Irene Dunne Has Vivid Role in 'Ann Vickers'

In the film version of the Sinclair Lewis novel, "Ann Vickers," coming Sunday and Monday, November 5-6, to the Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City Irene Dunne has the strongest and most dramatic role of her career. As "Ann Vickers" she is the modern minded girl who is brilliant enough to win success after love and romance are denied her. She is the slave of ambition and a prisoner of love.

Wooded by men in leading stations in society, disillusioned in her efforts at reforms, she finds satisfying love only as the years crowd in on her and old enemies seek her downfall.

Versatility and a keen judgment of dramatic values possessed by Miss Dunne puts her in command of the characterization throughout. Many critics have given her the highest niche in her brilliant career for the portrayal of the most discussed heroine in modern fiction.

Walter Huston is co-starred with Miss Dunne in the RKO-Radio Pictures' scoop of the century, the entire film world having been hot on the trail of the screen rights to Sinclair Lewis' international literary hit. The supporting parts are in the hands of such outstanding favorites as Conrad Nagel, Edna May Oliver and Bruce Cabot. John Cromwell, consistent creator of hit attractions, directed.

D. & M. R. R. EMPLOYEE DIES SATURDAY

Edw. Marzinski Succumbs to Heart Attack While Driving Car

Edward C. Marzinski, D. & M. Railroad company employe for the past 40 years and well known and highly esteemed citizen of this city, died suddenly Saturday evening following a heart attack. He deceased was 60 years of age. He had apparently been in good health.

Death came to Mr. Marzinski while driving his car by the D. & M. Railroad house. He, with Mrs. Marzinski and daughter, Lillian, were returning from East Tawas. When they passed the round house gate, Mr. Marzinski slumped over in the seat and Mrs. Marzinski quickly took the steering wheel. He was taken to Dr. C. F. Smith's office, but death, it is thought, had come instantly.

The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the Tawas City Baptist church. Rev. Frank Metcalf officiated. Funeral rites were given by Baldwin Lodge, I. O. O. F.

Edward C. Marzinski was born October 25, 1873, at Tawas City, where he had always since made his home. He is survived by the wife and ten children, Victor of East Tawas, Arno, Elsie and Leota of Detroit, Welda of Newport, New Hampshire, and Ella, Louise, Irma, Lillian and Theodora of Detroit, and two brothers, Fred of Alpena and Rev. Emil Marzinski of St. Louis, Missouri. All were present at the funeral except his daughter, Welda of Newport, New Hampshire, and brother, Rev. Emil Marzinski of St. Louis.

Mr. Marzinski was a prominent member of the I. O. O. F., having held many offices of trust in Baldwin Lodge No. 377, of which he had been a member since January 19, 1911. He was a faithful worker in the order. He was also a member of Irene Rebekah Lodge No. 137. He took an active interest in civic affairs and had served as alderman and was at one time a member of the Isoco County Poor Commission.

School Notes

High School

The following high school students received no mark lower than "B" for the past month: Earl Davis, Arnold McLean, Arlene Leslie, Ernestine Cecil, Thome Lincoln, Leonard Hoshach, Patricia Braddock, Albertine Herman, Harvey Rempert, Ida Mae Nolem, Isabelle Dease, and Betty Holland.

The pupils of all grades received report cards Wednesday. One factor to note, in addition to the scholarship, is the citizenship mark. Any high school student who receives a mark of less than "2" in citizenship probably has one of less than the majority of the students.

Because the pupils of the school sold more Christmas seals in the sale of 1932 than any other school of like size in Michigan, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association is making it possible for all to be tested for tuberculosis. This test will be given Tuesday, November 14, under the direction of Dr. T. H. Johnston of the Children's Fund Health Unit. Cards are now being taken home by the pupils in order

Whole World Embarks on Rhythmic 'Melody Cruise'

The whole world embarks on a rhythmic "Melody Cruise" in the film at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, RKO-Radio Pictures' production embodying sensational screen musical novelties, with Charlie Ruggles, Phil Harris, Greta Nissen and Helen Mack in the cast.

"Melody Cruise," coming Sunday and Monday, November 5-6, is said to be unique entertainment, because of its innovation of a story completely set to music. Every action of the players, every movement of transportation, every toot of the whistle and every word uttered forms a note in the melodic symphony. Even fish dance, stars form musical notes and ocean liners waltz on the waves to keep in rhythm with the story.

Mark Sandrich directed "Melody Cruise," incorporating rhythmic dialogue and several songs especially written for this picture by Val Burton and Will Jason, composers of the popular "Penthouse Serenade."

NEW CHARLIE CHAN FILM TO BE SHOWN FOR LEGION BENEFIT

Coming Next Thursday and Friday at Rivoli Theatre

"Charlie Chan's Greatest Case," the new Fox production depicting the latest adventures of that famous Hawaiian detective, will be shown Thursday and Friday, November 9 and 10, at the Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City, for the benefit of the American Legion. The proceeds will be used for improvements at the American Legion hall. The hall is being completely remodeled. All partitions have been removed from the ground floor, making a fine auditorium. The room will be redecorated. A full basement has been constructed. Here the kitchen, dining room and heating plant will be located. When completed, Tawas City will have one of the best Legion halls in northern Michigan.

"Charlie Chan's Greatest Case" is an all-new story... a vastly different situation... and an engrossing atmosphere in which Charlie Chan solves his greatest and most intricate case. Warner Oland again portrays this bland detective whose quaint and human philosophy has delighted audiences for years. Earl Derr Biggers, whose vigorous pen created this picturesque character, has here placed him in a situation unprecedented in detective literature.

Heather Angel has the leading feminine role in this film, and it is her biggest screen part to date. Others in the cast are Roger Imhoff, John Warburton, Walter Byron, Ivan Simpson, Virginia Cherrill, Francis Ford, Robert Warwick, Frank McGlynn, Clara Blandick, Claude King, William Stack, Gloria Roy and Cornelius Keefe.

'Saturday's Millions' Has Early Showing at Family

First of the seasonal football pictures, "Saturday's Millions," coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Friday and Saturday, November 10-11, has much besides topical time-liness. Supporting the sport appeal is a different story premise in which the standard elements of drama, romance, comedy, thrill, spectacle are nicely balanced. Thus while there is enough sport appeal to interest football fans, there is much to lure the other type of patrons.

The title is a natural. Short and unusual, it possesses that ring that stirs curiosity. This asset is made more valuable by the fact that the story appeared recently in the Saturday Evening Post. Name football players are conspicuous by their absence, the entire story being pictured by established screen personalities. Likewise, story treatment has been given a different slant; the hero is a heel all the way through, even to his last grandstand play, in which he loses the big game. Yet, because of this treatment, the boy is continually recipient of audience sympathy.

The cast includes well known stars—Robert Young, Leila Hyams, and Johnny Mack Brown. Also for those who like to see new faces, Lucille Lund, the College Humor All-American girl contest winner, plays a part.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

REDDY'S SMOOTH TONGUE

JERRY MUSKRAT was old enough to know better than to stay around listening to Reddy Fox. But, like most folks, Jerry likes to be praised and to hear nice things said of him and of his things. So when Reddy Fox said that that new house was the finest he ever had seen, and that not even Paddy the Beaver could build such a house, Jerry just couldn't take himself away.

"As long as I am out here in the water I am in no danger," thought Jerry, "and Reddy Fox certainly does know a good thing when he sees it. It is a pleasure to listen to one who understands and appreciates good things."

So Jerry swam around in circles or idly floated on the surface of the Smiling Pool while Reddy Fox talked. Now, as of course you know, and many of the little people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest have found out to their sorrow, Reddy Fox has a wonderfully smooth tongue. A smooth tongue, you know, is one that can say all manner of pleasant and delightful things, things to flatter those who listen.

"I Will Be Glad to Tell You Just How to Build It," Said Jerry.

Reddy grinned down at Jerry in the friendliest way. "If I were in your place, Jerry Muskrat," said he "I certainly would be very proud of such a fine house as that. I fear I should be rather puffed up over it. You don't seem to be, but if you were, I for one would not blame you in the least. May I ask how many rooms you have in it?"

"One," replied Jerry, wriggling all over with delight at this praise of his skill. "That is, I have one above water, but it is very large and comfortable. If you like the looks of my house from the outside you would, I am sure, like it still better if you could see the inside."

"There isn't a doubt of it, Jerry."

"Times were never so bad," says disillusioned Dell, "that a woman couldn't collect on a broken heart."

Indians Catching Salmon on the Columbia River

INDIAN fishermen utilize a net at the end of a long pole to catch salmon as they make the run to the Celilo falls on the Columbia river in Oregon. The Indians have to be very alert as it takes great strength and skill to hold a 30 to 50 pound salmon when it hits the net going at full speed.

There isn't a doubt about it," replied Reddy with great promptness. "I should love to see the inside of it, but I really don't need to in order to appreciate what a perfectly splendid house it is. If I lived in the water I certainly should want you to build me a house. In fact I am not sure but I would like just such a house on land. I think I would if only I knew how to go about building it. Do you suppose I could build one if I had some one to show me how to do it?"

Jerry Muskrat's eyes shone with pleasure at this praise of his house and his skill. For the time being he forgot that Reddy Fox was an enemy for whom all his life long he had had to be on the watch. He swam in a little nearer to the bank.

"Do you really mean that you would like a house like mine, only on land?" he asked.

"I certainly do," replied Reddy. "I can't think of anything I would like as well."

"I will be glad to tell you just how to build it," said Jerry in rather a hesitating way.

Reddy shook his head, still smiling. "I am afraid that wouldn't do," said he. "In fact, I know it wouldn't. I never in the world could do it from being told. I should have to have some one to show me. Oh, Jerry, if you would come with me and just show me how to build such a house I would be the happiest Fox in all the Great World!"

Reddy looked as if he meant every word of it, as indeed he did. A smooth tongue has Reddy Fox. A very smooth tongue.

Reddy looked as if he meant every word of it, as indeed he did. A smooth tongue has Reddy Fox. A very smooth tongue.

to overcome, by one dish of poor food. The following are a few breakfast suggestions:

Orange Honey Crispy.
Peel an orange and separate into sections, removing the membrane. Allow six to eight sections for each serving. Dip each section into honey and turn over in rice or corn flakes, puffed wheat or any of the light cereals which have been warmed until crisp in the oven. Arrange on an attractive plate and serve. Maple sirup may be used in place of honey for variety.

Breakfast Cocktail.
One beaten egg yolk, a pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of honey and the juice of two oranges. Beat well and serve cold. This supplies iron from the egg yolk and vitamins from the orange juice. This is a good drink to give as a mid-meal.

The above recipes are equally good for the nursing mother who needs to take as much liquid as possible. For a child of six years the addition of the juice of half a lemon to a glass of orange juice is recommended to give increased vitamin C and to prevent and cure tooth troubles.

Frosted Orange Juice.
Into a large glass pour a cupful of orange juice. Add a spoonful of vanilla ice cream and stir a moment, then serve.

ess that often calls for a considerable amount of will power. In such circumstances it is an aid to make the practice as difficult as possible; making hazards lend a competitive tone to the play.

For instance, Francis Ouimet as a youngster used to hit his practice iron shots to the green from behind a tree and in each attempt try to hit over the top. Not only was the element of height to be considered, but also the length of the shot in order to land it somewhere near the pin. In time the former amateur champion was able to carry the tree tops in consistent fashion. This valuable practice made shots from the fairway a much simpler process and left a rather confident feeling that even should he land into trouble, he had an excellent chance of recovering without taking an extra stroke.

BEAUTY TALKS

By

MARJORIE DUNCAN

BRUSHES IN BEAUTY SCHEME

IN THE beauty scheme of things, brushes play a very active part. There's the hair brush, nail brush, clothes brush, tooth brush, eyebrow brush, shoe brush, bath brush and if the skin will stand it the complexion brush. These brushes are important accessories toward good grooming and as you value personal loveliness add these beauty aids to your toilettries. And keep them busy, too.

Now let us see what the requisites for the hair brush are: it should have long, flexible bristles, not too soft or the purpose (of stimulating the circulation through the scalp, cleaning and polishing every strand of hair) is defeated. On the other hand, the bristles must not be too stiff or they will irritate the scalp. As in all things the happy medium is preferable in the matter of brush bristles.

Harsh bristles should be avoided—whether in a hair brush, clothes brush, nail brush, etc. Such bristles are unkind to scalp, clothes and hands. This holds for complexion brush too. In fact, such a brush is only for the woman with an oily or heavy type of skin. When using it, the movements should be gently upward and outward. Remember that the skin can be soaped and cleansed, without scrubbing or harsh treatment.

The tooth brush we need not go into. Your dentist is the logical one to advise the type of brush you need. But here again medium bristles are advisable for the majority of people, and remember that the bristles should be so arranged that every tooth and every part of the mouth can be thoroughly cleansed. Every dentist will tell you that two tooth brushes are better than one—and every man, woman and child should own two and alternate them.

The eyebrow brush is a small affair with one or two little rows of bristles and this important accessory is so inexpensive that I know many women who keep two or three in their dressing table drawer. One removes any excess powder remaining on brows and one gives the brows and lashes a silky sheen after the mascara has dried. The way to brush the brows, you know, is first the wrong way, then into place. Lashes are brushed in semi-circular fashion, uppers upward and around as though you would curl every little hair under and the lower lashes downward and around.

THE CLEAN LOOK

EVERYWHERE you go in health and beauty circles you hear a great deal about "that clean look."

The phrase is becoming as popular as a sure-fire wisecrack or a first seller in slogans. It refers to much, much more than superficial cleanliness. It points to perfection and polish.

Some time ago in the course of a beauty lecture I referred to "that clean, crisp look."

I said two things were necessary to achieve it. Perhaps my audience expected me to say: Soap and brushes. But I had reference to: Respect for one's self and respect and thoughtfulness for those around us. And again I repeat that I do not mean merely bathing or washing face and hands. These are important—very important—yes. But they are elementary, fundamental. I take it for granted that every woman has made a habit of bathing every day and keeping her skin clean.

But that clean, crisp look goes further. It includes brushing the hair. The woman who can boast that clean look never has her hair disheveled. Every strand and wisp is in place. For trimness and neatness go with that clean look. Your coiffure may be elaborately intriguing or very simple. The arrangement does not matter—at least it is secondary in importance to a neat, "always-in-place" arrangement which is another way of saying "that clean look."

Brows must be brushed too. They are an important factor in the perfect picture. And if a little wild hair, here and there decides to march backward or out of line it must be disciplined. If brushing won't help—then pluck. But, mind you, pluck only the unruly hairs, for natural brows are now the vogue.

A clean, clear complexion is another important factor. Discolorations, oiliness, shine, blackheads or eruptions all take something away from "that clean look."

Well-kept hands, perfectly groomed nails come in for their share of attention, too.

As for clothes—buttons should be where they belong, stocking seams straight, heels kept in repair and shoes polished, suits and coats brushed free from dust, and lingerie touches always fresh and dainty.

Even make-up when properly applied adds to that clean look.

Learn to relax. I know a busy executive who always looks rested, interesting and alert. The reason for this is: she has learned the value of relaxation. Before and after her lunch she rests for a few minutes. Even if she is at her desk—she simply lets her mind become a complete blank. Then she "lets go" shoulders, arms, her whole body. Or while waiting for her lunch to be served she relaxes.

Howe About:

Slouches
Slow Improvement
"He Means Well"

By ED HOWE

SLOUCHES everywhere who neglect their work have it in them to do about as well as anybody.

Men will cease to be slouches, loafers, bandits, drunkards, killers, when they learn these habits do not pay. That these habits cannot be made to pay is the surest thing in the world. Whether we shall ever be able to learn this truth, I do not know; in fact, I am rather discouraged.

I have long been interested in a man I see at intervals of four or five months. (As a matter of fact, he is my son, now more than forty-five years old.) I wish to pay him the highest compliment one man may pay another. Being my son, he has many weaknesses, but every time I see him I am able to remark that he has decreased the number a little, or more carefully hidden them. His general average in intelligence is a little better; his conversation a little less tiresome. His general attitude toward me is a little better, and I am a little better satisfied with him.

A little improvement, persisted in, is enough. Knowing myself and others, I do not expect too much, and cheer a reasonable average.

Every day around noon a bell rings, and I know another temptation is beckoning: dinner. As I march downstairs to it, I utter this silent prayer: "O, Lord, grant me strength in the ordeal I am about to encounter, that I may not eat too fast, or too much, and select the most suitable food offered. Amen." (In my appeal to the Lord, I mean such intelligence and experience as I am capable of.)

The dinner usually is so good I soon forget my prayer, and violate my scripture. I am one of the great army of which we say of the soldiers: "He means well."

A compliment, possibly, but indicating a poor devil who does not do very well.

The first thing I remember is that ours was a farm family called Howe, and that I was called Ed to distinguish me from a brother Jim, who arrived earlier. Next I heard of a school and a church in the neighborhood which we all attended with some reluctance. Probably a little later I first heard the neighbors talk about a town a considerable distance away, and which they liked to visit, that they might tell tales of its wonders. (An elaboration of this talk about the town included occasional references to a place called the city, which most of the neighbors themselves had only heard of.)

I estimate I was around five years old at that time, and at six began hearing of a still greater thing, still further away and more mysterious than the town or the city. The neighbors called it "The World."

Since the old Sugar creek days, now 75 years in the past, I have visited the town, the city and the world, but the facts have not changed much. There has been elaboration, but Sugar creek facts merged naturally into town facts, town facts into city facts, and city facts into world facts.

Life has never been a very great wonder to me; its mysteries have soon explained themselves. The Sugar creek neighborhood is still there, with its old facts; so is the town and the city, and the world still performs in its usual way. It is I who have worn out, in discussing old things with Sugar creek men, town men, and world travelers. I might have done better, and with less trouble, had I behaved better, worked harder, and acquired more of the sound education and common sense offered daily in my journey from Sugar creek to Mandalay.

The old quarrel between the sexes is as complicated as the old quarrel between the nations.

Every woman indicts the men; every man indicts the women.

Peace, disarmament, getting rid of war, soldiers and guns would seem the easiest thing nations might accomplish, yet war has always been the worst curse of the human race.

Germany tells a terrible story on France, but France tell a worse one on Germany, and increases its armament. Germany is only trying to recover now that it may whip France; another war between these two countries is as certain as that there will be other wars between husbands and wives.

What crimes have been committed by men against women, when women tell the story; what crimes have been committed by women against men, when men are goaded into breaking into the conversation, as they always do. Every one believes in peace, yet there is no peace, and no prospect of it.

A public speaker lately said to a large audience: "We have exhorted you to succeed by hook or by crook." . . . Most of the literature of the radical disturbers is false. I have never received such advice from anyone in my life; I have never read any such advice. Mothers give daughters no advice more persistently than fathers warn their sons against crooked methods when they go out in the world as men; the scarlet woman is no more marked example of failure among daughters than is the thief or loafer among sons.

TO MOTHERS

whose children won't EAT

Nature knows best. Never coax a child to eat! Remove the cause of a youngster's poor appetite. When appetite fails, tongue is coated white, eyes are a bilious yellow, don't give small children a constipating cathartic that drains the system. California syrup of figs is all the "medicine" they require.

Specialists will tell you that a sluggish appetite almost always means the child has a sluggish colon. Correct this condition called stasis, and see how quickly a listless, drooping boy or girl begins to eat—and gain! The only "medicine" such children seem to need is pure, unadulterated fig syrup.

Children who get syrup of figs, now and then, soon have the appetite and energy of young animals! They keep well and avoid colds and sluggish spells.

Nature never made a finer laxative for children; and they all love the wholesome, fruity flavor of the real California syrup of figs. It's purely vegetable, but every druggist has it all bottled, with directions. Begin with it at once. The very next day, your child will be eating better and feeling better. Keep on with the syrup of figs a few days and see amazing improvement in appetite, color, weight, and spirits.

The promises made by the bottlers of California Syrup of Figs are true, and it will do the same for you, if it's genuine CALIFORNIA. Don't accept substitutes.

THE new Griffith observatory and hall of science is near completion on a mountain top overlooking Hollywood, Calif. Unique in that it will be used for public education and pleasure rather than for purely scientific purposes, the observatory's scientific equipment will rank with the world's finest. One of the prominent features will be the planetarium which demonstrates the movements of the stars by projecting their images on an overhead dome. The institution is the gift of the late Col. NEW JERSEY

The Boardwalk, Atlantic City.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

BARNEGAT light house, hard hit by the recent hurricane which swept the Atlantic coast, will be saved, according to reports from the New Jersey capital. The state board of commerce and navigation will ask for $12,000 of state funds to protect the light.

Although Barnegat is a famous landmark of the state, New Jersey is more widely known, particularly among Americans in playful mood, because it is the state in which Atlantic City is situated.

All the great treks of history—the Persians under Xerxes, the Huns under Attila, the Moslems under Mohammed II, the "Golden Horde" of Tatars, the Norman invasion, and the Crusades—shrink to thin ranks when measured against Atlantic City's 12,000,000 annual visitors. All the population of a nation like Argentina or Canada, or almost twice the population of the Australian continent, pilgrimating in a few months to a strip of sand ten miles long and a half to three-quarters of a mile wide!

Less than one hundred years ago Atlantic City was a nameless cluster of fishermen's huts on Absecon island. Then came rails from Philadelphia, and the first excursion train, July 1, 1854. Its 500 passengers taxed the pioneer resort. But what would its early innkeepers say now if they could see Atlantic City receiving 500 visitors every minute during 12 hours of a July Fourth or Labor day week-end!

The famed Boardwalk begins at the inlet and parallels the ocean shore for seven miles through Atlantic City, and the adjoining municipalities of Ventnor and Margate City. Not all of Atlantic City's 12,000,000 annual visitors swim, sail, fish, or take part in the other amusements the resort affords, but all of them walk, or ride in a rolling chair, along this incomparable Boardwalk.

On the Boardwalk.

To-day's Boardwalk is a giant highway, as wide as a boulevard, carried on high concrete pillars and steel beams. Sixty miles north it is almost equaled in the Asbury Park boardwalk, and many other New Jersey resorts imitate it.

What a paradox this Boardwalk presents! Often it is one of the busiest thoroughfares in the world. Yet in that very bustle is leisure.

Something reminiscent of the country fair is here. On a pier a dozen haggard couples dance a marathon, shuffling around a waxed floor for more than 2,000 hours. Convention delegates crowd a mammoth auditorium. A flagpole sitter braves the sun and wind and storms night and day for weeks. Salt-water-taffy machines flick out morsels before your eyes. A Boardwalk photographer will take a "celebrity picture" of you. As you stroll toward him he steps up and snaps you.

But Atlantic City, with its variety and contrasts, is but one of New Jersey's many facets. If variety be the spice of life, New Jersey is a highly seasoned state.

Mountain, plain, and seashore; lakes, forests, and mighty rivers; cities, colonial villages, and suburbs keyed to the modern age; airways, superhighways, electrified railroads, canals, and country lanes; giant industries, craftsmen's shops, universities, historic shrines, manorial estates, and log cabins—New Jersey has them all.

Two Jerseys in Early Days.

Once there were two "Jerseys," an East New Jersey, with its capital at Perth Amboy, and West New Jersey, with capitals at Salem and Burlington.

Before the Revolution East New Jersey was sold at public auction to William Penn and a group of Quaker associates, who already held West New Jersey. William Penn gained his first colonizing experience in New Jersey, years before his Pennsylvania venture.

More than an artificial boundary line separated the two "Jerseys." East New Jersey was developed largely by Puritans from New England, while West New Jersey was colonized by the Friends.

At first New Jersey had no name. It was lumped with New York and a part of New England by the Dutch under the title of New Netherlands. Later it was known as "Nova Caesarea," and finally as New Jersey, in honor of Sir George Carteret, one of its first proprietors, who had formerly been a governor of the Channel Island of Jersey.

The easy way to explore New Jersey now is by motor over its 1,300 miles of paved state highways and 4,000 miles of county roads, mostly surfaced. Even the villages and almost every farmhouse in the state have all-weather pavement to their doors.

Outline a "figure eight" tour through the state, and you can touch most of its resorts, historic shrines, forest and farm lands, cities and industrial regions, as well as the mountain lakes of the north.

Seeing the State by Motor Car.

Starting from Atlantic Highlands you swing down the east coast, turning west at Delaware bay; thence through rich farms along the bay and river to Camden and the state capital, Trenton. Thence across the "waist" of central New Jersey; one of the world's busiest traffic arteries, you push on to the industrial region and suburbs around Newark, with a final loop through the northern counties and back to the seaboard.

Nowhere is there a more animated strip of seacoast than the 120 miles of eastern New Jersey facing the Atlantic ocean. Here, to more than 60 different resorts, millions upon millions of Americans, Canadians, and others come each year in search of health and recreation—to swim, fish, sail, walk, play games, or rest.

Except for occasional intervening inlets or marshy islands, the resorts crowd closely along the beach, one after another. Fishermen's havens, camp-meeting colonies, and private beach clubs of the wealthy march in line with tourist-tent communities, cottage rows, and vast playground cities like Atlantic City, Long Branch, and Asbury Park.

Now a new ocean drive, in plain view of the surf, runs southward from Long Branch to the twin communities of Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. Although one is very unlike the other today, both were founded in 1809 as religious havens, or camp-meeting resorts. With its convention halls, piers, boardwalk shops, theaters, and large hotels, Asbury Park differs sharply from residential, sectarian Ocean Grove.

Beauty of "the Plains."

A few miles inland from Barnegat bay, along the lonely border between Ocean and Burlington counties, New Jersey has a strange and deserted expanse of waste land known as "the Plains."

Most of the year the Plains are desolate and forbidding; but in spring, when the pink laurel is in bloom, or during the autumn, when the oak leaves turn to scarlet, the region has a compelling beauty.

At Manahawkin, on the trunk highway that follows the coast, a new causeway strikes out over the marshes to Long Beach, the loneliest and least-known section of the New Jersey seaboard. Here one may drive for miles among rolling, grass-covered dunes, where only an occasional coast guard station recalls civilization. At the extreme northern end of the island rises the deserted shaft of Barnegat Light, most renowned of Jersey lighthouses.

Ocean City, farther down the coast, is linked with Atlantic City's Absecon island by a new steel bridge. Some day all the island resorts will be connected by highway bridges. Ocean City is one of the gateways to Cape May county, "New Jersey's Way Down East."

Cape May City is one of the oldest seashore resorts in the United States. Advertisements describing its beach, horseback riding, and tavern appeared in Philadelphia newspapers as early as 1776, and it was popular after the Revolution.

Today Cape May's principal industry is fishing. The annual catch of mackerel, bass, tuna, and other food fishes landed in its harbor is valued at more than $2,500,000.

Let us now leave "holiday land" and swing westward into the four southwestern counties of New Jersey—Cumberland, Salem, Gloucester, and Camden—a little empire of rich farming land. Onward we roll through acre after acre of tomatoes, beans, cauliflower, eggplant, cabbage, and sweet potatoes.

Here, too, are the silicon deposits that give Millville and Bridgeton a prosperous glass industry; the peach orchards of an important fruit belt; large poultry farms in the vicinity of Vineland; and the oyster beds and fisheries of the Delaware Bay region that make the town of Bivalve, at the mouth of the Maurice river, a miniature Baltimore for sea food.

Ease Pain Now In Few Minutes

A Discovery That's Bringing Fast Relief To Millions

Now comes amazingly quick relief from headaches, rheumatism, neuritis, neuralgia... the fastest safe relief, it is said, yet discovered.

Those results are due to a scientific discovery by which a Bayer Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. A Bayer Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it. And this is ready to go to work almost instantly.

When you buy, though, see that you get the Genuine BAYER Aspirin. For Bayer Aspirin's quick relief always say "BAYER Aspirin."

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

Drop a Bayer Tablet in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches bottom, it has started to disintegrate.

What it does in this glass it does in your stomach. Hence its fast action.

MANY LETTERS Addressed to You Personally

THINK of the advertisements in this paper as so many letters addressed to you personally. That's what they're intended to be, and, actually, that's what they are. This newspaper is, in effect, a mail-bag which brings you news of events and news of the best merchandise at the fairest prices.

You don't throw away letters unread. You don't read three or four letters carefully and skim through the rest. Treat the "merchandise letters" in this newspaper the same way. Read them all. Read them carefully. One single item will often repay you for the time it has taken to read them all.

Many good housekeepers have formed the habit of reading their newspaper with a pencil and paper, ready to jot down the articles they wish to look at when they start out on their shopping tour. Try this method. It saves time, and saves money, and provides you with the pick of the day's merchandise.

POULTRY

FEED PULLETS TO GET THEM TO LAY

Grain, Vegetables, Gravel, Water Necessary.

For maintaining egg production during fall and winter months when egg prices are highest the following practices are recommended to farmers and poultrymen by O. C. Ufford, extension poultryman for the Colorado Agricultural college:

Pullets probably will require about 10 to 12 pounds of grain per day for each 100 hens of the heavy breeds, and about 8 to 10 pounds daily for the same number of hens of the lighter breeds such as Leghorns at the beginning of production.

Feed one-third of the grain in the morning and two-thirds for the evening feed in a straw litter at least an hour before dusk.

A good laying mash should be kept before the hens all the time in non-wasting hoppers. If one feeds a wet mash, make it quite crumbly and give only amounts the hens will clean up in about a half hour of feeding.

Be regular in daily feeding and care of the flock.

Green feed is an important part of the ration. Some of the sources of green feed are alfalfa, carrots, beets, cabbage and lawn clippings that may have been saved and dried during summer months.

Water is a most important part of the ration. Water composes two-thirds of the egg and the same proportion of the chicken's body.

A simple, although quite satisfactory winter ration commonly used for laying hens includes the following grain mixture: Cracked or whole corn, 60 pounds; wheat, 40 pounds. The mash mixture consists of 20 pounds each of fine cornmeal, bran, shorts, ground oats or barley, and meat meal.

Early Winter Eggs Worth More Than Spring Supply

A dozen eggs laid in winter by the flock are worth as much as two dozen laid in the springtime. This is a general rule laid down by R. E. Cray, extension specialist in poultry husbandry for the Ohio State university.

Past records would indicate, Cray said, that in a short time eggs probably will be three or four times as valuable as they were last spring.

To induce hens to lay when eggs are worth the most, Cray offers the following suggestions:

Make the birds eat more than they really want. This can be accomplished by feeding wet mash. Mix some of the regular dry mash with enough milk to make it crumbly wet. Feed this once a day in quantities the chickens will consume in half an hour.

Rid the birds of lice and mites. Lice may be eliminated by painting the roosts with a coating of nicotine sulphate just before the hens go to roost. Mites may be kept out of the poultry house by painting the roosts and roost supports once a year with carbolineum.

Ventilated Trap-Nests

Open trap-nests are advocated in some quarters. The sides are constructed of laths or other similar material, admitting cool air freely, and these are covered with wire screening to keep out other hens, mice and other nuisances.

POULTRY GLEANINGS

Only strong, sturdy chicks develop into profitable, mature birds.

With the Leghorns production can safely be encouraged at five months.

North Dakota ranks second only to Texas in the production of turkeys.

A flock of 100 white leghorn pullets must eat from 24 to 25 pounds of mash and grain daily.

The white Muscovy duck has a pinkish-white bill, blue eyes, orange or yellow shanks and toes and pure white plumage.

One of the best ways to make hens exercise is to feed all scratch grain in clean dry litter, such as wheat or oat straw, four or five inches deep.

But little seems to be known about vitamin C in its relation to a balanced ration for poultry. It is asserted that it is possible to keep birds in health for a considerable time without it.

ARE WOMEN POOR SPORTS?

Game laws, according to Miss Nadine Strayer, of Baker, Ore., are being evaded every year by thousands of skirted anglers. She told the state game commission that they go fishing with their husbands or male relatives and think nothing of having no license. She proposes that women's "sportsmen's clubs" be organized to end such law evasion.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

House guests enjoy a certain amount of freedom from entertainment. It is well for hostesses to remember this when they are planning a round of entertainments for visitors.

One charming woman said to me recently: "I never make visits now. They are too taxing."

They are too taxing. The last place I visited I felt like a prisoner. I couldn't even go out to mail a letter. One of the maids was sent to do it, or some one in the family went if the maids were all busy.

Acquaintance With Affairs. Another thing which visitors like to be informed of plans somewhat. They like to know when the hostess will be occupied. If they don't, they

LIQUIDITY

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The dictionary defines liquidity as "the state of being liquid, a condition in which all particles move freely among themselves."

Many of the banks which failed during the last few years were not in a liquid condition even though they may have been solvent. Their money was invested in loans which were called frozen because the borrowers, even though perfectly good and reliable, were not able to pay.

Another Carideo?

mands upon them and were therefore liquid. The very same condition applies to business concerns. Many failed or went into bankruptcy because they needed cash with which to pay their debts and were not able to borrow sufficiently to meet the demands of creditors.

Liquidity is a condition which does not create itself nor is it the result of mere chance or luck. The state of being liquid is perhaps one of the most difficult to attain. This is true of the individual as well as banks and business concerns.

People are susceptible to the same temptations and mistakes as are banks and business concerns. Liquidity when applied to our personal finances simply means that we spend a little less than we earn.

Queen Likely to Rule British Empire Again

Daughter of York Third in Line for Throne.

New York.—Will the prince of Wales—the prince of youth, as the world hails him—be England's first bachelor king in nearly two centuries?

That is the query which runs through the British empire as apprehension grows about the state of health of King George V.

For fourteen years the world has been romantically speculating as to the prince's choice for a companion on the throne which must inevitably be his if he outlives his father.

It is one of the puzzles of the world as to why the prince, nearing forty, has side stepped bell, book and candle.

England has come to believe that the prince of youth has become a convinced and convicted bachelor, and to have privately made up his mind to go it alone and mount the throne the first unmarried king since George III was crowned in 1760.

The prince has never been the same since the well-nigh fatal illness of his father several years ago. There seems little doubt that he planned at one time to abdicate his right to succession; to retire to his ranch in Canada, but the indications now, such as they are, would seem to point to the fact that he intends to carry on—to go through with it, to mount the throne probably as Edward VIII—but, mind you, as a bachelor.

Such being the case, who is next in line? None other, if you please, than the world's most famous baby girl who reached on Friday, April 21, 1933, the advanced age of seven. Her birthdays, the birthdays of little Mary Elizabeth, oldest child of the duke of York and as such heir presumptive to the British throne, take an increasing importance now that the bachelorhood of the prince of Wales seems to be a settled fact.

She is the blue-eyed, golden-haired granddaughter of George V and Mary, his queen, and today stands third in succession, after the prince of Wales and her father, to the rule of the greatest empire since the Rome of Augustus Caesar.

From the moment of her birth Princess Elizabeth has been wrapped about with the love of parents and devoted grandparents, of cousins and uncles and friends. She has been the object of admiring affection from thousands in England and beyond the seas who have never seen her even.

The world's best known little girl is being brought up as simply as her position will permit.

She has been going to church since she was five, because Queen Mary is a great believer in teaching children to sit still and to listen. Her training more and more assumes the character of the training that must be given to the presumptive ruler of more than one-fourth of the population of the earth.

The throne today would pass thus: (1) prince of Wales; (2) duke of York; (3) Princess Elizabeth; (4) Princess Margaret Rose, second daughter of the duke of York (5) duke of Gloucester, and (6) Prince George. Princess Elizabeth can be deprived of the succession only by a younger brother if in due course he should arrive.

CHAPTER I

The wedding was over. In the litter of confetti that concealed the pattern of the rug on the floor the foyer bore silent witness to the fact that the bride and groom had departed. The catering had been lavish; the wine, in days of supposed drought, veritable; and the apartment, among the most beautiful and spacious in New York, entirely suitable for a function that had united an American family of distinction with the English nobility.

At last most of the guests had gone or were reluctantly making ready to go, under which circumstances the three elder Lovely sisters felt that they were free to indulge their desire for private conversation without giving the impression of a family council. "Cyril had to rush off to a patient just after the ceremony," Lucy said. "What did you think of it, Laura?"

"It was a beautiful wedding. I don't believe I could have improved on it," Laura conceded graciously.

"It will cost poor Bill-Lee a fortune. Ridiculously extravagant, I call it," Lucy went on.

Louise nodded briskly. "The Scotch blood in the Lovely ancestry is coming out in you, Lucy. Why should you worry? It isn't going to cost you anything. After all, it would have been deplorable if this had been a shabby function. As an international affair, nothing else has been talked of for the past month. This marriage, and Smif's stage management of it, won't take a penny out of your purse and certainly reflects great credit on the family."

"How Smif has done it on what she has a year is more than I can understand," Lucy hinted. "The very last letter I had from Bill-Lee said business in South America had gone to pot," she went on; "every year he had hoped he would make a killing and be able to send Smif something; but this year there was just no use kidding himself—there wasn't a Chinaman's chance of it."

"Bill-Lee's way of expressing himself—" Laura began, only to be interrupted by Louise, struck by more than the wording of what was plainly a quotation from their brother:

"You can't mean he never has sent her anything? Why, Cintra's education alone—and this wedding! You're right, Lucy. It must have cost a fortune."

"Oh, not so much perhaps," Laura cut in, characteristically unwilling to borrow trouble, "after all, Susan Phelps helped substantially when she lent Smif this apartment. I think it was awfully decent of Susan."

Lucy sniffed.

"Susan wasn't entirely disinterested. It was one way to make sure that her precious Pamela would be invited to be a bridesmaid. She never offered any of us such a chance. If Cintra had been marrying a plain, everyday American I doubt if Susan would have been so generous."

"Perhaps she's fonder of Smif than she is of us—"

"There's no need of speculating on that," Laura interrupted Louise, "she let Smif use it. Hadn't we better go? We'll be the last, if we aren't careful."

"That's all right," Laura reassured her, "we're the family. I mean to stay until I've seen Smif. I've never dared to ask her, and I'm wondering what she'll do with herself now that she's lost Cintra."

"Poor old Smif. It really is a tragedy when you come to think of her side of the affair. You can't deny that she has given up her whole life to that child. I've said it before and I say it again, Bill-Lee had no right to saddle her with his offspring, young as she was then." Louise looked at Lucy challengingly and Lucy took up the challenge.

"Louise always talks as if she were the only one who cares for Smif. I adore her and so do you, Laura. She's the most considerate, the most generous person I know. But neither of us is blind to the unfortunate facts. I shall always insist that Bill-Lee saved her face by providing her with an occupation in life when his wife died."

"Smif's going to be awfully lonely," Laura expertly managed to give the effect of agreeing with both of her sisters. "Oh, dear, she was the best-looking of any of us when she was a baby. Why did she have to turn out like this? It makes you feel too conspicuous for words to take her around with you. You all know what I mean. I don't mind if people stare at me because I'm specially well dressed or looking better than usual. They stare at Smif as if they believed she must have escaped from a sideshow. Yet can't you remember how proud poor Daddy was, showing us off to his friends? 'The lovely ladies,' he'd say as if proposing a toast, 'my four queens.' Then he'd snatch Smif up and set her on his shoulder. 'And this one's the trump, isn't she?' he'd ask; and every one would agree with him."

"Smif's complexion's fine and she has nice eyes with curly lashes," Louise began.

"No one denies, my dear, that she would be passable if she'd lose a ton or two," Lucy snapped.

"Talking about me," a rich, almost unctuous voice declared with no uncertainty and the utmost indifference. "Well, what do you suggest that I should do about it?"

The response was prompt. "Hollywood diet!" from Laura. "Cyril would prescribe thyroid extract, salt free diet and five meals a day—if you can call them meals," Lucy contributed.

The chorus was eager and earnest, and Smif laughed.

"Forget it, girls. If anything would make a sylph of me surely this wedding would have. How did you like it?"

"Perfect!" the sisters agreed in chorus, but Lucy had to add:

"Regardless of expense, wasn't it?"

"Practically," Smif confessed. "It isn't every day the Lovely family acquires a belted earl. It seemed suitable to celebrate the capture. Moreover, his earldom's a good fellow. What he saw in Cintra's beyond me. She hasn't the brains of a mosquito, I told him."

"You didn't!" Lucy cried incredulously.

"I did. Why not? I always play fair. I said those very words—and he said: 'Good. I don't like brainy women. What I want to know—is she sound and kind? Warranted steady in double harness? No kicking over the traces or jumping gates looking for better pasture?' No, I said, 'she'd not have imagination enough to think of such a thing.' 'Good again,' said he, 'my last fancy wrote novels. I'm off imagination for life. How's her temper?' said he. 'Sweet as apple-blossoms,' said I, 'and just about as stimulating.' 'She'll do,' said he. 'When I want excitement I can go to India after big game. I no longer pine for temperament in the home.' 'Please don't be in a hurry about this. You're a bit young to settle down to Cintra's pace,' I warned him. 'Remember, she's always the same. Beautiful, perfect, never a hair out of place, as exciting as a rice pudding.' 'And as wholesome,' he cut in. 'It's no use, Smif, old

"What she ought to do," Lucy interrupted briskly, "is to buy a small place in the country. She could raise chickens or dogs."

"And we could send the children to her for the summer holidays," Louise submitted the suggestion dryly. "Just like Bill-Lee. Dump our responsibilities on her shoulders. You make me positively savage. Why don't you apply for admission for her to a Home for Indigent Spinsters? Smif hasn't asked you for anything. You don't even know what she needs help. When she does will be time enough for you to decide for her what she had better do. She succeeded in educating Cintra, brought her out and married her to an entirely desirable man without assistance or advice from any of us. I'm ready to risk a guess that she'll continue to manage her affairs in her own way, and I, for one, am content to let her!"

"I'm sure no one wants to interfere if she isn't in a hole financially," Laura

Don't you see how pathetic she is? Actually doing her best to scare Lester off in the hope that she wouldn't have to part with Cintra."

"Nonsense!" Lucy presented her view in answer to Louise. "Smif was very clever there. Lester can never say Cintra's family jumped down his throat. And Smif knew that all Englishmen are bullheaded; oppose them and they're twice as bent on getting their way. What I'm worrying about is the money question. Do you suppose she is going to ask us to contribute to the expenses? Because I may as well say at once that it is impossible for Cyril and me to help her. With the stock market collapsed, a fashionable doctor's is the last bill to be paid."

"I'll do what I can," Laura said. "Jim is an angel about money matters."

"Smif wasn't hinting," Louise faced the other two indignantly. "You ought to know her better than that. Ned always says she's 'damnable independent.' Honestly, I'm worried about her. Left alone like this—"

"What she ought to do," Lucy interrupted briskly, "is to buy a small place in the country. She could raise chickens or dogs."

"And we could send the children to her for the summer holidays," Louise submitted the suggestion dryly. "Just like Bill-Lee. Dump our responsibilities on her shoulders. You make me positively savage. Why don't you apply for admission for her to a Home for Indigent Spinsters? Smif hasn't asked you for anything. You don't even know what she needs help. When she does will be time enough for you to decide for her what she had better do. She succeeded in educating Cintra, brought her out and married her to an entirely desirable man without assistance or advice from any of us. I'm ready to risk a guess that she'll continue to manage her affairs in her own way, and I, for one, am content to let her!"

"I'm sure no one wants to interfere if she isn't in a hole financially," Laura hazarded, eager as always to sidestep trouble. "We were only afraid from what she said that she might need money—and where it was to come from in the present financial depression—"

"Exactly," said Lucy vaguely. "She's not the only person who's hard up. With four children that becomes a chronic condition. And this is so unexpected, Louise. If we had ever had to help her before it would be different. We would have saved up for it, whereas now we are utterly unprepared."

Louise had never liked her elder sisters less. Of a sudden they seemed to her selfish and self-centered. As far as money went, she and Ned Carter had less at their command than either of the other families. They lived on Louise's income and put all Ned made back into his business. They had bought a tiny house out on Long Island, pretty as a Dutch toy and just right for a bride, which the arrival of two babies in rapid succession had crowded to the roof-tree.

"If Smif needs help, she can depend on Ned and me," Louise rejoined. "I'm sorry if you two are so poverty-stricken that you can't afford to do anything for your sister—"

Before the others had rallied their forces to reply to this attack, which was as unexpected as a pet lamb's letting out the roar of a lion, Smif again bore down on them.

"It's too bad, girls. I'll have to go ahead of the others with Susan. She's depending on me to help her through this party of Pam's."

"But, Smif, when will we see you again?" Louise asked, her solicitude creeping into her voice and sensitive little face.

Impulsively Smif kissed her.

"We want to know where you are going to live now that Cintra's gone?" Laura asked. "Will you keep your apartment? I fancy it's bigger than you'll need—"

"A little house in the country—"

Lucy began, until the understanding expression on Smif's broad face cut her short in mid-career.

"Invite us all to lunch with you, Laura, a week from today. By that time I ought to have escaped from the after-effects of the wedding. I'll tell you all my plans then."

"Then you have plans?"

Smif grinned, a grin of sheer amusement at the thought of the reception the older girls were certain to accord those plans.

"I should say I have! Exciting plans—but I must hurry. That's Pam calling me."

"Not without telling us what you're going to do?" Louise implored her.

"I don't mind telling you," said Smif, "only I'm rather afraid you won't like it when you hear it. I'm going to be an adventuress."

She passed out into the foyer and a moment later the clang of the elevator door as it closed behind her told them that she was really gone.

CHAPTER II

At first glance the history of the Lovelys, of Lovelylea, Va., presented little of interest to the ingesting news-monger or novelist. They were not the legendary penniless patricians, imolated on the altar of their pride by the Civil war. On the contrary, the war that pauperized many of their neighbors brought developments which had made the Lovelys of that day vulgarly rich for their time. Immediately thereafter, heartless ill-bred capitalists from the hated North had penetrated their fastnesses to discover coal on lands belonging to them in West Virginia; and while it was a regrettable fact that a higher price might have been realized had the Lee Lovely then reigning been less scornful of advice and of business methods, it is pleasant to remember that for a property regarded as so worthless that the aforesaid heartless capitalists had to convince him that he alone owned and could give title to it, he received a sum that permitted him vintage wines and every indulgence, and of which enough remained at the time of his death to make his son a rich man. His heir, in his turn, died before he had time to impair this inheritance. His son, another Lee Lovely, married, the day he came of age, a girl who proved to be a restraining influence, and that early marriage was blessed punctually every two years by progeny.

All the children were handsome but the youngest, named Matilda Smith, after her mother's mother, was a picture. Before she could walk, her mother being dead, her father carried her in front of him on his saddle, exhibiting her to friends and relations. His pet name for her was "Loveliness," a name which as soon as she could talk she repudiated with scorn.

"Name is Smif, Smif, Smif!" she would shout. And he accepted, as did every one else, the name of Smif for his youngest born. She was the baby, the pet of the older children and of the whole family connection. Smif was quite a big girl before she learned to speak plainly. By that time it would have required a violent effort to break the habit of calling her Smif, and no Lovely was given to effort except in the search for amusement.

Lee Lovely was killed by a fall from his mount returning from a hunt, and young Bill-Lee, now Lee Lovely in his turn, reigned in his stead.

To every one's surprise, when the will was read he proved to have come into an empty inheritance. Lee Lovely the elder had divided his money equally among his daughters, all minors, who had no power to assist their brother before they came of age however much they might desire to do so. Each of them received a round hundred thousand dollars, Bill-Lee the ten-thousand-acre estate of Lovelylea, the non-existent residuary estate and the injunction to give his sisters a home as long as they remained unmarried.

Young Bill-Lee, at that time twenty-two years old, taking Smif with him for company, rode over to his Grandmother Cuipeper's to discuss the situation.

Grandmother Cuipeper, who looked both frail and brittle, like a Chelsea figure grown wrinkled, was yet a personality whose opinions carried weight. Grandfather Cuipeper had been gathered to his fathers years before, but the old lady still dispensed justice and advice in his name.

"As I see it, Grandmama," Bill-Lee expounded, "the only thing for me to do is to find some rich Yank who wants to hunt or raise hounds and rent the place to him, while I go away and try to make the money I'll need to live here as a Lovely should."

His grandmother accepted without protest the fact that a lean life on starved acres could hold nothing to tempt one of his blood.

"Laura says I'll be the richest of the family by the time I come of age, Bill-Lee. I'll give you all my money, so don't worry," Smif had listened to their conversation with interest and a precocious understanding of the situation, and Bill-Lee smiled at their grandmother over her burnished head as Smif went on: "Laura can't spare any. She says she and Lucy will need all they have in New York—"

"New York?" Recognizing the validity of this second-hand information, her grandmother had seized on it with extreme disapproval.

"Yes, ma'am," Smif nodded. "They're going up there to be married to mighty rich gentlemen."

"Thank you, Smif," said Bill-Lee gravely and in good faith, "when I need help I'll certainly call on you all. . . . Now, Grandmama, this is my plan, ma'am. I'll rent the place, with Masters to stay on as superintendent. Anyway, it wouldn't be right for the girls to live there with no one but me to look after them, even if I saw my way to staying. They ought to go to good boarding schools. The education they get down here with governesses isn't worth two bits. I'm going to Chile. Nitrates come from there, you know, ma'am. I've been talking to Crossman Barden, who's just back, and he says there's every opportunity for men with push and a little capital."

"But the capital, Bill-Lee—I mean Lee."

"Bill-Lee is right, Grandmama. Time enough to be Lee when I take over Lovelylea. The capital, ma'am, will come from my tenant. Masters will forward me the excess over taxes and other expenses, and I'll take a job in Valpo (that's what they call Valparaiso), while I learn the language and look about me carefully before I invest. I mean to make my eternal fortune and come back to Virginia in style."

Mrs. Cuipeper smiled, indulgent of his youthful enthusiasm and saying nothing to discourage it, since she was too straitened in circumstances to offer the aid she would have liked to extend. Cintra, her daughter, and Smif's mother, had been the youngest of her six children and the others all had families as numerous as the Lovely brood and, being less affluent, were a constant drain on her resources in one way or other; moreover she felt that Bill-Lee had hit upon a scheme that held out some faint hope of success. Let the boy go. To be on his own resources would make a man of him, and meanwhile Lovelylea would be kept up. On his return a way might open for him to live there as the head of the Lovely clan should.

From then on, with his grandmother's approval, Bill-Lee had carried his arrangements forward with a rush. Following the plan he had made, he had gone to Chile and his grandmother never saw him again although she had lived to see Cintra, his daughter, who at the age of eight was sent north to the care of her Aunt Smif, then only twenty-two herself. Bill-Lee had remembered his youngest sister's proffer of aid and had turned to her confidently when he needed help after the death of his wife, the penniless daughter of the American consul at Guayaquil. By that time both Lucy and Louise were married, comfortably if not brilliantly settled. Smif had begun to change from the charming child he remembered into a huge woman, so over-weighted with flesh that she was always judged to be far more than her age.

Laura, the most beautiful as well as the eldest of the Lovely sisters, at that date was also still unmarried. She had one passion and one only; the preservation of her beauty by natural, not artificial, means. To insure that she took many precautions. She was very popular, very handsome, and, as the years went by, she kept a place for herself in the young set as it matured by a carefully calculated generosity.

Her choice, for a husband, had fallen on James Hammersley, a man verging on fifty. Jim Hammersley was rich; able and willing to gratify her whims; his social position was, as she expressed it to Lucy, her sole confidante, "entirely suitable for a Lovely Lovelylea." There would be no necessity for her to struggle to assert herself.

FEAST AND FUN IN BRIDAL RITE

Hungarian Weddings Full of Pagan Tradition.

There is hardly anything more picturesque than a Hungarian wedding celebrated with much revelry and merrymaking, a correspondent of the New York World-Telegram writes. The racial peculiarities of Hungarian peasant wedding customs derive from ancient pagan traditions and from the popular mind. Such weddings usually take place in autumn after the vintage. Customs may vary, but generally they are as follows:

At the feast of the betrothal, a plate covered with an embroidered cloth is presented to the betrothed so that they may collect the so-called "kiss-money." The guests put money into the plate, according to their means, and at every gift the young couple must kiss each other. The money collected is held in high esteem—being the first the two young people have earned together—and it is either saved for the future household or spent on presents they give each other.

On the third Sunday after the betrothal, the master of ceremonies, decorated with gay ribbons and a garland by the bridesmaids and bearing a bunch of flowers on a staff, starts on his round. He calls on all the relations and friends of the couple, pronouncing an invitation to the wedding in verses. On the next day, Monday, they make a great ceremony of carrying the bride's bed to the house of the groom, together with other pieces of the dowry, such as a chest carved and painted with a brilliant design of tulips, containing cloths and linen, the distaff and the reel, household implements, and, with wise foresight, a cradle. All this is stipulated by the marriage contract.

On Tuesday, the guests go to the bride's home to help prepare and cook the meals for the wedding, which takes place on Wednesday. Early in the morning the guests assemble at the bride's home. The best man and the person giving away the bride haggle in humorous verses over the bride. The splendid humor inborn in the Hungarian people portrays itself at such occasions in witticisms and impromptu rhymes, and finally the guests must put up the money the two demand.

Of old, it used to be gold pieces, but nowadays it is mostly pennies. This is called the "wreath money." Now the party proceeds to the church amid music, cheering and pistol-shots. The young men carry flasks of wine and invite every passerby to drink the health of the young couple.

MEDICAL ADVICE

If you want to

- ... keep the bowel action regular and comfortable
- ... make constipated spells as rare as colds
- ... avoid danger of bowel strain

—use a liquid laxative

Can constipation be overcome? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" declare thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not apt to cure your constipation with salts, pills and cathartics. But you can overcome this condition just by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the average person's bowels just as regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time.

Why Hospitals use a liquid laxative

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will it irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it!

In buying any laxative, read the label. If it contains a doubtful drug, don't take it. If you don't know what is in it, don't chance it. The contents of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is stated plainly on the label; fresh herbs, pure pepsin, active senna.

Its very taste tells you syrup pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. Drugstores have it ready for use, in big bottles.

THE TEST:

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels," but strong cathartics!

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: Take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used.
