CHAMPS LOSE TO ELKS IN SEASON'S FINAL

Poorest Defensive Showing of Season Made By Local Team

Playing their final game of the season before a record crowd, Tawas City, champions of the North-Eastern Michigan league, displayed the poorest defensive play they have shown the entire season, and the Elks, Bay City title holders, romped off with an easy 12-1 decision at the local diamond last Sunday.

The Elks started their scoring in the first inning with a five-run rally. The local champions, afflicted more or less with nervousness, committed three costly misplays which materially aided the Bay City champions. After checking the Elks in the second frame, they ran wild with another five-run outburst in the third inning to clinch the game. Meanwhile Andrews and Roth, the latter a southpaw, held the Hi-Speeds well in hand, and coasted along to an easy victory.

The local lads averted a shutout by scoring their lone tally in the fifth. After one was gone, Kasischke singled, and scored on Laidlaw's sizzling triple into deep left-center. Andrews settled down, however, and fanned M. Zollweg and forced Quick to tap an easy one back to the box to end the budding rally. The Elks added a run in the eighth and then to make it an even dozen they tallied their final run off Brown, who relieved Moeller in the ninth inning. O'Keefe, Elk third baseman, was the leading hitter with a double and four singles out of six trips to the plate. Forsten was the only member of the locals to get more than one hit. John R. connected for a triple and a single.

The fans were treated to some clever juggling by "Rich" McKay, Elk right-fielder, between innings. A one-legged race between Fred Noel of East Tawas and Oscar Baker of Bay City gave the crowd a laugh, Mr. Baker getting the decision by an eyelash.

The Tawas City boys have played a total of 25 games, winning 20 and losing five. Fourteen of these were won in a row, which gives the boys one of the most successful seasons enjoyed in a long time. Not only did they win the championship of the North-Eastern Michigan league, but they set a record which will be hard to equal when they won 12 games in a row and ended the season with 13 victories and only one defeat. This is believed to be the best record ever made by a North-Eastern Michigan league team. They boys have earned a rest and when spring (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

School Notes

High School

School was closed Friday of this week to enable the faculty to attend the district meeting of the Michigan Education Association at Flint.

The botany class spent the period Wednesday examining samples of alfalfa and red clover seed which had been colored according to the congressional law. All foreign seed of the above legumes must have a small per cent colored when imported into the United States. The samples were furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The Seniors will put on a benefit show at the Rivoli Theatre, Thursday and Friday evenings, November 2 and 3. The title of the picture is "Midshipman Jack," and comes to us highly recommended. The admission will be the usual prices; that is, 10 and 30 cents.

The first meeting of the year for the local Parent-Teacher Association was held in the high school auditorium Thursday evening, October 12.

The ninth grade general science class met at the school building on Tuesday evening to learn the names and location of some of the brighter stars and constellations.

There will be an entertainment in the assembly room of the high school Thursday evening, October 26, at eight o'clock. The price of admission will be ten cents for all, and the net proceeds will be used in the general high school fund. This program will be put on by "Armond the Great," and consists of modern miracles, magical delusions, amazing deceptions, spooks in the light, and other mystifying illusions. All are invited.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

Norma Musolf of the seventh grade and Thelma Herman, Myrton Leslie, Dorothy McDonald, Lyda Moore, Joy Smith, and Richard Ziehl of the eighth grade had perfect spelling papers for the past week. Thelma Herman and Dorothy McDonald have had perfect spelling lessons for the year.

TAWAS CITY, LEAGUE CHAMPS, HONORED AT BANQUET ON FRIDAY

Pleasing Affair Held at Iosco Hotel

By F. E. Perlberg, Secretary of North-Eastern Michigan League

It's fine to be champions, but according to some members of the Tawas City baseball club, the cream of the North-Eastern Michigan league, they would far rather be out on the baseball field with the score against them than to make an impromptu speech at an honorary banquet, especially when that banquet is in their favor. Then they hasten to remark that it was mighty fine of the Tawas folks to go to all the work of putting on a "feed" and good time just for mere ball players.

But when all is said and done the champions of the North-Eastern Michigan baseball league were well pleased with the banquet staged for them at the Iosco Hotel at Tawas City last Friday evening and despite the fact that it was on Friday, the 13th, nothing happened to dull the evening's entertainment and the people of the town had ample opportunity to express in words their appreciation of the work done by their baseball team.

Following the hearty dinner, John Campbell took charge as master of ceremonies following his introduction by Mayor Alfred Boomer. During the evening Toastmaster Campbell called on practically every person in attendance to make brief remarks and express their feeling toward the champions. Needless to say, the speakers were generous with their praise and in doing so they did not forget to give the boys credit for their good work along with the bouquets. Any baseball team that will complete a schedule of 14 games and lose only one contest must have a little bit more than a rabbit's foot to help them along.

In reply to the fine things said about his team, Manager Henry Neumann thanked the Tawas people for their fine interest and support and stated the boys would be on the job again next year and will attempt to repeat their good efforts of this year. All of the members of the team responded to the call of Toastmaster Campbell. In addition to the men, several ladies gave their opinions of their team and those opinions were good. Mrs. George Leslie sang several fine selections. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. A. E. Giddings.

The banquet was sponsored by the Tawas City Improvement Association and the City Council. Mayor Alfred Boomer, Charles Moeller, Clarence Fowler, Bruce Myles, Fred Luedtke and Ernest Burtzloff were in charge of the preparations for the event.

Theodore Reichle, AuGres, treasurer of the league, and F. E. Perlberg, secretary, and Ed. Kiley of Standish were guests at the banquet.

COMMENCE WORK ON C. C. C. BARRACKS

Work has commenced on the government C. C. C. barracks at Silver Creek and Glennie. Owen, Ames & Kimball of Grand Rapids have the contract for constructing the 14 new buildings at Silver Creek. Sixteen buildings will be erected at Glennie, with Spence Bros. of Saginaw as contractors. All the available local carpenters will be used.

ORGANIZE YOUNG DEMOCRATS OF IOSCO COUNTY

Richard Killmaster, Oscoda, Elected Chairman at Meeting Friday

Last Friday evening at 8:00 o'clock in the American Legion hall, East Tawas, 45 young men between the ages of 18 and 40 met for the purpose of organizing themselves with the national organization of Young Democrats. This meeting was sponsored by the county Democratic party, under the able direction of H. E. Hanson of East Tawas.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Richard G. Killmaster, Oscoda, chairman; Arland Bigelow, East Tawas, secretary; Archie Graham, Whittemore, treasurer; vice-chairmen—Harry Gaul, Tawas City, and W. Kraus, Oscoda.

The Iosco county organization will be accorded two votes at the state convention to be held in Saginaw on October 26, 1933. Those chosen to represent the county organization at this meeting are: John St. James of Whittemore, Floyd R. Irish of East Tawas, Jas. McGuire of East Tawas, and Richard G. Killmaster of Oscoda, chairman. President Roosevelt's son is to speak at this meeting. This should be an attraction for all who are able to attend.

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, November 1, at 8:00 o'clock, E. S. T., in the American Legion hall. Any persons between the ages of 18 to 40 are cordially invited to attend. Entertainment of exceptional quality is being planned.

Powell Bares Love Nests in 'Private Detective 62'

Love nests that exist in cozy apartments and lonely beach cottages are brought to light in William Powell's latest starring vehicle for Warner Bros., "Private Detective 62," which shows at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Wednesday and Thursday, October 25-26.

In conjunction with the uncovering of the love nests there is exposed another racket, that of a certain class of private detective agencies that thrive on gathering evidence from clandestine love affairs for use in the divorce courts.

The attempts to frame innocent women, lead to startling and exciting incidents. There is a strong cast supporting Powell with Margaret Lindsay in the leading feminine role. Others include Arthur Byron, Ruth Donnelly, Gordon Westcott, Sheila Terry, Arthur Hohl, Natalie Moorhead and James Bell.

ANNUAL MEETING OF IOSCO SUPERVISORS HELD LAST WEEK

Work Completed Saturday Afternoon

The annual meeting of the Iosco County Board of Supervisors ended last Saturday after a five-day session.

The principal business of the meeting was the routine work of the finance and apportionment committee and making up the county budget. This work was controlled to a large degree by the new 15 mill tax limitation. Cuts were made wherever possible in the appropriation for the poor commission. This was set at $6,000.00. Last year's appropriation was $12,000.00. Other appropriations were as follows: Officers' salaries, $10,440.00; circuit court expenses, $1,000.00; mothers' pensions, $2,500.00; county normal, $877.50; general fund, $12,000.00; Children's Aid Society, $200.00.

Charles Brown was re-appointed member of the Iosco County Poor Commission and Mrs. Helen McKenzie of Oscoda was appointed member of the Old Age Pension board for a term of three years.

FIRST P. T. A. MEETING HELD LAST THURSDAY

The October meeting of the local Parent-Teacher Association was held in the auditorium of the high school Thursday evening, October 12.

As this was the first meeting of the year, considerable time was spent in organization. Talks were given by the president, Mrs. A. A. Bigelow, and by the vice-president, Mrs. A. E. Giddings, concerning the present crisis in schools. When one learns that probably not one-half of the schools of the state will function more than one-half of the present school year without additional state aid, he must realize that the public school system of Michigan is rapidly approaching extinction.

A committee was appointed to secure a traveling library from the state for the use of the school. The committee consists of Mr. Forsten, Mrs. Bing, and Mr. Nelson.

Mrs. Wm. Leslie and Mrs. Cox were placed upon the membership committee for the year. The members of the publicity committee for the past year, Mr. Giddings and Miss Crosby, were much honored by being placed upon this committee for the ensuing year.

After the business meeting and program, the members enjoyed a social hour in the basement. Refreshments furnished by Mesdames A. A. Bigelow, Forsten, Boomer and Giddings were served. Mrs. Wm. Brown and Mrs. Metcalf acted as hostesses to the assemblage.

The next meeting of the Association will be Thursday evening, November 9. The program is under the supervision of Mesdames Bing, Anschutz, and Lulu Bigelow. Refreshments will be served by Mrs. Westcott and Mrs. Quirk.

CHAS. W. CURRY SUCCUMBS TO HEART ATTACK

Funeral Services Held on Wednesday Afternoon at M. E. Church

Charles W. Curry, former sheriff of Iosco county and well known resident of this city, passed away early Sunday morning after a severe heart attack. Mr. Curry had been in poor health for some time.

The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the Tawas City Methodist Episcopal church, where a very large number gathered to pay their last respects to a highly esteemed citizen. Rev. W. A. Gregory officiated.

Charles W. Curry was born October 26, 1875, at Tawas City. April 19, 1899, he was united in marriage to Edith M. Ross. Mr. and Mrs. Curry resided 18 years on their farm in Tawas township. In 1917 Mr. Curry purchased the Hotel Iosco which he operated for four years. He was elected sheriff of Iosco county in 1924, serving six years.

In addition to his services as sheriff, the deceased had been elected two terms as clerk and three terms as treasurer of Tawas township. For a number of years he acted as county agent and was a member of the county poor commission for 12 years. He also served the county as parole commissioner and truant officer. In all of his public service he gave his very best efforts and was conscientious and efficient.

He is survived by the wife and one son, Ronald; two grandsons, Charles W. and Thordal James; his mother, Mrs. Katherine Curry; two brothers, Thomas of East Tawas and Waldo of Tawas township, and two sisters, Mrs. M. H. Barnes of Tawas City and Mrs. Arthur Staudacher of East Tawas.

The out of town relatives and friends who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Tompkins and son, Erwin, of Flushing; Mrs. Frank Conlen and two daughters, Dorothy and Marian, of Flint; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ross of Clio; Mrs. Carrie White of Detroit; George Shaw of Pigeon; Mrs. William Trestcott and Mrs. A. Campbell of Harbor Beach; Mr. and Mrs. James Stout of Flushing; Lieut. Karney of Bay City; Mrs. Lorene Swartz of Alpena; Arthur Graebner and Howard Patterson of Saginaw.

LOCAL ODD FELLOWS HONOR F. F. TAYLOR

In recognition of his 50 years membership and his distinguished services as a member, Baldwin Lodge, I. O. O. F., will honor Frank F. Taylor at a four-course banquet at 6:30 next Thursday evening. The banquet is under the direction of Ray Tuttle and his committee.

Immediately following will be group singing with the Odds Trio leading. Grand Secretary Fred A. Rogers of Lansing will act as toastmaster and those responding will be Senator Francis A. Kulp of Battle Creek, Judge Herman Dehne, Andrew J. Bradie, Grand Marshal, of Detroit, and Rev. R. T. Kilpatrick, Grand Conductor, of Dearborn, who will act as special representative for Grand Master W. A. Collins.

American Relief Army Services in East Tawas

The evangelistic services conducted by Charles Clifton, of Roscommon, have been very wonderful in both spirit and results. Eighteen converts have been added to the Lord's kingdom in eleven services. The numbers attendant at the meetings have made it necessary to move the mission from the Brown building to the old Presbyterian church building, at present owned by E. W. Doak. Mr. Clifton has found it necessary to return to his home at Roscommon, but the meetings will continue at the new location indefinitely. The relief army is entirely undenominational, and everyone is welcome. The Sunday school is well attended, and everything looks very encouraging, indeed.

Services will be held every evening at 7:30, and Sunday morning at 11:00. Sunday school at 10:00. The relief office is over Klenow's grocery, and the office hours from 4:30 to 7:00 p. m. Relief cases should be reported at the office. There is a real need for shoes and for boys' clothing. Major and Mrs. A. H. Gibbons are in charge of the work here.

Lee Tracy Featured in Unusual Comedy-Drama

"Turn Back the Clock," the latest Lee Tracy starring vehicle, coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, October 22-23-24, is comedy-drama of a most unusual sort.

Have you ever wondered what might have happened if you'd married the other girl—or boy—instead of the one you picked?

Lee Tracy, plugging along happily in a little cigar-store, with wife Mae Clarke helping, has occasion to ask himself this when his boyhood friend, Otto Kruger, shows up. Otto had married the other girl (Cecy Shannon), and is rich—also expensive. He offers to take Lee's savings and triple them—a proposition that, to Lee's disgust, Mae Clarke can't see.

So Lee gets himself a burr which is one of the finest bits of acting the screen ever has seen, collides with an automobile—and lo and behold, he gets his wish! Time turns back.

What riches do to him is another matter—you'll have to see the film to learn that. But you can take our word for it, what happens in all good, rapid-fire, punchy Lee Tracy stuff, with a fine cast helping out—C. Henry Gordon and George Barber, as well as those already mentioned. CHILDREN'S STORY

JERRY AND PETER TALK THINGS OVER

NOW that his house was finished Jerry Muskrat felt that he was entitled to a little rest. He had worked faithfully. Now he could enjoy the results. It certainly was a fine house. Peter Rabbit said so quite as if he were a judge of houses. You know any old tumbledown house some one else has given up will do for Peter.

"Yes," said Jerry, "it is a pretty good house. It is a better house than my old one. I am glad I have finished it. A house like that means a whole lot of hard work."

"I should say so!" exclaimed Peter. "I wouldn't work like that for the finest house that ever was."

Jerry Muskrat shook his head at Peter reprovingly. "Peter," said he, "you never look beyond your own nose, do you?"

"Why, of course I do," replied Peter. "If I didn't, how would I ever see anything?"

Jerry laughed. "I didn't mean that just that way," he explained. "I mean you never look ahead and plan for the future. Now you haven't prepared a single thing for the coming winter, have you?"

"No," replied Peter promptly. "Each day brings its own troubles and they are plenty, thank you. I don't see any use at all in worrying about things that may never happen. It is time enough to worry when there is something to worry about."

"Why, of course I do," replied Peter.

"Who is worrying?" demanded Jerry. "I'm not worrying. It is just to keep from having to worry that I have been working so hard. Now, you know, Peter Rabbit, that just as surely as you are sitting here on this bank you are going to have a hard winter. You are going to have hard work to get enough to eat; you are going to have hard work to get around in bad weather, and you are going to shiver with the cold."

"Maybe we won't have a bad winter," interrupted Peter.

"Now, I," continued Jerry, without heeding the interruption at all, "am going to be perfectly comfortable, no matter what kind of a winter we have. It won't make any difference to me how cold or how stormy the weather may get. It won't make that much difference." Jerry slapped the ground with his tail. "In that house is a nice, soft, comfortable bed of grass. Those walls are so thick the cold will not get through. Jack Frost will freeze the mud in the walls and roof so hard that none of my enemies can tear them open. I can swim about under the ice when I please. After I have rested a little I shall store up a few supplies of food in a storehouse I have provided in the bank. Then Jack Frost may come as soon as he pleases. All winter long I shall live in perfect ease and comfort and all because I have looked ahead and prepared for it by a little hard work now."

"Huh!" said Peter. Then at a sudden thought he added, "Do you have to lay up a store of food?"

"Oh, no," replied Jerry. "I don't have to. Usually, I can find enough roots and things in the mud at the bottom of the Smiling Pool."

"Then what do you do it for?" demanded Peter. "That's what I call a waste of time, not to mention the work."

"Nothing of the kind," retorted Jerry. "It is thrift. It is making sure in case I shouldn't be able to get all I need from the bottom of the Smiling Pool."

"Huh," said Peter. "Huh! I never do any work I don't have to."

"Which means that you haven't yet learned how to live," laughed Jerry Muskrat.

They Keep Tab on the Chiselers

GEN. THOMAS S. HAMMOND, in charge of compliance boards established throughout the nation by the NRA to check-up on those who chisel on the blue eagle, talks matters over with Miss Mary E. Hughes, head of the million and a half women of the country who have enrolled to help Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and President Roosevelt fight the battle of the depression. Among the duties of the army of women who report to Miss Hughes for commands is to secure the names of those who do not comply with promises made Uncle Sam when they signed up for the blue eagle. The black book in front of Miss Hughes and General Hammond may be turned over to General Johnson when the administrator of the NRA is ready to "crack down on the chiselers" as he promised he would do when the proper time comes.

IN THE correct backswing the left hand should push the club back. This in itself makes the left hand extend itself, keeping it traveling through the food chopper. Bring to a boil. Add one well-beaten egg, cook carefully to spreading consistency. Add cayenne and use as filling on any kind of bread.

Salmon Savory Sandwich.

Take a can of salmon, remove the skin and bones, add three hard-cooked egg yolks, two tablespoons of lemon juice, two tablespoons of chopped parsley, one-half cupful of cream salad dressing, salt and pepper to season. Mix well and spread on buttered whole wheat bread.

Cucumber and Onion Sandwich.

Peel and chop fine two firm cucumbers and grate two mild onions, add pepper, salt and a half teaspoonful of sugar. Place in a sieve to drain and chill in the ice chest. At serving time add French dressing, drain and mix with mayonnaise to spread. Serve on buttered whole wheat bread and garnish with stuffed olives.

Olive and Celery Sandwich.

Chop fifteen large olives, three stalks of celery and three sweet cucumber pickles, mix well and add three tablespoons of mayonnaise, one and one-half tablespoons of catsup and one-half teaspoonful of mustard. Use on thinly sliced white bread well buttered.

Pigs-in-a-Blanket Sandwich.

Select as many oysters as needed, take an equal number of slices of bacon, one green pepper chopped. Place the oyster on the bacon, sprinkle with chopped pepper, roll up and fasten with a toothpick. Pan broil in a hot frying pan. Place in a hot oven until ready to serve. Spread slices of bread lightly with mustard or any other mixture you prefer and serve the little pigs in between the slices.

FIRST OF ALL

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I HAVE a thousand things to do today, and one is writing you—Curtains to clean, and hang again, And then a little mending; then Take out a stain from that new dress, The one I wrote about (I guess)—It seems that every morning brings Around about a thousand things.

Now, some might say, "What shall it be The first of all?" It seems to me—Though curtains are important, and A stain is something I can't stand, And other things my eyes have met I haven't even mentioned yet—The first of all, of things to mend, Is separation from a friend.

I fear too many of us say, "I'll have to write to her some day"—Yet I know nothing, high or low, That ever needs attention so, (I'd hate to think you did a lot Of little things, with me forgot)—I have a thousand things to do, But first of all is writing you!

The desired "slow back" will then be more or less automatic for this motion itself requires a slower motion than would be the case if the right hand lifted the clubhead back. The extended left arm thus also insures a wider arc than would be the case if it were bent or broken at the elbow. It is this wide arc that adds considerable momentum to the clubhead as the speed is gradually increased on the downswing. Golfers should force the left arm to do the greater part of the swinging to insure a full extension of the left arm and the subsequent arc that means distance.

Oliver Goldsmith thought America was a wild country where he might run across a snake in the jungle or be detained by a tiger.

BONERS are actual humorous tid-bits found in examination papers, essays, etc., by teachers.

Thunder is clouds bumping together. Some insects have scales on their wings, for instance, a fish.

The Indians pursued their warfare by hiding behind trees and bushes and scalping them.

In a cold the blood gets congested and gives out information. There are no streets in Venice. All the streets are canals and people glide along in gorgonzolas.

BEAUTY TALKS

By MARJORIE DUNCAN

TO MAKE SPINE FLEXIBLE

A STIFF spine brings with it a multitude of evils. It hampers the functioning of the vital organs. It robs the step of its spring. It makes people look prematurely old.

Here are a few simple hints to help you limber up—make your spine more flexible, your body more supple and graceful. Don't go about it too strenuously. Take it easy at first. If you are physically able, and have the time, by all means go in for some sport suited to your age and general condition. But you can do all that is necessary, in the privacy of your home.

Here is an effective spine limberer: When you are wearing no restricting clothing, stand with your feet a few inches apart, soles flat on the floor. Imagine your soles positively glued to the floor. Leave all the rest of the body limp, ready to sway this way and that on the supporting soles. Lean over, letting the head and arms hang limp, fingers touching the floor as nearly as possible. Try to undulate the spine, try to wiggle it in waves so there will not be a single vertebra which has not felt the motion. Sway the limp body in every direction. Then stand erect and sway the body forward, backward, and to each side. Wriggle shoulders, loosely, up and down. If you find the exercise monotonous, turn on the radio and do it to music. It is more enjoyable then.

If your spine curves in too much at the waist line, try to limber that particular section. It is a condition called lordosis and is the result of tense, drawn nerves. Constant wearing of high-heeled shoes will cause it. The tensed nerves pull the spine in and this automatically pushes the abdomen forward in an ugly curve. Another ugly curve is formed across the back below the waistline. In the case of the too fat woman, the fat and the ugly curve combined produce a bustle effect that is ludicrous. These ugly lines may be corrected by the spine limbering exercises. The fat woman should wear medium heels or her daily walk will contract the good effect of her daily spine exercise.

When sitting, make sure that you sit well back in the chair, thighs filling the seat of the chair, back erect but not entirely straight and not rigid, feet flat on the floor, shoulders back, not tensed upward, head up and back, chin horizontal. Pull up—grow tall. Hold your head as though you were proud of something, and well you may be if your posture is correct and graceful.

When standing, remember head up, chest up, shoulders back, not up, head held high, toes pointing straight ahead, hands and arms relaxed at the sides.

AN AGE OF BEAUTY

IT'S an age of youth we're living in. And beauty is measured first in terms of good grooming and second in youthfulness. Because firm flesh is the rightful heritage of the "young uns"—it is also becoming to all ages. A firm, flowing, graceful line—that's youth and beauty—both. Few oldsters can boast it. Women especially. A shaking, wriggling little bulge here and there that boldly "tells the world"—"here I am to spoil youth's firmness" is no longer tolerated. Not by Miss Twenty. Not by Mrs. Sixty. Not by a far shot.

Corsets have made a come-back. But they aren't grandmother's kind. Nor mother's variety. If these were in vogue "before your time" you have only to look at the family album to see the effect. Straits—many of them—stiff-laces—they strait-jacketed the figure into something that looked more like an hour glass and less like a human, feminine figure.

Compare those bulky, heavy nuisances with the corsets of our day. Fashion is wise—and the corset manufacturers wiser. Witness the wonders they do with a bit of soft, porous, material. A reinforcement here, a clever cut there, a piece of elastic and you have a foundation garment. Light in weight, not at all cumbersome, no interference with breathing nor the proper functioning of the entire system. And the way these little scanties mold the figure is nothing short of magic. They disguise the flabby bulges, they give the figure a shapely, flowing line that speaks of youthful firmness. Best of all, they are priced so that every woman's purse can afford one.

I'm all for these little girdles, scanties and such—the new, light, clever kind. Not that I advocate covering bulges. Far be that from me. Those of you who have followed this column closely know that I am a stickler for exercise. More power to the young girl and young woman whose figure naturally is firm, bump-less and graceful. By all means exercise yourself back to youthful firmness. And while you are doing it—call in an ally in the form of the new little corsets.

Correct sitting posture is as important to health and beauty as correct standing posture. And poor sitting posture can cause constipation, indigestion, biliousness, nausea, headaches, poor appetite, sluggish liver and dozens of similar evils. Stand and sit erect and the muscles of the abdomen are in their proper positions and the digestive organs—stomach, liver, intestines—are receiving their requisite blood supply. Slouch and this circulation is impaired.

I don't know much; I can only muddle along, and make the best of my mistakes. About the best that may be said of any man is that he has done better than the average with his mistakes.

I can only muddle along, and make the best of my mistakes. About the best that may be said of any man is that he has done better than the average with his mistakes.

Howe About:

Wordsworth Success Easier Than Failure How Time Passes

By ED HOWE

I DO not like poets, but frequently admire a sentence they have written. Wordsworth wrote of "the mighty sum of things forever speaking." Here is sufficient brevity, originality and common sense, but as a rule poets color their product too highly, and prose suits me better than the jumbled way in which versifiers arrange their lines. The sentiment I quote from Wordsworth appeals to me because it is my natural way to pay constant attention to the mighty sum of things forever speaking. There are so many of these mighty voices clamoring to be heard, I can give each one only a few lines.

William Feather—I published this paragraph: "No man can go completely to the devil without a great deal of determination." . . . Ted Robinson, the newspaper columnist, retorted: "That's wrong. Some can go to the devil just by standing still." . . . I do not intend to let Mr. Robinson dismiss in a few words the most important practical philosophy ever formulated. E. W. Howe, of Kansas, says success is easier than failure, and has written much on this theme. . . . Consider the man who stands still on a sidewalk. He is jostled and cursed by those who are moving, and who want him to get out of the way. The most comfortable way to spend time on the sidewalk is to be going somewhere. Over-drinking, or over-indulgence of any kind, is followed by a headache. Over-spending or over-speculation is followed by the barking of creditors. Violation of the criminal law is followed by arrest and sentence to the workhouse. Every man who goes completely to the devil gets there by easy stages. At every turn he suffers more than the man who behaves himself. Never does he rise in the morning without a warning that unless he reforms, his troubles will increase. His wife scolds him, his employer threatens him, and his friends avoid him. It takes the strongest kind of will to ignore the signs on the road to hell, and to bear the cross of self-imposed failure. . . . Think about this, and you'll admit it is true: Success is easier than failure.

For several years, an hour before eating my one considerable meal of the day, I have had the habit of taking a swallow of tasteless mineral oil, in connection with a pinch of seaweed called agar. I suppose some one induced me to try it, and, as it did me no harm and some good, I continued it. Once I was at table with a quite noted doctor and health specialist, and said to him:

"Every noted man is pestered somewhat by those to whom he is introduced. I shall bother you with only a simple question." Then I outlined my habit, and asked:

"Is it a good idea?" "Well," the great man replied (he is upwards of eighty), "I do it." I pursued the inquiry no further; but what I started out to say is that time passes so rapidly when one is old that it seems to me now I take mineral oil every hour instead of every twenty-four.

As impressive reading as may be found in our American books concerns the fring on Fort Sumter, which started the Civil war. The battle lasted four days, and the exchange of shots from big guns between Northerners in the fort and Southerners on shore was tremendously noisy, impressive and smoky, yet not a man on either side was injured during the entire exhibition.

However, when the Yankees surrendered and retired from the fort, the Southerners, being brave men themselves, wished to honor the gallantry of their defeated foes (I have long observed that opposing fighters usually commend the bravery of each other).

So the Southerners attempted to fire a salute in honor of their foes, a big gun burst, and four gallant fellows were wounded.

Had the participants on both sides been engaged in their usual callings, I should not be laughing at them more than seventy years later.

When I go on the streets during the present depression, the people seem sufficiently sensible and efficient, but when I read of the doing of statesmen at Washington and state capitals, I bow my head and burst into tears. Surely I am right in saying our greatest blunders, our greatest cruelties, have been in war and statesmanship.

The reader is warned that my writing is that of an old man, and that nearly all old men are disposed to do too much grumbling. . . . Still, I do not believe I ever grumble at temperance, fairness, politeness, economy, thrift or any other habit the experience of all ages has recommended.

Shiftless women are not punished as promptly as shiftless men; I know plenty of shiftless women who are "getting along" well, but do not know a single shiftless man who is at all prosperous.

I don't know much; I can only muddle along, and make the best of my mistakes. About the best that may be said of any man is that he has done better than the average with his mistakes.

CODE AND HOME NOT IN UNISON

"New Deal" Some Problem to Housewife.

There's a good deal of talk about shorter working hours for the American housewife under the NRA, but I imagine that's about all it will ever amount to.

Every time we begin a new national enterprise, the patient home-body is promised something, and although she always gives her enthusiastic support, she gets very little relief. She's like the farmer. Life for her is more promise than pay.

But for that we shouldn't blame the President or General Johnson or the Brain Trust or any man or set of men. It's just our unfortunate fate. Daughters of Eve, you know, suffering the consequences.

Somehow codes and time clocks do not fit into our schemes of life. When the baby's formula must be ready and papa yells for more pancakes we can't stop to worry about whether we are complying with the New, or just lazily along under the Old Deal. Codes may come and codes may go, but housework goes on forever. And we don't work care. In fact, we rather like it.

We're going to do our full share to get this country back to sanity and prosperity, but we shall not commit ourselves too far as to rules that seek to regulate how and when we shall put out the wash or do up the dishes.

Homes can't be run like factories, and we wouldn't want them to be. So in spite of modern efficiency, we still like to loiter in the kitchen and to spend a whole afternoon cleaning out dresser drawers, or making a batch of fudge.

Home work has to have inspiration behind it; therefore we hate to be told we must not indulge our passion for cleaning house at unexpected moments or for moving the furniture when the urge hits us.

My heart has often bled for the overworked housewife. However, I'm still opposed to mamma knocking off when the clock strikes. The New Deal is grand and all that, but I have the feeling that we'll be better off in the long run with mother doing overtime, as usual.—Mrs. Walter Ferguson, in New York World-Telegram.

SUCH IS LIFE—And Such Is Life!

POULTRY FACTS

GET PULLETS INTO WINTER QUARTERS

Time to Prepare for Young Birds' Comfort.

Now is the time to make final preparations for the winter egg supply. It should be remembered, says a writer in the Missouri Farmer, that the great bulk of winter eggs come from pullets hatched last spring—assuming they were hatched early enough so that they are now practically mature—so while the older hens should not be neglected the poultryman should pay special attention to the pullets. Every effort should be exerted to bring them into laying at earliest opportunity. One of the important things to do is to get them into winter quarters. The chief reason for this is that if laying while on the range, these laying pullets are very apt to suffer a set-back when transferred to permanent quarters. Frequently this set-back is so serious that it precipitates a fall molt and the pullets may experience a winter or early fall molt just at the time when eggs are higher in price. One of the problems of the poultryman is to avoid this fall vacation and early housing will tend to reduce the danger of this trouble. The usual recommendation is to house the pullets when as many as 5 per cent of the flock are laying, but generally speaking from now on the earlier the pullets are housed the better. By early housing the pullets become adjusted to their new quarters before starting in on their year of production and in addition they will probably be less susceptible to fall colds which always cut down production.

In the housing of pullets emphasis should be placed in the preparation of the winter quarters. First of all plans should be made to house the pullets in separate houses or pens as pullets fail to make satisfactory development if mixed with older hens. The presence of older hens not only exposes the pullets to diseases to which the hens may have become immune and yet may be able to transmit to the pullets in which immunity has not been established. Then, too, there is always the danger of the pullets becoming infested with external parasites. Again the presence of old hens causes the pullets to be reluctant in frequenting the feed hoppers and consequently with limited feed consumption growth and maturity are retarded.

Vaccination Advisable to Stave Off Fowl Pox

Fowl pox of chickens is a disease that affects the poultryman's pocket-book, for infected birds lay few eggs, and if the chicken's mouth and eyes are infected, the bird may die, according to Dr. C. C. Ellis of the New York state college of veterinary medicine. When pullets recover from fowl pox, as many do, they are immune from further attack. Doctor Ellis says vaccination is desirable where flocks had fowl pox last year; vaccination is probably not desirable if the flock has never suffered an attack of fowl pox; but to be certain to avoid the disease this fall and winter, he suggests vaccination as a preventive measure. It is advisable to vaccinate while the birds are still on range. Flocks that are affected with coccidiosis, worms, or any other diseased condition will likely suffer some losses. The vaccine is applied by first removing several feathers from the front part of one leg and then applying the vaccine with a small brush.

Capacity of the Hen

Until 20 years ago plain poultry keepers and scientists alike held the view that every hen came into the world with the possible number of eggs she might lay in her lifetime definitely fixed. No one knows who first promulgated this idea, or what reason he gave for it. Some say it got into circulation and was everywhere accepted without question. The utmost capacity of a hen was believed to be not more than 700 to 800.

POULTRY HELPS

Plowing up the ground helps to rid the soil of disease germs and intestinal worms.

Vitamin G is deficient in some poultry rations and such deficiency causes low hatchability of the eggs produced.

An extra quantity of green feed, such as chopped green alfalfa or Jersey kale, will darken the color of yolks of eggs and improve their quality.

Rigid culling throughout the growing season cuts the cost of raising chicks and lowers the mortality among them.

Chopped alfalfa hay and skimmed milk are potent sources of vitamin G and their inclusion in a ration for laying hens is recommended.

Three varieties of the Guinea fowl are known in America, the pearl, the white, and a patchy mixture of pearl and white. In Italy, it is said, there are some twelve color varieties.

Unwise to Break Faith With Child

Promises and rewards are two closely allied measures made use of by parents to stimulate and encourage their children in good conduct and in their schooling or chosen work during undergraduate days. Used wisely, they are potent factors in securing the desired ends and reactions. It sometimes happens, however, that promises are forgotten. The child either may not get what he has worked to attain because the promise may have been given so long before its object was attained, that it has slipped the memory of the parent although it has remained a vivid factor in the child's application and endeavors. Not only is a child discouraged by such forgetfulness, but worse than this, he loses faith in his parent. He (or she) does not keep his word.

The child may make a fuss about it. If so the parent often gets annoyed and states that now, anyway, the child cannot get the reward—whatever it was, for it is forfeit by the behavior. In reality the child has justice on his side, for a forgotten promise is none the less binding when once it has been made, even though memory has grown dim. If the child is silent, the lasting effect of loss of faith in a parent's word is even worse. The child can be promised anything thereafter and it will fall on unheeding and disbelieving ears. Not only is the parent's word discounted, but the word of all persons, since parents typify the best, to their offspring.

Attaining an unearned reward is another danger to be shunned. When parents make promises dependent upon some special action or attainments and then give the award without regard to success of the child in whatever it is offered for, the parents lose their grip on the child.

Reciprocity is absolutely essential when there are promises of awards. The child must be kept faith with. The promise must be remembered. It cannot be so lightly given or regarded that it becomes inconsequential to the person making it. Parents must beware of how they make promises, but having made them, they must stand. So essential is this that no reward should be given unless it has been earned. The success of a child in later years may rest on his ability to fulfill conditions in his youth. He gets to be a spoiled child, otherwise, and one who has little respect for laws when he is an adult.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

A striped paper makes a ceiling appear higher than it really is and is excellent to use in low-studded rooms.

The selection of wall paper best suited to the rooms of a dwelling is not a matter to be given slight consideration. The design is of major importance, no less than the color. The exposure of any specific room is a guide to color for it. The size and shape of the room is a guide to correct choice of pattern. The exposure of a room signifies its position in relation to the points of the compass. A room in the north part of a house is said to have a northern exposure. One in the southwest part of the house, that is one with windows on south and west so that light comes from both sides, is said to have a southwest exposure, etc. Because light from the north is cold, it should influence the selection of paper for a room with windows on the north side, which let in no sunlight, or practically none.

Select Paper That Will Reflect the Light.

According to the exposure of the room in connection with the amount of sunlight it gets, is it cold or warm in its natural lighting? It should have wall treatment to counterbalance either a lack of sunlight or a flood of it. These are the reasons why a north, northeast, or northwest room should have a warm paper, while a south, southeast, or southwest room does not require it. The most pronounced warm colors are yellow suggesting sun and red suggesting fire. But, since red is an inflaming and irritating color in proportion to its intensity, it has to be handled with care when used for decorative purposes. Yellow, on the other hand, is stimulating rather than irritating and shades, tints, and tones, of it can be successfully employed on walls.

Proportions of Room

It is not the exposure, but the size and shape of a room, as mentioned before, which determine the style of design or pattern to have in a paper. The reasons for this are geometric. They have to do with counter-balancing of high or low ceilings and the proportions of wall and floor space. The pattern of a wall paper can subtly make a room appear high or low studded, and larger or smaller than it actually is.

A wall paper with stripes makes a ceiling seem to be higher because of the upright lines which tend to make the vision follow their perpendicular extension. A wall paper with a pattern which tends to make the eye follow lines across a wall, lowers the apparent height of a ceiling. This is not so boldly done as in the instance of striped paper but there are many wall papers in which the repetition of the design is so cleverly planned that the eye follows it along horizontal lines.

The two points considered today, color and design in their broad application, are of primary importance. They are of first consideration.

The Fear of Death

By

LEONARD A. BARRETT

The three major fears may be classified as death, poverty and disease.

The fear of death, while not the most important or most serious, is perhaps more common than the other two. The fear of poverty and disease seems to attack those in more mature life, while the fear of death manifests itself to persons of almost all ages. While the less dangerous from a psychological point of view, the fear of death is the most terrible. Persons shudder at the thought of it and a superstition still clings to many circumstances connected with the experience. Some persons still believe it is a sign of approaching death for one to see in a mirror the form of a dead person; or, to pass between carriages in a funeral procession is an ill omen.

Much of this fear would doubtless be dispelled if we could only understand just what does happen in the event of death. It is not a case in which, "Who knows what dreams may come," or, a condition of semi-material existence afterward. Death is the most natural experience in the world. Just what happens in all material life, occurs in the physical, when the tissue breaks down. Death occurs when the body ceases to function. When the mind, or soul, passes on, the body is of no more value than its component parts of lime, water, etc., all of which parts, when measured in dollars and cents, is not even worth a dollar, only 98 cents. Strange that we should exalt the body when it is of so little value. Place a true value upon the body and one of the causes for fear of death will have been removed.

The fear of death will also be dispelled if we think of it more as a transition than a finality. Death is only the passing of the personality from one state of existence into another. It does not mark the end of things, in truth it is the beginning of a larger and more beautiful life. Immortality is being proved true today, not only by teachers of religion; but, the latest discoveries in the field of science attest the reality of an immortal world. Death cannot destroy those things we love any more than it can destroy love itself. "Love is stronger than death," said the wise man of long ago.

A wonderful journey into a world of spiritual realities seems as though it might be heartily welcomed for those whose race is run. Why fear?

Martyrs of Medicine Make Up a Long Roll

Not All Great Heroes Made on Battlefield.

Washington.—Three scientists in the medical forces seeking to solve the mystery of sleeping sickness have submitted to bites from mosquitoes which previously had bitten victims of this exotic malady. Their purpose is to determine whether insects carry the infection.

Of the particular sort of peril to which these unknown men are subjecting themselves at St. Louis, where sleeping sickness has caused about ninety deaths, the classic modern examples are those of Father Damien, who went among the lepers, and the doctors who offered themselves for the experiments in Cuba to find a way to control yellow fever.

No Hippocratic oath was involved; no soldierly obligation. The army had released Cuba from Weyerism and was aiding it to set up as a republic. Yellow fever broke out. Surgeon General Sternburg, U. S. A., ordered a commission of American officers to investigate. Dr. Walter Reed, major in the Medical corps, headed it; other commissioned members were Dr. James Carroll, years before a private; Dr. Jesse William Lazear and a Cuban, Dr. Aristide Agramonte. Doctor Lazear, a Baltimorean, died from the test.

Yellow Fever Fight.

As early as 1848, Dr. J. C. Nott of Tulane university stated the hypothesis that yellow fever was transmitted by an insect. In 1881 Dr. Carlos Finlay of Havana accused specifically the mosquito. But the guilt of the mosquito had not been proved. First to submit to bites in the army investigation was Doctor Carroll. He was severely stricken with yellow fever, but recovered.

Doctor Lazear applied to himself the mosquitoes that had infected Doctor Carroll. No results. One day a mosquito lit on his hand. He let it do its work. Five days later he was seized with yellow fever. It raged through his system and in ten days he was dead. Reed had been to Washington to report and returned after this death to obtain further confirmation that the mosquito, stegomyia fasciata, was the transmission agent. Privates John J. Moran and John R. Kissinger volunteered. They had enlisted to fight for the Stars and Stripes; now the "black vomit" was attacking their comrades and had killed Doctor Lazear. Said Major Reed: "Gentlemen, I salute you."

They were isolated. Kissinger was bitten by five mosquitoes and developed a typical case of yellow fever. He recovered. Moran and others went through the same ordeal; all survived. From Cuba to Panama.

What the commission and its volunteer subjects had learned fulfilled the task assigned. As a result of measures enforced thereafter throughout Cuba by Gen. Leonard Wood and Maj. William Gorgas, not a single case appeared there in 1902. Gorgas took the knowledge gained to Panama, and while the canal was being constructed, banished the age-long tropic agony and left the Canal Zone a health resort. The frightful epidemics which had decimated cities became things of the past.

Exploration, struggles for liberty, religious persecution, industrial processes, aviation developments and the practice of healing, all have had martyrs, but the martyrs of medical experiment are of another category. In the 1798 epidemic of yellow fever in New York sixteen out of the forty physicians then listed lost their lives, "martyrs to their calling." It was in the course of practice. The three volunteers in the sleeping sickness experiment, outside the line of professional duty, are taking a double risk. If they get the disease, they can expect no relief—there is no known cure.

Around the County

Most of the teachers in the county are attending the meetings sponsored by the Michigan Education Association this week.

Hunters report that there seems to be an abundant supply of game birds this year.

A large number of replacements have arrived for the various C. C. C. camps.

It is estimated that the price of farm produce has risen 32% while the cost of living has risen 9%. This should be a "break" for the farmer.

The recent rains have been a great help to the forestry program.

The N. R. A. has proven to be very beneficial in relieving the unemployment situation in the county.

Blind Readers Get Books

Books in braille for reading by the blind are made by women under Red Cross direction. Last year 2,813 such books were produced in single copy and 3,538 in double copies. Fiction, biography, history, economics and school books were among those printed in braille. The Red Cross gives them to libraries for free distribution to blind readers.

THE ARRAN ISLANDS

Arran Boys in Red Petticoats.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WHILE many business men of America and Europe talk of ushering in a new era to end economic ills, the inhabitants of the Arrans, three small islands off Ireland's west coast, go their way, apparently untouched by the world's troubles.

Simplicity, harmony, and a feeling of remoteness are all close to the root of the charm which the Arrans have for the occasional visitor. The islands seem not of this age, for the workaday world lies beyond the horizon of time as well as that of space.

The beauty of the setting and of the human picture are equally unconscious. There is a unity in the theatrical panorama of sea and sky, the medieval homeliness of speech and hearth and tool, the honest weave as well as the madder and indigo dye of textiles, the seraphic countenance of every fourth or fifth woman you meet on the undulating roads.

In the bare sanctuary of these islands the soul of ancient Ireland now has its ephemeral resting place. Language and habiliments, customs, traditions, flesh and blood, from the days of St. Patrick and before, forced westward through Connacht during seething ages, have concentrated at the Arrans.

Although the largest island of the group is less than nine miles long, the three together have, at a guess, as much stone wall as all New England. Fishman, the middle island, boasts 2,500 miles of walls. Inishkeer is not far behind, while Inishmore may have several times as much. No figures are authentic, but if a state ordinance officer were to tell you there are 10,000 miles of walls upon the three islands, you would admire his conservatism.

Huge Duns on the Hill.

Picking up blocks of limestone and disposing of them in the only way possible must always have been the chief occupation of the inhabitants. The prehistoric people indulged themselves by rearing on the hilltops massive, buttressed, Cyclopean forts, such as Dun Aengus and six others, ringed about with many concentric breastworks and chevaux-de-frise of stone.

These duns are among the most magnificent barbaric monuments that survive in Europe. Fortunately, the later islanders were under no temptation to pull them down; rather, they were forced to emulate the example of the first builders, and to continue the unmortared masonry on a less heroic scale down the long slopes to the very crests of the beaches. Only thus might they hope to uncover a crannied pasture and the patches of soil in which rye, potatoes, cabbage, and willow withes may grow.

From the rims of the duns, as also from the sea, the Arrans present the pattern of a crazy quilt. Breast-high walls, mostly a single layer of blocks in thickness, show no standard of arrangement or direction. The thousands of irregular inclosures that come under a glance have neither gates nor stiles. The method of turning a cow into pasture, and of releasing her at evening, is to take down a section of the boundary and then to build it up again behind you. A cross-country ramble, even for the nimble, becomes a process of demolition and stone-laying.

The present population of the Arrans is less than two thousand. Losses through emigration to the United States have been heavy and are still going on as fast as passage money can be sent from this side of the ocean. There are doubtless many more of the islanders in the vicinity of Boston than remain at home.

Everybody, at any rate, has relatives in America, and the only importunities one encounters are those of lonely mothers and fathers begging snapshot portraits to be sent to the far-off children. Not a few of the expatriates return, with or without their fortunes; for the grip of the spray-washed rocks seems stronger, if possible, than that of the fairest glens in Erin. If only one could make a living at home!

While there are many family names among the people of the islands, the bulk of the population appears to be made up of four tribes—the Mullins, the Gills, the Flahertys, and the Connollys.

Four Main Tribes.

All of these names except Gill are spelled in more than one way, but are acknowledged to refer to the same stocks. Confusion that might result from the duplication of first names is commonly avoided by the addition of the father's given name. Thus Patrick Flaherty John or James Mullin William become sufficiently distinctive. These are here cited in English form, but Irish is, of course, the universal speech among the islanders, and there are many of all ages who have little or no English.

The Arran people are, on the whole, a fine looking lot, variable in stature and complexion, but showing a strongly marked Norse component. Furthermore, their generally deliberate conversation is after the manner of the comic-story Norseman rather than of the proverbially quick Celt, although much of this may be due to the fact that they address a stranger in their second and less familiar language.

The clothing worn by the older inhabitants of Inishmore, and by practically the entire population of the less urbane islands of Inishman and Inishkeer, is the time-honored garb of cloudy blue homespun, with ankle-length trousers for the men, and a white-sleeved coat over the blouse. A hat of heavy felt completes the native costume, but many of the younger men have taken to caps or tam-o'-shanters, as well as to the blue jersey of the fisherman.

The women wear long, red, homespun petticoats, indigo stockings, and red or parti-colored shawls. Taste and utility are combined in the woven woolen girdles, of bright hues, bound several times around the waists of men and boys or sewn as a decoration on the skirts of the women.

Except in the sophisticated parts of Inishmore, within a few miles of Kilroan, the dress of small boys includes a red petticoat in lieu of breeches. At fishman one sees nothing else. Formerly the boys wore these until they were twenty or so, but now one sees them on youngsters of more than fifteen years.

The boys' skirt is, no doubt, a phase of the Gaelic kilt, surviving in shorter and more familiar form in the Scottish Highlands, but at the Arrans it seems to have become necessary to justify it by a spurious explanation. Probably as a result of innumerable inquiries by visitors, the following story is now passed out as a matter of course:

The fairies or the commonplace devil have the power to lure small boys out of the everyday world, but their influence over little girls is much less. Therefore the boys are rigged out like girls and the evil ones are likely to be deceived, although there is no absolute assurance of safety.

What the Houses Are Like.

The dwellings on all three Arrans are of the usual Irish peasant type, built of cemented stone, whitewashed within and without, and roofed with thatch, flagstones, or slate shingles. Nine out of ten are thatched, and in this land of ocean gusts the straw is laced down with a network of cordage, the vertical strands of which are knotted to a line of pegs under the eaves. The pegs themselves are of limestone, forming units of the wall; for wood, even in small pieces, is at a premium.

The houses may have two, three, or even more rooms. At any rate, there will be the kitchen (the living room of the family) and a bedroom opening from it.

Above half of the kitchen is the inevitable turf loft, where sufficient peat is stored so that dry fuel is always at hand. The appurtenances of the kitchen include a pot-oven among the fireplace gear, and an open cupboard in which are ranged the treasured Canton plates, the trenchers, luster jugs, and other ware passed along from one generation to the next.

The cupboard, like the beds, is likely to be painted in a pattern of bright colors.

Now! A Quicker Way to Ease Pain

Don't Forget Real Bayer Aspirin Starts "Taking Hold" in Few Minutes

Here is quicker relief from pain—the fastest safe relief, it is said, ever known. This is due to a scientific discovery by which BAYER Aspirin starts "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass here tells the story. A Bayer tablet starts to disintegrate or dissolve—go to work—almost instantly. This means quick relief from pain—fewer lost hours from headache, neuritis, rheumatism. And safe relief. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

When you buy, see that you get the genuine Bayer Aspirin. The best way is never to ask for aspirin by the name "aspirin" alone. But if you want Bayer Aspirin's quick relief always to say "BAYER Aspirin."

Life's Span Shortened by White House Cares?

Is the life span of our Presidents growing less? Our office mathematician says that it is, after he had made some lightning calculations; so let us take a look at his figures.

The average age of our first ten Presidents at the time of their death averaged a little more than seventy-seven years. Then ten Presidents taken from the center of the list, beginning with Harrison and ending with Hayes, give us an average of slightly over sixty-seven years. Now we take the last ten deceased rulers and we find that their average amounts to around sixty-four years. In this list, our demon mathematician did not take into consideration any of the Presidents that met with violent death.

Our figure wizard says that he compared the ages of ten business men of the same period as our first Presidents and found that their average life span was around seventy-five years, while ten men of recent years averaged around seventy years. These men were all selected at random (and he failed to tell us their names).

These figures may mean little or much, but at any rate they are most interesting. If it is a fact that being the head of our nation is too much strain, then the practice of the present President in selecting as his aids, the learned men of the country's universities is certainly worth watching. They cannot do his worrying but they can lift a big load from his shoulders.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Why the Sudden Change to Liquid Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be controlled.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists. Member N. R. A.

CHAPTER XIII

All night long the Lost People of the Isle mourned their priestess. The allens' left them to their grief, but the wind brought their eerie cries and lamentations, and the firelight showed their dark forms as they danced slowly and solemnly about her bier. Some of the ceremonies were barbarous from Eric's viewpoint, part of the ancient ritual of shamanism, but he only shut his ears and looked the other way. The old men embalmed her body according to her priestly station—an Aleut rite of which Roy had heard, but which he thought had passed from the earth—and when the tide ran out, the hunters carried the bier to its place in the sea-caves.

When Eric had revived, he and Roy searched for the sacred document handed down from Fireheart's Russian ancestor, the founder of her dynasty. They found it in a seal-hide packet, written with some native ink on fine, home-made parchment. The ink had faded, the white skin darkened by time, but the script was still clear.

"Why can't Petroff translate it?" Eric asked, tensely.

"No reason in the world," Roy said. "Like most of these revolutionary coves, he's something of a scholar. Thank God he survived the meleé—otherwise we'd be no better off than the Aleuts."

Eric found Petroff roaming the village row. His red passions had cooled, and he was glad to be of service to his conquerors and make peace at any terms. In the flickering light of Horton's turf-house, surrounded by tense, drawn faces, he translated quickly and easily the message from the past.

Yes, it was big medicine:

"June, 1795.

"For any of my countrymen and faith who come after me, my prayers. "After many years of patient effort, I have learned the route across the shoals to Ignak Island, now taboo. I have native children and I cannot go, but I record it for other castaways, lest it be utterly lost.

"It is shorter than the northern pass, through which I drifted. The time to go is in the early fall—the currents are less strong at this time of year, and the days clearer, although there is great danger of sudden storms.

"Paddle south for seven hours. You will see ahead a line of barrier reefs. Make to them boldly; five shiplengths away you will strike a strong current sweeping southwest. Do not fight against it, but paddle with it for three hours. Soon you will pass a great arch of rock. When you see the light full through its opening, turn south again and paddle for your life. A mile beyond will find you in the open sea, only four hours paddle to Ignak harbor.

"Be sure the shamans prophesy clear weather before you go. Start well before dawn, so that you will find the harbor while the light still lingers.

"It is a perilous journey, but by the blessing of our Lady of Kazan and Saint Michael and Saint George, you may win through.

"Adieu
"Paul Golikof."

Petroff's voice died away. In the long silence Nan saw old-time strength of purpose flow back into Eric's haggard face. But Roy was the first to speak.

"The old chap had more confidence in native weather prophets than I have. It would be sweet to get over there on the shoals and strike a fog."

Eric raised his eyes to Nan's. "We'll try it, anyhow."

"When?" It was half a whisper, half a gasp.

"Tomorrow night. There's usually a week of good weather after a boonga, and all the signs say so." He spoke with an echo of his old power. "We'll go in the two three-hatch kayaks—Petroff, Chechaquo, and myself in one—Bill, Big Smith, and Cooky in the other. There'll be nothing to fear from the men, except that they may desert. Big Smith will have to get back to find Little Smith, and I'll make terms with the other two."

"They may not be willing to go," Horton said.

"They'll go—if you promise to forget what's happened," Petroff said. "We've all been crazy, partly the island, mostly Sandomar and Garge, but we're sane now."

"With any luck, we'll be in civilization by next full moon." Eric's eyes closed wearily, and his blond head dropped on his breast. "Now let me sleep."

He flung down on the fur rugs. When he opened his eyes again, the sun of his last day on Forlorn Island was high in the sky.

Preparations were made swiftly. These included food and water in the boats and money in Eric's pocket, concealed from his comrades. "I'm going to give you a check, too, for a substantial amount," Horton said in decisive tones. "It will do wonders toward getting a relief ship here, in the quickest possible time."

Eric decided to start before midnight, to meet the reefs as soon as possible after dawn. Every hour of clear weather was precious beyond all the checks in Horton's little book. So it came that the honeymoon did not shine yet for him and Nan, and only too likely—there were thick clouds below the southern horizon—it would never rise at all.

Nan did not return to the broken nest. She and Eric spent their farewell hour in her father's hut. Her friends had gone to the beach, but she was not alone with her lover. There were ghosts in every corner watching every move she made . . . shadows of the future . . . wraiths of fear. Her arms were bound.

Everything was changed. When Eric drew her close she kissed him gently, and shook her head to the pleading in his eyes. "It's too late," she whispered. "Everything must wait till we get back to earth. We're just waking up from a long dream." She smiled wistfully. "You won't blame me, Eric . . ."

"Your happiness comes first. Mine would be a poor love, not to concede that." He stood back and adored her, the lovely rounded contours of her dark head, her dusky hair flowing, her pointed hazel eyes lustrous in their long black lashes. "I only wish I had taken you when I had the chance."

"Perhaps I'll wish so too—when you are gone." She spoke in low, somber tones.

"Ignak Island!"

"If you're lost out there on the shoals and I never see you again, I'll always hate myself, for a fool and a coward."

"It hasn't been cowardice. That much is sure. You're the bravest girl I've ever known, and you just couldn't bear to surrender to Forlorn Island, and so to me." He kissed her eyes, forehead, lips. "I'm coming back to you, Nan. I haven't gone through so much just to drown in the shoals; that would be too mean an end to all this. But if fate did play such a trick, I'd want you to have no regrets. You've followed your own star, and kept faith. And you've justified my life."

It seemed only a moment later that they were clinging together in farewell.

The parting at the beach was one of the high moments of the whole adventure. Weeping openly, Mother Horton clasped Eric in her lean arms; and her son's voice was hoarse as he said goodby. Roy wrung his hand and clapped him affectionately on the back; Marie kissed him with Gallic fire. Even the Aleuts were moved. He had finally won their full, savage devotion; they crowded around him, grunting, and presenting little tokens, colored shells and ivory figures, to bring him good luck. The five survivors of Sandomar's crew kept to themselves, but they shared in the hand-shaking at the last.

With a tortured breast, Nan saw Eric board his little ship. It seemed heartbreaking to have him depart at night, in the cheerless gleam of the moon, with naught to guide him through the dark wastes but a pocket compass and the far cold glimmer of the stars. Yet his purpose held. Already he was dipping his blade. Before she found breath to plead with him, at least to call him back for a last kiss, his form was dimming in the shadows. Soon, so soon, there was nothing left but the wan glimmer of the paddles in the moonlight, and this too faded away.

"Goodby, goodby," her friends were shouting into the dark. "Good luck! Come back safe!"

And back across the water came Eric's voice, full and strong. "Goodby, goodby! Keep a stiff upper lip! I'll be back before you know it."

Then naught was left but the night, the lapping combers, the spectral moon, and she and her friends forsaken on the strand.

Eric kept his course. The breeze was favorable and the waves moderate. It was as though his old mother, convinced at last of his worth, had turned gentle. An unknown star in the southern sky guided him true.

Hour after hour the paddles dipped, while the moon sailed stately overhead. The two boats kept pace. The only sound was the moaning voices of the sea; an occasional water-bird starting up with a cry, and, at long intervals, a few quiet words between the paddlers. The stars began to pale; Eric had to trust more and more to the small compass fastened on the walrus-hide deck before him. At last the dark eyelid of the sky rolled back, and her blue iris glimmered through.

Just before sunrise, precisely seven hours after they had embarked, they heard breakers roaring ahead. So Paul Golikof had written—and the voyagers' hearts were cheered. But it was not easy to beat on toward the tide-rips and undertows of the shoals. If they went too far, the reefs would make short shift of their flimsy shells. But Golikof's directions bore out again. When they were two hundred yards from the rocks—five shiplengths of Golikof's time—the paddlers began to feel a strong drift to the southwest. It was like a river running in the ocean. Eric's reckoning as a navigator had often been put to naught by the mysterious currents around the Aleutian islands, unexplained save by the meeting of the warm north Pacific with icy Bering sea, but he had never met so distinct a stream as this. Paddling boldly, he ran before it.

Fully nine miles an hour they swept along the shoals. Soon the stream widened and lost power, but even when the tide turned, it continued to bear them to the southwest. And now Chechaquo grunted, and pointed with his hand.

South by southwest they raised a pale blue shadow on the sky line. It was not fog, not a wisp of cloud, not a trick of the eyes, but surely land-fall—the furthest outpost of Nan's lost world.

"Ignak Island!" Chechaquo muttered, deep in his throat.

Eric did not look at him, but he knew that his eyes glowed like black pearls. . . . Home, and all that it meant to his child's heart. Sweet food and strong drink from the trading store. The greeting of his hunting mates. His return to his old place by the cooking-fires. . . . And he did not dream that the strong young hunters would now be patriachs squatting in the dark corners of the turf-huts—that his firm-fleshed round-armed squaw had wasted to a stooped and withered crone—that his own children would not even remember his name.

The boats sped on. Eric began to watch for a natural arch of stone. Presently he picked it up, a great dome looming among shoals, with the sea running in its hollow, he turned south straight across the current. And just as Golikof had bade them, he and his mates paddled for their lives.

It was an experience to raise even Chechaquo's coarse, straight hair. The breakers roared, the reefs rushed to attack, fangs bared and snarling, only to swerve aside and sweep impotently behind; rocking, pitching, bounding up like sword-fish, the boats sped far down the current toward the fatal shoals below the pass. But when the paddlers' breath was spent and their loins ached, they saw the open sea rolling beyond.

Eric cheered them on with a shout. Their blades hacked and gleamed; boldly they charged the last rank of the enemy, a long line of wild, white horses with flowing manes. The wicked chop of the seas began to change to a long, gentle swell. Davy Jones' shoal roared in thwarted rage behind them.

Nothing but a sudden gale could stop them now—and no cloud was in sight. They ate their dried meat, passing it from hand to hand, drank from the water casks, and paddled wearily on. The bluffs of Ignak island began to take form.

And now Eric divined that the great adventure of his life would soon pass. Fate is a master playwright and she would provide a quick curtain for this drama of the North. As Ignak harbor opened before him, he saw what looked like three little black sticks standing in the blue.

The trading ship was in.

CHAPTER XIV

The skipper of the Chelsea, little, auxiliary schooner out from Seattle to trade with the Aleutian and Kuril islands, gave no greeting as the two kayaks paddled alongside, but his eyes opened. Like most sailors, his extra senses were keenly developed, and even now he knew that here was a tale to tell on lonely decks for the remainder of his life. White faces were not common in these waters. The kayakers were of a primitive type he had never seen before—and they came from the direction of Davy Jones' shoal.

When the boats were fast, Eric came up the ladder to the deck. "I'm Ericson, first officer of the Intrepid."

"Of de—wat?" Captain Nelson demanded.

"The Intrepid," Eric repeated patiently. "She was lost early in the summer."

Nelson stared hard. This was bigger news than he had imagined. "I hear about her. She was suppose to go down wit' all hands. De papers been full of her."

"Captain Waymire and nearly half the crew went down. The survivors are marooned on an island in Davy Jones' shoal." Eric drew a deep breath. "I want to arrange for you to go in and get them."

"But—but—" the old Dane stammered and stuttered—"dare's no way to get into Davy Jones' shoal!"

"We've been there—with the Intrepid. She draws more water than you. The pass from the north is safe unless you hit a gale. Of course if you don't want to try it I'll wireless for a coast guard cutter, but the passengers are in a hurry, and you can name your own figure."

Nelson came of a thrifty race. Moreover, it was his life to poke the Chelsea's nose into uncharted waters and unknown harbors, where the big tramps dared not venture. He suggested that Eric come to his cabin. There, over two glasses, they talked tersely and to the point.

Want Mantis to Prey on Beetles

The species of praying mantis that is being offered to the American Museum of Natural History by scores of persons who believe the giant insect is a rarity, is said to have been introduced into the United States by way of Philadelphia. The big predatory clown is far from rare, and though the praying mantis is of color and shape that makes it difficult to find, it is often seen hereabouts in positions suggesting a designed pose.

The world has some 800 species of mantis, and there are about 20 species in the United States. The Chinese variety is several inches long and when watching for its game looks like something a child or whimsical adult might have fashioned, in jocular mood, from hairpins and cellophane, with a thin coat of green added to match the foliage.

The forelegs are folded as if the creature held deep religious feelings, but the fervor is merely appetite, the position one of stealthy lurking for prey. And the mantis is a ready fighter, too, after the boxer's manner, when a desired luncheon puts up a scrap of the inedible sort.

The Chinese praying mantis, which can clown, and will if invited, by rolling its head all the way around, eats good and bad insects alike, but Philadelphiaans wish he would set himself to devour billions of Japanese beetles.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Mother Takes a Holiday AND DAUGHTER DOES THE WASH IN HALF THE TIME

Cuts Out All Boiling, Scrubbing, Rubbing Soaks Clothes Clean In 15 Minutes!

DIRT SOAKED OUT LIKE MAGIC BY AMAZING NEW LAUNDRY SOAP

Ends Forever All Scrubbing And Boiling—Works Faster Than Any Soap Known Before—Yet Can't Harm Hands, Clothes, Or Colors

HERE is a new scientific soap development that has already revolutionized washdays in more than a million homes. A creation so amazing that women everywhere are asking—"Will the wonders of science never cease?"

An utterly new-type laundry soap. A soap that multiplies itself 500 TIMES in suds. Which means you get at least twice as much suds as from old-style soaps. A still faster-washing, still whiter-washing soap that's utterly SAFE for colors, fabrics, and hands.

This remarkable new discovery is called OXYDOL. And you will find to your surprise that even your favorite soap—whether "granulated," bar, or flake—is hopelessly out-of-date, compared with this new invention!

Women believed they had the fastest soap already. Then found it was slow, alongside OXYDOL. For OXYDOL utterly banishes boiling. It ends washboard scrubbing. It cuts soaking time to 15 minutes—gets clothes out hours sooner. They believed they had the whitest washes they could possibly get. And are now amazed by washes 4 to 5 shades whiter than before. By impartial scientific test, ONE washing with OXYDOL gets clothes whiter than 2 to 4 washes with other soaps. But that's not all!

They find clothes actually last longer, washed with this new soap. That the faintest colors do NOT fade. That it is easier on hands than any soap they've ever used. For no strong agents, no chemical bleaches are in OXYDOL. Just pure soap elements blended with others that protect clothes against fade. OXYDOL simply can't hurt anything clear water won't!

DISSOLVES Dirt—In Any Water, Hard Or Soft
Its creamy, "free-acting" suds dissolve dirt out in 15 minutes. No boiling, no back-breaking scrubbing is necessary. Nor any "water-softener," either. For the right amount of water-softener is already there.

ECONOMICAL
By actual test, a regular 25c package of Oxydol will do the work of 8 to 10 cakes of bar soap—or 2 to 3 times as much flakes.

Multiplies Itself 500 TIMES In Suds
