ELECTION STIRS UP INTEREST IN COUNTY

East Tawas Votes Against Sale of Liquor By The Glass

Election returns from the 11 townships of Iosco county and the cities of Whittemore, Tawas City and East Tawas show that a lively interest in political affairs was taken by the people of the county this year.

Plainfield township attracted quite a bit of attention with three tickets in the field. Of these three—Republican, Democratic, and Farm-Labor—the Republican candidates were the winners. In Grant and Burleigh townships, too, as well as in Whittemore and Tawas City, the Republican ballot carried the field.

The sale of liquor by the glass was defeated in East Tawas by a vote of 246 to 177.

The official returns for the townships, and for East Tawas, Tawas City, and Whittemore are as follows:

Alabaster Township

School Notes
High School
Plans for the High School Carnival are well under way. Committees have been appointed and the preliminary work has begun. This year's carnival promises to be the best the high school has ever sponsored. In addition to the regular features and freaks there will be many new additions—enough to provide a good time for all. Come and have some good wholesome fun on the evening of April 27.

The baseball season will begin soon, and two games have already been scheduled with Harrisville. In addition to the program of last Thursday afternoon there were a good many motion picture slides shown of early American history. They were furnished by the University.

BASEBALL GROUP ELECTS OFFICERS

Club Distributes Trophies; Plans Bridge Party

A large representation of players and interested citizens gathered at the Hi-Speed Inn on Tuesday evening for the annual baseball meeting. The following officers were elected for the 1934 season: Manager, Henry Neumann; secretary, Carl Zollweg; treasurer, Walter Kasischke; director, Walter Moeller. A captain will be chosen by the players later.

Twenty-four miniature gold-baseballs, engraved with the inscription "Tawas City, N. E. M. League Champs, 1933," were given to the members of the 1933 championship squad. Every player is proud of this miniature trophy and no doubt will work hard to win another this season.

An entertainment committee was appointed for the purpose of securing funds with which to purchase essential materials so that the team can begin its 1934 campaign properly. The committee decided to give a bridge party next Tuesday evening, April 10, at the Hi-Speed Inn. Tickets are now on sale at 25c each and may be purchased from any player or at all business places. Let's make this affair one of the biggest events of the year.

A meeting will be held Friday night of this week at the AuGres hotel, at 7:30 o'clock, to determine whether league activities will be continued during 1934. A delegation from Tawas City will be in attendance.

P.-T. A. Meeting To Be Held Next Thursday

Everyone is urged to attend the meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association in the high school auditorium on Thursday evening, April 12. A very instructive and entertaining program has been planned by the committee. Bernard Coggan, a very interesting speaker, will give an address. Musical selections will be rendered by Mrs. A. E. Gidding and Miss Elsie Ahonen.

Two Glorious Voices Heard In New Talkie

High romance and lilting melody, prize-winning twins of entertainment, are deftly combined in "The Cat and the Fiddle," which shows at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, April 8, 9 and 10.

Ramon Novarro and Jeanette MacDonald are the stars, and this department suggests that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will do well to keep them together in future films. It has been many a day since the screen has seen a more ideal pair of lovers.

"The Cat and the Fiddle," adapted from the successful stage play by Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach, comes to the films with its original inspired musical score intact. The story happily has been strengthened in its romantic and dramatic aspects and it is absorbing entertainment from first to last. In such selections as "The Night Was Made for Love," "She Didn't Say Yes," "One Moment Alone," "The Love Parade," "A New Love Is Old" and "Try to Forget" they reach musical heights that will not soon be forgotten.

Long—Ulman

On Saturday evening, March 31st, at five o'clock a very pretty Easter wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Long when Miss Leona Ulman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ulman, became the bride of Alton Long.

To the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march by Wagner, played by Mrs. John McArdle, Sr., the bridal party assembled in the living room, where the wedding ceremony was performed by Elder M. A. Sommerfeld.

The bride wore a lovely gown of pink satin and carried an arm bouquet of white sweet peas and roses. Miss Florence Ulman, sister of the bride, attended as bridesmaid. She was dressed in a gown of shell pink satin and carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas and roses. Glen Long, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

After the ceremony a bountiful wedding supper was served to about thirty guests, seated at a long table lavishly in pink and white with a three-story wedding cake as a centerpiece. The dining room was prettily decorated with the bride's chosen colors, pink and white.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Theodore Ulman and family, Orval Ulman and family, and Richard Dunant of Detroit; Mrs. Daniel Low, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Parks of Ypsilanti.

The young couple will reside in Flint, where Mr. Long has employment.

Irwin—McNiel

A pretty home wedding took place Sunday, April 1, at 1:00 o'clock in the afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Irwin, four miles south of Whittemore, when their son, Eric, and Miss Arvilla L. McNiel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. McNiel of Whittemore, were united in marriage.

The home was prettily decorated for the occasion, and the ceremony was performed under an arch of blue and white. Elder M. A. Sommerfeld of Tawas City officiated. Miss Myrtle LeBlond of Flint and Lowell G. Bellen of Ann Arbor attended the young couple.

After the ceremony a reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Irwin. A bountiful dinner was served to over forty guests.

The young couple will make their home in Flint.

EAST TAWAS CAR STOLEN THURSDAY

Bowman Coupe Taken After Three Different Tries

Thieves fled with a Plymouth coupe belonging to L. J. Bowman of East Tawas early Thursday morning, after being frustrated in three attempts to steal other automobiles owned by local persons.

The Bowman car was taken from a garage in the rear of the owner's residence sometime between two and three a. m. Thursday. Entrance to the garage was obtained through a side door.

Investigation Thursday revealed that three attempts on other cars had been made, apparently by the same thieves. Evidence of tampering on the cars of Mrs. Edna Acton and Lloyd Hayes was found. Keys had been left in neither of these cars, however.

The thieves evidently left these automobiles and proceeded around a corner to find a parked car belonging to the Rev. C. E. Edinger, in which keys had been left. They drove the Edinger machine about two blocks before it stalled and was abandoned.

After Sheriff Charles Miller had been called to East Tawas to investigate the attempted thefts of the other three cars, Mr. Bowman about noon reported the loss of his automobile. Believing that his son had taken the coupe with him to work, Mr. Bowman Thursday morning did not realize that his car had been stolen.

Late Thursday afternoon no clues as to the identity of the thieves or the whereabouts of the stolen coupe had been obtained.

McIntyre—Freel

Miss Grace Freel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judson Freel of the Township, and Gerald McIntyre of Bay City were united in marriage on Wednesday, March 21. They were attended by Miss Lois Freel of National City and George Sermon of Bay City. A wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's uncle, Earl Webb, of Saginaw.

Late News Events

LANSING, April 6—Beneficiaries of the bitterly criticized old age pension will possibly receive their pension checks within the next few weeks, according to a statement made by Ed L. Williams, chief of the Old Age Pension bureau. Disbursements will be made in counties which have paid the highest percentages in the head tax levy and payments will be cut to the minimum so as to reach the greatest number of needy. Over $250,000.00 has been collected. Nearly 40,000 applications are now on file.

GLADSTONE, April 6—Oscoda lost to Gladstone in the quarter-finals of the State Debating competition Wednesday. The Gladstone team goes to the semi-finals with Detroit, Battle Creek and Ferndale.

STANDISH, April 6—Monday's election here resulted in a vote in favor of liquor by the glass. The proposition carried by a vote of 316 to 170.

LINCOLN, April 6—Joseph Goneau, age 47, was instantly killed Monday night when struck by a state highway department truck driven by B. G. Anning of Alpena. Goneau and two companions, Joseph Lemont and Fred Doyle, were returning to their homes after completing their work on the township election board. Anning said that the three men were walking on the right hand side of the road, and on account of the darkness, he was unable to see them until too late to avoid hitting them. Lemont and Doyle were also injured.

COUNTY HAS TOURIST LURES, SAYS SPEAKER

Kenneth Duncan Addresses Shore Association Banquet

Presence of unusual tourist attractions in Iosco county and the necessity of each community's stressing its characteristic points of interest were emphasized by Kenneth Duncan, managing editor of the Bay City Daily and Sunday Times, in a speech at the dinner-meeting of the Huron Shore Association last Wednesday evening at the Holland Hotel in East Tawas.

The gypsum plants at Alabaster and National City, the hydro-electric plants on the AuSable river, and the Lumbermen's Memorial, recently erected, were listed by Mr. Duncan as drawing cards for tourists. Additional points of interest offered by Iosco county are Tawas bay, with its excellent fishing, boating, and bathing opportunities; the trout-rearing ponds on Silver Creek; the Huron National Forest; and the beauty of the AuSable river, as well as its many historical associations connected with the early lumber industry.

The Trout Carnival at West Branch last May and the Grayling Winter Sports Carnivals of the last two seasons were cited by Mr. Duncan as examples of how communities may pick out their most characteristic attractions and play them up to interest outsiders. The Bay City Daily Times, the speaker said, is anxious to help promote Northeastern Michigan's attractions through its news columns.

William C. Henry, president of the Bay City Chamber of Commerce, said that since lumbering had become a thing of the past in Northeastern Michigan, the tourist business had become one of its most important enterprises. He gave his assurance that the Bay City Chamber of Commerce would cooperate with the towns of northern Michigan in every way.

That each community should cooperate with others in the county in their various projects was the gist of an impromptu talk made by James MacGillivray, supervisor-elect of Oscoda township.

T. F. Marston, secretary of the East Michigan Tourist association, urged the people of this section not to overlook the benefits that had been derived from that association in the past and the possibilities for the future.

N. J. Crocker, president of the Huron Shore Association, welcomed the group of about 125 persons who came from various points in the county and introduced R. G. Schreck as toastmaster.

A ten-piece orchestra from the primary department of the Bay City public schools under the leadership of Charles H. White, director of music, entertained the assemblage with music, and the boys and girls later presented a sketch. The cornet, saxophone, and xylophone solos won hearty plaudits.

Mrs. Nyda Campbell-Leslie of Tawas City, accompanied by Mrs. A. E. Giddings, pianist, gave several vocal solos which were enthusiastically received by the audience.

It was announced that the next meeting will be held at Tawas City.

Comedy Cast Puts Hilarious Note In "Havana Widows"

Six stellar comedians appear in the cast of the First National picture, "Havana Widows," which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Wednesday and Thursday, April 11-12. They are said to give the picture such an unusual comedy twist as to make it one of the most hilarious fun-makers the screen has seen in many a day.

Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, two of the most sophisticated wisecrackers of the screen, as the two Broadway chorus girls on a quest for millionaires in Havana whom they plan to shake down, head the cast.

The other four scintillating comedians include Guy Kibbee, Allen Jenkins, Frank McHugh and Ruth Donnelly. With Lyle Talbot playing a straight role as the hero of the piece, and making a perfect foil for the broad comedy roles, the cast is an unusually excellent combination.

Attention, Motorists

The following is the penalty for driving a car without proper license: You are subject to a fine, and your operator's license will be suspended for one year. You must show financial responsibility before you or anybody else can drive your car. This law will be strictly enforced. Don't take a chance!

Tear Up Streets of San Luis Potosi for Silver

Citizens Excited by Metal's Return to Favor.

Washington.—Silver's return to popularity in the United States has caused great excitement in San Luis Potosi, Mexico. The city is built on tallings and refuse from near-by mines, and now thrifty citizens are eagerly ripping up their streets for the silver in the pavement.

"San Luis Potosi is the capital of a state of the same name, situated north of Mexico, D. F. (Mexico City)," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "It is built on a high plateau, over a mile above sea level. The rough peaks of the Sierra Madre protect it on three sides, and the climate is cool and dry, but never too cold.

Boomed, Deserted, Revived.
"When Cortes and his men first pushed their way westward, San Luis Potosi was an insignificant Indian village. Lured by the promised wealth of the famous Zacatecas mines beyond, the Spaniards paid the village scant attention as they passed through. Soon after came Franciscan monks, the mission of San Luis was founded, and silver and gold were discovered in the San Pedro hills. In the hope that the town might rival its famous namesake in Bolivia, it was christened Potosi.

"This optimism was not unfounded. The mines were rich, but poorly worked. In 1622 the largest mine caved in. San Luis Potosi became a deserted mining camp until years later when new mines were opened. Many of the city's churches and public buildings date from this Seventeenth century era of prosperity.
"The original village was in the San Pedro hills, twelve miles from the modern city. Lack of water caused it to move. Evidently the water supply now is satisfactory, for it has the reputation of being one of the cleanest cities in Mexico. Above its spotless streets rise the domes of its many churches whose bright blue, white, green, and yellow tiles gleam in the sunlight.

Source of Spanish Silver.
"San Luis Potosi has had little complaint from its business men. It is the distributing center for a large agricultural region, and lies at the crossroads of Mexican traffic. In the old days long mule trains bound north or west but there. Now two railroads, the Mexican Central and the Mexican Northern, cross at this point. It also is a favorite resort for the people of Mexico, D. F., and will soon be accessible to motorists from the United States. A road, now being improved, extends northeast to Brownsville, Texas, and at Ciudad Victoria crosses the new Pan American highway from Laredo to Mexico, D. F.

"Silver long has been one of the state's chief sources of wealth. It boasts of having once ranked third in the production of bullion for Spain. In those days silver mining was a laborious process. The ore was taken from deep shafts in leather sacks weighing, when filled, from 100 to 200 pounds. The peons carried the sacks on their backs, with tumplines around their foreheads, as they scrambled up notched poles that served for ladders. Flooded mines were often 'pumped' out in the same way.
"Usually ore was broken up by hand, and mixed with water, salt, vitriol, and mercury. Then mules were driven over and across it for hours to complete the mixing process. When the mixture was submerged in water, the amalgam of silver and mercury sank to the bottom, and could be easily separated. This was known as the 'patio' process, and is still used in certain small mines. In earlier and less humane days women and children instead of mules trampled and mixed the ore although the death rate was atrocious, due to the corrosive effect of the acids used."

NEW SWIM RECORD

Matthew Chrostowski of the Providence Central high school, who set a new world's record in winning the third heat of the 50-yard free style swim in the Penn Athletic club pool in Philadelphia. Chrostowski, competing in the interscholastic swim championship, outclassed the field in his heat, lowering the mark to 23 3/10 seconds. The former record of 24 seconds flat was held by Pua Keoloha of Honolulu, and Arthur Lindgren of Long Beach, Calif.

First 'Chute Leap in 16th Century

Leonardo da Vinci Records Jump From Church.

New York.—The parachute is practically as old as aviation itself. It is the fruit of the genius of Leonardo da Vinci, who gave to the world the first aeronautical engineering and design.
Da Vinci, after establishing a theory of flight, next made the necessary mathematical computations for a workable parachute. Although his "chute" was square, with four "shroud lines" attached to each corner, it worked at least once. Sig. Fausto Verranzio, an architecture student, was taken mostly with the parachute idea. The other students—art, engineering and mathematics—all preferred the Da Vinci glider models. However, Verranzio did have the good judgment to make his pioneer jump in his native city, Venice.
Making the four shroud lines fast around his waist, he jumped from the top of one of the churches that bordered the main canal. What happened to Verranzio thereafter history doesn't record.
With the death of Da Vinci in 1519 all interest in flying, parachute jumping included, came to a standstill. It wasn't until ballooning became popular in Europe, late in the Eighteenth century, that it appeared again. To Andre Jacques Garnerin, the first official aeronaut of France, goes the distinction of having made the first parachute jump from an aircraft in flight.

Old Lake Near Marsh Bares Water Tragedies
Horicon, Wis.—Horicon marsh, at one time the site of the largest artificial lake in the country, upon which steamers navigated daily, has yielded up a number of old relics.
In the exact center of the marsh, now a game preserve, bits of wreckage have been found which were identified with ships scheduled to arrive in port fifty years ago. In one spot parts of a large boiler surrounded by blocks of quarried stone indicate the conclusion of one voyage.
Two other vessels are known to have gone down in the lake. One, a scow, sank in July, 1857, when lightning struck it during a hurricane, killing three of the crew and seriously injuring the remaining thirteen. The other disaster occurred two years later when the boiler of the steamer Winer exploded, killing two.

Twin Sisters Replace Each Other in Office

Boston.—The Misses Ruth and Mary Henderson, twin sisters who attend Emmanuel college, not only dress alike, take the same courses and attend the same classes together, but succeed each other in the same office at school. Mary served as president of the freshman class for the first half of the year and was succeeded by Ruth for the rest of the term.

Universe Called Trifle Lopsided

New York.—Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard college observatory, has confirmed what many persons have suspected—that the universe is lopsided.
Recent astronomical observations have established, Doctor Shapley said in delivering the annual James Arthur lecture on "Time and Its Mysteries" at New York university that instead of being uniform and evenly distributed in space, the universe actually is out of balance, galactically speaking. There are about 50 percent more galaxies (clusters of countless stars) on the north side than on the south side of the universe.
But, Doctor Shapley qualified, this condition exists comparatively close to the earth—a mere 70,000,000 light years away. At a distance of 200,000,000 light years away, said Doctor Shapley, quoting Dr. Edwin P. Hubble, of Mount Wilson observatory, equality is restored.

Will Penciled on Board Conveys $10,000 Estate

New York.—A piece of pine board on which nearly thirty-one years ago Edwin Roberts, a contractor and builder, penciled brief instructions that his wife, Elizabeth, should receive his estate, was filed as his will in the Bronx Surrogate's court. Mr. Roberts died February 19.
The piece of board, six inches square and three-quarters of an inch thick, bore only the sentence, "I leave all I own to my wife, Elizabeth Roberts, after all just debts are paid," and the signatures of Roberts and the witnesses, "Mrs. H. C. Garland" and "Lily Roberts," one of his daughters. Arthur Bell, the attorney who filed the will, explained that Mr. Roberts always had brushed aside suggestions of Mrs. Garland, his neighbor, that he draw up his will.
On May 18, 1903, Mrs. Garland, with Mr. Bell's assistance, drew her own will and took it next door to show it to Mr. Roberts, who was repairing his front porch. "I tell you, you ought to make yours out," she told him.
"Oh, very well," Mr. Roberts said, and, picking up a piece of wood, scribbled the sentence and the witnesses signed. The estate is estimated at $10,000.

The activities of the Agricultural administration are also handled from this building.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE TENDER HEART OF FARMER BROWN'S BOY

WHEN Nimble Heels the Jumping Mouse so unexpectedly jumped up inside the trousers' leg of Farmer Brown's boy he probably was more frightened than Farmer Brown's boy himself, and that is saying considerable. You see, for a minute or two Farmer Brown's boy didn't have the least idea whose sharp little claws were clinging to his leg. He simply knew that there was something alive on his knee and his first thought was of a Snake. Farmer Brown's boy does not like Snakes. If he had done any real thinking he would have known that it couldn't be a Snake, for a Snake would have felt very different.

"I'm so sorry," murmured Farmer Brown's boy as he stroked the little brown mouse.

But Farmer Brown's boy acted first and thought afterwards. In times of real danger this often is the best way of doing. In times of imaginary danger it is often the other way around. Almost without knowing that he was doing it, Farmer Brown's boy brought his hand down heavily at the point where he felt those sharp little claws. Under his hand he felt a soft little body.

"Oh!" cried Farmer Brown's boy. "I'm afraid that that was Danny Meadow Mouse and that I've killed him."

Farmer Brown's boy sat down in the grass, and with his free hand carefully rolled up his trousers' leg until he could take hold of little Nimble Heels. As he drew out the dainty little brown-coated fellow Farmer Brown's boy gave a little whistle of surprise. He had expected to see blunt-headed, stubby-tailed, stout-bodied Danny Meadow Mouse. And here in his hand was the slimmest, trimmest little mouse he ever had seen. And such a tail! He whistled again when he saw the length of that slim, tapering tail. Never before had Farmer Brown's boy seen a Jumping Mouse.

Poor little Nimble Heels lay quite still in Farmer Brown's boy's hands. You see, that had been a very hard blow that Farmer Brown's boy had struck in his surprise. Instantly a look of pity and sorrow swept over the face of Farmer Brown's boy. "You poor little fellow! I'm afraid I have killed you and I wouldn't have done that for the world," he cried.

There were tears in the eyes of Farmer Brown's boy, as he stroked the soft little body with one finger. A leg moved and then kicked feebly. Into the eyes of Farmer Brown's boy crept a look of hope. Without stopping to turn down the leg of his trousers, Farmer Brown's boy started for the Smiling Pool as fast as he could run. When he got there he dipped a little water up in the hollow of his hand and sprinkled Nimble Heels. Nimble Heels gasped a little and Farmer Brown's boy put a drop or two of water in his mouth. Nimble Heels opened his eyes. You see, he hadn't been dead after all, but he might have died if Farmer Brown's boy hadn't tried to bring him back to life.

"I'm so sorry," murmured Farmer Brown's boy as he stroked the little brown mouse. "I'm so sorry. I guess now I'd better take you home so as to be sure you quite recover." And so it was that Nimble Heels began a long journey.

CHOICE THINGS TO EAT

A QUICK hot bouillon may be made by using a teaspoonful of the prepared vegetable paste, dissolved in a cupful of hot water. Any other flavor may be added if desired—a slice of lemon or a bit of onion extract.

Tomato Canape.
Cut bread one-fourth inch thick and make into rounds with a cookie cutter. Spread with butter and then with mayonnaise; on this put a slice of peeled tomato the same size, spread with mayonnaise, edge the tomato with a ring of chopped chives inside a ring of chopped egg white and the rice yolk to fill the center. Top with a stuffed olive or a sprig of parsley.

Cider Punch.
Beat up a glass of apple jelly to a froth, add a cupful of boiling water and a quart of cider. Flavor with nutmeg. Fill glasses with shaved ice and pour over this the punch.

MEADOWS OF MEMORY

By ANNE CAMPBELL

A CROSS the meadows of my memory
A collie dog comes running.
The buttercups are growing happily,
The quail are sunning.
A meadow lark is whistling from the fence—
A rail fence sprawling—
And I can hear through thickets green and dense,
The crickets calling.

The butterflies are wheeling in the sun.
The locust trees are sending
Their perfume to a child—a lonely one—
Whose day is ending.
When in the West the banners of the night
Display their beauty,
A little girl will take her bedtime flight—
A tiresome duty.

My room still stands within my memory.
I see each low brown rafter.
Then I remember—though I long to be
Where childish laughter
Made every hour of living a refrain,
Serene and glowing—
The house is tumbled down, and in the lane
The weeds are growing.

Learning to Protect Their Homes

ACTING on the suggestion of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the women of Bordentown, N. J., are taking up seriously the study of marksmanship for the protection of their homes and their children from the depredations of burglars and kidnapers. Lieut. Harry W. Barrick, United States army pistol and rifle champion and infantry instructor at the Bordentown Military Institute, has taken the ladies under his tutelage. Two of his promising pupils are here shown, with their children.

Stratosphere Balloon

Major Kepner and Captain Stevens Talk It Over.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

WORK on the world's largest free balloon which will be used in the National Geographic Society-United States Army Air Corps stratosphere flights is well under way at the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation's plant at Akron, Ohio. The balloon makers will use two-and-a-third acres of cotton fabric impregnated with rubber in constructing the bag, and it will have a capacity of 3,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

When the balloon rises from the earth, only partly inflated, it will be shaped like a gigantic exclamation point with the round gondola representing the period. As the gondola leaves the ground, the top of the bag will be 295 feet above it—approximately the height of a 27-story office building. When the bag becomes spherical in the thin air of the stratosphere, it will be large enough to enclose an 11-story building of normal height and of equal width.

The ascent, in which it is hoped to reach the highest point to which it is practicable for a balloon to lift a man, will be made in the United States. The purpose of the flight is to clear problems of the upper air that are still puzzling to science. It is estimated that it will rise to a height of more than 15 miles above sea level.

The first ascent will be made in June by Capt. Albert W. Stevens, noted aerial observer and photographer of the army air corps, who conceived the project, and Maj. William Kepner, balloon expert of the army air corps. If this flight is successful, the same balloonists will make a second ascent in September, in order to check observations under similar conditions.

Scientists to Give Aid.
To advise in regard to the scientific plans and equipment, and to direct studies of the data collected, Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic society, has formed a committee of outstanding American scientists. Its members are:

Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, director United States bureau of standards, chairman; Dr. F. V. Coville, United States Department of Agriculture; Gen. Oscar Westover, assistant chief, United States Army Air Corps; Capt. R. S. Patton, director, United States coast and geodetic survey; Dr. W. F. G. Swann, Bartol Research foundation, Franklin institute, Swarthmore, Pa.; Dr. Floyd K. Richtmyer, department of physics, Cornell university, and member research council, American Association for the Advancement of Science; Dr. Charles E. K. Mees, director research laboratory, Eastman Kodak company; Dr. Charles F. Marvin, chief of United States weather bureau, and Dr. John Oliver La Gorce, National Geographic society.

The huge balloon to be used in the ascents will have a gas capacity five times that of the bag in which Commander Settle established his 11-mile record last November; and nearly three-and-a-half times that of the Soviet balloon which in September rose nearly 12 miles above the earth.

The exact point at which the balloon will take to the air has not been selected, but it will probably be in the northern great plains region. Such a choice, it is pointed out, will give ample room for drift to the northeast, east, or southeast and a landing in open country, so that the bag can be salvaged.

The completed plans for the flights are due to the efforts of Captain Stevens, who has gathered data during the past eleven months directed toward the use in stratosphere flights of the largest balloon which it is practicable to construct, and an ascent to the highest point to which it is believed possible for man to rise in a gas bag, with hope of a safe landing. The mere attainment of altitude, however, is not a primary object of the ascents. It is desired to reach the greatest attainable height above the earth in order that conditions there can be observed.

Stevens Has Experience.
Captain Stevens has penetrated the lower levels of the stratosphere by airplane on numerous occasions and also has served as observer on a number of army balloon ascensions. During his high altitude flying he has collected much scientific data. In a flight over Dayton, Ohio, in October, 1928, he reached an altitude of 39,150 feet and obtained the only complete record of thermometer readings ever made in America, showing on the same day the "temperature gradient" in the region from the earth to the stratosphere. Other such records of temperatures, from the earth to an altitude of approximately 80,000 feet, is one of the objectives of the 1934 ascents. Such data will be extremely valuable in weather studies.

Another project of importance will be the trapping of samples of stratosphere air at several levels. These specimens will be analyzed and studied later in physical and chemical laboratories.

The preliminary "agenda" for scientific data to be collected during the ascent contains 14 other items varying from high level photography and the ascertainment of the electrical condition of the air at various levels, to cosmic ray studies and efforts to determine ozone concentration. The mysterious ozone layer of the upper air which some scientists assert is all that saves life on the earth from destruction by ultra-short light rays, is thought to lie far above the highest point that can be reached by a manned balloon. It is hoped, however, that evidences of an increasing ozone content of the air can be detected 15 miles up.

In order to house the many instruments and automatic recording devices that will be taken aloft, the balloon will have attached to it a spherical gondola of light metal, eight feet four inches in diameter. This diameter is one foot and a third greater than that of the gondolas used by Professor Piccard and Commander Settle, and will provide a cubic capacity more than twice as great.

The instruments, many of them designed and modified by Captain Stevens as a result of trials during high altitude flights, will be largely automatic, leaving observer and pilot free to take up the many activities in the gondola that will require attention. A number of tiny cameras, using motion-picture film, will automatically and tirelessly "read" dials and clock faces simultaneously at frequent intervals.

Kepner's Fine Record.
Maj. William E. Kepner, who will pilot the stratosphere balloon, is one of the outstanding balloon pilots of the United States army. He served in the World war in the infantry and was decorated by both the American and French armies for exceptional services. He holds four medals: Legion of Honor, Croix de Guerre with Palm, Distinguished Service Cross, and Good Conduct Medal, United States Marine corps. He has been an officer of the air corps since 1920, and holds the aeronautical ratings of airplane pilot, airplane observer, airship pilot and balloon pilot and observer.

He was winner of both the national and the international balloon races in 1928, receiving the Litchfield trophy and the King Albert of Belgium trophy. He was a classmate of Commander Rosendahl of the Los Angeles, and of Commander Settle, for three years at Lakehurst. Major Kepner holds a naval certificate as rigid airship pilot. He served on the Los Angeles as assistant navigator and received training from the German Zeppelin crew. He commanded the RS-1 semi-rigid airship in 1927-1928, and was the first to pilot an all metal airship in 1929.

Captain Stevens has made innumerable high altitude photographs, some of them, by the use of infra-red rays, showing mountain peaks more than 300 miles from the camera. Two of his photographs, of extraordinary interest to geographers and astronomers, are unique. One taken from a plane 21,000 feet over central Argentina is the first photograph ever made showing laterally the curvature of the earth. The other, made at an altitude of 26,000 feet over southern Maine, in August, 1932, is the only photograph which shows the advancing front of the moon's shadow on the earth during an eclipse of the sun.

Zuider Zee Now Yselmeer
When the Dutch minister of public works recently inaugurated the dam across the Zuider Zee between North Holland and Friesland, the name Zuider Zee ceased officially to exist and Holland gained in reclaimed land an area equal to her largest province, Guelders. The dam transforms the old Dutch sea into a lake. It is 20 miles long. The dam begins at Wieringen Island, where the ex-crown prince of Germany lived for some years in the blacksmith's house. The also famous island of Marken lies in the new lake, which is to be called "Yselmeer." The work begun in 1920 is finished, and plans are being made for a railway on the dam.

Mrs.—How do you like this hat, Henry?
Mr.—Horrible!
Mrs.—Why didn't you tell me when we were in the shop; that's the reason I took you along.
Mr.—I was going to, but I saw by her glare that the milliner was reading my mind.—Brooklyn Eagle.

STRANGE, BUT TRUE

"Have you noticed a very odd thing about blunt people?" Freeman asked his friend.
"Can't say that I have," said the latter. "They are certainly rather embarrassing at times."
Freeman nodded pensively. "Yes, but hasn't it ever struck you that they are the ones who generally come to the point first?" he said.

Prosaic Peggy
As they stood looking out of the window on Christmas eve, Peggy's sister said: "That beautiful star is your Heavenly Father wishing you a Merry Christmas. Now what should you do to show him how grateful you are?"
"Wish him the same, I s'pose," said Peggy.—Boston Transcript.

The Better Plan
Father—Johnny, come help me dig these potatoes.
Son—Aw, don't you think it would be better if you'd do it yourself? You planted 'em. You know where they are.

The Sticker Kind
Niblock—I tell you what this country needs is a more elastic currency.
Bungwit—I don't know about that. What I favor is a more adhesive currency.

A Bookkeeper's Mind
Secretary—Under what head shall I put your racing losses?
Chief—Running losses?

Machine Age
"The machine age is taking away a vast number of jobs," said the mechanic.
"Don't I know it?" affirmed an office man. "It cost me my job."
"How is that?" inquired the first speaker. "You have never done any mechanical labor, have you?"
"No," he admitted, "but I got my job when the Republicans were in power; and now the Democratic machine has taken it away."

ALWAYS THAT
"There is something in this world besides money."
"Yes, there's the poorhouse."

Crude and Refined
Martin—Both these girls are the daughters of millionaires. Why is it that one looks down on the other so?
Gilbert—Because one's father made his money in refined sugar, while the other's traded in crude oil.

Not So Good
Neighbor—How is that incubator doing which you bought?
Mrs. Newbride—I suppose it's all right, but I'm a little worried about it. It hasn't laid a single egg yet.—Pathfinder Magazine.

SHERMAN

A number of cases of measles and chicken pox are reported in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Al. Hull and children of Flint spent the week end at the home of her parents here.

Clarence Dedrick and Clayton Miller, who joined the C. C. C., left for Battle Creek Monday.

Jos. Smith and Mrs. Frank Smith were at Tawas City Tuesday.

Mrs. Bert Westcott was a caller at Bay City the first part of the week.

A number from here attended a party at Turner Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Jos. Schneider and Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Stoner and children were at Tawas City on Tuesday.

Frank Schneider was at Bay City on business Tuesday.

There were 156 votes cast at the spring election here Monday. One of the slip candidates, Ed. Norris, for treasurer, lost out by one vote. Otherwise there wasn't much excitement.

Carl and Dan Norris autoed to Bay City on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Jordan were at Tawas City Tuesday to secure medical treatment for their little son.

Last Wednesday evening about 30 friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schneider and gave Mrs. Schneider a pleasant surprise in honor of her birthday anniversary. The evening was spent playing games and music. Cream and cake was served. All departed for their homes wishing her many more happy birthdays.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville Ballard of Flint were callers in town Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Ross were at Tawas City on Tuesday having dental work done.

Dance at Alabaster Saturday evening, April 7.

LONG LAKE

Fred C. Holbeck of East Tawas is spending a few days at his farm here.

Cecil Westervelt of Rose City called at the home of Robert Buck last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenwood Streeter and daughter, Dorothy Lee, were visitors at the home of Elmer Streeter on Sunday afternoon.

John Mortenson will hold an auction sale at his farm next Monday afternoon, April 9.

A number from here attended the Easter program at the Hale Baptist church last Sunday morning.

Mrs. Russell Featheringill is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ulman, in Tawas township.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Stanton and family of Detroit spent the week end in Long Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schloss and children of Detroit were guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Hicks.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Barber, a boy girl, Peggy Rosetta.

Edward Kelly and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Davis of Flint visited their respective homes Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Louis LaBerge and daughter, Margaret, motored to Bay City where Mrs. LaBerge is receiving medical treatment.

Dance at Alabaster Saturday evening, April 7.

Alps Guides' Scale of Wages
The fee for guide service in the Swiss Alps depends upon the excursion. In general, 15 francs is charged for short, easy trips, but the sum reaches to as much as 200 francs for the more difficult climbs. The usual charge for a first-class climb is from 60 to 80 francs.

Reno News

Mrs. Jos. Henry is reported very ill at this writing.

Roy Hutchison, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hutchison, is very ill with tonsillitis.

Mrs. Sam Hutchison and Mrs. Elton Thompson accompanied William Jersey and granddaughter, Dorothy, to Bay City one day last week where they went to see Mrs. Jersey, who a few days previous underwent a very serious operation. Mrs. Jersey was formerly Miss Louise Ferns of Reno and she has many friends here who wish her a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Alva Hutchison and son, Dorman, of Saginaw were Saturday night visitors at her parental home.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Williams and Mrs. Clara Williams spent Easter with Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Lawrence at Prescott.

The Bueschen and Wolf families attended Good Friday services at Tawas City.

The school Easter party held in Miss Meyer's room last Thursday afternoon was much enjoyed by the pupils, parents and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Raoul Herman of Oscoda; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brown, Paul Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Binder of Grant township; Mr. George, Mr. and Mrs. Will White and daughter, Vermita, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Frockins and Thos. Frockins, Jr., enjoyed Easter dinner with Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Perkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Robinson were at Flint over the week end owing to the illness of her mother, Mrs. J. M. Johnstone.

Mrs. Ross has so far recovered from her recent illness as to be able to go to Bay City Saturday where she wanted to attend the Easter services that she has attended for over 50 years. She was accompanied by her son, Walter, granddaughter, Amelia, and grandson, Elmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Short have moved into the house recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Harrell. Betty, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Latter, is suffering from pneumonia.

Cecil Westervelt of Rose City called on his mother at Taft Sunday enroute to Midland, where he has employment.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Short have moved into the tenant house of William Latter, with whom he has employment for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Verne Papple and family have moved on a farm west of Standish.

Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Provost and children spent Sunday at the Seafert home.

Mrs. Leppard of Detroit came on Sunday for an indefinite visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Ferns.

Fred Latter went to Detroit Saturday. He was accompanied as far as Bay City by his father, who purchased a horse; by Joyce Latter as far as Flint on her return home to Lansing after spending her Easter vacation with relatives here, and by Mrs. Jennie Ostrander as far as Pontiac. On his return he was accompanied by his daughter, June, who spent a few hours at her home Sunday, returning with Miss Clara Latter in the afternoon.

The birthday party for Miss Anna Adams held at her home Tuesday evening of this week was well attended by our Reno young people and a good time was enjoyed by all.

Lawrence Lake of Plainfield was a caller at the Josiah Robinson home on Friday.

Miss Cowgill, the county nurse, was a Reno caller Tuesday while enroute to Hale.

April 2 marked the close of a very heated campaign in Reno township. Besides the regular ticket, three slip candidates were in the contest. H. F. Black, running on slips, won out for supervisor by a majority of 22 votes, while L. W. Ross and Alex Robinson, slip candidates for clerk and treasurer respectively, lost out by quite large majorities. The officers elected are as follows: Supervisor, H. F. Black; clerk, Jesse J. Sibley; treasurer, George Waters; highway commissioner, Henry Seafert, Sr.; justice of peace (full term), Wm. White; board of review vacant owing to Mr. Black's election as supervisor; overseer of highways, Sam Hutchison; constables—H. Hutchison, Henry Seafert, Jr., Roy Roberts, William Uptegrove.

Mr. and Mrs. Vary were called to Marshall on Saturday by the death of his cousin, J. A. Vary.

The milder weather this week is a most welcome change from the steady cold of March.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Robinson and children spent Easter with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Cataline.

Mrs. Chas. Thompson and Mrs. Hugh Hensley visited Mrs. R. A. Bentley on Thursday of last week.

Mrs. Earl Daugharty and Miss Ruth Latter are spending a week with their aunt, Mrs. Couchy, at Mio.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Adams spent Thursday evening of last week with Mr. and Mrs. Will White.

Joia Harsch is reported very ill at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seafert, Sr. He is suffering from congestion of the lungs.

Mortgage Sale

Default having been made in the terms and conditions of a certain mortgage made by Louis H. Braddock and Laura V. Braddock as husband and wife, of Tawas City, Iosco County, Michigan, Mortgagees, to Thomas Davison, of the same place, now deceased, of Mortgagees, dated the 8th day of October, A. D. 1927, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Iosco and State of Michigan, on the 11th day of October, A. D. 1927, in liber 22 of Mortgages, on page 578, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due, at the date of this notice, for principal and interest, the sum of two thousand one hundred sixty-five dollars and forty-four cents ($2,165.44).

No suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof; Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that on Saturday, the thirtieth day of June, A. D. 1934, at 10 o'clock A. M., Eastern Standard Time, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front (southeasterly) entrance to the County Building in the City of Tawas City, Iosco County, Michigan (that being the building where the Circuit Court for the County of Iosco is held), of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due, as aforesaid, on said mortgage, with the interest thereon at six per cent (6%) and all legal costs, charges and expenses, including the attorney fees allowed by law; which said premises are described as follows: All those certain pieces or parcels of land situate in the City of Tawas City, in the County of Iosco, and State of Michigan and described as follows, to-wit: Lot No. 4, Block 14, Scheffler & Company Addition to Tawas City, Iosco County, Michigan; and SE 1/4 of Lots 7 and 8, Block 12, Wheeler's 2nd Addition to Tawas City, Iosco County, Michigan.

Had That Privilege

A poet was forbidden to sell his lyrics in a public park at Los Angeles. It wasn't meant to deny him the privilege of picking up an honest living in a park. No. But he must do it in the usual way. There would be no objection to a poet's disguising himself as a pigeon and accepting peanuts.—Detroit News.

Consumers
 The intermediate consumer is one who is buying things to be used in making other products. Such a person is consuming goods used in the production of other goods. The ultimate consumer is one that uses the completed product.

As Whippoorwill Perches
 Unlike the great majority of birds the whippoorwill perches along and not across a bough. This is a peculiarity which the whippoorwill shares with other weak-footed birds.

Remember This
 Too many people pray for emergency rations rather than daily bread.—Los Angeles Times.

Papa Pigeons Helpful
 When young pigeons are hatched it is the male that does the greater part of the feeding. The Pouter pigeon is rather given to pilfering during the breeding season. For this reason breeders of this variety of pigeons usually provide auxiliary parents to help care for the young.

SYNOPSIS

To the household of Doctor Ballard, in Mulberry Square, youthful Dr. Hugh Kennedy, comes as an assistant. He first meets Janie, nineteen-year-old daughter of Doctor Ballard. Her older sister, Celia, a petted beauty, is away from home. Hugh regards Janie as a small girl, to be treated as a chum. He sees a photograph of Celia, and is impressed by her loveliness. He continues to regard Janie as, as he expresses it, a "good little fellow," but she has a far different feeling for him. Celia returns home. She accepts Hugh's open admiration as her due, just one more in her train of admirers. Tom McAllister is another, and Carter Shelby is a third. Following a visit by Shelby to the Ballard home, Celia is visibly depressed. Hugh and Celia unexpectedly announce their engagement. Janie, heartbroken, returns to college. She is summoned home when her father is seriously hurt in an auto accident. Hugh bitterly blames himself, feeling responsible for allowing the elderly physician to drive at night, his eyesight not fitting him for the task. Kennedy had been at a theater with Celia, she insisting on his going. Doctor Ballard hovers between life and death. Hugh shoulders the burdens of the double work. The family learns Doctor Ballard's spine is injured so that he may never be able to walk again. There is hope in an operation, for which he must be taken to New York. Celia meets Carter Shelby again.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"She's engaged to him, isn't she?" Janie's heart beat swiftly. She felt that her cheeks were flushed. "Don't be quaint, little girl." "Gracious, then, how do I know?" "They will be married in June?" "When Hugh's year with Father is finished," Hugh and Celia. Celia and Hugh. Getting married and going away together. Janie would be a bridesmaid. Hugh and Celia. Celia and Hugh. . . . Janie wondered if Muriel cared because Carter was dancing with Celia. She glanced up at her swiftly. Her eyes were tranquil and ever so faintly amused. What was she thinking? Muriel was thinking of the words Carter had whispered when he left her to dance with Celia. "I owe a great deal to Celia," she had said with his charming low voice setting the words to music. "But for her, I might not have known you." Carter had stressed the pronoun. He was made that way. It was something he could not help.

III

"It's nice to dance with you again." Carter stressed the pronoun. "I like it, too." The silver harp strings quivered. Her left hand fluttered away from his shoulder, rustled against her throat. Glancing down, his eyes caught the shine of the ring on her slim third finger. "Is that a warning?" he asked. "I'm engaged, you know." It pleased her to say it. It pleased her because she was fragile and lovely in the slim little black crepe frock. "I got drunk the night that I heard." It pleased him to exaggerate a bit because, after all, there was the ring on her finger and she was very lovely in the slim little plain black frock. "Oh, Carter!" The violet eyes reproached him. "You shouldn't do things like that." "I had to—forget." He held her close because—well, there was the ring on her finger and her head against his shoulder was small and fragrant and blond. "Will he make you happy?" he asked as they danced into the shadows again. "He's sweet." The pleased dreamy expression crept into her lifted eyes. "We shall go abroad for a year." "I should have liked to show you beautiful places." His voice was touchingly sad. "Paris. The Mediterranean. The Italian lakes." "If things had been different," Celia murmured vaguely and dropped her head against his shoulder. "If things had been different," she repeated and held her very close. "Are you happy, Celia?" "I've been unhappy about Father." The silver harp strings were trembling again. "I'm sorry. You were made for happiness, my dear. If there is ever anything I can do—" His voice trailed off into silence, promising many things. "Thank you, Carter." Celia murmured. "I shall think of you as my friend." They had moved into a shadowy corner. The fire and the lights were very far away. He stooped swiftly and kissed the creamy hollow of her throat. "That's for remembrance, my lovely lost Celia," he said. He was made that way. It was something he could not help.

IV

Hugh was sitting in the armchair beside the living room fire when Janie and Celia returned from "Sportsman's Hall." His tired eyes brightened. He rose and crossed to the door. "I've just gotten back," he said. "I 'phoned. They said you had left." "William brought us home." Celia's manner was detached. She turned toward the stairs.

"You aren't going up just yet?" Hugh asked wistfully. "I'm sleepy." Celia patted back a dainty yawn. "But I haven't seen you all day." Hugh made a motion with his arms. Celia edged ever so slightly towards the stairs. Janie fumbled with the buckles on her galoshes. They seemed unusually hard to manage. Perhaps that was because she couldn't see them very well. "It isn't my fault," Celia implied that she had been neglected and Hugh was entirely to blame. "I'm tired. I want to go up to bed." "Good night, then, Beautiful." He stooped to kiss her. His lips merely brushed her cheek. "Good night, Hugh." "What?" There was a note of fear in his voice. "Good night—darling." "That's better. Happy dreams, my sweet." Celia moved away from the door. Her hand rested against her throat as though it held there something precious which might be lost. Her heels made a tapping sound on the polished steps. Upstairs a door closed gently.

CHAPTER IV

Father was removed to New York at the end of January. Mother accompanied him, leaving behind her all sort of instructions and worries and prophecies. The matter of Janie's return to college had been the subject of many discussions. Janie had been firm. She didn't want to go back this year. "Father understands," Janie was sitting close to Mother on a hassock beside her chair. "And I will go on," she promised. "I'll send for my books and study every day. Doctor Warden will help me with Latin and I can read French with Professor Mantell." "I wish you wouldn't go there," Mother fretted. "Those Mantells are shiftless and not even decently clean." "He'll help me with French," Janie tried not to be indignant, because it was Mother's last night at home. "I can take the exams next fall and go on with my class. I couldn't bear it to be so far away from home." Mother sighed and looked as though it was all too dreadful to be endured. "You'll write to us every day," Janie implored with her arms around Mother's neck. "Every day," Mother promised. "And telegraph," Celia added, "as soon as she—"

They couldn't speak of the operation. They clung together in the upstairs hall, Mother and Celia and Janie, faced with an uncertain future, wondering if ever they would all be happy again. "You'll have to be careful about money," Mother said with a worried frown. "I did want a nice wedding for Celia," wistfully. As though it would matter, Janie thought, what kind of a wedding you had if you were getting married to Hugh. "Don't worry about that." Celia relinquished orange blossoms and a satin train and a tunnel of awning in front of the church. "We must think only of Father." She looked noble and self-sacrificing with tears on her lashes and shadows under her eyes. "You're so brave, darling," Mother marveled. And somehow it seemed more wonderful that Celia should relinquish the satin train than that Janie should study alone. Janie's gallantry was silent. Celia came with a blowing of trumpets and a beating of many drums. Mrs. Quillen was reinstated in the old brick house. Life settled into a quiet routine. Hugh was kept very busy. The flu epidemic had crept through Vine and Juniper streets up into the Square. "You're working too hard," Celia said one day with a pretty air of concern. "I must." The angle of Hugh's jaw was lean and square and determined. "Can't you go out to Dolly's with me tonight?" Celia sat on the arm of his chair, twisting around her finger a lock of his rumpled bright hair. "I can't, darling. I'd flop on the table and snore." "There's no use killing yourself," Celia's expression was fretful. "It was my fault." The vein in Hugh's forehead was throbbing. "That's morbid, Hugh." "It's honest, at any rate." He was looking at her strangely. Celia's expression changed. "I know, darling," she said softly. "You're sweet, Hugh." "Do you love me, Celia?" He pulled her down into his arms. "Of course." She looked up at him and smiled. She wore her "Saint Cecilia" expression. Beneath it she thrilled at the worship in his eyes. It gave her again that thrilling sense of power. If you were beautiful you could take what you wanted from life. . . . "Just me, I mean," Hugh continued earnestly. "Not the money my father left or—" "Hugh!" Her eyes reproached him. There was in her expression a hint of the hidden loveliness which held him with its promise. Some day he would find it, the real loveliness of Celia, hidden beneath her moods and pretty poses. "I love you so much," he said. "I love you, Hugh." She was quiet in his arms, her eyes dreaming off into the distance. "What are you thinking?" he asked, hoping to catch a glimpse of the real lovely Celia. "Will you take me to Paris, Hugh?" Her voice was warm with anticipation. "And Venice? Dolly Bruce is so superior because she has been to Venice." Hugh's expectations were dashed. He blamed himself. He hadn't yet been able to reach her. He did not blame Celia for his fear that he might lose her. His love for her was a madness. He hadn't thought it would be like that. He wanted love to be sane and beautiful, a warm steady emotion, like a fire on a friendly hearth. . . . The days lengthened into weeks. Janie busied herself with going to market and keeping accounts and writing a long letter to Father every day. She toiled patiently over her books and read French in the evening with Professor Mantell who was often tipsy and always entertaining. She watched over Hugh with a motherly air of concern. She conferred with Rachel and Mrs. Quillen over household matters which had to do with coal bills and plumbing and beef loaf instead of chicken. She had an interview with Tom McAllister, who was going over Father's accounts. "Your father is a saint on earth," Tom said impatiently, "but he hasn't, so far as I have been able to discover, the stern expression soften. Hugh stooped and kissed Celia's brow. Janie, watching intently, saw Celia's lips curve into a smile. Hugh went abruptly out of the room. Had he seen that smile? All evening he was unusually quiet. After office hours were over, Janie walked with him into the hall. Celia was talking at the telephone. She placed the receiver on the hook when she saw Hugh watching her and adopted a languid air. "Dolly wants me to stay with her tonight," she said. "They're driving in for me. I think it would do me good to get away." "Perhaps," Hugh said brusquely. The set of his lips filled Janie with sudden fright. "Will you come with us?" Celia asked. "I can't," he said briefly. "I have some reading to do." But he didn't read. He paced the floor of his room upstairs. Janie, playing double solitaire with Mrs. Quillen in the living room below, heard his footsteps treading endlessly back and forth. "What ails him tonight?" Mrs. Quillen asked with an eloquent glance toward the ceiling. "I don't know," Janie answered. That wasn't quite true. She thought that Hugh had suspected Celia. She thought that the fainting fit had not deceived him at all. What would happen? What would he do? . . . Janie served as office girl, after the evening that Celia fainted. She didn't really mind. It was pleasant to be with Hugh. The arrival of the postman was an event of great importance. There were letters from Mother every day and sometimes a note from Father. He was getting stronger. The operation was to be performed in a very short time. There was nothing to do except wait.

"I Love You So Much," He Said.

an ounce of business sense." He opened the shabby ledger. "Some of these accounts have been standing for fifteen years." "Can you do anything about it?" "There are notes in the bank." Tom's brows drew together in a frown. "He has made himself responsible for every Tom, Dick and Harry in town." Janie knew very little about notes. There had always been money enough. They had lived very well in the old brick house in the Square. Father never mentioned money. He hated to bother about it. "Don't look so tragic," Tom smiled away his frown. "I'll collect what I can. Perhaps we can set it all straight before your father comes home. Just try to be careful and don't run up any staggering bills." Janie flung herself into a frenzy of economizing. They decided to dismiss the office girl. "Celia and I can take turns," Janie suggested. "It will give us something to do." Celia agreed. She bought herself white uniforms and wished she might wear a Red Cross arrangement on her head. The uniforms were becoming. At first she was interested and amused. Then the monotony became irksome. She faintly one evening, during office hours. "I'm sorry," she murmured when she opened her eyes to find herself on the living room davenport surrounded by anxious faces. "It was the smell, I think." "Never mind, Celia." Hugh was holding her wrist. "Your pulse is normal." He looked at her searchingly. "I—I feel so faint." Her voice was a whisper. "She's as pale as a ghost!" Mrs. Quillen made fanning motions with a folded wad of newspaper. "There ain't no color at all in her face." Janie touched Celia's cheek with the tip of her finger. Powder! Her suspicions were confirmed. She glanced up at Hugh and saw, with feeling of alarm, that he had suspected, too. She hid the tell-tale finger in the pocket of her dress. "I wanted to help," Celia murmured. Her eyes, wide and appealing, were fixed on Hugh's stern face. Janie saw the stern expression soften. Hugh stooped and kissed Celia's brow. Janie, watching intently, saw Celia's lips curve into a smile. Hugh went abruptly out of the room. Had he seen that smile? All evening he was unusually quiet. After office hours were over, Janie walked with him into the hall. Celia was talking at the telephone. She placed the receiver on the hook when she saw Hugh watching her and adopted a languid air. "Dolly wants me to stay with her tonight," she said. "They're driving in for me. I think it would do me good to get away." "Perhaps," Hugh said brusquely. The set of his lips filled Janie with sudden fright. "Will you come with us?" Celia asked. "I can't," he said briefly. "I have some reading to do." But he didn't read. He paced the floor of his room upstairs. Janie, playing double solitaire with Mrs. Quillen in the living room below, heard his footsteps treading endlessly back and forth. "What ails him tonight?" Mrs. Quillen asked with an eloquent glance toward the ceiling. "I don't know," Janie answered. That wasn't quite true. She thought that Hugh had suspected Celia. She thought that the fainting fit had not deceived him at all. What would happen? What would he do? . . . Janie served as office girl, after the evening that Celia fainted. She didn't really mind. It was pleasant to be with Hugh. The arrival of the postman was an event of great importance. There were letters from Mother every day and sometimes a note from Father. He was getting stronger. The operation was to be performed in a very short time. There was nothing to do except wait.

Occasionally a square gray envelope came in with the rest of the mail. Carter Shelby was writing to Celia again. Celia tucked the letters away with a casual air and seldom mentioned his name. But she watched for the square gray envelopes. Janie was sure of that. And all through February while the snow changed to sleet and mud and each gray day that passed seemed drearier than the others, Janie watched for a telegram from Mother. The telegram never arrived. One morning, early in March, a letter came addressed in Mother's writing to Hugh. He read it at breakfast. "It's over," he said. "The operation?" Celia's hands crept up to her heart. Janie's eyes asked a question. Hugh looked at her miserably. He looked away. But he had to tell them. "It was unsuccessful," he said. "You mean—" Celia faltered. "He will never walk again." Janie made a faint little moan and her fingers twisted together. "He'll be well otherwise?" Celia asked. "Yes." Hugh's voice was husky and rough. "He may live for years." "Is he coming home?" Janie asked. "Not at once. They want to keep him there for observation." "It isn't so bad," Celia said slowly as though she were reassuring herself. "He will have Stoney to take care of him." "Not so bad!" Hugh turned to her almost fiercely. "Never to walk! To be tied to a chair! You don't know what you are saying!" "I only wanted to make the best of things," Celia said plaintively. "I know," Hugh reached over to touch her hand. "It's just that I am to blame. It drives me crazy. I can't forget it. I can't get it out of my head!" He left the dining room abruptly. They did not see him again all day.

When Hugh came in at supper time, Janie was waiting for him on the Chesterfield in the hall. She glanced up at him anxiously as she helped him pull off his driving gloves and his heavy coat. His face was weary but peaceful. He looked as though he had fought a fight and reached a final decision. "Supper is ready," Janie said. "That's good. I'm starved." "You didn't come home for lunch." "I was busy. I didn't have time." He walked with his arm around her out into the dining room. Celia already was seated. She wore the slim little black crepe frock. Her face was pale. There were shadows under her eyes. The candles were lighted. They cast a glow over the table that now was set for three, over the silver tea-set, over Celia's white hands busy among the cups. Celia glanced up with a smile for Hugh. "I didn't know when you'd be in," she said. "That's all right." He pulled out Janie's chair, settled himself in Father's place at the head of the table. Janie wondered why Hugh's face, so tortured when he strode away from the breakfast table, should now have that look of peace. "I have written to Doctor Ballard," he said when dessert had been served.

"I told him I would stay here as long as he needs me." Janie's heart leaped into her throat. What did it mean? What would Celia think? Whatever would happen now? "You mean—even after June?" Celia asked faintly. "As long as I can be of use to him." There was a note of finality in Hugh's steady voice. "No!" It was a sharp instinctive cry. Celia was caught off guard. "No Hugh! You can't do that! There's no need." Hugh looked at Celia. He looked away. "I want to," he said simply.

II

Janie lay on the hearth in front of the living room fire, propped up sideways on her elbow, her cheek in the palm of her hand. Celia wandered restlessly around the room. "It's sleet," she said. The silver harp strings jangled. "Hugh ought to be back pretty soon," Janie said drowsily. "Hugh is simply morbid. I believe he enjoys being a martyr. He has no right to sacrifice himself, to sacrifice—" She paused abruptly. Janie knew she was thinking of herself. Celia hated the Square. "I think he's splendid," she said warmly. "Of course he is," Celia dropped into the armchair beside the fire. "I feel so miserable," she said. "I've cried myself sick about Father." Celia stared at the flames. Janie stroked Kiltie's rough coat. The quiet of the room was broken only by the sleet against the windows, the snapping of the logs, the dull ticking of the onyx clock on the mantel. "I've been thinking," Janie presently said, "that we could fix over the parlor into a room for Father." "The parlor," Celia repeated absently. "It would be hard for him to get up and down stairs." Janie swallowed and continued. "We could make it into a cheerful room and have a door cut through into the office and Stoney could sleep in there on a cot." Janie's face brightened with enthusiasm. "I have the Christmas money Aunt Lucy gave me, and so have you. We could do it for a surprise. Father could see people in the office and wheel himself out into the dining room for meals and—"

"Janie! How can you?" Celia interrupted. "How can I what?" "Talk about it so casually." Celia's face was as white as a blanched almond; her hands were clasped tightly over her heart. "How can you think of turning the parlor into a sick room? People don't have beds in the parlor except on Juniper street." "But Father won't be exactly sick." Janie tried to explain. "And he'll still be Father. We could make it look like a sitting room except for the bed and—"

"Hush!" Celia said sharply. Janie glanced up, her eyes wide with surprise. Celia reconsidered. The white fury in her face softened perceptibly. "I can't bear it!" she said brokenly. "You don't mind such things, Janie dear. Sickness, ugliness tortures me. I simply can't bear it, that's all." Janie didn't mind! The thought of Father in a chair was like a knife through her heart. The thought that now they could never tramp through the Canadian forest to Father's beautiful lake filled her with misery. Janie didn't mind! It was because she minded so terribly that she wanted to fix over a room for Father. But she couldn't tell Celia. She couldn't explain. If Celia really loved Hugh? She didn't love Hugh. Janie realized it with a sharp feeling of alarm. When you loved people you wanted to make them happy. And it was Celia's fault really. Not Hugh's. He would be terribly hurt. He was so honest and sincere. Hugh would be hurt and Janie, who loved him so much, could do nothing to help. Oh, Hugh! Oh, dear big Hugh who never laughed any more. . . . He came in at midnight. He looked completely exhausted. But his eyes brightened as he saw them waiting for him beside the fire.

SOVIET WOMEN IN REVOLT AGAINST UGLY CLOTHING

A foreign fashion magazine was a prize in Russia during the five years of sacrifice between 1928 and 1933, and still is. Women like to dress well, and men like women who dress well, and Soviet women who neglected this biological truism have discovered the fact to their hurt. Even during the worst years of the shortage of goods, patent leather shoes and silk stockings appeared in far-off villages, Louis Fischer wrote in a Moscow letter to the London New Statesman and Nation. A good Russian dressmaker can set any price on her services and she will get it. An article in Pravda praised a concert singer who appeared at a workers' club in a silk dress and elegant shoes. Clothing factories have been organizing popular fashion shows, and only the dresses, underwear, suits, etc., selected by the public as best, may be manufactured by the factories and shops. The government has ordered the textile industry to turn out thinner satins and finer silks. Even cotton goods must be of a better grade. "Peasant women refuse to wear coarse prints," said a Moscow daily. The official Izvestia objected to "ugly, untalented designs which do not satisfy the esthetic tastes of the customer." The women of a North Caucasus kolhoz (collective farm) wrote an open letter to Stalin in which they demanded goods that "would make the soul rejoice."—Literary Digest.

Corroboration

They were sitting round the fire, swapping lies. "When I was in Montana," said one of them, "I saw a mountain lion come right up to the camp one day. It was a fierce beast, but, with great presence of mind, I threw a bucket of water in its face and it slunk away." "Boys," said a man sitting in a c.ner, "I can vouch for the truth of that story. A few minutes after that happened I was coming down the side of the hill. I met this lion and, as is my habit, stopped to stroke its whiskers. Boys, those whiskers were wet!"—London Tit-Bits.

Thousands have Ended their Bowel Worries by taking this advice!

Can constipation safely be relieved? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" say the many thousands who have followed their advice and know. You are not likely to cure your constipation with salts, pills, tablets or any of the habit-forming cathartics. But you can safely relieve this condition by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

THE LIQUID TEST:

First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord.

Simple, isn't it? And it works! The right liquid laxative brings thorough bowel action without using force. An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, and perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna, a natural laxative; the dose can be measured, and the action thus regulated to suit your individual need. If there are children in your household, don't give them any form of laxative, but use a healthful, helpful preparation like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Its very taste will tell you it is wholesome, and agreeable to the stomach. Delightful taste, and delightful action; there is no discomfort at the time, or after. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, all ready to take.

A Frank Statement Concerning Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

We believe the use of pills and tablets containing mineral drugs is rapidly giving way to gentle regulation of the bowels with a liquid laxative. We believe Dr. Caldwell's original prescription of fresh herbs, pure pepsin, and senna is the ideal family laxative.

And we know it is a safe preparation for children and expectant mothers because it does not cause bowel strain or irritate the kidneys.

Left-Overs Can Provide Many Tempting Dishes

In the larder or refrigerator of practically every home there will be found left-over vegetables after dinner, and frequently after lunch or a hearty supper. The housewife who can gauge appetites to avoid this is remarkable, or she is so close a caterer that some one goes without the extra serving that would be enjoyed. What to do with these odds and ends of vegetables is a problem, too often solved by a salad. It is well to know of many other dishes, some hot, some cold, which can use the bits. One excellent dish is scrambled vegetables.

Vast Wealth Ruled by Women in U. S.

Huge Inheritances Pass on Fortunes to Females.

Chicago.—The golden stream of America's wealth is gravitating into the hands of American women. The prospect of women exercising a dominant control over the nation's billions is no longer remote, for, with her kitchen clutch on the family purse strings, to the great queens of inherited finance, women little by little are possessing the nation's wealth for themselves.

The days not so long ago when the country marveled over the legendary riches of Hetty Green, "first woman millionaire," have given way to everyday acceptance of the many women who now possess colossal fortunes.

Control Vast Sums.

Doris Duke, granddaughter of the late James B. Duke, is now in control of $10,000,000 of the Duke tobacco fortune. By 1936, when she will come into full control of her complete inheritance of $50,803,000, she will be the richest girl in the world.

Right now she ranks second in actual holdings to Barbara Hutton, who recently married Prince Alexis Mdivani of the Russian province of Georgia. She inherited one-third of the $58,000,000 left by her grandfather, the late Frank W. Woolworth, dime store king. While these two girls are the most glittering examples of women with legendary wealth, there are thirty others in the United States currently reporting annual incomes of over $1,000,000 each. Their average income, indeed, was $2,062,190—and that means that their fortunes run into tremendous sums.

The complete astounding picture of how far the women of the United States have already come in their instinctive program of corraling the money made by men in a man's country has just been presented by economists.

Published by the University of Chicago, the survey, "Women and Wealth," directed by Mary Sydney Branch of Western college at Oxford, Ohio, shows:

That women millionaires are now as plentiful as men.
That women are the beneficiaries of more than half the estates left by either men or women.
That they receive more than two-thirds of the value of all the legacies through which these estates are distributed.

That an average of 38 per cent, or more than nine thousand millions of all income reported under the federal income tax, is received by women.
That of the 18,000,000 stockholders in the United States, women comprise 7,740,000.

That women, in 1928, owned more than twenty thousand millions of the total of ninety-two thousand millions worth of capital stock in all American corporations.

That 48 per cent of all those leaving enough property to be subject to inheritance tax are women.
That women annually are the recipients of 80 per cent or more of the death claims paid by life insurance companies, receiving, in 1931, the staggering total of $732,115,607.

And that they are named beneficiaries of eighty-seven thousand millions of the one hundred and nine thousand millions of life insurance outstanding.

All this, too, only a few generations from the days when women's economic status was little better than that of a child or a slave!

"Your Spirit Shines Through You"

William James, who was one of America's most eminent psychologists, coined the phrase, "the pragmatic test," by which he meant that experience was the test of reality. Many speakers and writers frequently wonder why the product of their skill does not merit a wider influence. The answer might be found in William James' definition of pragmatism. "Only that which is real merits recognition." Any speaker, regardless of his message, will always have an audience if his message is a product of his experience. By Lydia Le Baron Walker

THE principal requisites for all work baskets are identical. To these each person adds other things which she finds helpful in her own sewing ventures. To her these are essentials also but since they are not to every one, they cannot be universal requisites. I am giving my idea of essentials with occasional notes of reasons and explanation.

First and foremost come needles and threads, in which category are included sewing silks, darning cottons, silks and yarns of wool or mixtures. In the fittings for this basket we shall include darning materials. However, let me add, it is a better plan to have a darning basket and a sewing basket fitted separately. Some day in the near future I am having an article on work bags, baskets, tables, screens, etc., and their various advantages. I now give fittings only.

The needles should be in assorted sizes, and kept in a needle book, preferably with several leaves, one for fine, one for medium, and another for coarse needles of the kind best suited to the person. There should be some packages of needles also in reserve.

Threads. In white threads there should be numbers 40, 60, 70, 80, and either 90 or 100 for very fine stitchery, 1,000 linen is preferable to 100 cotton as it is very fine and very strong. Include a large spool of basting cotton. This is a low-priced cheap grade of thread with an extra smooth finish, just the thing for basting. It does not resist wear like ordinary thread, and it is inadvisable to use it in its stead. In black thread, 40 and 70 are needed. A spool of coarse shoe button thread may be added. It will be needed if any member of the family wears button shoes. Black and white silk are important and such other colors as are needed in sewing done at the time. Size A is right.

Scissors in at least two sizes, shears and smaller ones, will be needed. Four pairs are often included, the smallest size for snipping threads, the largest for cutting out materials. Buttonhole scissors, once essential, are not nowadays. A well-protected razor blade is recommended as a great help when ripping seams.

An emery for polishing needles, and making them slip easily through textiles is a requisite not to be overlooked. Even when needles get slightly rusty, they can be restored to usefulness by running them briskly back and forth through the emery ball. Wax is another essential. This is for the thread. It smoothes it and prevents its knotting. It binds together the infinitesimal filaments of strands and tends to increase the strength of the thread. Silk is not waxed. Cotton and linen are. The other requisites are tape measure, common pins, and a thimble.

Work for Spare Hours. It is surprising the amount of sewing or fancy work which can be done in odd moments, provided the things are ready to work on, and are conveniently at hand. It is by taking advantage of such moments that mending can be gotten out of the way without ado. Stockings can be darned and ready to wear without the annoying necessity of last minute stitches. And embroideries, knitting or crocheting can be accomplished to lend beauty to household linens, wearing apparel, and accessories.

The woman who takes advantage of time in the ways suggested should have several work bags or attractive work baskets at what we may call strategic points, that is, where she would be likely to stop and rest or chat occasionally.

When it comes to fancywork (I rather like this old-time name, it so definitely indicates it as having elements of luxury even though it may also have practical element), no kind is barred that can be put into its bag or basket together with the tools of stitchery. For example here are some well-suited types, knitting and crocheting, tatting, embroidery bead work and weaving which is done without a loom. This is found in net weaving which is really a type of darning, and Danish weaving done over and about threads from which the cross strands have been pulled away. In knitting and crocheting, such things as sweaters, and dresses come under this category of fancywork, for they are not actually the work of necessity but of quality and beauty of workmanship.

Laetare Medalist

Mrs. Genevieve Garvan Brady, New York philanthropist, was awarded the Laetare medal for 1934 by the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind. This was the university's fifty-first annual award of the medal, which is designed to honor an outstanding member of the Catholic laity in this country. Mrs. Brady, the eleventh woman to receive it, is vice chairman of the National Women's Committee on Welfare and Relief Mobilization.

2,000 Volts to Bar Escapes From Jail

Crockett, Texas.—Rewards for capture of criminals come high, so Sheriff J. L. Hazlett will erect a 12-foot barbed wire fence around the Brazoria county jail here and charge it with 2,000 volts of electricity.

He announced his plans following the escape of Earl (Baby Face) Joyner, southwest bank robber and prison breaker, after he had paid $50 reward to Arkansas officers to bring Joyner here.

real. Pretense, sham and hypocrisy repel. Sincerity, integrity and reality attract. The philosopher Hume was asked why he went to church to hear a certain minister. "You do not believe what he says," remarked his inquiring friend. "No," replied Hume, "I do not believe a word of it but the minister believes it." The average man is willing to go a long way with another person even though he radically differs with him, providing that person is not a "bluff."

The same principle holds true in all phases of life. It is the basic law of success in the economic world. Remove confidence from business and you have bankruptcy. Faith is the essence of credit. A character loan is not common in large financial circles. What creates confidence in credit is a tested experience. Respect for integrity is the most important asset in a business man's career.

People believe in us if we believe in ourselves. It should not be difficult to persuade another to our point of view, if our argument expresses a personal belief and experience.

"Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian," said Felix to Paul—no wonder. A salesman will not get orders if he does not thoroughly believe in the value of the article he sells. A manufacturer soon loses his clientele if he falsifies the product of his factory.

Sultana Introduces Number Eleven

Sultana, the most noted polar bear in the world, introduces her newest—and eleventh—cub to visitors at the Washington park zoo in Milwaukee, the only place in the world where polar bears have been born and raised in captivity. All of Sultana's 11 children are well and happy.

"Two things I wanted—"

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood. The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin. "It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up." If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood. S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores... in two convenient sizes... the larger is more economical. © The S.S.S. Co.

Magnet Handles Tacks
In the tack factory, the operation of transferring tacks from one receptacle to another is not exactly easy because of the sharp points, which make the pieces difficult to handle. The up-to-date method is to do this by means of an electric magnet. When this is thrust into a big box of tacks, the magnet "grabs" a bunch which may be transferred to another box. The tacks are freed from the magnet by touching a button which cuts off the current.

Waiting for the Moon

Picturesque Zanzibar

Zanzibar is the most important trade center and has been for centuries the largest city in East Africa. This island is 640 square miles in area and has a population of 200,000, of which only 270 are Europeans. The remainder of the population consists of Swahilis, Arabs, Indians and Comorides. The most interesting things to be seen in Zanzibar are unquestionably the native bazars, markets and numerous curio shops.

Aged Letters in Door

Business letters mailed during the Nineteenth century, some 64, 65 and 67 years ago, were found in an old-fashioned double-paneled front door when workmen removed it from offices in Manchester, England, recently. The missives had lodged in the space between the panels, behind which was the letter box. They were addressed to L. Darbour & Company, a thread company, which was merged with another firm many years ago.
