George A. Prescott and son, George, returned from Detroit on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Anders of Pinconning were week end guests of the former's brother, Edward Ansley, at Saginaw.

Mrs. Almira Belnap returned on Saturday from several weeks' visit with her sons and their families in the southern part of the state. Miss Frances Belnap and Russell Tarrington accompanied her home and returned Monday to their homes.

Word has been received that Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hansen of Gaylord are the proud parents of an 8 pound baby daughter born September 2. She has been named Avis Lynette.

Misses Margaret Shepherd of Merrill and Irma Kasischek left Thursday for Saginaw, where Miss Kasischek will continue her training at Sazinaw General hospital.
Tawas friends will be interested in the marriage of Miss Katharine Crane, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles V. Crane of Grand Rapids, to Roy A. Anderson on July 17th. The Cranes left Tawas City in 1916 and moved to Grand Rapids, where they have since resided.

CHAMPIONS WIN FROM GLADWIN LAST SUNDAY

Brown Holds Gladwin Well in Hand and Locals Win Easily. 16-5

With Stan Noel, star center-fielder, setting the pace with four hits, and the rest of the members in the lineup getting at least one hit apiece, Tawas City, champions of the North-Eastern Michigan league, slugged out a 16-5 victory over Gladwin last Sunday to end their brief losing streak of two straight games.

Ferris Brown, Hi-Speed star south-paw, held the Gladwin team to nine scattered hits and struck out seven men, while Gladwin used three pitchers in a vain effort to halt the local lads. Twenty-one hits, including a home run by Musolf and doubles by Quick, Brown, Mallon and Siefloff, caromed off the bats of the Tawas sluggers. Tawas City scored all of their runs in bunches, getting two in each of the first and eighth, and four in the fifth, seventh and ninth innings. This was the final game of the 1933 N. E. M. league schedule, and Tawas City took thirteen of the fourteen games scheduled, and they have won eighteen of the twenty-one games played so far this season.

After one was out, Quick doubled, and successive singles by Main and Noel scored two runs for the champions in the opening frame. Gladwin tied things up in their half of the second. Wilker worked Brown for the only pass he issued during the game, and scored ahead of Adams' home run. Both pitchers then settled down and nothing exciting happened until the first of the fifth.

"Lefty" Quick again opened the inning with a nice bunt toward third, and immediately stole second. Noel promptly singled to bring him home. Siefloff singled and as M. Zollweg fanned, Noel and Siefloff worked a double steal. Musolf then inserted his home run to clear the bases.

Four more runs were added in the seventh to bring the score to 10-2. Main, first to face Greer, who had relieved Adams, worked him for a base on balls, and went to second on a short passed ball. Noel singled to bring home Main, and went to third when Kaelsch threw wild to Wilker. M. Zollweg scored Noel with a single into center and went to third when Musolf slapped a one-baser into right-center. M. Zollweg scored on a passed ball and Mallon sent Greer to the showers with a double into deep right, Musolf walking home. Dull took up the pitching burden and easily disposed of Brown and Laidlaw on infield grounders.

Gladwin, due to some erratic fielding on the part of Tawas, scored their final runs in their half of the seventh. Two runs on hits by Quick, Siefloff and M. Zollweg brought the total runs for Tawas to an even dozen. Mallon walked to open the ninth and Laidlaw singled. A wild pitch scored Mallon. Quick walked and Main singled to fill the bases. Noel then got his fourth hit of the day to score Laidlaw and Quick, and Main tallied the final run of the game as Siefloff grounded out.

Next Sunday, September 17, Standish comes to the local diamond for the first of a three-game series. These two teams are evenly matched so the fans can be assured of seeing some good baseball. A large following of fans from Standish is expected to be here, so Tawas needs all the support it can gather to help win this first game. Everybody come!

"Man of Forest" Another Zane Grey Action-Drama

Zane Grey's "Man of the Forest," twenty-ninth of his novels to reach the screen, will be the attraction at the Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City, on Friday and Saturday, September 15 and 16, with Randolph Scott, Harry Carey, Noah Beery, Verma Hillie and Buster Crabbe in leading roles.

Like other Zane Grey stories, "Man of the Forest" is an action-drama. Every moment is crowded with red-blooded, two-fisted action, and there's plenty of hard riding and bitter gunplay in it as well.

The story centers around Scott, the man of the forest, who over-hears a plot concocted by Beery, the menace, to capture Miss Hillie. She has been sent for by Carey, her uncle, so that the latter can place his ranch in her name, and thus prevent Beery from acquiring it.

Scott forestalls Beery's effort to kidnap the girl, and proceeds to do so himself, as a matter of protecting her. When Beery and his gang descend on the scene, a gun battle results in which Carey is killed. Scott is accused of the crime and thrown into jail. His pet mountain lion assists in getting him out, but Beery and his gang follow. In the pursuit that ensues, the picture reaches a thrilling, breathless climax.

IOSCO COUNTY INDIES DEFEAT SAGINAW TEAM

Win in Well Played Game By 5 to 2 Score

By playing errorless ball behind the effective pitching of Frank, the Iosco County Independents were able to turn in a 5 to 2 victory over Saginaw last Sunday at Sand Lake. Frank held his opponents to four hits, three of which came in the sixth inning when the visiting Saginaw nine scored their two runs. Thirteen batters were retired by the strike-out route as the result of his hurling. Weaver, Saginaw moundsman, turned in a good performance, striking out eleven I. C. I. boys, but the ten safeties the Ioscos secured off him, several of them at opportune moments, brought about his defeat.

STATE SALES TAX REPRESENTATIVE VISITS COUNTY

J. H. Wilson, state sales tax representative, was in the county Friday and Saturday of last week interviewing merchants and advising them as to the best methods to use in handling the sales tax. This was Mr. Wilson's first tour of his district, which comprises Iosco, Ogemaw, Roscommon, Missaukee, Osceola, Clare, Gladwin and Arenac counties.

"Tax sales returns are made on the total gross sales for the month," stated Mr. Wilson. "This includes receipts from all sources—cash or credit, and things other than cash taken in as consideration."

Plan Trap Shoot and Duck Hunting Festival

The newly-created Tawas Bay Sportsmen's Club is planning on holding a duck hunting festival and trap shoot on Saturday, September 30th, in the afternoon, also a conservation display and entertainment in the evening, at the Fair Grounds.

Plans are being rushed by merchants and residents of both cities to make this an outstanding event of the hunting season.

Diphtheria Immunization Treatments Will Be Given

In Iosco county about 75% of the school children have been protected against diphtheria by toxin-antitoxin or toxoid treatments. While this is a great help in keeping Iosco county free from the ravages of diphtheria, less than 14% of the group of children between the ages of one and six years have had that protection. Statistics have shown that more diphtheria cases and a very high percentage of diphtheria deaths occur among the pre-school group.

The state of Michigan provides toxoid for immunization which you may have given by your family physician or at a time when the Health Department is conducting immunization clinics in the schools.

The Health Department schedule for toxoid clinics this fall will be as follows:
Wednesday, September 20th—10:00 to 12:00 a. m., Biely School, Plainfield township; 1:00 to 2:00 p. m., Kees School, Plainfield township; 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., Londo School, Plainfield township.
Thursday, September 21st—10:00 to 12:00 a. m., Vine School, Tawas township; 1:00 to 2:00 p. m., Greenwood School, Grant township; 2:30 to 4:00 p. m., Whittemore School, Burleigh township.

We wish especially to have the pre-school children come.

WHITTEMORE HIGH SCHOOL OPENED SEPTEMBER 4th

Largest Number Enrolled in History of School

The Whittemore school opened on September 4 in both grades and high school. Contrary to expectations, we have a larger enrollment than ever before. Our school has continued to grow with never a falter, each year seeing us with a larger enrollment and a better school. The high school has such a large enrollment this year that it was necessary to divide several classes into two sections, one of these classes having seventy-two students and the other fifty-six.

The kindergarten-primary room has an enrollment of 36 pupils and is taught by Miss Lois Leslie. Miss Leslie is a teacher with years of experience in grade work and is doing splendidly. She is a new teacher in this school, but is well known to everyone in the community as a teacher and church worker. She will also have charge of all sewing.

Norman Schuster has an enrollment of 38 in the elementary room. Mr. Schuster is also new to this school, but has had years of experience in grade work. He has endeared himself to everyone in even this short time and has created an attitude in his room which will cause both teacher and pupils to thoroughly enjoy every minute of the year's school work.

Russell Rollin has the intermediate room with an enrollment of 38. Mr. Rollin is in charge of the same room that he taught last year and one can see the results of his teaching from the freshmen who have entered high school from his room. Mr. Rollin has charge of all forms of boys' athletics. Last year was spent in building up a basketball team, of which you will hear much this season. His team of veterans will take a lot to beat.

The high school had an initial enrollment of ninety-six, but later (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

WILL REMODEL LEGION BUILDING

Plans have been completed for remodeling the American Legion building. The work will consist of building a full size basement and enlarging and redecorating the assembly room. This building was formerly the Ward school. Work will commence at once.

At a meeting held Monday evening it was decided to hold the annual AuSable river encampment Saturday and Sunday, September 30 and October 1.

County P. T. A. Meeting

There will be a county P. T. A. meeting held at the Community Building in East Tawas, Monday evening, September 25. Speakers for the evening will be Leslie Kefer of Bay City and Dr. M. L. Smith of Central State Teachers College, Mt. Pleasant. Every person interested in the schools of Iosco County should be present.

TOURNAMENT WILL BE HELD BY GOLF CLUB

Indications Are That Third Annual Tourney Will Be Highly Successful

Plans for the Third Annual Golf tournament are now about completed and present indications are that another highly successful contest will be presented. The tournament will be organized similar to last year's affair, but entrants need only play eighteen holes to qualify this year.

All contestants must play their qualifying rounds Friday, Saturday, or Sunday, September 15, 16 and 17. Those unable to enter the qualifying rounds must accept the lowest score entered in order to be eligible to compete in the tourney. Special qualifying round score cards must be obtained at the course, for only such cards will be acceptable.

Entries may be made at the golf course with Mr. Brown, or with Arthur Dillon and Dr. C. F. Klump in East Tawas, and with Hugo Keiser at Tawas City. The entry fee is fifty cents. An award will be made to the medalist in the qualifying round, and a trophy to the winner of the handicap rounds. No medalist has yet been able to also win the handicap tournament, which indicates that the handicap places all entrants on an equal footing. Arthur Dillon was medalist and Basil Quick handicap winner two years ago, while Edward Siefloff and Harvey Schneider were the winners last year.

The rules of the United States Golf Association will be enforced in all contests, and contestants will be strictly forbidden to create their own rules to fit their situation, under a penalty of being disqualified. One such rule that will be strictly enforced is that the ball must be played from its lie. Teeing up will not be allowed.

It is expected that all entrants will turn in their representative score, and that they will do their best in the qualifying rounds. Anyone who believes his ability superior to that his qualifying score indicates should advise the committee, so that his handicap may be regulated according to his ability.

An outstanding change in the tournament this year allows the women to compete with men players. Male contestants will be allowed a maximum eighteen point handicap, but the handicap for women will be figured on a different basis so that everyone will have an equal opportunity to win.

Ex-Bear Baron Supplies Comedy in "Little Giant"

If a leopard cannot change his spots—and there is no record of any leopard having done so—can a dyed-in-the-wool gangster become a gentleman? Can a big-time racketeer, no matter how many millions he has, crash the gates of society and "make" the 400?

Some convulsingly comical answers to such questions are supplied by "The Little Giant," a First National picture, which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 19, 20 and 21, with Edward G. Robinson in the role of "Bugs" Ahearn, a Chicago beer baron, who quits his underworld leadership with the legalizing of beer to become a social climber on California's "gold coast." Mary Astor, Kenneth Thomson, Russell Hopton, Helen Vinson and Donald Dillaway have important roles in the picture, which was directed by Roy Del Ruth.

"Another Language" is Study of Peaty Relations

Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery are the stars in "Another Language," a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature which shows Sunday and Monday, September 17 and 18, at the Family Theatre, East Tawas. The film, adapted from the sensational drama of family life by Rose Franken, shows Miss Hayes and Montgomery as a pair of newlyweds who find the honeymoon is over when the husband's ineffectual relatives take charge of their domestic affairs.

Miss Hayes is magnificent in her role and Montgomery's performance leaves little to be desired. They are a great team together and apparently meet with the unbounded approval of the audience.

Included in the cast are Louise Closser Hale, John Beal, Henry Travers, Margaret Hamilton, Willard Robertson, Irene Cattell, Minor Watson, Hal Dawson and Maida Turner.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

SPELLING

EVERY term a certain number of children fail in spelling. Usually children have little difficulty with this subject, so when the occasional child fails, he gets little sympathy.

"What? A low mark in spelling? Now, there's no excuse for that. You get a high mark in arithmetic and that is hard for anybody, but you get a low mark in spelling when all you have to do is study. Now you just go and get that book and I'll hear you spell every word in it."

That is exactly the way "NOT" to teach spelling. Spelling is a written exercise.

What we need spelling for is to be able to write our communications so some one can read and understand them. That means we have to spell and write accurately. Most of us do. What's the matter with the few who don't?

Sometimes it is poor vision. Sometimes it is defective hearing. Sometimes it is a lack of co-ordination between nerves and muscles that makes accurate writing difficult and poor spelling easy. Sometimes it is a lack in the memory. You know we have different departments of memory, and if the department that deals with remembering symbols or sounds is not functioning, we don't spell. Not ever. Usually the school psychologists can give the reason for the difficulty. Often it is nothing more serious than the use of the wrong methods.

You can't teach a child to spell accurately by dictating lists of words to him and listening while he spells them aloud. He may spell every one of them correctly and the next day, when he has to write them in class, he gets them wrong 90 per cent. You wouldn't expect him to be able to make a cake on demand merely because he could recite the recipe perfectly, would you?

Let the slow speller write each word slowly and say each letter aloud as he makes it. Let him write each word twice, no more. Give him a few words and let them be related either in sound or in content. Then turn over the paper and dictate them and let him write them. Correct them and let him write those he missed just once and repeat each letter aloud as he makes it. If he doesn't improve in spelling by this method, take him to the eye man. If he can't find the trouble, go to the ear man. If he fails, try the psychologist.

Don't make him write words more than three times. Spelling is plenty. Don't ask him to spell orally and expect him to write correctly. Don't give him too many words at one time. Few children fail in spelling if they get half a chance. When they do, there's a good reason.

THE IDEALISTS

ONCE in a lifetime each one of us is an idealist. Few come through with the ideal complete, or even still in the vision. Yet that period of idealism is precious and the adolescents who express it must be encouraged to hold on and fight and win. Adult disillusionment ought not to extend to blighting youthful idealism and enthusiasm.

It is always stimulating to an adult to hear a youthful crusader talking. He sits back, a smile in his eyes, nods his head and says, "Yes, yes. Once I felt like that." That crusading youth turns to him and asks in surprise, "Aren't you that way now?" So simple, so clear, does the vision strike upon the mind of youth.

What will the old man, the master, say? Is he that way now? The old fire stirs. Maybe he is. At least he hopes so, and certainly he hopes that his fiery one, this strong spirit untouched by the drabness, the sordidness of life, unwearied by any struggle, touched by a vision of hope and beauty may succeed where he failed. If he is really an old master, he says so. Only the shoddy failures try to drown the fires of youth.

It seems to me that we have been drowning idealism in our youth rather than fanning it into flame. "They are too young to know. They would misunderstand." What is it they would misunderstand? Our failing? Our feebleness? Our compromises with the Vision? It seems that way to me.

And when youth breaks into flame and threatens the security and peace of our snuggeries, how fast we are to squelch him.

We will have to be more careful of our youth. We need its idealism and its crusading spirit. We need to set the standards higher and train our youth to regard them with respectful and admiring eyes. We will have to shape our course a bit more according to the vision that once animated our souls so that when Youth asks, "Are you not that way now?" we can say with some vestige of truth and courage, "Yes. Still that way and ready to lend you a hand toward keeping you that way."

Youth loves truth. Youth loves candor, fair play, good sportsmanship, Youth regards honor and knows loyalty. Youth has a vision, an ideal and rushes gallantly to its salvation. Are we that way? Teacher, preacher, father, mother, old master, are you that way? Youth calls to you for the good word. Are you ready?

Discover Ancient Habitat of the Rhinoceros Men

Traces Found in Hill of Mystery in Transvaal.

Cape Town.—Sensational finds of golden ornaments and other relics of a vanished native race have just been made in the northern Transvaal at a place called Mapungubwe—the Hill of Mystery.

The natives, it appears, long have known of the Hill of Mystery; but they feared the place and never explored it. Thirty years ago a white hermit named Bernard Lotrie lived near the spot. He had accompanied Doctor Livingstone on the famous journey to Lake Ngami; and Lotrie undoubtedly climbed the almost inaccessible Hill of Mystery. But at that time there was no suspicion that a prehistoric settlement existed south of the Limpopo river, and Lotrie's stories of strange discoveries attracted no attention.

Now that valuable relics have been unearthed, men who remember Lotrie have recalled his story of a rich "treasure chamber" in the dense bush near the hill. The golden treasures already found have whetted adventurous appetites, and the hunt is on.

Meanwhile, the Hill of Mystery is being guarded by police, while a party from the University of Pretoria carries out scientific research untroubled by intruders.

A Powerful Tribe.

The most valuable find was a small golden rhinoceros. A very small clan of natives whose ancestors worshiped the rhinoceros still lives in Rhodesia. It is regarded as practically certain that the people who inhabited the Hill of Mystery and smelted gold there, were "rhinoceros men."

Discoveries have been made not only on the precipitous hilltop of Mapungubwe, but also in the surrounding country. The rhinoceros men were evidently a powerful tribe in their day, for the bush is impregnated with evidences of old human occupation. Pottery and beads, besides the gold and copper ornaments, have been found over a wide area. A skeleton wearing a metal helmet was among the most interesting discoveries.

It has been suggested that the Hill of Mystery was the burying ground of the foreign invaders who carried off the gold from the ancient mines of Rhodesia. Some of the beads and ornaments appear to be of Egyptian origin.

There is a tradition along the Limpopo that a small yellow people worked the gold and copper mines near the river, trading with travelers who wore white cloth around their heads and rode on camels. For the reason already mentioned, the scientists have had great difficulty in obtaining native guides. "Every one who goes up that hill dies," say the natives. "We don't know why—but they die."

A Formidable Fortress.

The Hill of Mystery is a mass of hard sandstone rising out of the tropical bush of the Limpopo valley. It is the only hill in the neighborhood topped with grass, and it is now clear that the rhinoceros men carried hundreds of tons of earth to the summit of their secret place. The sides are rugged and overhanging, and the scientists only climbed it with the aid of

Bandit-Proof Bank

St. Louis.—A bandit-proof bank door, invented to prevent robbers from entering financial institutions either before or after business hours, is on exhibition here.

The mechanism is a chamber of bullet-proof metal, just large enough to accommodate one person. It has two sliding doors. When one is opened, the other locks automatically. Thus, an employee enters the metal chamber from the foyer, closes and locks the door behind him, then opens the door into the banking rooms by means of a secret combination dial.

If anyone unfamiliar with the combination attempts to operate the dial, both doors lock and he is trapped in the small room.

ropes and ladders. There is one great oblique cleft in the rock, however, which offers the least difficult path to the summit. The entrance to the cleft is hidden by trees and a stranger might never find it.

Holes were cut in this cleft by the ancients, and once, no doubt, there were wooden rungs forming a sort of ladder to the summit. At the top of the cleft were boulders, evidently placed in position so that they could be toppled over in the event of an invasion. This same terrible form of defense was found at other places where the cliffs might have been climbed. The stronghold of the rhinoceros men was impregnable.

No other walls were needed—indeed the only sign of building found on the summit was a small stone enclosure—possibly once the chief's residence—now occupied by baboons.

French Welcome Germans With Spending Money

Paris.—Fifteen years after the World war, the Germans have taken Paris.

A horde of Teutons has descended and taken possession of the night clubs, theaters, restaurants and cafes. On the boulevards, at the races and in the lobbies of concert halls, German is the language of the day.

Some of the invaders are German Jews, some are political exiles, and others are tourists. Paris has gathered them in, just as she welcomed American and British visitors of other years.

The warmth of this welcome may or may not have been determined by the fact that the invaders are spending money. Despite the difficulty of transferring capital out of the reich, they are the chief patrons of those places where only money will do.

Probably in deference to them, Paris is having a season of German music.

This School Fines Its Students Who Flunk

Wichita, Kan.—There is one school in this city where it costs to flunk. Traffic offenders haled before the police court are paroled on order they report to the drivers' school. The class is in session one hour, two days every week. At the end of seven lessons an examination is given. If the student flunks he must return to police court and pay his fine. Otherwise, he is released. There is no "cutting" of classes, either!

Tourist Increase Shows Return of Prosperity

Albuquerque, N. M.—Return to normal conditions of prosperity was forecast in announcement here that tourist travel through Albuquerque is almost double for the last three months what it was for a like period a year ago. Many of the tourists are en route to Chicago for A Century of Progress World's fair.

Herbs Are Still Used in Medicine

St. Louis Is Headquarters of the Industry.

St. Louis.—"Yarb doctors" and their strange concoctions have disappeared as a result of the swift march of science, but the gathering of herbs and roots for use in making medicine remains as a thriving occupation in the United States.

Recognizing the curative or healing value of many of the homely remedies once brewed from mandrake, snake root or burdock, modern manufacturers of medicine rely upon these and other herbs and roots as the sources of ingredients for many medicines which are sold today over the counters of drug stores.

The greatest demand is for the roots of wild mandrake. Eugene Donzelot, a commission merchant, who has dealt in herbs and roots for years, said thousands of tons of mandrake—also known as mayapple—are sold in the St. Louis market annually.

Many "Indian doctors" who travel about the country with their shows obtain their medicine herbs and roots in St. Louis, Mr. Donzelot said.

Braille Books Are Now Being Mailed to Blind

New Orleans.—New Orleans blind people who love books will not have to risk the hazards of traffic to go to the public library for their literature under a new system inaugurated for their convenience.

Special cases for the fragile Braille editions have been prepared. The books will be mailed to sightless readers, who, when they have finished reading them, have only to hand them to a postman to have them returned to the library. No cost is entailed to the borrower. The address is on the wooden cover of the book, and the borrower is not even required to address the book before mailing it back.

Pearl S. Buck's books, the librarian reported, are most popular with sightless readers.

Lead and Zinc Boom in Tristate District

Joplin, Mo.—Lead and zinc ore production in the tristate district around Joplin has gone to the highest levels since October, 1931.

Zinc production has averaged 4,400 tons and lead ore production has averaged 500 tons weekly for several weeks. Zinc production has been stepped up to more than 6,000 tons weekly.

Zinc concentrates in bins in this field have been reduced 24,000 tons in 1933, and now stands at only 14,000 tons, the lowest stage for many years. A year ago stocks in bins stood near 80,000 tons.

In 1933, lead ore stocks have been reduced 5,200 tons and now stand at 9,350 tons.

Chicken and Auto Grow Old Together

Jamestown, N. Y.—On the seventeenth day of March, back in 1916, an Ancona chicken was hatched on the farm of J. R. Soderholm and in the same year Soderholm bought a new automobile.

The day the chicken was hatched the brooder caught fire and was destroyed, according to Soderholm, who explained that was the reason the date remained fresh in his mind.

Cow Whips Bear

Fort Klamath, Ore.—A cow owned by Ralph Darling is the heroine of this community. Though lacking horns, it fought off a brown bear which attempted to take its calf. The cow still had the best of the battle when Darling arrived and shot the intruder.

YUCCA IS PROTECTED

Out in southern California the yucas are bursting into yellow bloom, and are more abundant than ever by reason of a state law forbidding anyone to pick the blossoms. These shrubs were called by the early Spanish explorers "candles of the Lord."

Howe About:

German Husbands Value of Routine Lack of Intelligence

By ED HOWE

GERMANS are more ashamed than any other men if they do not boss their wives. Americans and Frenchmen rarely expect to, but Germans always vigorously attempt to.

Bismarck was one of the greatest of statesmen, and devoted his life to the business, but was more determined to boss his wife than to boss Europe. Before their marriage he began training her; he had her complete submission in writing before the ceremony, and ruled at home as long as he lived. The diplomacy he exercised in managing his mother-in-law, also was as constant and successful as his management of the French. His biographers say his wife Johanna worshipped him. She gave that impression as part of her training; probably she despised him.

The weakness of American men, now the wonder of international politics, may be due to their being universally henpecked; our easy submission due to long training by our wives and daughters.

The fact that the Germans control their women at least has not injured them as soldiers. The henpecked French who attacked the Germans in 1870 were overcome in a few weeks; perhaps this was the best exhibition of soldiering since Napoleon and Frederick. Possibly historians of the future will say a still better exhibition of soldiering was given by the Germans in the World war, when they almost whipped all the other men in the world; might have done so had not the German women been temporarily out of control and clamored for peace.

When the panic of 1837 occurred the people regarded it as a passing jolt and expected the same prompt recovery that followed the panic in 1819. But by 1839 it was evident that convalescence was going to be slow. So Ralph Waldo Emerson, the wisest American then, was appealed to. In a series of talks on "Human Life" he said ridiculous things. "There is hope in extravagance; there is none in routine," Emerson said. Later Emerson completely reversed himself. "The real hope in human life is in routine; in patiently learning the lessons of experience, and patiently following them. The ruts, the beaten paths, have been followed by a vast multitude, and for a good reason."

In previous centuries of world history there have been enormous exhibitions of human sensuality, cruelty, religious fanaticism, famine, meanness, rioting, destruction, poverty, plagues. In all these respects the ancients established records I do not believe moderns will ever equal. Future historians probably will not have another horror like the Inquisition to make their writing interesting; nor will they have another war lasting thirty years, a Black Plague sweeping unhindered over the world, a reign of terror like that in France, a woman as noted, powerful and bad as Catherine the Great, a king as magnificent and cruel as Louis XIV.

But it remained for the present age to set a high-water mark in lack of intelligence. We have more food and easier produce it than any other race, and more comforts, but I look for future historians to record that from 1929 to 1933 mankind at last acknowledged its entire lack of intelligence; every citizen put a fool's cap on his head and widely proclaimed himself an ass.

A man of eighty-seven who has participated in a good deal of honorable activity in the world, writes: "If I were a hundred and forty or so instead of only a little over eighty-seven—I should be filled with uncontrollable joy and merriment. I'd be cackling loudly and harshly with a sense of triumph and vindication. As I sat in my chimney corner eating my gruel I'd stop often and knock loudly with my spoon and call all the people to observe with me the sad remains of the Young Man's empire that came to its clamorous end with the smash of the sacred Bull market in 1929. Seen in retrospect that empire seems to have been run by children. And I could tell great and resounding tales of what its juvenile bosses did first to me and then to the country in general. In those gay days forty-five was the age of senility, and nothing mattered but pep, whatever that may be; I have never met anyone who knew. And what fills me with mingled feelings of joy and distress these days is the manner in which these amateurs in life took their beatings in the Days of Judgment. They collapsed in helplessness and fright. On the downward way they put up no decent resistance at all and many of them jumped from windows."

From the necessity of loving, none are exempt; and none exempt from the old necessity of handling love badly.

No man can handle life to best advantage until he becomes a conservative. Everyone is born a radical, and has to be spanked, whipped and yelled at until he learns the necessity of conservatism. If he never learns it he is locked up or hanged. The best evidence that a man has achieved a little common sense is that he is referred to as an old fogey by fools.

POULTRY FACTS

HIGH FEED PRICES CALL FOR CULLING

Choice of Layers Requires Early Attention.

Careful culling of poultry flocks is imperative to the lowering of production overhead in view of the increased price for feeds.

"It should be the aim of the poultry man not to have overcrowded houses at the beginning of the laying season," says Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the poultry department at North Carolina State college. He gives five requisites for bringing the pullets to a profitable condition this fall. These are:

1. Eliminate weaklings. In every flock of developing birds there is a per cent that cannot keep up with the majority. These should be marketed as early as possible to take advantage of broiler prices.
2. Cull the layers. Careful consideration should be given to the number of this year's birds to be carried over for breeders or layers for next year. Breeders during the molt season yield little or no income.
3. Scant feeding is expensive. The feeding of mash on the "dole" system is unwise and will show later in development.
4. Guard against parasites. The spending of a few dollars for worm tablets may be the saving of a great many birds later in the year. Worm all developing birds at about 14 weeks of age. Hens carried over for next year should also be wormed, and poultry men should be on the lookout for lice and mite infestation.
5. Plan autumn grazing. The careful poultry man will have a definite grazing program as green feeds are the cheapest source of certain necessary vitamins. The early autumn is the time for seeding rye grass, clover, rape and other crops which may materially cut feeding costs during the coming year.

Co-Op Egg Auction Does Satisfactory Business

Ohio's first and only co-operative egg auction, located at Wooster and serving poultrymen of 12 counties, sold to the highest bidders more than 20,000 cases of eggs in the first year of its operation. A case holds 30 dozen. Total sales for the year ending July 6 were $122,766.

One of the chief benefits of the co-operative auction, says R. B. Treat, manager, is that it places a premium on eggs of the better qualities. Before the auction began there was a spread of one cent between top grade eggs and current receipt eggs on the Cleveland market. The spread later was about three and a half cents.

The auction does perhaps the only mail order egg business in the country. Business is solicited from buyers in New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey. Eastern buyers also attend the auctions; load their purchases into specially insulated and refrigerated trucks which reach the eastern markets the following day.

The auction is incorporated as the Wooster Co-operative Poultry association under state and federal co-operative marketing laws as a nonprofit co-operative. All eggs are graded under the supervision of the state-federal egg grading service.

Plan for Early Greens

To make sure that greens will be available to the chickens, old and young, plow the runs and seed them down with oats, rye, or wheat. Where a double yarding system is used, it is easier to have greens growing at all times, as one yard can be growing greens while the other is being used, but even without double yarding, greens can be supplied. While the grain is sprouting, the chickens should be kept off the runs, for the taller the growth when the chickens are turned into it, the longer it will last. Most poultrymen have found that a little sweet clover mixed into the oats or other grains makes the greens last longer. The rank growth of the sweet clover is also useful as shade in the hot summer.—Montreal Herald.

Crooked Breasts

The bones of young poultry are very soft until the birds are near full grown. The ridge on the breast, called "the keel bone," is not much thicker than cardboard, and up to several months of age is quite as flexible. In full-meated and full-breasted young chickens the flesh on both sides of this bone protects it and keeps it straight. In lean and narrow-breasted chicks it is often badly twisted by the weight of the body resting on it while the bird is quite small.

Egg Means Egg

Egg noodles, according to standard adopted by the Department of Agriculture, must be just what their name implies and the eggs must be present in appreciable quantity. Under a standard adopted the noodles must have not more than 13 per cent moisture by weight and of the remaining 87 per cent at least 5.5 per cent must be whole eggs and egg yolks or just whole eggs. A few eggs added now and then won't satisfy the official regulations.

"AGE OF SPEED" COMES TO FARM

Rubber-Tired Machines to Step Up Production.

Rubber tires have come to the farm.

For years farm machines have jolted slowly over rough fields, limited in speed by the steel wheels on which they were mounted, but a revolution in farm machinery design is forecast with introduction of the farm implement tire.

The first farm machine designed for use with pneumatic tires is a combine harvester, which recently won loud praise in demonstrations before dirt farmers, government officials, university professors, and farm machinery engineers. (The combine cuts, cleans and threshes grain in one operation and is built for use on farm implement tires.)

The farm implement tires on which the combine is mounted minimize shocks to such an extent that the old speed for harvesting machines is stepped up considerably and the capacity of the machine is increased, according to Goodyear engineers. In addition to increasing the speed and efficiency of the combine, the tires played an important part in reducing its cost to a figure appreciably lower than that of larger combines.

"This is an age of speed," declared H. C. Merritt, a manufacturer of combines. "There is no reason why the farm machinery industry should sit back and allow developments of present-day engineering to pass it by. Air-tired tractors, which have been in use for some months, and now the air-tired combine, set a goal in the new era of farm machinery design, the ultimate purpose of which is the lowering of crop production costs and a reduction of the farmer's investment in equipment."

Application of farm implement tires to other farm machines, a development anticipated in the near future, will meet with an enthusiastic reception from farmers everywhere.

"Filthy Lucre"

The word "lucre" originally meant riches, profit, in no ill sense, as its derivative, "lucrative," still means merely "yielding profit" without unfavorable implications. But "filthy lucre" has all the implications of all the ills that were ever caused by, or for, money. This we have from the Bible. In the First Epistle of Paul the Apostle to Timothy, telling how bishops and deacons and their wives should be qualified, we find: "A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behavior, given to hospitality, apt to teach; not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient, not a brawler, not covetous."—Kansas City Times.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE BLACK SHADOW WITH GREAT CLAWS

To-who, to-white! To-whit, to-whooh! I know what I am going to do. The Smiling Pool no more I'll fret Till Jerry Muskrat shall forget.

THIS is what Hooty the Owl had decided in his own mind when he discovered that Jerry Muskrat had begun to build. So he had kept away from the Smiling Pool, going each night just near enough to see but not near enough to be seen. So Jerry Muskrat had worked in peace and, because not once had he seen even a suspicious black shadow, he had almost forgotten that there was such a person as Hooty the Owl.

The night when he raised the walls of his house above the surface of the Smiling Pool so that he could sit on drifted out from the Green Meadows toward the Smiling Pool. It didn't hurry. It seemed to drift along just as the others had drifted. If Jerry saw it he gave it no heed. So it drifted out over the Smiling Pool and across to where Jerry sat dreaming. He had reached the point in his beautiful dream where his big cousin, Paddy the Beaver, the most famous of all builders of houses, had come to ask him for advice on the building of a new house, when he just happened to look up.

That shadow was right above him, and it was black, very black. Then Jerry came out of his dreaming with a cold chill that ran down his backbone to the very roots of his tail. That shadow had two great round fierce eyes, and reaching down from it were great curved cruel claws. Those claws were reaching for him. There wasn't a bit of doubt about that. Do you wonder that a cold chill ran down Jerry's backbone to the roots of his tail? Do you wonder that for just a wee, wee bit of time he was absolutely still because he was too frightened to move?

Jerry's eyes grew wide with sheer terror as he saw those great cruel claws stretched wide to seize him, and Hooty the Owl hissed:

"I've waited a long time, Jerry Muskrat, but I've got you this time!"

All of Our Little

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WE ALL have a little, in even these times; We all sell a little, some even sell rimes. We're making a little, in even these days; Men must have a little, in various ways. We all make a little, though little we've got, And all of our little's together a lot. But some with a little the little won't spend, And so they make little, make less in the end. If I spent a little, a little bit more, And you left a little at some little store. That little together, depression or not, And all of our little, would make quite a lot. We're waiting a little, not certain just why; We sell very little, for little we buy. We're hiding a little, the timid of men; That helps very little to lift us again. If all of our little just busier got, Then all of our little would make quite a lot.

GRAPHIC GOLF

WEIGHT ON BALLS OF FEET HELPS PIVOT

STEWART MAIDEN, famous golf mentor, is a firm believer in having the weight leaning forward in the stance. In this way one retains a sort of moving balance with knees slightly bent and muscles relaxed. With the weight back on the heels a player is more or less set, the leg muscles are taut so that a proper golf swing is made difficult. Also when the weight is back on the heels the pivot at the hips is made harder. In the above illustration Clarence Gamber is making one of his typically long drives. The weight is forward on the balls of the feet, evenly distributed between the two. In the upper panel the full backswing is portrayed showing the hip and shoulder pivot. With the weight back on the heels there is danger of turning the shoulders alone while neglecting the hip pivot.

Fine Bridge Was Built by Unemployed Labor

BUILT entirely by unemployed labor, the Soldiers' Memorial bridge over the Catawba river on U. S. highway No. 29, between Charlotte and Gastonia, N. C., is now completed. It cost $175,000 and is the widest bridge on the route from New York to New Orleans. The old bridge is seen at its left.

them without wetting his feet he quite forgot. You remember he was so sleepy that he fell to dreaming dreams of building the most wonderful house that ever a muskrat built. Now there is a time for dreaming and a place for dreaming, but for a muskrat that time is not when gentle Mistress Moon is flooding the earth with silvery light and that place is not right out in the open for whoever comes along to see. But that is just the time and the place Jerry had chosen.

Now and then a little cloud drifted across the face of Mistress Moon, and when this happened it made a black shadow that drifted across the face of the earth and sometimes drifted straight across the Smiling Pool. After this had happened once or twice Jerry Muskrat, dreaming his pleasant dreams, took no notice of these drifting shadows. They were harmless. There was nothing to worry about.

By and by a shadow a little blacker than the others but just as silent

SOME GOOD RECIPES

HERE is something different to serve with a lamb roast instead of the usual mint jelly: Cut grapefruit into halves and remove every other section, in the cavity place a wedge-shaped piece of mint jelly. Mold the jelly in one-half grapefruit shell and the wedges will be of the same size. These are delightful substitutes for a fruit cocktail when serving lamb or fowl.

Banana-Lemon Cake Filling. Take three cupfuls of mashed ripe bananas, add six cupfuls of sugar, the juice of one lemon and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of butter. Mix and bring to a boil, stirring constantly to prevent sticking. Add one bottle of pectin and bring to a rolling boil, stirring constantly. Remove at once, cool and stir occasionally for eight minutes to keep the fruit from floating. Cover with paraffin and it will keep indefinitely. This rule requires eight to nine bananas or one and one-half pounds and makes nine or ten eight-ounce glasses.

Bake small cup cakes, spread with jelly and roll in coconut. These make very nice little cakes to serve with a cup of tea.

Rhubarb Betty. Mix one quart of dry bread crumbs with one-fourth of a cupful of melted butter. Place a layer of sweetened rhubarb sauce in a baking dish and cover with the buttered crumbs; repeat, adding a dash of cinnamon or nutmeg until one quart of sauce and all the crumbs are used. Bake fifteen minutes. The fresh rhubarb may be used, adding sugar for each layer and baking twenty-five minutes. Serve with a hard sauce.

Peach Dainty. Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter with one cupful of sugar and add the yolks of two eggs lightly beaten. Now add one pint of whipping cream beaten stiff and one quart of sliced peaches. Serve over sliced angel food or sponge cake.

LONG LAKE

Rev. C. W. Harvey of Prescott called here last Thursday.
The Currys have returned to Bay City after spending the summer here.

The county road west of town is being improved with a coat of gravel.

Mrs. Ella Buck spent several days last week with Mrs. G. W. Teed near Hale.

Miss Beulah Motney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Motney, and George Barber, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Barber, were married at South Branch on Saturday, September 9th, by Rev. Byler. Supper was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Barber and in the evening a wedding dance was given at the Long Lake Hotel.

A new porch and other improvements are being added to the Gressley cottage. Mr. Wood is doing the work.

Friends of Mrs. S. B. Yawger will be glad to hear she is convalescing from her recent operation and will be able to come home this week.

James Monroe and family of Midland called at the home of Robert Fick on Sunday.

Misses Margaret LaBerge and Olive Streeter of Long Lake are spending the week at Sand Lake.

Picnic of the Dead

One of the strangest sights in the world is on a mountain top of Luzon, Philippine Islands. Fully clothed, and sitting in groups of from 10 to 25 each, there are hundreds of bodies of Igorots which have been mummified by the hot, dry air—their method of burial. It resembles a vast picnic.—Collier's Weekly.

Firewood Classified

Boys who augment the family income in the poorer sections of New York city by selling and delivering small quantities of wood for use in fireplaces use a special nomenclature in their trade. To them wood is not pine, oak, ash—but "log wood," designating pieces chopped from waste construction material or old boxes, or else "tree wood," meaning untrimmed pieces as they come from trees.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

MAKING beds is one of the household tasks which follows the sun with daily regularity. In order for chambers to be made neat and tidy, the first thing of importance is this work.

Mattresses should be turned frequently lest they get worn down in certain spots. Sleepers have a tendency to settle down in approximately the same place in a bed each night, and the hair gets pressed down or the inner springs get sagging in these places.

A Bed Not a Sofa. Avoid sitting on the bed during the day if you expect the edges of the mattress to keep of even height. If this has been a habit, measure the height of the mattress at the ends, and then at the center edge and you will be surprised how much lower the latter measurement is.

The pillows should be shaken each morning to keep the feathers well separated. What are called "live feathers" are the highest grade. They keep their down quality, and do not mat as easily as do other kinds.

A living room which is well treated decoratively, has some center of interest. There may be several, but one should be chief among them. In winter time, if there is an open fireplace in the room, blazing logs naturally take the center of the stage, so to speak.

Queen of Archery

Scoring 72 hits with 72 arrows in the Columbia round, the concluding one, in the Century of Progress open archery tournament in Chicago, Dorothy Dugan of Greenwich, Conn., topped the field with a splendid score of 1,674.

would be the effect, for coolness is coupled with comfort. Therefore, totally different centers of interest should be established.

Few things are more beautifying and refreshing to the senses than flowers. If the homemaker is so situated that she can have a bouquet of flowers so placed that it catches the eye, she has a charming center of interest.

Should there be a room with a view, the window having the outlook can form a center of interest. The curtaining should not hinder the vision, but add to the interest of the window.

Sweet Potato Puff.

- 5 or 6 medium-sized sweet potatoes
2 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons hot milk

Boil the sweet potatoes. When tender drain, peel and press through a ricer. Beat the yolks and whites of the eggs separately. To the sweet potato add the yolks, butter, milk and salt. Beat well. Then fold in the well-beaten whites. Pile the mixture lightly into a greased baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 45 minutes, or until light and fluffy and brown on the top.

The Machine Man

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

At commencement in one of our American colleges an alumnus of large wealth returned to help celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of his class. Among those he met was a classmate whose exceptional ability won him a place on the faculty of the college.

In a charity hospital an examination took place in the presence of nurses and internes. The head physician addressed a young girl in a way which caused one of the internes, who could stand the inhuman method of his superior no longer, to exclaim: "See here, are you talking to a dog or a human being?"

Much has been written lately in criticism of the machine age. Among the

After the Cheaters

Miss Mary E. Hughes, promoter and organizer extraordinary, has been named by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson to command an army of 15,000 women who will promote the program of the NRA and ferret out the "drones and chiselers" who cheat on the "blue hawk" of the recovery administration.

arguments advanced were that the age of machinery has displaced manual labor. Today many a machine displaces from ten to twenty-five men. These men, thrown out of employment, must find work elsewhere, which greatly aggravates the labor problem.

One very just criticism, which has received little attention, is the effect upon the man who owns the machine. Is it not true that men are more and more becoming like the machines they control? An indifferent, almost callous attitude toward the human element is a factor which may seriously retard the development of our economic recovery.

ODD THINGS AND NEW—By Lane Bode

Canada-U. S. Border the Result of Many Parleys

Unfortified Boundary 3,000 Miles Long.

Washington.—President Roosevelt's recent reference to the Canadian-United States border as a boundary without fortifications emphasizes the unusual condition which exists along the 3,000-mile strip of land. Aside from patrols of Royal Mounted at strategic points and customs and immigration officials and boats of the department of fisheries on the waterways, it is unguarded. However, it took more than a century of negotiations to arrive at this happy state of affairs.

The fixing of the boundaries, begun in 1783, was not concluded until 1908, and, although there was during the negotiations one or two instances of local uprisings between the settlers on both sides of the line, the final issue was in no case due to a display of force. Because of the faultiness of the only available maps and the ignorance of the negotiators regarding the topography of the country under dispute, the marking of the boundaries was an extremely complicated affair.

A Dispute in the East.

The most dangerous of the frontier disputes was the settlement of the boundary between Maine, New Brunswick, and Quebec. This was fixed by the treaty of 1783, but not completely settled for more than fifty years. The treaty named as the boundaries of the United States such vague locations as "the northwest angle of Nova Scotia," namely, the angle formed "by a line drawn north from the source of the St. Croix river" and the islands in the Bay of Passamaquoddy which belonged to his Britannic majesty.

The identity of the St. Croix river was decided by a commission in 1798; that of the islands by an agreement with the British commissioner, Thomas Barclay of New Brunswick, in 1817, and the "angle" by direct negotiations between Daniel Webster, American secretary of state, and Lord Ashburton in 1842.

In these negotiations the king of the Netherlands was called upon to arbitrate. Although his award was based on thorough investigations, Maine did not agree to it and the difficulties culminated in the "Restook war" of 1838-39. For this affair the President was authorized to call out the militia, but hostilities were averted.

Difficulties also entered into the fixing of the boundaries west of Niagara. France first claimed the Mississippi basin by virtue of the explorations of La Salle; English fur traders claimed the Northwest. With the cession of Quebec in 1763 the situation changed, England claiming what is now the north central states. The northwest ordinance of 1787 envisioned the ambitions of the young republic in the vacant spaces of the West. Lewis and Clark, Gray and Astor, carried the flag to the Pacific.

The electioneering cry in 1844 of "Fifty-four Forty or Fight!" typified the spirit of the time, but wiser counsel prevailed.

Difficulties Over Waterways.

Negotiations were entered into in 1846, and it was decided that the boundary should follow the forty-ninth parallel from the Rockies to "the middle of the channel which separates the continent from Vancouver's island, and thence southerly through the middle of the said channel and of Fuca's strait to the Pacific ocean."

The many waterways along the border—the Great Lakes, the St. Lawrence, St. John, Richelleu, and Detroit rivers—all have caused many difficulties in the boundary question. To solve them Elihu Root, secretary of state, and James Bryce, ambassador extraordinary at Washington, brought about a treaty which created the international joint commission. This commission, which first met in 1912, consisted of six members, three appointed by the President of the United States and three by the king on the recommendation of the governor-general-in-council of Canada. Its decisions have decided many troublesome controversies.

SYNOPSIS

His yacht, the Intrepid, abandoned by its crew, Felix Horton, millionaire, with his mother, his daughter Nan, and Roy Stuart, puts into Squaw Harbor, Alaska, to recruit. He engages a bunch of nondescripts stranded there. A gigantic pole, Sandomar, is their leader. Captain Waymire, the Intrepid's skipper, engages Eric Erissen, an old friend, to sail as chief officer. Nan and Eric indulge in a moonlight flirtation. The Intrepid is wrecked. Eric leaving her in a small boat, with Horton and his party, Sandomar kills Captain Waymire and leaves the ship with his crowd. On landing, Eric learns there is no communication with the outside world. Fireheart, priestess of the island, descended from a white man in the remote past, knowing a little English, welcomes the castaways. Sandomar declares there shall be no law on the island, but Eric, having the only gun, crows him, declaring he is the law. Eric's love for Nan swells, and he tells her he means to win her. She is not unwilling. Fireheart claims Eric, and realizing the importance of her friendship he is forced to temporize. Defending himself from attack, Eric's revolver apparently misfires, but his assailants flee. Eric finds the revolver, which had been Waymire's, is rim-fire, while five of its six cartridges are center-fire. Eric has one effective cartridge. "Swede," makes an attempt on his life. He uses his one cartridge, killing "Swede," but is left defenseless, though master of the situation, since he alone knows his gun is useless. Fireheart's threats culminate in an attempt on Nan's life. Eric saves her. He makes Nan understand the depth of his love, but she is uncertain of her own heart. In a sudden, terrific storm, a child of the tribe is left helpless on a sand spit. Facing almost certain death, Eric, with two of Sandomar's gang, goes to save her, in one of the native boats. He leaves the revolver with Roy.

With a long, wavering cry, like the howl of a wolf, Sandomar rushed into the water to break the shock of landing. His pals followed, cheering; the triumphant shout rose until it topped the bellows of the storm and beat out against the blast to give fresh heart to the struggling, exhausted voyagers. But the Aleuts only leaned forward from their hips—grunting, staring. It was not for them to wave their arms and yell defiance to the demons of wind and sea. . . . Yet Nan thought she saw a passing luster in their dull, dark eyes.

The boatmen back-paddled for their lives. The boat lunged in, knocking the sailors headlong, but its speed was checked, and the Aleuts staidied it to land. Soon the palefaces had lifted their three comrades out of the hatches. Gray, haggard, and quivering, their hair streaming, their eyes sunken and dead, they were hard to recognize as the same bold, hardy men who had boarded two hours before. The master of the island lacked strength to stand alone. Sandomar had only to raise his arm to wipe him out.

Yet Eric revived enough to reel to the boat again, grope in the hatch, and bring to light the drenched, rumped, limp figure of an Aleut child. The crowd gazed long. It had not occurred to them that Eric had actually won his goal. They had been content with a dead heat—to cheat the sea of the three lives that had challenged her—and never dared think that Chikak too had been snatched from the boogaa. Only two of the women had asked after the child in their hearts, and neither had breathed a word. One was Chugalim, dark woman of the island. She had dared not interrupt the excited palefaces, miracle-workers and half-gods, to seek her daughter's fate. The other was Nan, who could not believe that the Eric she knew had turned back defeated after so brief a battle. It did not surprise her to see the child hauled up from the hold, but only gave freer passage to her tears. She expected some such end, but somehow she had been afraid to question.

Mother Horton's old heart had overflowed at Eric's return, but for these few brief seconds, the stake he had fought for had slipped her mind. Now she uttered a shrill yell, and clutched the child to her withered breast. "She's alive," the tremulous voice thrilled. "I can see her breathe—"

It was true. The girl was exhausted, half-dead from exposure, but a few hours sleep and a pint of warm seal-oil down her throat was all the medicine she needed. In a few days she would be ready for further explorations to the outlying rocks and sandspits. Stammering, crying with dry eyes, Chugalim burst through the wondering crowd and gathered in her own.

Half-carried between Horton and Wilcox, Eric reeled to his turf-hut. He had forgotten his revolver; anyway he lacked strength to take it back, if Roy chose to keep it. His mind was like a lighthouse in fog. He scarcely knew who walked beside him—how he came to be on land, instead of amid thundering waters—for what prize he had fought so many weary life-times—which way to turn the wheel. . . . At last he found himself on his own pallet, too tired to rise and lock the door behind his departing friends, too dulled to care whether his enemies stole upon him in his unguarded hour.

Nan had not followed her friends home. Wind-wearied, and buffeted by an inner storm, she had crept into a cave-like hole in the bank, for a brief rest. Shivering, she crouched down and buried her face in her hands. When she looked up, Fireheart's slanted eyes were peering into her own.

"You mighty big fool," the squaw told her, somberly. She spoke in low tones, but in the wind pocket of the rocks, Nan heard her plain.

"I wonder if I am, Fireheart," was the quiet answer. "But in a different way, Nan thought, than was meant.

"White Chief mighty tired—sick—go lie in hut. Why you no go with him, lie beside him, hold him in arms? He no love you?"

"Yes . . ." the white girl's lips trembled; Fireheart saw them. "He does love me."

"He love you—he want you—still you no go. He no love Fireheart—think she ugly squaw—but if he call me, Fireheart come quick. No lie beside him—no hold him in arms—just sit by him, bring him food, watch over him while he sleep."

Nan leaned forward, holding her breath. "But I thought you hated him!"

The squaw's ink-pool eyes shifted right and left. "Fireheart hate him because he no call her, no want her. Love, it like grass cut off, stamp down.

"You Mighty Big Fool," the Squaw Told Her, Somberly.

always grow again in first rain. Like river—freeze, build dam, always flow on when sun shines, when floods come. When Aleuts say make medicine against White Chief—pray God give him bad luck—charm stick in Fireheart's throat. Why you think White Chief still alive? Because Fireheart stand between him and people."

"But why do you tell me this?"

"Because you so big fool. You see him fight boogaa, save little girl he not even know, make squaw's heart jump in mouth, salty tears flow and burn. But what you do, girl he love? You no go, get in arms, feel d—n lucky! You snap finger, think about Roy. You hear big fool!"

Yes, and she was still thinking about Roy. Three months ago she had never dreamed that she could ever think about any other man as a life mate, and it was not a simple thing to cast him out of her mind and heart. She could not forget that Forlorn island was only an interlude in her life. These cloudy skies would pass, the dunes and crags fade like a dream, and she must return to the cold, harsh light of her lost world. She had always seemed cool-headed, practical, the cynic daughter of a sophisticated age, and even now she was childishly afraid of what might prove only a romantic illusion.

But now she must either yield to that fear, or put it away forever. She had come to the forks of the trail—the one level and shady and cool, the other steep, rough, with many a pitfall, winding up to the wild summits of the range—and she must make her choice.

She rose gravely, startled, Fireheart too stood erect. "I am a fool, Fireheart, but not in any way you can understand," she said in low, resonant tones. A dim smile played over her wistful mouth. "I'm going to go now—and get in Eric's arms."

She turned and strode away. Into the teeth of the gale. The fire in the squaw's eyes burned out, leaving them like charcoal in rain, as she stared after the wind-buffed form. But Nan had not told her true; she did not head straight for Eric's hut. A lingering obligation to Roy made her go to him first; to tell him her decision and give him one last chance to plead his cause.

Harried and hustled by the wind, she flung open his door without knocking. But she stopped at the threshold, alive to some deep drama moving here, when Roy looked up and met her gaze.

On his face was a look she had never seen before—at once grim, jubilant, masterful. What had changed him so? In one glance, she found his answer. His arm had dropped to his side, and in his hand he held Eric's revolver.

Staring, she crept further into the room. "Where did you get that?"

"Eric handed it to me—before he went after Chikak."

"What are you going to do with it?"

"I'm going to keep it." Roy's tone was rough and strong. "What do you think I'm going to do with it, give it back?"

Her heart glowed with swift anger. "He trusted you with it. You can't betray that trust!"

"Can't I? We'll see. Talk to Eric about trusts, not to me. Save your sentimental appeals for some one who appreciates 'em. Have you ever known me to be turned aside by anything but a cold fact?"

No, she never had. He was only being true to himself. Yet her eyes grew hard and bright.

"Does anyone else know you have it?"

"Sandomar knows. His eyes are devilish quick—he must have seen Eric pass it to me, because he tried to stalk me on the beach a few minutes ago. As I dropped my hand, he stopped; if he'd come on another step, I'd have shot him. But no matter, I intend to publish the fact this evening."

"Do you mean—you're going to take command?" She spoke very quietly.

"I mean nothing else. Why not? Do you think for a minute I can't do what Eric did, and do it better? I've never had a chance, that's all. I'm not one to ignore fact—to attempt the impossible—but now the main fact is in my hand! My turn has come. Eric's reign is over."

"What if he tries to take the gun?"

"He won't try it, in the first place. It was his whole strength—and he let it go. If he does try it, I'll give him one in the leg, and don't think I'll miss it." The cold assurance on his face appalled her. "It may lay him up for a few days, but he'll be able to take his trick at the oars when we start home."

She did not question this grim declaration. She knew that Roy had had military training, and was a cool, quick shot. "You won't go that far!" she warned. "If you do, you'll have to shoot me, too."

"That's plain drivell, Nan. Anyway, there'll be no revolt. The king is dead—long live the king."

He spoke with hard humor, yet she knew by the glitter of his eyes that he was coldly exultant, bitterly in earnest. "The new administration is going to be based on facts, not fancies," he went on rapidly. "The head's going to rule the heart and pretty sentiments will be kicked into a cocked hat. I'll handle Sandomar, all right. He knows that to the victor belongs the spoils. And I'll force the Aleuts to break their taboo and go for help. With fair luck, we can be back in civilization before next spring."

"Home again?" The girl drew a long, troubled breath. "I wouldn't let you betray Eric even if you could put me in my own house tomorrow."

"In your own house—or in mine!" He strode toward her and took her hand in a strong grip. "Enough of that nonsense about Eric, sweetheart," he told her, fondly. "I can see how you were attracted to him, you're a rather primitive being at heart, but all you really wanted of him was his protection, and it's no longer worth having."

She shook her head, confused. "It is more than that."

"Whatever it was, it's confined to Forlorn island, soon to be a memory." He swayed toward her, and kissed her lips. "You must come to me, now. We'll make our vows in the queer little chapel, before the tarnished candlestick and the funny old ikon. What do you say?"

"I say—that I'm still going to choose Eric. I'm going to stand by him, now that he's lost out—"

"You'll soon see the light. Now take it easy, while I look over this gun. Eric said to examine it—what he meant I don't know—before I fired it. I suppose he wanted to be sure I'd get the hang of it."

He began to unscrew the ramrod from beneath the barrel. Forgotten, Nan walked to the open door and stood gazing out at the gale-swept moors. Vainly she tried to untangle truth from falsehood, reality from illusion.

At last she was called from her thoughts by movements at the door of the kashga. Eric's enemies were massing there, and she sensed something ominous in their quick gestures, their crouched bodies. Presently Sandomar wheeled, Garge at his flank, and led his pack down the village row.

Nan watched him with the narrowed gaze of a hunter. He did not move fast, but in an odd shuffle, somehow violent and terrible. His head was thrown forward; he suggested an old man ape. Instantly she knew that the truce of the storm was over.

She turned with a choked cry. "Roy!"

"What is it?"

His hoarse tone arrested the frantic sweep of her gaze and made her post-pone everything, for a brief second, while she scanned his face. It was not the same she had seen ten minutes before. The pride, the mastery, the exultation that had mazed her so had passed like a flame; it was turning gray as ashes.

Why? He had not seen the charge up the village row toward Eric's hut. True, he terrified cry had showed a crisis impending; but instead of leaping to meet it, he was breaking before her eyes. Why did he stare so blankly, not at her, but at the revolver in his hand? Why did he hold it so unsteadily, so awkwardly?

"Now's your chance," she implored, with the swift instinct to encourage him. "Those brutes are going after Eric; cut them off, and show them who's master."

But he stood like a figure on a totem pole. "I can't . . . you don't understand. . . ."

The dull voice made her flesh crawl. "Oh, Roy—don't fail me! There isn't a moment to lose—"

But he only shook his head, baffled . . . impotent . . .

Desperate, she ran toward him, snatching for the revolver. She expected him to cling to it, but his hand opened like a fainting man's. She caught the weapon—shrieked—and sped out the door.

WORDS OF LOVE COME EASY NOW

Modern Youth Writes Its Own Ardent Missives.

It is hardly surprising that General Pershing's men fighting in France should have used letters that were not strictly of their own composition. That is what the fathers of many of them had done in their own youth.

In the year 1880 there was copyrighted in the United States a large volume entitled "Gaskell's Compendium of Forms." It was just that, aiming to tell anybody how to do anything that could be put on paper. A section of the work is devoted to letters of love and courtship. The forms presented would scarcely be called ardent by the sob-sister of today assigned to cover divorce proceedings. "Dear Sir" is frequently used in the salutation of a love letter from a lady. A gentleman who declares his love begins right off with "Miss Carrie White." There is not even "To" or "For" in front of the "Miss."

There comes to mind a scene in the back room of a tavern in a college town. At the table is seated a callow freshman, who has decided that the light of his young life must be addressed in verse. Opposite him is an upper class editor of the college magazine. He is reputed to be able to find words that rhyme. For a price fixed at three mugs of ale he turns out a poem. The freshman thrills at being a party to a literary courtship.

Those days are vanishing. Boys and girls are not as far removed from one another as they used to be. And parents, who have found themselves obliged to give in on "dates"—single, double and blind, are much relieved when their offspring devote hours to writing letters. To be sure the stamps cost something, but the expense is trifling when compared with some of the outlays that youth expects.

Those who rummage in the attics

50 years from now will find love letters that are really worthy of the name. Every postman lugs them daily in his pack. The young people have much to talk over and the superior training given by the modern school encourages real self-expression.—Boston Globe.

PAINTING REVIVAL GRIPS NATION!

"SHERWIN-WILLIAMS FOR ME" IS SLOGAN

NEWS PHOTO FLASHES FROM EVERY WALK OF LIFE BRISTLE WITH INTEREST. Unpainted—neglected for years—America has finally awakened to the need of paint. In every section of the country—in every walk of life—painting is the order of this new day. And Sherwin-Williams Paints, famous for quality and low cost, lead the way in the nation's biggest painting revival. Renovize—protect—save—with Sherwin-Williams quality paint this Fall. Don't let Winter rot and rust do further damage to unprotected wood and metal. See your local Sherwin-Williams "Paint Headquarters" at once. Write for a free copy of the new S-W "Home Decorator." The Sherwin-Williams Co., 605 Canal Road, Cleveland, Ohio.

COW CALLER SOUNIC CATCHES "FEVER."

Manteno, Ill.—Celebrities in all walks of life are catching the painting fever. Mr. Treffe Soucie, 75 years old, seven times a champion cow caller, still brings 'em in from half a mile away—without a megaphone. He's painting his barn with S-W Commonweath Barn Red—a "quality" champion, too.

NIGHT PAINTING PRECEDES "4 GENERATION" PARTY.

Essexville, Mich. (R. R. No. 1)—With the aid of motor car headlights, painter works far into night to finish painting the "wee bit hoose" of Mrs. A. MacDonald, 87 years of age, in time for the gathering of the clan. The occasion is Grandma MacDonald's birthday party for her youngest great granddaughter—6 months old. Four generations of MacDonalds were represented. Sherwin-Williams Paint, the preferred brand of the MacDonalds for many years, was used on this job.

"SHERWIN-WILLIAMS FOR ME!" Indianapolis, Ind.—A typical scene in leading department and Sherwin-Williams dealer stores everywhere as "back-to-the-paint-brush" movement gains speed.

NEW YORK ARCHITECT DOES MASTERPIECE IN PAINT. New York City, N. Y.—Mr. Perry M. Duncan, winner of the coveted Winchester Fellowship at Yale University, has produced exquisite room effects in his beautiful new Bronxville home with Sherwin-Williams quality paints. Mr. Duncan says "I found the Sherwin-Williams book 'The Home Decorator' a valuable source for suggestions in planning exteriors and interiors of homes."

TINIEST MAN GETS HUGE OFFER!

Chicago, Ill.—Mr. Elmer St. Aubin, world's smallest man, contemplates an offer of $500 to paint huge Sherwin-Williams spectacular sign with S-W Kem Finishes. This mammoth sign faces "A Century of Progress" and the Illinois Central Railway right-of-way, at 24th St. and the Outer Drive, Chicago. The midget, Mr. St. Aubin, is 36 inches tall, weighs 29 pounds and is 22 years old.

COCA-COLA ON BIG TIME! Atlanta, Ga.—This big, timely reminder to "pause and refresh yourself" is 15 feet across. It is the brightest spot in the "upper stratum" of Atlanta. Thousands daily seek its big, red face or call Walnut 8550 and hear a sweet "electrical" voice recommend Coca-Cola and give the correct time, night or day. This mammoth timepiece is finished with Kem Bulletin Colors—another Sherwin-Williams Quality paint.

comers have swelled this to one hundred and fifteen. We have sixty-five tuition students. We are mighty proud of this number. We have always tried to play fair in every way with our outside students and have tried to make them feel as if they were local students. We want them to feel as we do; that this is their school instead of being mere outsiders, and now this splendid response on their part makes us feel that we have succeeded. Those fine young men and women coming to us from homes in Twining, Turner, Hale, Long Lake, National City, McIvor, Tawas, Alabaster, Curtisville and other vicinities have made our school the success it is. We want you parents to know that we appreciate your patronage. We are proud of your sons and daughters and we are proud of the confidence that you parents have in our school. We hope that we shall always be deserving of your confidence.

The high school staff consists of the following teachers:

Miss Norma Lilly, A. B., teaches English and social sciences. Miss Lilly is new to our school but one has merely to ask any student to find that after even the few days that she has been here, that she is no longer new in their regards.

Mrs. John Musser, Ph.D., teaches history and languages. She is a most capable teacher with long substitute teaching in the school last year she is no longer new to the school. Her pleasing personality made her a favorite with the students already last year.

Howard Switzer, A. B., has been principal for the past five years. He teaches mathematics and science. He is too well known by everyone in the vicinity to need a lengthy discourse of his ability.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Common have charge of musical education. Mrs. Common teaching piano and Mr. Common giving instructions on wind instruments and violin. Mr. Common also has charge of the school band and orchestra.

F. L. Stelter begins his seventh year as superintendent. He has had the pleasure of seeing it become a twelve grade school, and watch it grow from a tiny infant in 1927 until it has now become fully grown. Few people in Whittemore have had greater pleasure in the growth of the school than he has enjoyed.

We have entered upon a new school year—the biggest and best year that we have ever had. May we again have the cooperation and interest of every parent as we have had in past years.

School Notes

High School

Tuesday morning the Freshmen held their first class meeting, and elected the following officers: Effie Prescott, president; Phyllis Bigelow, vice-president; and Isabelle Dease, secretary.

At a meeting of the Board of Education which was held Monday it was voted to purchase some new seats for the high school assembly room in order to accommodate the increased enrollment.

The very dignified Seniors held a class meeting Wednesday morning and elected officers for the present school year. The following are the incumbents: President, Herbert Zollweg; vice-president, Clifford Boomer; secretary, Earl Davis; treasurer, Arthur Wendt.

Fifth and Sixth Grades Each morning after the bell we have health inspection. The inspectors for this week were: Margaret Davis, Junior Featheringill, Mary Sims, and Elma Herman.

We are reading "The Gypsy Caravan" for our "Appreciation of Literature" hour. This book was written by Howard Pease.

The fifth grade has been practicing making change with paper money in arithmetic class.

Third and Fourth Grades Marian Clark entered the third grade Monday.

Peter Pfeiffer is absent on account of illness.

Ruth Giddings, Betty Nelson, Betty Ferguson, Billy Musolf, and Donald Pfeiffer had perfect spelling papers last week.

We are studying about the Indians in the fourth grade geography class. Primary Room There was an error in the first

SANDURA KOLOR-THRU
(COLORS SO TALK TO BACK)

A New Invention in floor coverings

Sandura's new Kolor-thru Rugs and Yard Goods are different and distinct from any other floor covering. The colors and patterns penetrate clear through to the back! You can't wear the design away! There are no surface pockets to collect dust or dirt. Kolor-thru is germ-proof, water-proof and wear-proof. It is not felt-base, not linoleum. The new non-slip "satin" surface is non-glare, and cleans with a damp mop.

Delightful patterns for every room—in rugs and yard goods.

grade enrollment last week. We have 27 first graders instead of 26. Jack Smith, Lucille Malcolm, Dorothy Hill, Neil Thornton and Katharine Westcott have been absent during the week.

Mrs. P. N. Thornton visited in our room last Thursday morning.

Briefly Told

In all things throughout the world the man who looks for the crooked will see crooked, and the man who looks for the straight will see the straight.

Scriptural Ages
Scientists have differed in explaining the great age attained by Methuselah and other patriarchs according to the Scriptures. An interesting solution is proposed by H. G. Wells in his "Outline of History." He says that the earliest recorded reckoning was by means of moons and generations of men. If the age of Methuselah was reckoned by lunar months, instead of years, it would bring the ages of the patriarchs down to about the average length of life.
