M. E. Church

Morning service at 10:00 o'clock. Sermon by the pastor. Topic of sermon: "Burden Bearers."

Epworth League—6:30 p. m.

Come and bring your friends. The man who neglects the church in his own community is fooling himself and failing to encourage and make use of the greatest character building force of the world has ever known. The size of the church is not important. Each one is a branch of the whole and more people attend church for religious worship than there are attending any other institution on earth. If the church in your community is not what it should be, ask yourself, "What am I doing to make it what it should be?" If you are not helping, do not hinder.

On Thursday next Dr. Ralph T. Templin of Muttra, India, will be the speaker at a rally to be held in the Methodist church at East Tawas. Delegations are expected from Tawas City, Alabaster, AuGres and Oscoda Methodist churches. Pot luck supper at East Tawas at 6:30. The ladies will provide coffee. Public meeting in the church at 7:30.

"CWA TAPERING PAINFUL," SAYS ADMINISTRATOR

Bernard Coggan Describes Iosco County Civil Works Policies

"The Iosco County Civil Works Administration finds that the period from February 15 is likely to bring many painful announcements," said Bernard Coggan, district administrator, in a communication Thursday to the Tawas Herald. "It is during this period that employment must be tapered off and purchases stopped. Word came in again this week cutting the county quota another twenty men, leaving 210 as against 295 at the peak of employment. In addition to this number, however, there are still 172 men working on various Federal projects and in the forest.

"It was relatively easy to put men to work, and many mistakes were made. However, the CWA was operating under Public Works rules, making it necessary to employ many men who were not on relief but who were classified as unemployed. Of the total number (585) at one time working in this county, 300 could not come from the relief rolls. This policy was fortunate for it did not make it necessary for a man to be on relief to get a job. The public however, has never quite understood this, and has supposed that no one should get work unless he was on the welfare.

"Now that the program is operating under CWA rules, there are definite orders to lay off men who need the work least, beginning with men without dependents, or men from homes having other sources of income. Such orders always require quick action. The men must be selected, foremen and men must be notified. Those expecting to work on Friday, for example, must get word on Thursday.

"The greatest problem now before the board is the limit put upon all materials purchased to May 1. It appears now that each project may have to find a way to finance a part of the unpurchased material. Even so, the returns to the county have been many times greater than any amount now needed. The CWA payroll to date in Iosco county has been $72,123.65, and materials purchased total $15,200.00.

"Plans for future employment are as yet not announced. It is expected that many of the men will be busy on their farms or will have returned to former occupations within a few months. The few who do remain unemployed will be remembered.

"Some persons have felt that Iosco county did not have a large enough quota. Because of the location of the Huron National Forest, this county had 236 more men than it would otherwise have had.

"A complete report of the nature and costs of all projects, together with man-hours used, is steadily being assembled at the headquarters. The CWA was primarily a man saving proposition, hence the budget was largely in terms of 'man hours'.

"The administration will welcome any suggestions by means of which the relief or Civil Works in this county may be more efficiently handled. We are aiming to keep the whole administration free from favoritism and personal profit. We seek results largely in terms of regained self-respect and courage among the workmen.

"A future article may deal with the relief work, surplus foods, etc." (Turn to No. 1, Back Page)

Local Farm Credit Association Now Making Short Term Loans

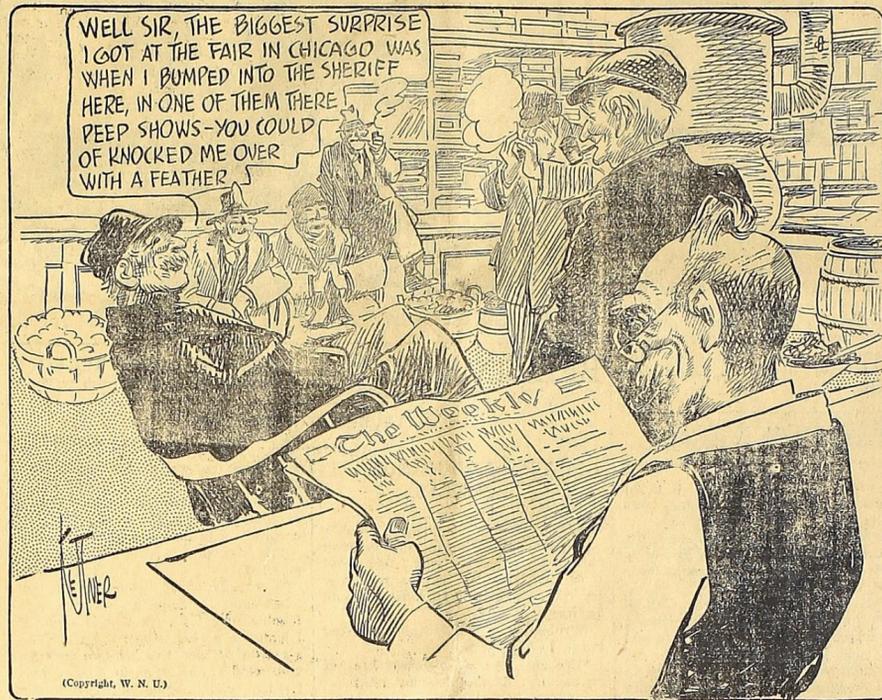

Applications for short-term farm loans are now being taken by the Short Term Credit Association, it was announced this week by Rufus W. Card, secretary of the association.

This association takes in the counties of Crawford, Oscoda, Alcona, Roscommon, Ogemaw, Iosco, and Gladwin, and has its headquarters at West Branch.

Loans will be made to eligible farmers with adequate security. The interest rate is six per cent plus a reasonable inspection fee. To obtain a loan, farmers should submit their applications to the secretary at once, Card said. He has application forms and additional forms will be available at a number of other points in this district.

"These associations are not emergency loaning agencies," said Card. "Only sound loans will be accepted in this new set-up. Farmers having loans from the Regional Agricultural

Council of Legion Posts To Meet Next Thursday

The Iosco County Council of American Legion Posts is holding a general open meeting at the Jess C. Hodder hotel at Tawas City on Thursday evening, March 15. All Iosco county veterans of the World War are asked to make a special effort to be present.

A splendid program is being arranged by the officers of the council. It will include outside speakers, as well as some entertainment by the drum and bugle corps of the East Tawas post. There will be a general discussion of veterans' preference in regard to the CWA and NRA work in this county. Other problems which are of interest to the veterans at this time will also be brought up.

The Iosco County Council has only been organized within the past few months. Its purpose is to work for the interests of the veterans in this county.

John Mielock, president of the council, states that there are a large number of veterans in the county of whom they have no record. "We want all these boys to get together as they did in 1917 and 1918, and renew old times," he said. "Let's put a mark on the calendar on March 15, and turn out with all our old buddies."

Ruckle-Dunham

On Saturday evening at 8:00 o'clock Miss Lula Ruckle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ruckle of Whittemore, became the bride of William R. Dunham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Dunham of Saginaw.

The ceremony was read in the living room of the home of the bride's parents. Rev. H. Davis, pastor of the Whittemore Methodist Episcopal church, officiated. The home was prettily decorated, the color scheme being blue and white. The bride was attired in a floor-length Nassau blue satin gown and white satin slippers. She carried a bouquet of sweet peas and roses. Miss Irene Ruckle, her cousin's only attendant, wore a gown of maize yellow taffeta, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas and roses. Walter Yates assisted the groom as best man.

A reception and buffet supper for 45 guests followed the ceremony. The young couple will leave for Saginaw March 7, where they will reside at 223 Fitzhugh street.

KANOTIN CLUB HOLDS BANQUET

Emmet Richards, Editor of Alpena News, Is Principal Speaker

The ladies' night banquet of the Kanotin Club which was held at the Holland Hotel, East Tawas, last Thursday evening was attended by more than 50 members and guests. The principal speakers were Emmet Richards, editor of the Alpena News, and Martin Martinson, prominent Alpena merchant and president of the Alpena Rotary Club.

Rev. Charles Edinger delivered the invocation. During the dinner, music was provided by a local trio—Miss Florence Green, Squire Wood and Fred Wilson. After joining in singing some of the favorite club songs under the leadership of Rev. Edinger, the company was entertained with a skit by Wood and Wilson.

Ralph Michaud of Alpena rendered four vocal solos, two at the opening of the program and two at its close, both of which were greatly enjoyed. He was accompanied at the piano by Edgar Wood, instructor of music in the Alpena schools. Wood also entertained with a couple of piano selections.

R. G. Schreck, master of ceremonies, after being introduced by William DeGrow, president of the Kanotin Club, presented the speakers of the evening.

Martin Martinson delivered a short speech in which he extended a message of good will from the Rotary Club of Alpena. He said that it is to the interests of the cities of northeastern Michigan that they be more closely allied through a spirit of good-fellowship and cooperation. The keynote of his talk was one of optimism concerning the business future.

In the course of his address, which dealt with the service rendered by such organizations as the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, Richards gave a brief account of the founding of the Rotary club. He told of the work that the Alpena branch of that international organization has done among crippled children. He said that through care and treatment made possible by the Rotary club more than 120 such children had been cured at least to the extent of being able to provide for themselves. He cited other incidents to show the individual services rendered through the international meetings of the society, at which are gathered men from every important nation of the world.

In Memoriam

In memory of Colleen Evelyn Shellenbarger
She Is Just Away
We cannot say, we must not say, "Colleen is dead"—she is just away. With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair it needs must be since she lingers there.
So we think of her faring on as dear In the love of There as the love of Here;
We think of her still as the same and say:
"Colleen is not dead, she is just away!"

Road Commission Is Not Liable For Welfare Funds

The letter below, just received from the auditor of the State Highway Department, concerns the controversy over $4,626.95 of welfare money which the state highway officials have heretofore claimed the Road Commission owed the highway department and should have paid for some of their trunk line labor performed during June and July of last year. The highway department had claimed that the labor bills for the trunk line work that went several months without being paid was not its obligation.

The following letter shows that the money in question was not turned over to the Road Commission but was handled by the Welfare Department and accounted for by the latter: Iosco County Road Commission East Tawas, Michigan Gentlemen:

We are pleased to advise that we have checked with the records of the Emergency Welfare Relief Commission and the amount of $4,626.95 advanced to you has been included by them in the audit of your accounts. The State Highway Department, therefore, is relieved of the obligation of accounting for these funds.

This automatically relieves you of your obligation to us in regard to this particular advance.

Yours very truly,
Michigan State Highway Dept.

EAST TAWAS, OSCODA WIN TOURNAMENT

Close Contests Feature This Year's Gathering of High School Basketeers

The district high school basketball tournament held last week at Standish came to a close Saturday night with East Tawas and Oscoda the possessors of the class C and D championships, respectively. Winning in this year's meet made it three class C championships for East Tawas since tournament engagements were divided into two classes five years ago, while Oscoda's 1-34 triumph brought its record to five in a row in the D class group.

The event opened last Thursday night with two class C games. In the first of these, Alabaster put up a stiff battle before succumbing to the more experienced East Tawas quintet by a bare two-point margin, 19-17. Standish dropped in coming out of the running in the other game by an 18-10 score. Whittemore and Gladwin drew byes for the first round.

In the semi-finals held Friday night East Tawas administered a 33-13 licking to Whittemore and Gladwin stopped Standish by a 23-18 score in class C competition. The four class D teams entered in the tournament made their first appearance in the semi-finals. Rose City upset Prescott, 22-17, and Oscoda knocked off Sterling, 26-20, in this class.

East Tawas' title tilt with Gladwin in the finals Saturday night topped anything the tournament offered in the way of thrills. With the class C crown at stake, both teams fought a hard and determined battle. After trailing their opponents until several minutes of the second half had

"Counsellor At Law" Is A Dramatic Trust

"Counsellor At Law," showing at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday and Monday, March 11-12, is more than one motion picture. It is a dozen pictures combined. Characters who fit into widely scattered backgrounds are deftly placed side by side. Their problems, each vital enough to justify a separate film, are welded together. The result is a dramatic trust.

Within a great lawyer's office this multiple drama unfolds. Men and women from every corner of life are represented. Some are glamorous, others pitiful, all are compelling. By means of photographic ingenuity and clever dialogue the past of each is vividly revealed. It's one thrill on top of another! Yet all dovetail together.

For two years "Counsellor At Law" was Broadway's outstanding stage hit. As a motion picture it achieves even greater scope and power.

And the cast for this film—the star-studded cast—speaks eloquently for itself: John Barrymore, Bebe Daniels, Doris Kenyon, Onslow Stevens, Thelma Todd and others. To this imposing list of Hollywood's finest were added the best Broadway could offer. Ten of the stars who created their roles in "Counsellor At Law," when it made its stage debut, were called to Universal City to duplicate their scintillating performances. They came, and each helped record a highlight in motion picture history.

Wool Holds High Place Among Major Industries

Sheep-Raising Pretty Well Spread Over Globe.

Washington.—Under Turkey's recently announced five-year industrialization plan wool production and manufacture will be among the four major industries encouraged by the government.

"It is natural that the wool industry is included in the new Turkish plan because wool is one of the world's basic commodities," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "A meeting of all the world's wool growers would reveal a motley gathering of all creeds and colors from Icelanders to South Africans, from Canadians to Argentines, from Siberians to Indians. There also would be present natives of many of the islands of the seas," continues the bulletin.

Sheep-raising is pretty well confined to the temperate zones. Sheep do not like very cold countries, nor do they thrive well in the tropics except at high altitudes.

Sheep Population.
"The world's sheep population is more than 500,000,000—a quarter as great as the human population. The annual world clip of wool is more than enough to fill 1,333,000 one-ton trucks. Australia, although a comparative youngster in the wool industry, is the world's leading wool producer. India and China are the outstanding sheep countries of Asia. Argentina and Uruguay have the heaviest sheep population in South America. The greatest concentration of sheep herds in Africa is along the Mediterranean coastal zone from Gibraltar to Tunisia, and in South Africa. Every country of Europe raises sheep, but in Norway, Sweden and Finland there are few flocks, scattered over wide areas. The United States, with upwards of 50,000,000 head of sheep, is the only country in North America that has taken to wool growing in what could be called a big way.

"About four-fifths of the sheep in the United States graze in the mountains and on the plateaus and plains west of the Mississippi river.

First Use of Wool.
"As in the case of cotton, historians and naturalists have been stumped by the query, 'when and where was wool first used.' Sheep and wool are mentioned in the Bible and it is known that the Romans practiced sheep breeding. Some of their prize animals were jackets to protect the fleece. Shortly after the Christian era an Italian took several sheep from Italy to Spain to breed them with the native merino sheep. Incidentally, the merino sheep produce the finest of wools, and have been bred with many other inferior sheep to improve the latter's fleece.

"The growth of the wool industry in the United States has been phenomenal.

"By 1810, just two centuries after the first sheep arrived from England, there were 7,000,000 sheep grazing over the settled area of eastern United States.

Owe Much to Sheep.
"To sheep, many regions of the world owe at least partially their discovery and growth, for these animals often have been the companions of pioneers.

"While, in a few remote regions of the United States, homespun is worn, factories have almost entirely erased the home industry from this country. One of several hundred modern American manufacturing companies normally operates 60 wool mills that employ 40,000 workers. A display of one company recently included 3,500 different styles of wool fabrics.

"Wool greatly differs in quality. The same breed of sheep in the same country may produce different qualities of wool. The best wool grows on a sheep's shoulders and sides.

"When a sheep is sheared the fleece holds together. The whole fleece then is tied and with other complete fleeces is placed for shipment in bags containing from 100 to 500 pounds each.

"At the factory expert workmen sort the wool. Some sorting tables are covered with wire netting through which dust and other loose foreign matter falls while the sorters tear the fleeces apart. In some wool-growing countries wool is washed before it is sheared from the sheep. Unwashed fleeces contain grease from the skins of the animals. After sorting, the wool is scoured by passing it through a series of vats of warm, soapy water. From the washers it is conveyed to drying rooms and thence to carding rooms where it begins the journey that ends in woolen cloth and other wool products. Worsteds fabrics are made of yarns whose fibers are parallel, while woolens are made of fibers crossed and mixed. Foreign matter that cannot be washed from the fleece is destroyed by chemicals. Burrs are removed by machinery.

"Wool is constantly moving in commerce. Although the United States normally produces about one-tenth of the world's annual wool clip, it is only a little more than half of the wool required by American cloth and carpet manufacturers. American manufacturers call upon the wool growers of Australia, Argentina, Uruguay, South Africa, China, England, and many less important wool-producing countries for additional raw material. England is the leading importer of wool, for most of the export wool from all the leading wool-producing regions of the globe is shipped to British markets. Much of it is reshipped to other countries. London is the largest wool market of the world."

Find Hull, Believed La Salle's Vessel

Aboriginal Tales Lead Hunters in Lake Huron.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—Old Indian legends, handed down at the council fire from father to son, apparently were borne out here. After a three-day search, in which many holes were cut through the 24-inch ice of Lake Huron, the hull of an ancient vessel was found on the bottom off Birch Island, where aboriginal tales long had maintained Le Griffon, first sailing boat on the Great Lakes, would be found.

The little ship was constructed in the winter of 1678-79 by Rene Robert Caveller, Sieur de la Salle, who set sail in it in May of 1679 on the first leg of his famous journey of exploration to the country of the Illinois.

La Salle himself, however, left the boat, which was built at the mouth of Cayuga creek on the Niagara river, at Green Bay, Wis. There, goaded by the thought of his debt to his countrymen at Fort Frontenac, he determined to load the vessel with furs and send them back in payment.

Twelve thousand pounds of skins were put aboard the little ship and she started back with a crew of five sailors, the captain and a supercargo. La Salle ordered the boat to stop on the way at Michilimackinac. It never reached there nor was heard from again.

Indian legends, however, said the vessel sank in a storm off Birch Island in Les Cheneaux group, near what is now Hessel, Mich.

This winter Mike Onogwin, Chipewia Indian, succeeded in interesting the chamber of commerce of Hessel in a search for the boat despite the fact that a Canadian commission in 1930 declared a wreck at Manitoulin island to be the long missing Le Griffon.

At first it was planned to hire a diver, but because of the expense and difficulty of diving through the heavy ice, it was decided to make the search without one. Oliver Birge, a lifelong resident of Les Cheneaux islands, and the Indian succeeded in locating an ancient hull at the approximate legendary spot.

After the discovery it was decided to wait for warmer weather so that a diver may search the hull for further identifying marks. It is hoped a name plate may be found or that a brass cannon may be discovered of the type "Le Griffon" was known to have carried.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

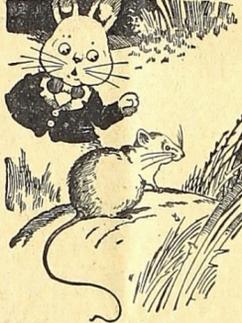

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A PAIR OF HANDY POCKETS

"YES, indeed," continued Nimbleheels, "I take the very greatest care of my tail. The way I feel about it is that I might just as well lose my life as my tail. I probably would anyway."

"Probably would what?" asked Peter, looking puzzled.

"Probably would lose my life, of course, if I should lose my tail," replied Nimbleheels.

"Have You a Pocket?" Peter Demanded.

plied Nimbleheels. "You see, in times of danger I depend on jumping to escape, but without looking correctly there would be no use in jumping. And as I have already told you, it is my long tail which keeps my balance in the air. But such a long tail is a great help," added Nimbleheels with a funny little sigh.

"I should say so!" exclaimed Peter Rabbit.

The eyes of Nimbleheels twinkled. "I should like to know what you know about it," said he.

Peter glanced at his own funny little bunch of a tail and laughed. "Nothing," said he. "My tail isn't the least bit of care. But I was thinking that if I had as long a tail for my size as you have for your size it certainly would be some tail and some care. I suspect that lots of times when I thought myself safe inside the dear Old Brier Patch my tail would be way outside. I really don't see how you keep track of so much tail."

"Oh," replied Nimbleheels, "that is easy enough. When I am not jumping or running about I keep it curled around in front of me. Then I know just where it is. By the way, Peter, do you mind if I go look for a pocketful of seeds? I am rather hungry."

"Look as much as you like. I think you will find plenty here in the Old Brier Patch, but before you go tell me what you mean by a pocketful," replied Peter.

"Just exactly what I said," retorted Nimbleheels. "If I can just get a pocketful of seeds I can bring them back here and we can talk while I eat them."

Peter blinked his eyes and stared at Nimbleheels in the rudest way. It certainly was most impolite.

"Have you a pocket?" Peter demanded.

"Certainly. Of course," replied Nimbleheels. "How in the world was I going to get a pocketful of seeds if I hadn't a pocket to put them in? As a matter of fact, I've got two pockets, and mighty handy pockets they are. I really can't imagine how anyone can get along without pockets. Next to my tail I think more of my pockets than of anything else I possess."

Peter was still staring as rudely as ever. "I don't see any," said he. "Where are they?"

"In my cheeks, of course. Where else would they be?" replied Nimbleheels. Peter didn't know where else they might be, so he said nothing. "They are so handy that I simply couldn't get along without them," continued Nimbleheels.

Peter sighed. "I wish I had a pair of handy pockets," said he.

The Swing in the Apple Orchard

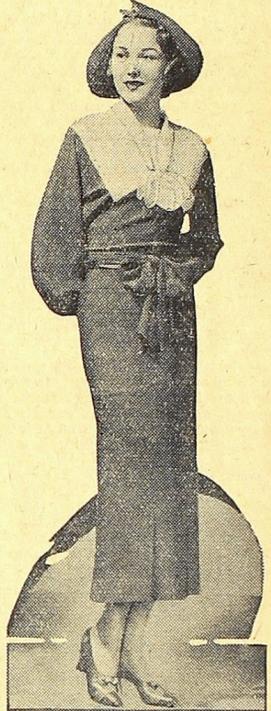

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE swing in the apple orchard was loveliest in spring. We swayed in the dewy morning. Where trees were blossoming. Our aim was to reach the fragrance. Of the highest bloom of all. The birds in their brown nests trembled. We heard their mother call.

The swing in the apple orchard. When summer shed its gold. Was drenched with a leafy splendor. That was regal to behold. We saw, as the apples ripened. The silver hand of Time. His shadow across the orchard. Plucked apples in their prime.

The swing of the apple orchard. In autumn, brown and serene. Was shunned by the busy children. For the school bell sounded clear. The swing was a teasing ribbon. Until the end of May. And it hangs now in my remembrance. The ghost of a bygone day!

Gold Coming Back From Europe

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S monetary policy, including devaluation of the dollar and purchasing of gold, is bringing great quantities of the precious yellow metal to the United States, every liner from Europe carrying its quota. New Vitamin Found in Rye, Experts Say Budapest.—A hitherto unknown vitamin must be contained in rye, two physiological experts, Prof. Arthur Zalcsek and Dr. Stefan Weiser, explained at the conclusion of a series of recent experiments.

Animals fed on rye and wheat, respectively, showed markedly different reaction. Those getting wheat put on more weight, but those living on a rye diet became vigorous and active.

Further examination showed that the rye diet stimulated the sex gland of the animals, both male and female. In old specimens, a marked rejuvenation effect was noticeable.

The two scholars declared that, in order to explain these effects, the existence of a new vitamin must be assumed. Further research will be made to detect the nature of this new substance.

Meanwhile Professor Zalcsek and Doctor Weiser advised breeders to include more rye in the diet of their cattle.

DUTCH TULIPS

A "Garden Spot" in Tulip Land.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

DUTCH bulb growers have enlisted the aid of the Netherlands government in their industry. Tulip growing once became a mania in some portions of the Netherlands. More has been written about that chapter in Dutch history, in fact, than its importance warrants; but it is interesting because the mania began at a time when the Dutch government was engaged in naval expeditions to acquire territory, and taxes were so high as to be almost unendurable. That the sober Dutch would lose their heads over a flower at such a time is a phenomenon that speaks highly of the fascination of the tulip.

Staid burghers abandoned ordinary business to engage in the tulip trade, and a period of gambling began that could not result in anything but financial ruin for the participants. The mania started in France in 1635 and quickly shifted to the Netherlands. Once the gambling was under way, the plants about which it swirled became mere symbols. All trade was for tulips "in the onion." Buyers worked contract for "futures," risking enormous sums on the expected products of beds newly planted. A bulb of the "Admiral Liefkens" sold for more than 4,000 florins—the equivalent probably on current exchange of nearly 300 guineas. The "Semper Augustus," which had not increased rapidly since its introduction in 1623, was exceedingly scarce, and a single plant brought 5,500 florins, worth at the time about 870 pounds sterling.

Queer bargains were made, an example that seems particularly ridiculous being the exchange of one bulb for a load of grain, four fat oxen, twelve sheep, five pigs, two barrels of butter, 1,000 pounds of cheese, four barrels of beer, two hogheads of wine, a bedstead with its furnishings, a suit of clothes, and a silver drinking cup! At the beginning of the mania the buyers were real tulip fanciers who coveted the flowers, but these soon were shouldered out of the bidding by professional market operators who bought in lots and held for a rise. One successful broker made 60,000 florins profit in four months.

Stole His Friend's Rare Tulip.
That Dumas' picture of Isaac Boxel's machinations against his rival tulip grower is at least not impossible is proved by historic incident. A certain burgomaster of Holland used his influence to obtain for a friend a political post of some importance. Upon the friend's offering to make return for the favor, the burgomaster refused reward and asked merely to be invited to see the appointee's tulip garden. The invitation was forthcoming at once, and the visit was made.

A few months later the appointee returned the burgomaster's visit. He went into his benefactor's garden and saw there a rare tulip which had been taken surreptitiously from his own. So furious was he at this discovery that he resigned his appointment, sold his estate, and left the country.

With nothing of real value to support the trade, the mania rose to absurd intensity. Traders gathered at inns and marked bids on wooden plates. A bulb would be mentioned, and a prospective purchaser would jot down on his plate a tentative offer. The holder of the bulb would write down a much-inflated price. While the dickering was in progress, a small percentage of the amount in question would be set aside as "wine money," and the dealer would put this up in cash. When a price was reached that both buyer and seller would check on their plates, the sale was proclaimed; but no money beyond the wine fund changed hands in the inn. Profits and losses were wholly "on paper."

On April 27, 1636, a proclamation of the states of Holland put an end to the wild speculation by rendering invalid all contracts in connection with tulips. Confusion resulted. Bulbs which had been bought for more than 5,000 florins were sold for 50. In the wholesale liquidation many traders were ruined. The bottom was out of the market, and holdings were disposed of at 1 per cent to 5 per cent of their cost.

Despite all this furor the tulip fanciers, who had retired early from the market lists and were tending their flower beds, lost none of their enthusiasm. The fields around Haarlem and Leiden continued to glow just as they glow to this day. If a man produced a new and beautiful variety of tulip, he was sure of a ready market for it.

Popular fads afford rich material for satirists in both literature and art. The tulip mania called forth not only serious horticultural essays by such men as Pierre Vallet, John Parkinson, and Lauremburg, but Juvenalian jibes by Petrus Hondius, who, in his "Dapes Inemptoe," 1621, had called people fools who devoted their entire gardens to flowers which bloomed for only a few weeks each year. Hondius was the leader of a group of writers who ridiculed tulips and tulip growers.

The "Mania Pamphlets."
Probably the Dutch government, alarmed at the extent of the bulb gambling, inspired some of the humorists to poke fun at the craze. A series of "Mania Pamphlets" was published in 1637, a few months after the disastrous liquidation. In these publications appeared drawings or cartoons showing the tulip "maniacs" in ridiculous antics.

One skit pictured a group of traders sitting around a table under a gigantic foolscap, while toiling gardeners labored outside with baskets, rakes, and barrows, and a curious crowd looked on. The cartoon was titled "Flora's Foolscap." Another picture, "Flora's Carriage of Fools," represented a crowd of tulip fanciers in a wagon equipped with sails. All were admiring their tulips, and a queue of well-dressed folk followed the carriage with hands upstretched, begging for flowers.

The original pamphlets were distributed in 1637, and in 1734, when a hyacinth mania threatened, they were reissued as a warning to speculators. Even after the mania subsided, gardeners pursued their hobby with such devotion as to provoke satirists to lampoon them. In 1688 Jean de la Bruyere wrote in his "Characters":
"The lover of flowers has a garden in the suburbs, where he spends all his time from sunrise till sunset. You see him standing there, and you would think he had taken root in the midst of his tulips before his 'Solitaire'; he opens his eyes wide, rubs his hands, stoops down and looks closer at it; it never before seemed to him so handsome.

"He is in an ecstasy of joy, and leaves it to go to the 'Orient,' then to the 'Veuve,' from thence to the 'Cloth of Gold,' on to the 'Agatha,' and at last returns to the 'Solitaire,' where he remains, is tired out, sits down, and forgets his dinner; he looks at the tulip and admires its shade, shape, color, sheen, and edges, its beautiful form and calix; but God and nature are not in his thoughts, for they do not go beyond the bulb of his tulip, which he would not sell for a thousand crowns, though he will give it to you for nothing when tulips are no longer in fashion, and carnations are all the rage."
"This rational being, who has a soul and professes some religion, comes home tired and half starved, but very pleased with his day's work; he has seen some tulips."

Fancy Names for Tulips.
English gardeners were not less enthusiastic than their fellows on the continent, and in the Tatler for August 31, 1710, Joseph Addison chaffed them in an amusing letter. Probably no other flower has been given in its several varieties such an imposing lot of "highfalutin" names as have been bestowed upon tulips. In his letter Addison tells of taking refuge from a storm at a wayside inn. He overheard a group of men talking about Admiral This, General That, and Lord So-and-so. His interest intrigued, he asked his host to admit him to the distinguished company. Of course, the great personages he had heard mentioned proved to be varieties of tulips. His host took him later into the inn garden to see a bed of tulips. Addison admired several, but was laughed to scorn for his choice and told that his favorites were only fool's coats. The owner of the bed boasted that the small strip of ground, 20 yards long by two in breadth, was worth more to him than the best two hundred acres of land in England.

Though the tulip has been the butt of considerable ridicule, it still appeals irresistibly to gardeners everywhere. The second Sunday in April is usually Tulip Sunday at Haarlem, and on that day the tulip is king. For miles bright blooms smile under golden sunlight. To the air passenger the country must look like a gaudy patchwork quilt; for there is no mingling of colors in a bed, a separate plot being devoted to each hue.

The growing of bulbs is on a commercial scale, and no attempt is made at artistic arrangement. Indeed, the flowers are mowed off ruthlessly and used as fertilizer on the beds.

BEAUTY TALKS

By

MARJORIE DUNCAN

ATTENTION TO DETAILS

WE could use lots and lots of superlatives to describe the higher standards that the majority of women seem to be living up to.

The new fashions, for one thing, are kind. There's enough variety, too, so that every type can be suited and no one need look ludicrous. American women—glory be—have learned to accept fashions and not for Fashion's sake alone. Because of that sensible attitude standardization has begun to suffer a set-back and individuality is staging the greatest success of its career. I've seen older women reject the tip-tilted hats that were meant for "the sweet young ones." I've seen them ask for modified versions of the puffed sleeves and pinched-in waists. We've suddenly turned sensible and are achieving greater success as individuals and women of refinement thereby.

Another big factor in the new standard of smartness is attention to details. Perhaps the new fashions have much to do with it; perhaps preaching has had a hand in it, too. Praise be to whatever it is that is responsible for our newer beauty. It is altogether feminine and flattering.

Look around you and you'll glimpse evidence of "attention to details." You don't see as many shoes run down at the heels as you did yesterday—do you? Crooked seams on stockings simply are taboo. Carelessness, dowdiness, frownsiness, drabness—that quartette died long ago. The wise woman of today is groomed to a point of perfection from the crown of her head to the tip of her toe. If the shallow little hats reveal a bit of hair, you can count on our modern woman to show only the healthiest, glossiest, lustreful and perfectly coiffed locks. One sees more immaculate collar-cuff trimmings, less missing buttons, better fitting clothes, more becoming hats, more shapely figures, more clear and glowing complexions, more enhancing make-up, more groomed and gloved hands. Every detail of every phase of the beauty ensemble is getting its full share of attention. Attention to detail has always stamped the woman of refinement and distinction. There's more of feminine niceties today than ever, more of that cared-for, groomed and "finished" look. Just as when a painting gets its last finishing touches becomes a perfect picture.

Some humans feel that if a little is good, a lot must be better. It is like swallowing a double dose of medicine. If the label on a foundation or finishing cream directs you to "use sparingly" then be content to have the jar last longer. Tell yourself that there must be a good reason why the manufacturer did not say "generously."

GLORIFYING THE GLOVE

IN LINE with "that finished look," let us glorify the glove. For the glove is a very definite part of the smart woman's ensemble.

Aside from adding to the picture of polish and perfection, gloves help to keep the hands soft, smooth and white. Leaving gloves off during the warm weather or while indulging in summer sports is forgivable, providing the habit is not carried over to the colder seasons. For if it is—you'll soon be caught "red handed."

Foresight is a beauty a-set and right now is the logical time to start a campaign to keep hands looking lovely. Don't wait until winter's winds have done some cutting up and chapping, until the hands look red and unsightly to start using your hand lotion or jelly and whiteners. Do it now. Every day. And never go outdoors without wearing your gloves. In fact, as I said before, put them on indoors—on your way out.

So much for the gloves to your costume, the chamois, kid or suede variety.
Now let me tell you about a woman who boasts several pairs of household gloves—rubber gloves, silk gloves, cotton gloves for various tasks. Incidentally, she also boasts the smoothest, silkiest and loveliest hands I know. Hers are working hands. She has a large household and a husband and children to care for. Dishwashing and some laundering are part of her routine. She tried to avoid harsh soap-sud agents. But when these are necessary, she dons her rubber gloves and a staunch ally she has in them. For they get the harsh effects of the suds, thus saving her hands. "They're kind to your hands," she explains.

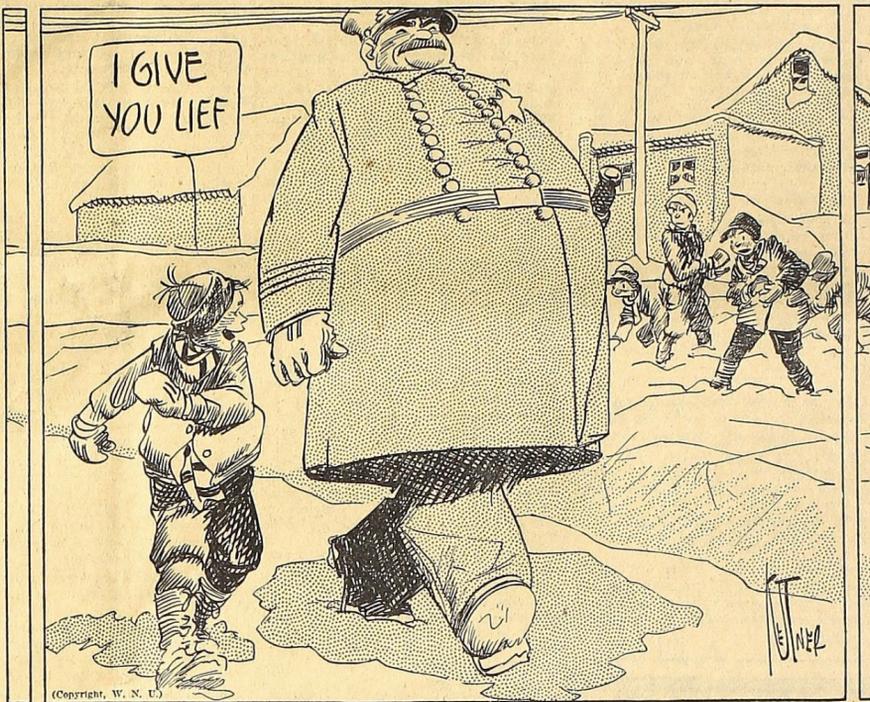

Once a week or so, she gives her hands a cream or oil treatment, and over the cream or oil she wears a pair of loose cotton gloves. She may relax and read for an hour, or do a few minor household tasks, or wear the gloves while sleeping. The gloves keep the grease from rubbing off, thus giving more lubrication to the hands and getting the skin more quickly soft and white.

During the summer she never did any rowing without wearing the padded mits that she uses for pressing, lifting or moving things about during spring cleaning and so on. And so the lovely lady of our story never has callous spots.

So sing a song glorifying gloves—and wear them.

Tornado's Movements
Most tornadoes move toward the northeast; a few toward the southwest; the others in an easterly direction. Although the storm moves at great speed around its center, its forward movement is from 40 to 60 miles an hour. It is therefore often possible to avoid a tornado by driving at right angles to it at a high rate of speed.

LOOKING BACKWARD

50 Years Ago—Mar. 13, 1884

Captain George Plough of Alpena arrived at Tawas Post last Thursday where he will get the last saving station in readiness for the coming season.

J. H. Wentz of AuSable left Tuesday for Alexandria, Louisiana, where he will take charge of Smith & Gratwick's mill.

Smith Bros. have completed their logging business for the winter. They have banked 4,500,000 feet at Harmon City.

'Tis said that S. G. Taylor's new silk hat gives him the appearance of a duke.

Jacob Luffman of East Tawas has commenced the tanning of a leather which is particularly adapted to the manufacture of shoe parts. His tannery bids fair to become quite an industry in our neighboring town.

The propeller Oconto has been put into excellent shape for the coming season. She will run between Cleveland and Alpena, touching at Saginaw, Bay City, Tawas and AuSable, and will be commanded by Capt. G. W. McGregor.

A. J. Burnstein and A. Myers have dissolved partnership. It is understood that Mr. Myers will run the Buffalo Clothing house.

A Union ticket has been put into the field in Burleigh township, with the following candidates: Supervisor, Robt. H. Martin; clerk, William Wilson; treasurer, John Wilson; school inspector, Frederick Hess; commissioner of highways, J. J. Kentz; justice of the peace, David Tucker.

The village of Alabaster received an addition to its inhabitants this week. John Oates has moved into the house formerly occupied by Frank Barnes. Mr. Barnes has removed to "middle row."

25 Years Ago—Mar. 12, 1909

The handsome new school building at East Tawas will be ready for occupancy next week. The building contains nine school rooms, superintendent's office, two recitation rooms, two teachers' rooms and wide halls. The work was done under the direction of Thos. J. Cramer. The building is not only a credit to our sister city but to the county at large.

J. M. Wugazer of Tawas City has purchased the cub bear captured by Matt. Jordan of Sherman last week and has it on display in his drug store window.

Edwin Rawden, Jas. H. Nisbet and J. B. Brown will speak on local topics Thursday evening at Whittemore.

When a case of small pox was reported at Whittemore last week, excitement reigned supreme. Investigation proved that the blemishes on the patient were ink spots, but while he slept. He says if he finds the guilty party somebody will suffer.

Featherston & Pearsall of Hale were negotiating a timber purchase at South Branch this week.

Death removed another Hemlock pioneer resident last Monday in the person of our esteemed neighbor and friend, Vespasian H. Rodman. He was born at Cayuga, N. Y., and came here in 1869, settling on the family homestead which was then a wilderness.

At the Townline school the following pupils had the highest standing: Walter Webb, Annie Webb, Edna Webb, Dora Marks, Earl Webb, Gertrude Soper and Arthur Freal.

10 Years Ago—Mar. 14, 1924

The League of Women Voters has been organized at Tawas City. "Local Government" was the topic discussed at the meeting held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. G. A. Pringle. The next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Ira Horton.

Advertisers in this week's Tawas Herald are: L. L. Johnson, W. M. McCaskey, Henry Kane, M. E. Friedman & Sons, C. H. Prescott & Sons and Moeller Bros., Tawas City; H. N. Butler & Co., Richard Look, E. G. Starr and John Samuelson, East Tawas; Ed. Graham & Sons, Whittemore.

The following auction sales will be held during next week: D. R. Williams, Taft; Bert Webster, Mills Station; Wm. Phelps, Wilber; Reynolds Kendall, Grant.

Mrs. Homer Grimes, who has been visiting friends in Tawas City for several days, leaves Monday for Marshall, Texas, where she will join Rev. Grimes who is musical director for Bob Jones, evangelist.

NOTICE OF CLOSING A ROAD
At a regular meeting of the Board of County Road Commissioners of Iosco county, Michigan, held on the 17th day of February, 1934, by a majority ye and nay vote of said commission it was determined to absolutely abandon, as a road, under the provisions of Chapter IV of Act 283, P. Albert Thompson of Wilber is doing some well-drilling in this vicinity. So far he drilled two wells for the schools, and he expects to drill one for Frank Schneider next week.

Sheriff Chas. Miller of Tawas City was in town on official business Saturday.

Fred and George Kohn, who were badly hurt in an automobile accident several weeks ago, are getting along as well as can be expected, although Fred is laid up with a badly broken arm. We hope that nothing sets in the week end at his home here.

E. J. Gingerich of Turner was in town for a truck load of hay Saturday.

Peter Sokola and son were at Standish Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt. Jordan were at Tawas City Monday, where they were settled with the County Treasurer for the tax collections made.

Dr. Somers of East Tawas had several calls to the sick here during the past couple weeks.

Everybody was pleased with the nice weather we were having the first part of the week, especially the farmers, for most of them are out of hay and it is hard to get some at any price.

Robt. Stoner and Mrs. Jos. Schneider were business callers at Turner the first part of the week.

Emil Hermann has been very ill the past couple weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley VanSickle of Grant visited at the home of her sister, Mrs. D. Ross, on Sunday.

Registration Notice

For All Elections Held April 2, 1934
To the Qualified Electors of the CITY OF TAWAS CITY, STATE OF MICHIGAN

Notice is hereby given that in conformity with the "Michigan Election Law," I, the undersigned City Clerk will, upon any day except Sunday and a legal holiday, the day of any regular or special election or primary election, receive for registration the name of any legal voter in said City not already registered who may APPLY TO ME PERSONALLY for such registration. Provided, however, that I can receive no names for registration during the time intervening between the Second Saturday before any regular, special, or official primary election and the day of such election.

The last day for General Registration does not apply to persons who vote under the Absent Voters' Law (See Registration by Affidavit.)

Notice is hereby given that I will be at my office
Tuesday, March 13, 1934
The Twentieth Day Preceding Said Election

As provided by Part II, Chapter III, Michigan Election Law from 8 o'clock a. m. until 8 o'clock p. m. on said day for the purpose of Reviewing the Registration and Registering such of the qualified electors in said City as Shall Properly Apply therefor.

Notice is hereby further given to the Qualified Electors of this City that I, the undersigned Clerk of said City, will register qualified electors who may apply at my office on any business day in the year up to and including Saturday, March 24, 1934—Last Day for General Registration by personal application for said election.

The name of no person but an ACTUAL RESIDENT of the precinct at the time of registration, and entitled under the constitution, if remaining such resident, to vote at the next election shall be entered in the registration book.

Registration by Affidavit
Sec. 10—Registering of Electors.—Any absent voter, as defined in this act, whose name is not registered and who shall claim the right to vote by absent voter's ballot at any election or primary election, may at the time of making application for absent voter's ballot, present to the City Clerk an affidavit for registration which shall be in substantially the following form:

Affidavit for Registration STATE OF MICHIGAN,
County of, being duly sworn, depose and say that I am a citizen and duly qualified elector of the Ward of the City of in the County of and State of Michigan; that my postoffice address is No. Street or R. F. D. No., and that I am not now registered as an elector therein and that I am voting by absent voter's ballot at the election (or primary election) to be held upon the day of 1934, the application for which ballot accompanies this application; that I make this affidavit for the purpose of procuring my registration as an elector in accordance with the statute; that I make the following statements in compliance with the Michigan Election Law: Age; Race; Date of Naturalization I further swear or affirm that the answers given to the above questions concerning my qualifications as an elector are true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Signed
*Taken, subscribed and sworn to before me this day of 1934

Notary Public in and for said County, State of Michigan.
My commission expires 1934

Upon receipt of such affidavit in the time specified herein, the clerk shall write in the registration book the name of the applicant together with the other information required by this chapter and such applicant shall thereupon be deemed to be duly and properly registered.

*Note—If this acknowledgement is taken outside of the State, the Certificate of the Court that the person making the acknowledgement is a notary must be attached.

Registration of Absentee by Oath
If any person whose name is not registered shall offer and claim the right to vote at any election, or primary election, and shall UNDER OATH, state that he or she is a resident of such precinct and has resided in the CITY TWENTY DAYS next preceding such election, designating particularly the place of his or her residence and that he or she possesses the other qualifications of an elector under the constitution; and that, owing to the sickness or bodily infirmity of himself or herself, or some member of his or her family or owing to his or her absence from the City on public business or his or her own business, and without intent to avoid or delay his or her registration, he or she was unable to make application for registration on the last day provided by law for the registering of electors preceding such election, then the name of such person shall be registered, and he or she shall then be permitted to vote at such election. If such applicant shall in said matter, willfully make any false statement, he or she shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and upon conviction, be subject to the pains and penalties thereof.

Provided, That any city may provide by its charter or by resolution approved by a majority of the members of its legislative body for the registration of such sick and absent voters on the last Saturday preceding any election or primary election at the places of voting in the several voting districts of such city, instead of on election or primary election day.

Provision in Case of Removal To Another Precinct
Any registered and qualified voter who has REMOVED from ONE ELECTION PRECINCT of the City to another election precinct of the City shall have the right, on any day previous to election day, on application to the City Clerk, to have his or her name transferred from the registration book of the precinct from which he or she HAS REMOVED to the registration book of the precinct in which he or she THEN RESIDES. Such elector shall have the right to have such transfer made ON ELECTION DAY, or PRImary Election day, by obtaining from the board of inspectors of election of the precinct from which he or she HAS REMOVED, a CERTIFICATE OF TRANSFER, and presenting the said certificate to the BOARD OF ELECTION INSPECTORS OF THE PRECINCT IN WHICH HE OR SHE THEN RESIDES.

W. C. Davidson, City Clerk.
Dated March 6th, A. D. 1934.

SUCH IS LIFE—Aw, Is That Nice?

Birth Rate Increase Is Sought by Europe

Three Nations Offer Subsidies to Newlyweds.

London.—Just 100 years ago they laid old Thomas Malthus in his grave. He would stir there uneasily if he knew what was happening in the world today.

Malthus was the man who linked population with the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse—war, famine, pestilence, and death—and made suggestions for curbing the birth rate. Today the three greatest nations on the European continent are neck and neck in a race to increase it.

France, Germany, and Italy are the runners in the population stakes. With mass marriage ceremonies, state subsidies for newlyweds, cash bonuses for babies, and stiff taxes on bachelorhood, they are trying to make up for the "empty years" of the war—before another war comes along and finds them short handed.

Mussolini Enthusiastic. In his role of official Cupid to young Italy, Benito Mussolini has labored long and tirelessly, but to little avail. Now he has a formidable rival in Dr. Joseph Goebbels, who has been shooting arrows with 1,500 mark notes tied to them at lovesick German swains.

Despite the sterling example Il Duce has set for the nation with his own large family, Italy has responded disappointingly to his "more babies" campaign. Every week Mussolini reviews the work of his deputy cupids and considers new plans to encourage more marriages and bigger families. Yet the birth rate steadily declines. Since 1921 Italy's population has increased from 38,755,000 to 42,554,000. But whereas the birth rate was 39 per thousand in 1887, it fell to 32.4 in 1910; to 26.9 in 1929; to 24.9 in 1931, and to 23.8 last year.

Next year, therefore, Mussolini has decreed that the government shall give jobs to no more bachelors. Present bachelor incumbents are busily casting about for eligible wives.

The new "festival of marriage" held in Rome recently started its 2,500 simultaneously married couples off in life with Fascist checks for $50 apiece. On each envelope was written: "Gentlemen, if we decrease the numbers we shall not be able to build up the empire, but run the risk of becoming a colony."

Further stimuli are reductions of rent and taxes. The proud father of ten offspring need pay no taxes at all. Bachelors from twenty-five to sixty are heavily taxed.

Subsidies for Newlyweds.

Across the Alps in Germany 100,000 couples have taken advantage of the offer of Cupid's Hitler and Goebbels to subsidize new Nazi menages. Goebbels is conducting the "more babies" propaganda on a gigantic scale. There are 7,000,000 fewer German children up to the age of twelve than there were in 1914.

The Nazi government will lend young couples up to $350, if the promised bride is willing to give up her job and refrain from working so long as her new husband earns a certain wage. The loan is paid not in cash but in vouchers for furniture, linen, or household necessities. It may be repaid in small installments.

The scheme has created some 50,000 jobs so far for young men, who now are able in turn to marry. Many of the new brides have turned their jobs over to their husbands, who were previously unemployed. For each new baby $100 comes off the taxes and furniture installments are suspended for the year.

France has long encouraged big families, but is redoubling her efforts now that Germany and Italy are competing. There, too, the falling birth rate causes anxiety.

Device Enables You to Park Your Voice

Cambridge, Mass.—Now you can park your voice—just as you park your car.

The vocal parking space device has been exhibited in Memorial hall at Harvard university. The parking space consists of a thin steel ribbon which flows along in plain sight at about one foot per second. Unlike any other form of recording speech, it is not necessary to process the ribbon or treat it in any way. The voice is impressed upon it directly by means of two small magnets which produce a varying magnetization of the steel tape corresponding to the sound waves in one's speech.

Any time the words parked are wanted for transmission the ribbon is run through a second set of magnets and the speech is reproduced in the form of an electric current.

SHOULD YOUNG PEOPLE GO TO COLLEGE?

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The question is frequently asked, "Is higher education a necessity?" Estimating the cost plus the four years spent in acquiring a college education many young people seriously question if that money and time could not otherwise be placed to a better advantage. The argument is frequently advanced not only by young people but by parents as well, why not start one's career with only a high school diploma? As evidence of the wisdom of such a plan, reference is made to persons who made a great success in life never having seen the inside of a college. True, but success in life to be measured only in terms of economic value? A college degree does not guarantee a financial success. In truth it may influence one to underestimate the value of money by disclosing the contentment to be attained in cultivating an appreciation for the more permanent and cultural things. A college degree may not be economically necessary but is a great advantage. The most important asset in college life is experience. A campus is a miniature world, wherein are enacted the very same experiences we meet in the larger world of daily toil. Wisdom and the ability to handle people and live with them is one of the tremendously important advantages of college life.

When we contemplate the professional career, a college course is not only indispensable, it is required. Our professional schools are becoming more rigid in their entrance requirements, admitting only on rare occasions students who have not had a college course. To pursue a professional course of study these days requires a trained mind. Let no young man remain away from college because of the lack of funds. There is usually some way of overcoming that difficulty through a scholarship and opportunity for part-time work.

"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom." "Better to get wisdom than gold." "Ignorance is the curse of God. Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven."

About Mirrors

Never hang a mirror on a wall that is inclined to be damp. For this reason your bathroom mirror needs special care, since steam is bound to accumulate here.

It is a good plan to nail a piece of oiled silk over the back of the mirror before it is hung, and thus prevent damp from penetrating through.

If steam gathers on the mirror wipe well with a dry cloth at the points where the glass joins the framework.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

NOW that there is so much rubber used in women's foundation garments, it is important for the woman who cleanses these articles herself to know that boiling water is destructive to it. Rubber is very elastic. That is, it will stretch frequently to many times its original length. It will also contract to its former measurement when released without any apparent enlargement.

woven. This is noticeably evident in narrow and often in wide strips of textile which, in some parts of the globe, always are termed elastic.

Also with age and under detrimental treatment, rubber loses its inherent elasticity. It may become hard and brittle or it may partially disintegrate, either one of which things renders it useless for our purposes. Very hot water reduces the rubber in elastic weaves to a softness minus its tensile property. The firm heavy nature of the goods is one of its excellent qualities. It should be sufficiently pliable to use as a textile. It should have a resistance when stretched. For foundation garments this resistance should be great for without an enormous reactionary power to this stretching the garment soon loses its value. Any treatment which diminishes this contracting element is detrimental.

With an understanding of the nature of rubber-woven textiles, we can readily grasp why very hot water should never be used for washing foundation garments, or those which have elastic garters attached. The approved method of washing these garments is to use suds, not tepid, but hot enough to be lukewarm, and a good-sized nail brush, or small (not stiff) scrubbing brush. Lay the garment on a flat surface, and with the brush wet in the suds gently scrub the solid parts, until clean. Immerse the garment in the soapy water, which by the way may require additional hot water poured into it occasionally to keep it at a lukewarm temperature.

The rinsing water also should be lukewarm. Rinse in several waters, and hang outdoors to dry. If the garment must be dried indoors, do not have it over a strong heat. The water should gradually evaporate under moderate heat. Never use a hot iron on the rubberized textile portions of the garment. If pressed at all, have the iron of low heat.

BASQUE HERDERS LEND CHARM TO OREGON RANGES

As the car drove over a hill, writes Amos Burg during a journey through Oregon, we heard a melodious voice singing in a foreign tongue. It was a Basque herder seated on a rim, watching his flocks below.

These are mystery men of the range, courteous, agreeable but reticent, fitting in perfectly with their unattended solitude.

When we drove into the Basque town of Jordan Valley, another aspect of these people was presented. It was late Sunday. Dashing mounted vaqueros, with fringed chaps and tilting sombreros, caroling up the street on spirited ponies, and strolling young ladies with a vivacity of natural charm and dress gave to this frontier Oregon community a touch of the Spanish Pyrenees.

When the first Basque settler wandered into Jordan Valley more than forty years ago and saw the endless sheep range he urged his brother in far-away Spain to come. That was the beginning of the correspondence that spotted the shelterless sage plains of southeastern Oregon with Basque herders and their nomadic flocks.

These cleanly, industrious and hospitable people are gradually having their language and customs modified by the young people attending school. There are still many of the children, however, who have never seen a train. They refer to a trip to Ontario as "going out to the railroad."

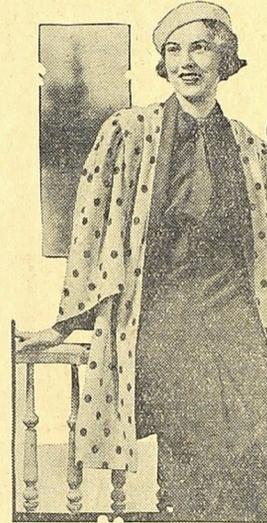

After a Basque dinner the entire population assembled in the community hall and gave a Basque dance in our honor. The snapping fingers, gayety, merrymaking and frequent bursts of song that accompanied the dances flowed from the deep roots of their ancient heritage.—National Geographic Magazine.

Woman Names League as Beneficiary of Fortune

Geneva.—A Philadelphia woman has named the League of Nations heir to her considerable fortune, it was learned recently. The league refused to divulge her name, as the woman is still living.

The property on her death, it is understood, will go first to her husband, then to her sister, and on the latter's death is to be turned over to the league.

The league sought legal advice before accepting nomination as eventual heir. Experts found there was nothing in its financial regulations preventing acceptance of property bequeathed by will.

SYNOPSIS

To the quiet household of Doctor Ballard, in Mulberry Square, youthful Dr. Hugh Kennedy, comes as an assistant to stay a year. He first meets Janie, nineteen-year-old daughter of Doctor Ballard. Her older sister, Celia, a petted beauty, is away from home. Hugh regards Janie, a universal favorite, as a small girl, to be treated as a chum. He is impressed by evidences of Doctor Ballard's kindness of heart, and his popularity. Hugh sees a photograph of Celia, and is impressed by her loveliness. He continues to regard Janie as, as he expresses it, a "good little fellow," a "funny kid," but she has a far different feeling for him. Celia returns home.

Muriel talked no further of Japan. Tom asked Janie about the playground.

"I think it's dear of Janie to be interested in those little foreigners," Celia smiled at her small gray sister. "She makes me feel absolutely worthless. I adore children. They were so cunning on the beach in their wisps of bathing suits. I used to build castles for them. We played fairy tales. They pretended that I was the Princess."

Janie knew that Hugh had no mental vision of Janie struggling with dirty little foreigners. He saw Celia beneath an umbrella on the beach, building castles for pretty clean children who called her "Princess." He saw her, perhaps, with his own children, red-haired boys who looked like Hugh, tiny blond girls with Celia's violet eyes. It worked out very well.

A maid brought tea and sandwiches and small round cakes in cups of fluted paper.

"Aren't they cunning," Celia asked, "in their ruffled petticoats?"

Hugh smiled his appreciation. Tom dropped two lumps of sugar in Celia's cup. Muriel and Janie exchanged a long expressive glance.

Hugh was reminded of a servant they'd had who told fortunes with tea leaves.

"I had my fortune told at the shore," Celia's manner made it seem a remarkable achievement. "A crystal gazer. She told me I was psychic. She said she felt it the moment I entered the room. I do have strange premonitions sometimes. I feel them in my wrists. Little stabs like rose pricks."

Celia and Hugh and Tom talked about premonitions. Muriel lit a fresh cigarette. Janie continued to wish that she had never been born.

Tom presently glanced at Muriel, lying back in the low wicker chair, her long graceful legs indolently crossed, the smoke from the cigarette wreathing above her head.

"You look like an ad," he said.

"Doesn't she?" Hugh agreed.

"Muriel is so sophisticated," Celia smiled prettily. "I wish I didn't look like a lace-paper valentine," she added with a quivering sigh.

"Excuse me," Muriel rose from her chair and walked toward the house. Janie followed, after a moment. She made no apologies. It wasn't necessary. Celia was talking about herself. No one noticed that Janie had gone.

Muriel was pacing back and forth in the wide oak-beamed hall.

"If I had stayed, I would have thrown things," she said to Janie.

Muriel looked almost ugly today. Her face was somber; her eyes were dark with helpless rage. Janie thought of the garden party when Muriel had looked pretty, standing against the oak tree, talking and laughing with Tom. She thought of running away with Hugh to the point beyond the White Marsh creek. She remembered how he had smiled at her and told her all of his dreams . . .

"Look at our Christmas tree now!" "You can't see the tiny first star." "It's lost in the dazzle." . . .

Janie looked at Muriel.

"It makes everything different," she said, "Celia being at home."

fallen asleep as soon as her head touched the pillow. Janie felt like adding a postscript to the letter. She nobly refrained.

It was Great-aunt Rose who explained. She came to call one Sunday afternoon. Celia was spending the day with Aunt Rhoda, Janie sat curled up with a book in a fat leather chair. Mother rocked languidly and waved a palm-leaf fan.

"I suppose Celia has told you, Helen," Aunt Rose began.

"Has something happened?" Mother, of course, was expecting the worst. "Something which may be pleasant." Aunt Rose smiled faintly. She never really laughed. It wasn't aristocratic. "A charming young man, vacationing at the shore, was very attentive to our pretty little girl."

"From Washington?" Mother had glimpsed the post-marks on the square gray envelopes.

"He is located in Washington now." Aunt Rose, on all occasions, spoke as though she was addressing a meeting of the D. A. R. "His home, he informed me, is in Charleston."

"What is his name?" Mother, Janie thought, was getting a little excited. Charleston! It had a fascinating sound. You thought of mansions and live oak trees and gardens of vivid flowers.

"Carter Shelby," Aunt Rose gave the name her unqualified approval. "I have made investigations. The Carters and the Shelys are prominent in Charleston society."

"And you think—" Mother was seeing visions and dreaming dreams.

"I think we are likely to lose our pretty little girl."

It was a loss which Janie felt she could bear with fortitude. Bless this Carter Shelby! If only Celia would marry him! Maybe then . . .

After that Mother ceased to look with a calculating expression at Celia and Hugh. Janie found her rummaging one day through a book case in the upstairs sitting room. It harbored the literary cast-offs of the years, baby books, "The Little Colonel" series, "Big Game in Africa," the detective stories that Grandfather Ballard had liked, two rows of massive volumes which were bound copies of a magazine. It was through these that Mother was busily searching.

"What are you looking for?" Janie asked.

"I remember seeing it once," Mother fluttered the pages and little puffs of dust swirled up into the air. Janie watched and wondered. Mother, as a rule, was not devoted to literature. "Here it is!" she exclaimed. "Janie! Would you look!"

Janie dropped to her knees and looked over Mother's shoulder. The article was entitled "Charleston Gardens." There were pictures in color of boxwood hedges and sun dials and clumps of flaming azaleas.

"A perfect setting for Celia!" Mother murmured with visions in her eyes.

"It's lovely," Janie agreed.

"And look at this!"

Janie saw through a tunnel of arching trees a mansion of rose-red brick. Mother's finger trembled as it pointed out the line of lettering beneath the picture. "Magnolia—The Home of Colonel Valentine Shelby."

"It might not be the same one," Janie objected.

It did seem that Mother was counting a number of unhatched eggs.

"Aunt Rose never makes mistakes like that." Mother was dreaming over the picture. "I," she sighed, "will never escape this Square. But Celia certainly shall."

Celia, however, volunteered no information. She continued to act as though young Mr. Shelby was a subject too sacred to be discussed. When a square gray envelope failed to arrive in the morning mail she was petulant and plaintive. When it did arrive, she donned her "Saint Cecilia" expression. Janie wondered. Had Celia fallen in love?

Father went away for the last two weeks in August. His friend, Judge Trent, from Baltimore, had a camp in the Blue Ridge mountains. Father was pleased and excited.

"A legacy is useful," he said at breakfast the morning he left.

"I'll do my best, Doctor Ballard," Hugh promised gravely.

"Keep an eye on him, Janie."

"Both eyes, Father." Janie was perched on the arm of his chair, wanting to keep him, happy because he could go.

"Do take care of yourself, John." Mother was closing a bag. "Remember—nothing fried!"

Stoney was waiting with Father's car at the door. Rachel was announcing the time in melancholy accents. Father was kissing Mother and Janie and shaking hands with Hugh.

"Where's Celia?" he asked.

"She came in so late last night," Mother answered quickly. "I couldn't bear to wake her."

Father looked disappointed. "All right," he said. "Kiss her good-by for me."

A chorus of good-bys. Stoney stowing Father's bags in the back of the shabby old car. Rachel wiping her eyes on her apron and grumbling for all she was worth. A waving of hands,

A splutter and roar from the engine. Father was gone!

Hugh was busy after that. He had no time to sit on the lawn at Aunt Lucy's and fall in love with Celia. Janie felt almost happy again and forgot to wish she had never been born. And then—

Janie came into the garden one evening through the alley-way gate. Celia was sitting with some one on the seat around the catalpa tree. But it wasn't Hugh. It was Tom McAllister. She walked slowly across the grass, making no noise at all.

"Celia, darling," Tom was saying, "have you ever had in all your life a really honest emotion?"

"That isn't kind." The silver harp strings quivered. "You don't understand me, Tom."

"Oh, yes I do. You're a clever little lady—but not quite clever enough."

"Life is so hard for me, Tom." The harp strings were playing a tragic tune. "I simply can't bear to hurt people. Sometimes I wish I were cross-eyed and had a wart on my chin."

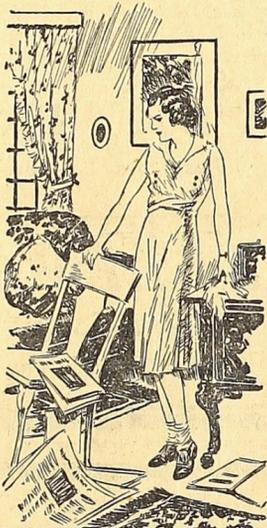

"Celia! Celia!" A tender, laughing rebuke. "The Irish in me wants to kiss you. The Scotch in me tells me to spank you instead. I'll just be Irish tonight."

Janie momentarily interrupted Tom's romantic intentions. She slipped past them with a casual "hello" and walked on toward the house. Her eyes lifted to Hugh's window. Was he up there, watching Celia, caring because she sat with Tom McAllister beneath the catalpa tree?

Hugh's door was open when she reached the top of the stairs.

"Hello, Janie." He smiled as she stopped at the door. "Are you sleepy, little fellow?"

"Not very." She studied his face.

Janie Attended to the Dusting in No Very Amiable Frame of Mind.

very amiable frame of mind. She was warm and weary. She wanted a bath. Celia would be dressing while every one else worked like slaves. Even Hugh. She saw him turning the freezer in the shade of the catalpa nose. Dear Hugh. If Celia would marry this Carter Shelby . . . She returned to the dusting with new determination.

Celia, upstairs, was experiencing a moment or two of utter panic. She had described it to Carter Shelby as a charming place, this shabby old-fashioned house. She had made him see her against a background of dim green arbutus, climbing roses, ancestral portraits and faithful family servants. What would he think of Rachel? What would he think of the Square? She had let him suppose that they were wealthy. It was easy and pleasant to create that impression, traveling with Great-aunt Rose. You said she preferred a quiet hotel. You asked Great-aunt Rose to wear her amethysts and her diamond-studded combs. . . .

What would he think of it all? Celia mentally inspected the dining room with its dingy paper and the stains on the ceiling where the bathroom plumbing leaked through. Carter was fastidious. She remembered that he had noticed little things. She liked him for it. But now. If only she hadn't made it seem like a picture, Mulberry Square! He had liked the name. She had talked about the fountain . . .

She knew she was half way in love with him. He was so good-looking, his ardent dark eyes, his wavy dark hair, his charmingly graceful manners. She hadn't been quite sure of him. In spite of the letters, she wasn't quite sure of him now. She wanted him to take her away from this dreary old Square. Celia and Carter. They were handsome together . . . "Mrs. Carter Shelby. Oh, yes, the Charleston Shelys. Lovely little thing" . . .

What should she wear? Celia, in peach-tinted lingerie, flattered distractedly around the room. The white tulle? That was too formal. The primrose chiffon? The lilac organdy? That was becoming.

She slipped it on. As her head and throat emerged from the lilac cloud, she smiled again. Did it matter, after all, that the house was shabby and needed repairs?

"You pretty thing," she whispered to the dreaming girl in the mirror.

Hugh was standing beside the newel post as Celia walked down the stairs. She saw in his eyes a tribute to her beauty. He was much less attractive than Carter Shelby, she thought. But he admired her.

"Thank you for helping, Hugh." She let her hand rest for a moment on his arm.

Janie came out from the living room. She looked sulky and cross and disheveled. Funny little brown girl! It was a shame that Janie was so plain.

"Hurry and dress, dear," Celia smiled at her grave little sister.

The dining room looked better than she had expected with the pink and lavender cosmos and the tall pale candles. Celia lowered the shades. There! Upstairs she heard water running and Mother calling to Father. They were good to her. She would make it up to them when she had a great deal of money. It was her duty to marry well. She alone could rescue them all from this tawdry old Square. . . .

Mother came downstairs, patting herself into place. Father presently followed, Janie, Hugh. The long hand of the clock moved to half-past six.

"Shouldn't he be here, darling?" Mother asked anxiously.

"He didn't say any definite time."

"Coming by train?" Father was hungry and wanted his supper.

"He's driving."

"I'm starved," Janie said with a patient sigh.

Hugh picked out notes on the piano and looked at Celia in her lilac organdy frock. Celia listened for the door-bell and peated the edge of her handkerchief.

The bell rang. All eyes turned to Celia.

"You go, Rachel," she said.

Rachel returned with a telegram.

"Fo' you, Miss Celia."

Celia ripped it open, pulled out the yellow sheet. She read it through and crumpled it in her hand.

"He isn't coming!" she cried in a passion of anger and disappointment.

"Never mind, darling." Mother's face paled. "It's all right." Mother was soothing Celia with soft little hushing sounds. "Don't fret."

"No use wasting a party." Father was smiling as though a tragedy had not occurred. "Call over the wall, Janie, to Doctor and Mrs. Warden."

Celia was amiable at supper. She laughed at the rector's jokes and was attentive to dowdy Mrs. Warden. But at the end of the meal her handkerchief was torn into ragged shreds.

hadn't slept very well. Janie was lying flat on her stomach beside the living room hearth.

"Didn't you go to the playground?" Celia asked.

"The kids aren't ducks," Janie turned a page.

"Where's Mother?"

"Having lunch with Mrs. Leland." Janie kicked her heels together. "It's a committee meeting."

"When do we have lunch?"

"We don't. Rachel is in bed with neuritis."

Celia moved restlessly around the room. How shabby it looked! No one had dusted. The flowers were drooping. Glimpsed through the rain-splattered windows the Square was dismal and forlorn. How could Janie be contented, reading beside the hearth?

"Peter Bruce 'phoned you," Janie said.

"What did he want?"

"I don't know."

Celia didn't care. Peter Bruce with his thick red hands. Was this to be her life? She drooped like a wilting flower into the chair beside the hearth.

Janie lay on her stomach, reading, munching an apple, turning a page now and then. Celia thought that she envied Janie in spite of the fact that she was solemn-looking and brown. It would be comfortable to be insensitive, not pained by shabbiness, torn into shreds of emotion. If only Carter had come . . .

Hugh came in presently. Celia brightened a little. They had a picnic lunch in front of the fire; scraps of chicken, buttered toast, cocoa and cakes.

Hugh talked to Celia and watched the shine of the freelight on her honey-colored hair. Lovely, he thought, the curve of her throat, her delicate oval face. She would always be lovely. Her bones were beautifully formed. . . .

Janie lay on the hearth rug and looked at Hugh. Celia would make him miserable, she thought. Hugh was sincere and honest and fine. He would worship Celia and Celia would take advantage. Janie didn't want Hugh to be hurt. It was miserable, being hurt. "Don't fall in love with her, Hugh. Oh, darling laughing Hugh!" . . .

The door-bell rang. Celia slipped away to answer it. A tall young man in a belted coat stood on the rain-splashed steps.

"Is this Doctor Ballard's residence?" A southern accent.

"Yes." The rain was falling on his wavy dark hair. His face was dark even when he smiled. His teeth were very white.

"Is Miss Ballard at home?"

Celia answered in person.

"Why, Carter Shelby!" The silver harp strings were tautly drawn. She advanced to meet him, both hands extended in a pretty gesture of greeting.

"My car broke down." Young Mr. Shelby was explaining, smiling down at Celia, holding both of her hands. "I left it and came on the train."

Celia led him into the living room. She chattered brightly. She introduced him to Janie and to Hugh.

He ought to wear costumes, Janie thought. A brocade vest, a coat with velvet lapels. Strange that his face was dark even when he smiled. . . .

Women like a suggestion of mystery, Hugh thought. He doubted if even in the very far South they spoke with such an exaggerated drawl. He thought of the gambler in "Show Boat." Ravenal—that was his name. Celia seemed nervous. He wished he could help her somehow.

"Have you had lunch?" Celia asked when Hugh had taken his coat and Janie had pushed the armchair close to the fire.

"Well, no. As a matter of fact—" He accepted a cigarette and bent to the lighter Hugh snapped.

Lunch! Celia thought of Rachel in bed with neuritis. She thought of what was left in the icebox. She thought of Mother lunching with Mrs. Leland. She felt very badly used.

Janie was sorry for Celia. She couldn't bear it, somehow, to see her shaken and nervous. She wished she had dusted this morning and rearranged the flowers.

"Our maid is ill," she explained to Carter Shelby. "And Mother isn't at home. Last night we killed the fatted calf." She smiled her wide gay smile. "There's nothing left but the bones."

Hugh laughed. Why will she say such things? Celia inwardly fumed. Carter Shelby smiled.

Joker Postage Stamp

Nue, one of the islands of the South Seas and a dependency of New Zealand, for many years used the stamps of that commonwealth overprinted with the name "Nue" and a value expressed in native words using English letters. In 1903, when a new supply of stamps arrived, one in particular seemed to cause an unusual amount of merriment on the part of the natives. An inquiry revealed that the stamp was overprinted "Tahae Sileni" instead of "Tahae Sileni" which does not seem provocative of much mirth until it was learned that the former means "Thief Shilling" and not "One Shilling" as intended by the printers.

Fineness of Friendship Is Tolerance of Faults

"I respectfully suggest that the one subject in the world about which the greatest amount of bunk has been spoken and written is the subject of friendship.

"I have come to the conclusion that there is no such thing as what we have been brought up to believe in as 'real' friendship—that is, a deep affection, feeling which carries with it understanding and sympathy and faith, the loyalty which sticks by one, even at one's sacrifice, through thick and thin.

"Instead of that, I find friendship to be a matter of self-interest, convenience and social satisfaction. People are your friends either because they have something to gain by it or because you are amusing or interesting they like your company. But how far does that go?

"The depression has shown people who cannot afford to entertain according to the standards of their circle the depth of many friendships. I know a woman who had to move to an uninteresting suburb, without a country club, who found her best friends equal to just one trip to her new home. And, accordingly invitations extended to her were no more insistent than they had to be.

"There may be things about your relatives that you don't like, but there is usually a bond that counts in time of trouble, a bond of feeling rather than social etiquette. And I'm glad I found out before I'm any older just how much there is to friendship!"

This pessimistic epistle was addressed to a woman's page editor of high reputation, and here is her answer:

"Familiar words, all of them. Usually they are not very final. Let us hope that this reader, too, will recover from the shock of disillusionment in some friend to take a more philosophic view of friendship.

"There is just one opening she gives us. That is the mention of relatives with whom there is 'a bond that counts in time of trouble.' Admittedly, our relatives are not perfect. And yet we do not 'drop' them for a fault. We accept their faults, we take them as they are, presumably because of that feeling of permanence in the bond of kinship. And we expect our relatives to be no less tolerant with us.

"Would not friendship be a bigger and finer thing with the same assumption of permanence, with the same acceptance of the ever-present human faults? Once we have felt a sufficient bond with some one to give our friendship, should we not give it without demanding perfection, without reservation and without resenting as 'disillusionment' any deviation from the ideal?

"I am impelled to the suggestion that if our reader can take that view of the relationship with her friends she will revise her present conclusion about 'how much there is to friendship.' For so much depends upon our own point of view, so much in friendship is reciprocal. Here, particularly, are philosophy, tolerance, understanding important. Are these qualities not a test of our friendship for those of whom we expect understanding?

"Henry Ward Beecher said: 'Every man should keep a fair-sized cemetery in which to bury the faults of his friends.'"

MEDICAL ADVICE

If you want to . . .

- . . . relieve constipation gently and safely
- . . . take the exact dose suited to your need
- . . . avoid danger of bowel strain

—use a liquid laxative

Can constipation be safely relieved? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" declare thousands who have followed their advice and know.

You are not apt to cure your constipation with salts, pills and tablets, or any habit-forming cathartic. But you can safely relieve this condition just by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

Why Hospitals use a liquid laxative

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit your individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will it irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The unwise use of strong cathartics may often do more harm than good.

In buying any laxative, read the label. If it contains a doubtful drug, don't take it. If you don't know what is in it, don't quickly and easily. For sufferers from itching, burning affections, eczema, pimples, rashes, red, rough skin, sore, itching, burning feet, chafings, chappings, cuts, burns and all forms of disfiguring blotches, prompt relief may be found by anointing with Cuticura Ointment. It quickly soothes and soon heals.

Price 25c and 50c

Proprietors: Potter Drug & Chemical Corporation, Malden, Mass.

THE TEST:

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels," but strong cathartics!

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used.

Ford Cars Sweep Big Racing Field

Ten V-8 Stock Models Finish in Order

Seventy-five thousand spectators saw Stubby Stubblefield, Pacific Coast racing star, pilot a Ford V-8 to victory in the famous 250-mile Gilmore Gold Cup race for stock cars at the Los Angeles Municipal Airport. His time was 4 hours 46 seconds, and his average speed over the track was 62.367 miles an hour. Officials said the race was one of the toughest tests ever given a stock car.

Supervised and sanctioned by the American Automobile Association, the race attracted 26 entrants. Of these, 22 selected Ford V-8s for the long grind, partly because of the accelerative ability of the Ford V-8 engine and partly because the Ford transverse springs minimize tilting even at high speed around turns. Ten Ford cars took the first ten places in the event.

The Ford sweep in the premier winter road racing classic of the Pacific Coast, was a repetition of the results in the Elgin National Stock Car Road Race at Elgin, Ill., Aug. 26, when seven Ford V-8s took the first seven places in that famous 200 mile event. The average speed for the course being 80.22 miles per hour.

After trailing their opponents during the first period, 4 to 2, they went on a scoring spree and tallied 17 more points by half time. Cool and accurate shooting, the Oscoda quintet, showing exceptionally fine form, continued to rapidly increase its already impossible score and at the sound of the final gun the count stood at 36 to 19 in their favor.

Evenly matched teams, keen rivalry, and good sportsmanship on the part of players and coaches, coupled with the splendid spirit shown by the competing schools and their large followings, made this year's tourney very successful. A. H. Cansfield, Bay City, and C. C. Coulter, Saginaw, handled the refereeing and umpiring in an excellent manner.

That Coach Steve Young's East Tawas Indians and Coach W. Kraus' Oscoda boys were popular winners of the tournament was evidenced by the loud cheering when they were crowned victors. Fans are watching with interest the outcome of the regionals at Mt. Pleasant this week end in which these teams are participating.

Following are the line-ups for the championship contests played Saturday night:

High School
The local contest for declaimers and orators was held at the high school March 1st. Of the orators, Evelyn Bigelow was placed first and Arnold McLean second. In the declaimer contest, Richard King received first and Patricia Braddock second. Evelyn Bigelow and Richard King will represent the school at the sub-district contest to be held at East Tawas during the first week in April.

The Senior class had the highest percentage of attendance during the past month. Their average was 97.3%. The Board of Education recently decided to have no school on Good Friday this year. This follows the procedure of the past several years. The scholarship average for the past three and one-half years of work for the Seniors has been figured. A, B, C, D and E were counted as four points, three points, two points, one point, and no point, respectively. The students in the upper twenty-five per cent are as follows: Arlene Leslie, 3.67; Arnold McLean, 3.63; Theone Lincoln, 3.10; Velma Harger, 2.88; Dorothy Ulman, 2.75.

This result causes Arlene Leslie to be the valedictorian of the class, and Arnold McLean to be the salutatorian.

Seventh and Eighth Grades
The pupils of the eighth grade are having a thorough review of fractions. We appreciate the fine new bulletin board that Mr. Bigelow put in our room recently.

Miss Donaldson weighed and measured the pupils in our room this week, and, after comparing the date of this test with the data taken in a similar test last fall, many interesting changes are noted.

The following pupils had perfect spelling papers the past week: Eighth grade—Lucille DePott, Margaret Fox, Myrton Leslie, Marguerite McLean, and Dorothy McDonald; seventh grade—June Brown and Norma Jean Musolf.

Fifth and Sixth Grades
The health inspectors for this week are Dorothy Blust, Margaret Davis, Betty Rapp, and Ellen Malcolm.

The board captains for this week are Herbert Ziehl and Harold Wegner.

Interesting special reports were given in the sixth grade geography class Monday. Margaret Davis reported on the city of Washington, Norma Malcolm on Philadelphia, and Allan Miller on Trenton.

Primary Room
Mrs. Frank Moore visited in our room Friday afternoon. The first and second grades have a store to help motivate their number work. We call it "The Corner Grocery."

Miss Donaldson weighed and measured us Monday. Many of us have gained considerably since last September both in weight and in height. Through an error in typing, Norma Lou Westcott's name did not appear on the honor roll for February as it should have been.

The second graders are at work on a Holland project in language. Those having perfect spelling lessons last week were: Willard Musolf, Neil Libka, Wayne White, Norma Lou Westcott, and Leland Britting.

Smallness Revealed
It is with narrow-necked people as with narrow-necked bottles; the less they have in them, the more noise they make in pouring it out.—Pope.

Valuable Asset
"A good-natured man," said Uncle Eben, "is a comfortable playmate, but it's a fightin' man you needs in trouble."

Both Good and Bad
Prosperity is not without many fears and distastes; and adversity is not without comforts and hopes.—Bacon.

Hours of Prayer
The canonical hours are matins, lauds, prime, terce, sext, none, vespers and compline. These are the stated times of the day fixed in the Sixth century by the Christian church for the offices of prayer and devotion.

Land Without Forests
There are no forests in Egypt. The date palm and sycamore are the principal trees. Many other trees, principally fruit trees, have been introduced and flourish when sufficient moisture is furnished.
