"The Eagle and the Hawk" Has Daring Aerial Scenes

The roar of airplane motors, the scream of wind through struts and braces, the rat-tat-tat of death-deal machine guns and above them all, the friendship and hatred that flourish between men engaged in flying to death—this, briefly, is "The Eagle and the Hawk," story of wartime aviation, which shows Friday and Saturday, September 22 and 23, at the Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City.

Fredric March and Cary Grant play the two leading roles in the picture. Jack Oakie furnishes comedy interest and Carole Lombard romantic interest.

The story by John Monk Saunders, author of "Wings," centers around two wartime flyers who are an unbeatable combination in the air but the bitterest of enemies on the ground. March is the pilot, a brilliant, reckless flyer who can out-manuever anything else in the air. Grant is the observer, a skillful, ruthless gunner, who can fill anything in sight with a load of deadly machine-gun bullets. Between them, they soon win fame and honor.

But in their personal relations they are not nearly so ideal as in their professional ones. March hates Grant for his cold delight in killing; Grant hates March for his sensitiveness to death. Ultimately Grant discovers his pilot has begun to crack under the strain. What happens then brings the picture to a startling denouement.

STANDISH WINS FIRST IN THREE-GAME SERIES

Failure to Hit With Men on Bases Proves Costly to Locals

A five-run rally in the third inning, after the side should have been retired scoreless, gave Standish the first triumph of a three-game series, 6-1. Inability to hit with men on bases proved costly to the champions, eleven men being stranded. Brown, Tawas City's star southpaw, and Bob Christie, Standish's ace, hooked up in another duel. Tawas nicked Bob for ten hits and he walked seven men and hit one batter; still only one run was scored. Spectacular fielding by the Standish infield, completing two double plays, and a beautiful one-handed running catch by Pavelka of Brown's line drive that doubled Mallon off first, helped B. Christie tremendously, and made it difficult for the champions to reach the plate. Not once during the entire nine innings were they retired in order.

After Brown retired Standish in order in the opening frame, Tawas City had the first of several golden scoring opportunities. Laidlaw, leading off, was hit by a pitched ball. Quick, attempting to sacrifice, forced Laidlaw at second. Main singled and stole second. Both runners were left as Noel popped weakly to Orr and Zinnegar took care of Siefloff's grounder. Again in the second inning the locals put men on the bases only to have Pavelka make his sentence.

YACHT ASSOCIATION MEMBERS PLAN FOR NEXT YEAR'S EVENTS

Success of 1933 Season Creates Added Interest

Now that the sailing season for yachts has passed and the long fall and winter months are at hand, the members of the Tawas Bay Yacht Association and all who are interested in boats will have plenty of time to think of and prepare for next summer's sailing events, and there promises to be a very interesting yachting season.

Quite a few of the members are planning a new boat, or when possible, buying a boat, so as to get into the game next year. It may not be well known, but there is a lot of excitement and fun owning a boat, be it ever so small, and sailing her against a bunch of other boats, all trying to win the race and a nice cup, and the fact that the Association was able to put up five different cups the first year shows that the T.B.Y.A. did itself proud for its first season of racing, to say nothing of the other smaller trophies sailed for.

Every outsider who came into the races with a boat and had the fun of racing, admitted we had a splendid regatta, fine weather, a good open course and favorable winds throughout the whole season. There is no reason why we should not have just as successful races next summer, and if the new boats which are contemplated are produced and come into the races, the events will be just so much the more interesting.

And just here, while every man or lady member is looking around for a model for either the A or B class, it might not be a bad idea to keep in mind the two smart boats which came from Alpena—the "Dale" in the A class and the "Pelican" in the B class. Both proved themselves the peer of any boat in their respective classes, and had they raced in (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

Mary Pickford Has Fine Role in "Secrets," at Rivoli

"Secrets," a famous stage play and now an even greater screen story, directed by Frank Borzage, is the attraction at the Rivoli Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, September 24-25-26. Featured roles are portrayed by Mary Pickford and Leslie Howard.

In this immortal picture Mary Pickford summarizes all that she has meant to her millions of admirers. See her as a favored daughter of wealth—defying her parents and facing the perils of the west for the man she loves. Share her Secrets of joy and sorrow—Secrets you will carry in your memory forever. No finer role has been given any actress to play! No actress could have played it finer.

Leslie Howard right now is riding the crest of a wave of popularity, and is one of the sincerest, most lovable, romantic actors that the American public has idolized in many years. His performance in "Secrets" is a triumph in his career.

PUBLIC WORKS JOBS TO BE STARTED SOON IN IOSCO COUNTY

Open Office in East Tawas to Register Unemployed

The National Reemployment Service, under the direction of W. H. Hill, manager of the district comprising Iosco, Ogemaw, Alcona and Oscoda counties, will open its offices in the East Tawas city hall this morning (Friday) at nine o'clock for the purpose of registering unemployed who may seek employment on public works jobs to be done under the N. R. A.

All unemployed in the county are requested to register and be classified for such available employment as will be created.

The Federal regulations require that contractors developing projects shall employ labor from the lists compiled by the National Reemployment Service and specifies the order of preference as follows:

(a) Former service men with dependents.
(b) Citizens of the United States and aliens who have declared their intention of becoming citizens who are local or county residents.

(c) Citizens of the United States or aliens who have declared their intention of becoming citizens who are residents of the State.

Ex-service men with dependents are urged to register as soon as the office is established, and others are to be accepted as rapidly as registrations can be made.

The first public works job in the county will be the construction of a 20 foot concrete highway in East Tawas and Baldwin township.

"Mayor of Hell" Exposes Reformatory Conditions

Motion pictures are doing a great deal when they faithfully mirror life; but sometimes the phenomenon of picturing future events happens with almost psychic preciseness.

A most unusual case came to light in connection with James Cagney's latest picture for Warner Bros., "The Mayor of Hell," which shows at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Friday and Saturday, September 29-30. The entire background of the story is a boys' reform school, with an exposition of conditions so corrupt and practices so cruel that the picture may well be classified as the junior successor to "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang."

Madge Evans has the leading feminine role in "The Mayor of Hell." Others in the cast include Allen Jenkins, Dudley Digges, Arthur Byron, Sheila Terry, Frankie Darro and Farina.

This feature picture is shown with the first episode of our new serial, "Gordon of Ghost City."

WILL WELCOME SPORTSMEN TO TAWAS BAY

Trap Shoot, Mallard Supper, Dance, Vaudeville, Exhibits

A Duck Festival and Trap Shoot will be held Saturday afternoon and evening, September 30, at the Iosco County Fair Grounds under the auspices of the Tawas Bay Sportsmen's club. Sportsmen from all sections of Michigan have been invited to take part in this big event which will inaugurate the duck hunting season.

The sportsmen's club met Monday evening at the city hall, Tawas City, where a program for the event was completed and arrangements made for the entertainment of visiting sportsmen and Iosco county people. The program will consist of a trap shoot, Lewis class, three classes, with W. C. Roach in charge; a big exhibit from the Conservation department; vaudeville entertainment; German band; Legion Drum and Bugle corps; mallard supper, and dance. All events will be held at the fair grounds. Many sportsmen have indicated their intention of being present.

Conservation surveys disclose that there are more ducks here than usual this season. Veterans say that this is due to the fact that the heavy rains of the early spring flooded the swamps and creeks, making ideal conditions for the hatching and rearing of young ducks. Water conditions are said to be fine for duck hunting.

The opening of the duck hunting season and the keen interest in trap shooting throughout the state will undoubtedly bring a large number to the duck festival. Business men of the two Tawas in cooperation with the sportsmen's club plan an excellent entertainment for those attending the festival and invite everyone to be present.

The Tawas Bay Sportsmen's club is a new organization with W. C. Roach of Tawas City as president and O. W. Rowley, East Tawas, secretary-treasurer. F. E. Kunze, R. G. Schreck and Hugo Keiser are members of the executive committee. The committee reports that about 100 applications have been received for memberships in Tawas City and East Tawas.

FRANK HOLDS OSCODA TO TWO HITS AS IOSCO INDIES WIN; SCORE, 10-0

Clair Frank turned in perhaps his best performance of the year last Sunday as the Iosco County Independents shut out Oscoda by a 10-0 score. Frank allowed his opposing batsmen only two hits and passed but one man, while his mates played errorless ball behind him, thus only three Oscoda men were permitted to reach the bases during the entire game. Oscoda secured both of its hits in the ninth frame but failed to send a man home. Frank struck out ten men during the contest.

The Ioscos' big inning was the fifth, when they scored five runs, after having counted twice in the second frame. They followed up in the sixth with two more counters, and added their final tally in the ninth.

Harting-Montgomery Film Has Very Unusual Story

If you still have a laugh gland left, don't miss "When Ladies Meet." This sparkling new film shows at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, September 24-25-26, with a roar of laughter from start to finish and comedy Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery co-starring in one of the most unusual stories seen on the screen in many months.

Miss Harding is superb as the wife of a philanthropist husband and Montgomery scores anew as the newspaper reporter who finds his girl having a dangerous interest in the married man.

Myrna Loy is magnificent as the girl in the case and Alice Brady returns to films to win a new triumph in the comedy role of the merry widow hostess of a week-end party that winds up in fireworks. Frank Morgan is the husband and the cast includes Martin Burton and Luis Alberni. The picture is spicy and racy with a tempo that never lets down. It is entertainment of the kind that brings healthy laughs and honest enjoyment to jaded film appetites.

Youth Leads in Ranks of Crime, U. S. Bureau Shows

Active Criminals Under 30, Bureau Shows.

Washington.—Youth continues to predominate in the ranks of crime.

Boys and girls of nineteen form the largest individual age group in the criminal element. One-fifth of all known crimes are committed by persons under twenty-one, three-fifths by persons under thirty.

This was the record written in youth finger prints in the files of the United States bureau of investigation during the first six months of 1933. While it set no precedent it added still another chapter to the story of youth's leadership in crime which has been told periodically by the investigation bureau ever since it began several years ago to catalogue finger prints of every person arrested for a criminal offense in the United States.

This time, analyzing its statistics, the bureau found in them a new indication that it is a short step from a minor first offense to more serious and deliberate crimes.

Nineteen year olds, it was pointed out, exceeded the number of eighteen-year-old offenders by only 10 per cent when the whole group of offenses was taken into consideration with minor crimes pulling the average down. But in the more serious offenses the number of nineteen-year-old criminals exceeded eighteen-year-olds by these margins: Criminal homicide, 74 per cent; carrying weapons, 37 per cent; assault, 34 per cent; robbery, 28 per cent.

Take to Serious Crimes.

"These figures," the bureau stated, "tend to indicate that youthful offenders go quickly to the more serious crimes."

During the first half of this year, the bureau reported, 159,493 arrests were made in the United States and the finger prints of the arrested persons transmitted to the Department of Justice. Of that total, 31,997, or 20.1 per cent were under twenty-one years of age and 62,977, or 39.5 per cent, were under twenty-five.

Of the total number arrested, the bureau said, only 11,029, or 6.9 per cent, were women. Their most frequent offenses were disorderly conduct, drunkenness and vagrancy, of which 1,963 cases were reported; larceny, with 1,910 cases, and sex offenses, with 1,336 arrests.

Thirty-five per cent of the 159,493 persons arrested during the six months was second among the more youthful criminals, while disorderly conduct, drunkenness, and vagrancy was third with 3,961 cases. In addition there were, among persons under twenty-one, 2,450 cases of robbery, 2,458 of auto theft, 309 of criminal homicide, 499 of rape, and 494 of carrying and possessing weapons.

At the end of June, 1933, the bureau said, there were 3,780,584 finger prints on record in its files, and 4,901,443 index cards, containing names or aliases of criminals. In the month of June, it was said, 347 fugitives from justice were identified through these records.

Total Ages of London Family Thousand Years

London.—That he has the biggest family in London is the claim of Frederick Henden. Henden has had 21 children, 10 of whom are still living, 61 grandchildren (as far as he can remember), and 10 great-grandchildren.

Himself one of twins, Henden had 23 brothers and sisters, and as far back as the family history can be traced the Henden has always had large families. His children are carrying on the tradition, for one daughter has 15 children and another 12.

Next year the total ages of the family will reach 1,000 years, and Henden, who will be seventy-three, has only one ambition—to give a party and invite all his family, so that they could all be together. The Henden has the distinction of being the biggest family mentioned in the London Roll of Honor, for 47 sons and grandsons are mentioned as having fought in the world war.

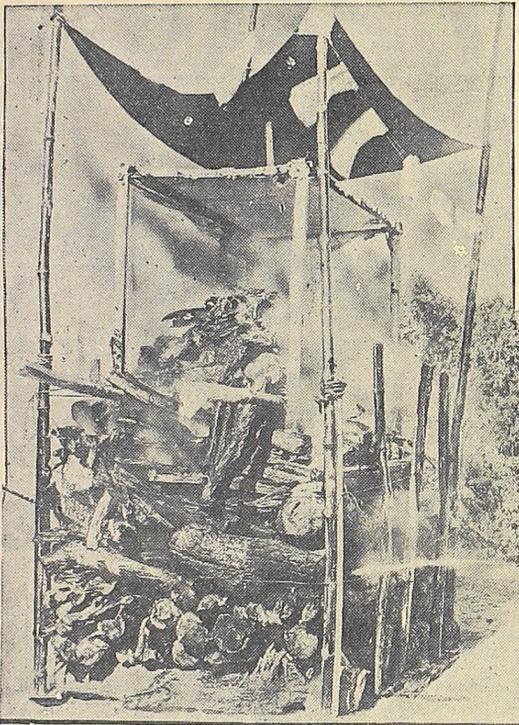

His Paintings So Small

20 Fit on Postage Stamp

London.—Painter of miniatures so small that 20 of them will fit on a postage stamp, Stanley A. Burchett of London, formerly of the Grenadier guards, claims that they are the smallest pictures in the world.

Two, about one-eighth of a postage stamp in size, have been purchased by the queen. One is a seascape showing a sailing vessel at dawn and the other a still life of marigolds in a blue vase. To appreciate the pictures fully it is necessary to use a microscope. Many find it difficult to believe that the miniatures are real water colors painted with a brush.

Cremation of a Buddhist Monk

Here, at Sarnath, India, is the funeral pyre of the late Sri Demavitta Dhammapala, well-known Buddhist monk and preacher and one of the foremost authorities on Buddhism. Over 100,000 followers of Buddha came from the outlying districts of India to have a last glimpse of their departed religious leader.

period had previous arrest records already on file in the bureau of investigation, it was said.

"This does not mean that they were previously convicted, nor does it mean that they were previously charged with committing the same offense," the bureau explained, however. "It means merely that at some previous time they were arrested and fingerprinted and copies of the finger print records were forwarded to the bureau at Washington."

"Six of each ten arrested for violation of the narcotic drug laws and approximately four of each ten charged with forgery and counterfeiting, disorderly conduct, drunkenness, vagrancy, robbery and embezzlement and fraud had previous records," the report added.

Burglary Most Popular.

The bureau found burglary the most prevalent crime among eighteen and nineteen year olds. During the half year, it was said, 6,253 persons under twenty-one were arrested for this offense. Larceny, with 5,835 arrests,

20-Year-Old Farm Boy Is State Checker Champ

Hollis, Okla.—Oklahoma's champion checker player this year is a lanky, twenty-year-old overalled farm boy, rather than the usual elderly or bewhiskered veteran.

G. T. Redrode, Hollis, the youthful title holder, received but scant attention when he entered the tournament, but he soon wrecked the carefully planned campaigns of several ex-champions and other experienced foes.

In a scheduled ten-game final series with E. H. Gill, several times champion, Redrode won the first six contests and left Gill scratching his head in wonder at how it happened.

Hailing the boy as the "Bobby Jones of checkers," Gill took him to Oklahoma City for a visit. Redrode is back at home now, planning to practice on an old board with the folks at home so he can get in shape for some of the major tournaments.

Ruler of Irak Confers Order on King George

London.—King Feisal of Irak believes in a sort of royal tit-for-tat in the conferring of orders. He has been given many orders in his time and now he has some of his own to confer as a kingly ruler in Arabia.

King George conferred upon him the Grand Cross of the Bath and he conferred upon the British monarch the chain of the Order of Hashimi. He also decorated the duke of Gloucester with the Order of Raftadin.

Farley's Name Costs Taxpayers $10,000

Washington.—Post Master General James A. Farley's name is going to cost the taxpayers of the country some $10,000, about which there was no advance planning or codes or anything. It comes about in this fashion: The new building that is to house the Post Office department will have a couple of gigantic blocks of stone near its entrance on which are engraved the names of all postmasters general since the first. The contract for the building and, of course, for those two engraved stones, was let during the administration of President Hoover, so that the last name on the list was Walter F. Brown of Ohio. But along came a change in administration and a new head of the Post Office department, and his name had to be included.

The two great stones carried an equal number of names when they were shipped from the Indiana quarry. To include the name of Mr. Farley, the names on one stone have had to be shaved off because they exactly filled the space. They are now being relocated in somewhat closer proximity to each other so that Mr. Farley's name may be placed in the list. The contractors said that the cost was approximately $10,000.

Racket Picks Coin Off Family Tree

Despite Warnings Hundreds Fall for Swindle.

London.—Americans in search of a family tree should take warning from the latest of many statements about bogus genealogists issued by the United States consulate general in London.

For, according to the consulate general's office, these fly-by-night gentry this year are reaping a richer harvest than ever from the United States at the expense of those people who believe they are missing heirs to vast fortunes or have claims to noble birth.

Sixty letters a week are being received at the consulate general from Americans who believe they are missing heirs. As usual, most of them have no legitimate claim to any fortune and are told so by return mail, but for those who write to the consulate general there are hundreds of others who place their claims—and their dollars—in the hands of bogus genealogists.

At the consulate general's office there are hundreds of cases on record of people who have been defrauded of their hard-earned coin by these men.

Only recently a trickster living in London started—or claimed to have started—to compile the history of the Bennett family. Hundreds of Bennetts in America and Britain were circularized by this man, who said he thought they were associated with this "noble family." He promised to have a record of all the Bennetts privately printed. The dollars rolled in but the subscribers are waiting for their book.

The ancient Society of Genealogists is up in arms at this traffic, which, they contend, is dimming the fair name of all latent genealogists, but the authorities have a hard time in catching the swindlers, who move from one address to another with great rapidity.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

WHAT HAPPENED WHEN A COAT TORE

IF THE discovery that what he had supposed was just a shadow was in reality Hooty the Owl, just reaching for him with great cruel claws, had frightened Jerry Muskrat so that he couldn't move, the sound of Hooty's hiss did for him just the opposite thing. Jerry didn't stop to think what he should do. There was no time for that. He simply did it. He dived for the water as if Hooty's hand had released a stout spring under him.

Now, Jerry Muskrat is big and looks rather clumsy, but Jerry can move quickly when occasion demands. You would have thought so if you could have seen him making that dive in the moonlight. But quick as he was, he wasn't quite quick enough. No, sir, he wasn't quite quick enough. Those great reaching claws were just ready to close when he dived and they did close. Only Jerry's hands and head reached the water he was frantically diving for. Then he squealed with pain and terror as he was lifted and, hanging head down, was carried across the Smiling Pool. Hooty the Owl had spoken truly when he said "I've got you now." Poor, poor Jerry Muskrat! Hanging head down, he gazed at his beloved Smiling Pool for what he believed to be the last time. Those claws hurt dreadfully. Then being carried head down made him feel as if his heart and stomach and everything else inside him had slipped out of place. His beautiful new house would never be finished. This was the last he would ever see of all the things he loved so. He had been caught at last, and all through his own carelessness. To make Hooty the Owl, for whom he had so long been too smart, a dinner was to be his end. Poor, poor Jerry Muskrat!

If Jerry could have known what was passing through Hooty's head perhaps he would have felt just a wee bit less helpless. Hooty knew what Jerry didn't, that those great claws had not clutched Jerry where they should have, where Hooty had meant to have them. He had intended to clutch Jerry right by the middle of the back and drive those great claws 'way in on both sides of Jerry's backbone. But Jerry's quick dive had forced Hooty to clutch at what he could, and the result was that those great cruel claws had caught in Jerry's coat near his tail. This was why he was being carried head down.

Now, Jerry's coat was rather loose fitting, for Jerry had been working hard and had not fattened up for the winter. So those claws had simply gone through the coat, but not into Jerry's flesh enough for a good hold. Hooty was not yet as sure of his dinner as he would have liked to be. Jerry was big and heavy and his coat might tear. There was no getting another and better grip up there in the air. For that Hooty must alight somewhere. Hooty hoped with all his might that that coat of Jerry's would prove too stout to tear.

If Hooty could have hurried this story might have had a different ending. But Jerry Muskrat was heavy and though Hooty did his very best with his great wings, he moved rather slowly and only just a little above the water. As they drew near the bank Hooty felt one claw tear loose and then another. Jerry began to struggle with all his might and his coat gave way so that Hooty held him with only one foot. Then as Hooty vainly tried to clutch him again with the claws from which he had torn loose, his weight was too much for the claws still gripping his coat. It tore loose from them, and with a splash Jerry struck the dear, cool, beautiful water of the Smiling Pool, while with a scream of rage and disappointment Hooty the Owl flew on toward the Green Forest. Jerry's life had been saved by the tearing of his coat.

SEPTEMBER KNOWS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THESE are the truest days of all. The summer with a hint of fall. Spring is all youth, for spring forgets. Amid its opening violets, The eyes of violets shall close. April forgets, September knows.

September knows the birds that sing, Like human happiness, take wing, And holds things closer to her heart Because she knows that things depart. Spring scarce possesses, being sure; We love things most that least endure.

We love things most we soon may lose. So many blossoms spring may choose She chooses none. We closer clasp That which already slips our grasp. The summer comes, the summer goes; April forgets, September knows. © 1933, Douglas Malloch.—WNU Service.

that all ordinary households are supplied, these dressings may be varied in dozens of ways.

Perhaps you have a dish of prunes—just a half dozen—cut them into quarters, serve on lettuce with a sprinkling of chopped nuts, or remove the stones from the prunes and fill with cottage or cream cheese. Take three or four of these to a salad plate of lettuce, add any desired dressing and serve.

To the french dressing for a change add a tablespoonful each of chopped green and red pepper and the same of finely minced onion, a bit of parsley finely chopped and a tablespoonful of finely minced celery. This mixture, if kept in a closed jar, will keep for several days, or even weeks. Take a tablespoonful of this mixture to add to the boiled dressing; it adds pep to a mild salad dressing. © 1933, Western Newspaper Union.

GRAPHIC GOLF

QUICK STOPPING SHOT GATHERS MUD IN RAIN. MAKES PUTTING DIFFICULT.

RUN-UP SHOT ON WET TURF

OFTEN situations arise on the golf course where the experienced and resourceful player has a handicap over his less experienced brother. Such an instance often happens on wet days when the course has become sodden. Here pitches that on a dry day may stop near enough the pin to enable a holing out in one putt become a handicap on a wet day. They may stop as near the pin but in so doing the ball picks up considerable mud which makes a true putt almost impossible. Under such circumstances a run-up shot that will roll several yards over the wet turf is more desired. Even should a bit of mud adhere to the ball when it comes to earth, it is more than likely to be rubbed off on its roll over the putting grass. Using this knowledge to advantage enabled Willie Hunter to beat Bobby Jones in the National Amateur of 1921. © 1933, Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

SALAD POINTERS

SALADS are such simple dishes, so easily prepared, that one is full of clever ideas for different combinations until the time comes to use one; then you can think of nothing but lettuce with tomato or cucumber, and you may have the lettuce, but lack the other ingredients.

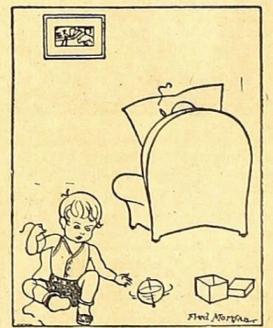

How you envy the cook who can go to her ice box and find cooked chicken, celery, and a salad dressing all prepared, and how easy for her to serve a delectable salad with these good things at hand.

To be able to create something edible with the ice box bare and the guest waiting, is indeed an accomplishment.

One of the most helpful things to have at hand is a bottle of french dressing ready to serve, as well as a pint or more of cooked salad dressing or a mayonnaise.

EGG YOLK SHADOW SHOWS NO COLOR

Survey of Homes Indicates No Preference.

The best way to learn the color of an egg yolk is to break the egg, says Prof. H. E. Botsford of the New York State College of Agriculture, in discussing the frequent reports from markets that the shipper's eggs had "dark yolks." The report means, he says, that the dealer sees a dark shadow and not a dark yolk when he candles the eggs, for candling shows lights and shadows and the thickness of the white determines the darkness of the shadow.

A survey of 11,443 homes by the University of Illinois shows that nearly 22 per cent of the consumers have no preference as to the color of the yolk, 32 per cent prefer pale yolks, 31 per cent prefer orange yolks and 14 per cent prefer the medium-colored yolk. The price preference for light yolks, he points out, is because of a dealer prejudice rather than a consumer's prejudice against the dark yolk. The prejudice is not one of actual yolk color, as many believe, but of low quality which makes the yolk appear as a dark shadow when candled, and because dark yolks and low quality are often found in the same egg.

Egg buyers who want the finest quality look for a "strong-bodied" egg; a strong-bodied egg shows a light yolk shadow, regardless of the actual yolk color. If the white is thick, any yolk appears light when the egg is candled.

Immense Cattle Herds

of Children of Israel

King Pharaoh's dream of seven fat and seven lean kine coming up out of the water (Genesis 41) is illustrated before the eyes of travelers on the Nile at this very time. In the land of Goshen and all along the river where it has left its rocky gorge in Upper Egypt and runs through a pastoral country with low banks, the cattle of the country wade out into the sluggish stream to avoid the fly pests and the excessive heat, remaining there with their heads only showing, until approaching night.

Joseph, and afterwards the other children of Israel, when they came down into Egypt, were well acquainted with cattle and the care of them. Although not so commonly used at that date in Canaan as in the land of the Pharaohs, the Patriarchs all had cattle, and we remember that when Jacob sent a present to propitiate his brother Esau, he included in it forty kine and ten bulls, and we were told previously to this that the land could not contain and nourish the cattle of both Lot and Abraham. Job owned five hundred yoke of oxen and must therefore have had many hundreds of cows.

The plowing in those days was done with oxen, and what a pair of oxen could plow in a day was called a yoke, or in our language an acre. Today, in the East, milch cattle are as likely to be employed under the yoke as bulls or oxen.

Cook Book Menaces Eskimo's Digestion

Modern Recipes to Inject Novelty Into Diet.

Washington.—Dyspepsia and finicky appetites are probably in store for Greenland Eskimos. Late news dispatches from Copenhagen state that a cook book of 450 recipes has been compiled to inject novelty into the simple Eskimo diet. The volume will be translated into the native Greenland dialect.

"Igloo cookery presents few problems," according to a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "The Eskimo wife has never known the strivings of her white sister to excel as a 'fancy cook.' Her husband has never regaled her with tales of the ples his mother used to bake, for he has never tasted pastry or candy of any sort in his life. Meat is his almost unvarying food. The meat of the polar bear, seal, walrus, caribou, white whale, narwhal, and musk oxen, are all palatable to him.

Simple Equipment.

"The average Eskimo bride starting housekeeping in a new igloo needs only four things in the way of furnishings: a meat knife, lamp, cooking pot, and sewing kit. The blubber-burning lamp, which also serves as a stove, is usually near the entrance to the hut. Suspended from the ceiling above it hangs a large soapstone cooking pot from which comes the aroma of boiling seal meat. At the sound of the sleds returning from the day's hunting expedition, the Eskimo wife, crouching over the stove, stirs the pot of simmering seal meat for her husband's supper.

"Dropping in for an evening meal with an Eskimo family, one would see old and young squatting on their heels, and each ready with a knife. Each member of the group takes a piece of juicy, cooked seal or walrus meat in his left hand, shoves it into his mouth, and seizes a strip between his teeth. With a deft stroke of the knife, he cuts off a mouthful, just at the lips. Oftentimes liver and blubber are held in each hand, and eaten alternately. The meat is washed down with draughts of ice-cold water.

No Fruits or Vegetables.

"Fruits and vegetables are unknown items in the diet of the Eskimo. When the meat supply is exhausted, the Greenland Eskimos gather rockweed and kelp, and dig the bark of willow bush out of the frozen soil. This is cooked into a jelly in the soapstone pot. This food, however, is not pleasing to the Eskimo palate, and is eaten only to stave off starvation when more desirable food is unobtainable. The nearest approach to ordinary vegetable matter consumed by the Eskimo is the semi-digested moss found in the stomachs of the caribou. This material becomes the Eskimo's 'greens.'

"Fish eaten either boiled or raw, offer variety to the menu. Clams are also included in the seafood dishes of the Greenland Eskimo. He obtains them via the stomach of some freshly-killed walrus who has just feasted upon the mollusks. 'Stuffed head of walrus' is undoubtedly the subject of at least one of the new recipes designed for the Greenlanders. They are fond of the unadorned head, and could possibly cultivate a taste for an elaborate preparation of it.

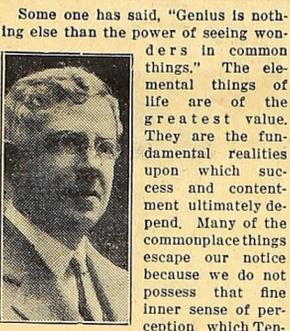

"In the Greenland spring, the dove-kie, or little auk, appears. This means another dietary change for the natives. Through the summer hundreds of these birds are netted and stored for food during the long winter months. The eggs of the elder duck, the brant goose, and the gull are the object of an intense search near the end of June each year. The family egg supply for the coming winter is stored in stone caches where the eggs become chilled first, and then frozen. They remain in this condition until eaten in the winter. Not all of the eggs collected are stored, however, for the Eskimo wife prepares an egg sausage, sometimes using as many as 300 eggs to one sausage. The eggs are broken and poured into a washed seal intestine, and in this state are eaten from time to time throughout the winter."

The Glory of the Commonplace

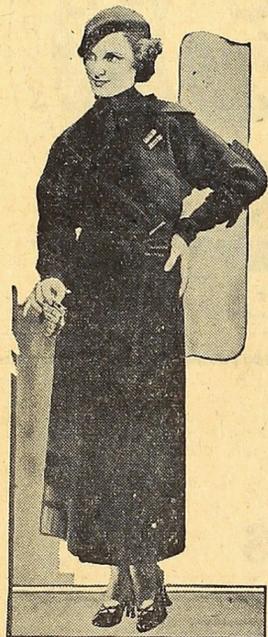

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Some one has said, "Genius is nothing else than the power of seeing wonders in common things." The elemental things of life are of the greatest value. They are the fundamental realities upon which success and contentment ultimately depend. Many of the commonplace things escape our notice because we do not possess that fine inner sense of perception which Tennyson expresses in the lines—"Flower in the crannied wall, I pluck you out of the crannies. If I could understand What you are I would know what God and man is."

Beauty is not something added to an object from the outside. The power to see beauty must first reside within ourselves. If we would see the glory of the commonplace, there should be cultivated an inner power of observ-

Royal Blue for Fall

Royal blue color, wooden buttons, tubular-shaped, and the pleated flare at the elbow are the outstanding notes in this coat of Adrian design.

"Look at a tree until it appears to you just as it appears to every one else; then look at it till you see what no man has ever seen before."

The glory of the commonplace is also evidenced in the response which is heartily given to the appeal of music when expressed in songs which reach the heart direct, like, "Home Sweet Home," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Last Rose of Summer," "My Old Kentucky Home." The same is true in poetry. The poems which we can recite from memory are those which reflect the common experiences of our daily life. The greatest satisfaction which can come to one is one's ability to get out of elemental things new beauty, power and strength. Helen Keller is quoted as having said, "If I had but three days to see, I would stand at a busy corner and merely look at people, trying by sight of them to understand something of their daily lives. I see smiles and I am happy." Edward MacDowell, in his "Ode to an Old Pine," writes: "O giant of an ancient race, He stands a stubborn sentinel O'er swaying, gentle forest trees That whisper at his feet."

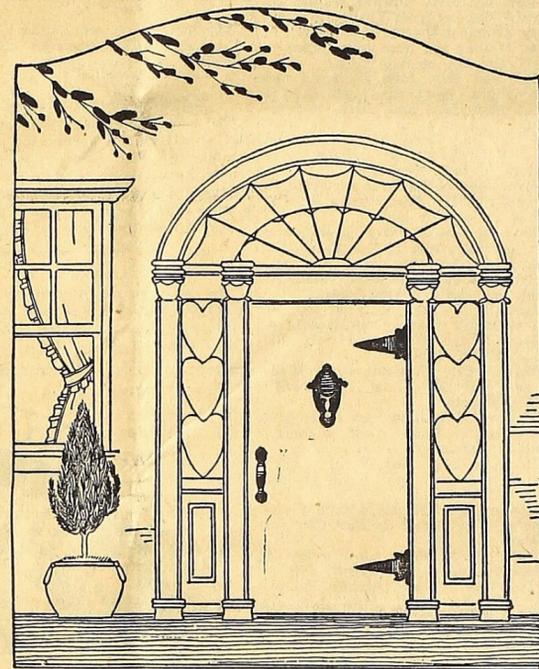

Science gives first place to the consideration of common things. The smallest particle of matter contains the ultimate truth as evidenced in recent research in the field of atoms, molecules and electrons. Browning writes, "We find great things are made of little things—And little things go lessening till at last comes God behind them. . . . The small becomes the dreadful and immense."

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

This doorway of an old mansion of Early American architecture should lead to rooms furnished in choice antiques.

Decorative consistency should prevail in the exterior and interior of a house. There should be no clash between the architectural type of a dwelling and its furnishings. The interior decoration does not have to be of the exact period which the outside represents, but it should be in harmony with it. These points should be remembered as fundamental necessities if the house is to be satisfying in character.

Two examples will prove illuminating. One house comes to mind which is a good example of incongruity. The outside is a simple farm house, not unattractive in type. It distinctly calls for simple, inside treatment, low ceilings, plain woodwork, and furniture quaint in character, which does not, however, prevent its being choice of its kind. On entering one is astounded to find an immense high galleried living room in early French decoration. The entire second floor of this part of the house has been taken out, except the part left for the gallery. This comes over the chimney and mantelpiece. Opposite it is a large long window, entirely foreign to farm house architecture.

Modernistic Invasion.

Another house is recalled. It is a Cape Cod settler's home, one of the really old Colonial houses of the early days of English puritans. The inside of the house, instead of being furnished in antiques, is thoroughly modern. There is a riot of color, chairs, tables, etc., unmelodious colors, and bizarre. The draperies at the windows are in modernistic design. The rooms are thoroughly incongruous with the charming old-time architecture of the house.

Homemakers who delight in continental or modernistic furnishings, should hesitate to molest the old American houses. Either they should seek to find the charm which exists in antiques suitable to early American architecture, or else find some house which can be transformed to suit their decorative preferences. The reverse is true. Those who treasure antiques should avoid attempting to fit them into homes of modernistic architecture.

For a Lawn Party.

A lawn, even though small, can be made very attractive for an afternoon garden tea. It requires little trouble and the tea takes on a festive character in such surroundings. Nothing special in the way of garden furnishings has to be bought, if one has just a few lawn chairs. An ordinary table can be covered with a tea cloth for refreshments, and extra chairs can be brought from the kitchen, and dining room to supply such added places to sit as may seem desirable.

The chairs should be wooden, wicker, or cane seated, as anything in the way of an upholstered chair would be out of place. Wicker chairs often have tufted seats and backs, and sometimes springs, but notwithstanding these notes of upholstery, wicker is such an accepted out-of-door type of furnishing that these do not bar using such chairs for extras at a garden tea.

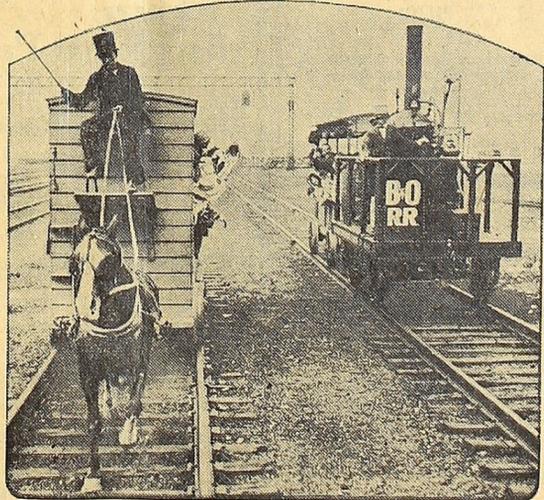

Centers of decorative attraction should be planned. The spot where a refreshment table is placed will prove a natural center. Unless the lawn is lit it is well to have two or three of these tables in sheltered positions. Under a spreading tree is just the place.

Fresh Air and Sunlight

Improves Poultry Shed

The best way to clean and disinfect a poultry building, says a poultry man in the Montreal Herald, is first of all to open up the windows and doors and allow the air and sunlight to get into the place as much as possible. Take out all the movable furniture and leave it in the sunlight. Clean out all the litter on the floor and with a broom sweep the walls, floor and ceiling clean. If the floor is earth remove from six to eight inches off the top and replace it with fresh gravel. The walls and ceiling should then be washed with a solution of water in which you have put lye, or some strong disinfectant such as creosote, or creolin. When the walls have dried white wash the place completely inside, using crude carbolic acid in the wash. If you could put this white-wash on with a spray pump so much the better. If the floor is cement it should be thoroughly washed, until no trace of droppings or litter remains. Make sure you get lots of sunlight and fresh air into the building. If there are not sufficient windows in the place see that new windows are provided.

Iodine in Eggs

Goitre is a deficiency disease the cause of which is a lack of iodine. The best way of administering the iodine is in some organically combined form. Hence the present fad for eggs of high iodine content, especially in regions where goitre is prevalent. On the principle that if a little iodine is good, much must be better, poultry breeders have been adding iodine compounds to feeds and drinking water. The method is so simple that Dr. C. H. Almqvist of the University of California finds it necessary to sound a warning against it. No one knows how much iodine or how little should be fed to a laying hen or a growing chick. Until the correct doses are fixed by experiment the eating of eggs rich in iodine may have its drawbacks. —New York Times.

Keep Eggs From Spoiling

To prevent spoiling, eggs should be kept in storage where the temperature does not go below 29 degrees or above 69. These are the freezing and germination points. For average farm conditions the storage temperature should range somewhere between 35 and 55 degrees. In storing eggs be sure that the cooling room is fairly moist but not wet and also that the room is free from odors.

Poultry Gleanings

Two factors, pigmentation and molt, should be given most attention in summer culling of the laying flock, according to a bulletin, "Culling Poultry," available for free distribution by county agricultural agents.

Any change in the ration should be made gradually, rather than abruptly, for the reason that marked changes suddenly made are likely to cause a drop in egg production which may be followed by a molt.

The first public library in the United States was built in 1750. Rhode Island can boast the honor of housing the first collection of books to be given over to public use. Before this time home owners had been gradually collecting small libraries, and also were including at this time in their home making cases for books and shelves and stands for favored volumes. The library was founded by Stephen Hopkins.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

A STATEMENT BY MISS GRACE J. GRAVES

Miss Graves, who is head of the Employment Bureau of the Lucid Private Secretarial School, in Grand Rapids, relies entirely on the telephone in contacting both employers and applicants. She says:

"We use the telephone exclusively in placing applicants. And we will not accept an application that does not give a telephone number."

Other things being equal, the applicant for employment who can be reached quickly and easily by telephone is likely to be the first called to work. Telephone service pays its way. Order a telephone today. Installation will be made promptly.

Queer Geographic Names

Cranberry Picker of Double Trouble, New Jersey.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WHILE there are reports that some mothers have already named their new-born babes for the national recovery act, Nira, a small Iowa town, denies that its name is so modern. It was named for a woman more than a half century before Gen. Hugh Johnson took the oath of office.

Names, cities and towns have many origins. First families have left their famous surnames to designate post offices and railroad stations in the United States, and in addition many humble folk have contributed their more familiar appellations such as Dad, Bill, Nick, Tim, Floe, Vick and Maggie. Aside from family names the homely nouns and adjectives of the work-a-day world have found their way by the score to maps and sign posts.

Greasy Creek, Tub, Biscuit, Cheap, Busy and Dimple are Kentucky towns. There are Horse Heaven, Humpstulps, Gooseprairie and Steptoe in Washington state.

Ple Town, Dusty, Gallup and High Rolls are in New Mexico; Jelly, Needles and Likely in California; and Sopotopy, Perky and Frostproof in Florida.

Illinois has Sandwich, Joy and Muddy, while across the state line in Indiana there are Speed, Economy and Harmony. Trump, Vim, Flues and Joes are in Colorado; Bumble Bee, Sunglow, Wikieep and Cactus in Arizona; Asbestos, Ladiesburg, Fearer and Appeal in Maryland; and Deadwater, Grandstone, Thorfare and Merepoint in Maine.

In Minnesota there is Ballclub, Happyland, Otter Tail, Money Creek, Knife River and Embarrass; and in Mississippi, Arm, Lemon, Whynot, Chunky, Shivers and Soso.

Montana's Bay Horse, Big Arm, Giltedge and Pray are equally as odd as North Carolina's Nags Head, Bear-wallow, Pee Dee, Shoe, Toast, Topnot and Worry; and Missouri's Rat, Gang, Damsite, Clever and Enough.

Accord, Teaticket and Feeding Hills are in Massachusetts; Anvil Location, Inkster, Almeek and Honor in Michigan; Echo, Happy Jack and Water Proof in Louisiana; Leaky in North Dakota; and Novelty, Overpeck, Long Bottom and Charm in Ohio.

More of the Queer Names.

Oklahoma's contribution to odd place names is Antlers, Hominy, Slick, Slim and Scrapper; while Oregon has Wagonfire, Sixes, Tyee, Lzee and Fossil. New York state gives Horseheads, Sag Harbor, Silvernails, Yaphank and Whiteface; and New Jersey, Colt's Neck, Peapack, Tranquility, Changewater and Chews.

Goodnight, Razor, Fort Spunky, Happy and Gunsight are towns in Texas; while Pennsylvania has Shickshinny, Showers, Moosic and Bird in Hand. Cowpens, Silverstreet, Nine Times and Ninety Six are in South Carolina; Faith, Tea and Twilight in South Dakota; Devils Slide in Utah; and Idol, Inskip, Littlecrab and Shop Spring in Tennessee.

Ferry passengers calling "hey" to "Si," a ferryman, are said to have named Haysi, Virginia. Other odd names in the Old Dominion are Modest Town, Cap, Crabbottom, Dandy, Smoky Ordinary, Traffic, Fancy Gap, Duty and Success; while its neighbor, West Virginia, has Joker, Cutlips, Smoke Hole, Dingy, Hazy, Odd, Pink and Quick. In Wisconsin there is Luck, New Diggins and Rib Lake; in Wyoming a Doggie, Badwater, Four Horse and Ten Sleep.

What Cheer, Promise City, Coin, Nodaway, Stout and Wick are Iowa towns; Cad, Deepstep, Dewyrose and Ty Ty are in Georgia; Coccolalla, Cuprum, Inkum and Notus in Idaho; Coats, Peck and Potwin in Kansas; and Doughboy, Flats, Hire, Rescue and Wynot in Nebraska.

Half a dozen of Arkansas' place names in a row sketch for the imaginative a thumb-nail story: Lost Corner, Reform, Health, Prosperity, Romance and Love.

Names of women of distinction adorn many of the world's cities, rivers, provinces, and islands. Lady Franklin Island, near Baffin Island in the Arctic circle, is named for the wife of Sir John Franklin, the explorer who lost his life in first finding the Northwest passage through the great ice of the Polar regions. There is perhaps no more beautiful story of untiring devotion and persistent effort than that of Lady Jane Franklin who, after the failure of many attempts, fitted out a ship which, though it brought back to her the definite proof of the loss of her husband's expedition, established his achievement of his object.

Pocahontas and Victoria.
The picturesque stories of the little Indian princess Pocahontas always will hold a loved place in the hearts of American childhood. Counties in Iowa and West Virginia, villages in Bond county, Illinois, and Cape Girardeau county, Missouri, and the Rocky mountains in Alberta, Canada, are named for her.

Queen Victoria's name is wrapped around the British empire from the capital of British Columbia, over the heart of Africa at Victoria Nyanza and Victoria Falls, and beyond into the Queensland and Victoria in far-away Australia.

America, too, in its early days of colonization paid its tribute to the queens of the mother country and to the gracious ladies who braved the dangers of untried shores with their lords. Elizabeth, a cape in Maine, and Elizabeth City in Virginia, as well as the state itself, together with some twenty-five other places in the United States, bear the name of the clever, witty, versatile coquette, who took the dissension-torn England and whipped it into a place as a world power. Elizabeth Carteret, the charming wife of one of the aristocratic proprietors of New Jersey, shares with Queen Elizabeth some of the honors of the name. Elizabethtown in North Carolina, and Elizabeth City in New Jersey are named for her.

There wasn't any Martha, of Marthas Vineyard, however. The first name is supposed to be a corruption of Martin, a friend of the discoverer of the island. The word Vineyard was added later on account of the wild grapes found on the island. Vinland, the name which Lief Ericson gave the North American continent, was suggested in a similar manner.

Maryland and Virginia are fairly bespattered with the names of the queens and princesses of England, the very state-names themselves being taken from that of Queen Henrietta Maria, the wife of Charles I, and the disputably fortunate estate of Elizabeth. Then, too, there are Annapolis, named for the wife of James I of England; and Anne Arundel and Caroline counties, in Maryland, called after the wives of two of the Calverts; Fluvanna county and the North Anna river in Virginia named for Queen Anne; and Charlotte, Amelia and Caroline counties and Charlottesville, the home of the University of Virginia, all called for the wives and daughters of the English kings.

Marietta, Ohio, was named for the haughty, charming Marie Antoinette. The Aleutian Islands, off the coast of Alaska, when that territory was Russian, were known as Catherine Archipelago in honor of Catherine the Great. Ekaterinburg was named for the Catherine who ruled Russia through her husband, Peter the Great.

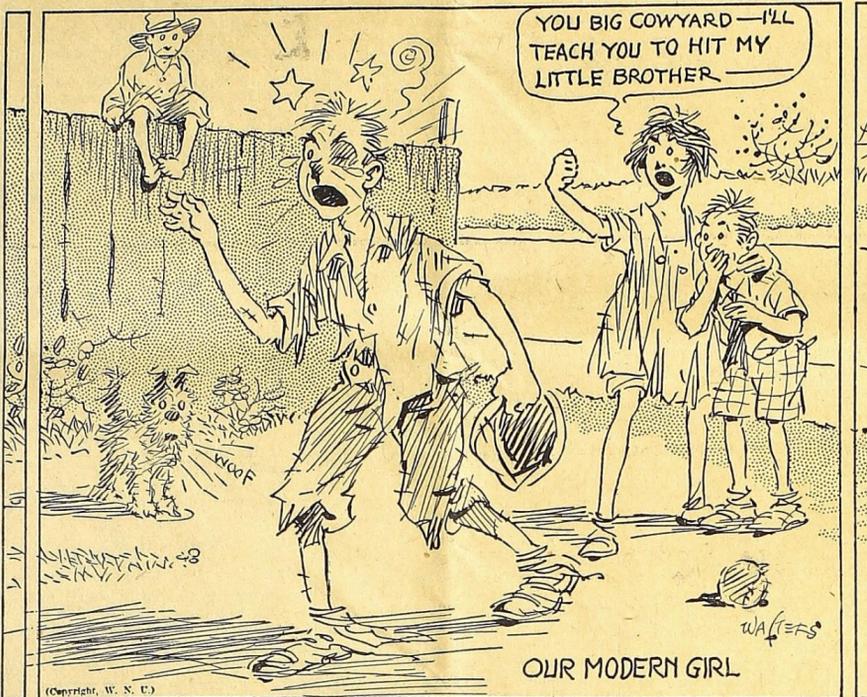

For Constantine's Mother.
St. Helena, the rugged little island in the Pacific which has such a soothing effect upon the restless tendencies of autocrats, bears the name of the mother of Constantine the Great, who, according to legend, discovered the cross upon which Christ died, during a visit she made to the Holy Land. She was known in the early days of Christianity for her religious zeal and piety. Helena, Mont., though opinions differ as to the origin of the name, is said to have been so called because of the resemblance of its location to that of St. Helena.

The naming of Hart county, Georgia, is a generous tribute to a Dixie heroine of the Revolution, Nancy Hart.

The harbor Beara in Ireland is said to have been named by Owen More, king of Munster during the reign of Conn of the Hundred Battles, for his wife, a Spanish princess. No saint perhaps holds a dearer place in the Irish heart than St. Ita, or Ida, often called Brigid of Munster, and we find her name in several variations in the names of many churches and places throughout that country.

FORGOT THE EXCUSE

On little James' first day at school he was given a card on which his mother was to write the date of his birth. The following day he arrived late, and without the card.

"James," said the teacher, "you must bring an excuse for being late, and don't forget the card about when you were born."

All out of breath the next day, James rushed in holding a note from his mother. "Teacher," he gasped, "I brought the one about being late but I forgot the excuse for being born."

Big Difference

Pupil—Pop, what's a traitor in politics?

Pat—A traitor is a man who leaves our party and goes over to the other.

Pupil—Well, then, what is a man who leaves the other party and comes over to yours?

Pat—A convert, my boy.

Hubby's Luck

Mrs. Heck—I wonder, Mrs. Peck, if I could borrow your rug-beater.

Mrs. Peck—I'm sorry, Mrs. Heck, but he doesn't get home till five o'clock.

Unsoothing Word

Female Castaway—Good heavens! Cannibals!

Male Ditto (soothingly)—Now, now, don't get in a stew.

WRONG SURGERY

The doctor shook his head doubtfully. "Tell me, what exactly is wrong with you?" he asked his patient.

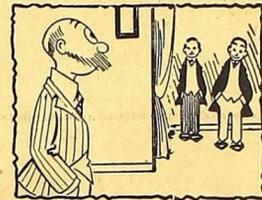

"I can't explain it," said the patient wearily. "I only know I suffer." The doctor nodded.

"What kind of life do you lead?" he asked.

"I work like an ox, I eat like a wolf, I'm as tired as a dog at the end of the day, and I sleep like a horse," replied the other.

"H'm," said the doctor, "in that case I should advise you to go and see a veterinary surgeon."

"STEWED," AS IT WERE

"Jones is a peculiar chap, nearly always spluttering."

"Yes, whenever he gets into hot water he boils over."

George and the Ghost Writer

"George Washington never chopped that famous old cherry tree," said the research man.

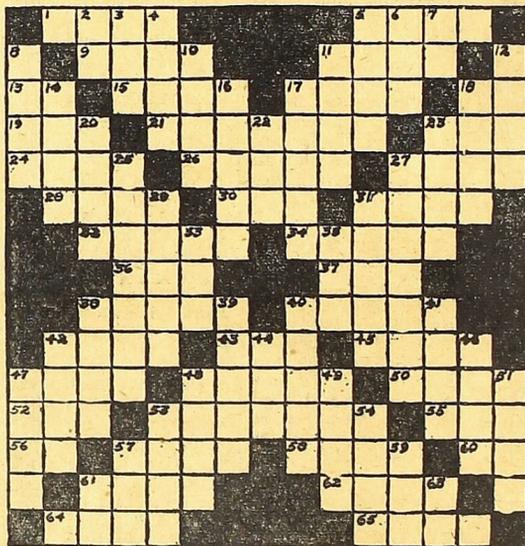

"I'm aware of that," answered Senator Sorghum. "One of the most important warnings his career has left to us statesmen is to be mighty careful whom you employ as a ghost writer."—Washington Star.

Critical

"That musical young man's voice is remarkable for its volume, isn't it?" remarked Mrs. Blykins.

"Volume?" echoed her husband; "when he gets to telling you what he knows it's a whole library."

Sandomar's crew had not yet passed the hut. They saw her dash out in front of them, the weapon gleaming in her hand, and fly down the row to Eric's door. The wind smote at her in vain. She seemed to cut through it, unimpeded. Crying, she burst into the shadowy room and dropped to her knees beside the prone figure on the pallet.

"Sandomar's coming," she gasped, as she held out the revolver.

Eric was still in the stupor of fatigue, his face like plaster. Could he rally to meet this emergency? She did not guess—she knew!

Courage! This ancient virtue was still best of all. Man is not yet a god, but an earth-creature fighting upward through a dark vale to the splendid distant summits of immortality, and of all his goods, courage counts most, whether in the silent moors of Forlorn Island or the ringing valleys of a city street. Man stands above his fellow brutes in intelligence, in love; but in pure courage, overmastering the instinct of self-preservation, man stands alone. Even today, when Thor is a legend and Woden a shadow, there is still no anathema so stinging as "coward."

The sagging muscles of Eric's face flexed like live rubber; the dead eyes filled with light. In one bound, he was on his feet. The next he was in the doorway—deadly, cool, sinister, dominant.

But only the wind rushed in at him. Sandomar and his crew had stopped when they guessed Nan's purpose, massing like wolves in snow at the distant twinkle of a rifle-barrel, and when Eric showed himself, their crouched figures straightened. For a few, tense seconds, they eyed him sullenly; then Garge's squirrel mouth widened in a grin and his hand rose in a jaunty salute. Staying well out of Sandomar's reach, he led the retreat.

Eric and Nan lingered in the doorway. He seemed puzzled by her pallor, not the bleach of fear, but a white light beating from within. But her manner was sober rather than jubilant.

"Thanks for bringing me the gun," he said in the long silence.

"Roy didn't want to keep it. . . . I gave him a chance, but he didn't take it."

Eric nodded to himself. "He didn't tell you why, did he?"

"No. I s'pose he thought that you could do more with it. Plainly it isn't in his line."

"His turn will come later when we're back in civilization—and I'm skipper of a tramp steamer wallowing in the trough of the Atlantic." There had been a trace of bitterness in his tone, but it faded away as Nan's gaze looked on his.

Something in her look made his words trail away. He took a quick step forward and clasped her hand.

"His turn won't come later," she murmured.

"What is it, Nan?"

"I've made up my mind at last."

There was still no exultation in her face, only peace, relief, sober satisfaction. Her lips dimly curled.

"I don't dare believe—" he began, dazed.

She swayed toward him and kissed him gently, without fire, on the mouth. "You can believe it, Eric. I've come to you to stay. I want you for my mate."

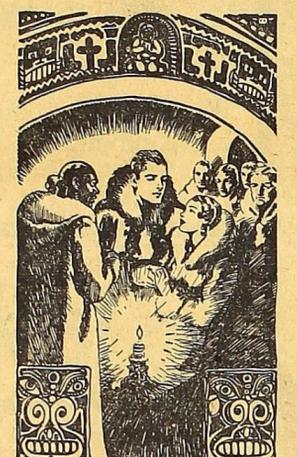

"You'll know how much more fun it is to marry an ancestor than a descendant, if you see what I mean. A man who has his place to make, like the one I chose, instead of a fellow with nothing to gain and everything to lose."

Nan's father looked at her dazed. "I won't oppose you, Nan," came the faltering tones she had heard so often of late. "Eric's a good man, I know, and I think he can protect you better than Roy. True, I'd hoped you'd choose a man of great name, but everything is swept away, we must meet conditions as they are."

"I'd like to know where you'd find a greater name than Ericsson," Mother Horton put in loyally. "One of 'em was the first conqueror of America—when the Hortons were probably pulling a wooden plow in a Saxon field."

The ceremony began at twilight the day following the storm. By Nan's wish it was in harmony with the simplicities of Forlorn Island; no flowers, no Aleut feast, naught but the ancient rite of the Greek Catholic church, as passed down by word of mouth from ancient days. The only witnesses were Nan's own party. Fireheart, so white she could well be taken for the paleface she longed to be, her eyes shining like a dying moth's, pronounced the "charms" in slow, guttural tones.

There was no other audible sound. The hum of the oil lamp, the low boom of the surf, and the whispings of the stealthy wind across the moors only gave depth to the silence. The weird, flickering light showed an incredible thing—big tears coursing Horton's face. Perhaps he was weeping for his daughter's strange fate, possibly for his own broken fortunes.

"Eric, Do You Take Me for Your Wife—to Love—to Cherish—to Protect?"

When Fireheart had finished the Russian service, Eric turned to Nan with a look that made her gasp. "Nan, do you take me for your husband—to love—to honor—to obey—for richer or poorer—for better or for worse?" he asked solemnly.

She hesitated briefly; then her gaze met his with steadfast strength. "I do."

There fell a long silence. The witnesses held their breath. At last her low voice streamed into the hush.

"Eric, do you take me for your wife—to love—to cherish—to protect?"

"I do."

But neither had said "till death do us part." Not only Roy noticed this, but Nan, too, and she was ashamed that her mind should seize upon the fact, and store it away.

By the island custom, instituted by a long-dead Russian priest, Fireheart should now kiss the neophytes on the cheek. From some deep need of her heart, she varied this custom tonight. Swaying toward Eric, she fiercely pressed her lips to his. Then with a squaw-like grunt, she wheeled and trudged away.

Only a moment later Eric and Nan were left alone, with the faded ikon, the tarnished candlestick, and the flickering inconstant shadows of the lamp, prophetic on the floor.

Eric and his bride could live apart. The Aleut people loved crowded quarters—animal heat, intimate contacts to comfort their lonely souls, clamoring voices to drown out the moaning wind and sea; so at Anuga's death, Chigum and her family had moved in with Tugat, Kanak's widow, leaving vacant a large two-room barabara. To this the pair came in the first starlight, hand in hand, quietly but with no misgivings, naturally as mated sea-gulls flying to the nest. When Eric had lighted the oil lamp in the larger of the two rooms, and bolted the door, he turned to find Nan watching him with a contented smile.

This was home. It was good to shut out the haunted dark. She and Eric were tried comrades; he would respect her rights, meet her more than half way in everything. A sweet sense of security swept over her, unknown in all the days of her exile. She smiled at Eric's efforts to make the best of the rough fare, clean peits on the floor, wooden stools, her own handbag containing her few treasures salvaged from the wreck, waiting for her in the adjoining room.

He unstrapped his revolver, hung it on the wall in easy reach, then drew her gently to him. "You're tired, aren't you, Nan?"

"Fagged out. We've had two trying days."

"I'm going to keep you up only a minute—just long enough to ask you a question—then you can curl up in there, on the sealskins."

The gentleness in his voice and gaze touched her profoundly. She cared for him more than ever. "What is it, Eric?"

"I think I already know the answer, but I want to be sure. . . . Do you love me?"

She looked into his steadfast eyes a long time before she ventured a reply. "I'm so fond of you, Eric. . . . More fond of you every minute. But I don't think it's the real thing—yet. You want me to be honest, don't you?"

"And the real reason you married me was so I can protect you? Because you had to make a choice between Roy and me?"

"I think that had a great deal to do with it." Her gaze fell.

"But perhaps you will learn to love me, soon—as I love you?"

She pressed his hand against her breast. "Very soon, I think, if you'll just let me learn it in my own way, my own time. Just be tender with me, Eric."

"I'm not one to drive a hard bargain, Nan," he told her in his slow, grave way. "You will be safer as my wife, but that safety—is free." He kissed her hand, and with equal gentleness her lips.

Her eyes looked like starlit crystal pools surrounded by dark rushes. "You will wait for me—to learn to love you?"

"There is your room." He beckoned over her shoulder. "You'll find a new bolt on the door. Go in it when you like."

Doubting himself and his creed—blaspheming his idealism that kept him from his heart's fulfillment, Eric lingered alone by the flickering lamp. His exultation of the previous hour had burned to ashes. He made no move toward bed; his hands felt like stone weights on the hallbit lines.

Nan's good-night kiss haunted him still. It was so light, so fleeting, yet its warm ghost returned again and again to his lips. At last he rose from his stool, yearning toward Nan's doorway . . . half-crossed the room. . . . His heart was racing. . . .

But the way was not open. What he had fancied was lasting peace was only an hour's armistice, a breathing spell in the thick of the fight. To the victor belong the spoils—but the enemy was not destroyed, merely hard-pressed. His and Nan's love was not a thing apart, but inexorably bound up with island history, still to be written.

Fate moved again—in a manner and guise beyond Eric's wildest dreams.

There was a sudden violent shock, like an earthquake, leaping through the turf walls and under his feet. But it was not some subterranean force rising in blind fury; this giant's blow was dealt from above. He had time only to raise his eyes when the dome of the roof collapsed in ruin, and a two-hundred pound boulder crashed through and thundered to the floor.

It was like a cold meteor hurled from the sky. The wind of its fall was an icy blast on Eric's face, and the abysmal horror of the thing rustled up the hair of his head. It struck the drift-wood block where he had just been sitting, crushing it into the earth.

Death had missed him by two paces, but he had not come through unscathed. The shock to his nerves and heart was of stunning force; besides, a block of turf had struck his head, making him reel half-blind against the wall. He could not grasp what had happened. The room was streaked with fire. But Nan, springing up with a scream in the doorway, divined the truth at once.

An implacable enemy had carried the stone onto the roof of the barabara, with his unnatural strength tugging it to the very dome. Through a crack between the blocks of turf, or a loophole bored out beforehand, he had located Eric's position; then he had lifted the savage missile high in his simian arms and hurled it down.

But this was only the beginning. Events swept on with the fatal momentum of a snowslide. The surprise attack had already staggered the victim; before he could begin to recover, a second blow fell. It was like a bayonet rush after artillery barrage.

Peering down through the yawning hole, the attacker saw he had missed his mark. Howling, he plunged through; and the further collapse of the roof under his feet shot him into the room with a violence only second to his thunderbolt. Nan saw him like an evil dream among the falling clouds and dust.

Eric made one hopeless effort to defend himself. He lunged out from the wall, but he seemed blind, and his movements lacked their familiar litheness and panther-like power. The fight ended before it began. Sandomar's arm stretched slow and long, an odd, raking blow with open palm and hooked fingers, Eric was hurled back against the wall, only to wilt to the floor.

Nan screamed with all her breath. To see the vigor and strength she knew so well utterly fail, to behold the splendid muscles quiver and go slack like a speared seal's, broke her last grip on reality. The rest was a dark fantasy that made a blind spot in her brain. She would recall it only in broken fragments—Eric's dull open eyes . . . the curious swirl of Sandomar's wiry hair . . . the lamp flickering from the wind of his violence. . . .

Yet a mind within her mind kept fighting cool and strong. Her screaming stopped with a rattle, her hand flashed to her mouth. . . . If she attracted Sandomar's eye her only hope of saving Eric and herself was lost. . . . She watched him in frozen silence, but he did not turn his head.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

SEWING

"I WISH you would tell me how to teach my daughter to sew. She is now twenty years old and cannot make her own dresses. Maybe I ought not to say that. She does make her dresses when I compel her to do so. But she makes such a fuss and cries, and the dress has to be ripped out and sewed again, and next time it is the same old story. She hates to sew."

"I can sew anything, and my second daughter is a wonderful needlewoman. Why can't I teach my oldest daughter to sew? She has graduated from college and is starting to work in a very nice position, but that means more books. She reads books and nothing else. She loves and she wants to write, and I tell her she must sew evenings instead of reading. She does enough of that daytimes. But it is a terrible struggle."

There is no reason under the sun why this girl should be bothered to death about sewing. Why should she sew? She can't sew. If she could she would without any compulsion. This girl is evidently very different from her sister and her mother. Why not? One good needlewoman is enough for any family. Let the other girl stick to her books. Just because somebody else likes to sew is no reason why another somebody should suffer.

Sewing is an art once it gets beyond the button sewing and hemming stage. An artist is born with his gift within him, all ready to spring into action at the first hint of welcoming opportunity. No amount of teaching, drill, pressure, will make an artist out of an artisan.

This happens oftener than you think between parents and children. Maybe it is happening in your own family. Maybe you are saying, "But you can't be a bee man. Nobody in our family ever was a bee man. You're positively silly. Whoever heard of making a living by being a bee man? Get this nonsense out of your head. Study your chemistry. I want you to get high marks in chemistry. You can be a chemical engineer. Oh, yes, you can. All you have to do is to put your mind on it. If I could learn chemistry, you can. There's a fine field waiting for you. Now, forget this bee man business. Make something out of yourself. All right. You'll do just what I tell you. That's the end of it. Bee man, I'll be man you if I hear another word about it."

Maybe he IS a bee man. How do you know? What do you know about bees, anyway? If you should stop in your stride toward the laboratory some sunny morning and look into the orchard, you might possibly discover a world, a beautiful world where miracles happen.

THE RUNABOUT CHILD

"MY CHILD was a lovely baby, and as good as an angel, until the past few months. Now it seems that I can do nothing with him. He delights in breaking things. He pulls the table cover off and laughs to hear the crash. He is as destructive as a plague. I don't know what to do with him any more. I've tried everything, spanking him, putting him in bed, seating him on a chair, all to no good."

Did you give him something to do? Something of his own to be busy with? While a child lies in his crib he gathers some impressions of people and things about him. Those impressions are imperfect. He has not touched and weighed and measured the things in the house. When he finds his feet he is off on a tour of inspection.

Furniture and rugs and the little odds and ends that have beauty and meaning to their owners must be safeguarded from this raider. He really does not mean to destroy. He does not know. What he is trying to do is to find out all about these new things. No, he has not seen them all these two years. He was getting ready to see them. It is now when he touches and pushes and pulls and bites into them that he is seeing them.

As soon as a child starts exploring, take him on your shoulder and let him look, touch and learn what he can take and what he must let alone. If he has a few such excursions he will not have to go about on his own, and his disastrous mistakes will be lessened. Then keep supplying him with things that teach and satisfy. We take a drawer or a box that the child can reach easily and fill it with odds and ends that interest and amuse him.

Put into it balls of varying material, size and color and use; pieces of cloth, varied in texture and color; blocks that fit into each other, lids that can be taken off and put on boxes; metal odds and ends that give him the feeling of weight and temperature in opposition to those of the cloth; a doll in some attractive dress and that offers activity; a toy animal.

Teach him to use his things for a half hour every morning, by himself. As he grows older and stronger, lengthen the time he spends with his things and make them more useful to him. If he is trained in this way he won't bother the household furnishings so much. And he will grow much faster and with a higher quality of intelligence than if you keep after him all day, saying, "No. Don't touch. Stop that. Leave that alone."

Fruits in Order for Daily Menus

Furnish Vitamin Supplies, Specially Important, at Small Cost.

A new interest is being shown by housekeepers in the relation of food value and cost. Foods are being chosen not only by taste, but not only in regard to food value, but in regard to the relation of cost to these other factors.

One of the bright spots in the life of the woman who considers all these things is the fact that fruit has been and is at an unusually low price. Fruits contribute largely to our supply of minerals and vitamins.

The fruits that are used most often in our daily life are probably oranges, bananas and apples, all of which are now staple in our markets. While all of us like a variety in our foods, we can safely choose our fruits with reference to price, as far as food value and taste are concerned. If, for instance, you find a bargain in bananas, which are now at a particularly low price, you use them as your principal fruit for the week, if you use such vegetables as cabbage or lettuce as well. The same is true of apples.

A very interesting comparison of fruits commonly used has been made recently by Doctor Eddy of Columbia university. Fruits are compared in reference to the important mineral content to the content of vitamins A-B-C, the best known vitamins. (B has been divided into two parts—one known as G—but these parts are usually found together in various proportions.) You will note how these vary. You will not depend, for instance, upon prunes for Vitamin C, but you can get a large amount of Vitamin A from them. Next in A content comes bananas, which also supply some units of B and C.

It is only recently that we have been able to confine the vitamin content of food in units. For a long time comparison was made much more generally by checks one, two and three. Of course not all foods have yet been tested by units, but work is continuing in this respect.

In checking cost of food in comparison to food value at the prices indicated, oranges would be the cheapest source of Vitamin C; prunes and bananas the cheapest sources of Vitamin A. If raw cabbage was used for salad to furnish Vitamin C, your diet would be balanced both for cost and vitamin.

The banana, it is interesting to note, has arrived at a new standing in this dietary in the past few years. It has always been a favorite treat for children, but had been considered not too easy of digestion until it was discovered that a ripe and an unripe banana were completely different as far as digestion was concerned. The ripe banana is now being used in infant feeding. The crushed pulp is given a very early age. For best digestion, either for old or young, bananas whose skins are slightly flecked with brown should be used for eating raw. If bananas are to be cooked, it makes no difference whether they are ripe or unripe. Baked, sauted and broiled bananas are used often now as dessert or as a meat accompaniment. They are also used as apples are in the preparation of such desserts as brown betty.

Bananas With Bacon.
6 bananas
¼ pound bacon

Roll half lengths of peeled bananas in strips of bacon. Secure with toothpick, if necessary. Broil under flame; or bake in oven-proof dish in a hot oven, 40 degrees Fahrenheit, about 15 minutes, or until bananas are tender and bacon is crisp. Baste at least once during the baking. Whole bananas may be wrapped in bacon and cooked in the same way.

Banana and Apple Brown Betty.
3 cups bread
3 tablespoons butter
2 apples
3 bananas
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Cut bread into dice and saute with butter until brown. Peel apples and bananas, cut very thin. Dredge with sugar mixed with cinnamon. Cover bottom of baking dish with the bread, then add fruit and remaining bread in alternate layers, saving a few of the crumbs to put on top. Bake one-half hour, covered, and the last fifteen minutes uncovered, in a moderate oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit.

Fried Carrots and Apples.
4 medium-sized carrots
4 tart apples
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon salt

Scrape the carrots and cut them lengthwise into thin slices. Core apples but do not pare and cut into slices about ¼ of an inch thick.

Place a single layer of the apples and the carrots in a large skillet with the butter, cover tightly and cook until well browned, turn, and brown the other side. Just before the cooking is finished sprinkle with the sugar and salt.

A to Z Family
Mr. and Mrs. Pate of Chipley, Fla., have an "alphabetical family." So far there are in the family: Alan Benjamin, Clara Della, Elizabeth Fannie, Gustavus Houston, Ida Josephine, Kinca Lee, Millard Napoleon, Oma Pearl, Quinton Rebecca, Sidney Thomas, Uria Vanderbilt, William Xavier, Yvette Zebony—Yashville Zechariah—is waiting for the next arrival.

If you want to GET RID of Constipation worries—

Science says Today use a LIQUID Laxative

1. Control intestinal action exactly—no "purging"
2. Measure to suit your individual needs to the drop
3. Banish Bowel Fatigue and the laxative habit

Here's Why:

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and in some cases even affect the liver and kidneys.

A doctor will tell you that the unwise choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation. Fortunately, the public is fast returning to the use of laxatives in liquid form.

A properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement. There is no discomfort at the time and no weakness after. You don't have to take "a double dose" a day or two later.

In buying any laxative, always read the label. Not the claims, but the contents. If it contains one doubtful drug, don't take it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription preparation in which there are no mineral drugs. Its ingredients are on the label. By using it, you avoid danger of bowel strain. You can keep the bowels regular, and comfortable; you can make constipated spells as rare as colds.

The liquid test:

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels", but strong cathartics.

First. Select a good liquid laxative. 2. Take the dose you find is suited to your system. 3. Gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving regularly without any need of stimulation.

Syrup pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used. It contains senna, a natural laxative which is perfectly safe for the youngest child. Your druggist has Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

School Notes

High School

The Sophomores have elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Arthur Ziehl; vice-president, Lawrence Daley; secretary, Willard Wright; treasurer, Jean Robinson. They chose yesterday as initiation day for the Freshmen, and as a result—dear specimens of clothing were modeled by the younger group throughout the day. Last night the sophs entertained them at a dancing party in the City Hall. After lunch the "Greenies" returned home—a wise and sophisticated class.

The Sophomores have chosen their declamations preparatory to the contest which will be held some time the first semester.

Baseball practice has been going on in earnest for the past two weeks with about 35 boys out trying to make the team. Although there is a regular team from last year's team back for every position, some of the reserves and newcomers are giving such an account of themselves that a number of the positions are in doubt. The team went to Alabaster on Wednesday and defeated the high school team there by a score of 8 to 7. The star of the game was Gordon Myles, who pitched his first regular high school game, allowing eight hits, walking two, and hitting one man, while he struck out four. Besides doing a fine job of pitching, Gordon got three of the 11 hits which his team was able to garner.

John Brugger, with two doubles, and Harold Moeller with a double and a single were our team's other players to get more than one hit. Box score:

Music and Art Notes
The musical organizations of the high school are well under way, with an enthusiastic, cooperative group. The girls' glee club exceeds in number that of last year, having a total of forty-two girls. Because of the prevailing spirit of diligence and the equal voice parts, excellent work should be expected from this group.

This year the boys' organization has been organized into a double quartet, plus two extra boys. These two boys work along with the quartet, and will be able to sing with or substitute at only a moment's notice. These boys are all veterans of former glee clubs, and promise many an interesting rendition. Now they are working on Negro spirituals, of which one is "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

The orchestra this year is comprised of a dozen students, of which five are violinists, two saxophonists, one trumpeter, one clarinetist, a drummer, two stringists, and the pianist. Despite the fact we lost several seniors last year, whom we greatly appreciated, this year we hope to surpass by far last year's attainments. Orchestra rehearsals are held at noon on Tuesday and Friday of each week.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

Miss Cowgill visited our room last week and talked to the boys and girls. Following her visit we weighed all the pupils and recorded the weights on our weight chart.

Nelson Thornton brought an interesting cotton display to school. The sixth grade is studying the "Cotton Belt" in geography and enjoyed discussing it.

All the boys and girls in our room had their pictures taken last week. Many have purchased one or more pictures.

Interesting book reports were given last week by Margaret Davis and Dorothy Blust.

Hugh Prescott, Mary Sims, Junior Musolf, June Smith, and Dorothy Blust are desk inspectors for this week.

Third and Fourth Grades

We had our pictures taken last week and most of them are very good.

Ruth Giddings, Betty Nelson, Ralph Hill and Donald Pfeiffer had perfect spelling papers last week. Betty Jane Ferguson is spending a couple of weeks in Chicago.

Primary Room

We were all weighed and measured Monday morning. Lucille DePotty and Myrton Leslie did the weighing and measuring.

We are working for gold stars in spelling. So far, Norma Lou Westcott, Lou Libka, Henry Brown, Wayne White, Leland Britting, Evelyn Colby, James Prescott and Maxine DePotty have earned gold stars. Lucille Malcolm, Ida Koepka, and Nora Mueller are back at school after several days' absence due to illness.

The second graders now have their new second readers and are enjoying them very much.

We had our pictures taken last Friday.

each event, the result might have been much different, and the cups may have gone north instead of staying in Tawas or going south. They were two good boats, sound, seaworthy and fast, and to build larger cities or down east would set one back.

Quite a lot of thinking and planning has occupied the minds of the officers of the Association in regard to a "club house" or a permanent headquarters. It has been suggested that a site on the bay between the East Tawas dock and Tawas Beach be secured and a fair sized log bungalow, not to cost too much, be erected. Another plan contemplated would be to try and procure an old disused lumber barge or vessel, of not to exceed 150 feet in length, and to be moored or drawn to the bank on the shore, and then arranged inside for reading room, kitchen and general gathering place, and a dance floor. There are a number of such old boats or barges scattered around the lakes, and for a nominal price, sometimes one may be secured. It would be a novelty and very appropriate, and the idea finds much favor in the community. If any member or citizen knows of such a vessel, do not hesitate to advise the officers and they will be glad to investigate and act. In the meantime, there should be no let-up in keeping the welfare of the Association and its progress in mind during the winter months.

Standish crashed through with their fly runs as they came in to bat. Tremblin led off with a single. Pavelka fanned. E. Christie hit to Musolf and with an easy double play in front of him, threw badly to Mallon, both runners being safe. Warren then cleared the sacks with his home run into deep right field. Zinnegar fled to Quick for the second out. Lucas, however, singled and B. Christie doubled. For no apparent reason D. Christie was walked intentionally to fill the bases. Orr then singled to score Lucas and B. Christie. Tremblin, up for the second time, fanned to end the disastrous inning.

Tawas City tried to match this attack in their half of the third. Laidlaw walked and Quick sent him to third with a double. Main beat out a hit to Lucas. Laidlaw scoring, but Quick was trapped between second and third, Main taking second. On a short passed ball Main attempted to go to third but Warren's quick recovery nailed him on a close play. In the sixth the champions filled the bases but couldn't get a run in. After Sieloff and M. Zollweg fanned, Musolf singled. Mallon walked and Brown singled to deep short, Lucas making a beautiful stop to prevent the ball from going into the outfield. Laidlaw's best, however, was a grounder to Lucas. In the seventh Main walked with one down, but no one could advance him, and in the eighth, M. Zollweg led off with a single and advanced to second while Lucas threw out Musolf from deep short. B. Christie then walked. Mallon for the fourth successive time. Brown hit a grounder to Tremblin that turned into a double play.

Standish tallied its final run in the ninth. Musolf took Warren's high fly and Zinnegar fanned. Manager Lucas singled for his fourth hit of the day and scored on B. Christie's long double to right-center. After Laidlaw was called out on strikes in the locals' half of the ninth, Quick singled, but Main grounded into a double play to end the ball game.

Next Sunday, September 24, the second game of the series will be played at Standish. The local lads are out to win this game and even the series. The two teams are evenly matched and after last Sunday's exciting game, the second meeting should prove even more interesting. Don't miss this game at Standish next Sunday as a thrilling and exciting contest may be expected.
