"Too Much Harmony," New Sensation, Coming to Rivoli

A few years ago Paramount produced an outstanding musical picture titled "Close Harmony." Since that time the screen has witnessed many more musicals, but none has excelled "Too Much Harmony," a sort of sequel to that first film, which comes to the Rivoli Theatre, Tawas City, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, November 12-13-14.

Like most of Hollywood's musical comedies, it is a stage picture, but the action largely takes place between the closing curtain of one season, and the opening performance of the next. This does not, however, stop Bing Crosby, who heads the cast, from singing his best, or the chorus from dancing.

Humor in profusion is provided by Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Harry Green, Ned Sparks, Sammy Cohen, Lilyan Tashman, Kitty Kelly and Grace Bradley. Given clever lines and situations, these veterans of Broadway are hilarious in their respective roles.

LeRoy Prinz, a newcomer to Hollywood, definitely establishes himself in the front rank of dance directors with this picture. Two of his routines, "Black Moonlight" and "Buckin' the Wind," are about the most spectacular ever offered on the screen.

Judith Allen has the leading feminine role opposite Crosby. Miss Allen had played but one previous role before being assigned the part in "Too Much Harmony," but proved that faith in her had not been misplaced by her thoroughly effective performance.

Card of Thanks

The family of the late Mrs. John Rapp, Sr., wish to express their appreciation for the many kind expressions of sympathy tendered them in their sad hour of bereavement; also for the many beautiful floral offerings, those who so kindly furnished transportation, and most especially to Reverend Father Kirchoff for his kind words of condolence.

OLD AGE PENSION CENSUS IS NOW BEING TAKEN

Eighteen Census Enumerators Appointed For County

The "little black box" and its contents have caused much discussion throughout the county this week.

In every township and ward, a man or woman has appeared with a mysterious little black box under the arm. Many very personal questions are asked relative to our age, birthplace, and occupation (if any). The person with the little black box is the Old Age Pension census enumerator, and the information secured will be used to determine when we shall be eligible to an old age pension, and why.

An old age pension has been under consideration in this state for many years. Seventeen states have adopted an old age pension law and have found it practical. Michigan adopted such a law at the last session of the state legislature. In order that this pension system will function properly, a correct history of each person must be secured. This information the enumerator writes on a yellow work sheet which is later typewritten on two white cards. These cards carry an affidavit of the person questioned as to the correctness of the information given. One is filed with the county clerk and one sent to Lansing. In addition to the history of the person, a record of the head tax payments will be kept on these cards.

TUBERCULIN TEST TO BE GIVEN TUESDAY

With the cooperation of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association and county Board of Supervisors, the Tawas City and Alabaster school boards are giving you this opportunity to have your children tested for tuberculosis.

The tuberculin test will be given under the direction of Dr. J. H. Johnston of the Children's Fund Health Unit at the Tawas City school on Tuesday morning, November 14, and at Alabaster in the afternoon. The tuberculin test is harmless.

This material (tuberculin) is a liquid containing no germs, living or dead—all have been filtered out. Not only is the liquid filtered but it has been boiled and evaporated until only one-tenth of the original amount remains.

It is possible to tell by the appearance of the skin three to five days after the test whether or not the child has at some time been infected with the germs of tuberculosis. Infection means that at some time or other the child came in contact with someone who had tuberculosis. This infection is common in children and if not excessive is of no consequence.

District L. D. S. Head to Speak at Local Church

D. T. Williams of Detroit will speak at the local Latter Day Saints church next Tuesday, November 14, at 8:00 p. m., on the subject "Christianity and the Social Revolution." The church is located at Tawas City.

In the past, the local pastor, M. A. Sommerfeld, informs us, the speaker has discussed such subjects as "The New Earth," "Technocracy and the Brotherhood of Man" and "Christ the Great Revolutionist." His interest in such matters as these qualifies him for the discussion of the subject here announced.

The public is cordially invited by the local pastor to take advantage of this rare opportunity to hear an up-to-date discussion of a subject that is of present tense interest and vital to our progress as a nation.

Miller—Klieves

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Floreen K. Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, of Tawas City, Mich., to Allen E. Klieves, formerly of Wheeling, West Virginia, now of Los Angeles, Calif. Their marriage was quietly solemnized last Friday morning in the Second Presbyterian church, Wheeling, with the Rev. W. D. Lewis, D. D., pastor, officiating. The vows were exchanged at nine-thirty o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Klieves were the attendants.

The bride wore a traveling costume, a chic ensemble of Havana brown wool. A felt beret in matching brown and suede slippers and gloves completed her attire. Gardenias composed her shoulder corsage.

Mr. Klieves and his bride have left for a motor trip west, their destination to be Los Angeles, where they will make their home.

The bridegroom is the elder son of Mrs. Mary A. Klieves, of New York City, formerly of Woodlawn. He was educated at Linsly Institute in Wheeling and the School of Engineering at Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh. Mr. Klieves was formerly connected with the engineering department of the Wheeling Corrugating company, and is now associated with the Boyle Manufacturing company in Los Angeles.

Herman Roehl, Jr.

Herman Roehl, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Roehl, died at Caro on Wednesday, November 1st, at the age of four years and seven months. He leaves to mourn his loss, beside the parents, his little brother, Dickie, and other relatives and friends.

Mrs. John Rapp, Sr.

The many friends throughout Iosco county were deeply grieved at the death of one of the county's pioneer residents in the passing to the Great Beyond of Mrs. John Rapp, Sr. "Grandma" Rapp (as she was most commonly known) was loved by all whose good providence it was to have made her acquaintance. This was proven most conclusively by the many friends in attendance at the funeral, in addition to the profusion of beautiful floral offerings and the large number of Mass cards which represent in the Catholic faith, of which the deceased was a devout Christian, a symbol of floral tribute.

Mary Blust was born in Baden, Germany, on August 9, 1857, and came to this country when fourteen years of age. She was united in marriage to John Rapp on November 1, 1879, at East Tawas in the same parish where last rites were said for her in the form of Solemn High Mass by Reverend Father Kirchoff assisted by Reverend Father Miller and Reverend Father Labory, after which Reverend Father Kirchoff spoke briefly in very well chosen words of the fact that her life was one that would be difficult to emulate. This ceremony took place just fifty-four years and three days after the marriage nuptials were said. Her husband preceded her in death fourteen years ago.

Unto this union nine children were born, one, a girl, dying in infancy. Surviving are: Mrs. Mary Gates, Mrs. Julia Youngs, Mrs. Josephine Youngs, William Rapp, John Rapp, Jr., and Joseph Rapp, all of Iosco (Turn to No. 3, Back Page)

Scoring

Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy are the featured players in Arthur Somers Roche's "Penthouse," which shows Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, November 12-13-14, at the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

As a scion of an aristocratic New York family, and a society lawyer who chooses to defend notorious racketeers, Warner Baxter is said to give one of the finest performances of his long motion picture career.

As Gertie Waxed, a beautiful night club girl, Myrna Loy is reported by preview critics to have far surpassed any of her triumphs in previous picture productions.

With exotic roles now a part of her brilliant past, in "Penthouse" she has taken command of one of the strongest and most lovable characterizations of her career and her romantic scenes with Warner Baxter will long be remembered.

Others in the cast are Phillips Holmes, C. Henry Gordon, Mae Clarke, Martha Sleeper, Nat Pendleton, George E. Stone and Robert Emmett O'Connor.

YACHT CLUB WILL SPONSOR BRIDGE TOURNAMENT

To Start Erection of Club House With Funds Raised

About a dozen members of the Tawas Bay Yachting Association held a meeting at the Holland Hotel lobby last Saturday evening and discussed ways and means of raising funds as a nucleus toward a sum sufficient to start the erection of a club house. After considering plans submitted, it was finally decided to hold an Auction Bridge tournament beginning in January, 1934. A committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for: meetings, prizes, etc.

All those who may be interested are asked to keep their eyes for details of dates, committee members, etc., as matters progress.

Among other matters discussed was the adoption of a rule that Class B boats shall not exceed 16 feet over all; also that the old rule of time allowance on racing length, based on sail area and water line length, should prevail as adopted last season at the beginning of the races, should be considered at the next meeting.

It was also resolved that the members hold a monthly meeting on the first Saturday of each month.

Automobile Thieves Sentenced Thursday

Judge Herman Dehnke yesterday sentenced A. D. Whratten and H. E. Hancock for stealing the car owned by Mayor W. A. Evans of East Tawas. Whratten was sentenced to from two years to five years in Jackson prison. Hancock was placed on five years probation and ordered to pay costs of the court and a fine amounting to a total of $150.00. Whratten was given the heavier sentence because of his previous record.

The two men were apprehended near Standish on Sunday, October 29, by the sheriff of Arenac county after stealing the car in East Tawas.

Large Crowd Expected at Legion Armistice Party

The Audie Johnson Post, American Legion, of East Tawas, will hold its annual Armistice party on Saturday night at the Community Building.

This has been the big annual and unusual dance of the year for the last 15 years. Starting out with a carnival and dance at the old Opera House in East Tawas in 1920, this party has been held each year on Armistice night.

Many of the dancers have attended each one of these parties. The Legion has been careful to select a different orchestra each year to give the public something entirely new. This year Blackie Kay's nine-piece orchestra has been engaged and a record crowd is expected.

REDCROSS DOES MUCH WORK IN IOSCO COUNTY

Annual Membership Drive Begins This Week Saturday

In just a few days you will have a visitor call upon you. After a pleasant greeting, she will tell you she has called to give you the opportunity of renewing your membership to the National Red Cross. Last year we went over the top to the tune of one hundred dollars. The need is even greater this year, so let it not be said that Iosco county failed—let us be waiting for that visitor, ready to do our part.

Some times we wonder if all know just what the Red Cross has done for the needy of our county during the past year. Do we all know that over one thousand dollars worth of dry goods, consisting of underwear and hose for men, women and children, dresses, sweaters, aprons, men's and boys' trousers, outing flannel, sheeting, blankets and comforts, also 410 barrels of flour and packages of seeds for 100 gardens were given out through local workers, in all parts of the county? We would not receive this help were it not for our response to the National Roll Call. While we send only one-half of each membership into headquarters, we receive many times that amount. So when you renew your membership you know you are helping an hundred fold. Nowhere else can one receive such returns for one dollar.

There are many calls for help these days, but no other organization is so far-reaching as the National Red Cross. It knows no nationality, creed or politics, but helps all alike.

From November 11th to Thanksgiving Day is all the time given to get this Roll Call in, so please be ready and do not keep your visitor waiting.

Mrs. W. C. Davidson, County Roll Call Chairman.

COUNTY'S WEIGHT TAX STILL BEING HELD UP

The County Road Commission is still anxiously awaiting the return of the weight tax money. The promised payment around November 1 failed to arrive.

No information has come to the Road Commission as to when the remaining 78 per cent of the county's 1933 weight tax will be returned. It is hoped that some money will be received soon, not only in the interest of the unpaid help, but there are creditors that must be satisfied for several thousand dollars of unpaid material bills, much of which has been due for several months.

Star Wants to Be Bad In Radio Burlesque

A beautiful radio celebrity with an innate desire to be wicked, and an all-star cast portraying press agents, program sponsors and personality creators are said to be affording much entertainment to the Family Theatre patrons in "Professional Sweetheart," RKO-Radio Pictures' comedy-drama of radio broadcasting coming next Wednesday and Thursday, November 15-16, with Ginger Rogers, Norman Foster, Gregory Ratoff and ZaSu Pitts.

As the Purity Girl of the Air, Ginger must not drink, smoke, pet, dance, flirt or eat rich foods. Exasperated by the restrictions, she threatens to rebel unless she is provided with a sweetheart. Her sponsor secures Foster, the "Dream Man" Jim Davey, from the Kentucky backwoods, to marry her. The trouble starts at this point, as the mountaineer is a righteous, upstanding young man who believes in strict virtue. He wallops Ginger's jaw, spansks her soundly and forcibly teaches her how to say "dear" and "darling" instead of "It, the husband."

Others cast in "Professional Sweetheart" are Allen Jenkins, Frank McHugh, Lucien Littlefield, Edgar Kennedy, Franklin Pangborn, Betty Furness and Sterling Holloway.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

JERRY MUSKRAT WAKES UP JUST IN TIME

NEVER in all his life had Jerry Muskrat been quite so flattered as he was by the admiration of Reddy Fox for his skill as a builder of houses. Listening to the praise which fairly dripped from Reddy's smooth tongue, Jerry actually forgot who was talking. At least, he forgot that Reddy always had been an enemy. It was hard to believe that such a handsome fellow and such a pleasant spoken fellow could possibly mean any harm. And he seemed so much in earnest when he said that if only Jerry would come with him and show him how to closed, as if trying to picture to himself what such a house would look like. "I certainly would be the envy of everybody on the Green Meadows and in the Green Forest. I believe such a house would tickle Mrs. Reddy almost to death. I must bring her over here to see your house."

Once more Jerry was growing so interested in the idea of that house that without really knowing it he was paddling toward the bank. Then as his feet touched bottom he remembered and made a half circle to deeper water and there floated lazily. "I'll be glad to have you bring Mrs. Reddy to see my house," said he. "I am afraid it isn't possible for me to show you how to build, but as I told you before I will be glad to tell you how."

Reddy jumped lightly to his feet. "That will be fine," he replied. "I have an engagement now, but if you have time to spare tomorrow night I will come over at about this time and we'll talk the idea over. I certainly would like a house like that." He glanced longingly toward Jerry's new house out in the Smiling Pool, then, wishing Jerry good-night, trotted away.

build a house he would be the happiest Fox in the world that Jerry had it on the tip of his tongue to say that he would do that very thing and be glad to.

Jerry actually had paddled in to the bank and was beginning to climb out as Reddy said this. And then, as so often happens with a tongue that is too smooth, Reddy's tongue tripped him up. If only he hadn't said that Jerry could make him the happiest Fox in the world! That word Fox waked Jerry up just in time. He wasn't really asleep, you know, but he was so flattered and so interested in what Reddy had said that he had quite forgotten who was talking.

But at that word Fox suddenly realized what he was about to do. In just one wee little minute more he would have been right out on the bank within easy jumping distance of Reddy. Hastily he pushed himself out from the bank and swam far enough out in the Smiling Pool to feel absolutely safe. Then he looked up at Reddy to see if the latter had noticed the haste with which he had left the bank instead of climbing out on it. He thought there was just a trace of disappointment in Reddy's eyes, but it passed so quickly he couldn't be sure.

Apparently Reddy could think of nothing but a new house like Jerry's, only on land and big enough for him. He went right on talking just as if he hadn't noticed Jerry's action at all. "If you only could show me how, I believe I could build a house. Anyway, I would be willing to try and to work hard," said he with his eyes half

GRAPHIC GOLF

HEAVY HEADED IRONS

TOMMY ARMOUR'S rifle iron shots have long been the admiration of all golfers, duffer and star alike. Although Armour realizes the futility of an average player hitting a long, straight iron that will compare favorably with those of the powerful wristed pros, he does think that the high handicap player can help himself considerably by proper selection of iron clubs. The limber shafted, light headed irons in his estimation are not the best suited ones for the game. Most of the better players have clubs with rather heavy heads which at least give the suggestion that there is something strong and solid in their hands. He advises such heads for the average player, coupled with a slight flexibility in the shaft which should increase proportionately for the longer

SOFTER LIGHTS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THESE cooler nights
And kinder days,
These softer lights
And autumn haze,
Are like the years
Of later life,
After the tears
And joy and strife.

Less red the flowers,
Less green the grass,
But quiet hours
In peace we pass,
Though gone the May,
The summer spent,
We are less gay
But more content.

In spring we fear
The thought of fall,
But, autumn here,
Mind not at all;
For living writes
No fairer page
Than softer lights
And quiet age.

A Good Cocktail.

Beat one egg yolk, add the juice of half a lemon, one teaspoonful of honey, mix well, chill and serve as a breakfast cocktail.

Prune Jam.

Soak two cupfuls of prunes overnight in one and one-half pints of water. Cook for ten minutes in the water in which they have been soaked, drain and cut into small pieces. Slice one lemon and two oranges, including the peeling, very thin and cook in the prune pulp until tender. Add the prune pulp, one cupful of sugar and one-half teaspoon of salt. Cook until thick, stirring constantly. Seal in jars. Dried apricots are equally good for jam prepared in the same manner.

A Motorless Glider Takes the Air.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE recent breaking of the American gliding record by Richard C. du Pont in the mountains of Virginia, draws new interest to flying with motorless planes. Soaring over the Blue Ridges for 122½ miles, Du Pont nearly doubled the former American record and came within 14 miles of breaking the world's record.

Although air-minded persons in America and Europe have taken up gliding, the hobby appears to have taken greatest hold in Germany.

In Germany today hundreds of schoolboys are flying. Three thousand took official instruction in a recent year. Elevators, control sticks, side-slips, take-offs, landings, and views "down below" are discussed now as freely and intimately as tennis or automobiles.

In the plane of the German boy there is no engine, it is true; yet he actually flies. And, from the very nature of his birdlike machine, he really learns more of air conditions than many a pilot of standard aircraft has yet learned; for, on the very first day, after intensive lecturing, he climbs into the seat of the glider, takes hold of the controls, and slips off into space.

In concentration, in quick thought and action, lies the boy's salvation, for no instructor flies with him.

Any schoolboy of fourteen years or over may enroll. Instruction is free and given by school teachers themselves. This plan reassures parents, though primary gliding is not particularly dangerous, as the machines seldom fly higher than 10 or 12 feet. Later, with more experience, flyers may glide for 30 or 40 miles, attain an elevation of several hundred feet, and remain aloft for hours.

Nor is this new air art by any means confined to practice among boys. At the technical universities students have formed clubs for the study, design, and construction of their own motorless airplanes. Most of the highly sensitive, so-called "sail planes" have been developed at the universities.

What the Glider Can Do.

Man's dream of flying on outstretched wings is as old as man himself, and for twenty years his planes and dirigibles, propelled by gas engines, have carried him over the earth.

But now, in this new glider device, with no artificial power at all, he may also cross mountains and valleys, cruise down rivers and far out to sea, hang on to a cloud and ride for hours, or even remain almost motionless in air, like a hawk ready to swoop.

To understand fully the rise and amazing growth of Germany's gliding machines, one must look back—back to the pioneer makers of airplanes. The Wright brothers, for example, and Lilienthal made their first aerial dashes in gliders.

So successful have motor-driven aircraft become, however, that the world's attention has been largely diverted from air travel by simple gliders. For nearly two decades only a few enthusiasts kept the art alive; but today, due to amazing increase in air commerce, man is more interested than ever in the air as an element—in that soft, light, flexible medium through which his flying ships must sail. So now the vast overhead aerial ocean, its whims and its peculiarities, afford a new and fascinating subject of study.

Already, from more recent adventures in gliding machines, it appears that man is coming to share what birds have always known about the air. He finds it will support him, as water carries a swimmer, if he will but handle his glider wings as soaring birds handle theirs. Even wind gusts, squalls, and clouds, which pioneer experimenters with gliders used to dread, are now recognized as useful aids to motorless flying craft.

Use Currents as Do Birds.

How birds use air currents and what flyers learned from them is revealed in an odd experience related by Major Von Tschudi, a German aeronaut. Cruising one day in a balloon, he saw, far below him and off to one side, a flock of storks soaring along. Suddenly, to his amazement, they rose almost vertically, without so much as a flap of a wing. Soon they passed the elevation at which his balloon was flying and went on up, far above him. While he was still wondering at this marvel, his balloon, which had been traveling horizontally, reached a point about over that from which the storks had started upward. Then the balloon, too, began to rise rapidly, as if by magic force. "I know now, after what gliding has taught us," said this airman, "that I had simply struck one of those vertical air currents, the same current on which the lazy storks were taking a free ride up to a higher altitude."

In Germany today some 200 glider clubs exist, and probably about 10,000 flights and short glides are made annually.

Between gliding and what they call "sail flying," the Germans make a sharp distinction. During a glide the plane steadily loses altitude till it lands. A "sail flight," on the contrary, is one in which the machine, while pointing downward, is lifted by upward air currents, and thus either maintains or increases its elevation.

For training a beginner in motorless flying, the simple glider is used; but it is the sail plane which actually flies. In build it is more sensitive than a simple glider and capable of responding to vertical air currents.

Weighing from 200 to 300 pounds, but with a wing surface of more than 20 square yards, a light sail plane easily floats upward on an air current, carrying its rider with it. But the pilot does more than ride. Fitting snugly into the body of the structure itself, the flyer feels almost as if he himself were equipped with wings and tail. This similarity is apparent, as one watches a skillful flyer manipulating his sail plane. Pilot and plane seem one entity; every movement of the plane is a movement of the man inside, and vice versa.

Features of the Sail Plane.

Flying a plane with no motor in it seems less miraculous to the man on the ground when he hears how it is built. The conspicuous feature of the sail plane is its very long, narrow wings—sometimes as much as 59 feet in length and less than 5 feet in width. Narrow the wings must be, for broad ones would create too many eddies, and long they must be to provide the surface to lift a man's weight.

While simple gliders often start merely by sliding or being dragged down a hillside, so light in structure is the sail plane that were it started slowly it would only tumble about like a thistle-down in the wind and get at once out of control. Hence, in launching, an elastic rope is used, which shoots the plane into the air like a stone from a sling.

The pilot must maintain this speed by pressing down the nose of the plane, which decreases the angle of the tilt of the wings. The earth's gravity will then draw the plane downward in a gently slanting line of flight, which is called a glide. Thus the gravity of the earth is the engine of the engineless airplane.

The fact that the sail plane continues to glide downward while the vertical air currents are carrying it up may seem to some as involved as Einstein's theory of relativity; but when one studies the explanation which Robert Kronfeld, one of the instructors at the flying school in the Rhon mountains, gives to his pupils, this phenomenon ceases to appear mysterious. "Suppose you let a model glider fly down from the ceiling at one end of a room to the floor at the other end," he tells them, "and imagine a giant lifting the whole room high up into the air, then the model plane would be gaining an altitude while gliding downward."

That sail plane is best which sinks most slowly, or, to use the technical expression, which "has a low-sinking velocity," for such a plane will not only respond to very slight upward currents, but also give the pilot a better chance to reach the next vertical current.

When flying across country, in a plane with no engine, the airman progresses simply by coasting, as it were, from high up in one vertical air current to the foot of the next. Of course, these upward currents are invisible, but a trained gliding man learns where to look for them.

BOAT ALMOST FLIES

It is a dull season that does not bring out something new in the matter of boat construction. This year it is a craft with a hull in eight overlapping sections. These are graduated in size and the overlap is vertical. When the boat is at rest on the water all of these sections are in contact with the water, but as the boat moves the body is raised and as the speed increases they are all out of the water except the two larger sections. The hull in this case offers a very slight resistance and the claim is made that the boat is really moving upon a cushion of air.

To make Children

EAT

Don't force children to eat! The girl or boy who has no appetite has stasis—which means the child is sluggish. But cathartics have caused more constipation than they ever cured! The "California treatment" is best—just pure syrup of figs. Try this for a few days, then see how eagerly your youngster will eat.

Stimulate the colon and that child with a finicky appetite will devour everything set before him. Here's the simple treatment that does more for babies or older children than all the diets, fad foods, or tonics.

Nature has provided the "medicine" you'll need to stir your child's colon muscles into proper action. California syrup of figs. Pure, delicious, harmless. It acts on the lower colon—where the trouble is. It has no ill effects on the intestines.

Begin tonight, with this marvelous "California treatment." Any druggist has California syrup of figs, all bottled, with directions. Use enough the first time to cleanse the clogged colon of every bit of poison and hard waste. Then just a little twice a week until the child's appetite, color, weight and spirits tell you the stasis is gone. Whenever a cold or other upset clogs the system again, use this natural vegetable laxative instead of drastic drugs.

WARNING! There are dealers who practice substitution. Be sure to protect your child by looking for the name CALIFORNIA on the bottle.

SUCH IS LIFE—So Say We All

By Charles Sughroe

Howe About:

Waterloo A Fairly Good Man Smoking

By ED HOWE

THE statement is often made that the late World war was the most violent economic disturbance of all time, the only other comparable with it being that waged by Napoleon Bonaparte against England.

I do not believe either war originated in economics, except in the general sense that every quarrel in human life is based on the effort of individuals to take advantage of each other. The World war was precipitated by a fanatical German leader who enjoyed displays of soldiering; by subjects too easily submitting when called upon to become soldiers. The wars of Napoleon were brought about by a leader who was not brilliant as a chess player, or in business, but who could beat everybody in the massacres, destructions and displays of battles. As a general he was as brilliant as Byron, who awoke one morning and found himself famous because of his victories in poetry and love. But both men finally stumbled; geniuses must as carefully keep common sense in mind as common men.

The other morning a tough looking citizen rang my bell, and I went grumblingly downstairs to answer it. I have lately been expecting bandits, and, at first sight, thought this caller might be one, but he turned out to be all right. "Mister," he said, "for a dollar I'll clean out your guttering. Every so often it needs it, to prevent rust." . . . I answered: "All right, go ahead. And I thank you for calling attention to my neglect. Also, I commend you for hustling to get work, instead of going on the county or congress. If you'll come back after the leaves have fallen, I'll give you another job. I rather like you; there are so many crying loafers now, a fairly good man attracts my admiration."

I lately encountered this sentence in reading: "A man never really enjoys smoking until he begins to believe it is harmful to him." . . . I am an inveterate smoker, but have never enjoyed smoking, although constantly angry at myself because I use tobacco, and only continue it because it is a habit extremely difficult to get rid of.

In spite of the horrors of war, or of an election, one always carries along a number of small things to excite and interest him.

I am just now in the midst of a marrying row between two people I have become acquainted with in Florida. The husband knew the wife was telling me her side of the story, and one day called to tell his, as I had long known them both. I told him of her charge that he had struck her as hard as he could.

"Did she show any marks to prove it?" he asked. I replied she did not; in fact, that I had said to her she was probably exaggerating (as plaintiffs usually do) in saying this stout man had struck her as hard as he could.

"I slapped her," he replied, "and she kicked me on the shin. Look here; I can substantiate my side of the story." Pulling up his pants, he showed on his right shin a very distinct black-and-blue spot. Then we both laughed, and he went away, after I had advised him to make his side of the pending divorce suit as respectable as possible; that this would be expected of him by all his acquaintances.

I had previously advised the wife to adopt the same course, and so advise you.

Whatever your row, whether it concerns marrying, business, politics or religion, make your side as decent as possible.

In reading I only occasionally encounter a sentence that interests, amuses or instructs me. One writer who was lately wandering around in fancy encountered a prophet and said to him:

"What is your specialty?" "I'm looking for an argument," was the reply. "There is no reform I wish to accomplish; let others take care of themselves, a necessity with which I have always been confronted. I wish to argue, and stir up excitement to amuse my leisure. State your favorite proposition, and I will oppose it. I enjoy arguing, and, from long practice, am good at it. If I am able to sufficiently insult you, probably we can involve others in our contention, and start a war."

A man I know is going to the devil. Since he has apparently determined on this course I am rather pleased that he is going rapidly, that we may the sooner be rid of him. I have done what I could to help this man, but my efforts have only made him worse, so I rather rejoice to hear he is lately setting a pace in devilry that will soon dispose of him.

It may be conceit of mine, but I believe I can usually tell when a warning of wolves actually means wolves. Still, I have lost some sheep that might have been saved. Moral: Better overdo caution than carelessness.

A little improvement in anything is all that can be reasonably expected. Do not expect too much, and insure discouragement.

WASHDAY SATISFACTION

Housewives everywhere will recognize the truth of these remarks, on an important subject, by the well-known domestic economist, Ruby Baker:

"The weekly wash is an important event in many a household. And while nobody can honestly say wash-day is a picnic, it is a satisfaction to hang out lines of snowy-white clothes—and watch them flapping gayly in the sunshine.

"By the same token, it's disappointing to hang out clothes that look foggy and dull. Many a woman, though she tries and tries, can't get a wash to please her.

"Did you know that the quality of soap has a lot to do with the success of a wash? Good quality means good ingredients—more cleaning power—greater washing ability. A good soap gets dirt out easier—and gets it all out. It gets clothes cleaner, and that means whiter."

You Know the Type "So Halloran has two cars now." "Yes, he couldn't get his accessories all on one."

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it!

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is syrup pepsin. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Member N. R. A.

MANY STATES TO BE DRY AFTER REPEAL

State Laws Restrict Flow in Half of Them.

Washington.—Repeal of national prohibition on December 6 is now a foregone conclusion, but a review of the situation indicates that only about half the states will have liquor this year and in some the wet flood may be sharply restricted by local option.

There are 19 states which either never had prohibition by Constitution or statute or which have cleared their books of such prohibition. These will have liquor as soon as federal prohibition is repealed and although only 10 of them have so far passed control laws it is assumed the others will quickly do so in order to start the flow of license fees into the state coffers. Six of these ten states specifically provide for local prohibition where desired.

Nineteen "Wet" States. Of the 29 other states, 27 still have statutory prohibition and of these 27 there are 11 which also have constitutional prohibition. Two of the 29 have constitutional prohibition only. In only a few of these 29 states have arrangements been made which might clear the way for liquor by the date of federal repeal.

The 19 states where repeal is effective at once are Arizona, California,

MOTIVES

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Only in criminal law does motive determine the punishment for crime. If a murder is premeditated, the penalty is death. Should it have been committed by accident or without malice aforethought, the penalty may be life imprisonment. When justice demands a penalty for other violations of law the element of motive is not considered. It has been a long time since Jean Valjean, in Les Miserables, served 19 years as a galley slave in a French prison for stealing a loaf of brown bread. True, he stole the bread, but the motive which impelled the act was the hunger of the seven little children of his widowed sister. That the penalty was unjust goes without question, but how far have we advanced in this respect from the days when Victor Hugo wrote?

In the reconstruction of our social order—and who doubts it is undergoing a very significant change?—the element of motive is bound to receive more serious consideration. The most dangerous condition in our social order today is the problem of unemployment. This is due to two factors, the impossibility of procuring work by men who honestly seek for it, and the mental attitude of those men who do not care to work even when they have the opportunity. The latter believe that the government's duty is to provide shelter, food and heat for all persons deprived of these necessities.

Three More May Get In. The legislatures will meet this fall, however, in Iowa, Michigan and Minnesota, which leaves the way open to adding these states to the list which might have liquor coincident with federal repeal.

Also, a special legislative committee is considering a control law in Massachusetts, a commission is studying a control plan in Missouri, and a liquor control commission has been named in Virginia, which recently voted both for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and of the state prohibition law.

The states most likely to trail the repeal parade onto actually wet grounds are the 11 which have both statutory and constitutional prohibition and the two which have only constitutional prohibition.

The latter, Florida and Wyoming, are definitely out of the liquor group for more than a year.

Kitchen Door Is Winner in Lottery

Istanbul.—Ahmed Resit won $10,000 with his kitchen door in the recent State lottery, it was disclosed.

Resit, fearing that he might lose his ticket, pasted it on the door. It was a prize winner, but was stuck to the door so firmly it could not be removed. Resit unhinged the door, took it to the lottery office, and got his prize.

Buckeye Quarter

Carl Cramer, quarterback on the Ohio State university team, is considered one of the most brilliant of the Buckeye players. He hails from Dayton, Ohio. The element of motive always asks the question, Why? When welfare workers disregard the element of motive and give necessities indiscriminately to whomever applies, it only encourages that dangerous attitude which not only accepts but demands these necessities as the rights of citizenship. If a man's motive in accepting help is to escape work, there is no moral law which demands that he be assisted. The element of motive is also vital to our national recovery. Why do we want recovery? The universal answer seems to be, recovery is essential to prosperity. But why prosperity? If our motive in seeking prosperity is that we may again become extravagant and indulgent and repeat the same mistake which brought about the depression, then the return to prosperity might be open to serious question. Whenever we have a recovery of our moral and spiritual resources along with the recovery of our material values, our prosperity will remain stable and secure and its recovery fully justified.

Frogs Alive in Clay of 34-Year-Old Wall

Schenectady, N. Y.—Examination of a bullfrog to determine whether it may have lived in hard clay beneath the foundation of a Schenectady building for 34 years, was under way today.

The frog is one of five unearthed by workmen while laying a pipe line along the foundation. The frogs were imbedded in the clay 10 feet below the surface.

The workmen tossed the frogs on the ground, believing them dead. After a few hours in the sun they started hopping about. Four escaped. The foundation was constructed 34 years ago.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

This Dressing Table Before the Window Enhances the Decoration of the Room.

There are some chambers in which it seems almost impossible to arrange the furniture because of the interference of windows. Since it is through these openings that sun and light and air with their purifying elements can get into the inclosed walled area, the homemaker who finds this difficulty should realize that it is an error in the right direction. It is far better to have too many windows in a room than too few.

Now that the summer is spent, and draughts of air are undesirable across beds, seek to find some position for the bed which will give the sleeper protection when windows are open. To sleep in a room without windows open is to hamper good health, the air should fill the room without blowing on the sleeper.

An excellent position for the dressing table, whether it is necessary or whether it is by preference, is before a window. The dresser should be low so that the standard does not come too high above the sill. The mirror should be silhouetted against the light. The person using the dresser will find the light is good. It comes evenly from both sides and also from the top and it is thrown on the person who is reflected in the looking glass.

A Homemade Dresser.

An unsightly table can be converted into a beautiful window dresser. Cover the top with wadding first, then with glazed chintz and net. Gather the portion tacked to top edge for side and front ruffles. The dresser will be inexpensive and in the vogue. Of course silk can be used for the textile and it can be left without net over it. Or it can have mercerized sateen or percale under the net as best suits the purse. A triple mirror, stood on the top is sufficient, but one with side supports from an old bureau can be screwed to the top, or at the back of the table. If the supports are good looking, they require no decorative treatment. If not they can be covered to match the dresser.

I have seen old, low bureaus, positioned before windows, and prove successful features in the room decoration. In one instance the bureau was drawn out from the window enough for easy access to it to be permitted so that the sash could be raised or lowered readily to air the room, which was small and had but the one large window.

Fleawort

The common name for the seeds of the Plantago Psyllium is fleawort, and they belong to the herb family. The name originated in England. This species of plantago grows in the south of Europe and in northern Africa. The seeds are about 3 mm in length, 1 to 1.5 mm in width, convex on one side and concave on the other. They are dark reddish brown in color and closely resemble flaxseed in medicinal properties.

Blanket Makers in Caste

In a recent district of Meerut, India, there are 55,000 sheep, which yield 51,000 pounds of wool for blanket weaving. Caste plays a part there, says the British Empire Chamber of Commerce Magazine, and one may see Gadarias or Hindu shepherds tending these sheep while Mohammedan kamallas carry on the actual manufacture of the blankets. When the industry enjoyed a boom, these workers were assisted by Julius, who are otherwise engaged in cotton or silk weaving.

MISS SPAFFORD, well-known Detroit Free Press writer, is an enthusiastic exponent of convenience in the home. Recently, in an article in the Women's Pages of the Free Press, she wrote:

"Only people who possess a telephone extension in the kitchen know what a time-saver such an arrangement is."

A kitchen extension telephone makes it easy to place and answer calls, no matter how busy you are, without taking your eyes from the stove, or running to another part of the house. And it affords privacy for your telephone calls when you have guests.

An extension telephone makes an ideal Christmas gift, and costs less than 30c a day! Any telephone business office will take your order. Installation will be made at any time you specify.

RED CROSS CLOTHES THE NATION'S NEEDY
Flour, Bread, Clothing Reach Into More Than Five Million Homes of Jobless

The greatest task ever undertaken by a relief agency in the history of private charity is drawing to a close with the final distribution of cotton clothing to more than five million families by the American Red Cross.

At the direction of the Congress, beginning eighteen months ago, the Red Cross undertook to convert the wheat and cotton surpluses of the Farm Board into food and clothing for the unemployed and needy. In the consequent operation, this relief agency entered upon a commercial enterprise greater than any single commercial firm has ever undertaken in the same period of time.

In the ensuing months the Red Cross converted 85,000,000 bushels of wheat into flour and bread and gave it to 5,803,000 families. The distribution was through 3,700 Red Cross chapters and hundreds of other charitable agencies. During the severe northwestern drought of 1931 the Red Cross also gave wheat in the form of food for livestock to 184,188 families.

The clothing—dresses, underwear, overalls, jumpers, sweaters and stockings for men, women and children, and even blankets and comforters—was distributed to 5,465,410 families. More than 54,000,000 ready-made garments and 92,000,000 yards of cotton cloth were given to the needy. This clothing came from $44,000 bales of cotton.

The wheat distribution was concluded in June, 1933, and final distribution of cotton clothing is occurring in the fall months.

In handling these tasks voted to it by Congress, the Red Cross will expend from its own treasury $735,000. At the same time the organization carried on its regular program of disaster relief; of service to the veterans of all our wars; of educational and welfare work through the Junior Red Cross; of health education and public health nursing and of life saving and first aid. Funds for this work come from the membership roll call the Red Cross chapters conduct from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, when every one is invited to join the Red Cross and aid in this vital relief work.

Seven hundred thousand women volunteers under the Red Cross banner sewed for the needy last year and many thousands still are making cotton garments for their Red Cross chapters.

The Red Cross has 3,701 chapters and 10,000 branches of chapters. Thus it can be mobilized nationwide in a great relief task within 24 hours.

The Fourth Lovely Lady

SYNOPSIS

Following the splendid wedding of her niece, Cintra, to Lord Leister, which she has financed, Matilda Smith Lovely ("Smif," by her own insistence), youngest and physically the weightiest of the four lovely sisters, finds herself in decidedly straitened circumstances, but has her own plans for the future, which she refuses to divulge to her sisters, prominent figures in New York society. The historic Lovely estate, Lovelylea, in Virginia, is owned by Smif's brother, Bill-Lee, but, financially unable to maintain his position there "as a Lovely should," he is living in Chile, while the estate is rented.

Thus at thirty-eight, when her niece Cintra was married, she would have been taken by a stranger for her husband's daughter, or the youngest of the handsome Lovely sisters. And the youngest she intended to remain, cost anyone else what it might.

Carried before her father on his horse, or later at his side on her own pony, Matilda Smith Lovely had learned to know every wood and brook and dell of his possessions in all weathers and she had absorbed many of his tastes and peculiar preoccupations. Drenched to the skin and chattering with cold she had been brought home and handed over to her nurse after a thunder storm which they had watched come and go from the top of a distant hill.

At Lovelylea she spent the happiest days of her life, and for the dignified old mansion and its surrounding acres she had a depth of affection that was not suspected by her sisters or brother; the tears she had shed on their departure being attributed to her grief at parting from Bill-Lee. Actually she had been eager for him to start on his great adventure, feeling certain that he would soon return in the guise of the prince in the fairy tale, bringing with him enough of the wealth of the Incas to enable them all to come back in triumph to Lovelylea and live happily ever after, according to the proper pattern; or, if the elder girls persisted in their perverse intention to stay in New York and acquire rich husbands, she hoped that by that time she, Smif, might be adjudged old enough to act as chateleine for Bill-Lee.

This dream received its first shock when her brother married. To her mind the money spent to support his wife and child in luxury was money wilfully diverted from the redemption of Lovelylea. From then on, she knew Bill-Lee for a weakling and laid her plans accordingly; plans destined to be the sadly disarranged when Cintra was sent to her with a reminder of her childish promise.

Smif came of a stock whose word was their bond. Unquestioningly she accepted the responsibility thrust upon her, and gave her niece a devotion so unselfish that no one ever doubted its inspiration was affection; Cintra, who was beautiful and brainless, least of all.

Now, when at last she was freed from her burden, Smif's greatest desire remained unchanged. To regain possession of the family estate was her goal. Her brother was ready to assume that further effort was useless and he had pointed out that where he was, living was easy and cheap. Plainly the old life in Virginia, love for which seemed to have entered the very marrow of her bones, no longer held a lure for him. He was content in South America and meant to stay there.

Smif wrote Bill-Lee a long letter in which she set forth the argument that as he had no love for Lovelylea and she had, she wished the opportunity of buying it from him at the expiration of the present lease.

This letter would have impressed her brother as even more extraordinary than it did had he known how nearly she had ruined herself for him and his child. However, he was never one to reject any favorable chance requiring no exertion on his part. If Smif wanted to sink her money in the old place, by all means let her! Probably by this time she was a rich woman, an old maid who had found no way to spend her income in all these years.

And so the matter had been settled. At some sacrifice, Smif had sent a thousand dollars as earnest of her intention, fearing him in want and too proud to confess his difficulties; for it must be put down to Bill-Lee's credit that he had not sponged upon her as he might have done, although from time to time he had accepted the helping hand she had offered him.

With unusual business foresight, Smif had demanded and duly received an acknowledgment setting forth this payment and their agreement, for Cintra's information should it happen that she inherited before her aunt had exercised her option.

The possession of this document warmed Smif's heart even though she had no idea where she could obtain a sum of money sufficient to avail herself of the opportunity it held out to her. That Cintra might want to take over the ancestral halls had never seriously entered her head and, if it had, would at once have been dismissed. The place was only a name to the girl.

Knowing it to be impossible, Smif yet longed to stay at Lovelylea with the child through the changing seasons, to awaken in her a love for the land since, unconfessed at the time even to herself, she was already fearful that Bill-Lee would neither return there nor marry again. Reading between the lines of his letters, she divined that he had parted with Cintra, joyful at his release from family cares and expenses. He had made it quite plain that his daughter was to be hers to do with as she would. And she reasoned that since there would be no male heir, in the fullness of time Lovelylea would be Cintra's.

At that date, it seemed essential to Smif that the little girl should see the place and learn to love it; but her grandmother gently negated the suggestion. Anything else they wished they might do, but they were not to go to Lovelylea.

Smif inquired discreetly the reason for the prohibition, and the answer at first made her smile.

Mr. Johnstone Nesbit was not a Virginian.

"Grandmama, darling," she cried, "that really has ceased to be a crime. I've met some quite charming gentlemen who have had the misfortune to be born outside of our beloved state."

"Gentlemen, yes," Mrs. Culpeper agreed, "I should have said further that this man Nesbit is not a gentleman. He has lived here for years and he is received nowhere. You cannot visit your home while he is its tenant. He certainly was mighty rude to your Cousin Christopher."

Grandmama Culpeper's commands could be neither questioned nor disputed, and so it happened that Cintra on that visit did not see the home of her father's fathers.

Later, when Smif had plumbed the shallows of her niece's nature, she never troubled to take her to Virginia again. Cintra had no depths either of affection, intellect, or humor. She expressed and felt no regret at leaving her father and the land of her birth. She was quite contented in New York, quite contented in fact anywhere. She was absolutely negative and as little trouble as a child could well be. And she was always a picture of serene loveliness. As a companion a fine wax doll would have been equally sympathetic.

In time Smif gave up attempts to rouse a spirit that did not exist, thanking her stars that when Cintra talked (which she did as seldom as possible, preferring to present the appearance of an enthralled listener) the views she expressed were commonplaces that led to no controversies.

It was after the announcement of the girl's engagement that Smif had entered into the agreement to buy Lovelylea, Cintra having mildly stated one day that she could see no reason for Auntie Smif to expect her to be interested in "that queer old place."

That matter satisfactorily arranged, it occurred to Smif that she would like to know something about the tenant, the gentlemanly Mr. Nesbit, of whom she had heard no mention since her visit to Culpeper court ten years previous.

She wondered what had been the crime against society that had roused her grandmother's ire.

CHAPTER III

Lucy timed her arrival at Laura's to precede both of her younger sisters. She meant that Laura should support her in the coming encounter.

"My dear, have you seen Smif?" she asked, dispensing with a greeting in her eagerness.

"No, have you?" Her sister replied that she had not seen Smif but had met Susan Phelps.

"If I'd cared to pump her, I might have discovered what the fuss was about. Smif was so wonderful, so original, so half a dozen other things."

"Then you really found out nothing?" Laura was disappointed.

"I found out that it was a new and spectacular enterprise with opportunities to make money. That, of no consequence in view of the immense service she will be to humanity," Lucy snapped.

Before Laura had time to reply Louise joined them.

"Oh, girls, have you heard about Smif?" was the first remark.

"No!" they exclaimed together. "Have you?"

"Be prepared for an awful shock," she warned them. "Ned should have told us in time to stop her. She probably hasn't a penny left."

The three exchanged glances of consternation. Ned was Smif's business adviser and they feared knew what he was talking about.

"And that isn't the worst of it," Louise plunged on. "Ned thinks she means to be a missionary. Girls, I couldn't bear it. You must help me to stop her."

"Not at all," Laura disagreed, "just fashionably High Church. Not bothered with missionaries. However, she might think it a duty not to discourage Smif."

"If it's the thought of travel that interests her why doesn't she go to Chile to visit Bill-Lee?" Lucy suggested. The others caught at this idea with enthusiasm; even Louise, who did not like to be parted from Smif, considered it a desirable alternative. The only missionary she had ever met in the flesh had given a glowing account of domestic life among the Head-Hunters of Borneo which had not appealed to her at all.

"So long as we stick together, we may be able to make her see reason," Lucy argued feverishly. "If she has ruined herself for Bill-Lee's child, he ought to help her now."

"She's not a man, so it must be that. Wine, women and cards are out. Wall Street? The panic?"

"She never speculated.—And why is Bill-Lee so poor? He gets a big rent for Lovelylea."

"So he does, but he has let this man Nesbit add so many improvements that his taxes have been jumped till there isn't much left, and he can't raise the rent before this lease ends."

"Bill-Lee ought to have come back at the end of the first lease. Then he could have asked more from this tenant or some one else."

"I agree that it would be a good thing for Smif to visit Chile," said Louise. "It would prevent her acting on impulse because she misses Cintra so terribly. When she came back, Laura would be in her own apartment, Lucy could find summer quarters counting on Smif, and, if the deprestion's over, Ned and I will have a bigger house, so that we could share her among us."

Her elder sisters regarded this new talent for organization as very irritating. They loved Smif—at a reasonable distance. They had no desire to add anyone so conspicuous to their households. Louise was too ready with her plans.

"You talk as if Smif were a pauper," said Laura fretfully.

"I only hope she isn't," Louise had just rejoined when Smif's voice warned them there was scant time for further consultation.

She came in on them, cheerful and glowing.

"Hello, you dears. Decided my fate? Exile in Chile or a 'sweet little house in the country'?" this clairvoyance remaining unanswered, she went on:

"Had a radio from Leister. Sent regardless of expense, the spendthrift!" she resumed, fumbling in her bag. Producing it, she gave it to Louise to read aloud:

"Thank God her hair curls naturally still resigned love Leister."

"His earldom sure is a good scout," Smif commented.

Laura returned to the attack.

"Lucy says you were clever, Louise says you were selfish. Yet if Cintra hadn't married Leister—"

"Exactly," Smif nodded, "with her looks she was bound to marry. I haven't told you half I said to Leister. You see, I genuinely liked him. What he wants in a wife is a sort of feather-bed who'll look distracting in court dress, who'll have dozens of children and who'll never embarrass him by offering ideas of her own. English girls are too advanced and argumentative, he tells me. And so, at last, I'm free." She stretched her arms, clasping and unclasping her fingers as though just escaped from fetters.

"Free to live as I please, not governed by thought of what will be best for Cintra. Not according to any rule laid down by others. To find adventure—"

Every word she said seemed to bring the Head-Hunters nearer to Louise.

"Oh, Smif—not adventure! Really, darling, I can understand your need of a change after the strain of the wedding. Why not a sea trip? The new South American steamers are palatial."

"And summer is just beginning there," Lucy backed her up enthusiastically.

"You'll see Bill-Lee, and if you don't like it, you—"

"Can come back and find the little place in the country you consider appropriate?" Smif looked up from the cigarette she was tamping. "You're precious angels, all of you, and as transparent as glass. Don't you suppose I realize that a pauper sister is going to be extraordinarily inconvenient?"

"You're not a pauper, Smif."

"So near that you couldn't tell the difference with the naked eye," Smif returned cheerily. "Another reason for trying to break off the match with Leister, although I never gave it a thought. There were half a dozen plutocratic morons who, being Americans, would not have expected settlements."

"Smif!" Lucy exclaimed absolutely aghast. "Don't tell me you gave Cintra any of your money?"

"Most of it," Smif nodded. "I hope a Lovely has some pride. Most of what was left, I settled on her when she was married. It wasn't too much. You wouldn't have wished our niece to go to England penniless, would you? And poor Bill-Lee—"

"Don't say you've been giving him money, too?" Lucy interrupted.

"When he would take it," Smif returned with the utmost serenity. "The way he was left was most unfair, and I'm afraid he'll never make a business man. Since he's never got ahead in all these years, it's useless to expect he ever will. So, if Lovelylea is to come back into the family, I'll have to be the one to manage it."

"You don't make money if you're a missionary," Lucy offered this argument as conclusive.

"Who said I was going to be a missionary? Not that it matters. The kind of missionary I mean to be can make money. Lots of it. I intend to be a missionary to the rich—exclusive!" said Smif. "I spent ten years and most of my money establishing our niece suitably, and I now refuse to submit to another burden of boredom gratuitously. If I'm bored, some one is going to pay me for it. I've no one to consider but myself."

"What are you going to do?" Lucy asked. "You talk and talk without telling us anything."

Smif puffed her cigarette meditatively.

"I'm thinking how to explain it to you," she said at last. "You've nothing against rich people, I suppose? After all, they're human, aren't they? We hear a lot about the deserving poor, while no one has a word for the deserving rich. From now on, I mean to devote my energies to their relief."

"Just as I thought, she means to be a bootlegger!" Lucy cried. "We'll have to make her an allowance."

"A practical suggestion," Smif chuckled. "Possibly I can combine it with the project I have in mind."

"Smif, please don't be tantalizing," Louise urged, understanding her better than the others, "tell us straight out what you mean to do."

"It requires explanation," Smif said, "principally because no one has openly embarked on it before as a profession. There are lots of people skirting the edge of it, people who more or less prey on the rich, hangers-on of all kinds who have no thought of giving any return for the money they exact. Whereas for years where I am concerned the boot has been on the other foot. The rich have come to me and dumped their troubles on my shoulders and I've given them sympathy, advice, pluck to carry on with when their burdens grew too heavy; my time, my companionship—all free gifts so long as I could afford it. Now I can't afford it, and I propose to make them pay for just those things. I'm going to announce myself as a Little Sister of the Rich—at a high rate per consultation."

"No one will come to you under such conditions," Lucy sniffed; "the idea's absurd."

"Your mistake, my dear," Smif assured her amiably. "I've several clients already. And, whether you believe it or not, this enterprise will

YES, ISN'T IT WONDERFUL!

For Quick Relief Say BAYER Aspirin When You Buy

Here is quicker relief from pain—the fastest safe relief, it is said, ever known. This is due to a scientific discovery by which BAYER Aspirin starts "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass here tells the story. A Bayer tablet starts to disintegrate or dissolve—go to work—almost instantly. This means quick relief from pain—fewer lost hours from headache, neuritis, rheumatism. And safe relief. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

When you buy, see that you get the genuine Bayer Aspirin. The best way is never to ask for aspirin by the name "aspirin" alone. But if you want Bayer Aspirin's quick relief always to say "BAYER Aspirin."

WHY BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST

Drop a Bayer Tablet in a glass of water. Note that BEFORE it touches bottom, it has started to disintegrate. What it does in this glass it does in your stomach. Hence its fast action.

WHY YOUR HEALTH DEPENDS UPON YOUR KIDNEYS

Your Kidneys Are Constantly Eliminating Waste Poisons From Your Blood

To Be Well See That They Function Properly

YOUR KIDNEYS! Do you realize what an important part they play in your bodily health and length of life? They are the blood filters. Every 24 hours they excrete more than 500 grains of poisonous waste. Thus your kidneys are literally sentinels of your health.

It is well, then, to keep careful watch of your kidneys. If they fail to do their work fully, there is slow poisoning of the system, which may lead to many serious conditions.

Disordered kidney action and bladder irritations may give rise to scanty, painful or too frequent passage and getting up at night. One is apt to feel a dull, nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizziness.

While, naturally, temporary irregularities may occur, if the condition persists, it is well to look to your kidneys. There is positive danger in neglecting disordered kidney action.

If you have any reason to believe your kidneys are not functioning properly, why not give Doan's Pills a trial? No other advertised diuretic has such world-wide use. None is so well recommended.

NEW LAUNDRY SOAP DISCOVERY WELCOMED BY HOUSEWIVES

A still faster-washing soap that gets clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter yet can't hurt anything plain water won't WASHDAY in over a million homes has been revolutionized by an amazing new Laundry Soap Discovery of Procter & Gamble—America's largest soap-makers. Up and down the country, it is completely changing women's ideas of quick, easy washing, safe washing, and white clothes!

This remarkable invention is an utterly new-type laundry soap. A soap that multiplies itself 500 TIMES in suds. Which means you get at least twice as much suds as from old-style soaps. A still faster-washing, still whiter-washing soap that's utterly SAFE for colors, fabrics, and hands.

This remarkable new discovery is called OXYDOL. And you'll find to your surprise that it makes other soaps—"granulated," bar or flake—hopelessly out-of-date.

Women believed they had the fastest soap already! Then found it was slow, alongside OXYDOL. For OXYDOL utterly banishes boiling. It ends washboard scrubbing. It cuts soaking time to 15 minutes—gets clothes out far sooner.

They believed they had the whitest washes they could possibly get. And are now amazed by washes 4 to 5 shades whiter than before.

By impartial scientific test, one washing with OXYDOL gets clothes whiter than 2 to 4 washes with other soaps. But that's not all!

You'll find clothes actually last longer, washed with this new soap. That the faintest colors DO NOT fade. That it is easier on hands than any soap you've ever used. For no strong agents, no chemical bleaches are in OXYDOL. Just pure soap elements so blended with others as to protect clothes against fading. OXYDOL simply can't hurt anything clear water won't!

DISSOLVES Dirt—In Any Water, Hard or Soft

Its creamy, "free-acting" suds dissolve dirt out in 15 minutes. No boiling, no back-breaking scrubbing is necessary. Nor any "water-softener," either. For the right amount of water-softener is already there.

Different from ordinary soaps, OXYDOL is specially fitted to water conditions in each district where it is sold. The water in this district, for example, has been tested for "hardness" by expert chemists. The OXYDOL you buy here contains just the right proportion of "softener" to fit it.

With OXYDOL you'll do your wash in 25% to 40% less time. You'll get a whiter, sweeter-smelling wash than ever before. Everything will iron beautifully—no soap streaks or smudges anywhere. And you'll never be bothered with fading colors or red, soap-bitten hands.

These things we promise you. Whatever your former favorite, try OXYDOL next time you wash. You'll never go back to slower soaps or harsher soaps again! Procter & Gamble.

CHURCHES

American Relief Army

Services will be held as follows: Every evening at 7:30, and Sunday morning at 11:00, with Sunday school at 10:00. Rev. and Mrs. Charles Brown are with us now and we are expecting big things in the Lord. The American Relief Army is entirely undenominational and everybody is welcome. The mission is located in the Brown building, and the office and residence over Klenow's grocery. Relief cases should be reported at the office. Major and Mrs. A. H. Gibbons are in charge of the work here. There have been two more conversions lately, making a total of twenty-one.

Count your failures, but not your successes. You cannot surprise God by the amount of good you do. Work how you will to perfect yourself in knowledge, or in service, you cannot be perfect, and if you were, you could only be what God made man before sin came. Students in schools each try to outdo the others, and one succeeds, and often astonishes by the amount he knows. That may be well in a university, but not in religion. We are not trying to outdo each other, but to help each other. There are no marks in our examination, and there is no competition. We are working together to be good and to do good, and the best we can all do is very little compared with what there is to be done. Faith, hope, and charity we have to work with, and love to give these force.

county, Mrs. Emma Kessler of Flint, and Mrs. Anna Force of Detroit. In addition she leaves to mourn her loss a sister, Mrs. Melvin Sherman, two brothers, Bernard Blust and August Blust, all of this locality; also twenty-two grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Although "Grandma" was 76 years, two months and 21 days of age at the time of her death, she was the happiest woman surrounded by her many grandchildren and great grandchildren, for whom she manifested equal love and no favoritism, and their loss is keenly felt by all old enough to realize. The younger ones will miss her tender words and loving touch.

Those from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kessler and family of Flint, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gates of Royal Oak, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brooks and son of Flint, Mrs. Margaret Curley of Pontiac, Mr. and Mrs. George Sherman and daughter of Flint, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Force and son of Ferndale, and Arthur Whaley of Flint.

Mother—Grandma
We will miss you,
'Tis sad we are today;
Our homes will be lonely
While you are from us away.
Still we live in the satisfaction
Of knowing your teachings were true
And if we so conduct our destiny,
Some day we will again be with you.
