

Western Australia Now in Spotlight

Breaks With Commonwealth by Two to One Vote.

Washington.—At the polls and at her gold mines western Australia's activities have drawn the spotlight of news. With the definiteness of a two to one referendum she has recently proclaimed her secession from the commonwealth, suggesting the first break in the confederation of the six Australian states that has existed for 32 years.

Although authorities maintain that the action can have little effect, because there is no governmental machinery allowing any state to withdraw, yet western Australia's protest has been made. An outburst of gold fever, too, inspired by the present high prices of that metal, has awakened new activity at her one-time boom mines.

"Western Australia, comprising approximately one-third of the whole island continent, has made rapid strides in its century of development," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "Especially during the last half century, it has seen significant progress, yet vast areas in its 975,920 square miles are desert and waste land.

ly more than four and three-quarter million acres of land now under cultivation, nearly four million acres are devoted to the growing of wheat, with a recent yield of more than 53,500,000 bushels.

"On more barren areas graze more than 9,800,000 head of sheep and 800,000 cattle. The wool clip furnishes the largest export next to gold and wheat.

"The cities along the west coast are not large. Perth, the capital, has only a little more than 200,000 population. Many of the others live only by virtue of their position as exporting centers for the cattle and sheep country. Broome, along the northern part of the coast, is one of the most interesting because of the fact that it is one of the few 'Asiatic' towns in the 98 per cent British-born population of Australia. There live many Japanese, Chinese, Malays, Filipinos, and Koe-pang from Timor, who are engaged in the pearl and pearl shell industry.

"Western Australia may well feel a certain independence from the rest of Australia because she is more or less isolated by a great desert region 500 miles wide and 1,000 miles long. Air services and the transcontinental train system with its branches, however, do link up many of the towns in western Australia and bring them into close communication with Canberra, the new capital, and cities on the eastern coast.

"Despite the fact that the western province does have much barren waste land and in some cases has had to pump water through 350-mile lengths of pipe line, it does hold promise for great development in the future for there are many areas still unexploited. Also, with a climate ranging from tropical to temperate, a fairly wide range of products can be grown successfully."

Berlin Drug Store Is 275 Years Old

Berlin. — Berlin's oldest drug store, and one of the oldest in Europe, recently celebrated its two hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary.

Among its famous customers have been Bismarck, "The Iron Chancellor"; Theodore Fontane, and the poet, Wilhelm Raabe.

The shop is the "Einhorn Apotheke," in the heart of the old city. Through its almost 300 years of history it has changed little in appearance. The show-window decoration remains pretty much as it always was, with fantastic old remedies, such as "Devil's Dirt," "Dragon Blood," and "Vitriol of Iron" still on display, if not much in demand.

Automatic Pilot That Operates Airplanes

A DEVICE that will actually fly an airplane has been perfected and tested by United Air Lines after two years of secret experiments. Walter Addams, chief pilot of the eastern division, is shown inspecting the device, which causes a plane to climb to any desired altitude, to level off and to assume a predetermined course, as well as to make predetermined turns, without the pilot touching the controls. The "airbot" has not been designed to dispense with the pilots and co-pilots, but rather to relieve them of the active manipulation of the controls except during landings and take-offs.

THE CHANGE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

Dawn comes at last, and yet the skies
Have not so changed—it is our eyes.
The sun went west, the night increased,
And yet the sun, when daylight dies,
The farther west the nearer east.

Dawn comes at last, and yet its rays
Have not so changed—it is our gaze.
The sun went west, the darkness grew,
And yet the sun, that went its ways,
Was nearer, farther from the view.

Dawn comes at last, and yet its light
Has not so changed—it is our sight.
The sun went west; we might have learned
That time would set the old world right;
Suns longer gone more soon returned.

Dawn comes at last, and yet God's scheme
Has not so changed as it may seem.
The sun went west, the west grew dim,
And yet the soul, when dies a dream,
Farther from earth is nearer Him.

JERRY MUSKRAT DECIDES WHERE HE WILL BUILD

THE building of a house is a very serious matter for any one. You ask father if this isn't so. It is a matter for a great deal of thought and planning. The very first thing to be decided is where the house is to be, and this is most important. With the little people of the Green Forest, the Green Meadows, the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool the choosing of a place for a new house is even more important than the building of the house itself. No matter how fine a house may be built, if it is in a poor location it may be worse than no house at all.

You don't see how that can be? Supposing Welcome Robin should build a fine nest right in plain sight where Black Pussy could get to it with hardly any trouble. It would be better for Welcome Robin to have no nest at all. Supposing Johnny Chuck should dig his house right in the middle of Farmer Brown's vegetable garden. It would be better for Johnny to have no house at all. So you see the picking out of a place to build is most important.

Jerry Muskrat knows this. He always has known it, but since the washing away of his old house in the flood he has appreciated the truth of this more than ever. This is why he was taking so much time to look-about before building a new house. There were several things to be looked out for. First of all, he meant to be as sure as it was possible to be that this time his house would be out of the current should the Laughing Brook become a flood again.

This would be quite a simple matter were it not for other things. The foundation must be in the water. A platter and serve with cream and sugar or a foamy sauce.

Raspberry Charlotte Russe. Soak two tablespoonsfuls of gelatin in one-third of a cupful of cold water. dissolve over hot water, cool slightly and add to one and one-half cupfuls of strained raspberry pulp and the juice two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of orange extract. Set the dish in a bowl of chipped ice and stir constantly until the mixture begins to thicken, then fold in one and one-half cupfuls of heavy cream whipped until stiff. Turn into individual molds lined with thin slices of sponge cake. Chill and serve.

Blueberry Betty. Mix two cupfuls of soft bread crumbs (packed solidly) with one-half cupful of melted butter. Arrange in a buttered baking dish in alternate layers with two cupfuls of blueberries sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a pinch of salt and a little lemon juice. Cover the top with crumbs and bake 20 minutes. Remove the cover and continue baking until the crumbs are brown. Serve with hot sweetened cream.

TO THE novice backspin shots seem more or less the heritage of the expert. The beginner is content to hit the ball without going into the intricacies of adding stop to it. With a little play, however, backspin ceases to be a mystery. There are two ways of obtaining it. Perhaps the most prevalent and publicized method is that of hitting the ball on the downswing, the clubhead coming through and taking a divot afterward. The trajectory of the ball is generally low with a considerable amount of spin. The other way, "knocking the feet from under the ball," seems to be less widely known. Here the mashie comes onto the ball nearly parallel with the ground with the clubhead laid well back. The ball is thus forced into a reverse spin as the impact is made. A rather high trajectory results which makes the shot useful under certain conditions.

Cave May Link Indians to Asia

Man Stalking Moose Makes Interesting Discovery.

Edmonton, Alta.—Deep in a weird solitude known as Dead Man's valley, where hot springs encourage exotic plant growths in odd contrasts to the firs and pines of the North, a trapper has found a cliff dwelling which may definitely link North American Indians with Mongol tribesmen.

Ed Clausen, known as "The Lone Wolf of the Barrens," made the discovery.

While trailing a wounded moose he encountered a pathway down the face of a cliff. Turning down the path he came to a giant room cut from the rock, some 75 feet below the crest of the cliff and 150 feet above the valley floor.

An aperture permitted light to enter the room. Clausen discovered a chimney cut through the rock to the upper surface of the cliff. Animals apparently had used the room as a refuge and resting place for centuries. The trapper did not remain long in the place. Anxious to make his way back to camp, he did not take time to search for tools or implements which might have been left in the room. He did make an examination which assured him that the room had been hewn from the rock by humans, and was no natural formation.

Prof. E. A. Corbett, of the University of Alberta, an authority on North American Indians, said that the discovery might be of greatest importance.

It may substantiate a theory that Mongols left their Asiatic homes 20,000 years ago, crossed the Bering straits, traveled to the Mackenzie river district, then spread southward along the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains to populate this continent with aboriginal tribesmen.

Fate of France in Saar Waits on Vote in 1935

Paris.—Two years hence, France will know the outcome of a wager involving billions of francs represented by her stake in the Saar valley.

The 1935 plebiscite will determine whether the 738 square miles will be French territory, German, or whether the 780,000 inhabitants remain under the League of Nations' jurisdiction.

French newspapers are filled with articles emphasizing the vital value to France of the Saar basin and calling upon the public to interest themselves.

The Saar, once regarded as the "powder barrel of Europe," today buys approximately two billion francs worth of French goods annually. Under the Versailles treaty, France became sole owner of the coal mines in the territory, but if the plebiscite results in a return to German rule, France stands to lose her Saar trade, and likewise the preferential position of her industrialists who have established themselves throughout the district.

Militarily Saarbrucken, chief city of the district, is strategically important as it is a junction point for six of the ten important railroads between Germany and France. The present official concern is due primarily to the recent demonstrations by youthful Nazis at Saarbrucken, the government fearing the population may vote for a change merely as a change.

Trapper, 83 Years Old, Says He Has No Future

Ortonville, Mich.—Henry Rodenbough, an Oakland county trapper for 72 years, has decided that his vocation has no future.

"But I guess I'll stick with it until I'm a hundred years old and then retire," Rodenbough, eighty-three, said recently. He set his first trap when eleven years old and caught martens, mink, gray fox, and muskrats.

"But, of course, there is a lot of fun to trapping. I had a trap line 35 miles long when I was a young man and I covered it every day."

Despite his advanced age, Rodenbough still covers a two-mile line during the trapping season. During the depression, however, much of his time has been spent in explaining the intricacies of his trade to unemployed men.

The Household
By Lydia Le Baron Walker

A sewing kit which takes up but small space and which holds every necessary requirement for occasional sewing is described here. The cases are recommended for bazaars, sales, and bridge prizes, as well as gifts for friends who are traveling, to say nothing of their desirability for the home-maker herself.

The case is modeled after an expensive leather needlecase. It is tubular shaped with round ends which measure 1 3/4 inches in diameter. A straight strip 5 inches wide and 5 3/4 inches long is sewed along one 5-inch edge to each circular edge for half its distance. Be sure to have the sewing on each circle begin at points exactly opposite so that the 5-inch edge will be perfectly straight between them. The loose flap folds over the kit and snaps to it. A strip of flannel for needles is sewed to the lining case scissors in under the flannel leaf. Sew a narrow strip of the lining material to the lining so that it will come under the leaf, and under this slip the tiny scissors.

Working Directions.

The case is lined, and if the outer material is soft, interlining should be used as the 5 by 5 1/4-inch portion should be stiff. Sew the flannel leaf to the lining 1 inch from one of the 5-inch ends and put a short length of lining from the end of the portion to a place beyond the seam-line of the leaf concealing its seam. Cover two circles of cardboard, one with the outside material and one with the lining material. Overcoat them together along edges. Make two of these circular ends and then sew the main portion to them as described previously. Sew half a snap to center of under side of the flap, and the other of the flap where it begins to fold over. This completes the smart sewing kit. It is easy to see how quickly one can be made and also how handy it would be.

The fittings are three full-size spools; one of white cotton, one of black, and one spool of black silk. Position the white thread between the two black ones. Put two packages of needles under the spools, and a thimble in the space between the last spool and the end of the case. There is just room for the thimble, which space of course has been left intentionally for that article. One accessory which the imported model lacks is scissors. We can remedy this by putting a pair of wee needle-part of the snap to the center of the kit, so that the two will fit together when the case is closed. Edges of the case can be bound, or seamed and stitched together as preferred.

Entertaining Problems.

When the woman who does her own work entertains and there is no outside help to do the cleaning and clearing up after guests depart, it is something of a problem to avoid getting overtired and especially to avoid a sense of mental confusion.

For the sake of creating the mental poise, the first job is to get the place in a condition of order, not necessarily complete, but such as one can work in without too much confusion.

COMPENSATION

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

For many of the problems which seriously puzzle us, we find an explanation in our study of the inner workings of nature's laws. The law of compensation is splendidly illustrated in one of William Beebe's books, "The Arcturus Adventurer." He cites the case of the peacock, who is gorgeously arrayed in fine colors and justly voted the aristocrat among birds, but has a voice which no bird would covet. The nightingale, on the other hand, is, by common consent, voted the first place among soul-stirring songsters, yet has a plumage which is not to be envied.

As with the birds, so with men and women. The law of compensation, explains many of what appears to be, life's injustices. At times we grow very much discouraged with our lot. We seriously ask why we had not been given a special talent like our friend. Upon more careful examination, however, we might be quite unwilling to be blessed with that particular talent, if at the same time, it meant sharing some of the other characteristics of that particular person. Things seem to be equally balanced in this world. It is all folly for one to try to do something which he was never intended to accomplish. The peacock would make a farce of an attempt to sing, and the nightingale, a ludicrous comedy of any attempt to display its fine feathers.

The path of least resistance is just to be ourselves. If we study ourselves earnestly and seriously we shall soon discover that nature has been very kind. We shall discover, in spite of our handicaps, that there is one thing we can accomplish. By developing this one thing we acquire self-confidence. Other possibilities open before us, for we have discovered sources of strength within, which we did not know we possessed. A striking illustration of this fact is found in the career of the great scientist, Steinmetz. Born a hunchback, he came to America penniless. Friendless, he decided to make something of himself. Life held great compensations for him and he became a leader in the field of electrical engineering. The law of compensation also plays an important part in helping us rightly to evaluate our own experience. For all who bravely meet adverse conditions, the law of compensation brings encouragement. Even the economic depression, with all its sacrifice, sorrow and suffering has its compensations in renewed courage, hope, and enduring power.

Oil Mogul, Safe in China, Flouts U. S.

Alleged Swindler Claims Canadian Citizenship.

Shanghai.—Athens, Greece, famed city of the Near East, may have its Samuel Insull, but Shanghai, equally famed city of the Far East, now has its C. C. Julian. Julian, late of Oklahoma City, Los Angeles, Vancouver, and other undesignated points, arrived in Shanghai about a month ago and registered at a leading hotel, using the name T. R. King. Aside from the pseudonym, Julian made little effort at concealment. He went places and saw things, particularly those things and places designated by the tourist agencies as Shanghai's "night life."

His real identity was disclosed to the local American authorities by a Russian private detective, who applied to Dr. George Sellett, United States district attorney, for the $5,000 reward which was offered by the Oklahoma authorities for information leading to Julian's arrest.

Canadian Passport.

But those who went to an expensive room in Shanghai's leading Cathay hotel in the expectation of arresting Julian and obtaining the $5,000 reward, came away empty handed. Julian produced a Canadian passport, claimed Canadian citizenship and when the newspaper correspondents arrived on the scene, he poured each a liberal portion of whisky-soda and declared, "You can tell the United States to go to h—l. I'm a Canadian citizen and try and get me."

Julian denied swindling anybody, explaining that the oil "game" in the United States is quite similar to "gold rushes" where people must take chances. "In September, 1929, I was unfortunate enough to lose $12,000.00 in one deal. Looking for a place to recoup, I went to Oklahoma City and formed the C. C. Julian and Royalties company, which was evaluated by the American Appraisal company within eleven months at $11,000,000. But bad luck came my way and my company was forced into bankruptcy, and I was indicted by the federal government.

Claims He's Penniless.

"We were fighting five court cases, one of which was in Texas and another in Oklahoma City. I engaged lawyers to represent me, but soon discovered I was being betrayed. I decided it would be foolish for me to remain and be the goat in that Oklahoma City field episode, hence I decided to leave the country and come to Shanghai. My trial was scheduled to begin on February 6, but I departed the day before, travelling to the Orient by way of Vancouver. While in Japan I was considerably worried by being followed by secret police, but ceased to worry when I learned it was a custom of the country. I like Shanghai fine. It is wet and has many interesting forms of recreation. As soon as I decide what form of business to engage in I intend to recoup my fortune. Later I may return to the United States. Now I am penniless."

However, he has retained a battery of local European attorneys and intends to fight extradition proceedings. In coming to Shanghai, Julian apparently was well advised, for Shanghai comes under what is popularly known as foreign extraterritorial jurisdiction. Foreigners residing in Shanghai generally are not subject to Chinese courts, but to the courts of the country to which they claim nationality.

Unless Julian has committed a crime in Canada he cannot be extradited to that country, and since his alleged crime was committed in the United States there doesn't appear to be any legal machinery whereby Canadian or British officials in China can turn him over to American officials in China for transportation to the United States.

Edinburgh Sights

One of Edinburgh's Many Monuments.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

EDINBURGH, focal point of many tours through Scotland, is singularly, if austere, beautiful.

The city is a honeycomb of massive stone buildings rising to heights that made it the Manhattan of the Middle Ages, some of the walls so thick that long afterward elevators could be installed without protruding into the rooms.

By all precedents and guide books, the Edinburgh visitor should head straight for Castle Hill. But to some, the first thriller they ever read, "Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," still is the most vivid tale of Edinburgh. So they hunt out Brodie's Close, dank and dark to this day, though not so evil-smelling as when its dual denizen, Deacon Brodie, was a Doctor Jekyll by day and a Mr. Hyde by night.

Pause before entering the close—you would call it an alley—and the mind's eye converges into a swift news reel of events along the history-encrusted Royal Mile, into which it opens.

Grand Dame Eleanor, countess of Stair, leaps from yonder window (still in full view) to escape a tantrum of her violent, if blue-blooded, husband. Down a "wynd" whispers one hag to another gossip from opposite seventh stories, the ancient walls leaning like two Pisas. Dainty Miss Eglington, later Lady Wallace, skips across the way to fill a kettle from the community well. Hoydenish duchess of Gordon rides a sow she had captured under a neighbor's "forestairs," while her more dignified sister belabors the animal with a stick.

Only the backbone street was wide enough for carriages in those days; ladies and gallants were borne in sedan chairs by stout Highlanders into the side arteries for teas and calls. Burghers' wives, in silks or Scotland's fine wool, shopped for jewels in basement cubbyholes, or bought velvet and laces at tiny booths under roofs of the balconies reached by the peculiar forestairs of nearly every tenement. They were jostled by countrywomen in green and crimson homespun, and by sailors from ships that brought over cattle and tallow from the Low Countries.

The Lawnmarket Sector.

Brodie's Close opens now, as then, into the Lawnmarket sector of the Mile, where Scotland's parliament once ordained "all cotton clait, white and grey; all lynning clait is to be sold there and in no other place." Open stalls and canvas-topped booths, displaying bolts of cotton and webs of linen, were besieged as are bargain counters today.

About you remain the "lands" or tenements of the days when a city wall pressed to an altitude and compactness like the lower East side in New York. Of course, your memory can disregard time and bring events of centuries into instant focus.

Toddling aristocrats play with racing ragamuffins. They scurry at the approach of a party of Knights of France in glittering armor, their pennants flying, on their way to a tournament to compete for the coveted king's prize, a golden lance.

One day Mary, queen of Scots, spirited in spite of her ill-omened reputation at Leith, rides by on a white palfrey, a tiny pearl crown nestling on her high-dressed hair. Twelve courtiers, in black and crimson, carry a canopy for her. At Netherbow she halts to receive the keys of the city; she extends her little hand for the provost to kiss. The sun suddenly emerges and glistens in her white satin gown.

Quick-witted, she utters an impulsive greeting, "The sun comes out with me, Master Provost." The city is hers; from mouth to mouth passes the cry, "God bless her bonnie face."

No Clock for Night Strolls.

Ten o'clock; the tavern and clubs discharge their crowds. Everybody rushes for home. Up and down the street rings out the world's most effective curfew—the cry, "Gardy-loo, gardy-loo" (gardez l'eau). Down pour swill and garbage from hundreds of tenement windows. It is a luckless citizen who has not reached shelter.

Little wonder the fussy Boswell, trying to put his town's best foot forward for captious Johnson, complained, "I could not prevent his being assailed by the evening effluvia of Edinburgh." The residents of fashionable St. James court were thought very aloof and squeamish when they engaged a private scavenger to remove their refuse. Today all Edinburgh is equipped with a modern sewage-disposal system, and even its narrowest streets are kept immaculate.

From Brodie's Close steals a stealthy, sinister figure, all wrapped round in a black coat. Beneath its folds he clutches a pistol and a ring of keys. Furtively he enters this shop and that. Earlier in the evening—any evening for several years—a most respectable town councillor, who also was a deacon of the Guild of Wryghts and Masons, attired in immaculate tail coat and breeches, might have been seen leaning against a door post where some merchant had trustfully hung his keys while he was at his tavern. Concealed in the palm of his hand was a clay mold. From an impression it was easy to make a key. Robberies became so frequent that the town council called a meeting. Deacon Brodie gravely counseled about ways of stopping the depredations. He thoughtfully advised tradesmen about the kinds of bolts to put on their doors. So zealous was he that he even went about while merchants were at dinner to make sure their doors were locked.

One night a particularly heinous robbery took place and two culprits were caught. A third escaped. Strangely, the highly respectable Deacon Brodie also disappeared. Stories went around. Certain cronies whispered how the good deacon gambled with them for high stakes. Two of his mistresses complained that the kind gentleman had gone away and made no provision for them.

Deacon Brodie was apprehended in Amsterdam, lodged in the grim Tol-booth, and executed October 1, 1783. His skeleton keys now hang in the Museum of Antiquities. His "strange case" was immortalized by Stevenson. The fact that he could operate on such a cramped stage, scarcely a twenty-minute walk in any direction from his happy family fireside, emphasizes the tremendous crowding of the Old Town.

Architecture of Old Times.

The Royal Mile, from Castle Hill, through Lawnmarket, High street, and Canongate, is clean today, but its tenements are just as crowded, and they justify the modern implication of the term, for wealth and fashion have migrated to the broad streets and stately squares of the New Town.

There remain the molded doorways, armorial bearings, crests and texts, the peak gables, the intricately carved finials, the mammoth locks and door handles, and the exterior forestairs, leading up one flight to the interior "turnpike" stairs to the floors above.

One architectural feature is puzzling. In some houses there appears a slit much narrower than other windows. Inspection discloses that these apertures light tiny closets opening off the dining rooms. They were retreats for the head of the house, where he might perform his devotions.

From Lawnmarket it is only a short walk to Castle Rock, whence Edinburgh was hewn, which anchored the Old Town, which uplifts the castle whose history spans half the world.

Standing guard over the opposite end of Princes street from Castle Rock in Calton Hill, affording a view that reaches out to Fife and the Ochils. Calton is dotted with an amazing collection of monumental and architectural curiosities which, somehow, seem to achieve harmony.

Beside the incomplete Parthenon of Craigleith columns, there is a Nelson monument that shelters a museum; homely Bobbie Burns is awarded a copy of the choragic temple of Lysicrates; a high school reproduces the Temple of Theseus at Athens; there also are an observatory, a burying ground, the tombs of Hume and of Stevenson's parents, and a jail!

Gazing in another direction from Calton Hill, the eye catches lonely Holyrood, aloof from the city, crouching under the mighty shadows of Salisbury Craigs.

Around the County

The building of ditches and grades along the various roads in the county is not only a great deal of benefit to the farmers, but it makes a decided improvement in the appearance of the road.

There seems to be an abundant supply of huckleberries for everyone.

The fishermen seem to be getting rather light catches for this season of the year.

The confusion caused by the sales tax seems to have abated and the people as usual accept it as just something else to put up with.

The enthusiastic response to President Roosevelt's address of this week is very encouraging.

Isosco county is well represented in the C. C. C.

Much enthusiasm is manifested in the sail boat races, both by the participants and the interested fans.

Moved by Tanner, supported by Black, that motion be received and placed on file. Motion prevailed and was approved by the Board, Clerk to notify the Superintendent.

Communication from Robert Daley, County Clerk of Mackinac County, in regard to a bill introduced April 4th in the House at Lansing by Representative Perry, bill No. 425, file No. 431, ordered printed and referred to the committee on roads and bridges.

It would remove the long standing public protection now safely guarded in section 3964, compiled laws of 1929, and would permit two or three politicians to usurp the powers and duties of the County Clerk, Road and Welfare commissioner and use the county, state and R. F. C. funds as they wished. Moved by Tanner, supported by Black, that the communication be received and laid on the table. Motion prevailed.

A resolution endorsing the application to Reconstruction Finance Corporation for loans to be used to allocate unemployment and park projects. Moved by Nunn, supported by Myles, that the resolution be received and laid upon the table. Motion prevailed.

Committees ordered to their respective duties, balance of board to be at ease subject to call of chair. Board called to order at 5 o'clock.

IN ANSWER TO A LADY'S LETTER

A lady writes to say that she does not understand why an 8-cylinder car does not cost more to run than a car with fewer cylinders. She refers to my statement that our Ford V-8 develops more power on a gallon of gas than any car we have made.

The use of 8-cylinders does not mean the addition of two or four extra fuel consumers. It is not, for example, a 4-cylinder engine multiplied by two. Our 8-cylinder engine takes the fuel supply of an ordinary 4-cylinder engine and divides it eight ways. And why?

By reducing four larger explosions into eight smaller ones, we get engine smoothness and quietness. Eight-cylinders indicate the way the gas is used, not the amount. It is just the difference between going upstairs in four long jumps or in eight ordinary steps.

Two things use up gas—bad engine design and useless car weight. Besides having an engine that gets a high percentage of power out of the fuel, the Ford V-8 has a light, strong body and chassis so that no power is wasted in moving excess weight.

The only extravagance about the new Ford V-8 engine is in the building of it. The extravagance is ours—the economy is yours.

The whole question of car economy needs clearing up. An economical car gives economy all round. Price, operation, upkeep, all play their part. If what you save on gas you lose elsewhere, that is not economy.

As to upkeep, our dealers say that in recent years the improved quality of Ford cars has cut down their repair business 50 per cent.

As to price with quality,—judge for yourself.

As to economy, here is the record of a stock car three weeks out of shop in Oklahoma:

On a run of 10,054 miles at the rate of 1,000 miles a day—the Ford V-8 gave 18.8 miles per gallon of gas. Not a drop of water was added to the radiator. The oil was changed once in 1,000 miles.

That should answer a lot of questions.

Events in the Lives of Little Men

Wise to Rejoice in Good Fortune

Pleasure Expanded When It Is Divided Among Loved Ones.

There would be much more happiness in the world if persons would rejoice with the same intensity with which they mourn. There is a peculiar impression that it is right to be sorrowful over sad things, but to be joyful over good fortunes is unseemly. This is not a reasonable conclusion. We arouse sympathy and pity in our friends when we are cast down, and this reacts to depress them. The more deeply they enter into our sadness the more is their horizon overshadowed with gloom.

Certainly if we love our friends, we cannot have any desire to make them miserable with our afflictions or misfortunes. While we appreciate their understanding and their condolence, it is regrettable that we should intrude our grief upon their lives. This should be a strong influence in making us rise above our troubles.

In being glad over our good fortunes we expand the scope of pleasure, and we help to make others rejoice also. Our friends, instead of being sorry for us, as when we have troubles, share the enthusiasm over our success and prosperity, and our happiness is, to some degree, their happiness also. And so, through our gaiety, we add to the pleasure of friends.

When we are exuberant over good fortune we will find our happiness the more contagious if we are tactful in our rejoicing when with others. Just as we should think of others when we rise above our sorrows, so that they do not mar the happiness of others, so we should be careful not to be exultant with those who do not have the good fortune that befalls us. This does not mean that we should ignore our good fortune or belittle it, but that we should convey our wish and hope that the others have as pleasant a thing happen to them, if not simultaneously with us, at some subsequent time. It is when we can in some way or measure include those about us in our rejoicing that we increase our happiness and theirs.

A child can literally jump for joy, and the sight does a mother's heart good. She is as glad, or even more glad, over the good things which befall her children, than they are themselves. An adult gladdens the hearts of her friends and herself in less vivacious ways when she has good things come to her. But the spirit is contagious, and her opportunity to bring pleasure through sharing it is one of the joys of life.

Indian Stamina Test

Yaupon—the "strong medicine" with which American Indians used to test the stamina of their braves—still grows abundantly in the depths of Okefenokee swamp.

Prof. James Stokes, biologist of Georgia State Woman's college, found during a recent expedition into the inner reaches of the vast swamp that the rare biological species thrives amidst numerous other plants seldom seen by white men.

Indian legends tell of a drink made of yaupon leaves as the inspiration for whoopee parties centuries before anybody thought of calling them that.

Braves would drink the strong, black draught for days in great quantities. He who remained on his feet the longest was chosen for the most honorable and most difficult missions.

Professor Stokes also found two rare specimens of orchids. One of them, the Ilmodium tuberosum, is a broad, flowering plant covered on the upper side by a growth that has the appearance of human hair.

Contrary to tradition, neither Stokes nor any other of several scientists who made an expedition into the swamp with him, saw a single deadly moccasin or monster rattlesnake such as are reputed to infest the area.

The doctor smilingly entered the room where his female patient was reclining in a chair.

"Ah," he murmured, "I see you are looking very much better today."

"Yes, doctor," the patient said. "I have very carefully followed the instructions on that bottle of medicine you gave me."

"Let me see, now," said the doctor thoughtfully. "What were they?"

"Keep the bottle well corked," came the reply.—Somerset (Eng.) Standard.

The man smiled.

"It's not the play I'm applauding," he replied heartily, "it's the hissing."

BLOWOUTS are caused by frictional heat generated in the fibers of the cotton cords in a tire. Firestone is the only tire built with every cotton fiber saturated and coated with pure rubber—to prevent destructive heat. This is one of the reasons why Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the 500 mile Indianapolis Race for 14 consecutive years—the world's most severe blowout test.

Rubber has gone up 242%, cotton 115%—substantial tire price increases must follow. The Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store in your community will give you an attractive allowance for your old tires on new Firestone High Speed Tires.
