Tawas City trounced the Alabaster nine last Sunday in the second game of the league season. Final score—10 to 1. The locals' record now stands at two victories and no defeats.

Both teams played good ball in the field. Only one misgoue was chalked against Alabaster while two were committed by Tawas City. The locals had a decided edge over their opponents in hitting, however. They connected for twelve safeties as compared with five for Alabaster.

Brown went the entire route on the mound for Tawas City, and given good support, experienced little difficulty in holding down his opposing batsmen. Alabaster used two hurlers, J. Roiter and C. Tate. Brown struck out seven men, Roiter five, and Tate one.

Next Sunday, June 11, AuGres comes to the athletic field here to engage the Tawas City squad. A fast and exciting game is expected. Come out and help the locals stay in the win column. The game starts at 2:30, E. S. T.

ROSE CITY DEFEATS HEMLOCK ROAD NINE, 8-6

Hemlock was nosed out by the Rose City nine last Sunday at Rose City by an 8 to 6 score. Hemlock grabbed the lead early in the game and held it for four frames. The lead switched hands in the fifth, Rose City's big inning in which they scored three counters. Hemlock tied the count in the eighth with a two run spurt, but the Rose City boys came back in their half of the same inning with two runs, their margin of victory.

Mound duty for Hemlock was performed by Herman and Curry, with Bessey receiving. Rose City also used two hurlers, Walker and Morrison, with Fleming serving behind the bat.

Score by Innings— R H E

Hemlock	211	000	02—6	12	5
Rose City	020	130	02x—8	13	7

Rose City will play a return game with Hemlock next Sunday, June 11, at the Sand Lake diamond.

COUNTY EIGHTH GRADE COMMENCEMENT MONDAY

The county eighth grade commencement will be held at the Community Building at East Tawas on Monday, June 12, at 2:00 p. m. The program will consist of music and an address by J. K. Osgerby of the East Tawas high school. Mr. Osgerby's subject will be "Life's Highway." A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Eighty-eight pupils wrote the eighth grade examination. Of this number there were eighty who passed and will receive their diplomas following the commencement program.

There were ninety seventh graders who wrote the seventh grade examination. Of this number forty were successful, and forty-eight were conditioned in one or two subjects.

C. C. C. MAN DROWN SUNDAY

Joseph Sikora of Detroit, a Civilian Conservation Corps man at Gordon Creek, was drowned Sunday afternoon in the AuSable river. Sikora was 20 years of age.

Sunday afternoon Sikora, who had been swimming in the river near the Lumbermen's Monument, started to swim to the island. Becoming fatigued he attempted to return but was unable to go farther and he called to his companions for aid. Walter Zeskowski went to his rescue. Nearing the river bank with the helpless man, Zeskowski became exhausted and both men went down. Zeskowski came to the surface and was brought to the bank by companions. Sikora's body was recovered at five o'clock, two hours later. Sheriff Miller and men from the coast guard station were called to the scene.

While a number of Civilian Conservation Corps men were on the bank at the time, they thought Sikora was joking when he called for help. He was an excellent swimmer.

FOR SALE

Known as the Geo. Armstrong Hotel at National City, to the highest bidder. We will receive sealed bids, and the right is reserved to reject any and all bids. Send in your bids by June 29, 1933, to—Chas. F. Brown, Secretary, Iosco County Poor Commission, 2-23 Tawas City, Mich.

MRS. FRANK BARNES

Mrs. Frank Barnes died Tuesday morning, May 30, in Harbor Beach, and the body was brought to Tawas City for burial on Thursday. Rev. W. A. Gregory, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, officiated.

Alvira Hoard was born June 4, 1853, in Oakland county, making her age at death nearly 80 years. She married Frank Barnes at Waterford about 60 years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes came to Iosco county about 51 years ago, living first at Alabaster, and spending the greater portion of the time since in and near Tawas City.

Mrs. Barnes is survived by her aged husband and a son and daughter—Myrton Barnes of Tawas City and Mrs. William Trescott of Harbor Beach.

During a residence in Alpena Mrs. Barnes was identified with a group of women in the Helping Hand Society, and the following members came to attend her funeral: Mesdames L. R. Joslin, Spens, Hamilton, O. Scheffler, W. E. Carr, Charles Miller, B. A. Deyoe, F. W. Blake, J. F. McRae, W. S. Maywood, William Foster, James Nesbitt and Ben J. Napper. Mrs. P. J. Misner of Ypsilanti, a granddaughter of Mrs. Barnes, was also in attendance at the funeral.

WILL HOLD PRE-SCHOOL HEALTH CONFERENCES

A series of pre-school health conferences will be held in Iosco county next week. On Wednesday afternoon, June 14, at the Hale school, Dr. Johnston will be present to examine the children. At Whittemore on Thursday afternoon, June 15, at the office of Dr. Hasty, Dr. Johnston and Dr. Hasty will examine pre-school children and infants of that locality. On Friday afternoon pre-school children will be examined at Alabaster by Dr. Johnston.

CHILD HEALTH COMMITTEE WILL MEET AT ROLLWAYS

The Iosco County Child Health committee will hold its June meeting in the form of a picnic and pot luck supper at the Rollways on the AuSable river on Tuesday afternoon, June 13.

"AFRAID TO TALK" TELLS TIMELY STORY

A dramatic screen answer to many pertinent questions American citizens are asking about rule by political parties is contained in Universal's timely picture, "Afraid to Talk," which will be shown at the State Theatre next week Wednesday and Friday, June 14 and 16. It presents a group of municipal office holders under the dictates of a party boss, who find themselves forced by a clamoring press and public to gain a conviction for an underworld murder.

Happening on the eve of an important election, the party leaders decide it necessary to act, but are suddenly thwarted when the gangster murderer produces evidence which will bare the graft and bribery of the office holders. In desperation the party attempts to "railroad" an innocent bell boy for the crime, and when public minded citizens instigate an investigation, complications develop so rapidly that the film proceeds towards its powerful climax with one intensely dramatic crisis after another.

Sidney Fox enacts the featured feminine lead as the loyal wife of the bell boy who is crucified for political purposes, played by Eric Linden. Tully Marshall plays the part of the district attorney, Mayo Methol the traitor underworld queen and Edward Arnold the gang leader.

OPENS RESTAURANT IN TRUDELL BUILDING

W. E. Laidlaw opened the restaurant, soda fountain and pool room in the Trudell building this morning. Mr. Laidlaw says, "I wish to thank the patrons of the Bay Side restaurant and invite them to visit me at my new location. Here, we can give you excellent service for we now have one of the finest equipped restaurants in northern Michigan."

The Trudell restaurant was built several years ago by the late Edward Trudell and, while it has not been run continuously, it was something in which the people took considerable pride. Mr. Laidlaw's friends are pleased with his decision to operate the various activities in the building.

LUTHERAN SCHOOL PROGRAM AND PICNIC JUNE 11

The Emanuel Lutheran congregation will observe its annual school picnic and program at the customary grounds near the entrance to the city cemetery next Sunday, June 11. A special religious service will begin at 10:00 a. m. After the service everybody is to enjoy a picnic lunch. At 1:30 p. m. the school children will render a program. Arrangements for baseball, contests, races and many other amusements are being made. Refreshments of all kinds will be sold on the grounds.

An invitation is extended to all. Come for the morning service, bring your lunch, and spend the day with us. In case of rain, the occasion will be celebrated at the church and school.

12 GRADUATE AT ST. JOSEPH'S

The Commencement exercises of St. Joseph's school will be held Friday evening, June 9. Rev. C. A. Skowronski of St. Charles will be the speaker. Rev. E. A. Kirchhoff will award diplomas to the class of 12 students.

The list of graduates follows: Leland Phillips, Harold Green, John Husbach, Evelyn Trudell, Frances Dubovsky, Marvel Jacobs, Ann Margaret LaBerge, Margaret Stepanki, Agnes Siegel, Grace Zaharias, Victor Zaharias, Veronica Drzewicki.

Grace Zaharias is valedictorian, and Agnes Siegel salutatorian.

EAST TAWAS TO CELEBRATE JULY FOURTH

A real old time Fourth of July celebration will be held at East Tawas July 3 and 4, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce. The members of the committee in charge are Wm. Schill, chairman; V. Marzinski, secretary; Wm. DeGrow, R. Harris and Carter Miller.

The committee and several sub-committees have been working enthusiastically and arrangements are nearly completed. There will be a parade, ball games, both hard and soft, boat races, boxing matches, dance, fireworks, carnival, band concerts and music by the newly organized Legion drum and bugle corps. More details of the program will be published later.

In sponsoring the celebration, members of the Chamber of Commerce were especially interested in providing entertainment for the boys in the Civilian Conservation Corps camps located near here. Everyone in the surrounding communities is invited to come to East Tawas and take in two days of real enjoyment.

COURT HOUSE ROBBERY SUSPECTS WILL BE TRIED SATURDAY, JUNE 17

At a session of circuit court held here Monday the trial of John Adams and Clarence Winton, alias Bert Evans, was set for Monday, June 19. Adams and Winton, when arraigned Monday before Judge Herman Dehnke, stood mute and a plea of not guilty was given for them. They are charged with robbing the county treasurer's office at the court house. Time was extended until June 17 so that their attorneys could prepare a defense.

BELL TELEPHONE INCREASES SIZE OF ITS ADVERTISEMENTS

For perhaps four weeks, beginning June 1, the Michigan Bell Telephone company plans to increase the size of its advertisements in the weekly papers from sixteen inches to twenty-four inches.

In announcing this, C. W. Hungerford, advertising manager of the telephone company, says: "We are doing this because there appears to be a definite improvement in business conditions and a general feeling of confidence that this will continue; these facts should result in increased buying of commodities and services and it is very important that our company take immediate advantage of improved conditions and promote the sale of telephone service. This increase in advertising space as you know will be only one part of the general effort in this direction; it is intended to supplement the increased sales effort that is being put forth by our sales people and by employees in general."

NO PRICE ADVANCES FOR "42ND STREET"

Manager Berube of the Family Theatre, East Tawas, where the mammoth musical-comedy drama spectacle, "42nd Street," will open next Sunday, June 11, for a three-day showing, announces that popular prices will prevail during the engagement of this Warner Bros. special production in spite of the road-show calibre of the all-star picture. Mr. Berube's decision to keep the prices of tickets down is in line with his belief that "42nd Street" is the happy kind of picture the country needs at this particular time and that the usual moderate prices will enable many more to see it who would not be able to if it were shown on a two-day, road-show price engagement basis.

"42nd Street" is the picture which was the occasion for the special train which ran from Hollywood to Washington for the inauguration of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. The train, known as the "42nd Street" Special, carried Hollywood notables to the Capitol, where they participated in the parade and ball.

"42nd Street" tells the dramatic story of the noisy, blatant, loose, sentimental theatrical district of its name, with the tides of human love and human life running strong under the grease paint and ostrich feathers. It is easily one of the most colorful and most ambitious pieces ever composed for a motion picture.

WHITTEMORE M. E. CHURCH SCHOOL NEWS

A fine crowd was in attendance at our church school last Sunday, with six visitors. Welcome, and come again! Let's keep our attendance up this summer by having every member present every Sunday.

Next Sunday is Children's Day in our school and we cordially invite all to come. There will be a program by the children and a fitting address for the occasion by Dr. Musser.

We will appreciate it greatly if those who have flowers or plants will bring them Sunday for decorative purposes.

We would like to have every member present and will appreciate greatly a large attendance of visitors. You are always welcome at our school. Will you try to be with us Sunday?

COMEDY LOVE AFFAIR PASSES TENSENESS OF "THE KATHOLIC"

Two unique romances are developed side by side throughout the Warner Bros. picture, "The Katholick," which will be shown at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Wednesday and Thursday, June 14-15, one serious and the other a comedy affair to both relieve and accentuate the highly dramatic tension of the story.

Kay Francis and George Brent, who are co-featured in the picture, are the participants in the serious romance, that ends seriously although it starts off with Brent in a masquerade, as a private detective, he having been hired by Miss Francis' screen husband to flirt with her in order to get evidence of her perfidy. But the paid spy discovers she is not "that kind of a girl," and promptly falls in love with her, which emotion is reciprocated, much to the discomfort of the latter's husband. Others in the cast include Allen Jenkins and Glenda Farrell as fun-makers, Monroe Owsley, Helen Ware and Henry Kolker.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO FOOT SUFFERERS

Several months ago I completed some courses in "Foot Culture" from a famous Boston school and laboratory.

Fur Has Played Stellar Role in World History

Demand That Never Ceased Throughout Centuries.

Washington.—What is described in press dispatches as the first full time fur exchange in the world was recently opened in London. Its address, aptly enough, is "Beaver House."

This event emphasizes the stellar role fur has played on the stage of Europe and North America, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society, which points out that the world's demand for furs, throughout the centuries, has never ceased.

"Valued first for warmth, then as adornment," says the bulletin, "fur became a luxury, to be enjoyed only by the wealthy few. Kings and emperors exchanged furs as gifts; royal captives redeemed themselves with furs; and only kings and nobles and the highest clergy were permitted to wear certain kinds of fur. Some kinds, like the ermine of a judge, became almost a badge of office for state officials. A man's social importance could be gauged by the amount and kind of fur he wore."

Affects Map of World.

"Like gold and spices, fur helped unroll the map of the world and affected its political and economic history; for fur traders, trappers, and hunters were frequently pioneers and explorers as well. Russians, seeking furs, stretched their power over Siberia. In North America, French, English and Dutch ranged the lakes and woods for pelts, and battled for possession of this rich fur storehouse. Men like La Salle, Champlain and Joliet, Daniel Boone, Kit Carson and Jim Bridger, and Alexander Mackenzie, pushed back frontiers and cleared up blind spots on our map."

"Quest of furs changed American and Canadian trading posts like New York, Albany, Detroit and St. Louis, Winnipeg, Montreal, and Edmonton, into prosperous cities; founded powerful trading firms like the Hudson's Bay company; built up fortunes like those of John Jacob Astor and Lord Strathcona. From furs Canada derived its early prosperity; even its present-day boundaries roughly coincide with its early fur-trading areas. From furs originated much of the foreign commerce of the United States."

"Beaver," as far back as Chaucer's day, was practically synonymous with 'hat.' And because Charles I ruled that no fur except beaver could be used in the manufacture of hats, demand for beaver pelts increased to such an extent that new sources of supply were sought and found in North America. So important did the beaver become that it found a place on the seal of New Netherlands and of New York city, and on Canada's coat of arms.

"A beaver pelt became not only an article of trade, but a medium of exchange and a standard of value. One skin bought a pound of tobacco or four pounds of shot; five skins was the price for a plain red coat. Brass tokens for one, one-half, one-quarter, and one-eighth beaver were issued by the Hudson's Bay company, and known as "beaver money." Beaver house, home of the recently opened fur exchange in London, commemorates the historic and commercial prominence of this little animal.

Fur Has "Gone Democratic."

"Beaver continues popular, but other furs now rival or exceed it in number and value. An aristocratic luxury for centuries, fur has gone democratic. Although steam-heated houses put an end to the need for heavy undercloth

'Living Pebbles' Found on Islands

Samples Are Brought Back by Smithsonian Scientist.

Washington.—"Living pebbles" are among the curiosities of nature secured by Dr. Wald L. Schmitt, curator of marine invertebrates of the Smithsonian institution, along the shores of the Galapagos islands.

Doctor Schmitt has just returned after taking part in the Galapagos expedition of Capt. G. Allen Hancock of Los Angeles. He collected for the Smithsonian the crabs and shrimps of these isolated islands, securing hundreds of specimens of some species hitherto known to science by only one or two individuals.

The "living pebbles"—otherwise known as leucosid crabs—were among the special objectives of the expedition. They are tiny animals with rough shells of the same color as the beach sand in which they live. They look exactly like coral pebbles. About the only way to detect them is to see them move. They represent one of the most effective concealment devices in nature, Smithsonian biologists say.

Doctor Schmitt also collected numerous fresh water crustaceans on islands practically devoid of fresh water, whose life cycle illustrates another remarkable biological phenomenon. They appear at the beginning of the rainy season in mud puddles and rain filled depressions in the lava crust. Here they lay their eggs. The rainy season is brief and the burning tropical sun soon dries up the puddles. The adults, unable to exist without water, perish.

But, curiously enough, the eggs will

Cabinet Members

Are Given Soaking

By WILLIAM L. BRUCKART

Washington.—White House attaches are laughing these days at the soaking received by two members of the cabinet whose identity they refuse to disclose but who seem to have been the victims of the Roosevelt open-door policy.

There is a great fountain and pool filled with lily-pads at the east entrance to the Executive mansion. This entrance is used only occasionally by the cabinet members, but evidently the two members in question were in a hurry and took a short cut. Their arrival at the east gate coincided with the time a stray dog chose to disport himself in the pool, and they watched the fun. The dog seemed to feel perfectly at home on the White House grounds and no one molested him. But after he had had his play he leaped from the pool to the side of the two apparently new-found friends. Then, he did exactly what every dog does. He shook that water off. Striped trousers and spats were well soaked, but the cabinet members went on to the meeting with the President.

ing, windproof coats and rugs became all the more necessary for outdoor wear. And high wages of World war days and post-war prosperity changed increasing numbers of housewives and stenographers from cloth to fur coats.

"As a result of this latter development, there is now less call for fables and other expensive furs, and more for cheaper grades like muskrat and rabbit, that can be dressed and dyed to resemble costly kinds. The muskrat frequently masquerades under the trade name of Hudson seal; the rabbit once hid behind some seventy-five different aliases, from 'Arctic seal' to 'Russian leopard.' To obviate confusion, manufacturers now use more exact descriptive terms.

"For 300 years Canada and the United States have supplied a large proportion of the raw furs—beaver, fox, lynx, marten, mink, muskrat, skunk, raccoon, weasel, and numerous others—that pour into various European centers to be dressed and manufactured into finished articles. The United States today is still the world's largest producer of raw furs."

SALMON A FISH OF GREAT VALUE

Supports a Vast Industry on Pacific Coast.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

SOME two thousand Chinook salmon from the Pacific coast, which were hatched in the aquarium of Washington's new Department of Commerce building, will be placed in Deep Creek lake, Maryland, whose waters drain into the upper Potomac. It is hoped the fish will find their way to salt water and return, in four years, to spawn, thus stocking the historic river.

Pacific salmon are the most valuable fishes, not only of the United States but also of the entire western hemisphere; and with the single exception of the sea herrings, they are commercially the leading fishes of the world.

In one year the aggregate catch of salmon in the Pacific states, British Columbia, and Alaska was upward of four hundred million pounds; which, as sold in a canned, salted, smoked, frozen and fresh condition, had a market value of about $27,750,000. The canned product alone, consisting of more than five million cases of 48 one-pound cans, was worth $25,500,000. Thirty-five thousand people were engaged in the different branches of the industry, and the invested capital was fully $30,000,000.

There are five distinct species of salmon, which, having many characteristics in common, nevertheless differ strikingly in size, color, habits, distribution, food value, and economic importance. The largest and most magnificent of all salmon is the Chinook, Quinnet, King, Spring, or Tyee salmon. It has an average weight of nearly 25 pounds in the Columbia river, and is often caught weighing 40 to 60 pounds, while occasionally examples of over 100 pounds are taken. While found from California to China, it attains its greatest abundance in the Sacramento, Columbia, Yukon and other large streams.

Blueback Has Its Faults.
The species called Blueback salmon on the Columbia, Sockeye on Puget Sound, and Redfish or Red Salmon in Alaska, averages only five pounds in weight and never exceeds twelve. It attains greatest abundance in the Columbia, the Fraser, and in various streams throughout Alaska. Its meat is rich in quality, deep red in color, and the fish is therefore in great demand for canning. While a beautiful fish when in salt water, with bright blue back and silver sides, after entering fresh water it deteriorates rapidly in food value and appearance, the head turns to olive green, and the entire back and sides become crimson and finally dark blood red.

The Silver or Coho salmon, with a general distribution in the coastal streams, averages six pounds in weight and rarely exceeds 25 or 30.

The smallest species is the Humpback, so called from the well-marked hump developed by the male in fall. The extremes of weight for mature examples are three and eleven pounds, with four pounds as the average. The region of greatest abundance is Puget Sound to southeast Alaska.

The remaining species, the Dog or Chum salmon, averages eight pounds in weight. It is generally distributed and abundant, but, owing to the poor quality of the flesh, is the least important of the group. The distortion of the jaws in the male during the breeding season, while characteristic of all species, is particularly marked in the Dog salmon.

The differences in spawning times and places of the different species of salmon are most interesting. After spending most of their lives at sea, growing, accumulating fat, and storing energy, the salmon move inshore and ascend the streams. After once beginning their upward journey, they take no food, and in fact are incapable of digesting and assimilating food.

Where They Spawn.
The Quinnet salmon begins to run in spring and pushes its way to the headwaters of the larger streams. In the Columbia basin the species distributes itself over 90,000 square miles of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana, its upward limit being insurmountable obstructions or falls. In the Snake river and Yukon river the spawning grounds lie 2,000 miles by water from the sea.

The spawning streams of the Red salmon are those that rise in lakes, and the spawning grounds are in the affluents of those lakes. The run begins in May and fish continue to come in until October, depending on latitude.

The Silver salmon enters the streams from July to October or November, but does not as a rule ascend for long distances.

The Humpback runs into fresh water in summer and fall, preferably in short coast streams, and often spawns within a few rods of the ocean.

The schools of Dog salmon come into the stream rather late; in the Columbia river and Puget Sound the run extends from August to late in November, and in Alaska the height of the season is about the first of September.

Now, whether the salmon travel in the streams 2,000 miles or 200 feet to reach their spawning grounds, and regardless of their physical condition at the time they arrive at the particular places required for the proper development of eggs and young, every individual of every species dies shortly after spawning. This is the most characteristic and remarkable event in the life of the Pacific salmon.

Why this is the case is one of nature's mysteries. It has its parallel in some other fishes, in the may-fly, which perishes after a few hours' existence, and in the annual plants. One can only say that they have served their purpose and are no longer needed.

Periods of Abundance.
While the Pacific salmon run with more or less regularity, year after year, two of the species exhibit, in particular streams or regions, a marked periodicity in abundance which is so well established that it can be predicted with certainty years in advance.

The Blueback, or Sockeye, in certain streams shows a climax in abundance every fourth year. This is especially marked in Puget sound and Fraser river, where the years 1905 and 1909, for example, were characterized by immense runs, while in 1906 and 1910 the abundance, as shown by the catch, was only one-fourth or one-fifth as great.

Artificial Propagation.
The artificial propagation of salmon in the streams of the Pacific seaboard began at a comparatively early date and has continued with yearly increasing extent and importance, so that at the present time more hatcheries are devoted to the Pacific salmon than to any other fishes of the western hemisphere. The vast interests at stake have appeared to warrant and to require all the money that could properly be expended by the federal and state governments for salmon culture.

The first salmon hatchery in the West was established in 1872, on the McCloud river in California. By Executive order there was set aside a large tract for a "piscicultural preserve," which was fittingly named Baird, after the first national commissioner of fisheries; and Livingstone Stone, a pioneer fish culturist, was placed in charge and continued in that capacity for many years, overcoming many obstacles, undergoing many privations, repeatedly subjected to great danger from attacks of Indians and outlaws, while devising methods which showed the possibilities of salmon culture and led to the present extraordinary development of this art.

The original Baird hatchery, still in active operation, is now supplemented by numerous other government stations, which may be regarded as lineal descendants.

The eggs of the salmon are 2 to 25-inch in diameter, and are the largest handled by the fish culturist. They are easily obtained by intercepting the fish on their way to the spawning grounds by means of racks, traps, seines, etc., and then, when exactly ripe, by expressing by firm pressure on the abdomen.

Not Easy to Handle.
The size and activity of the salmon make it necessary for two or three men to work together in holding the fish and relieving them of their eggs and milt, and the largest individuals are most readily managed by putting them in a strait jacket.

In view of the inevitable death of the salmon after spawning, an improvement over the old method of forcible expulsion of eggs is the stunning of the fish by a blow on the head and taking of the eggs by abdominal section. This, while greatly facilitating the work of the spawn-takers, adds approximately 10 per cent to the egg yield by the saving of eggs that would ordinarily be left in the abdominal cavity.

Salmon eggs hatch slowly. Incubation, beginning in late summer or early autumn, continues until the following spring or summer, depending on the temperature of the water. The most protracted period of incubation thus far coming to the notice of fish culturists is that of the red salmon at Karluk, Alaska, where eggs taken in September may not hatch until the following May or June, and in certain seasons the hatching time has been prolonged to 270 days.

The annual deposits of young salmon in the waters of the Pacific seaboard by the bureau of fisheries, the three coast states, the Province of British Columbia, and the private hatcheries in Alaska now total many millions, of which the largest quantity represents the work of the federal government.

Martin Johnson

Virtue Among Kings

Railroads

By ED HOWE

ALTHOUGH born in a country town in Kansas, there is a famous and rich man named Martin Johnson. All he had to start with was a good deal of natural sense (as most people have), and good parents and neighbors to teach him the importance of politeness, fairness and industry.

Probably at first he was ambitious to fight Indians and hunt buffalo, but was soon able to understand that such adventures were no longer available. Happening on a book about Africa he determined to go there to take moving pictures of big game animals, capture them alive for sale to parks and museums, etc., and now lives in a palace in Nairobi, in South Africa. He has had wonderful adventures, met many famous people, and appeared before great audiences in every part of the world.

Anyone who denounces Martin Johnson because he is famous and a gentleman, or says he acquired his fortune by means not available to everybody, is a cad. Johnson's average in decency has been a little above the average of those who denounce him because of his prosperity.

And I like his wife Osa, who is also from Kansas. I do not know either of them; have seen them only in their wonderful public performances and paid for the privilege.

Every one is writing now; even kings and business men are seeking such defense as print affords. There is lately available a book by the recently deposed king of Spain, although the actual work was done by a ghost writer. The title is "By-Ways of Royalty," and the ghost writer, the Grand Duke Alexander of Russia, is thoroughly familiar with his subject. It is the first intimate story of royalty I have ever read, and I wonder the book does not attract more attention.

The intimate life of a king is as curious and strange to me as the intimate life of a Russian peasant, with his tea drinking, fleas, sheepskin clothing, and running away from wolves and famines. The author, although a grand duke, writes surprisingly well; he believes democracy a false system, but is fair in dealing with it.

Having been a humble subject all my life, and gazed on rulers only from afar, I found many surprising statements in the book, and quote one for your amazement:

"No major country has ever gone bankrupt because of its king's mistresses, but the worst fate that ever befell a monarch befell the czar of Russia because of being ruled by a foolish wife."

The czar and Grand Duke Alexander were cousins; the grand duke knew the Russian royal family intimately and for many years. The author concludes kings as husbands average about as do draymen, dentists, clerks, merchants, lawyers, doctors, and other town men. He thinks it possible, however, that the average among farmers, as to outside love affairs, may be a little higher than it is among kings, owing to farmers being isolated on lonely creeks and prairies.

The moving picture people have about all the money now, but the radicals are not suggesting that they divide with the poor; that demand is made on manufacturers and other useful persons who haven't any.

One "movie" man in Hollywood lately authorized his press agent to broadcast the statement that his income from salary alone was half a million a year.

The class one railroads (meaning a group comprising all the best ones) last year lost more than a hundred and fifty million dollars, as against a profit of sixteen million in 1931. Throughout the year of this terrific deficit, the class one railroads gave employment to hundreds of thousands of men at the highest average wages paid in the world; yet there is not a community in the country, or a jury, that does not join the government and courts in efforts to further impoverish the railroads.

But how the "movies," of no use to anyone, prosper!

It is another exhibition of the American spirit, unintelligent and dishonest, that must be changed before the country can again get on its feet.

Nothing is ever settled. When I was a boy I heard quarreling which greatly disturbed those taking part. I have heard the same quarreling about the same subjects within an hour, now that I am in my eightieth year. If, after death, I am restored to consciousness I shall be surprised, but whether I land in the bosom of Abraham or in the clutches of the devil, I think I shall appreciate once knowing positively where I am at.

Everyone knows you are a weak creature; you will finally admit it yourself after reaching considerable age. I can offer no advice here except that everyone become as strong as possible. Emergencies are always coming up, and a little strength and sense will be found of great value in considering them.

It has actually been proposed that the government do something to prevent earthquakes; several congressmen have bills ready as soon as they begin campaigning again.

A REAL APPETITE

PETER RABBIT was provoked. He certainly was. Wasn't it enough to provoke anyone? There he had hunted in vain for Short-Tail in order to make a call, and then Short-Tail had suddenly appeared only to disappear quite as suddenly.

"That fellow doesn't know what common politeness is," grumbled Peter as he vainly stared this way and that.

"Oh, yes, he does," replied a familiar sharp, squeaky voice, and Short-Tail the Shrew popped out from under some leaves. "I'm not impolite, but just busy. We hunters have to work for what we get to fill our stomachs. We can't sit down in one place and fill up the way you can."

"Are you a hunter?" exclaimed Peter, his eyes popping right out with astonishment.

"Certainly! Of course! What did you suppose I was?" replied Short-Tail testily.

"I didn't think much about it," confessed Peter, "but I never in the world would have supposed you were a hunter. What do you hunt?"

"Anything that walks, crawls or flies, in the worm or insect line," replied Short-Tail, promptly, as he popped out from under a piece of bark with a fat beetle, which he proceeded to gobble as if he were half starved.

"Oh," said Peter, "I thought you meant that you hunted real folks, the same way Shadow the Weasel and Reddy Fox and all the rest of the hunters do."

"I do once in a while," replied Short-Tail, as the last of the beetle vanished. "If any young mice happen along you'll see whether or not I am a real hunter. They don't have to be so young either. I've killed more than one mouse bigger than I am. I'm ready for a fight with anybody my own size any time. But looking for bugs is just as much hunting as it is for Hooty the Owl to try to catch me. If you don't believe it, just you try to catch some of those big beetles."

"No, thank you," replied Peter, very promptly. "I'm quite willing to take your word for it and to leave them for you and Jimmy Skunk. I should think that one big beetle like the one you have just eaten would last you all day."

"Last me all day!" cried Short-Tail. "Why, that wasn't a bite. It would take a dozen like that to make me a meal and I have to have several meals a day. It is a bad day when I don't eat twice my own weight in food. You see anybody active as I am must have a lot of food to keep him going. I have to run about a great deal to find food enough, and the more I have to run about the more food I have to have to keep me going."

He disappeared before Peter could reply. "Twice his own weight in food in a day," muttered Peter. "He says he eats twice his own weight in a day. I thought I was some eater, but I guess I'm not. Twice his own weight in a day—phew!"

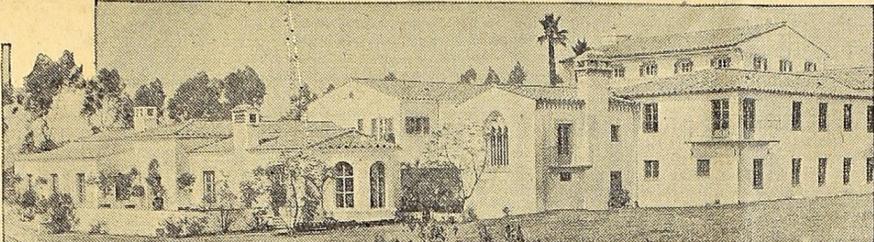

"That's nothing. Sometimes I eat three times my own weight when I'm lucky," squeaked Short-Tail, appearing in front of Peter as abruptly as he had disappeared. This time he had a snail.

"Are you going to eat that?" asked Peter.

"Not now," replied Short-Tail. "I'd like to, but I guess I'd better put it away for next winter. Excuse me, please."

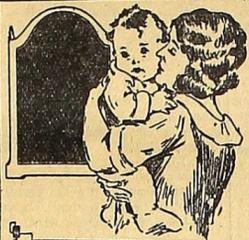

Short-Tail vanished with the snail. "My goodness, what an appetite!" exclaimed Peter, as he waited.

WHEN there are bits of leftover ham too small to serve, put them through the food grinder together with a small onion, half a green pepper and one hard-cooked egg. Mix with salad dressing and use as filling for sandwiches, toasted, if liked.

Chopped Roast Beef Sandwiches. Use the small waste pieces left from a roast; to one cupful add a little chopped onion, salt, pepper and enough fresh horseradish to moisten. Spread on generous slices of whole wheat bread.

Ham and Tomato Sandwich. Take one cupful of chopped ham, one teaspoonful of minced parsley, a pinch of mace, a few drops of lemon juice, one-half cupful of butter, a bit of garlic or onion. Rub the bowl with the garlic and mix all the ingredients together and spread on rounds of bread between which place a slice of ripe tomato.

Another Sandwich. Work into four ounces of fresh butter two teaspoonfuls of curry powder, half a teaspoonful of lemon juice and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt; blend to a smooth paste, adding a few drops of onion juice. Let stand where it will keep soft. Butter slices of bread, lay on a thin slice of ham, then a thin slice of chicken. Put on a slice of buttered bread and press together. Cut any desired shape.

Roast Beef Sandwiches. Dip thin slices of roast beef into heavy french dressing to which finely chopped onion has been added. Place on thinly sliced buttered bread of wheat or rye and garnish with a slice of sour pickle.

GRAPHIC GOLF

FLEXIBLE SHAFTS HELP GOLFER

EXPERT golfers generally have strong wrist action and free wrist action plays an important part in the way they are able to slash into the ball for tremendous distances. Most of the average golfers do not possess both suppleness and strength here and for these players the springy-steel shaft in a measure offsets their deficiency. In this way they are able to get more distance to their shots without the shock that the thicker, less pliable shaft would necessarily give. Supplementing this springy shaft with a deep, heavy-faced club will give a feeling of life to the club that will undoubtedly result in better play for the average player. Swung smoothly and not too fast, it will undoubtedly please both the golfer with weak wrists and the more powerful golfer whose wrists are not limber.

WHEN GOLD WAS DISCOVERED ON THE AU SABLE RIVER

The lumbermen's monument is not the only marker serving to preserve remembrance of events on the Au-Sable river. Back in the period of 1909 Alvin Densmore bossed a river crew, made up of some of the more expert of the pike-pole and peevy handlers of that time, such as Slim
Cardinal, Johnnie LaVoie, Claude
London, "Tag" Berry and some half dozen others of the same sturdy ilk.
The work was pulling "dead-heads" for Chris Yockey, and the boss had rigged up, to facilitate the work, a steam engine and winch on a scow.
They were located at Largo Springs.
A shaft on the engine broke and, to get the necessary repairs made on it, Densmore had to take it to town.
He was delayed in getting the shaft mended and was absent for some time. Being unable during his absence to continue their log salvaging operations, the energy of the men naturally found another vent. When he did return, in place of the prosaic river crew he had left, he found a band of excited adventurers—men who scorned the thought of ever again sticking a pike-pole into a submerged saw-log. They were rich!
In Largo Springs they had discovered gold! It was embedded in stones that had incrustations like potato eyes, and for them there could be no mistaking the yellow glint. If they had been industrious on the "dead-head" job they were doubly ambitious in getting out the fruits of their discovery. From daylight until the darkness of night forbade they had delved with might and main.

When their boss returned he found them jubilant—"stagg dancing" around their heap of "gold." But when he viewed the results of their discovery and labors he failed to share their elation, and quoted: "All is not gold that glitters." They proceeded to install the repaired engine shaft—casting reproachful eyes betimes at the heap of iron pyrites and silicates which they had dug from the banks, and which is still evident as a sod-covered hump—a memorial of the discovery of gold on the AuSable.—Oscoda Press.

In the Office of the Drain Commissioner of the County of Iosco in the Matter of the "Cleaning of Gregory Drain."

Notice is hereby given, that on the 3rd day of April, 1933, an application was filed with the undersigned drain commissioner for the county of Iosco, praying for the "cleaning of Gregory Drain;"

That upon the 22nd day of May, 1933, the undersigned filed with the Honorable David Davison, Judge of Probate, a petition asking for the appointment of a Board of Determination;

That said Judge of Probate, having appointed W. E. Laidlaw, John McMullen and Jesse Carpenter as such Board of Determination;

Now, therefore, said Board will meet at the home of Octave Miller on the 14th day of June, 1933, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day to determine the necessity of cleaning said drain.

Therefore, all persons, municipalities and highway officials interested in the proposed improvement are requested to be present if they so desire.

Dated at McIvor, this 24th day of May, 1933.

Defining Boundaries

To beat the bounds means to trace out by perambulation the bounds of a parish by striking with a rod certain points in passing by way of calling to witness. This is an old custom still kept up in many English parishes by going around the boundaries on Holy Thursday, or Ascension day. In Scotland beating the bounds is called riding the marches.

Care of House Plants

When a potted plant starts decaying there may be worms in the soil, so water the soil with strong soap suds or use water containing ammonia—one teaspoonful to a quart of water. The worms that are not killed by the solution will come to the surface for air and can be destroyed. Use the suds several times but it is better to pour it through a funnel to prevent its getting on the plant.

WOMEN'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE MOTOR CAR

There is some doubt that people care to hear very much about what goes on under the hoods of their cars.

The driver knows that "driving qualities" are not accidental; they are put there. How the manufacturer creates or evolves those results may not interest him. He judges entirely by the results he gets in driving.

Well, it is not essential to talk "shop"; let us talk Results.

Smoothness. Drive the Ford V-8 and you will find that the engine runs with surpassing smoothness, due to its design and the extra precise methods of its manufacture.

Power. There it is, 75 horsepower (we could say 80) at the drive-shaft for the driver's use. With less weight to pull around, the mettle of this car—its life-like response—is rather remarkable.

Economy. Our V-8 develops more power on a gallon of gasoline than any car we have made. Mileage is partly a matter of individual driving, but under average conditions the Ford V-8 does 17 to 20 miles a gallon. Of course, car economy is not only a matter of fuel. Ford V-8 has that too, but it is also economical in the complete sense—initial cost, operation, maintenance.

Appearance. This is woman's contribution. The motor car must not only be useful, but also good-looking. View the Ford V-8 and you will not need our comment on its fine appearance.

Comfort. This also is woman's concern. In 30 years she changed the motor car from a wagon to a coach. Comfort is a quality made up of numerous ingredients. There is no comfort without a quiet, smooth-running engine. We have all the other ingredients too,—color, good taste, quality, ease, safety, roominess and convenience.

Henry Ford

SUCH IS LIFE—Out of the Frying Pan—

Kidnaping Is Mostly Work of Racketeers

"Amateurs" Usually Display a Lack of Skill.

New York.—A new light may have been thrown on kidnaping in the United States the other day when the police closed in on the men involved in the abduction of little Margaret McMath of Horwichport, Mass., and found, instead of a group of desperate gangsters, two Cape Cod merchants, says the New York Times.

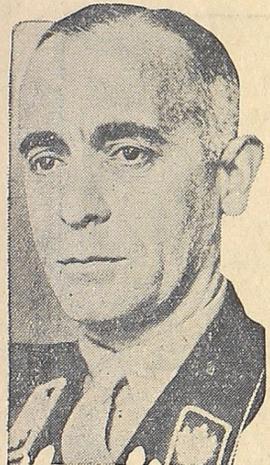

The fact that the Buck brothers were not gangsters does not disprove the frequently made assertion that there are organized bands in the United States who specialize in this particularly vicious and cowardly type of crime. There is plenty of evidence that kidnaping groups do exist. But the McMath case suggests that many kidnapings are attempted or carried out by men who may be described as amateurs.

Began With Racketeers.

The history of organized kidnaping, as investigators have pieced it together, is that it began with the abduction of racketeers, gangsters, gamblers and others not on good terms with the law by fellow denizens of the underworld. The victims in such cases were rarely in a position to appeal to the police.

So far as can be ascertained, and the theory is borne out by the records, organized kidnapers prefer to deal with adults, probably because a kidnaped adult can be bargained with directly and because popular indignation does not reach quite so high a pitch. When they invade the normal, law-abiding world they deal in large figures. The kidnapers of Charles Rosen, a young New York broker, in August, 1931, asked for and got $50,000 ransom. They also got, without asking, 60 years in prison when the four of them were captured and convicted.

Sixty thousand dollars is reported to have been paid for the release of Claude Boettcher, son of a wealthy Denver man, kidnaped last March. John Factor of Chicago, sometimes known as "Jake the Barber," is said to have paid $100,000 for the release of his young son, Jerome, though it must be added that Factor refused to confirm this statement. One hundred thousand dollars was demanded of Michael H. Katz of Kansas City, $150,000 of Dr. Isaac D. Kelly of St. Louis, $75,000 of Mrs. Nell Donnelly of Kansas City, $50,000 of Benjamin Bower, a Denver baker.

Risky Enterprise.

Nevertheless, kidnaping is a risky and uncertain enterprise, particularly since "Whiskers," as the United States government is said to be called in the underworld, entered the field in opposition. Until last year it was difficult for the federal officials to make a case against kidnapers, even when the United States mails had been used or victims had been carried across state lines. Two statutes, passed by congress in June and July, 1932, remedied this situation.

One of them imposes a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a fine of $5,000 for the use of the mails to convey threats to injure, to kidnap, to accuse of crime, or to demand ransom or reward for the return of an abducted person. The second provides for cases in which a kidnaped person has been carried across a state, territorial or international boundary of the United States; the judge, on conviction, may impose any penalty up to life imprisonment. This is said to be the only federal statute in which such discretion is allowed.

Rats Show Cunning in Stealing Eggs

Monroe, La.—A barnyard mystery was cleared up here with the explanation of Mrs. C. H. Sutton, an authority on the cunning of rats.

Eggs had been missing from nests, and one farmer, while digging around his hen house, found several eggs, still intact, in rat holes.

The question arose as to how the rats could carry the eggs into a hole. Mrs. Sutton explained the rat system of nest robbing.

Two rats do the work. One lies flat on its back with its feet in the air while the other rat rolls the egg up on the stomach of the reclining rat, which holds the egg in that position with its four legs.

The other rat then takes the tail of the rat holding the egg and drags it into the hole.

HOW WE LIVE

by LEONARD A. BARRETT

When archeologists uncover a library all other work ceases and every workman is instructed to assist in the task of recovering the treasures. Relics are always interesting, especially those which confirm our interpretation of history; but the most interesting discovery is a library because from that source we learn how people lived.

How people lived is the most important factor in evaluating history. It also determines the stability of governments, the value of art and literature, and the permanent influence of national character. Every well equipped library contained histories of the national development, struggle for supremacy and the final overthrow of the civilization of every race; but, when we ask what has been left to us from the ruin of these civilizations we are amazed to find how little we really possess. The splendid civilization of the Roman empire is in ruins. We do not know the names of their rich men and we care less. We are not deeply concerned about the material possessions of past nations, but the poetry of Virgil and the writings of Horace are among our priceless possessions. The same may be said of Greece. We possess nothing of the material conquests of her splendid civilization except ruins, but the literature of Socrates, Homer and Plato is imperishable. The literature of an age reveals the aspirations, ambitions, purposes and dreams of that age. It tells us how people hoped, struggled and lived.

Whatever may be said concerning the transition through which this nation is now passing, the fact remains that we are making history. Some future historian will write the story of our age, but to those who will read that story, the skyscrapers of our day will remain only as monsters of the markets of our time. Our material possessions will be studied not for their financial worth, but for the effect their changing values have had upon the stability of our national character and personality.

How we live determines the future of our democracy and shapes our destiny. The motives, ideals and ambitions governing our efforts to restore the economic order to normalcy are the most important factors in determining the permanency of that recovery.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

Routine is a stabilizing method to follow when one has many duties to perform, and especially when outside activities are entered into, or special work must be accomplished. In order to make the most of the working hours, a daily schedule is advised, since no two day's work follows the precise order throughout. This daily schedule is put to good use by one woman of my acquaintance who has to combine household duties with remunerative occupation which can be done at home. Her schedule is as important as her engagement book in which dates and times are noted for social and other engagements.

The schedule is made the night before each week day. Hours and even minutes are definitely set down against each occupation, and the times stipulated when it is time for the next to begin. The amount of time required for the specific things is sufficiently allowed for, such as preparation of foods for meals, serving them and clearing up afterwards. For example, while meals are punctual, the time which is needed for the preparation and cooking of some foods is less than others. Therefore, the scheduled time for getting meals varies with menus. A certain flexibility results, and so each day has its agreeable variety without sacrificing efficiency.

Every homemaker appreciates the multiplicity of tasks which are included in her vocation, and that many of these tasks are continual although constantly different. For example sewing may consist in dressmaking or in darning, but it remains sewing. It needs to be pushed ahead, sometimes a little, sometimes a great deal, each day. But the idea of getting it finished definitely is not considered, any more than actually finishing any daily routine work. A dress is finished, a meal is through, but repetition in variety follows.

Sewing.

So in making a daily schedule a set time for sewing is included. The work progresses, within the limitations of the time scheduled. Then this work is stopped without expecting the completion of the job. The work is pushed ahead along the lines most needed and within the time scheduled. The rush of sewing is, in this way, eliminated. The woman knows she has a daily amount of time for needlework, and accomplishment is made easy.

A time for rest is scheduled. This comes right after the midday meal. Then a period of relaxation for reading or napping gives the afternoon tasks new zest. A time for her own vocational work is so placed that her mind is fresh, as it must needs be as it is one of mental activity. Evenings are free. When anything comes up in the way of entertainment appointments, the schedule is arranged to permit of them.

One great advantage of this schedule system is that it prevents a person from getting diverted from doing the important things by frittering moments away in trivialities. It also keeps one keen to recognize what must be done, and to include time for it in the near future. By daily scheduling one's time routine is given its needed variety.

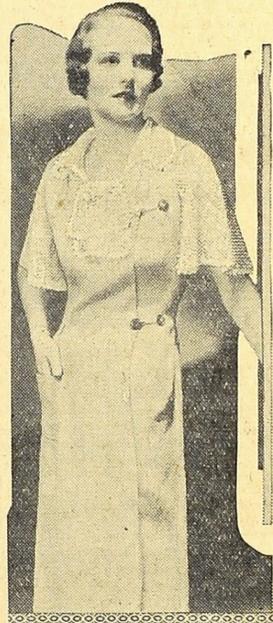

Bedroom Ensembles.

An ensemble of a hooked rug and a coverlet or quilt to match in design and colors is a smart appointment for a chamber, especially when the room is furnished in old-fashioned style. An equally distinctive ensemble results when the rug and coverlet are developed in quilted patchwork, which has all the appeal of quick work to modern homemakers.

The coverlet to go with the hooked rug can be in candlewick tufting in which the little tufts closely resemble those in the hooked work. Or the design on the rug can be developed in patchwork or the spread in the same colors found in the rug.

The Chinese Cabinet

By KATE EDMONDS

THE three granddaughters of Phineas Cobb listened to the reading of his last will and testament. There were no other heirs and the document was strangely brief.

"To my granddaughter, Annie Cobb Youngs, $10,000. To my granddaughter, Martha Weeks Stringer, $10,000. To my granddaughter, Helen Cobb, the Chinese cabinet in my library, together with all my books and collection of engravings."

"That is all," said the lawyer.

"All?" repeated Mrs. Youngs. "What becomes of the house and its contents?"

"It is not mentioned in the will."

"Then," said Mrs. Martha Stringer in an acid tone, "I suppose that will be divided separately, among us three, share and share alike."

"That would be the legal division," admitted the lawyer, "unless your grandfather disposed of it in some other manner."

"You should know that," protested Mrs. Youngs.

He shook his head. "You remember that my partner attended to Mr. Cobb's affairs, and that I was recalled from the West because of my partner's death, which occurred a week before that of Mr. Cobb. I can only administer the estate according to the will, and if you care to carry the matter into court it can be decided definitely."

Mrs. Youngs said she preferred to consult her husband, and Mrs. Stringer echoed the remark. Helen Cobb, the youngest and unmarried one of the cousins, arose and thanked the lawyer for his services, kissed her cousins goodby and went away.

"Grandfather treated her abominably," declared Annie Youngs to Martha as they rode to the railroad station. "She worked for him, took care of him when he was sick, and made a slave of herself—now, she is turned out with that wretched Chinese cabinet and a lot of musty old books. She will have to find something to do. And she's all alone in the world. She's a good nurse, Martha."

In the meantime Helen Cobb walked home like one in a daze. The blow she had received had been a staggering one, deprived her not only of a home and sustenance, but of faith in the grandparent she had loved and cherished in his lonely old age.

"It must be a mistake," she whispered as she let herself into the great, silent house. Maggie, the cook, came creaking upstairs, her round face full of concern.

"You look all wore out, Miss Helen. I've made you a cup of tea and cooked a chop; I've baked you a strawberry tart, too."

The girl smiled through her tears. "You are very good, Maggie."

"I expect you ought to see Doctor Hare—your nerves are all unstrung, child."

Helen blushed. "I don't need a doctor, Maggie."

"There's a young doctor thinks he needs you, I reckon," and Maggie went off chuckling to open the door for Doctor Hare, who had come to bring a bunch of roses for Helen and inquire after her health.

In a few minutes Helen had told him her disappointment. "I shall have to finish my nursing course, and I hope, both you and Doctor Paine will recommend me," she said.

"I am sorry about your grandfather—it is puzzling, for he was a man of strong intellect up to his death. But I am glad, Helen, for another reason—now you can marry me all the sooner. I am still struggling, but there is enough for two—and I would never have dared ask an heiress to become my wife!"

And so they became engaged—the disinherited granddaughter and the poor young doctor.

"I am heiress to a Chinese cabinet and a library of 5,000 volumes!" declared Helen.

The Chinese cabinet was of lacquer, with gorgeous fighting cocks in brilliant red in relief on the doors. The lawyer had given Helen the key and in a moment the doors were open and a row of small drawers were revealed.

The first drawer contained odd bits of Chinese jewelry of small value; the second one was filled with a silk shawl of cobweb fineness, and the third one contained an ivory fan delicately carved. The third drawer was shallow and came out entirely, disclosing another secret drawer behind it.

"How delightful," exclaimed Helen, pulling on the red silk tassel that formed a handle. The secret drawer opened with a jerk and a mass of envelopes fell into Helen's lap. Upon examination they proved to be deeds to the property—house and gardens—transferring all of the real estate to Helen Cobb. Another paper directed her to open each volume in the library. This they did in the presence of the amazed lawyer, and in each book was found a new $100 bill.

"You are quite an heiress after all," said the friendly lawyer, shaking hands with the girl.

"Yes—but—Jack, you're not going?" She followed the doctor to the door. His honest young face was white and set. "After all this I cannot offer you my modest—!" Then her soft white hand pressed his lips.

"You have asked me and I have promised, and so—you would not make me give the cabinet and the house and the money to my cousins, for I would rather go with you."

Knitted Things Demand Extra Care in Washing

Have you succumbed to the knitting or crocheting fever? Whether or not, you certainly have sweaters, knitted suits, etc., for who can be without them these days? They're so attractive, and almost indispensable for sport and everyday wear, and if washable, as many of them are, it's so easy to keep them clean.

Before washing a new sweater, test it to be sure the colors are fast, by squeezing an inconspicuous portion in clear, lukewarm water for five minutes or so.

Knitted things often get out of shape when wet, so to insure restoring them to the correct proportions just draw an outline on clean, wrapping paper before wetting. Incidentally, the ideal time to draw this outline is when the sweater is new, before you have stretched the elbows, etc. Then this outline may be used each time you wash the sweater.

Remove unwashable buttons, buckles, etc., and turn the sweater wrong-side out. Make rich suds with mild, neutral soap flakes; always have the suds and rinse waters lukewarm or cool. Put in the sweater and wash by squeezing the suds through and through the material. Never rub. Wash quickly. Do not soak colored garments.

Thoroughly rinse in plenty of lukewarm or cool water. Squeeze out the water—don't twist. Then roll the sweater in a dry turkish towel, knead for a moment and unroll. Don't leave colored garments rolled up while wet. Ease the sweater into shape on the outline. If the sweater tends to shrink, pin it in place on a firm surface as on corrugated pasteboard, or an old rug. Use pins which will not rust.

When the sweater is dry remove it from the outline, turn it right-side out and press it lightly, using a damp cloth to remove wrinkles and pin marks.

Statecraft No Bar to Triumph in Other Arts

Since Mr. Woodin (we are undecided whether that is pronounced "Woodeen" or not), plays a zither, we hear, music may still be said to be represented in the cabinet. Public men and statesmen who are musically inclined are not altogether rare. Charles G. Dawes, ex-Vice President, composed a meritorious piece for the violin; Nick Longworth was an expert in music; Jimmy Walker wrote a popular song. The world's greatest pianist was Poland's prime minister, and is sought for that post again.

In ancient Greece and also in Rome, a publicist could write verses without being considered too artist-minded for practical affairs. We shall not go so far as to dwell on the fact that an emperor of Rome was a poet, though an indifferent one.

Coming back to modern times, President Wilson could write limericks and John Quincy Adams is remembered for a first-class satirical poem. The Muses are by no means shy of the administrative type of intellect. It is perhaps true that that type seldom permits itself to wander in the fields of the gentler arts, though it might easily shine there if it wished.—F. H. Collier, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FORLORN ISLAND

CHAPTER I

It was a lonely land by a lonely sea. But Eric loved them both. One was his father—the great Alaskan country stretching one-ninth of the way around the world—and the old gray ocean, wearing a billowing cloak of mist, was surely his mother. The sea has had many husbands—Phoenicia last night, Venice in the dawn, England and Holland and the little Yankee land in mid-morning, and to each she has borne a breed of giants—but now she has taken a younger, bolder lover in the North, and this wind-tanned youth on the Bradford cannery dock was a child of that mating.

His full name was Eric Ericsson. It was typical of the new species—it could as well have been Kris Nansen, or Nils Larsen, or Storker Storkersen. Like the other founders of the clan, his parents had come from Norway's windy coast first to dig for gold in Alaskan gravels, then more to their liking, to fish for halibut and salmon in the fjords of the Northwest. But neither Eric nor his clansmen were Norwegians. Born on Alaskan soil, they were the product of a new environment—new ways, waters, men, and minds.

As the son of a ship captain, of course he had had good schooling. At the close of his second year at the University of Alaska at Fairbanks, he had gone abroad to specialize in geography, ethnology, and economics—in the fore'stle of a tramp steamer. Now, still under thirty, he had papers entitling him to sail as master on any ship, of any tonnage, anywhere on the seven seas.

As he sat on the dock at Squaw Harbor any old Alaskan could tell his breed. Both his ancient mother and his young father had put their mark upon him. He was tall and lean, lithe and loose-jointed, by the Alaskan pattern; and he walked like a soughdough rather than a sailor, with a spring of his toes, lightly, swiftly, and tirelessly. He sat alone, ignoring the motley crowd on the dock. He had little in common with Siwash slimmers or Filipino messboys; even less with Sandomar's gang. There were ten of these men, all recently fired from the cannery force, and, like Eric himself, they were idly watching a sleek yacht, stranger to these waters, glide into the harbor.

In Eric's heart dwelt a strange love, deep and wide, for most all craft on all seas, but an amused half-smile flickered across his lips as he surveyed the stylish visitor. Obviously she was built for luxurious cruising, not to rough it in these half-charted northern waters. In venturing here she was surely living up to her name, the Intrepid.

The elderly captain docked her handsly, and the gang-plank was run out. To Eric's amazement, the greater part of the crew immediately walked off. Not only the kit-bags in their hands but the gray, grim look on their faces told plainly that they were done with the Intrepid for the rest of their seafaring lives.

Eric spoke to the first officer, a stalwart Yankee type that he knew and respected. "Looks like she's going to be short-handed the rest of her cruise."

"There's six left, out of eighteen," the man answered angrily. "Our time's up, but he won't hit for home. Now he can cool his heels here, or else run the whole ship himself—as he's wanted to from the first. We're going to go out on the Catherine D."

"Who do you mean by 'he'?" The skipper?

"The old man's all right. I mean Horton, the millionaire who owns her. He's not a yachtsman, but he won't stay in the saloon. Always coming between his skipper and the crew. He has no respect for an officer, much less a sailor—he treats 'em all like funkies. Our fellows are Americans—they won't put up with that. Besides, he expects the impossible. All his life he's got what he wanted, bought it with his checkbook, and he can't see why we can't supply the weather and the tides he demands. Tell him he can't go some place, and that's where he's going to start for."

The officer swore, throatily and emphatically and marched off. A burly, middle-aged man in smart yachting cap—no doubt Horton himself—now disembarked. With him was an athletic man of thirty, with a lean, scholarly face, thin lips, and icy gray eyes. Catching sight of Eric, Horton signaled him up with an imperious gesture.

"What's your name?" Eric's sparkling blue eyes turned hard gray. "I am Mr. Ericsson." "Do you want a job? I need some men, to replace those proud devils who just walked off. What can you do on shipboard?" "Taking your questions one at a time—Eric's quick anger had faded, and his lips twitched at the corners. "I might take a berth, provided I found a good one. I came as first officer of the Redmond, lying here through the season, and I expect to go out with her next fall. I have master's papers—and I might tell you that I'm a proud devil, too."

"I notice it." He turned to his young companion. "Roy, I think this chap will do for first officer." Then, to Eric: "Those men over there look good to me. Would they do for my crew?"

Eric followed his gaze to find Sandomar's gang watching with lighted eyes, but he could not say that they looked good to him. They were here solely through a mistake made by Bradford's absent partner, the hiring, as foreman, of a seemingly honest trawler known as Swede. This pale-eyed, pale-haired thug had taken advantage of a labor shortage to call in, from up and down the coasts, vultures of his own feather, promising not only lucrative employment but a chance for wholesale thievery of packed salmon cases. True, the piracy had failed and the gang had been fired bag and baggage, but until the Catherine took them off Bradford would not sleep soundly.

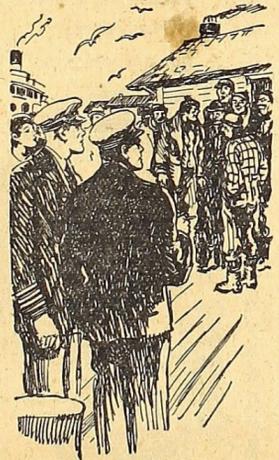

A strange pack for a far place like Squaw Harbor! Swede was still its nominal leader, but its real chief was a former sea-otter poacher known as Sandomar, an enormous dusky-skinned Pole more gorilla than man. He had won his leadership in spite of what seemed a hopeless handicap, complete deafness. But always with him, like a jackal following a tiger, went an undersized ratty-eyed cockney who acted as his ears. This man, who seemed to have no name but "Garge," interpreted all he heard in a kind of shorthand sign language—a swift flicker of his fingers half the time unnoticed by his fellows. Sandomar was not a mute, and made his answers in a deep monotone.

Besides these two and Swede, there was a short, plump, oily-skinned poor white nicknamed Cooky; two pelagic sealers known as Big Smith and Little Smith; DeValera, not a Latin but a black Irishman; a renegade Australian called Sydney Bill; and two nondescript Russians, saboteurs and Reds, whose names never seemed twice the same.

"You don't want that gang," Eric told Horton. "They'd likely scuttle your ship and cut all your throats, before you get back."

"Then how about taking some of Bradford's hands?"

Before Eric could answer, two others of the yachting party came down the gangplank and joined the group. One was a thin little woman in black, nimble and bright-eyed for all her more than seventy years; Eric suspected that she was Horton's widowed mother, the wife of the original founder of the fortune. The other, and Eric accepted it as sober fact, was probably graced beyond any soul that had ever set foot on these isles.

He would never forget his first glimpse of Nan Horton. On this raw coast, beside a savage sea, she was an alien and exotic spirit.

Blond viking of the North, Eric was drawn to dusky women. Her dark, proud little face, with dull-rose cheeks, held a trace of arrogance—no doubt she was willful and undisciplined as Horton himself, but her pointed hazel eyes were warmly lighted within their heavy dark fringe of lashes, clear, kindly, and strangely steadfast; and her mouth was wistful.

Eric returned to earth to hear Horton repeating his question, in impatient tones. "How about taking some of Bradford's hands, I say?"

Eric's expression quickly changed. "Bradford has none to spare." "What if I offer double pay? That would fetch 'em, wouldn't it?"

"I don't think so. Besides, it would be mighty poor sportsmanship for a yacht owner like you to make such an offer."

Eric spoke slowly and quietly, and Nan Horton opened her clear, hazel eyes. Horton's rat-trap mouth grew hard. "I don't require any advice from you."

"You asked for it, and I'm going to give it to you. Bradford's short-handed anyway; if he loses any more men, just at the start of the season, he can't handle his fish. If you try anything like this, you can expect trouble."

"And you'll deserve it, too, Felx." It was the old woman's voice, clear as a bird's. "Your sport is not as important as Mr. Bradford's work, or any man's. Of course you can't steal his men."

"But that argument can be reduced to an absurdity," said the younger man called Roy. "If you start thinking of other people's interests instead of your own you'll soon find yourself in the sentimental soup. Don't you see that if we don't recruit our crew here, we'll have to loaf two weeks waiting for a fresh gang from Ketchikan?"

"I don't agree with you, Roy." It was Nan's contralto voice, with a cello-like richness of tone, and both men turned to her in surprise. "Usually I support you and Dad in the public be d—d attitude, but somehow this doesn't seem to me to be playing the game."

"Nan, you're talking as though life is a cricket match, or a romance," Roy spoke lightly, yet with a flash of his cold eyes. Eric knew that here was a strong man—perhaps even stronger than the purse-proud millionaire, Felix Horton—who would likely win what he wanted from the world, whether it was wealth or power or Horton's daughter. "Go ahead, Felx, and take what men you need."

"That's what I propose to do," He turned to Eric. "Who's that chap in the mackinaw?"

"Johanessen, Bradford's dock foreman."

Johanessen was called up and questioned. Would he ship on the Intrepid for twice his present pay? He shook his blond head.

"I am very sorry, but we is short-handed, and I cannot spare myself. You see, de feesh run pretty quick now, and we will all be dam' busy; I haf no time to go yachting."

He marched stolidly away; a girlish giggle escaped Mother Horton's pale old lips. Nan's gray eyes brightened perceptibly, and even Roy smiled faintly and knowingly. "Just what we could expect from the simple Nordic," Roy said.

But Horton's big jaws flushed. "I'll be hanged if I'm going to rot up here for two weeks. We'll take these bully boys there." He indicated Sandomar's gang. "They're a hard lot, but we can handle them, and maybe they won't be so saughty as those sterling Americans that just walked off. And Ericsson here will ship as first officer."

Eric's eyes were not now the tint of deep water in the sunlight, but of Bering sea shoals under winter clouds. "I don't want the job. I don't care to work for you. You asked for it, and you've got it. I just saw you try to break up Bradford's force with the strength of your checkbook, and I'm not going to okay that, or help you make a cruise in our waters."

He was looking into Horton's face, so he did not see the quick flash, possibly anger, perhaps some other emotion, in his daughter's eyes. But as he turned away, he heard Mother Horton voice unqualified approval. "I don't blame him a bit, Felx. If your father was alive, he'd say the same."

Eric turned to his snubbing block, but the matter was not yet closed. An entirely new light was thrown on it when the elderly captain sought Eric and recalled that they had met before. Their eyes grew brilliant as they recalled a dive in Jibuti; a strange, hair-raising, snaky dance by a nautch-girl, the tint of old ivory; and a chair-smashing row with half a dozen Arabs.

"I was a better man then than now," Captain Waymire said. "Five years makes a sight of difference. And maybe that's why I hate to face this cruise alone."

"You still have your chief engineer," Eric said.

"Yes, but he can't help me handle that pack of wolves I've just signed up." Then, man to man: "Ericsson, forget the boss' high-handed ways, and help me out. And I'm not speaking for myself alone."

Eric struggled in vain against rising curiosity. "Who are you speaking for?" "Horton's girl. She asked me to talk to you. I think she approved of your stand, but like me, she's uneasy about those thugs. She won't admit it, but I know she is. Anyway, she wants you on the ship. And Ericsson, I want you, too. As another master mariner, I ask you to try to strain a point and help me out."

Eric's gaze wandered off to the deck of the yacht, on which stood a vivid figure. Curly dark hair blowing in the wind, dull-rose cheeks in the sunlight, and for one brief second, steady, tranquil, hazel eyes challenging his own. . . . Yes, this was a call he could hardly refuse. . . . And he was only twenty-eight, the possessor of two strong hands and a boy's heart fancy free.

"I'd be under your orders, not Horton's?"

"Yes, I won't let him interfere."

"When do you want to sail?"

"Right now. Sandomar, and his crowd have already gone aboard."

"Wait till I get my kit-bag. I'm going, too."

POULTRY

FORCED PULLET IS NOT BEST PRODUCER

Should Have Time to Develop Necessary Stamina.

"Pullets should be given every opportunity to develop normally without being forced, in order that they may have the body vigor to withstand a long and continuous period of heavy egg production," says O. C. Uford, extension poultryman for the Colorado agricultural college.

"It is not good practice," he adds, "to force growth by the use of a heavy protein diet over the entire growing period. Birds that have received such a diet will start laying a month or three weeks earlier than the normal maturing period for the breed, but they will not have the body growth that enables them to stand up under heavy egg production over a long period of time."

For pullets on a summer range, a growing mash of ground grains containing 10 per cent meat scraps and 5 per cent bone meal, is suggested. This may be kept before them all the time in outdoor hoppers. The hoppers should be so constructed that very little mash can be wasted, and the hoppers should never be allowed to go empty, it is stated.

This growing mash may be kept before the pullets until they are three or four months old, depending on their development. Then, in order to prevent too rapid development, the percentage of meat scraps may be greatly reduced by adding ground oats or barley, corn meal or bran to the growing mash mixture. Reduction of the animal food allows the pullets to grow and develop without stimulating the growth of the egg-producing organs.

"This method of handling pullets enables them to put on body weight and fat, and when they come into winter production they will be able to produce steadily because of their vigor and vitality," Uford explains.

Too Much Sunshine Is

Not Good for Chickens

While sunshine is necessary in the development of chicks, one should not overlook the fact that during the hot summer months protection from the hot sun is absolutely necessary. One reason why late hatched chicks fail to thrive is because of failure to keep them supplied with shade. Chicks that are compelled to remain in a close, hot coop in the heat of summer because of no other protection are not getting the best possible treatment. The air under shade trees is fresher and cooler; there is less danger from mites and they are closer to green food and insect life.

If summer shade is not provided by trees and bushes the next best thing to do is to plant patches of sunflowers or corn. It is of course necessary to keep the chicks away from it until it gets a fair start. After the plants have grown to a sufficient height, chickens can run in them with practically no injury to the crop. In fact, there is no objection to growing a crop of chickens and corn on the same piece of ground. This can be easily done by erecting temporary fences and confining the chicks to a portion of the yard or it may mean the removal of the chickens to new yards more suitable for summer growth. On the farm this latter method can usually be employed.—Missouri Farmer.

Feather Pulling

The feather-pulling habit is usually caused by overcrowding. Another cause is the taste of blood, which may result from accident or disease. When hens, and especially roosters taste blood they become part cannibal. Feather pulling is the natural result for the birds soon find that there is a drop of blood at the bottom of the quill they pull, and they have been known to practically eat a weak member of the flock alive. The best remedy is to kill the cannibals and segregate the victims as soon as it is seen that they cannot protect themselves. Out of door exercise and change of feed will do much to stop the trouble.—Montreal Herald.

Curing Scaly Leg

The shanks and upper surfaces of the toes of fowls are protected by horny overlapping scales. A little mite, called by scientists sarcoptes mutans, has a habit of burrowing under these scales, causing an irritation and making the feet sore. Its presence is detected by the loosening of the scales and accumulation of crusty matter under them. The condition is corrected by dipping the feet in a mixture of linseed and kerosene oils, equal parts, or by anointing with vaseline.

Rhode Island Red Bantam

The general rules and practices applied to the raising of "large" poultry hold good in handling the Bantam, also. The Rhode Island Red Bantam is coming to the front as a popular member of the midget group and some good specimens of these birds are to be seen occasionally in showrooms. They have not been admitted to the American Standard, but it is likely that in course of time they will be recognized. The males weigh about two pounds.

Mr. George B. Cautious Arises to Protest Inconvenience in Matter of Men's Hot Weather Apparel

"Gentlemen," said George B. Cautious, at the weekly meeting of the Rowan club, "if you will pardon me, I wish to refer again to a subject that I think I may have discussed here in the past. At any rate, it is a topic that appeals to me as being of timely interest, one that concerns virtually all of us to a greater or lesser degree. To come to the point, friends, I refer to the coming of those warm days when men discard their waistcoats—or vests—and transfer from this garment to other garments, the various useful and necessary implements and articles that have, during the winter season, been carried in the waistcoat pockets. There is one gentleman here who does not wear a waistcoat winter or summer, and he may be excused if he does not care to remain, but most of us are accustomed to donning vests when the cool days come in autumn and wearing them until spring forces us into cooler habiliments.

"My friends, I have made a statistical survey of the suit of clothing that I now have on, and I call your attention, not to the clothes, but to the pockets the suit contains. In the trousers we find two side pockets, two hip pockets, a watch pocket and a secret inside pocket for currency—made in the days before hoarding was taboo and when there may have been something to hoard. The waistcoat has four outside pockets and one inside. The coat has four outside pockets, two inside and a little extra ticket pocket. Thus we have six pockets for the trousers, five for the waistcoat and seven for the coat, or eighteen in all.

"Now, then, I claim that I am not alone in the practice of carrying something in each pocket. We will take the waistcoat, for that is the garment under discussion. In the lower left pocket, let us say, will be the watch. In the lower right pocket we will find a box of safety matches. The upper left pocket houses spectacles and a small notebook. Our pen and pencils we discover in the upper right pocket. In the inside pocket is our driver's license. It is immediately apparent that we cannot do without any of these things, so when the mercury goes up to where a waistcoat is uncomfortable, we will have to move out of it and place these things in the pockets of the coat and trousers—pockets that already have their full quota of deposits. As we are creatures of habit we will continue to reach for our watch, our matches, our pen, and so on, where we have been accustomed to find them, and we will no sooner become reconciled to the new order of things until autumn will be here, and we will be moving back into our waistcoat again. There will be days when going without even a coat will be advised, whereupon it will be necessary to find places in the six pockets of the trousers for what formerly was housed in the twelve pockets of the coat and waistcoat.

"All of us have read from time to time that men are prisoners of convention, that they do not go coatless and hatless because they fear ridicule. I insist that they cling to as many garments as possible because they have use for pockets. These are the days of rapid change, of one innovation after another, and yet nothing has been done in behalf of man's comfort during hot weather. He can don a pair of linen slacks and a shirt open at the throat and sit on his porch each evening, but he cannot go to his office thus attired because such a combination does not have pockets enough. Gentlemen, I contend that too much time is spent in thinking up new fashions for women and not enough in consideration of the practical problems of men. If somebody would bring out a modified cartridge belt, in which we could park our pen, pencil, watch, notebooks and similar articles, perhaps we, too, might dispense with both coat and waistcoat when the weather becomes sultry. We might carry a purse on a strap, such as laundry drivers have, but thus far we are expected to make the change without any help, and it is that form of assistance that I am asking you to join me in seeking today."—Indianapolis News.

Warfare on Leprosy

Seven outstanding American bacteriologists, the first of whom will be Dr. Malcolm H. Soule, professor of bacteriology at the University of Michigan, are to assume tours of duty at the Philippine leper colony on Cullion island in a concerted effort to conquer the disease which has defeated all attempts at extermination from time immemorial.

Their action assumes added importance when it is understood that the number of cases of leprosy the world over is estimated conservatively at 3,000,000, and possibly runs as high as 4,000,000.

The 6,000 cases on Cullion island are expected to furnish variations in such numbers as to advance the investigations recently conducted in Porto Rico by Doctor Soule and Dr. Earl B. McKinney, of George Washington university, who succeeded in isolating the leprosy bacillus. As a result of experiments conducted with monkeys, which were inoculated with leprosy bacillus, it was determined that it is not a vigorous or growing organism with any but humans, the animals quickly recovering their former health.

Women amazed as clothes come 4 or 5 shades whiter —without scrubbing or boiling!

No wonder 316 home-making experts recommend these richer suds!

BECAUSE it washes clothes the whitest ever—because it saves the wear and tear of scrubbing—because it's wonderfully easy on the hands—the home-making experts of 316 leading newspapers recommend Rinso.

The makers of 40 famous washing machines recommend it, too—for whiter washes, for brighter washes, for safety! One box lasts and lasts. Cup for cup, Rinso gives twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps—even in hardest water.

Just try it for dishes! Grease goes in a flash. Rinso makes all cleaning easier. Get a package at your grocer's today.

Hair's Growth After Death
 Certain claims have been made that in rare cases hair has been proved to have grown after death. The United States public health service has stated there are no authentic records of such cases. The widespread belief in this growth is held to be caused by the shrinking of the skin toward the roots of the hairs, giving an appearance of hair growth. The same may be said with regard to growth of nails.

Associated With Kidd
 One of Captain Kidd's haunts ashore was the Penobscot Bay region of Maine. The bay, about midway between Kittery and Lubec on the coast, thrusts itself inland from the ocean for 30 miles as far as Bucksport, where it narrows to form the mouth of the Penobscot river. Its widest expanse, between Rockland and the southern end of Deer Isle, is about 20 miles.

The members of the Senior class made a visit to the new prison at Jackson on Wednesday of last week. The trip was made in cars driven by N. R. Lincoln, Miss Margaret Worden, and Supt. A. E. Giddings. The party was conducted through the prison by Deputy Warden Hatch, who also gave an excellent talk at the close of the tour. It took about two hours and a half to go through the prison. Some of the buildings they went through were the cells, the textile mill, the chapel, kitchen, dining rooms and various other places. They also stopped at the Capitol and went through the museum, Senate, and House of Representatives, and climbed the stairs to the dome. Some of the members of the class went to the museum in the State Building.

The last Junior-Senior function of the year took place June 7, when the Juniors entertained at a sumptuous banquet of the class of '33, faculty, and members of the Board of Education. The Senior class colors of red and white were carried out in the beautiful decorations and other arrangements. The clever programs were doubly attractive because of the realization that they were designed and made by the pupils themselves. After the short program which followed the dinner, everyone enjoyed dancing, the music being furnished by Moore's orchestra. Much credit is due the mothers and Mr. and Mrs. Forsten whose willing aid in preparing the banquet made this brilliant affair possible.

Our baseball team won three games during the past week. They defeated Alabaster on Wednesday, May 31, by a score of 14 to 0. They won from St. Joe Friday, 13 to 1, and emerged victorious Tuesday by winning from East Tawas, 7 to 5. In all three games our team started off with a bang, scoring 13 runs in the first two innings against Alabaster, 12 runs in the first three innings against St. Joe, and four runs in the first inning with East Tawas. Albert Quick did a fine job of pitching in the Alabaster game, allowing only five hits and walking two men, while our team collected twelve hits off the combined efforts of Johnson and Brown. Albert Quick connected safely three times in four attempts while Earl Davis and Louis Frank both got two hits.

Louis Frank was in rare form in the St. Joe game and would have had a shut-out had it not been for a poor throw to third on the part of one of his teammates. Louis allowed only three hits, walked four and struck out fifteen of the St. Joe batters. Willard Wright, Albert Quick, Marvin Mallon, and Herbert Zollweg each made two hits, Marvin getting a home run and a single and Albert a triple and a double.

The East Tawas game was an exciting affair, with a few good plays and several bad ones on both sides. East Tawas outhit our boys, 10 to 6, but our players bunched their hits and with the aid of several misplays scored four of their runs in the first inning and two in the sixth. In the third inning we scored one run without getting a hit. East Tawas scored one run in the fourth, one in the fifth, and three in the seventh. Louis Frank started pitching for our team but was relieved in the seventh by Albert Quick with two on and nobody out. O. McGirr started for East Tawas but had to be relieved by Lixey in the sixth. Several nice running catches by Lixey in left field for East Tawas kept our score down.

We have had some exciting games of tennis during the past week, in which several of the best players were eliminated. In the boys' singles Marvin Mallon won from Wray Cox—6-3, 6-4. Vernon Davis eliminated Willard Wright—0-6, 6-2, 6-1. Earl Davis lost to Albert Quick in a thrilling three-set match—3-6, 6-3, 10-8. Bill Mallon was too good for George Laidlaw and won, 6-3, 7-5. Marvin Mallon went into the quarter-finals by defeating John Brugger—6-3, 6-4. In the girls' singles Isabelle Dease won from Effie Prescott—6-3, 6-1. Agnes Roach defeated Phyllis Bigelow—6-0, 6-3. Dorothy Roach won the right to play in the semi-finals by winning from Annie Metcalf—6-0, 6-2. Only two matches have been played in the girls' doubles. Mildred Quick and Agnes Roach won from Isabelle Dease and Effie Prescott—4-6, 7-5, 6-2. Doris Brugger and Lela Howitson defeated Magdelle Brugger and Phyllis Bigelow—6-1, 6-2.
