drove on. As he looked back he saw the bird flying away with the letter.

The carrier stopped his car, got out and chased the bird until it dropped the letter, which he replaced in the box and weighted down to save it from another visit from the winged robber.
