TAWAS LOSES TO STANDISH; 10 TO 3 GAME

The remarkable winning streak of twelve straight games made by Tawas City, winners of the NorthEastern Michigan league championship, was terminated at Standish last Sunday, the Arenac boys turning the trick by a 10-3 score.

Ferris Brown, local southpaw, and Bob Christie hooked up in a real pitchers' duel for the first seven innings, neither team being able to do much with their deceptive deliveries.

Standish took the lead in the first frame due to some wildness on the part of Brown. Three walks, combined with a single by Lucas, gave Standish a run, but Quick made a beautiful running catch of Orr's line drive to prevent more runs from being counted.

The locals did very little with Christie's pitching until the fifth, when Noel tripled for the first Tawas hit, and scored a moment later on M. Zollweg's fly to left field.

Standish took a 3-1 lead in the seventh. After two were gone, Zinnegar connected with one of Brown's pitches and sent it into the race track for a home run. Lucas then doubled and scored on B. Christie's single. The locals remained in the game in their half of the eighth, scoring two runs to again tie the count.

Laidlaw and Brown singled, and then bunted and Laidlaw scored, and Brown scored on Main's single into right center. In the Standish half of the eighth, however, everything went wrong for the locals.

Orr, first up, hit an ordinary single but the ball took a bad hop over Siefolf's head and Orr reached third. Pavelka hit one back to the box and Brown, in his anxiety to cut off the run, threw a bit too high to Laidlaw and both runners were safe. Warren singled and Brown was taken out and Moeller replaced him. But there was no stopping those Standish boys. Six more hits followed and when the dust cleared the scoreboard showed seven runs for Standish, which were more than enough to win.

The Standish infield gave Christie wonderful support, not an error being made. Zinnegar made the best play of the game in the seventh and cut off a possible run when he knocked down Musolf's hard line drive backhanded and turned it into a double play.

Tawas City goes to Gladwin next Sunday, September 10, to play a league game scheduled for July 23 but which was postponed on account of rain.

Summary table showing totals and hit statistics for Tawas City and Standish.

Summary: Two-base hit—Lucas. Three-base hit—Noel, Orr. Home run—Zinnegar. Sacrifice hit—Quick. Double play—Zinnegar to Orr to Tremblin. Left on bases—Tawas City 6, Standish 10. Bases on balls—off Brown, 4; off B. Christie, 2. Wild pitch—Brown 2. Struck out—by Brown, 3; by B. Christie, 8. Hit by pitcher—by Christie, Laidlaw. Hits—off Brown, 9 in 7 innings (none out in eighth); off Moeller, 6 in 1 inning. Losing pitcher—Brown.

LOCALS' DEFENSE FAILS—LOSE TO ESSEXVILLE. Complete collapse of the inner defense was largely responsible for Essexville, 1932 champions of the Bay City league, to come from behind and nose out the Tawas City team at the local diamond Labor Day, 12-11. Six errors were chalked against the locals and every one of them figured in the scoring of their opponents' twelve runs.

"MIDNIGHT CLUB" DRAMA OF JEWEL THEFT RING. Clive Brook, George Raft, Alison Skipworth and Helen Vinson are co-starring in "Midnight Club," pictureization of E. Phillips Oppenheim's melodrama of that title, which will be shown Friday and Saturday, September 8 and 9, at the Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City.

The story is a breathless, rapid-fire tale of London society, underworld and underworld, and centers about the efforts of an American detective to break up a great jewel-theft ring which has been preying with impunity on lords and commoners alike.

Raft, who heretofore has always been portrayed as a "public enemy" on the screen, is this time on the side of the law. He plays the role of the detective. Brook, too, does a complete reversal of characterization. Always a "cute" gentleman, he is this time cast as leader of the ring. Miss Vinson is the girl who works with him. Miss Skipworth has an amusing role as a doughy duchess.

Much of the action of the piece takes place in the supper club which the gang uses as a "front" for its operations. Raft comes here, posing as an American crook, and, after outwitting Brook and Miss Vinson on several attempted thefts, gets himself accepted as a member of the ring.

His plans go awry when he finds himself falling in love with the girl, however, and the developments from that time on are highly dramatic.

I. C. I. NINE WINS TWO CONTESTS

The Isoco County Independents captured a pair of victories over the holiday period, defeating the Prescott nine Sunday by a 10 to 3 score, and downing Hemlock on Monday by an 8 to 3 count.

In Sunday's game at Prescott the I. C. I. boys took the lead in the first frame by scoring five runs and held it throughout the contest. McPherson, I. C. I. hurler, experienced little trouble in setting down his opponents. He allowed only eight safeties during the game, but the Prescott boys bunched three of these in the eighth to score all of their runs.

Prescott used two pitchers, A. Meyers and Hutz, in an effort to stop the Isocos. Both teams played good ball in the field.

The I. C. I.-Hemlock game on Labor Day went ten innings before the former came out victorious. St. Martin for Hemlock and Frank for the Isocos put on a fine pitchers' battle for nine innings, when the count stood 3-3. In the tenth frame the Isocos put over five runs to win the contest by an 8 to 3 score.

GAUTHIER—BIELBY

Lyle Bielby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bielby of Hale, was united in marriage to Alma Gauthier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gauthier of Black River, on Saturday, September 2nd.

The bride was attired in white and wore a white tulle veil. Her attendant wore peach satin. Eva Gauthier and Floyd LaVerne were witnesses.

A six o'clock dinner was served at the home of the bride to the immediate families.

The groom gave a wedding dance at the township hall on Saturday evening, with Kinney's orchestra of Alpena furnishing the music for the occasion.

The young couple will reside at Spruce, where Mr. Bielby teaches. Best wishes are extended by all.

Marlene Dietrich in "Song of Songs" at Rivoli Theatre

Seldom, if ever, has any film Hollywood has produced, represented such a union of the pictorial, histrionic, artistic, literary and musical fields as Marlene Dietrich's latest Faramont picture, "The Song of Songs," showing at the Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, September 10, 11 and 12.

Any film starring Miss Dietrich would be assured of a big head-start in pictorial quality to begin with. The flaxen-haired German star, who launched the revolutionary trousers for women style-mode, never looked so lovely as she does in the flatteringly feminine clothes of twenty years ago.

Directed by Rouben Mamoulian, who made Chevalier's "Love Me Tonight," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and other highly praised pictures, Miss Dietrich is said to give an outstanding dramatic performance.

From a histrionic standpoint, the picture is exceptional for the performances of the supporting cast—Brian Aherne, romantic newcomer to pictures from the legitimate stage, Lionel Atwill, Alison Skipworth, Hardie Albright and Helen Freeman. The musical score includes selections from Wagner, Bach, Tschai-kowsky, Schubert, Beethoven and other famous composers as well as a "torch" song sung by Miss Dietrich.

PLAN TRI-COUNTY BASKETBALL LEAGUE

Plans are under way for the formation of a tri-county basketball league in Arenac, Isoco and Alcona counties. Teams are expected to be entered from Omer, Turner, Whittemore, Prescott, Hale, Tawas City, East Tawas, Oscoda, Glennie, Harrisville, Alabaster and AuGres.

There will be a meeting at the Holland Hotel, East Tawas, next Wednesday night, September 13, for the purpose of electing officers and formulating plans for the season.

All people in the above cities interested in a basketball league are invited to attend this meeting.

H. E. Meyer is temporary chairman in charge of organizing the league.

H. J. JACQUES HEADS RELIEF ADVISORY BOARD

At a meeting of the Isoco County Relief Advisory Board held Wednesday at the court house, H. J. Jacques of Whittemore was made chairman, C. L. McLean of Tawas City, vice-chairman; and H. E. Hanson of East Tawas, secretary.

"The routine of taking over the entire relief work of the county has not been completed. Relief will be given out through the old county organization, with Frank Brown as secretary, until further notice," stated F. A. Reagan, who is in charge of the work in this district. Mr. Reagan was present at Wednesday's meeting and explained the duties and work of the board.

TAWAS CITY STREET PROJECT APPROVED BY FEDERAL ROADS BUREAU

State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner announced this week that approvals had been received from the Federal Bureau of Public Roads on 113 highway projects. Included in the projects approved is a piece of street beginning at the Tawas City-East Tawas city limits and running 3 mile south-westerly through Tawas City. The project will cost about $20,000.00.

STATE FINANCIAL TROUBLES LEAVE ROAD COMMISSIONS IN PRECARIOUS POSITION

The only source of funds for maintaining and building county roads in Isoco county as well as in many of the other counties in northern Michigan is the automobile weight tax. By county roads is meant the roads that were county roads previous to the Holbeck-McNitt law. All other roads taken over under that law we call township "take over" roads. The law provides for the return of the entire automobile weight tax to the counties. Half of this weight tax is for road building and maintenance of county roads. The other half was returned by the last session of the legislature for relief of property tax within the various counties. For the maintenance of the township roads taken over under the Holbeck-McNitt Act, the latter law provides for the return of a specified amount of gas tax to the counties.

Although almost nine months of the year of 1933 have passed, not one cent of the weight tax has been sent to the various counties. State officials say that this condition is brought about by their financial difficulties which make it necessary for the state officers to use the weight tax as it comes in for general administrative expenses.

It is very difficult to carry on any kind of business without funds, and it is still more difficult if this condition is augmented by a lack of knowledge as to when funds will be available. This is particularly so because no business can be efficiently handled unless it is possible to budget the work at least to some degree.

Three quarter payments have been made to the various counties of the funds allotted this year under the Holbeck-McNitt Act. This has been the only source of revenue with which the Isoco County Road Commission has been able to operate. Considering the fact that this is less than one-third of the amount the townships in the county spent in 1930 in maintaining their own roads, it is plainly evident that the Road Commission has not been in a position financially to even properly maintain roads. This condition is felt by many local people, not only by improperly maintained roads, but by a lack of work that might be given to many that need it.

Some law should be passed to make it mandatory on the part of state officials to forward county money to the various counties as soon as collected.

WHEN THE WIFE FOOTS THE BILLS—THEN WHAT? Are domestic happiness and professional success compatible? Does a man continue to love his wife when her salary pays the bills? These are the problems discussed in "Ann Carver's Profession," a Columbia picture coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday and Monday, September 10-11. "Ann Carver's Profession" deals with the career of a woman lawyer whose sensational courtroom exploits establish her as the outstanding feminine barrister of New York City. Her husband, meanwhile, is forging ahead slowly as an architect, but it is her salary which maintains their household.

Is it possible that their marriage can be happy? Or is domestic tragedy inevitable? Edward Buzzell, the director, believes this story is one of the most significant yet written for the screen in that it deals with problems faced by all professional women. Fay Ray plays Ann Carver and Gene Raymond her husband. Claire Dodd, Claude Gillingwater, Jessie Ralph and Arthur Pierson are also cast in important roles.

NOTICE. Will be open every Saturday and Sunday. Watch for the new changes in prices. Holloway & Co.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS
JERRY MAKES HIS WALLS STOUT

To make success of any plan
 Each one must do the best he can.
 If then the plan does not succeed
 To blame himself he has no need.

NEVER in his life had Jerry Muskrat been happier than he was as he toiled to build that new house. He was far happier than when he had nothing to do but play about, as had been the case all summer. He got tired. Of course. But it was the healthy kind of tiredness that meant sound sleep when he crept into his bed in his castle in the bank of the Laughing Brook. And each day there was the splendid feeling that what he had done counted for something; that there had been no waste of time.

So Jerry Muskrat was happy, and because he was happy he talked, and because there was no one near to talk to, he talked to himself. He had just cut the roots of a burbrush and was resting for a moment before taking the whole plant over to use in building his new house. "It was hard work getting this plant up by the roots," said he, "and that was because the roots were well fastened to the ground. Whatever is well rooted is hard to move. Think it over, Jerry. Just think it over. The flood that swept away your house last spring didn't sweep away the burbrushes or the trees along the bank of the Laughing Brook. That was because they were so well rooted. The foundations of your house are its roots so to speak. Just keep that in mind, Jerry, and see that the foundation walls are broad and stout." Jerry chuckled at the funny notion of calling the foundations of his house roots. Then he swam over to use that burbrush in the foundation of his house. Remembering how his old house had been swept away, Jerry spent a great deal of time and attention on the foundations of his new house. The bits of sod he had dug up and the mud he had taken from his tunnels and cellar were good as far as they went, but Jerry was too good a builder not to know that if he used nothing else his foundation would be weak. So he brought roots and bits of sticks and the stalks of rushes and these he worked into his foundation walls with the mud and the bits of sod.

USING DRIVER THROUGH THE FAIRWAY

THERE has been little dissension with the larger and heavier ball that is now in official use. In fact most golfers are more than pleased with it. For one thing it sets up better on the fairway and offers a larger broadside to hit at. There is no necessity to slam into the ball to make it rise with a rather straight club as was often the case with the smaller ball. In fact its ease of elevation has led Bobby Jones to resort to the use of his driver under certain situations through the fairway. When the ball presents a fairly good lie and a long shot into the wind or a far second is desired, Jones uses his driver with no sense of undue risk. Although the average golfer might hesitate to follow Jones' example, the new ball has at least made brassie and spoon shots simpler.

And he made these walls broad and stout and went over and over them to make sure there were no weak places in them. So gradually the walls rose until when Jerry stood on them only his feet were in the water. By the end of another night he could sit on them without so much as wetting his feet. All the hard work under water was finished. There was still a lot of hard work to be done, but it would be pleasanter and therefore easier than the work already done.

So Jerry sat on the foundation walls of his new house and was happy and dreamed dreams of how he would build the finest house that ever a muskrat built, a house so fine that even his big cousin, Paddy the Beaver, would be envious of him. And dreaming his fine dreams under the twinkling stars Jerry forgot the one thing that none of the little people of the Green Forest or the Green Meadows or the Laughing Brook or the Smiling Pool or the Old Orchard ever should forget for a wee, wee minute—to watch out for danger.

And this was quite as Hooty the Owl had hoped it would be when he had first discovered what Jerry Muskrat was doing there in the Smiling Pool.

BANANA DESSERTS

THE banana is one of our most popular and well liked fruits, one we can always find in our markets and it deserves a chapter all for itself.

Banana Bavaorio.

Scald one cupful of milk in a double boiler. Stir in two teaspoonfuls of gelatin previously soaked in two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Add one cupful of sugar and when cold and it commences to set stir in one cupful of banana pulp and one cupful of whipped cream. Pour into a mold and place on ice to set.

Banana Bread Pudding.

Take three slices of bread or three rolls, break into small pieces. Pour over this two cupfuls of milk, one-half cupful of sugar, four bananas sliced, stir in lightly two beaten egg whites and bake for half an hour. Serve hot with a sauce using the two egg yolks beaten well, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar and a cupful of boiling milk.

To the Memory of the March King

ALTHOUGH his marches, which have been played by military bands around the world, will never let him be forgotten, John Philip Sousa, the great "march king" who died March 6, 1932, will be kept alive in the memory of the nation through this handsome memorial just completed in the Congressional cemetery, Washington, where he is buried.

PRICES

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THINGS have come down, some certain things,
 And, thank the Lord,
 The things most good;
 But folly still the old price brings,
 We can't afford,
 And never could,
 The price of midnight joy is health
 (Who squanders sleep
 Will have to pay),
 And that's the universal wealth
 That people keep
 Or throw away.

Some things are high: the price of sin
 Remains the same,
 Good times or bad,
 But heaven's easier to win,
 An honest name
 May still be had,
 If less of gold means more of worth
 More trying for True happiness,
 Perhaps this is a richer earth,
 And we have more
 Who now have less.

stir and flavor, then serve hot. A little lemon juice and rind may be used for the flavoring.

Banana and Coconut Dessert.

Cut four bananas into four pieces, place in a buttered pan and sprinkle with three teaspoonfuls of lemon juice. Beat an egg white until stiff, add three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Add one-half cupful of shredded coconut, put a tablespoonful of this meringue on each section of banana. Bake until brown. Serve with whipped cream.

Banana Fluff.

Cut one-half pound of fresh marshmallows into small pieces. Whip one cupful of heavy cream, add one teaspoonful of vanilla, one-half cupful of sugar, a bit of salt, stir in the marshmallows, one cupful of broken nutmeats (less may be used), and one cupful of banana pulp finely mashed. Serve with crushed strawberries, or over ice cream of any flavor.

Living Conditions of Fish

Different species of fish require different sets of living conditions. Some species dwell in the deep water, coming to the shallows to spawn, others live in marginal shoals, rarely if ever going to deeper parts of the lake. Some prefer mud bottoms, others sand, and still others, marl. The history of an inland lake is a succession of fish habitats, determined principally by vegetation, soil, and conditions due to depth.

The temperance in the South is high, though in the northern states it is much lower, especially in winter.

A binnacle is a bivalve that fastens itself to the bottom of the ship.

Priscilla said with a tremendous voice, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

Henry the Eighth married many wives, and the last one was Jane Austen.

On her small feet scandals were tied.

"A bachelor girl," says ironical Irene, "is one who is fair and forty, looks thirty, feels twenty and says she's eighteen."

England Pays Debt in Silver From India

HERE, well guarded on a pier at San Francisco, are nine thousand bars of silver from India, worth $5,000,000—the first half of the payment made by Great Britain to the United States under the new war debt arrangement. This shipment was transferred to the San Francisco mint and was followed a few days later by another of the same value.

Strange Underground River

An underground river flows in South Australia. Nobody seems to know its source or outlet. At the farthest point explored there was no diminution in the size of the passage or the depth of the water, which flowed as if it had some clear outlet. Years ago a canoe was lowered into the river and its course was followed for some distance.

Battles Teach Us

"We learn by experience," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chintown, "but no ancestor has succeeded in recording the experience clearly enough to make us seek progress by means of books instead of battles."

Mrs. Amos Hendrickson entertained company from Ohio over the week end.

School and Prison Costs

It costs $300 a year to keep a man in prison and less than $100 a year to keep a child in school. The offending minors and special schools and reformatories average about $400 a year.

Martyrs to Progress

Members of congress who voted in favor of an appropriation for the construction of the first telegraph line were defeated on that account when they became candidates for re-election.

Long Straight Stretch

Unofficial claims have been made that Illinois state highway 121, between Casner and Chisnum, a distance of 46 1/2 miles, forms the longest straight stretch of hard road in the world.

Around the County

The damage caused by forest fires is felt by everyone and should encourage people to be more careful because no doubt most of the fires could be prevented if proper diligence was exercised.

Most of the schools in the county have begun.

The increase in the cost of commodities has not been followed by a proportionate increase in wages.

The relief program is again functioning.

With baseball interest waning, football appears to take its place.

The N. R. A. seems to have helped the employment conditions in the metropolitan areas, considerably.

Water Softening Saves Millions
Railroads have saved millions of dollars annually by studies and experiments in softening water for use in locomotives, to prevent the formation of "scale" inside boilers.

Save Them

Trees with cavities, safe refuges of the small hunted wild animals, are the "fur" or "den" trees. Affording shelter to the small animal, the den tree is very important to its life, for when the animal is taken and the den destroyed nothing is left there to protect another animal, says the American Forestry association.

Had That Privilege

A poet was forbidden to sell his lyrics in a public park at Los Angeles. It wasn't meant to deny him the privilege of picking up an honest living in a park. No. But he must do it in the usual way. There would be no objection to a poet's disguising himself as a pigeon and accepting peanuts.—Detroit News.

Army of Tree Dwellers

When a tree was cut down on a banana plantation it was found to be quite a residential quarter. It was the home of 3 snakes, 4 families of birds, 1 opossum, 2 hives of domestic bees, 1 hive of native bees, myriads of white ants, many wood grubs, and of course, thousands of tiny insects.

And Goes After Business

Production of Licorice
Licorice has not become a successful commercial crop. It grows wild over large areas in Spain, Italy, southern Russia, Asia Minor and southern Asia. This country, however, uses quantities of licorice. Ninety per cent of it finds its way into the tobacco industry, about 5 per cent into confectionery, and about 5 per cent into medicine. Its principal medicinal use is to disguise the taste of acrid drugs.

As Whippoorwill Perches
Unlike the great majority of birds the whippoorwill perches along and not across a bough. This is a peculiarity which the whippoorwill shares with other weak-footed birds.

Harbor Pollution
A report on harbor pollution by oil from passing liners states that a film extends out over the ocean for 500 miles from both New York and Cherbourg. In some areas the oil is so thick and gummy that numerous birds have been stuck in it—and have starved to death.—Collier's Magazine.

Mercury Has No Atmosphere
Spectroscopic photographs of Mercury, the planet closest to the sun, reveal that it is a dry sun-baked world lacking both air and water. The spectroscope breaks up light beams and reveals the elements which modify the reflected rays of the sun. Although other planets show the existence of an atmosphere, the tests on Mercury came out a complete blank.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Blanket Makers in Caste
In a recent district of Meerut, India, there are 55,000 sheep, which yield 51,000 pounds of wool for blanket weaving. Caste plays a part there, says the British Empire Chamber of Commerce Magazine, and one may see Gadarias or Hindu shepherds tending these sheep while Mohammedan kamallas carry on the actual manufacture of the blankets. When the industry enjoyed a boom, these workers were assisted by Jullahas, who are otherwise engaged in cotton or silk weaving.

First Public Library
The first public library in the United States was built in 1750. Rhode Island can boast the honor of housing the first collection of books to be given over to public use. Before this time home owners had been gradually collecting small libraries, and also were including at this time in their home making cases for books and shelves and stands for favored volumes. The library was founded by Stephen Hopkins.

Ancient Egyptians' Music
The musical instruments of the ancient Egyptians and Greeks were the flute, the harp, the pipe, the guitar, the trumpet and the drum; the lyre, the flute, the trumpet, or horn, and the cithara were used by the Greeks.

City Exclusively for Children
A miniature city for children is contained in the grounds of the Dresden, Germany, zoo. It has a town hall, shops, railway station, traffic signals and so on. The idea of the authorities in providing this marvelous playground for the children was to train their minds in city government and to give them some idea of the questions and problems that must arise.

Many Goldenrod Varieties
There are about 125 varieties of goldenrod, most of which are found in this country. They are cross-fertilized by butterflies and bees, and are typical insect-pollinated plants. The pollen gives a positive hay fever reaction, but, not being wind-borne, can cause hay fever only upon direct inhalation.

Real Estate Promotion Hits Famed Stoke Poges

Quiet of Gray's Churchyard Is Threatened.

Washington.—The cloistered quiet of the country churchyard at Stoke Poges, where Thomas Gray wrote his famous "Elegy," is threatened by a promoter's scheme for real estate development nearby.
"Located in the southern part of Buckinghamshire, the little village is only twenty miles from London," according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "It has, however, remained almost unchanged through the two centuries which have passed since where, in 1771, Gray was buried beside his mother.

"Of particular interest to the American tourist in Stoke Poges is the old Elizabethan manor house, which was owned by Thomas Penn, son of the founder of Pennsylvania. In one of the rooms may be seen a part of the trunk of the elm tree under which William Penn signed the treaty with the Indians. His grave lies a few miles distant in the Quaker burial ground by Jordan's meeting house.
"Even before the rise of the Quakers in the Seventeenth century, South Buckinghamshire had long been a

"Mercy Seasons Justice"

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Shakespeare's plea that mercy seasons justice has found expression in much of our best literature, notably in the character of Jean Valjean in Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables." Try however hard he would to reinstate himself in society, the fact that Jean Valjean had spent nineteen years in prison, marked him as a man to be both feared and distrusted. When he left the prison, after having paid the penalty for his crime, he was given a yellow passport which described him as "a very dangerous man." Justice would have his pound of flesh regardless of its cruel workings upon a sensitive conscience. The fact that Jean Valjean had not only paid the price demanded by justice, but had the ability to make good and was actually achieving that end, had no influence whatever upon what the courts of France regarded as the imperial rights of the law.

Occasionally we learn of a counterpart of the story of Jean Valjean enacted in real life today. Recently public opinion was aroused and did not hesitate to express itself in many editorial columns regarding the pursuit, for six years, by prison officials of the state of Ohio, of a man, who in a time of distress, stole a typewriter. Confessing his guilt he was sent to a reformatory, being only nineteen years of age, from which he escaped. Having pondered deeply upon the more serious aspect of life and the opportunities it offered to youth with ability, he decided he was a fool, and would begin life all over again. Specializing in the field of advertising he obtained a thorough education, and rapidly rose to one of the most important positions in the firm with which he was connected. But, "Justice" was in search of its prey, and was finally repaid for its tremendous cost of six years of travel by cunning detectives, which the taxpayers of Ohio had to pay, by discovering its fugitive in a lucrative position and living a life which was in every way an asset to the community. When the prison authorities demanded, in the name of justice, the return of the fugitive to prison we were not surprised to read that the firm for whom he worked remarked, "All of the resources of this company will be available to fight against his return to prison."
Why punish crime? There can be but one intelligent answer, for the protection of society. When that has been accomplished, let justice be seasoned with mercy.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

Crocheted Motifs Are in Gay-Colored Yarns on Linen.

THE fact that crochet is a popular style of needlecraft today is evidenced by the appearance of a distinctive embroidery having separate crocheted motifs on linen bureau scarfs and table covers, chair backs and arm pieces. The motifs, while not joined by any stitchery, are so positioned that they form an interrupted border. The material for the foundation is heavy toweling, preferably not white, but some shade which is more common to craft work, such as twine color, wood tones, the gray of old tree trunks, etc.

None of the tones are pronounced. They are not strong enough to be called colors, just tints or tones. While there is no reason why pronounced colors should not be employed, if the worker prefers, there is a beauty of textile texture in the delicate shades that artists have chosen for the development of this unique embroidery.

Motifs and Stitchery.
The medium in which the motifs are crocheted is wool. Two ply is advised, but Shetland and Iceland wools are appropriate. In each instance the wool is not of threadlike fineness, but rather sturdy. It is the combination of colored wool yarns of these styles with linen which lends distinction to the novel needlework.
The crocheted motifs are square, round, oval or oblong. They may be in double crochet stitch, as seen in some of the squares. They may be in triple crochet as found in some of the circles. The work has a softness through stitchery being rather loose, not close, but the looseness must be even and regular. It is not tight, and fine.
It is important to realize the style storm center of religion. The Lollards were persecuted there during the Fourteenth and Fifteenth centuries, and likewise the Protestant martyrs of the Sixteenth century.

"Two miles beyond Jordan's is Chalfont St. Giles, where Milton stayed during the great London plague. His small stone cottage is carefully preserved, while his love for that part of England lives forever in 'L'Allegro' and 'Il Penseroso'.

"Buckinghamshire, one of England's smallest counties, lies inland just west and north of London. The winding Thames forms its southern boundary, and the equally winding Ouse circles it in the north. Across the county from southwest to northeast stretch the low, wooded slopes of the Chiltern hills.

"Because it is cut off from all sea trade, and because it has no mineral resources of value, the county has always remained primarily agricultural, despite its geographical nearness to London. More than half its entire area is in permanent grass, and cattle-raising forms the chief industry. The Vale of Aylesbury in particular is famous for its dairy farms. Wheat and fruit are also important crops.

Lace and Furniture Making.
"Certain local industries, principally lace making and the manufacture of furniture, are still carried on. High Wycombe, largest town in the county, is well known for its fine chairs. It is also famous as the home of that great British statesman, Benjamin Disraeli, who is buried in the churchyard at Hughenden Manor.

"In Buckinghamshire, too, is Eton college, largest of England's 'public schools,' those famous and ancient institutions, corresponding to American private preparatory schools for boys. Eton, which was founded by Henry VI in 1440, lies in the southern part of the county, just across the Thames from Windsor castle.

"In his 'Ode to the Distant Prospect of Eton college,' Gray, a loyal Etonian, describes 'Ye distant Spires, ye antique Towers,' rising beyond the shining curve of the Thames. From Windsor Bridge Eton's High street leads through a straggling village to the mellow brick buildings and shaded walks of the school. Beyond, on a branch of the Thames, is the Eton Playing field, where endless practice takes place before the great annual event at Lords—the Eton-Harrow cricket match."

SYNOPSIS

His yacht, the Intrepid, abandoned by its crew, Felix Horton, millionaire, with his mother, his daughter Nan, and Roy Stuart, puts into Squaw Harbor, Alaska, to recruit. He engages a bunch of nondescript stranded there. A gigantic Foe, Sandomar, is their leader. Captain Waymire, the Intrepid's skipper, engages Eric Ericksen, an old friend, to sail as chief officer. Nan and Eric indulge in a moonlight flirtation. The Intrepid is wrecked, Eric leaving her in a small boat, with Horton and his party. Sandomar kills Captain Waymire and leaves the ship with his crew. On landing, Eric learns there is no communication with the outside world. Fireheart, priestess of the island, descended from a white man in the remote past, knowing a little English, welcomes the castaways. Sandomar declares there shall be no law on the island, but Eric, having the only gun, crows him, declaring he is the law. Eric's love for Nan swells, and he tells her he means to win her. She is not unwilling. Fireheart claims Eric, and realizing the importance of her friendship he is forced to temporize. Defending himself from attack, Eric's revolver apparently misfires, but his assailant flees. Eric finds the revolver, which had been Waymire's, is rim-fire, while five of its six cartridges are center-fire. Eric has one effective cartridge. "Swede," makes an attempt on his life. He uses his one cartridge, killing "Swede," but is left defenseless, though master of the situation, since he alone knows his gun is useless. Fireheart's threats culminate in an attempt on Nan's life. Eric saves her. He makes Nan understand the depth of his love, but she is uncertain of her own heart. In a sudden, terrific storm, a child of the tribe is left helpless on a sand spit.

This was only too true. Chikak's father worshiped her; he would starve for her in a lean winter, or die for her when death was written in black and white; but he could not push out in that watery earthquake for life nor love. It was not just wind and wave, but the boogra. For him, the smoking scud barely concealed unearthly living shapes. He was not one of the white masters, to challenge the elementary powers, but a man of the Aleuts, with the darkness of subjection on his face.

"If they don't go, who will?" Roy insisted.

"I, for one. You'd better not try it, if I can get two of the sailors. They're handy at jobs like this—and anyway, Nan'll want you to stay."

"Catch me going!" Roy's cold eyes flashed. "Thank God I'm not such a fool as that." Then, almost shouting: "It's a crazy gesture. The child's done for anyway. Eric, you mustn't go either. You're needed here. It's the life of an Aleut brat against Nan's future safety."

Eric hesitated only an instant. "You'll have to protect her, the best you can. If I'm lost, two of the gang will be lost, too, and you can hold 'em at bay."

Roy cursed him to his face, then wheeled to Nan. "Speak to that fool," he implored. "Tell him he can't throw away his life on a chance like this—that you need him, that we all need him. Appeal to his crazy chivalry."

Nan slowly shook her head. "I can't do it." She did not seem to raise her voice, but as her lips were near, her tone rang clear. "I'm not even sure that I want him to stay. You see—he may be right—and you may be wrong."

Eric had now turned to the outlaw crew massed around Sandomar. Their faces were drawn, their eyes wolfish; it seemed hopeless to appeal to them. Yet Eric knew men—their evils, their follies, their innate greatness—and he spoke boldly.

"I want two good men. Who will come?"

There was a brief pause. Sandomar's somber gaze fell to Gerge's fluttering hand, then he threw up his slim hand.

"I will be one," he answered in his dull monotone.

"And if Saddy goes, I want to go, too," Gerge said. "Anyhow, I don't like to think of that little popoose out there all by 'erself, waiting to be drowned."

Eric's face flashed. Even his moment of surrender, on the Cliff of Death with Nan, held no greater glory, no higher truth, than this. The strong cup of his being ran full and overflowed.

True, it was only a brief truce. An hour ago Sandomar would have butchered him without mercy; an hour from now, if both survived, he would again be plotting his overthrow. They were implacable foes. They could not inhabit the same world; Eric knew well, in some cold inner mind, that in the end he must slay Sandomar, or be slain by him. But now they might strive, strike, and if worse comes to worst, cross the bar together.

He was at the point of accepting the help of his two foes, when he remembered Sandomar's deafness. Amid the falling mountains of water, Gerge would have no time to raise his hand from his blade and interpret the captain's shouts.

"Gerge, I can't take your pal," Eric said. "I've got to have someone who can hear. Will you go without him?"

The little cockney looked to the ground. "I wouldn't be no good without Sandy. Anyhow, I can't leave him."

Eric nodded, and turned to his lesser enemies. "Who else will try it?"

Sydney Bill, hard-handed Australian, was the first to move forward, and murderous Big Smith second. Eric accepted them, and commandeered from the squaws three kamleikas (water-proof outer garments) for them and himself. The hunters had started across the headland with the boat; final preparations for what might be a one-way journey must now be made.

Eric called Roy aside, ran with him fifty yards down wind until the murk grew thick between, and passed him his revolver. "To protect our party—in case I don't come back," he said quietly in his rival's ear.

Roy's hand gripped it strongly, and a look of steel came into his face. His first thought was to thrust the barrel into Eric's side and order him not to go. The stubborn fool would not listen to reason, but he might heed the cold steel in his ribs!

But when he gazed into the narrowed pupils, he knew the bluff would not work. Anyway the whole situation had changed now that he had yielded up his scepter of authority. It was this steel tube loaded with death, not the man himself, that Roy required on shore. If Eric drowned, he would merely pay the price of his own folly; and by natural law the fittest would survive. With him would pass two other fools, so that the numerical odds against Roy's party would not be increased, but actually cut down. Eric had made his bed, so let him lie in it! A new power could rise in Forlorn Island!

Eric looked keenly into the cold, bright eyes. "By the way, Roy, in case I don't come back, be careful with that revolver," he added quietly. "Be sure you know all about it before you try to fire."

Now the hunters were hurrying, and talk was done. Eric lunged back against the wind, just in time to help ship the boat. All the able-bodied men on hand waded in the boiling foam, and although the waves smote them like sandbags and made them reel, they held the kayak while the three voyagers boarded and drew the hatches tight.

Could they get through the surf into deep water? The answer lay with one man alone—Sandomar. With a grunt, he seized the gunwale and lumbered into the tide. On and on he stumbled, his gorilla strength and animal courage matched against the fury of the breakers. Blow after blow they dealt him, first against his thighs, then his barrel chest, finally breaking over him, bludgeoning his head, blinding his fireball eyes.

When he could go no further, he passed the boat along until his big hands were on the stern. Watching his chance, as a billow rushed seaward, he gave a mighty thrust. The kayak shot forward, then up to the crest of the next wave. The billow met it well beyond the breakers. Sandomar came fighting back, falling, rising to reel on again, hurled forward with back-breaking violence, at last lumbering through the foam with immense arms hanging limp, his eyes like a dead seal's.

With a suffocating heart, Nan watched the little craft beat out to sea. Once she thought it was gone. An avalanche of water swept it down. For a frigid eternity, perhaps ten seconds, possibly twenty, there was naught where it had been but a gray hillside streak with foam. But presently the pointed bow shot out like the snout of a shark, and the heads of the boatmen appeared one by one. The paddles glinted wanly, as the little ship sailed on.

Nan's chill despair began to change to flaming hope. A daring thought stole into her stunned brain; not just that Eric had done right in some vague abstract sense, but that his foolish dream was inspired truth, that there were hidden laws governing life which Roy's materialism could never explain and which had decreed Eric's victory. How did she or anyone know what was true, what was false? Perhaps Eric's idealism was not just a splendid illusion, to trick him to a fruitless death, but a working force, a living, conquering power. Perhaps he would yet win to his goal and return to stand beside her on the strand. Her hands clasped over her breast.

She strained into the murk, to follow the dimming, living shape so small, so brave, in the heaving desert of death. Not once did it soar out of the roaring valleys but that her heart soared too. Not one billow grappled it only to drop behind in writhing fury but that her lips breathed thanks.

"Fight on, Eric," she whispered. "Go and come back safe. . . . Bring him back to me, little ship. Oh, don't fail him now!"

Beside her, Sandomar and his gang cursed and breathed hard.

Meanwhile Eric was fulfilling his destiny. All his long journeyings had been toward this one goal, a grain of sand in a lonely sea, and an Indian child calling him with outstretched arms. This was the great battle of his life. Nan, Roy, Sandomar had no part in this. It was all between him and his fierce old dam, the sea.

She was the mother of his race. She had fed him, schooled him, cherished him, and now she would try him to the bone. And the test was commensurate with his rank—the heir of sea-kings. Ever she had spared no pains on his blue-eyed, fair-haired brood. From those dim days they had sailed forth in painted galleys, red-bearded fierce-bruited brutes in winged hats, from the deep-cut fords of Scandinavia, she had harried them, proved them, slain them without mercy, until she had bred men!

Yet to the dark spawn of the western isles Eric owed his fighting chance. The wooden dory that was his cradle would stand short shift in seas like these; she would fill and flounder at the first rush of the rolling mountains; and only the Alaskan kayak, developed in centuries of rough sailing after walrus and whale, could shake free and leap to the crest. It was no more than a whale-bone frame covered with walrus hide, yet Eric blessed it in the name of his Norse gods. No stately ship beating through a tropic typhoon had ever made his heart glow so warm.

The hatch he occupied came nearly to his armpits, and was scarcely large enough to admit his body. The folds of his kamleika made it watertight, and though one wave after another broke over him, blinding him, bludgeoning his head and shoulders, always the craft buoyed up, shook off the water-arms, and fought on. True, if it once fell in the trough of the seas the repeated onslaughts would cave in its ribs, but by good seamanship and paddling for his life with the double blade, he managed to avoid this pitfall. The deck was so low that the wind could not seize and hustle it. His two comrades timed their strokes with his; caught up by his conquering spirit they fought as they had never fought before, drunk or sober, on land or sea, for life, bread, or favor of woman.

Their goal slowly neared. They could see the kneeling child, braced against the wind, pitched down sometimes as the rising waves broke over the sandy shelves and washed her to the waist, but always struggling up.

"Hold on!" Eric shouted, hoping against hope that the cry would beat through the wind to her ears. "We're coming for you!"

She appeared to take heart. She could hear naught but the bellow of the gale, but she saw his lips move, and some fellowship of courage leaping across the foam made her fight like a shoaled salmon.

The kayak came up on the lea of the islet, in comparative quiet water. With a yell, Eric sprang out, waded to land, and clasped the fainting child in his arms. Roaring he knew not what—perhaps the ancient battle-cry of the Vikings wailing up from some old cellar in his brain—he waded back, thrust the limp body into the hold, climbed into the hatch, and smote the water with his blade.

CHAPTER IX

The watchers on shore waited desolate eternities. Had Roy glanced at Nan, he would have wondered where her dusky beauty had flown. Her eyes were dark wounds. Her cheeks were haggard and gray, her lips drawn. Yet if she loved the man she had lost, she still did not know it. Love was the flash of a lighthouse through the storm, and the storm blew too thick between.

But presently she bit her lip until it bled. She thought she saw a strange-shaped shadow on the water, revealed only an instant through the fluttering curtains of spindrift. For all she knew it was only a trick of her tortured fancy. . . .

A moment more she waited. Then, over the rolling hills, a dark shape took form. At the same instant, the murk parted like a torn veil, and the scene was etched in vivid black and white on her memory. The kayak seemed to be riding the storm. For an instant it hung poised, a symbol of victory, on the wind-whipped crest of the highest billow, looking down on its domain. The paddles flashed valiantly. The sea light was on Eric's face. Then it came leaping toward land.

She could not utter a sound. Her throat was too full. But Sandomar grunted—she heard him—and Roy gasped out what she thought was an oath of amazement. Mother Horton threw up her lean arms with a yell.

"By G—d, he's made it!" But no one blamed the old woman for the oath.

The watchers never lost sight of the boat again. It came with a rush, the wind behind it, hurled through the foam, dodging, rocking, pitching, soaring up and darting down. The boogra roared in vain. The foiled seas chased the little ship, to spring upon its back, but always their leaps fell short.

MAN'S LONG WAR ON INSECT FOES

Never-Ending Conflict for Supremacy.

[Boston Globe Editorial.]

There is an "internationale" of bugs, which sends its emissaries over vast distances on land and sea to foment ruin and jeopardize human security and happiness. Paris, a short time ago, complained because of an invasion from Egypt of strange beetles whose appetites were whetted on clothes and groceries. Here were invaders who had traversed the entire length of the Mediterranean to set up the beginnings of a new colonial empire.

The Mexican beetle which riddles beans in spite of all the magnesium arsenate offered him, has scooped at the loftiest mountains, the most sun-parched of deserts. And the Japanese beetles have even gone to the length of stowing themselves away in the holds of cargo ships, that they might carry war to the remotest habitations of man.

Solomon bade us go to the ant and be wise; and his was shrewder counsel than ever he dreamed. From an ant and bee there is wisdom to be gleaned which, as yet, has been barely noted. Karl Marx merely borrowed from them both. Against man's hopes and efforts, nature marshals her resources in battalions and armies which are beyond the calculations of arithmetic. His insect foes alone threaten to devour him, body and baggage, until the very memory of his existence is a drifting, wind-blown powder, over the wastes.

He is beset by cataclysm and storm, flailed by the heat, engulfed by recurrent floods, harassed by famine. Yet he is undaunted—thanks to the philosophy in him, which has been stung awake by things that crawl the earth and hop about it, and hum through the warm air of fragrant springs and murmurous drowsy summers.

Could he but achieve unity with himself, and solidarity for peace with his fellow men, the precarious foothold that is his in nature would become firmer, his mimic foes would be scattered like snow upon the sands of Sahara, and his onward march would become a triumph beyond anything that he has yet imagined.

Paint Industry Shows

Business Revival Here

George A. Martin, president of the Sherwin-Williams company, answers the question, "Has the upturn definitely started in the paint business?"—with a statement which constitutes one of the most encouraging pieces of news in many months.

"The big news in the paint industry," said Mr. Martin, "is that millions of paint brushes have gone back to work. The painting revival, which we have been expecting, is here. It is sweeping the nation. Everybody, it seems, is painting—from one coast of this country to the other—from Canada to the Gulf. The entire nation has set its hand to the biggest job of repainting this country has ever seen. Railroad companies are reconditioning rolling stock and stationary property with fresh coats of color. Steamship companies are applying thousands of dollars worth of paint protection to their vessels. Home owners have joined the painting revival by the thousands. Mansions and cottages alike are receiving the protection of paint before winter weather sets in."

Tree Hall of Fame

The latest addition to the Hall of Fame for Trees which now numbers more than 300 of America's most famous trees, according to the Pathfinder, is the giant holly planted by Nellie Custis, adopted daughter of George Washington, only a few weeks before her death in 1846. The tree stands on the Custis estate at Audley, Va., 75 miles southwest of the Capital. Washington has six of these Hall of Fame trees within the city limits.

OLD POPULAR EXPRESSION

We find recorded use of the expression "Laugh and grow fat," in English as far back as 1615, when it appeared in "Title of a Tract," by John Taylor. It is in allusion to Democritus of Abdera, who lived from 460 to 357 B. C., and was called the Laughing Philosopher. He was famous for his size and the length of his days, which were attributed to his well-known laughter at the follies of mankind.—Kansas City Times.

I'm a stenographer — but I help in the kitchen at home and I've discovered a thing or two about soaps. I find that Fels-Naptha loosens grease quicker. When I'm through, the dishes and pans fairly shine. And my hands are out of water so fast, that they don't get red. Mother now swears by Fels-Naptha, too. She uses it for the family wash and says it's so much easier to keep the clothes white and sweet-smelling.

It's true—the greasiest dirt greases-loosener. Lots of naphtha hustles right out when you use Fels-Naptha Soap. It has to— That means extra help—a better job—and less work for you.

Electrical Execution
The electric chair as a method of capital punishment is about forty years old. The first man to be executed by this method was William Kemmler. Electric power companies were terrified that the advertisement of the deadly powers of electricity would seriously hinder their progress.

Chickadee Answers Call
When you see a chickadee in the woods, stop and listen. Then imitate its calls and see if it won't respond. Chickadees often do.

Old French Settlement
The first European settlement made in the northern part of what is now the United States was made in 1604 by Pierre de Gast, Sieur de Croix when he built a fort on St. Croix island and spent the winter there with a party of French explorers.

Breathes While Drowning Prey
The breathing mechanism of the alligator is located so high on its head that this creature can breathe unstrainedly while holding an animal under the water in its jaws until it drowns. The same is true of the crocodile. Their eyes being similarly located both the alligator and the crocodile can approach their prey almost unnoticed by keeping the rest of their bodies submerged.

Alps Guide's Scale of Wages
The fee for guide service in the Swiss Alps depends upon the excursion. In general, 15 francs is charged for short, easy trips, but the sum reaches to as much as 200 francs for the more difficult climbs. The usual charge for a first-class climb is from 60 to 80 francs.

Woman's Feat Recorded
The Colorado Springs chamber of commerce says that Mrs. Holmes of Lawrence, Kan., was the first woman to hike up Pikes Peak. She did it in 1859.

after giving Essexville two runs in the second frame, put on a seven run rally in their half, and added three more in the fourth to take a 10-2 lead. Kuebler then tightened up and Essexville, scoring four in the fifth, two in the seventh, took the lead away from Tawas in the eighth with another four run out-break. A ninth inning rally by the locals was stopped one run short.

The game was a heavy hitting affair, the locals pounding out 16 and Essexville 17 hits. "Red" McKee, former Tiger catcher, poked out two doubles and a single, while Johnson hit a triple and three singles. Main and Mallon hit three-baggers for Tawas while Noel connected for a double and two singles.
