DRIVER KILLED WHEN TRUCKS CRASH ON U.S. 23

Companion Is In Critical Condition At Omer Hospital

Dominic Grillo, age 21, of Saginaw was killed and his companion, Joseph Marshall, age 45, of Detroit was critically injured at about one o'clock Sunday morning when the truck Grillo was driving crashed into the rear of another truck on U. S. 23 near the Bear Track Inn, between Alabaster and Au Gres.

Grillo and Marshall were in the cab of the truck, which was owned by the Michigan Fruit company of Alpena, enroute from Alpena to Detroit with a load of potatoes. The truck into which they crashed was also loaded with potatoes, and bound for Detroit, having left Alpena earlier in the evening. It is believed that both men had fallen asleep, when their truck, which had apparently been traveling at a high rate of speed, overtook and rammed the other truck. The cab of the truck was demolished, and the men were buried under an avalanche of potatoes which made it difficult to remove them from the wreckage.

Charles Grillo of Saginaw, uncle of Dominic, on his way to Alpena with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Woloszyk of Alpena, came upon the accident shortly after it had occurred. They had heard of it at a gas station in Standish.

Marshall, who was taken to the Omer hospital suffering from a fractured collar bone, broken arm, and crushed chest, is not expected to live.

Mr. and Mrs. William Horton and son, Elmer, of Flint visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Anshuetz over the week end.

Mrs. S. Connor returned Saturday after spending the winter in Milwaukee, Wis., and Detroit with relatives.

Mrs. Belle Curtis of Hale visited with her daughter, Mrs. William Reinke, during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Al. Armstrong of Flint and Mrs. J. J. Kelly and two sons of Saginaw spent Sunday at the Peter Trainor home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Clive Stocking and Herman Rockle of Flint spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Osborne.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kasischke and daughters, Norma and Elvera, spent Wednesday in Saginaw.

Carl Babcock and Miss Oka Millard spent Tuesday in Bay City.

Miss Myrtle Cowell returned on Sunday from Washington, D. C., where she attended the National Nurses convention.

J. A. Murphy and John Hoshbach spent Saturday in Merrill, where Mr. Murphy attended the funeral of a relative.

Mrs. Chas. Kane, Mrs. Austin A. McGuire and Mrs. Floyd Schneider spent Wednesday in Bay City.

Scotty and Popeye entertain each Sunday afternoon and evening at the Wigwam Tavern, Sand Lake. No charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Moeller spent Sunday in West Branch.

Miss Mary Lu Prescott and C. T. Prescott spent the week end in East Lansing and Grand Rapids.

Miss Geraldine Gulliford spent the week end in Lansing and at her home in Grand Rapids.

Mrs. F. K. Reybold and family of York, Pennsylvania, arrived Tuesday to spend the summer here with her sister, Mrs. William Reinke, and with her mother, Mrs. Belle Curtis of Hale.

Edw. Stevens of Detroit spent the week end in the city at his home.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Davis and daughter of Watervliet were visitors in the city a couple of days this week, returning Wednesday morning.

Workers are starting to tear down one of the oldest houses in the city, the Murphy house on the corner of State and Seventh streets. Mr. and Mrs. Ira Horton will have a modern home erected on the site.

TWO PONTIAC MEN HELD FOR THEFT

Accused of Wire Larceny At Whittemore

Charged with stealing copper wire from property of the Consumers Power company in Whittemore Thursday morning, two Pontiac men were yesterday placed in the county jail by Sheriff Charles Miller. They will be given a hearing today at Whittemore.

The accused men gave their names as Ira Scott, 26, and Robert Ditch, 22, and their residence as 90 Beacon street, Pontiac. They said, according to Sheriff Miller, that they are junk dealers in Pontiac and that they drove north Wednesday to collect junk. The men claimed that they thought the wire they are charged with stealing had been discarded.

An employe of the Consumers Power company at Whittemore, Mr. Smith, said that he saw Scott and Ditch taking copper wire belonging to the company Thursday morning. Constable Van Norstrom arrested the men and later placed them in the custody of Sheriff Miller.

Two women who had accompanied the men from Pontiac were not held, Sheriff Miller said.

Mrs. S. B. Yawger

Mrs. Jessie Esmond Yawger, who died at her home in Hale on April 27, was laid to rest last Sunday afternoon in Evergreen cemetery in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends.

Jessie Esmond was born two miles east of what is now known as Hale on February 8, 1873. When she passed away last week she was aged 61 years, two months and 19 days.

Her entire life was spent in Hale and its vicinity. She attended the little white school on the plains and the East Tawas high school. Among her associates and companions she was always a favorite.

On May 31, 1894, Jessie Esmond was married to Stacy B. Yawger, a rising young business man of Hale. To this union were born two daughters, Mrs. Fern Streeter of Hale and Mrs. Faye Johnson of Whittemore.

During her earlier married years Mrs. Yawger was actively associated with her husband in the mercantile business and in the first Hale bank. Her later life was devoted entirely to her home and to active Christian work in the Hale Baptist church of which she was a member. Among her fellow Christian workers she will be greatly missed. She was the Sunday school superintendent and also a member of the Dorcas society.

Jessie Esmond Yawger was the first white child born in Plainfield township and the last of the Esmond name, being the sole survivor of the Esmond families who were among the first settlers in that township. Her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Esmond, and three brothers and two sisters preceded her in death.

The Clark Esmond family were the early settlers of that name in Hale, the family of which Mrs. Yawger was the sole surviving descendant. Among the pioneers they left their mark for their generous deeds and kind acts. Mrs. Yawger carried these fine family characteristics through to the last. For a long, long time she will be sadly missed and mourned by a host of sincere friends in Hale, in Plainfield, and throughout Isco county.

The funeral services were held in the Hale Baptist church at two o'clock Sunday afternoon. The Rev. Pierson of Bay City, one of the early ministers of the church and a close friend of the family for 30 years, officiated. The Rev. Ralph Brown of Davison, also a close friend of the family, sang "Sometime We'll Understand." Beautiful floral offerings were made by the many friends of the deceased. The funeral was one of the largest ever held in Hale.

"She rests in peace and her works do follow her."

$28,000 SPRING PROGRAM AT HURON SHORES

At Least Seven Summer Homes Are Now Under Construction

Business men and residents in the community in and about the Tawas are beginning to realize the unusual and beneficial development that is taking place at the Huron Shores subdivision, half way between Oscoda and East Tawas. It is conservatively estimated that no less than seven summer homes are now under construction and nearing completion, at a total cost of at least $28,000.00.

The names of some of these home owners and members of our community are: Frank Solar, Albert Cornwell, Everett R. Phelps, William C. McGreevey, Fred Chatal, Roscoe Merchant and L. B. Dolsen. Many of these people are from Detroit, and there are as many more who are contemplating immediately starting further building.

It is evident that there is a realization on the part of business men throughout the state that the Isco district of the Huron shore and Saginaw bay stands second to none as a location for summer homes and a recreational center; that the benefits to be derived from spending a few weeks or a few months in the enjoyment of the recreational advantages that this section has to offer cannot be reckoned in a material way.

Business men and residents of the Tawas are awakening to this forward movement and development in their midst and are enthusiastically getting back of this progress. The Huron Shores subdivision development is largely due to the vision, activity and industry of Joseph E. Lubaway.

Hale Chapter, O. E. S. Holds "Friends Night"

On Thursday night of last week Hale Chapter No. 482, O. E. S., held its "Friends Night," each officer of the chapter inviting a friend to act in her stead in the exemplification of the degrees. The evening's festivities began with a seven o'clock dinner.

After the chapter was opened visiting guests were welcomed. Four Worthy Matrons were present—Miss Annabel Chambers, Rose City No. 452; Mrs. Carlsson, Isco No. 71; Mrs. Harrell, Whittemore No. 426; and Mrs. Boomer, Tawas City No. 303; three Worthy Patrons—R. Fuerst, Whittemore No. 426; A. Boomer, Tawas City No. 303, and W. DeGraw, Isco No. 71; also Mrs. Grace DeGraw, Past President of the A. I. A. Association and Grand Representative to the Grand Jurisdiction of Mass; and Mrs. Sarah Johnson, President of the A. I. A. Association.

A short program was enjoyed, after which the chapter officers escorted the visiting officers to their stations and introduced them as follows: Worthy Matron—Edna Boomer, Tawas City No. 303; Worthy Patron—R. Fuerst, Whittemore No. 426; Associate Matron—Sarah Chase, Whittemore No. 426; Associate Patron—A. McLean, Whittemore No. 426; Secretary—Mrs. Georgina Leslie, Tawas City No. 303; Treasurer—Mrs. Rebecca Small, Isco No. 71; Conductress—Mrs. DeRemer, Whittemore No. 426; Associate Conductress—Mrs. Lila Reid, Rose City No. 452; Chaplain—Mrs. Van Svelde, Whittemore No. 426; Marshal—Mrs. Dillon, Isco No. 71; Organist—Mrs. Common, Whittemore No. 426; Adah—Mrs. Margaret Powell, Whittemore No. 426; Ruth—Mrs. Charles Mott, Whittemore No. 426; Esther—Olive Greve, Hale No. 482; Martha—Mrs. Bright, Tawas City No. 303; Fleeta—Mrs. Townsend, Rose City No. 452; Warder—Mrs. Hall, Rose City No. 452. After the degree work was finished, the visiting officers were escorted away and the chapter officers resumed their stations for the closing ceremonies.

The visiting officers were complimented on the beautiful work portrayed, and members of Hale Chapter feel that their first "Friends Night" had been a happy occasion to be long remembered.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to the host of friends who by their many acts of kindness lightened the burden for us during the illness and death of our beloved wife and mother, Jessie Esmond Yawger. ### VETERANS WILL MEET IN EAST TAWAS MAY 9

Leslie Kefgen of Bay City Secured As Speaker

The Isco County Veterans Council will hold another meeting Wednesday evening, May 9, at East Tawas. The Audie Johnson Post of East Tawas will be host for the occasion.

The council has been holding meetings from time to time and every meeting has been bigger and better. It is the aim of the council to try to have every veteran in the county attend these meetings.

A splendid program is being arranged, including a discussion of veterans matters by Leslie Kefgen of Bay City, past Department Commander; also music by the drum and bugle corps of East Tawas. This program will be followed by a smoker.

John Mielock, president of the council, believes that this will be the biggest meeting that has been held up to the present time, and he said that every veteran should make a special effort to attend, as plans will be made for Memorial Day and other matters of importance will be discussed.

In order to create interest, Mr. Mielock is asking every veteran to bring some sort of a stone with him. These stones will be used to build a stone monument in the veteran cemetery. A prize will be given for the best stone.

Final P.-T.A. Meeting Will Be Held Thursday

The last meeting of the P.-T. A., which, according to custom, is a social gathering, will be held in the high school building Thursday evening, May 10.

After the business meeting, the group will repair to another room where tables will be prepared for progressive bunco which will offer diversion for the members and their friends. A pot luck lunch will be served.

School Notes

High School

The carnival is over! The treasury of the school athletic fund is swelled by approximately one hundred and forty dollars which will be used for uniforms and equipment for the baseball team. The affair, which was sponsored by the Student Council, furnished entertainment for both old and young and afforded an excellent opportunity for the pupils of the school to acquire experience in co-operation, leadership and initiative. However, those in charge realize that without the splendid cooperation of the townspeople it could never have been given so successfully. The committee chairman wish to thank all those who helped to make the carnival such an overwhelming success, particularly the Parent-Teacher Association, the teachers, Mr. Dease, those who loaned articles to the picture gallery and antique shop, and the merchants who so generously contributed the prizes.

The baseball boys and their coach, Mr. Forstner, wish to thank the Twentieth Century Club for the money given them toward their new uniforms. The Club is most cordially invited to attend any and all of the games and see for themselves what a difference "fine feathers" make.

The weather permitting, our baseball team will play its first game of the season Friday afternoon, May 4. (Turn to No. 1, Back Page)

COUNTY VOTES AGAINST BOND ISSUE; 6 TO 1

Proposition Is Turned Down In All Precincts of Isco; State Votes No, 5 to 1

By a vote of more than six to one Isco county taxpayers Monday rejected the public works bond issue, thus showing a slightly more vigorous opposition than the average of the state, which was five to one against the measure. A total of 887 in the county voted No; 138 voted Yes.

No township or city in the county favored the bond issue, although Oscoda came nearest to doing so with a vote of 41 for and 48 against. Tawas township showed the other extreme, polling one vote for and 91 votes against the measure.

Tawas City voted six to one against the bond issue, while East Tawas defeated it by a three to one vote.

East Tawas cast the heaviest vote, 139. Plainfield, with 133 votes, and Tawas City, with 130 votes, came next.

Following is the county vote by townships and cities:

Township/City	Yes	No
Alabaster township	4	14
Ausable township	3	19
Baldwin township	1	29
Burligh township	2	68
Grant township	1	64
Oscoda township	41	48
Plainfield township	8	125
Reno township	7	68
Sherman township	6	36
Tawas township	1	91
Wilber township	2	48
East Tawas	30	109
Tawas City	18	112
Whittemore	14	56
Totals	138	887

New Softball League Activities Are Started

The first practice game for the newly organized twilight softball league was played Thursday night at East Tawas, with "Spot" Gardner's D. & M. sluggers defeating the A. & P. squad 17 to 7. Lankey "Sam" Siglin and Arthur Dillon were the winning battery and Ray and Howard Ross the losing battery. Dr. Moss allowed no grass to grow under his feet, and starred both in the field and at bat. Grant Shattuck and Dr. Klump umpired the game very nicely.

Six teams are already entered in the league and more are expected to join. Those entered are: A. & P., D. & M., Masons, I. O. O. F., Peoples State Bank, and Merschel Hardware. Plans are being laid to have two teams from Tawas City enter in the league so games can be played four nights a week. Any team wishing to join may do so by seeing Ed. DeGraw at East Tawas before May 15th, the season starting date.

"This Side of Heaven" Has Powerful Punch

The sacredness of the American home and the loyalty of a family to all its members are lessons that are vividly illustrated in "This Side of Heaven," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture playing Wednesday and Thursday, May 9 and 10, at the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

Lionel Barrymore plays the father who is threatened with imprisonment for embezzlement at the all-important time when the family reaches high hopes of financially reimbursing itself.

Fay Bainter, stage star, appears in her first picture role as Barrymore's wife, and their children are Mae Clarke, Mary Carlisle and Tom Brown.

Humor is sprayed throughout the story by Una Merkel, who plays one of her most delightful roles as "Birdie," the family housemaid. Others in the cast are C. Henry Gordon, as Barrymore's employer, and Dickie Moore, as a schoolboy.

William K. Howard handled the direction with an eye for an entertaining combination of humor and pathos.

Late News Events

OSCODA, May 4—The home of Mrs. Charles Robinson, AuSable, was completely destroyed by fire last Saturday. Due to the high wind, the Oscoda fire department was unable to check the blaze. Sparks carried by the wind started two other fires, one at the home of Mrs. Oscar Muncy and the other on the roof of the AuSable Garage. Both of these were extinguished, however, before serious damage resulted.

HARRISVILLE, May 4—The project for grading 11 miles on the Shore road north of Harrisville was approved at a meeting of the State Administrative Board which was held on Tuesday, April 17. On the following Thursday bids were advertised for 8.48 miles of grading and drainage surfaces on the Huron Shore Road from a point west of Alcona northwest. The project will cost about $106,950.00.

OSCODA, May 4—The formal opening of Van Ettan Lake Lodge will take place Saturday evening, May 5, when the Huron Shore Resort association will meet there for a banquet and business convale. The principle speakers will be Albert W. Black, of Bay City, and Emmet Richards, editor of the Alpena News.

"Fashions of 1934" Shows Styles, Comedy, Romance

One of the most colorful pictures to come from Hollywood in many a day is promised by the management with the showing of the First National production, "Fashions of 1934," with William Powell in the stellar role at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, next Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 6-7-8.

The picture is said to combine hilarious comedy with glamorous romance and a mammoth spectacle. The prize number in "Fashions of 1934" is a most unusual spectacle in which 200 beautiful girls do a fan dance in rhythm to music furnished by a harp orchestra.

William Powell as a high pressure promoter, corners the Paris fashion market and sets himself up as the king of fashions.

Bette Davis plays opposite Powell as his co-conspirator and rival for his love with Verree Teasdale, who is seen in the character of an American show girl masquerading as a Russian Grand Duchess.

With two such comedians as Frank McHugh and Hugh Herbert teamed up, the fun promises to be irrepressible.

Pouches in Wall of Large Intestine

SOMETIMES a patient will complain of pains in the lower part of the abdomen at right side or left side, or in the middle of the lower abdomen. The symptoms may resemble appendicitis or even cancer, and the physician has an X-ray examination made. The examination shows no appendicitis or cancer, but a number of little pouches or pockets, or protrusions in the lining wall of the large intestine which vary in size from a tiny seed to a good-sized cherry.

These little pockets contain waste matter from the food, and this waste matter may have all the water dried or squeezed out of it until it is almost as hard as a stone.

This condition is found to be more common than was thought previously, although many people seem to enjoy good health despite it.

It is believed that most cases are caused by neglect of the large bowel, holding wastes too long, with resulting gas pressure.

When these little pockets become inflamed, it sometimes happens that the inflammation extends right through the bowel into the abdominal cavity, causing peritonitis—a serious condition.

When peritonitis occurs, surgery is usually necessary with draining of abscess or even removal of part of bowel.

However, in the majority of cases, even where symptoms are severe, careful nursing, rest in bed, fluid diet, and use of high enemas—colonic irrigations—often relieve the acute symptoms.

After the attack has passed, further attacks may be warded off by frequent small doses of epsom salts.

You can see that with these little pouches in the walls, the walls in trying to get rid of the material in the wall, squeeze or contract to such an extent that they cause a spasm or partial closing of the intestinal canal and a partial or complete blocking or obstruction may occur. Once it is known that the condition exists, care in eating must be used. Harsh or rough foods, and foods containing sharp seeds must be avoided.

It is certainly worth the effort of using soft foods and using water or oil enemas to remove the hard stone-like wastes in the little pockets, if this will prevent the need of a surgical operation.

Head Colds Due to Foods

PERHAPS you are one of the individuals who "always have a cold in the head."

You eat the same food, have the same rest, do about the same amount of work as the other members of the family, but you are the only one who suffers.

As a matter of fact, this tendency to frequent colds is very often a matter of food, and if every particle of food eaten were closely watched, it is likely that the food responsible for this type of head cold would be found.

As you know, hay fever, asthma, hives and eczema run in families, and these head colds are very closely related to the above ailments.

Further, Dr. W. T. Vaughan, Richmond, Va., states that food or other substances may affect the body in different ways than by head colds, asthma, hay fever, hives and eczema. Thus he has found that headaches which come on from time to time, attacks of diarrhoea, foods that upset or disagree, severe attacks of sneezing, and distress from dust and certain drugs, are all a part of what is called allergy—that is a sensitiveness to various substances.

If skin tests are made by rubbing the various foods or other substances into a slight scratch on the skin, the substance causing the trouble may often be found because of the more severe reaction of the scratched skin from this particular substance.

Although this food sensitiveness is responsible for a considerable number of these colds just as it is responsible for many cases of asthma, hay fever and eczema, nevertheless there is still a large number of cases of these head colds that as yet cannot be traced to this cause.

And, as Doctor Vaughan points out, despite the great advances that have recently been made regarding allergy or sensitiveness, the underlying condition of the body which makes one person sensitive or allergic and another nonsensitive or nonallergic has not been really discovered.

In the meantime, if afflicted with frequent head colds, and there is no nose or throat condition present that may be causing it, it would be good sense to experiment with foods and try to find which food or foods seem to bring on the head cold or aggravate it.

Goldensal

A native drug plant of commercial value is goldensal, also called Hydrastis. This is a perennial herb of well-drained woodland soils which are rich in leaf mold. The wild plant is practically exterminated in some sections. Goldensal has been grown under cultivation with considerable success. It must be grown in shade. After the seed is planted it takes from four to five years before the roots are large enough to harvest.

ENDURING SENTIMENT

I HAVE been given permission to print this especially touching letter from a man:

"Dear Mrs. Post—I lost my beloved wife a year ago. The tragedy of this separation of two people who for nearly thirty years were so happy to be together, is just something that only those who are struggling to endure this same aching loneliness can know. Lately I have gotten a great deal of comfort in an idea that may, or may not, be my own; at any rate it was new so far as my ever having heard about it was concerned.

"My wife and I were married with the double ring ceremony. And when she died her wedding band was never taken off her finger. A few months ago it occurred to me to take her engagement ring with my own wedding band to the jeweler and ask him whether he could build up the top of my ring so that he could sink the diamond of her ring into it, without changing the under half of my ring or obliterating the engraving of our names. He said he could by melting a little more gold at the top of my band, which he did, and the post-setting looks like a conventional gypsy hoop and is not a clumsy or obvious one.

"A friend of mine told me that I was selfish to use the stone, especially as I had the gold brought over the edge to make it look smaller. My friend says it should be given to our son for him to give to his future wife. But he has no present intention of marrying and I am getting a real consolation in having something that she always wore and held dear, constantly close to me. It is not too late to pass the composite ring on to my son even now, or later, and he can have all the other jewels that his mother had any time he wants them.

"Am I just a silly sentimentalist, or do you think that this same plan would give other lonely widowers the real comfort that it gives me? It was not just a diamond to her, and I could not bear to leave it in hiding when I had looked at it for all those years in its rightful place on her hand. Perhaps if you haven't heard of the plan, you might want to print it with your answer for the benefit of some other sentimental reader—if there might be one."

In answer I want to say that of course I can understand how you feel and I think it is a beautiful idea that is likely to bring a little warmth of comfort not only to one, but to many. In no possible sense are you selfish. As for sentiment—what is beauty of life without it?

WRITING MATERIALS

WRITING Paper for Men: Good taste exacts that stationery for all men be very conservative. Color of writing paper: White, cream, the deeper shades of blue, or any of the grayish mixtures known as granite. (Plain gray is better for an older man than for a young one). Smartest style of paper: Either bond or Irish linen or granite. Any other plain paper with cut edges, proper. Size: Large rather than small. Size: Double sheet 5½ x 8½ inches in best taste. Single sheet slightly larger. Unlined envelopes with plainest flap. Stamping: Address or block initials, or full name and address. (Mr. is never included under any circumstances). A man's business address is put on the face of the envelope rather than on the flap. Personal paper has the address (if any) across the flap. Color of stamping (or printing): black or blue or gray or brick red. Ink: Blue or black.

Writing Paper for Women: White, cream, all blues, grays and mauves. Very pale powder pluk bond paper is just on the edge of possibility but to be avoided by the unknown. I wish I might approve of green but I really can't. Size: Very small or medium large, single or double sheets. Very smart is the double sheet of paper that fits without further folding into a big envelope. Texture of paper unlimited, but cut edges are more conventional than rough. Any colored border fashionable—even green or red—if it be very narrow, but gilt or silver edges tabu. Stamping: Monogram, initials or address in color to match the border. A girl's name—either "Mary Smith" in full or "Mary," embossed in color, is popular for a young girl when writing to her own friends. On paper for social use the address without the name is proper on the flap of the envelope as well as on the paper—of if the monogram or name is stamped on paper, the address is often put across the flap of the envelope. Envelope lined with plain tissue to match the color of the stamping (and border) or no lining. Avoid violently patterned envelope linings except for Christmas cards. Ink: Black, neutral, tint, blue, violet. (Green and red are tabu).

For Impersonal or Business Letters: Printed name in full prefixed by "Mrs." or "Miss" is proper. And this same complete name with address on the envelope flap.

For formal paper, die stamping on good quality of paper is of course in best taste.

Work on Aqueduct Now Ahead of Plan

Great Project in California to Serve 13 Cities.

Los Angeles.—The greatest aqueduct built in the history of man is entering the second year of construction in southern California.

If the builders of the days of the Caesars could return to earth, they would see 4,000 men working along a 250-mile desert front, bringing water from the Colorado river to the metropolitan water district of southern California.

They would learn that 5,670,000 barrels of cement will go into the completed project—sufficient to build a 14-foot highway from Los Angeles to New York.

They would be told that 3,600,000 gallons of gasoline will be burned before the job is finished—sufficient to drive 2,200 automobiles once around the earth at the equator.

They would see 90,000,000 board feet of lumber, 41,000,000 pounds of explosives, 2,500 miles of copper cable go into the project.

To Start New Work.

This second year of activity finds 13 miles of the project's 91 miles of tunnel already driven through hard rock desert mountains.

Working under the direction of F. E.

Weymouth, general manager and chief engineer, 4,000 men are fulfilling orders of taxpayers to build the aqueduct at a cost of $220,000,000 or less.

Within two months the aqueduct forces will be increased by the launching of several new units of work. The Public Works administration has allocated $2,000,000 for the financing of the first year of construction on Parker dam, the aqueduct's diversion structure on the Colorado river.

The dam, 330 feet high from its bedrock foundation, and 740 feet across its crest, will be built at a cost of $13,500,000 in Parker canyon, 15 miles north of Parker, Ariz., and 15 miles below Boulder dam.

Teeming With Activity.

Preliminary work already has been started by the metropolitan water district on nine additional miles of 16-foot tunnel, bringing the total of the aqueduct bore under construction to 91 miles, constituting all the tunnels on the main line.

Thirty-one construction camps in the Colorado and Coachella deserts now teem with activity as work rolls along on the 241-mile stretch from intake to the terminal reservoir near Riverside.

West of the reservoir will stretch 141 miles of huge mains, to carry water to the 13 cities within the district.

With work under way and contracts already let, approximately a third of the program is accounted for, involving a total investment and obligation of approximately $60,000,000. On the basis of this figure, a saving of nearly $9,000,000 over original estimates has been made.

The 13 cities comprising the metropolitan water district are Anaheim, Beverly Hills, Burbank, Compton, Fullerton, Glendale, Long Beach, Los Angeles, Pasadena, San Marino, Santa Ana, Santa Monica and Torrance.

Coasting Run 250 Years Old

The coasting run leading from the Bohemian border to the old mining town of Schmieberg in the Giants' mountains looks back on 250 years of existence. It was first used beginning in 1783, by Bohemian miners to shorten their trip to the mines.

30 Million Insects to Help Celebrate

Paris.—More than 30,000,000 insects will take part in the three hundredth anniversary celebrations next year of the famous French museum of the Jardin des Plantes.

This museum was founded by Guy de las Brosse, physician to Louis XIII, who succeeded to the French throne following the assassination of his father, Henry IV.

The director of the museum, Paul Lemoine, has announced that 500 of the world's leading scientists will be invited to participate in the celebrations, and that they will be shown the museum's collections.

HOW TO BUILD

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Will western civilization be annihilated? Some persons are convinced that it has already started on a decline which will gradually gain in momentum until little shall remain as a witness to the most prosperous period in American history. Those more optimistically inclined grant the seriousness of the present economic disorder, but have sufficient faith in the moral integrity of the country to convincingly affirm that all will be well again. Out of all past depression periods we have successfully emerged and this one will prove no exception to rule.

Perhaps it will help to clarify one's attitude toward this disputed problem if we ask, what do we mean by civilization? The dictionary defines the word "as a condition of organization, enlightenment and progress." Civil-

Gangway for a Trojan

Ed Ablowitz, 440-yard runner and mainstay of the University of Southern California track team. He was a member of the 1932 American Olympic 1,600-meter relay team which established a new world's record for that distance; is a senior, co-captain of the 1934 college team.

zation, then, is a condition of organized society. Without society we cannot have a civilization. The social group is the prime requisite and upon its enlightenment, moral, intellectual and spiritual, does civilization depend.

This is quite a different point of view from that one which makes the security of civilization depend upon skyscrapers, automobiles, airplanes, banks flooded with money, palatial ships, marble palaces, or whether United States Steel or American Can goes up ten points or drops twenty, or the regulation of the tariff.

All attempts to perpetuate a civilization upon these terms is already doomed, as witnessed in the fall of the Roman empire. It is like building a house upon the sand which soon falls because it is not able to withstand the fury of the wind and storm.

Civilization is an outward expression of the inner soul of a nation. Its security depends upon spiritual qualities and not upon size, bulk, weight or speed. What we need to do is to cultivate a deeper faith in the moral order of the universe and through its expression in our daily toil, build a house upon the foundation of integrity, righteousness and justice. Civilization is a condition of life and not a Babel tower of stone or steel.

Angora Cat Thrives on Diet of Woolen Goods

Istanbul.—A white Angora cat with a mothlike appetite has become a scourge to the residents of the Istanbul suburb of Psmatia.

The feline, which has one green and one blue eye, has developed a passion for wool. It eats large holes in jerseys and berets, gently gnawing and swallowing the wool.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

PRECAUTIONARY measures will insure against a large proportion of accidents which occur, especially in the home. It is true that this is the place where many accidents happen but this is natural since home is the residence of a family, the territory where the family live most of the hours of day and night, the place where children are reared, and all the members congregate. It is also the place where the mechanical part of the running of the house goes on. While this is the age of machine run household equipments, be it said to the credit of those who make them, the devices are carefully contrived to protect users from dangerous elements. It is not these that are chiefly responsible for home accidents, but lack of precautionary measures, plus carelessness.

For example, a surprising number of household accidents occur in the bathtub. Tubs are slippery. Bathtubs forget this. They get in and out of the tub, and stand in it without taking any precautions. The set bathtub with no flange around the edge supplying places to grip firmly when getting in and out have greater danger possibilities than those tubs where there is a curved flange or rim. Grab rails are the next best things but these are on one side, in the wall, and are less convenient and safety-insuring. A rubber bath mat in the bottom of the tub, or a heavy textile bath mat or even a towel, will afford a safer stepping place than an uncovered bottom of a tub.

Gates for Stairways.

Stairways that yawn in unsuspected places along halls are temptations to accidents, especially where there are old folk or little children. When such an open stair entrance comes between a guest room and the bathroom, and the guest is not warned, serious falls have resulted. To guard well such a stairway is really a very easy matter today, for there are swing gates made especially for them, or if preferred, there are gates which collapse instead of swing.

Very highly polished floors can be so slippery that walking on them is somewhat akin to walking on ice. When having floors finished and when keeping them in good condition, it is not necessary to have them of glassy polish. Scatter rugs on polished floors should have beneath them bases which do not raise the rugs but very little yet which are so made that they cling to the floor. Rubber has this adhesive element, and so do many textiles made to go under the rugs. Fortunately these bases prolong the durability of the rug by supplying a softer and more congenial foundation than hard wood. There are all sorts of minor things to look out for when making a home as accident proof as possible. Some day we may consider them.

Interesting Hobby.

Collecting book plates is one of the interesting hobbies with an especial appeal to book lovers. It has been revived with renewed vigor within the past few years. Some collectors seek those chiefly which have armorial bearings or portraits, others prefer those of period significance such as Chippendale, or the work of certain artists and designers, etc. While still others find book plates ex libris interesting from a genealogical aspect. The name book plate in its strictest sense means the device from which printings are made, but it is also applied to the printed labels taken from the plate. These are large or small labels to be pasted on the inside of front covers. While the making and use of book plates is reputed to go back almost as far as printed books themselves, which lends zest to collecting, they are also in common usage today. There is no finer way of indicating ownership than such a seal on covers.

Fortunately book plates today are no longer costly. They are procurable at stationers. While there is no individuality about such book plates, they give an attractive setting to the owner's name, which must be written or printed in the space designated. A book plate without evidencing specific ownership, is, of course, worthless, for that is its purpose. Until within recent years book plates were as distinctively personal as armorial bearings. Today, although not quite so genealogical, they are, for the most part individual, being designed to order and reflect some interest of the owner in classic form.

The Home Aquarium

How Toy Fishes Arrive From Germany.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

FISH aquariums in American homes, once inhabited only by goldfish, now are stocked with finny creatures of strange colors and shapes from many parts of the world. The toy fish merchant has enlarged his stock to include fish from far distant waters, and aquariums are about as common in American living rooms today as potted plants.

Who started the fad of aquarium fish is a bit of a mystery. Rumor names Egypt; but although the fresh waters of Egypt are replete with curious and beautiful dwarf fishes and the Egyptians developed the art of glass-blowing during the Ptolemaic and Roman periods, after 300 B. C., there is no evidence that vessels of glass were used for aquaria.

It is well known that the lure of breeding fishes in captivity took possession of the Chinese several hundred years ago, spreading to Japan, and thence over the western world, with the goldfish as its original object of interest. During the past 75 years, experimentation with the balanced aquarium has passed through various salt and fresh-water phases until, with tropical toy fishes, it has reached the peak of enthusiasm and success in Europe and America.

Not that the goldfish has suffered a loss of popularity. Many millions still are reared annually in the United States, largely for martyrdom in the quart globe, and there is little diminution in the demand for bizarre and costly varieties. Among cold-water species it has no rivals.

Nevertheless, tropical fishes have superseded goldfishes in many of the smaller hatcheries, and some of the larger goldfish farms have built conservatories for rearing them.

Many shops in the larger cities are devoted exclusively to their sale, and a pet show without a display of the colorful midgets would be noticeably incomplete. But it is true, also, that, while most American and European homes have been ornamented at some time by the presence of a few goldfishes, the majority have not as yet succumbed to the allurements of the toy tropical, though fish "fans" spring up daily like mushrooms, enticed by the flash of color, the beauty of fin and form, the remarkable breeding habits undisturbed by captivity, and the ease with which the aquaria are maintained.

From All Over World.
Many kinds imported into the United States are sold and shipped almost the length and breadth of North America—from Florida to Canada and from Massachusetts to California—but hundreds equally beautiful and interesting are as yet unknown to the fancier.

The happy hunting grounds for toy fishes, explored and unexplored, range in the western hemisphere from the Carolinas south through Florida, and from Mexico through Central America, Panama and South America to the most southerly point of Argentina. In the eastern hemisphere, Egypt and other parts of Africa, Australia and Asia—including the island groups of the Malay Archipelago, India, China, Siam and other countries—have been drawn upon for the supply of dwarf fishes appearing in the home aquaria of the Occident.

Their habitat is chiefly the swamp, the ditch, the rain pool, the rice field, clear mountain streams and stagnant lowland waters, ponds, brooks, lakes, rivers and estuaries; but some either make migrations to the coasts or live perennially in brackish or wholly salt water. Oceanic species thus far kept in American aquaria have been principally gobies.

Tropical toy fishes are of many genera and species and even of many varieties—some natural, others cultivated. Their adult body length measures from 1 inch to 5 inches.

The anatomy of the toy fish is not unique. Swim bladders and other organs common to larger fishes are common to them, and their fins are the same—caudal, or tail, fins for swimming and propelling, fins beneath, called ventral and anal, and pectorals (behind the gills) for helping maintain the equilibrium; also, dorsal fins (on the back), which indicate moods and physical states—health and contentment when erect, illness and depression when lowered. The majority have no sort of protection against enemies except in such teeth as they may possess.

Some are so peaceable that a number of species live amicably in one tank; others so quarrelsome that two males cannot occupy the same aquarium, and a male may kill his mate.

Some subsist largely on algae, but most favor small water animals, such as entomostracans (the minutest of crustaceans), annelids, and insect larvae.

Raw beef, cereals, roe, and shellfish, also dried shrimp and other desiccated foods, appear on their bill of fare, and many experiments have been made with concentrated foods, such as cod-liver meal and other glandular products, to ascertain their response to vitamin nutritives—experiments which have confirmed their amenability to a foreign diet and especially to substitutes for the lime, minerals, enzymes and other catalytic agents present in live food, which aid digestion, purify the blood, and keep the skin lustrous.

Mouth of Fish Incubator.

The majority lay eggs and leave them to their fate, but some carry their eggs in their mouths, taking no food while incubation is in progress, and subsequently caring for the young, which swim back into the mouth at the approach of danger.

Some build nests and vigilantly guard the eggs and fry; others bring forth their young alive.

Nearly always when the fry receive any care it is given by the father, but in mouth-breeding species it is usually the mother who gathers up the spawn, and among Cichlids, which include the Brazilian half-moon and Mesonauta, both sexes guard the eggs and fry.

In yet another species, the Chanchito, the eggs are hatched in a nest scooped in the sand by the male fish. When able to swim, the young rise and school, the mother leading the procession, the father bringing up the rear.

Hazards of Tropicals.

The only martyrdom to which the tropicals are subjected is accidental. Some expire from the cold. Occasionally an aquarium is left uncovered and the fishes, many species of which leap like salmon, clear the rim with one jump and dry up on the floor; or an aquarist concerned for their comfort may transfer their tank to a radiator and forget it until they are completely cooked.

Exportations of toy fishes from Germany into the United States began nearly 30 years ago, numerous species having been first successfully bred in that country from parent stock captured in its tropical haunts. Though many thousands now are propagated elsewhere, a large percentage of those owned in the United States being "home grown," considerable numbers still are shipped from Germany and South America.

The typical German traveling can is of tin, with a capacity of about four gallons, heavily insulated with felt wadding and paper and with an opening in the cover to admit air. Thousands of specimens have traveled safely across the ocean and into the interior of the United States in these cans, most of the shipping being done between May and October. For conveying by hand or shipping specimens shorter distances, one-gallon thermos jugs are used.

Europe boasts permanent and notable exhibits of toy fishes in half a dozen of its public aquariums—those of London, Amsterdam, Antwerp, Berlin, Frankfurt and Leipzig. The United States lays claim to two. That of the Lincoln park aquarium, in Chicago, consists of 58 tanks, showing many brilliant species from the Orient and South America. That of the Steinhart aquarium, in San Francisco, consists of 31 tanks of similar species and, in addition, many brought from Samoa and Hawaii, which display the vivid colors and the fantastic shapes that characterize the fishes of those waters today.

The new John G. Shedd aquarium, in Chicago, displays 65 balanced aquaria in a tropical-fish room maintained at a temperature of 80 degrees Fahrenheit, stressing beautiful setting and plant life rather than the rarity of the collection.

More Holidays
Taxes
Bad Habits

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE
WHAT the people are really trying to achieve is for every day to be the Fourth of July, Christmas, Labor day, Washington's birthday, Sunday, Mother's day, New Year's day—holidays merging into each other; every morning's sun to light up a new day when we will have nothing to do but get in our cars and attend a picnic, liberty rally, or show. Of course, a few must work, to operate filling stations, hot dog stands and the like. That can be attended to by making slaves of the rich we capture and putting them to work.

The excuse for public extravagance in the United States is that only the well-to-do pay taxes, and that taxation is the quick and proper punishment for scoundrels. . . . If the reader will call on me I will show him the poorest man I have ever known. He lost his home lately through a tax sale after paying $836 in taxes on it during a long and struggling ownership. He had eight lots. They were assessed at $100 each, although he originally paid only $60 for all of them; at no time during his ownership were the lots worth half the amount at which they were assessed year after year.

I do not know how much longer I shall be here. I have a shorter expectation than many others, being older, but I am determined while here to pursue the course best calculated to produce most comfort.

I am still able to keep my hands out of the fire and prevent unnecessary and painful burns; I am still able to avoid shooting those of my neighbors with whom I disagree, or breaking in to their houses. Such actions would land me in jail where accommodations are poor; I can better afford to practice honesty and remain at home with all its natural discomforts. I hope to continue to the end to avoid other bad habits which do not pay; gormandizing, swearing, drunkenness, cheating, idleness.

I do not much fear punishment after I am dead, but have lively appreciation of the punishment threatening during the remaining days of my journey.

If I am extremely practical it is what life has taught me; I have encountered nothing to cause me to greatly respect visionary things.

In the old days, when there was a disaster at sea, the women and children were first given seats in the life boats (it has never made much difference what happens to men). Moderns are forgetting that gallantry. In Iowa mobs of armed farmers blocked the roads and would not let milk wagons pass on the way to town with necessary supplies for the women and children. There were plenty of food supplies in the country, town people were willing to pay for them, and farmers needed the money, but the farmers were mad and determined to starve women and children to show their indignation.

We are becoming worse than the Russians. The Russian peasants have always been willing to sell food supplies to town women and children, if paid for; the Russian town men went out into the country and took things before the peasants rebelled.

I believe the American farmers should rebel, but in the name of common sense why don't they jump on the politicians who have robbed them, instead of innocent women and children? God hasn't deserted us; it is our senses.

I know little of Sir John Falstaff except that he is acclaimed today as the world's favorite rogue. Sir John thought himself one of the few good men of his time, and said: "There live not three good men unchanged in England, and one of them is fat and grows old" (meaning himself). . . . Capt. William Kidd, another famous scoundrel, declared on the gallows he was a much wronged man. A book has lately been announced to prove that Captain Kidd was an eminent New Yorker, and a bold and capable navigator of high standing among the mercantile community in both Boston and New York; that the New York legislature voted him $750 for his services as a patriot; that a ship was given him by popular subscription because of his defense of liberty, and that he was hanged by guilty capitalists in England, because they knew that in his own city, where his virtue was known, he would have been acquitted.

A man named Norton is quoted as saying the only way that has ever been found to discover what honey tastes like, is to eat it.

I heard a doctor say of an ailing woman: "She is digging her grave with her teeth; I have warned her over and over, but can do nothing with her." . . . This surprised me: usually women are able to get along easier without things not good for them than men—every great feat of dieting I have heard of has been performed by a woman.

A fine old gentleman I once knew made his living by doctoring. He told me women always loved him or hated him.

LOOKING BACKWARD

50 Years Ago—May 1, 1884

The steam barge Manistique unloaded steel rail for the D. B. C. & A. railroad at this place last Saturday and Sunday.

Green Pack of AuSable was chosen a member of the State Central Committee at the Republican convention held at Grand Rapids.

A log was cut at the McBean mill which measured over five feet in diameter.

Over 100 men were on hand at the Prescott mill Monday morning when the six o'clock whistle blew, starting the season.

During the fore part of the week we were invited by Henry Watson of this place to take a trip to his farm in Wilber township. We were most agreeably surprised at the general appearance of the country and the richness of the soil which is admirably adapted to farming.

Mr. Scriber, who has charge of the farm, informs us that hay, peas, beans and oats are the most profitable crops. A few more years and the Tawasies will have a good healthy farming country back of them which is necessary to permanent prosperity.

The T. Goulait Bottling Works of AuSable carries a display advertisement in this week's Herald. All goods advertised are of superior quality.

A. Parfet's new hotel at East Tawas is nearing completion. Henry Clough has purchased the American house from Curry Bros.

Dr. H. A. Goodale made a trip to Roscommon to examine the oil regions and brought home a bottle of oil which he has on exhibition at his drug store. It does a man good to get out where there is a little excitement, so the doctor says.

Kenney Bros. of Alabaster commenced running their shingle mill this week.

The Western Plaster mills at Alabaster are running full blast. An average of 1,000 barrels per week will be calcined.

The new steam "nigger" was put in Prescott's mill this week.

Destructive fires prevailed through the northern part of the state this week.

Peter Roberts is erecting a business block at Oscoda.

The Hottis boys are clearing up their farm in Burleigh township at a rapid pace. They mean business.

Carpenters' hammers are heard on every side at Whittemore—a new general hardware store, a new residence for Mr. Kizer, and R. G. Allen is putting up a large building on the Whitney creek property.

Fishing is good at Johnson lake. We will try our luck in a few days.

25 Years Ago—Apr. 30, 1909

The D. & M. has recently put on a survey crew. Starting at the shale beds at Wilson, the termination of the line, they are working westward toward Hillman as rapidly as possible. Every indication bears evidence that the railroad will be extended to Hillman this year.

John L. Swartz has purchased the Willard J. Robinson grocery store at Tawas City, taking possession this week. F. W. Marzinski is managing the business with the assistance of Fred Swartz.

Jordan & Sourwine of Sherman have moved their mill to Marks, where they have a two hundred thousand foot cut.

The D. & M. road train began its season work last Wednesday. Stephen Klish of this city is foreman and Will Laidlaw timekeeper.

H. M. Schmitz of Saginaw is at Hale arranging to start the cheese factory about May 1.

The Erie & Michigan Ry. Co. received their new 56-ton locomotive this week and it will soon be in commission.

Plans are being made to organize a county association of Gleaner lodges. A rally will be held at Whittemore next Wednesday.

Rev. O. E. Moffet, pastor of the Tawas City Baptist church, is the author of an illustrated story appearing in the Christian Herald on the manners and customs of the Bedouin people.

The weather thus far has prevented the farmers from accomplishing anything in the line of spring work. Winter is still lingering with us.

Baldwin Lodge, I. O. O. F., of East Tawas celebrated the 76th anniversary of Oddfellowship last evening. A most enjoyable time was had.

Dance, Saturday night—Wigwam Tavern, Sand Lake. Good music. adv

VOL. VII MAY 4, 1934 NUMBER 49

History Lecturer:
"Can anyone tell me what makes the Tower of Pisan lean?"
Stout Lady: "I don't know or I'd take some myself."

Feeds we carry in stock: Corn cracked corn, coarse corn meal, oats ground oats, corn and oat chop, flour middlings, wheat bran, barley, buckwheat and wheat.

Parson: "Do you take this woman to be your lawful wedded wife till death do you part?"

Bridegroom: "Don't I get any time off for good behavior?"
Just received a shipment of timothy seed.

Waiter: "Customer says his steak is too small."
Manager: "Take it away and bring it back on a smaller plate."

On all feeds that are sold for fattening purposes excepting horses there is no tax. There is no retail tax on fertilizer and our seeds.

Mrs. Mulligan: "It sure does beat the Dutch how quick things travel now-a-days."
Mrs. O'Brien:

"What things?"
Mrs. Mulligan: "Yesterday I got a telegram from Patrick, in Chicago, and the paste on the envelope wasn't even dry yet."

We have just received a car of garden fertilizer and fertilizer for corn.

Anybody wishing cement—We have just received a truck load of Huron Portland cement.

If you use fertilizer on corn you get up to one-third more corn, it ripens two or three weeks earlier and is of better quality.

Celia waited impatiently in the shadow of the lilac bushes beside the gate at the end of the garden. Tom had said that he would come in half an hour. It seemed an eternity since she had crept quietly into the dark. If Tom shouldn't come . . .

She was frightened, desperate. The devil of doubt and his fifteen brothers marched in a fiendish procession through her mind.

Hugh was in love with Janie. Something had happened this afternoon. Janie had fallen downstairs. She wore, at supper, a bandage and a blissful smile. Celia hadn't needed to be told in words. Janie's face was enough and Hugh's expression as he pushed in her chair at the table. Janie had taken Hugh away from her. How had it happened? How could he prefer brown little Janie? Celia's nails bit sharp crescents into the palm of her hand.

She had to get away. She couldn't stay on in Mulberry Square with Father a cripple and Mother economizing and people talking and Hugh in love with Janie. Tom must take her away. California! She had never traveled. Only stupid trips with Great-aunt Rose. It might be pleasant. Tom had always loved her. Would he take her? He must.

She grew very fond of Tom as she waited for him in the shadow of the lilacs. He was, in his way, quite as good-looking as Hugh. Every one predicted a brilliant future for Tom. Senator McAllister, Governor McAllister, The Governor's Lady. She would advance Tom's career, be a perfect hostess, entertain distinguished people . . . "He owes it all to his wife. Lovely little thing!"

There were voices in the garden. Hugh and Janie walked towards her under the arbor. Celia drew back further into the shadow of the lilacs. "I'm going with you," Janie said as they passed very close to Celia. "Do you feel like driving that far?" "I'm going with you everywhere . . . always." Janie's voice was singing.

Celia felt very lonely, crouching there in the shelter of the bushes. It hurt her to see them walk together through the gate. Hugh's arm was around Janie; her head, with its white bandage, rested against his shoulder. Janie was secure. It was Celia who was frightened, desperate. How had it happened? Plain little Janie. Pretty Celia. Everything in the world was most decidedly wrong.

She heard the engine of the car they called "Horatius." She felt lonelier than ever . . . If you are pretty you can take what you want from life . . . That theory hadn't worked out very well. What was the matter with the world? "Celia . . ."

Tom had kept his promise. Relief surged into her heart. "Tom!" She gave him both of her hands. "What's the idea of having me meet you here?" He looked at her searchingly in the glow flickering in from the corner light. "I feel like Rachel's gentleman friend."

"Something has happened." The silver harp strings quivered. "Are you consulting me professionally?" he asked in the teasing voice which Celia could never quite understand. "You're trembling, dear." The teasing vanished. There was a tenderness in his voice. "Your hands are cold."

"I'm miserable," she said brokenly. "Tell me about it." Celia drew a long quivering breath. "Hugh is in love with Janie." She lifted her face, dampened with dew, wan and wistful. She thought that she must look very appealing.

"I know that," Tom said quietly. "So I must go away." Celia's hands crept up to her heart. "Janie is my dear little sister. Her happiness means everything in the world to me." "Celia, Celia!"

She drew away from him. Her head lifted proudly. "No one understands," she said in the patient voice of a martyr. "There is no one who understands." "I understand, my dear." There was only tenderness in Tom's pleasant voice. He drew her close to him. "Of course, I understand."

His gentleness disarmed her. "I am unhappy," she sobbed, knowing that with him she could not pretend. "Take me away with you. Please take me away from it all."

"The Scotch in me tells me to let you work it out alone," he said presently. Fear returned, a sinking sensation. "You wouldn't Tom?" "I couldn't," he amended. "The Irish in me has always loved you too much." "Then you will take me with you?" She waited breathlessly for his answer. "It seems like taking an unfair advantage—"

She swayed towards him. Her hair brushed his cheek. She felt him trembling. She knew that she had won. "Yes," he said. "I'll take you with me. I'm feeling all Irish tonight."

II

"Janie!" Janie, roused from a pleasant dream, opened her eyes with a start. She fancied that some one had called her. Dreaming, of course. She glanced at the illuminated dial of the clock. Quarter of three! She turned over, yawned, burrowed her head in the pillow. "Janie!"

"This time she sat up and listened. It wasn't a dream. Hugh was calling her. He was rapping at the door. "Janie!" "Yes?" she answered. "Come to the telephone, dear."

Hugh was calling her "dear" in that tender intimate way. She forgot to wonder why some one should be telephoning for her at a quarter of three in the morning. Hugh was calling her "dear"! She sat on the edge of the bed, drowsy, ecstatic, totally unconscious of the chill in the air. "It's long distance. Hurry, dear."

She tucked her toes into tiny slippers, fastened the cord of her quilted kimono and opened the door. Hugh went downstairs with her. She didn't wonder much about the telephone call. He loved her. That was the only matter of any importance in all the world. "Hello," she called drowsily into the transmitter. Celia's voice answered from somewhere very far away. Celia's news, somehow, did not seem tremendously exciting. Janie talked for a few minutes. She placed the receiver on the hook. She glanced up at Hugh.

"Celia is married," she said. "Married!" Hugh echoed the word and yawned again. "She and Tom were just married," Janie explained. "Somewhere down in Maryland."

"They're leaving tomorrow for California," Janie added. "Celia said she left a note for me." "Celia would," Hugh actually smiled. "Where did she leave it?" he asked. "Under the bowl of lilies-of-the-valley on the piano."

"Appropriate." Hugh's smile broadened into a grin. "Celia would," he repeated. The note was short. "Janie-darling, "Now that I know how matters are, there is nothing left for me to do except go away. Your happiness means more to me than anything else in the world. Tom seems to need me. I shall go with him. Don't let any thought of me sadden your happy hours."

"Celia." "It sounds sad, doesn't it?" Janie nestled closer to Hugh and brushed her cheek against the shoulder of his dressing gown. "Artistically sad," Hugh said drily.

There was quiet in the living room. Janie knew why Celia had done it. She couldn't bear that anyone should think Hugh had preferred her. She hoped that Celia would be happy. It didn't seem fair to Tom. But Tom, she thought, could take care of himself. Celia could never deceive him with her poses. It might, after all, be a very good thing for Celia. "What are you thinking?" Hugh asked softly.

"I don't think Tom really needs her," Janie answered. "But the Irish in him has always loved her. He must have been Irish tonight." "Will your father mind?" Hugh asked, stroking with a caressing finger the peak of her brows. "Father likes Tom," Janie answered thoughtfully. "Mother will probably be upset because of old Thomas and all." She glanced up at him, an anxious question in her eyes. "Do you mind, Hugh?"

"Poor Celia!" he said gently. The last small lingering doubt vanished forever. Janie sighed blissfully. The question was answered. There was peace in her heart.

CHAPTER IX

Father was coming home! That was the first thought which popped into Janie's head as she opened her eyes one morning late in June. She pattered over to the window and curled herself up on the seat. The sun was shining and the sky was a lovely blue. Father was coming home! Uncle Bradford was to drive into the city to meet them. Janie hugged her pink pajama knees. Father would be home for dinner at one o'clock! "Isn't it nice it's such a beautiful day?" she said to Hugh at breakfast. "Great!" He swung her up from the floor and kissed her brow where the chestnut hair dipped in a peak.

"You mustn't, Hugh," she protested, liking it very much. "Why not?" "It isn't dignified." "It's nice." He set her down in the chair at the head of the table behind the coffee urn. "Now, Mrs. Kennedy," he said with a crinkly smile, "you can be as dignified as you like." The brightness faded out of her face. It was grave and very anxious. "Don't call me that," she said, her voice catching a little. "Don't you like the name?" Hugh pretended to be offended. "It's a lovely name." She looked up at him with the sunshine slanting in across her hair, a brown little girl with a shining look in her wide-set hazel eyes. "Only it scares me. I'm afraid something will happen. I'm afraid it can't possibly be true."

"It is true, Janie," he said gravely. "I love you, little fellow." Janie glanced around the familiar old dining room bright this morning with sunshine, at Kiltie curled up on the floor beside her chair, at Mrs. Quillen puffing in with a plate of muffins, at Hugh smiling down at her with a tender expression in his ruddy brown eyes. She thought that today Father and Mother were coming home. She drew a long deep breath. "If Heaven is any nicer than this," she said in a hushed sort of voice, "I simply couldn't stand it."

The old brick house was filled all morning with a great bustling and stir. Janie scurried about in a frenzy of excitement with the small black dog at her heels. There was only one thing to mar her happiness. It didn't seem right that Celia should be so far away. On one of her frequent trips

"My husband had to stop at the office," Celia, before the mirror, repaired the ravages of Janie's enthusiastic greeting. "He sent me on in a taxi."

"Your husband?" Janie echoed. "It seems so strange." She searched Celia's face to see if she were really happy. She appeared to be. Celia looks like the cat that swallowed the canary, Janie thought. There are feathers all over her chin. "We're going to be friends, Hugh?" Celia extended a slim gloved hand.

"Of course," Hugh took the hand she offered, bent to kiss her lightly on the cheek. "The tan is becoming," he said. "You look almost real." "Tom adores beaches," Celia remarked with the wifely air of criticizing her husband in the most dulcet of tones. "He's as brown as an Indian."

"Did you know Father and Mother were coming home today?" Janie, to the detriment of the violets, was embracing Celia again. "What a little cyclone you are!" Celia gently disentangled Janie's arms. "Tom knew. He simply dragged me away from California. We flew part of the distance. Tom is a masterful man."

Celia looked to be happy. She greeted Tom prettily when he arrived half an hour later at the old brick house. Tom was obviously very proud of his beautiful wife. It was quite as obvious that he did not intend to let her rule him. His manner towards Celia was still half tender and half teasing. A good thing for Celia, Janie thought, and a blessed good thing for Tom.

They all talked at once. In the excitement, the real event of the day was temporarily overshadowed. Celia, since her first birthday, had contrived, on every occasion, to hold the center of the stage. "The clock was striking twelve when Great-uncle Charlie bounced into the room. "They're coming," he announced with his air of suppressed excitement increased a hundredfold. "My sainted Aunt Maria! I'm glad I'm not asleep!"

These extracts from a bulletin of the National Geographic society vividly bring to mind the glamorous days of the winning of the West. A marker is to be placed at Ingalls, Kan., as a memorial to Jebediah Smith, one of the pioneers. The bulletin says: Sunburnt, long-whiskered traders and trappers in buckskins and moccasins came into old Franklin to brag of their adventures and scatter their quick-earned profits. They made the river bottom ring with nightly waltz, with rough-and-tumble fights.

Rich St. Louis bankers, stirred by news of big profits in the newly opened Santa Fe trade, rubbed elbows in Franklin with buck-skinned mountain men and returning freighters. And in all men's mouths were new place names—Yellowstone, Columbia, Taos, Rio Grande. America was in the making. Seattle, Denver, San Francisco—they had yet to be built and christened. The Yosemite, the Grand Canyon, Salt Lake—the East had never even heard of them. Hardly a handful of white settlers then where millions now make their homes. Arizona, Nevada, California—their stupendous wealth of gold, silver and copper was not even suspected. Yet, in all the history of civilization, no region was ever to see such swift and amazing transition from wilderness to populous empire of richness and power. It can never happen again; no empty place is left on earth where it could happen.

Today a speedy motor highway ties St. Louis to Kansas City. It sweeps through fading Franklin, wherein Kit Carson's youth the trail began. Over it parlor busses hum, running as far in 20 minutes as ox teams went in a day. Now men watch market reports or play golf where their forebears watched for Indians or tinkered with mine traps.

From a spot near where Kit Carson stitched horse collars and bellybands, a big highway bridge leads off to span the Missouri. Here busses and motor tourists stop for gas. Men get out to stretch their legs or buy a ginger ale. Across the Big Muddy stands Boonville, named for Daniel, whose sons whittled ramrods from Missouri hickory and made salt from the deer licks, packed it in hollow logs, and floated it down to St. Louis.

There was a rush and a scramble towards the door. They gathered in the open doorway. People were assembling from all parts of the Square. "You'd think it was Lindbergh!" Tom exclaimed. "It's a great day in the Square," Hugh said quietly. "I wish they'd hurry!" Celia was dancing up and down.

Janie said nothing at all. She just clung tightly to Hugh's arm, a lump in her throat, happy tears on her lashes. Father was coming home! Uncle Bradford's car turned into the Square. It seemed an eternity before it stopped in front of the old brick house. There was Stoney on the front seat with Uncle Brad. There was Aunt Rhoda. There was Mother in a new blue hat, smiling and waving her hand. There between them was Father, thin and pale but smiling, too, and waving his hand at them.

Stoney opened the door of the car. Aunt Rhoda stepped out. Mother followed, Mother not quite so plump but pretty still and wearing a new blue coat. Stoney would have to lift Father, of course. Janie felt that she couldn't bear it to see Stoney carry Father up the steps. She hid her face, against Hugh's arm. The arm was shaking a little. She knew that Hugh was minding it dreadfully, too. She pressed her eyes tightly against the tweed of his sleeve.

"Praise Gawd!" That was Rachel's camp-meeting voice. It indicated that something of great importance had happened. Mrs. Quillen was booming. Celia was crying. Tom was exclaiming. "Look, Janie dear," Hugh whispered in a choked-up sort of voice. Janie lifted her eyes from his arm. They widened with surprise. A wave of happiness rushed over her which almost bore her away. Father was walking! Using a cane, leaning on Stoney's arm, Father was walking towards them, mounting the steps of the old brick house.

The Mayor's Suitcase

By B. C. CRAVEN

THE train pulled into the Craryville station and pulled out again. In the brief instant that it paused, two suitcases were tossed off and two passengers descended.

The bags were very similar—of brown leather with corners reinforced in brass—but their owners were as unlike as a rose and an elm tree. One was Miss Margaret Hawthorne, bound for a dance at the Craryville Country club; the other, young Simon Baldwin, mayor of Mansfield, guest of honor at the chamber of commerce banquet at the Hotel Mohawk.

At the baggage-room counter they nearly bumped elbows yet neither was actually aware of the other. Margaret was intent on her imminent meeting with a recently acquired fiancé, one Cyrus Underhill, while his honor was mulling over the climax of the speech he was scheduled to make.

Yet it was not very long afterward that each was reminded forcibly of the other. Margaret, who had been asked to spend the week-end with Cyrus' Cousin Amelia, had gone up to her room and, kneeling on the floor, opened the suitcase and flung back the cover, only to utter a little shriek of consternation.

There lay within, carefully folded, a man's tuxedo; a pleated shirt; a collar; a black unmade bow tie; two spotless handkerchiefs. Vaguely she recalled that there had been another passenger to alight from the train besides herself.

Well, there was a remote possibility that he might have discovered sooner than she the mistake and that, had he done so, he might have returned her bag at once to the station. Margaret looked over the contents of the suitcase before her, but there was nothing to help her establish the identity of the man to whom they belonged.

Hastily, she put on her hat and coat again, went downstairs, and with a hurried word of explanation which Cousin Amelia only half understood flew out of the house and down the street to the corner where presently she caught a car.

Margaret had not yet seen Cyrus. But then she had not expected to. In the very letter which the postman had handed her that morning, as she was leaving the house, he had said that pressure of work at the office would probably detain him until seven or eight o'clock.

The baggage master proved a disappointment. No, no one had returned any suitcase. No, he could not possibly say who had hers. There had been several. "Are you looking for somebody, miss?" the young bootblack who ran a stand on the platform had sauntered in and was trying to get the drift of the conversation.

"I am looking for the owner of this suitcase," said Margaret. The youngster walked around the article in question, hands in his pockets. "I sure have seen that very grip before," he said earnestly. "It belongs to his honor, the mayor of Mansfield!"

"Mayor of Mansfield! But this is Craryville!" "Well, he's a great traveler. Speeches and dinners all over the country. I used to be in the Mansfield station and every time he was going anywhere the mayor would get a shine from me."

"But how can I—why Cy?" If Margaret looked for Cyrus to take her in his arms, she was disappointed. Nor could her amazement at his unexpected appearance blind her to the fact that something was the matter. "Why, Cy, wherever did you spring from?"

"I called the house, Margaret, to see if you had arrived safely," said Cyrus stiffly. "Cousin Amelia said you had gone back to the station and that right after you left a man had telephoned from the Hotel Mohawk and said he must talk with you at once!"

Margaret clutched her fiancé's arm. "Oh, he must be waiting there. Call a taxi, Cy. It's the mayor of Mansfield!" But Cyrus did not budge. "Just why should the mayor of Mansfield, or for that matter, the governor of the state, be waiting at the Hotel Mohawk for the girl I am supposed to be engaged to?"

"How masculinely stupid!" Margaret thought. But there was no time to waste. "Get a taxi at once, dear," she insisted. "And I'll explain all about it on the way." Twenty minutes later Margaret was talking with the mayor himself. "I'm so sorry, Miss Hawthorne, that you should have gone to all this trouble. I wished to make sure you were really at that address before dispatching a boy with your suitcase."

"But how," inquired Margaret, "did you know about that address at all?" "There was a letter on the very top," said his honor, with a smile, "from Cyrus. Believe me, however, I skipped everything but the address at the very end!"

LONG-LIVED PENSIONERS

The king's bad bargain is the name bestowed on a civil servant who lives to enjoy his pension beyond the average limit, says London Tit-Bits. According to statistics a male pensioner may expect to live fifteen years after retirement at sixty, while the average woman may hope to live until she is seventy-eight.

Site of the Grand Coulee Project, on the Columbia

MORE than 4,000 men will be given jobs on the Grand Coulee project on the Columbia river in the state of Washington. This power development project which has been described as "the Muscle Shoals of the Northwest" is being built and will be operated by the federal government. The Public Works administration has made an allotment of $15,000,000 to the bureau of reclamation, Department of the Interior, to carry the work forward. The dam and power plant will cost about $63,000,000. The picture shows a portion of the east excavation. The dam will create a lake in the river 50 miles long. It will be built to a height of 335 feet. It is proposed to install eight generating units with a capacity of 700,000 horsepower.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE SQUEAKY VOICE

"WHO'S that?" Peter Rabbit pricked up his ears and stared up at the tops of the trees in the Old Orchard.

Instantly Jenny Wren popped her head out of her doorway. She cocked her head one side to listen, then looked down at Peter. "I don't hear any strange voice," she snapped. "The way you are staring, Peter Rabbit, one would think you were hearing something new and worth while."

Just then there were two or three sharp, squeaky notes from the top of one of the trees. "There!" cried Peter. "There! Didn't you hear that, Jenny Wren?"

"For goodness sake, Peter Rabbit, you don't mean to say that you don't know whose voice that is?" cried Jenny. "That's Rosebreast. I didn't suppose there was anyone who didn't know that sharp, squeaky voice. It rather gets on my nerves. What anybody wants to squeak like that for when he can sing as Rosebreast can, is more than I can understand."

At that very instant Mr. Wren began to scold as only he and Jenny can. Peter looked up at Jenny and winked slyly. "And what anyone wants to scold like that for when he can sing as Mr. Wren can is too much for me," retorted Peter. "But you haven't told me who Rosebreast is." "The grosbeak of course, stupid!" spluttered Jenny. "If you don't know Rosebreast the Grosbeak, Peter Rabbit, you certainly must have been blind and deaf ever since you were born. Listen to that! Just listen to that song!"

"Oh!" cried Peter. "Isn't He Lovely?"

Peter listened. That song was coming from the very tree from which had come those squeaky notes a few minutes before. Peter looked puzzled. "Do you mean Welcome Robin's song?" he asked sheepishly.

"No, I don't mean Welcome Robin's song," snapped Jenny. "What good are a pair of long ears if they can't tell one song from another? That song may sound something like Welcome Robin's, but it's different, and it's better. That is Rosebreast singing, and there he is right in the top of that tree. Isn't he handsome?"

Peter looked up to see a bird nearly the size of Welcome Robin. His head, throat, and back were black. His wings had patches of white on them. But his breast made Peter catch his breath with a little gasp of admiration. It was a beautiful rose red. The rest of him underneath was white. It was Rosebreast the Grosbeak. "Oh!" cried Peter. "Isn't he lovely?"

NEW DISHES

WITH macaroni, spaghetti and noodles pushing themselves into our menus from soup to dessert, we are obliged to note some new ways of serving these most wholesome foods, if we keep up to date.

Spaghetti Alaska.
Cook one-half pound of spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Drain, cut into pieces and chill. Remove the bones and skin from a large can of salmon and shred into fine pieces. Add one teaspoon of grated onion, one tablespoon of lemon juice, one-half cup of chopped celery and season to taste with salt. Pour boiling water over a package of lemon gelatin, using one cup of water, stir until dissolved, then add three-fourths of a cup of cold water and set aside to thicken. Mix one-third of a cup of mayonnaise with the salmon and gelatin and pour into a mold and chill. Whip one cup of cream until stiff, add two tablespoons of vinegar, salt and paprika and the cooked spaghetti. Unmold the salad and serve on a bed of lettuce with the spaghetti and cream in a ring around it. Sprinkle with paprika.

Fried Macaroni Slices.

For variety this makes a most tasty breakfast dish, served with broiled slices of bacon. Cook one-half pound of macaroni in salted water until tender. Drain and blanch, add two beaten eggs, one-half teaspoon of salt and one-half cup of milk. Press into a greased pan and bake in a hot oven for an hour. When cold unmold, slice and fry a golden brown.

Spaghetti Muffins.

Cook two ounces of spaghetti until tender, drain and cut into half-inch pieces. There should be three-fourths of a cup. Sift one-fourth of a cup of sugar, one teaspoon of salt, five teaspoons of baking powder and two cups of flour. Mix spaghetti with one beaten egg, three tablespoons of melted butter and one cupful of milk. Add the liquids to the dry ingredients and beat well. Bake in greased muffin pans in a hot oven for 30 minutes.

BRITAIN SEEKS ISLE OF TIMOR?

Needed as Link in World Air Route.

The British government is reported by a news dispatch from London to be interested in Timor island of the East Indies as a possible sea and air base. An offer of $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 may be made for the island, it is declared. The eastern part of Timor and a tiny nick of the western part now belongs to Portugal, and the remainder to The Netherlands.

"Timor is the eastern 'jumping-off place' of the Sunda islands, that chain of land spots which is strung out from Sumatra eastward toward the north coast of Australia," says a bulletin from the Washington (D.C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society. "It is about 300 miles from the Timor coast to Australia. Timor is thus a vital link in the Europe-Australia air route."

"Although Timor had a Portuguese settlement on its coast more than a century before Capt. John Smith with his band of English colonists disembarked at Jamestown; and although the Dutch landed or the island about the time of the Capt. John Smith-Pocahontas life-saving episode in Virginia, Timor shows little effect of its contact with the western world."

"About 300 miles long and averaging 60 miles in width, the island has but few settlements that even can be called townships. Even Koepang, capital and largest port on the Dutch or western end of the island, has only 5,500 inhabitants; and Dili, which is the chief town in the eastern, or Portuguese portion of the island, can account for only 3,500 permanent residents.

"There are no railroads on Timor and one of the best roads of any great length is a horse trail that traverses the island. No cable links it with other islands. Steamships that touch other East Indian islands stop at Timor ports to deliver cotton goods, oil and wine, and to take away coffee, copra, hides, cacao, shells, wax and sandalwood which are the leading exports. And now and then an occasional visitor of the beaten tourist path walks down a steamship gangplank bent upon roaming over the mountains and through valleys where live most of the island's 800,000 inhabitants—largely a racial mixture of Malayan, Polynesian, and Papuan blood.

"The natives are divided into many tribes, ruled by chiefs whose jealousy of neighboring leaders, and land-grabbing habits, frequently have caused bloody clashes. Bows and arrows and spears are the war weapons of the natives. For hunting game, they use blow guns and small darts.

"While the loin cloth still constitutes the entire wardrobe of the men of some of the tribes, other tribesmen wear two-piece cotton garments and turbans. The women don colorful sarongs and shawls. From the appearance of exposed arms and other portions of the natives' bodies, it is evident that tattoo artists are kept busy in Timor. The tattooing is done with crude instruments and dyes which sometimes cause blood poisoning and death.

"There appear to be no limits, other than wealth and inclination, to the number of wives a tribesman may have. The native home is a round, one-room, wooden structure with a roof of grass or palm-leaf thatch, and not too clean inside or out. To appease the angry gods and to avoid destruction by evil spirits, the tribesmen place palm branches before fruit trees, houses and growing crops. Agriculture is carried on with crude, primitive implements; and, although there are many streams on the island, irrigation is hardly known. During the dry season vegetation bows to the torrid sun even to the extent of the trees losing their leaves.

"If the reported purchase is consummated it will not be Great Britain's first possession of Timor. In 1797 the British attempted to drive out the Dutch, then dominantly in control of the island. At first they failed. Later the British succeeded, and the Dutch flag was lowered. Portuguese influence then swept the island until 1814, when, by treaty, the Dutch resumed their old status.

"Today the Dutch portion of Timor is about 5,000 square miles with 360,000 inhabitants. The Portuguese portion is 7,335 square miles with about 442,000 people. Both portions are mountainous. Many peaks are more than 6,000 feet high. Mount Rameau, near the center of the island, rises 9,600 feet."

Playtime Fashions for the Well-Dressed Tot

In the good old summertime, young fashion plates become sun-worshippers!

And for the fastidious two to eight-year-old, who wishes to devote all attention to boating, bathing, and basking, rather than to seams and buttons, here are the newest creations in playtime fashion.

Not following, but leading the vogue of the elders, the youngster these days who would be really in the swim, must have a two-piece bathing suit in the newest all-wool knitted weave, gay in white, red, or navy. Felt tabs attaching top piece to shorts add the jauntiest of fashion touches.

And what more fitting fashion for the fastidious sun-worshiper than a seersucker sun-suit as gayly striped as a stick of candy. Red, green, or blue striped suits—with fitted waistline and a catch-all pocket which is perfectly indispensable for precious stones gathered along the beach, will be worn this year wherever two to eight-year-olds are gathered for a quiet game of leap frog.—Carolyn T. Radnor Lewis in Child Life Magazine.

Italian "Autostrades"

The building of roads reserved for motorists originated in Italy, and the word "Autostrade," coined for these concrete speedways, is being adopted by other countries. At present there are more than 153 miles of Italian autostrade used for heavy lorry traffic and also for speedy private cars. The first of these was completed in 1925 in the neighborhood of Milan, and there are now other "motor-only" highways near Rome, Naples and Florence, the latest being between Padua and Venice. The longest autostrade connects Genoa, Turin and Milan and is nearly seven miles in length, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. High-speed motor roads have been frequently suggested for this country, but so far the government has been opposed to their construction.

"spring fever" time is here

...and what does it mean to you?

JUST THIS: if you feel listless, run-down, appetite dull, with a weak, let-down feeling...perhaps nervous and worn out...why not make an effort to "snap out" of this condition? Try toning up your appetite...increasing your red-blood-cells...the best way to be happy. You need a tonic—not just a so-called tonic...but a tonic that will tone up your blood. S.S.S. is specially designed to do this for you. Unless your case is exceptional you should improve as your oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin increases. At all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The larger size is more economical. © The S.S.S. Co.

A large crowd attended the P. T. A. meeting on Tuesday evening. The business meeting preceded the program. The present officers were re-elected for another year. The play given, a school board reviewing applicants for a teacher's position in the first act and a session of school by the new teacher, was well presented and its comedy enjoyed. This is the last meeting of the year. The last three meetings have been held in the district schools. Arbor Day is being observed in all the schools in Hale on Tuesday, May 8th.

Scotty and Popeye entertain each Sunday afternoon and evening at the Wigwam Tavern, Sand Lake. No charge.

The funeral services for Thomas Harris of East Tawas, for many years a resident of Hale, were held in the Baptist church on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. Rev. Frank Metcalf of Tawas City officiating. The church was filled with old friends and neighbors of the deceased, who was esteemed for his gentle, kindly nature and many estimable qualities of character. The remains were laid to rest in Evergreen cemetery.

Lloyd Shellenbarger was operated on in Bay City on Tuesday for appendicitis. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cap. Shellenbarger, were with him and favorable reports are received if his condition.

Martin and Lee Brown of Pontiac, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Culbert of Norwalk, Ohio, and K. Culbert of Saginaw were guests at the R. D. Brown home this week.

The two-year-old son of Jesse Mothersel, who recently moved here from Oscoda to the Fred Livingstone farm, passed away on Monday from a throat infection. Sympathy is extended to the family in their bereavement.

The game will be with Harrisville at the home diamond and will start at 3:30. The boys have had only a few days of practice but are working hard to get in condition. The probable line-up for the game will be as follows: Catcher—Willard Wright; pitcher—Albert Quick or Bill Mallon; 1st base—Earl Davis; 2nd base—George Laidlaw; shortstop—Marvin Mallon; 3rd base—John Brugger; outfielders—Herbert Zollweg, Wray Cox or Kenneth Frank, George Cholger or Robert Scholts. If the game permits, many of the substitutes may get a chance.

A tennis tournament, similar to the one worked out last year, is being planned. The various divisions include boys' singles and doubles, girls' singles and doubles, and the mixed doubles. Marvin Mallon will defend his title in the boys' singles, while Earl Davis and John Brugger will try to repeat in the boys' doubles. The girls' singles will be defended by Agnes Roach. The partners for the other two divisions have not as yet been decided upon.

The Senior class, with a percentage of 99.2, led the attendance in the high school during the past month. The percentage of attendance for the whole school was 95.5.

The Senior class recently voted to hold their Commencement exercises in the Baptist church.

On Friday evening, May 4, Evelyn Bigelow and Richard King will compete with approximately twenty-two other high schools in the district oratorical and declamatory contest. These two defeated about twelve competitors in the sub-district contest in April. Evelyn and Richard will motor to Traverse City with Mrs. Wm. Leslie Friday afternoon, where the contest will be held.

Gloria Wright and Wava St. Martin visited us one day this week. Elsie Wozahn has been absent all the week on account of illness.
