Will Rogers Is A Kindly Vagabond in Latest Film

Backed by an impressive cast that is headed by Will Rogers, "Too Busy To Work," the celebrated wit's latest picture will be shown at the Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City, on Friday and Saturday, October 27 and 28.

The story of "Too Busy To Work" revolves around the adventures of a philosophical and kindly vagabond and his search for his daughter, whom his unfaithful wife took with her when she ran away with a more aristocratic man while he was away fighting in the war.

He finds her living luxuriously and in love, and rather than make her unhappy by revealing himself to her, he goes on his wandering way, contented by the thought that she is enjoying blessings that he could scarcely provide for her. While Rogers is said to be accorded more than the usual number of chances for witty comments, his role is also highly sympathetic.

Marian Nixon, who scored successfully in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" and "Amateur Daddy," portrays the leading feminine role, dividing the love interest with Dick Powell, a newcomer to the screen who made his debut in "Blessed Event."

Others in important roles are Constantine Romanoff, Douglas Cosgrove, Louise Beavers and Jack O'Hara.

School Notes

High School

All should remember the Senior benefit show, "Midshipman Jack," at the Rivoli Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, November 1 and 2. Admission, ten and thirty cents. Come!

Report cards will be given out Wednesday in all departments. There are several reasons for issuing these cards each month, and two of these reasons are to give information to the pupils concerning their progress and also to give the same information to the parents. The cards should be examined carefully, signed, and then promptly returned to the teacher. The fact that the report card is signed by the parent does not signify that he is satisfied with the quality of the work and conduct of the student. It simply means that he has examined the report.

The freshman English class is now studying Poe's short story, "The Gold Bug."

The people in Latin II have finished their introductory work and are now studying the history of Rome.

Music and Art Notes

The following poems were the result of class work done with the creative motive of Halloween as a background. No matter how crude, the child's idea is recorded and later sifted out by the students to their liking. Each child contributes an idea, and the various class members contribute the thought into poetry. The first poem has been put to music.

The Haunted House

'Twas the last of the month, in October,
Time when skeletons wandered all over.
In an old haunted house on the west hill
All of ghostland was planning a thrill.
One could see through the dark, the white spirits
Move and shriek, groan and rattle,
Like ferrets.
These strange sounds made the neighbors most worried,
So the men to the house quickly scurried.
Twenty strong, they decided to finish
Such disturbance—or greatly diminish.

"Do you hear, from without, stealthy footfalls?"
"Tis some human," spoke ghosts from their cat-naps.
Quickly gone, in a twinkling, and scattered
'Round unseen, and where 'bout, nothing mattered.
From the windows and doors came allusions,
Noises, creaks, and weird tones in confusion.
Such a brawl, unexpected and noisy,
Put the neighbors to flight with the palsy.

Grades Five and Six

Halloween Excitement
It always came on Halloween,
When boys and girls, it always seemed,
Met in the old church cemet'ry,
To dance, to laugh, and to make merry.
But on this night when all was still
They saw a ghost come down the hill.
The children hid behind the fence
And watched, and list', in brief silence.

The ghost sat down upon a tomb
And whistled soft, a merry tune.
Just then the clock struck half past twelve
And he with pick began to delve.
And from the ground, in one-half hour,
He dug a coffin from the flow'rs.
He lit a lantern at his side,
And opened up the coffin wide.

Mr. Applin was in the stage band at the Michigan and Fox theatres in Detroit for many years and the past two years has been with Del Delbridge's band over WXYZ.

"I Loved You Wednesday" Perfect Film Entertainment

In its transference from the medium of the stage to that of the talking screen, the Fox Film production of "I Loved You Wednesday," which comes to the Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, October 29-30-31, proves perfect screen entertainment. Its action, its scintillating dialogue and its piquant characterizations are all brightly enhanced by the fluidity of the all-seeing camera.

In the cast Warner Baxter is powerful and suave as the engineer; Elissa Landi is beautiful and alluring as the dancer who wins his heart. As the faithless lover, Victor Jory gives weight to his promise of becoming one of the screen's shining lights, and Miriam Jordan is excellent in the role of his charming but neglected wife, Laura Hope Crews does wonders with a highly amusing part of masseuse to a great dancer.

The story starts with the early love of the dancer for an untrustworthy student of architecture. It is carried on happily until the dancer learns of the existence of a forgotten wife. She leaves for South America, where she meets and falls in love with an engineer. They part, only to meet again in New York, where they find how indispensable their separation has made them toward each other. At this time, however, the architect appears on the scene again, but so does his wife. The dancer has a momentary reversion to her first love, but in a climax that is truly brilliant, this foursome of sophisticates solve their common problem.

TRI-COUNTY O. E. S. MEETS AT WHITTEMORE

Four Grand Officers Attend Meeting Held Last Wednesday

The Arenac-Isosco-Alcona Association, O. E. S., was the guest of Whittemore Chapter No. 426, O. E. S., at its semi-annual meeting held in Whittemore on Wednesday, October 18. The sessions were held in the Methodist Episcopal church and a large number of members of the order from this section of the state attended.

The president, Mrs. Sarah Johnson, of Hale Chapter No. 482, called the meeting to order at three o'clock. Four Grand officers were in attendance—Mrs. Selma Brown, Worthy Grand Matron, of Birmingham; James Mark, Worthy Grand Patron, of Tawas City; Miss Genevieve Nauman, Grand Secretary, of West Branch; and Mrs. Beatrice Fuqua, Grand Electa, of Harrisville.

After the opening ceremonies the Past Matrons Club of Whittemore Chapter presented the Grand officers in the east with a special march. Each Grand officer was tendered a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums. Miss Genevieve Nauman, the Grand Secretary, gave an interesting talk on the new legislation enacted to relieve complications caused by the general business depression and banking conditions, and the change of the fiscal year from April to November.

Dinner was served at the Masonic temple. The tables were beautifully decorated with flowers, autumn leaves, and the O. E. S. colors. In the evening session the initiatory work of the order was exemplified by selected officers and a school of instruction by the Worthy Grand Matron. Following is the program:

Afternoon Session

She Had to Say Yes' Tells of Customer Girl Racket

An astounding phase of big business, otherwise entirely legitimate, is revealed in a highly amusing and yet startling picture, "She Had to Say Yes," produced by First National with Loretta Young as the chief "yes" girl, and coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, October 31 and November 1 and 2.

This is the employment of what are known as "customers' girls" to act as a lure to out-of-town buyers and induce them to sign big orders. The use of customers' girls is probably as old as business itself, and much more widely practised than is generally supposed, yet until now very little has been said about it.

This sparkling bit of a screen-fare brings back an old favorite in Winnie Lightner, one of the best comedienne in pictures, and presents a new-comer in Suzanne Kilborn, who is destined to become as popular on the screen as she has been on the stage. The inimitable Winnie Lightner, with her wisecracking manner, amply provides the laughs, while Suzanne Kilborn offers something new as a home-wrecking menace.

There is a notable cast playing in support of Miss Young, which includes Lyle Talbot and Regis Toomey.

Notice
Dr. A. S. Allard, optometrist and eyesight specialist, of Bay City, will be in Tawas City at McGuire's jewelry store Wednesday, November 1. ## East Tawas School News

Miss Sylvia Wixson and Nevels Pearson of the 4-H Club department of Michigan State College met with rural school club leaders in the East Tawas school to organize sewing and handicraft clubs for this year. The meeting started with a pot luck in the Home Arts department, after which Mr. Pearson demonstrated with games how to conduct recreational periods. After that each State leader met their respective groups and discussed its problems. As last year, it will be impossible for the State leaders to visit each club, but another joint meeting will be held later in the year.

Armond, the magician, put on three performances Friday, one of which was in the evening for adults to help raise money for jerseys for the basketball teams.

Girls' and boys' basketball practices began this week. The schedule is nearing completion, and will be announced later. Prospects are bright for the future, since many experienced players of both teams are back on the squads.

Dr. Ketik of the Children's Fund of Michigan is again in the school making care of the county dental work.

CENTURY OF GROWTH

San Francisco Seen From the Air.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

Even one with the wildest imagination finds it difficult, while strolling down San Francisco's Market street, or Chicago's Michigan boulevard, to visualize the former city as a sleepy Mexican village and the latter as a tiny frontier town around a stockade-encircled fort a century ago.

Then the Mississippi was "way out West." It was as late as 1792 that separate statehood made the momentous first step west of the Alleghenies, as Kentucky's lines ran out in their own right (the area had been a part of Virginia), the first state to reach the once remote river.

With the beginning of the Nineteenth century, however, the Union seriously took up the real estate business in a large way.

Ohio's outlines had barely taken map form in 1803 when a huge territory was pegged out for future states, the Louisiana Purchase, which more than doubled the area of the original Union.

This taking over of 909,130 square miles by the stroke of a pen was probably the greatest real estate transaction in all history. For this potential empire the United States paid France in all—principal, interest, and debts assumed—$23,213,567.73. It works out at a little less than 4 cents an acre!

The purchase was a happy accident—a bit of high-handed patriotism that lawyers have said "strained the Constitution."

Robert R. Livingston was sent in 1801 by the United States as minister to France to attempt to buy the "Island of New Orleans," on both sides of the Mississippi, and so to gain control of the mouth of the river. He was authorized to offer $2,000,000 and, if necessary, to go as high as $10,000,000 for the patch of land.

Negotiations dragged on for two years, when suddenly war was declared on France by Great Britain. More to embarrass Great Britain than to accommodate the United States, Napoleon decided to sell the entire Louisiana territory. The historic decision was reached while the first consul was in his bath.

Napoleon Decides to Sell. James Monroe had joined Livingston as a special commissioner, and to them was made the proposal to sell. The French negotiators asked $15,000,000—an amount once and a half as great as the highest authorized figure.

The two Americans were aghast. Cables and steamships did not exist. To get word to America and an answer back would require many weeks. Napoleon was in a hurry. So the two envoys figuratively threw their instructions out the window and signed the agreement.

Nobody knew enough about the new domain west of the Mississippi to draw an intelligible map of it. They knew only that there were prairies and "deserts"; that beyond were mountains of some sort; and that somewhere farther on, maybe hundreds, maybe thousands of leagues away, lay the half mythical South sea.

Lewis and Clark, and soon after them Capt. Zebulon Pike, struck into the new country to see what it was like, and as a result of their explorations Americans began to learn a few things about their vast West.

When Powell led his party of adventurers by boat down the Colorado river, in 1806, they were the first to navigate the stream through its long canyons, although the early Spanish explorers had seen the Grand canyon from above 300 years before.

The Florida Purchase, in 1819, involved a relatively small area. That acquisition really made the United States smaller than it was before. The treaty with Spain definitely marked the eastern and northern Spanish boundary all the way from the southeast point of Texas to the northwest point of California.

Parts of present Oklahoma, Kansas and Colorado, draining to the Arkansas—areas which had been thought to be in the Louisiana territory—were lost to the United States by the treaty and had to be bought back from Texas later.

More territory came to the United States in the decade 1840-1850 than during any other ten years in its history. Texas was added in 1845; the title to Oregon territory was established by treaty with Great Britain the following year; and the cession from Mexico in 1848, at the close of the Mexican war, brought in the California country and all the region east to Texas. In all, the forties added to the United States map more than 1,200,000 square miles of territory—an area larger than 20 Floridas.

Taking in Texas.

The Texas addition was unique. Texas had existed for nearly ten years as an independent republic, with diplomatic representatives in Washington and at European courts and with foreign ministers in its own capital. A separate nation entered the Union, the only case of the sort in United States history. More than 388,000 square miles of territory were added by the Texas accession.

There was rejoicing when the Oregon matter was settled, even though the "Fifty-four-forty or fight" slogan was not lived up to. Here was a shining mile-post in the history of the United States. In 70 years from the Declaration of Independence the new nation had pushed across nearly 3,000 miles of virgin territory, had brought almost half of it into statehood, and had marked the other half for future development.

Balboa's hazy sea had become the incontrovertible Pacific, and in that mighty ocean the United States had now taken the first step to establish its vital interest.

After the California country (including the present Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, and part of Colorado) became United States territory, in 1848, the developments that mean map changes came to the Far West with dizzy speed. One of the world's greatest gold rushes started in '49. By 1850 so many people had poured in that California was made a state.

This was another outstanding milestone. Statehood had hurdled hundreds of miles of territory and had made its first appearance on the shores of the Pacific.

By 1850 railway trains were puffing back and forth from Massachusetts to Georgia, and even west of the Alleghenies; yet California still was farther out of travel reach with the seat of government than even the remotest of the thirteen original states had been in the days of Thomas Jefferson.

Nearly All of It Bought.

In almost every important addition to its territory which the United States has made, save Oregon territory, a money payment has played a part.

The Louisiana Purchase cost $23,213,567.73; Florida cost $6,674,057.47, including interest; Texas and its creditors were paid $15,496,447.77 to relinquish claim to lands outside the present state boundaries; Mexico was given $10,295,148.89 for its cession of territory in 1848.

In 1854 the final addition was made to continental United States as it now exists, when the Gadsden Purchase was made of 29,670 square miles south of the Gila river, in Arizona. For this tract $10,000,000 was paid to Mexico.

These five accessions to the United States proper cost $71,679,221.86.

A circle with a radius of only 1,000 feet drawn around the business center of Washington, D. C., incloses land assessed for almost exactly the amount paid for this far-spreading empire.

Territory outside the borders of continental United States bought since 1854 was more costly. Russia was paid $7,200,000 for Alaska in 1867; the Hawaiian national debt of $4,000,000 was assumed when the islands were annexed, in 1898; Spain was given $20,100,000 for islands annexed after the Spanish-American war.

The ten-mile strip of the Canal zone in Panama has cost the United States so far $15,000,000 paid to Panama and $25,000,000 paid to Colombia. In addition, the United States paid $40,000,000 to the New Panama Canal company of France. And Panama continues to receive $250,000 annually.

The latest territorial purchase by the United States was the Virgin Islands. For the 133 square miles of these Caribbean islands Denmark received $25,000,000 in 1916. That works out approximately $294 an acre—7,350 times the acre price paid for the Louisiana Purchase.

The total payments for outlying territory made since 1854 amount to $136,300,000.

These payments have all been in cash. Barter and land trades have never played a part in the growth of United States territory, as they did with the Dutch, who purchased Manhattan island for $24 worth of trinkets; and the English, who later got all Dutch claims to Manhattan and the rest of New York state in trade for what is now Dutch Guiana.

Subsistence Homesteads Planned

PART of the "new deal," and a very important part, is the plan to get people back to the farm to live on "subsistence homesteads" which are to be financed by the government to the extent of $25,000,000. Dr. M. L. Wilson of the Interior department, director of the plan (left), is showing a model of one of the homesteads to W. A. Julian, treasurer of the United States.

REDDY FOX ADMIRES JERRY'S HOUSE

IF IN all the great world there is anybody pleasanter than Reddy Fox when he tries to be pleasant I don't know who it is. Of course in that handsome red coat of his he is very good looking, anyway. Then when he puts on the polite airs that no one knows better than he how to put on, brings into his eyes an innocent look, and smiles, he is as pleasant a fellow as you would care to meet. Only when he forgets and grins a little too broadly so that he shows all his long teeth does his face lose its pleasant look.

"Good Evening, Neighbor Jerry," Said He.

Now Reddy Fox was one of those who knew all about what was going on in the Smiling Pool. You know Reddy gets his living by knowing what is going on about him. Every night while Jerry Muskrat was at work on that new house Reddy had stolen over to the Smiling Pool, from among the rushes watched Jerry for a little while, and then stolen away again, taking the greatest care not to be seen.

"There isn't the least use in the world trying to get him now," said he, as he thought the matter over. "There won't be any use as long as he is at work on that new house. But when it is finished he'll have less to think about. I must see if I cannot find something to interest him."

Reddy grinned, and the grin was the kind of a grin which showed all his long teeth. He grinned just that same way each night as he trotted away from the Smiling Pool after watching Jerry work. At last came the time when Jerry stopped working because, you know, the house was finished. Reddy knew when Jerry stopped working. Oh, yes, Reddy knew all about it.

Then one evening Reddy visited the Smiling Pool quite openly. He sat right out on the bank in the moonlight, and you couldn't imagine anybody more pleasant than was Reddy. He had his most polite airs and his best grin.

"Good evening, neighbor Jerry," said he, and his voice was as pleasant as he knew how to make it.

Jerry stopped swimming long enough to look up at Reddy. Then, because he could hardly be less polite than Reddy, he squeaked: "Good evening," and started on his way. In a minute he dived and disappeared as he swam for the entrance to a certain tunnel in the bank. When he once more popped his head out of the water for a breath of fresh air Reddy was still sitting on the bank right where he had been and he was still as pleasant as before.

"Fond parents may think children are bright," says mature Matilda, "but even an electric light needs a switch."

"I have been admiring your house," said Reddy. "You know I travel about a great deal and have seen many houses, but never have I seen one to compare with this. It is wonderful. Not even Paddy the Beaver can build such a house as this."

Now, of course this was rank flattery and not the truth at all, for Paddy the Beaver is a master builder as everybody knows. But it sounded sweet in the ears of Jerry Muskrat in spite of the fact that he knew. So he lingered to hear what more Reddy might say.

NOT REALLY RAINING

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE mists of morning always rise. Melt in the warmth of better skies. I never see the vapor drifting. But in the moving it is lifting. Give breezes time, the sun a chance. And, as the hours of day advance, The mists of morning rise and scatter And prove a very little matter.

I wonder if we do not make On many mornings this mistake?— Mistake some little care for sorrow, Although it ends before the morrow; Make for ourselves a doleful list Of losses that are only mist That blows away, amid complaining, Because it isn't really raining.

I know we have our larger grief, But much that frets us is the brief, Upon life's surface floating bubbles, But mists that are not really troubles. Though many losses living brings, We sigh the most o'er little things. Let us be glad, somehow or other, Unless it's really raining, brother. © 1933, Douglas Malloch.—WNU Service.

GRAPHIC GOLF

OVERCOMING HOOK AND SLICE

ONE reason for the popularity of deep faced clubs is their tendency to cure a slice. While most of the average golfers either slice or hook, the slice is far more prevalent. For this reason the ordinary golfer would undoubtedly find that the deeper faced clubs were more suitable to his particular case. Deep faced clubs have the power to counteract the slice and this fills a particular niche in most games that cannot be easily discounted. On the other hand those golfers who show a penchant for hooking might find it well to switch to shallow faced clubs. With these clubs the tendency to slice would overcome the hooking proclivity and a fairly straight ball would result. With these two facts in mind it should be a simple matter to find the club that best suits one's game. There's nothing like a straight ball off the tee to start the hole right.

Keep Down Flood of "Phony" Money

Secret Service Men Busy at Work of Foiling Counterfeiters.

Secret service agents these days are kept on the go as they trace down sources of large numbers of counterfeit bills that have flooded the country during the depression. Since 1929 more counterfeit money has been passed than in any other corresponding period of the history of our country.

In 1931, there were 11 different kinds of counterfeit bills in circulation and in 1932 this number had been increased to 17 types. Exact figures for the current year are not known. An increase is admitted, however.

But if the counterfeiters and "shoving of the queer" (as passing of counterfeit money is known to the underworld and police) have increased, it is a comforting fact to know that the secret service operatives have redoubled their efforts in suppressing them with gratifying results.

Not only did they seize more bad money during the last year but they also arrested more persons connected with this class of crime. During 1931 1,524 were arrested and in 1932 the number of arrested persons totaled 2,139, a substantial increase. Nearly a dozen big organized rings were broken up by these arrests and the backbone of this illegitimate industry is supposed to be badly bent, if not broken.

Duties of the secret service take in many other things, including matters pertaining to the Treasury department and protection of the President of the United States and his family. But the chief work of these sleuths is suppression of said counterfeiting.

They work under the control of the Treasury department as directed by the secretary of the treasury, and their present chief, William H. Moran.

This is the highest ranking police organization in the United States and consists only of highly trained investigators. Its members usually carry as identification a badge in the form of a five-pointed star in the center of which are the letters "U. S." with the words "Secret Service" around the edge.—Pathfinder Magazine.

17 BLACK BEANS TO LIVE IN MEMORIAL

Texas Honors Victims of Tragic Event.

La Grange, Texas.—A tall granite column stands in this town to honor the memory of the fifty-three Texans who lost their lives in two of the most tragic events in Lone Star state history. Recently unveiled, the monument extols the men who fell in the ill-fated Mier expedition of 1842, recalling the story of the seventeen black beans that spelled death for as many men at Hacienda Salado. It was erected after nearly 100 years of fund-raising.

It was in 1848 that the bones of the seventeen martyrs of Mier, together with those of thirty-six other Texans massacred in the Battle of Salado Creek were returned to Fayette county soil and buried near here.

Campaign for Funds Begun.

Citizens of La Grange at once began efforts to raise money for a suitable the Texans with grapeshot. Thirty-two were killed and a number of others captured.

Brigadier General Somervell led a force of Texans in pursuit of the enemy, who retreated across the Rio Grande. A unit under Capt. William S. Fisher, followed the Mexicans across the river.

Defeated in Attack on Mier.

On Christmas night, 1842, the Texans attacked the Mexican village of Mier. Fisher was wounded and the Texans surrendered. They were marched toward Mexico City, but at Hacienda Salado, 100 miles from Saltillo, they escaped. After wandering for days in the mountains, they were recaptured by a Mexican cavalry squad.

Gen. Santa Anna ordered one in each ten of the prisoners to be shot. On March 25 they were made to draw beans from a pitcher held by an officer. It contained seventeen black beans and 150 white ones. That night the seventeen were shot as they sat on a log.

The rest of the band, with the exception of Capt. Ewing Cameron, were taken to Mexico City and kept at hard labor for years. Eventually all were liberated.

Later, during the war with Mexico, Texas members of Gen. Zach Taylor's army got an order on the alcalde of Hacienda Salado to surrender the remains of the seventeen Texans who were shot there. They were brought to La Grange, center of the district from which most of the Texans had come. A few years later the remains of the thirty-six killed at Salado creek also were returned to Texas.

marker, according to Houston Wade, postal clerk, whose history of the expedition was published with the monument's unveiling.

In the summer of 1842 the Republic of Texas was still at war with Mexico, although the decisive battle of San Jacinto had been fought and won by Gen. Sam Houston's army six years before. On September 11 a force of 1,200 Mexicans under Gen. Adrian Woll, invaded the village of San Antonio, taking captive the district judge, the grand jury and the lawyers attending the court then in session.

The Texas militia west of the Brazos river was ordered to attack the Mexicans. Capt. Matthew Caldwell, of Gonzalez, led a company of eighty men against Woll and defeated the Mexicans at Salado creek. Through a misunderstanding of positions, however, Capt. Nicholas Dawson, of La Grange, leading a company of fifty-three men to join Caldwell, found himself surrounded and cut off by the retreating Mexicans. The Mexicans cut down

Mountain Is Locked as Curfew Sounds

Mount Desert Island.—Speaking of taking in the sidewalks after dark—

New England has a mountain that is locked up at curfew hour each night.

It's Cadillac mountain, in Acadia National park, on this picturesque island off the Maine coast. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who has a summer home on the island, built the road up the mountainside and gave it to the government.

The highway offers a host of gorgeous vistas, but, with a grade of 25 per cent in spots, it is considered dangerous to motorists after dark.

So at curfew time each night an Acadia National park ranger stops his motorcycle at the junction of the mountain road and Eagle Lake road, hauls out of the underbrush a chain as big as your wrist, and turns a key in the padlock joining the two ends of the chain, bolted securely to boulders at either side of the road.

Cadillac mountain is locked up for the night.

50,000 Mexican Indians Are Blinded by Insects

Mexico, D. F.—The bite of a little red simuliid fly has brought blindness to some 45,000 Indians in Chiapas and 5,000 in Oaxaca, according to the Mexican health department.

The life history of the parasite which the fly deposits in the blood of man is now known, but no good remedy to combat it has been worked out.

Tumors appear on the heads of those affected, and these are being operated on by the wholesale by the sanitary brigades. This eventually cures the individual if the disease has not gone too far. Microscopic organisms in the tumors, being phototropic, or light loving, make their way to the eye.

Radio Devices to Aid in Fight Against Crime

New York.—The relentless war on crime has produced two new weapons which will make the lawbreaker's lot even more hazardous.

Both are in experimental stages, but experts in the crime laboratories at the police department consider their perfection only a matter of time.

The first is a device for broadcasting the portraits of criminals to radio cars. Recently, a radio car sped through Central park while officials gazed at a metal plate on the dashboard. Soon the slightly blurred, but unmistakable features of a man were imprinted on the plate.

"It was fairly successful," said Thomas W. Rochester, chief engineer of the radio department, "and although its installation is not feasible at present, it is coming."

The other invention will permit the broadcast of televised fingerprints. The principle of operation is simpler than with the photographs involving the use of wired lines available to any point of transmission.

"I should say this might be installed in the near future," Rochester said.

"No matter where I am," Lowry vowed, "I'll attend your funeral and make a five-minute speech."

"I'll do the same if you die first," Poole replied. "Only since I'm not a speechmaker, I'll leave that part out."

Recently, Poole stood beside the bier of his long-time friend, and fulfilled his vow.

PASSED UP ALL FOR CLAM PIE

Delicacy That Made Hit With "Sea Devil."

Jot Small was telling me about the time Count von Luckner ("the Sea Devil") visited Commander McMillen, of Arctic fame, in Provincetown, Mass.

"Mac brought the count and some other guests over here to my Galley for supper one night," Jot related. "And I just locked the doors after they got in, so we wouldn't be disturbed by no other customers."

"Well, it was a Sat'day night, so of course the principal dish was baked beans. And after while, I got to noticing that Von Luckner didn't seem to care much for the beans. Oh, he was polite about it, all right, but he wasn't what you might call eager. He et bread and he drank coffee, and he pushed the beans and the pork around on his plate and went through the motions. But beans wasn't his dish."

"So pretty soon I whispered to Mac, 'Do you think he'd like clam pie?'"

"Try him and see what happens," says Mac.

"So I cut a big wedge of clam pie and put it down by his plate. He looked at it, sort of uncertain, for a minute. Then he reached out his fork and cut off a little nibble. Then I seen his eyes kind of sparkle. He took a bigger bite. Then he took both hands and made a motion like a man swimmin', and pushed the beans one way and the coffee and bread the other, and pulled that pie right in front of him."

"By Chove," he hollered, "I haf found somed'ing!"

"He swallered that wedge like a logfish stealin' bait, and he held out his plate for more. That happened three times, and then he'd et the hull dam pie. And every time he'd finish a piece, he'd say, 'By Chove, I haf found somed'ing!'"

"He'll be droppin' his hook in these waters again, some day. Because he's goin' to have a heck of a time tryin' to teach 'em to make clam pie in Germany!" — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Vast Pampa Source of Welfare in Argentina

Argentina, richest of South American countries, draws its wealth from the pampa—a rockless, treeless sea of grass, 2,800 miles long and 900 miles wide, grazed by millions of head of stock. Fecond, half-wild herds of horses and cattle, seed of the conquistadores' mounts and milk cows, have been scientifically bred up to the stable and the abattoir.

Calmer herds, tamer men. Almost gone is the gaucho, cowboy son of Spanish settler and Indian squaw. Apotheosis of the type was Dictator Juan Manuel Rosas, who a century ago routed the Indians, united his countrymen, and ruled in a palace, with a court jester. On the pampas only the pampero (cold wind, rain or hail storms) and locust plagues remain fiercely primitive.

Buenos Aires, with its 2,000,000, is Paris, Chicago and pampa in one. Quite effete now, it no longer flaunts in its Boca section advertisements of cheap, expeditious murder by expert assassins. The youngster who has no appetite, probably has stasis. A little syrup of figs will soon correct this condition—then watch the child eat—and gain!

Mothers should never coax a child to eat. Nature knows best. Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite—get rid of stasis. Children who don't eat are sluggish. Read what the "California treatment" is doing for sluggish, listless children in every part of the country!

A POUND A WEEK. Your child will eat well from the day and hour you conquer sluggishness. But that girl or boy with furry tongue and a bad breath should not be dosed with salts!

Begin tonight, with enough pure syrup of figs to cleanse the colon thoroughly. Less tomorrow, then every other day, or twice a week, until the appetite, digestion, weight, complexion, tell you the stasis is gone. When a cold or other ailment has again clogged the system, syrup of figs will soon set things to right.

When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a billous yellow, California syrup of figs will gently stimulate the colon muscles—and the child you used to coax to eat will fairly devour his food.

The claims made for California Syrup of Figs are true and it will do the same for you—IF you get genuine CALIFORNIA Syrup of Figs. Don't accept any substitute.

The Fourth Lovely Lady

What was to be done about Smif? For the first time in her life no one needed her. She was free, large, and no longer young. Romance and income had passed her by. She was generous to a fault. Still you could never be sure about Smif.

Three Lovely ladies put their heads together, but they reckoned without the fourth. No vine-clad cottages, no seashore resorts, no sponging off rich relations for her. She had her own ideas about life and love and making money—and were they original!

They gasped when the fourth Lovely lady calmly announced, "I don't mind telling you what I am going to do, only I'm afraid you won't like it when you hear it. I'm going to become an adventuress." There was a thunderbolt!

Could Smif make good and keep out of trouble? Her family said no and prepared to take precautions. Her friends said yes and prepared to help. Three shocked sisters and a few adoring friends—that was her starting point. Where did she end? And what did Smif herself think when she found it was not too late for romance? Remember, she didn't say what kind of an adventuress she was going to be, or what she was going to do with her money when and if she made it.

A lively, fast-moving, decidedly original story, told in Therese Benson's best style, and it will appear serially in these columns.

Lady (seasick)—I want the earth.

TELLING FATHER

He had been calling every night in spite of the warnings from his sweetheart about her irate father. This particular evening they had been planning their elopement. Only the hall clock, announcing that the witching hour had been reached, broke the silence. Then, without warning, a thump and a click were heard, and the room was flooded with light. There stood father, glowering and puffing at the terrified young caller. "Who are you?" he bellowed. The young man gulped and turned pale. But the color returned to his face suddenly, and, rising to his feet, he said in a clear, loud voice: "I'm her brother."

Hate for Baby Gone Parents Now Want It

Future May Be Decided by State Referendum.

Denver.—A state-wide referendum may decide the future of Baby Erkenbeck.

A movement has been started to have as many as possible of Colorado's citizens express unofficially through a newspaper poll what should be done with the "hate child" of Maynard and Margaret Erkenbeck, now an inmate of a home for dependent children.

On July 20, the father and mother of the tiny baby appeared in Denver's famous juvenile court with an amazing request. They swore that they never wanted the child, hated the sight of him, and wanted the state to take care of him.

They Want Freedom. "We didn't want him; we don't want him now," the father, a regularly employed laborer, declared. "We want to be free to go here and there.

"Imagine, judge, how you'd feel living always in the presence of something you detested."

Judge George H. Lerg of Golden, sitting on the juvenile bench in the absence of Judge Stanley Johnson, committed the child to the state home.

The father's work took him to Oregon. The mother remained in Denver. Although free to go "here and there," she chose to remain near her baby.

Daily she visits the state home, watches her baby being fed and holds him in her arms.

"In the same hour that my baby was taken from me, I knew we had done wrong and that I could not live without him," Mrs. Erkenbeck declared, as she pleaded with state officials to restore her child to her.

"We were impulsive and selfish. My husband isn't cruel. We loved each other. We had been together all the time since our marriage. When the baby was coming we didn't want him and when he came and interfered with what we wanted to do we resented his presence—or thought we did.

Both Want Him Back. "As a child I was brought up with twelve brothers and sisters. My father was a shoe cobbler, but mother and he were good to us and did everything they could for us. At twelve I went out to make my own living nursing babies. Children, children, children. That's all I knew. I wanted to be free. Maynard and I were happy as could be. Then our baby came. We had to change our ways. So we did this awful thing."

The father, too, has made up his mind that he must have the baby back. "How is the baby getting along?" he asks in his letters from Oregon. "I hope you can get him soon, so we can all be together again."

Palace Neighbor Given Auto as Gift From King

London.—Motoring past Buckingham palace gardens recently, King George saw a car standing at the gate. Its paint work was spotted, but the lines betrayed its age.

A few days later Sister Agnes Keyser, to whom it belonged, was astonished to find in its place a brand new car of the same make as the king's and in the royal colors of maroon and scarlet. It was a gift from his majesty.

Sister Agnes, who conducts a hospital near the palace, is a close friend of the king and queen. She has her own key to the royal gardens and often strolls with the king.

Believe Egyptians Discovered America

Paris.—Neither Leif Ericsson nor Christopher Columbus discovered America, if Abbot Th. Moreux, director of the Bourges observatory, is right.

"An Egyptian expedition by the sea is very likely to have taken place in the days of the Pharaohs, says Abbot Moreux. "It is most probable that these Egyptians reached Central America long before the Christian era. They carried there the fruits of their own civilization and a very advanced astronomical science."

The Bourges astronomer recalls that the explorers of Columbus' day noticed the natives of America had the same names for constellations in the sky as the Europeans with whom they had had no relations whatever up to then.

Sleeping Sickness

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Encephalitis, commonly known as sleeping sickness, still remains a mystery to the medical profession. The epidemic in St. Louis, which lasted about two months, caused the death of about two hundred persons. Many others suffered from the malady but recovered at least partially. The difficulty seems to be that the disease attacks one without warning, and no one has been able to ascertain exactly how it is contracted. Even the cause still remains a mystery. The germ or virus, or whatever the vital element is through which the disease is communicable, is still undiscovered. Specialists from several of our largest and most important laboratories have labored incessantly upon the task of isolating the germ. If this could be accomplished, an anti-toxin could be made which would arrest the disease. This was accomplished with the dreaded diphtheria and many other diseases which formerly took a heavy toll of life.

The means of transference is thought by some to be the secretions of the throat or nose, others believe

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THERE is work which is labor saving in itself. The work is preparatory. Unless these preparations have been made, and made correctly, the main task is more difficult and time-consuming. For example a mother saw her daughter attempting to do some sewing which should have been basted first. She said: "You'll find that easier if you baste it first."

"I haven't time for that, I'll baste it afterwards," was the daughter's reply.

The mother knew it would take twice as long to do the sewing without the gatherers being evenly caught first with basting stitches. Later on, when the daughter became more proficient with her needle she used to laugh over her mistaken labor saving.

The person who takes clothes from a line and carelessly tosses them into the laundry basket, makes creases in them which must be ironed out. They were not there at first but were of her own making. Worse than this is the rolling up of sprinkled clothes without any attempt to smooth them before dampening down, or to keep them flat when rolled. The dampness sets the wrinkles, and makes scores of new ones, thus greatly increasing the work of ironing. It requires a little longer to keep the clothes smooth than to toss them about and roll them up in any fashion, but the task of ironing is increased in much greater proportion. The work of preserving the clothes from wrinkles is a labor-saving and time-saving method.

Extra Work. Pouring hot water into a cold pitcher or china teapot, without first tempering the ware so that the chill is taken off, is neither time-saving nor money-saving. The pitcher is liable to break which means replacement outlay, to say nothing of the annoyance of having to wipe up the spilled water, and possibly scalding the hands.

Dishes can be dried much faster with a fresh towel, than with one previously used. So it is labor-saving to rinse dish towels after meals. This takes but a moment and in the end saves time. Putting things away in their proper places after using them is work which pays a good premium. Every one knows the time lost hunting for misplaced articles is out of all proportion to the little time it takes to put them in the proper places at first—and good tempers are sorely taxed, if not lost entirely while doing the necessary hunting. Covering an ink bottle or well after writing, or putting the cap on a fountain pen, is the work of an instant, but it is labor-saving. If not covered dust settles in the ink left exposed in the well, and the pen trails wea disfiguring lines on the paper afterwards. The ink dries on an up-capped fountain pen and the flow is clogged. These are annoying incidents. A little preventive work would prove labor-saving.

Window Draperies. Window draperies may need renewing. Here outlay may prove a deterring. If so, do not be discouraged. Dye the old ones if they are worth it, and are not too heavy for your own dye pot. If new hangings are imperative, you can do much with inexpensive materials, well chosen for color and deftly ornamented with your own needle. For example a fair quality of natural colored burlap, hemstitched at edges and having a running border made of the floral crochet applique with leaves and stems of a faded looking green wool, and flowers in brown wool will be excellent. These colors will fit in with any color scheme. But if you wish to accent some particular color use it for the flowers. But be very careful to have the colors dull. Avoid any too-brilliant hues. These hangings will not be appropriate with handsome furnishings, Italian, Spanish, French, etc., but are well suited to many styles, and to the usual type of home decoration.

It is better to have few ornaments, and these right, than many which are not correct. Avoid multiplicity of colors. Use brasses for lightening dark parts of rooms. They catch and reflect light. Watch for all details which combine to make good decoration.

that, like yellow fever, it is caused by the bite of the mosquito. Efforts to discover the secret were made by inoculating monkeys with organic matter taken from the bodies of those who had died from the disease. The ultimate value of this experiment has not yet been ascertained. Even though scientists are appalled at their inability to discover the cause, no energy, time or money was spared in their tasks. Much sacrificial work was done and still remains to be accomplished, if a remedy is to be provided.

The element of heroism was conspicuously present in recent efforts to control the epidemic in St. Louis. The United States public health service issued a bulletin in which was this announcement, "Three unidentified scientists of St. Louis have submitted to bites from mosquitoes that previously had bitten sleeping sickness victims." Here is heroism of the higher order. These men were willing to risk their lives in efforts to discover the cause and cure of the malady. Their names may never be known, but when the remedy is finally announced the world will owe a debt of gratitude which it can never repay. Not self-preservation but self-sacrifice is the essence of true heroism.

Modest Tombstone Marks Grave of Great Engineer

Oakland, Calif.—A modest tombstone marks the Washington grave of Arthur Powell Davis, but his work as "America's greatest engineer" will serve to perpetuate his memory indefinitely.

Davis died recently at his home here after 18 months of illness. He left his mark on the physical face of the world as few other men have. He supervised building of 90 dams, severed two continents, united two oceans, built 15,000 miles of canals, put water on 2,000,000 desert acres, advised Russia how to reclaim another 10,000,000 acres of arid land and worked in every part of the globe.

FORLORN ISLAND

By Edison Marshall

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

They were under way in three hours. Of Eric's five mates, all but two had deserted, but it was a good riddance. Big Smith returned to join his brother. Guiltless of any crime of blood, Petroff bargained with Nelson for passage to the Kuril Islands. The Chelsea cruised round the shoal, and at noon of the next day, Eric was on her bridge, spying for the pass.

The search was long and nerve-racking, but he remembered the approximate latitude of the mile-wide gap in the reefs, and another twenty-four hours found the trader safely through into deep water, heading for Forlorn Island.

Nan looked often to the deep in the three days of Eric's absence, and was first to see the Chelsea's masts prick the sky line. The sight seemed to break the last thread of her self-control. Sobbing, she ran to Horton's hut; but she could not speak, and could only beckon her friends to the beach. . . . It was true. The ship was coming in. Deliverance . . . fulfillment . . . home . . .

While the Aleuts gazed darkly, the castaways leaped into the nearest boats and sped to meet the ship. Cheering, laughing with streaming eyes, weeping with smiling lips, they paddled alongside until the anchor dropped, then boarded and held revelry on the deck. Even Petroff and Big Smith shared in the reunion. It was a slight new to Captain Nelson's eyes; a millionaire and his family out of their minds with rapture, embracing him and his grinning sailors, and dancing hand in hand with cut-throats. It was a complete breakdown of civilized reserve. Even Roy caught the general contagion and danced a wild hornpipe on the deck.

Horton wanted to leave at once, but Nan remembered her humble friends forsaken on the bleak shore. "Of course we must tell them good-bye," Horton said contritely. "Oh, if we only had some presents to give them."

"De hold of dis ship is clean full of presents," Nelson told him. "Would—would you let us have some of 'em?" Horton spoke in faltering tones. "Sure. All you want." The flush of excitement on Horton's face swiftly died away; he seemed to remember something. . . . His trembling hand dove into his pocket, felt his talisman, and came out steady and strong.

"Of course. This is a trading ship." There was a clang in his voice that silenced Nan, and made Eric whirl. "Captain Nelson, I want to buy a thousand dollars' worth of your goods to give the natives. Eric, here, will know what they want worst; he's been looking after them. Steel knives, axes, rifles, sweets and the like, everything that will make them happy."

The boats were loaded to the gunwales, such a treasure as the tribe had never dreamed, and the gifts taken to the beach and distributed amid an awed silence. From now on, life would not be so hard behind the shoals. Every squaw would wax fat from the great killings made with steel-pointed spears and firearms. Now that the pass was known, perhaps a little schooner would steal in once a year, to trade the white man's luxuries for pelts, elderdown, and fossil ivory. Yet by the same tokens, the doom of the Lost People was sealed. In the end they must either migrate to the larger Aleutian islands, surrender their tribal identity and become cannery workers under the white man's law, or perish victims of his civilization. The latter was more likely; it would be hard for them to leave the crags and windy beaches of Forlorn Island.

They only grunted when the pale-faces bade them goodby, eye-unlit and brown faces impassive as their own sand dunes, but when in a dreamy silence the ship's boats glided away into the harbor, their strange lonely souls gave voice. On the beach an old crone struck up a wailing chant. All her people joined in, a weird song of farewell in the minor key that might have been brought from the lost Asiatic birthplace beyond the setting sun, possibly a dirge springing extempore from their savage hearts. Their arms swung in rhythm. Finally they dropped on their knees, and with imploring hands lifted to the skies, called on their tribal gods to give safe passage to their departing friends.

"Kou-yudam Agougou! Achidan Agougou!" This was repeated again and again. "Sitkou—kouyou-dah, kouyou-dah."

The song died away. Awe-struck, the sailors rested on their oars. Eric looked into Nan's eyes to find them brimming with tears.

"Why must we leave them here?" she whispered.

"Where could we take them, that they'd be better off? This is their home."

"But it's so lonely, so dreary. I can't bear to think of it. Let's go quickly."

But now Mother Horton had struck up the heart song of the pale-faces, and even the Chelsea sailors joined in. Across the water the old strains swelled:

Should auld acquaintance be forgot, and never brought to mind? We'll fill a cup of kindness yet, for days of auld lang syne.

The oars flashed. The crowd on the beach dwindled to black dots in the shadow of the crags.

It was still rough fare for the castaways. The three women would occupy the captain's cabin; the others were given bunks below decks. But great changes impended; Eric gazed southward with troubled eyes. Only two hundred miles through the Aleutian chain lay the well-charted sealanes of the north Pacific, and beyond the port lights were shining.

The dream was passing, just as Nan had foretold. Horton was among the first to waken, with nervous, fumbling hands he removed his parka and doctored the clothes of civilization saved from the wreck, a rumpled blue suit and a yachtsman's cap still trig and smart. But presently his leaping heart beat steady and cool. After a reassuring touch of the little leather pilot in his pocket, he made for the pilot house. Eric and Nelson were looking at charts, but he pushed boldly between them.

Eric glanced up with narrowed eyes. Not only Horton's clothes but his face was changed. His sagging jaw was set, his expression confident and resolute.

"Nelson, we're not very far north from the Great Circle route to the Orient, are we?" he began.

Nelson came to attention. "Just about a day's run, if we hit straight through de Aleut chain."

"I want you to intercept one of the big liners, and put us aboard. How soon do you think you could do it?"

"De Empress of Castile iss east-bound right now—only about eight hundred miles away. We heard her talking yust last night."

"Do you think you could catch her?"

"Wit' fair luck, yes. But—but de Empress, she do not stop at sea to take passengers from a packet like dis."

"She'll stop for me!" Horton spoke calmly. "Get in touch with her right away—tell her it's Felix Horton, and his party. Arrange to meet her in the shortest possible time."

Without a word to Eric, he wheeled and went out of the room.

The radio crackled. Changes came thick and fast. The Empress sped east—a clear 500 miles in 24 hours—and the little Chelsea dipped south nearly half that distance in the same time. They met in a sheet of sunlit water between curtains of mist, the liner's huge funnels looming against the sky. Grandly she hove to her many-storied castle; a boat was lowered, manned by trig-looking sailors.

For the passengers that lined her rail, this was higher romance than any they had found in the cherry-orchards of Japan. They saw the oars flash, and seven survivors of the Intrepid, given up for dead, clamber down the trader's ladder. . . . The middle-aged man in the yachting cap was Horton himself. They could see him plain through their shiny new binoculars, many of them had met him before. The old woman was his mother, a very eccentric old lady. So they whispered, and one of the girls his daughter. The younger yachtsman was Roy Stuart, believed to be Nan Horton's fiancé; but no one knew the blond-headed man in the blue coat. Probably he was just one of the officers of the ill-starred Intrepid. The last two were no doubt the secretary and the maid, spoken of in the wireless bulletins. Further survivors of the wreck remained aboard the Chelsea. . . .

Cameras clicked and purred, the young people began to cheer. . . . The captain himself waited at the head of the stairs to greet Horton, presently the stewards were taking the party in charge. Horton and his friends went to the Queen's suite—the blond mate to the officers' quarters.

This was mid-afternoon. By eight in the evening Horton's party were ready to take their place in the carefree luxury of shipboard life. Friendly passengers and the ship shops had supplied them with every want. Bathed, valeted, manicured, only their wind-burned faces and red hands betrayed their long banishment. Lights were shining. Uniformed servants plied back and forth. Orchestras played in stately rooms. Forlorn Island was no more than a gray dream in the fairy seas of Keats.

When they went to dinner, the three Hortons and Roy were given seats at the captain's table. Eric, seated with the first officer, saw them come in, but although Nan's eyes raced around the crowded room, they did not meet his own. She was never so lovely, so alluring. Her form-fitting, red dinner gown revealed her girlish contours, and enhanced the dull glow of her cheeks. Her dusky hair, cut again in a long bob, was lustrous as sea-otter fur in the mellow light.

Horton and Roy were gay over their champagne glasses; Nan seemed quite grave. Often her gaze swept the hall, but still no glance passed between her and her lover—not one smile made his cold heart leap. Had he won the island war, only to lose the prize? Was the great adventure all in vain? He would soon know. He would take his answer tonight, win or lose. When Nan rose from the table, he strode forward and touched her hand.

She whirled with a low cry, but before she could speak, Horton pushed between them.

"What is it, Eric?" Horton's tone was grave, but not unfriendly. "I want to talk to Nan."

"You may, in a moment. I'd like to talk to you first. Come to my stateroom. Nan—you wait on the deck."

Presently they were seated in Horton's luxurious suite, the cool, confident millionaire and the grim, steady-eyed ship's officer. Horton offered him a cigar, but Eric declined it. He had not come here to make a trade.

"I want to tell you, first of all, how indebted we all feel toward you," Horton began quietly. "You saved our lives on the island—and I'll not forget it, and I mean to stand behind you now. I propose for you to captain your own ship. Moreover, I'll always want you for my friend."

In the long pause, Eric's straight gaze did not waver, but Horton's cheek bones flushed.

"Now about Nan," Horton went on. "I've reserved a stateroom for her, adjoining mine. It is true that you and she went through a certain ceremony—under duress—but I can't regard it as a legal marriage, and I feel sure that she doesn't, either. It was only an Aleut rite. And she has never, I feel sure of this, really become your wife."

"Did she ask you to say this to me?" "No, not in words. I think, however, I am carrying out her wishes. Eric, I want you to be reasonable about this—forget that empty form in the mud church, as quickly as possible. It will be better for her—and for you, too."

"That's for Nan to say, not you," Eric rose to his full height. "I'm going to talk to her."

Horton rose, too. "I advise against it. Her answer will be the same—and it will be keenly embarrassing for both of you. Later, when we are all home again, you may come to see her and try to win her. Although I think it better for a girl to marry in her own immediate sphere, I would have no objection to you as a son-in-law. But it must be brought about in the conventional way."

"I'm going to know, right now. I can stand the embarrassment, and so can she. Unless she herself says otherwise—she is my wife."

He strode out, to find Nan waiting by the rail. On the boat deck, under the waning moon, they found a secluded corner. But at first his tense throat could not shape his question; the long-drawn seconds fell and wasted one by one. At last she touched his hand.

"What did you want to say to me, Eric?"

"I want to know whether we are going on together—or part. There can't be any half-way. You must make up your mind now."

"Did father speak about the ceremony on the island?"

"Yes. He hinted that you didn't consider it binding."

"That's true. I can't feel that I'm your wife. It was only a savage rite, and I think we may as well consider it annulled."

The moonlight died in Eric's eyes. "That's all I need to know." He turned as though to go.

But her hand fell lightly on his arm. "But Eric—you might like to know that I'm going to be really married tonight, by the captain of the ship, provided the man I want will take me. . . . And I think he will."

"He'll take you—but he'll never love you as I love you," Eric spoke in the grave, slow way she knew of old, in sorrow, not in bitterness. "I don't blame you, Nan. You warned me all the time. I suppose it was inevitable that you'd decide on Roy, as soon as you got back to your own world."

The girl smiled dimly, and a stary shine was in her eyes. "This is not my world."

Something in her tone shot an electric current through every fiber of his body and soul. It paralyzed his heart and rustled up his hair. "I—I—don't understand—"

"I am not dead," she spoke in solemn exultation. "I am not asleep. I am alive."

He stared in dazed wonder. "Don't make me hope, and then let me fall," he begged. "You—you mean Roy—don't you?"

"I mean you—you—no one in this world but you." Hungrily her warm arms crept about him, and her eager lips pressed his. "Don't you understand now? Hold me, Eric, and don't ever let me go."

His old mother, the Sea, would die in her bed, and his father, the great North, would wear chains on his strong free limbs, before he would let her go—here or in Valhalla. . . . Young love . . . romance . . . rapture . . . victory. . . .

Acid-Base Qualities of Food

According to Dietetic Authorities, Nature May Be Relied On to Preserve the Proper Balance Necessary for Bodily Welfare.

Housewives who may have been concerned over the presence or absence of acids in the diet will find their perplexities lessened by this authoritative explanation:

"Will you please tell me what fruits and cereals have no acid reaction? This is a question which comes very often to this column, probably because there is a common misconception of the importance of considering the acid-base qualities of foods in choosing a good diet."

"Before I answer the question I should make plain the fact that many foods which are acid in digestion are the opposite after absorption. The outstanding examples of this are lemons and other citrus fruits. After digestion and absorption we find the foods which give an alkaline reaction are first of all, most of the fruits and vegetables. Milk and cream are slightly alkaline. Meats, fish and eggs give an acid reaction after digestion. Cereals are slightly acid. Fats, sugars and starches are neutral."

"You can easily see that in the ordinary diet a balance of acid and base is almost automatically provided. This balance is necessary for body welfare, and, although we are considering a practically impossible situation, it would be fatal for us to be deprived of foods which are acid in reaction."

"The digestive mechanism of the body is so delicately and efficiently adjusted that it maintains a 'buffer' system in the blood and also an alkaline reserve stored in the body which is called upon to neutralize any excess acid which we may occasionally take into the body through food. The 'buffer' quality of the blood seems to be independent of the food we eat, but the alkaline reserve is supplied by the potentially alkaline foods we eat."

"The acids formed in the digestion of food are excreted by the skin, the lungs, the kidneys and the feces. It is very important to keep all these natural functions in normal active condition. The inclusion of fruits and vegetables in liberal amounts in the diet and the drinking of goodly quantities of water have a distinct influence upon the matter and are probably much more important to our bodily welfare on this account than because the resulting products of their digestion are base or acid. Dr. Henry Sherman, professor of chemistry at Columbia university and one of the leaders in the field of nutrition, states in the new addition of his 'Chemistry of Food and Nutrition' (Macmillan, 1932): 'The writer desires to repeat the statement that in his judgment it is still an open question whether the acid-base balance of the mineral elements of the diet is or is not of practical significance in human nutrition. The benefit to health which so generally results from the use of diets consisting largely of fruits, vegetables and milk may perhaps be attributable in part to the fact that these foods yield alkaline residues when oxidized in the body; but also there are several other ways in which the eating of liberal amounts of these foods is apt to be beneficial, notably by enriching the diet in calcium, phosphorus, iron and vitamins and by improving the intestinal conditions.'

"In effect, do not worry about whether the foods you eat are basic or acid. Choose a well-rounded diet containing plenty of fruit and vegetables and 'acidosis' will take care of itself."

Quality All-Important in Selection of Soap
By RUBY BAKER

The weekly wash is a good example of where "pinching on quality" is costly in the end. Women whose snowy-white washings are the envy of their neighborhood have learned the value of buying not cheaply but well.

When these women purchase a laundry soap they look for quality and washing value. They know that a perfect wash depends on the use of a high-grade soap. After all, it's the ability of the cleansing agents that gets results.

Many a housewife has found that a cheap or "weak" soap not only requires harder rubbing to get clothes clean, but that this hard rubbing actually harms the fabrics.

Where you buy quality, it makes little difference in what form a soap comes. A soap can be any color of the rainbow—without any effect at all on the whiteness of clothes. For instance, a certain well-known laundry soap is golden because that is the natural color of its combined fine ingredients. And due to its greater cleansing energy, this golden soap gets clothes cleaner—which means whiter.

COMING UP

Reese was going through the trying stage of losing his baby teeth, having four of his front ones out at the same time. The new ones were very slow in appearing, so he had days and weeks of anxious and almost hopeless watching and waiting. One day after a close scrutiny in the mirror, he exclaimed excitedly: "Mamma, mamma, they're coming up."—Indianapolis News.

How Acid Stomach Makes Itself Known to You

HERE ARE THE SIGNS:
Nervousness, Frequent Headaches, Neuralgia, Feeling of Weakness, Indigestion, Sleeplessness, Loss of Appetite, Mouth Acidity, Sour Stomach, Nausea, Auto-intoxication

WHAT TO DO FOR IT:
TAKE—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water every morning when you get up. Take another teaspoonful 30 minutes after eating. And another before you go to bed. NOTE—Take the new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets—one tablet for each teaspoonful as directed above.

If you have Acid Stomach, don't worry about it. Follow the simple directions given above. This small dosage of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia acts at once to neutralize the acids that cause headache, stomach pains and other distress. Try it. You'll feel like a new person. But—be careful you get REAL milk of magnesia when you buy genuine PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia. See that the name "PHILLIPS" is on the label.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM
Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

NEW WAY TO SHOOT
Rifle practice without noise, fumes or ammunition was demonstrated recently in London. By a system of lenses and mechanism within the gun, a luminous target was projected on a blank wall. Aim was taken and when the trigger was pressed a black spot appeared on the target.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are best for liver, bowels and stomach. One little Pellet for a laxative—three for a cathartic.—Adv.

Inseparable
Pity and laughter run in the common ways of man.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless choice of laxatives is a common cause of chronic constipation.

Any hospital offers evidence of the harm done by harsh laxatives that drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys.

Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be controlled. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the average person's bowels regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. All druggists, ready for use, in big bottles. Member N. R. A.

Faster Relief Now From Neuritis

Real BAYER Aspirin "Takes Hold" of Pain in Few Minutes

Now comes amazingly quick relief from headaches, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia . . . the fastest safe relief, it is said, yet discovered.

Those results are due to a scientific discovery by which a Bayer Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. A Bayer Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it. And thus is ready to go to work almost instantly.

When you buy, though, see that you get the Genuine BAYER Aspirin. For Bayer Aspirin's quick relief always say "BAYER Aspirin."

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

Drop a Bayer Tablet in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches bottom, it has started to disintegrate. What it does in this glass it does in your stomach. Hence its fast action.

Out (out) of the coffin he took a sheet and made an object with no feet. He brought the figure to his side and flew on upward, with his bride. Just then the children gave a sigh. As ghost, all white, flew to the sky. The moon went down and out of sight and left them in the dark of night. But when the children started home, they heard a lot of terrible groans. The first rays of the morning sun saw the children on the run.
