TAWAS CITY WILL VOTE ON BOND ISSUE MAY 28

TAWAS CITY

$12,600 BOND DECISION IS UP TO VOTERS

Mayor A. M. Boomer Gives Opinion On Sewage Disposal Plant

"The benefits Tawas City will receive through making the new sewerage system available for use are so great that it is difficult to describe them in a few words. However, increased health protection, added comfort and convenience, greater tourist attraction, and work relief are some of the benefits the city may expect."

Alfred M. Boomer, mayor of Tawas City, commented thus when interviewed Wednesday concerning the proposed municipal sewerage disposal plant. The disposal plant is vital to the working of the sewerage system that has been under construction here since December 15.

It is estimated that a bond issue of $12,600 will be necessary to build the sewage disposal plant, intersecting sewers, and a sewage pumping station. An election to decide whether bonds to that amount shall be issued was authorized by the Tawas City council at its regular meeting May 7. The election will be held Monday, May 28. Only taxpayers on real or personal property—and the wife or husband of a taxpayer—will be allowed to vote at the election.

Mayor Boomer stated that the sewerage disposal plant, if approved by the voters, should be ready for use sometime next fall. Construction of the plant will provide further work for local men under the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

It is expected also that additional skilled labor for men not on the relief rolls will be given through the F. E. R. A. in order to speed up the work.

That the sewerage system already constructed will be quite useless unless the sewerage disposal plant is built was an assertion of Mayor Boomer's. He explained that state laws prohibit dumping sewage into the Tawas river and that the only possible means of disposal is through the proposed plant.

The sale value of city property—even if property not connected to the sewerage system—will be considerably increased when the disposal plant is erected, Mayor Boomer believes.

"As for offering any real competition with other cities for tourist trade," the mayor said, "Tawas City will be absolutely out of the picture unless the sewerage system is completed." He referred to nearby cities now constructing sewerage systems and showed that they will have a distinct advantage in attracting tourist trade if Tawas City does not complete its project.

Every Tawas City resident knows how the sewerage system will bring greater health protection, the mayor said, and allow modern conveniences in local homes.

The bonds that will be issued upon a favorable vote at the election May 28 will be paid off within 20 years. The interest rate on the bonds will be four per cent.

George W. Francis of the Francis Engineering company, Saginaw, attended an informal meeting of the city council Wednesday night to discuss future arrangements for the sewerage system and to secure further information relative to the application for P. W. A. waterworks which is now under consideration in Washington, D. C.

New "Tarzan" Picture Depicts Adventure

That penetrating cry of Johnny Weismuller's as the Ape Man will be heard from the Family Theatre screen on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 13-14-15, in "Tarzan and His Mate," with Maureen O'Sullivan once more as Johnny's co-star in this dramatic tale of jungle life.

Of the first Tarzan cast, aside from Johnny and Maureen, only Neil Hamilton is at hand, for it will be remembered all of the other adventurers lost their lives on the screen. If there is a third edition of the tale Neil will be among the missing, as he is killed off in the second version. The new picture takes up the thread of the story where the first left off, and relates how the two explorers, played by Hamilton and Paul Cavanagh, organize a safari to bring out the ivory from the elephants' happy hunting ground, although Neil is primarily interested in finding Maureen and inducing her to return to England. He and his party locate Tarzan and his mate and also the ivory, but fail to bring either away from the jungle.

Local Students Compete in District Speech Contest

The Tawas City schools were indeed fortunate this year by being able to send two winners of the sub-district oratorical contest to participate in the district contest. The representatives of the school, Evelyn Bigelow and Richard King, and their coach, Miss Crosby, together with their drivers, Mrs. Wm. Leslie and Miss Isabelle King, journeyed to Traverse City last Friday where the district contest was held in the evening.

The state is divided into twelve oratorical districts, this being number three. District number three is the largest in the state, as it contains a total of twenty-two schools, and extends from Cheboygan to Traverse City. As there is no state contest in this speech activity, none of the contestants will compete more.

As mentioned previously, all of the contestants had formerly won first place in the various sub-districts. Evelyn, rendering "The True Aaron Burr," and Richard, giving "The Valley of Bones," had received first honors in the contest which had been held at East Tawas on the first Friday in April. Richard, we understand, was somewhat surprised at Traverse City to have a young lady from Onaway precede him with the same declamation. Richard received second place.

All of the contestants received a dictionary which was presented by the Detroit News.

Supervisor Paul Kelleter of the Huron National Forest, T. F. Marston of Bay City, and others also gave short talks concerning the many advantages which the Huron Shore section of Michigan holds as a summer playground, and the benefits to local business which would arise through stimulation of tourist interest in the locality.

Locals Win Practice Game With Miner Grove, 16-11

Tawas City easily defeated the Miner Grove baseball team in a practice game at the local athletic field Sunday. The final score was 16 to 11.

Manager Neumann used every player present in the contest and they scored runs in every inning except the second and fifth.

Miner Grove took a 3 to 1 lead in the second, but Tawas City quickly made up the deficit by scoring three runs in the third and four in the fourth and never headed afterwards. "Walt" Moeller, ace hurler of last year, pitched the first two frames, after which Laidlaw and Ross divided the hurling assignment for the remainder of the game. Sixteen players were used in all by Manager Neumann, with Noel, Laidlaw, Ross, Moeller, S. Roach and Zellweg doing the heavy hitting. IOSCO LEGION MEETS AT EAST TAWAS

Veterans Bill Legislation Is Explained By Keffen At County Gathering

Leslie Keffen, national committeeman and past commander of the American Legion, explained the new legislation affecting disabled veterans at a meeting of the Iosco County Council of the American Legion held Wednesday evening at East Tawas. Leslie Stonehouse, 10th district committeeman, of Bay City was also a speaker at the meeting. The three Legion posts of the county were well represented.

Keffen said that the so-called Veterans Bill, passed by the present Congress and much criticized, was misunderstood. The principle benefits went to underpaid governmental employees. The actual increases made to disabled veterans amounted to only $10,000,000. This benefited the thousands of cases of advanced tuberculosis and insanity which developed immediately following the war, but which, owing to the nature of the diseases, could not be definitely ascribed to military service. These cases had been cut off from compensation by the Economy Act.

John Thompson of Midland, who was present at the meeting, invited the members of Iosco county posts to attend the 10th district convention which will be held June 14 at that place.

Frank Jaynes of Twining invited the veterans of Iosco county and their wives to attend a Legion party at Twining next Tuesday evening. This party is to be sponsored by the Johnson-Day post of Arenac county.

It was decided to hold the next council meeting June 5 at Oscoda.

Softball Season Will Open Next Tuesday

Next Tuesday evening is the big night for the softball players in East Tawas and Tawas City, as that is the day the season opens.

Plans are being made to have a big parade and a regular flag raising with Mayor Evans doing his duty on the mound and Mayor Boomer of Tawas City doing the receiving. Mayor Evans has been practicing up, scouts declare, and has a mean ball. Mayor Boomer is still a dark horse and has been practicing in seclusion. Not much can be said of his ability as a catcher, although local wags in Bill Hatton's barber shop said he has the technique of Mickey Cochrane.

Rumors are in the wind that Bill Schill will head the parade, as in the last fourth of July spectacle, with his pinto horse, and will be followed by members of each team, the Legion drum and bugle corps, and other civic organizations. The affair is scheduled to start at about 6:30 p. m., and if the women folks miss their husbands at supper time Tuesday, a stroll over to the game at East Tawas will locate them.

Mysterious Isles Are Puzzle to Map-Makers

Play "Hide and Seek" and Elude Charting.

Washington. — Despite numerous steamer lanes and the even more numerous tracks of wandering freighters that crisscross the oceans of the world, there are still many islands seen only at intervals of years, and others that seem to elude the closest search. Some typical examples of these elusive islands are dealt with in a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"The world's newest mystery island has been discovered by an Eskimo captain, Takpak, of Point Barrow, Alaska," says the bulletin. "In 1931 he beached his small whaling sloop on an islet northeast of Point Barrow, a bit of land unmarked on any of the charts of that region. He was armed with a camera, and the photographs which he took show slightly rolling, moss-covered land dotted with many small ponds. Few heard of his discovery until the explorer, Stefansson, recently announced his belief in it. The island is too large to be ice, covered with rocks and soil, as some have suggested.

Annexed Mythical Land.

"Another island which has long baffled explorers received a visit the other day from the British sloop, Milford, bound for the Antarctic. Bouvet island, which the Milford reached after a stormy voyage, is an icy point of rock in the South Atlantic. It was first sighted in 1739, by a French naval officer who thought it a part of the Antarctic continent. Capt. James Cook later looked for it in vain, but proved, by sailing far to the south, that it existed at all it must be an island.

"Whaling captains in the early eighties reported finding not only Bouvet, but two other islands. These were named Lindsay and Thompson, and were marked on very recent maps. In fact, when Norway annexed Bouvet in 1927, Thompson was included in the claim. However, when the exploring steamer, Discovery II searched the region carefully in 1931, no trace was found of either Thompson or Lindsay, and they have since been erased from all charts.

"Although the polar regions have their share, the Pacific ocean is the real home of elusive islands. These islands come and go with a suddenness that is the despair of mapmakers and empire builders. For instance, there is little Sarah Ann, an inconspicuous dot in mid-Pacific. No one paid any attention to Sarah Ann until it was discovered from charts that she will be the only land in the path of the eclipse of the sun that will occur in 1937. An eclipse of the sun cannot be observed with accuracy from a boat, so astronomers were delighted to find Sarah Ann in such a convenient spot. What was their dismay to discover that the island does not appear on the latest charts, and has not been seen for over a decade.

Bobs Up and Down.

"And there is Falcon island in the Tonga group. Falcon has appeared and disappeared twice within the last century. The island is alternately created by the eruption of a submarine volcano, and worn away by the action of sea and weather. Each time Falcon appears, an official party puts out in a boat, plants a flag on the newborn land, and claims it in the name of the ruler of Tonga.

"The arbitrary behavior of these islands has its tragic side. When the island of Tuanaki, in the Cook group,

Influx of Twins Stirs Up Indian Medicine Men

Gallup, N. M.—Two pairs of Navajo twins in as many days on the Navajo reservation has set medicine men chanting and shaking rattles as they foresee an early end of the world.

Ancient Naski Nayah, survivor of the Mexican captivity and venerable medicine man of the tribesmen, explained that "all babies must be born before the end of the world. Now the births are coming in pairs and the end is near."

Until recently, Navajo twins have been exceedingly rare. Twin boys are held sacred and girls born in pairs are distinguished. Four sets of Navajo twins have been born at the Rehoboth Mission hospital east of here within the last year. Ten sets of twins have arrived at the mission within the last six and one-half years.

The belief of Naski Nayah that the world is facing an early end is shared by other medicine men of the tribe. Old men of the tribe all ready set to muttering prayers at the arrival of twin boys to the Charles Mannings were thrown into confusion and fear when the squaw of Simon Demons gave birth to a pair of daughters 48 hours later.

California Scientists to Try Jap Invention.

Berkeley, Calif.—Earthquake predicting devices, which, it is hoped, may enable scientists to foretell earth movements hours before they occur, are being tested at the University of California.

Patterned after a Japanese invention, the instruments are designed to measure infinitesimal tilting of the earth's surface, which Japanese seismologists claim they have noted before earthquakes.

The devices have been installed near the Hayward fault line along the lower slope of the Berkeley hills. Since the instruments were installed there have been no movements of any magnitude along the fault, Prof. Byerly, United States seismologist, said, and even if it should be proved that tilting is a precursor of earthquakes, years might be required to work out a

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

FARMER BROWN'S FRIENDS

AS PETER RABBIT sat admiring Rosebreast the Grosbeak, another bird appeared in the tree with Rosebreast.

"Who's that?" cried Peter.

"Mrs. Grosbeak, of course. Who else would it be?" sputtered Jenny, rather crossly.

"Never, never would I have guessed it," replied Peter. "She doesn't look the least bit like him except that she is the same size and shape."

This was quite true. There was no beautiful rose color about Mrs. Gros-teak. They certainly do love potato bugs. They eat some fruit, but on the whole, they are about as useful folk around the garden as any I know. Now run along, Peter Rabbit, and don't bother me any more."

Peter didn't run along right away. He sat around watching Rosebreast and Mrs. Grosbeak until he happened to look up to see Farmer Brown's Boy just starting down through the Old Orchard. Then Peter decided it was time for him to leave.

SUCH IS LIFE—Foolish Answers

Mako Is Fiercest of Finny Fighters

Gives Greatest Thrill in Fishing, Says Author.

New York.—When it comes to undiluted thrill in fishing there is, according to Zane Grey, nothing that swims which compares with the great mako of New Zealand waters.

In the eyes of Mr. Grey, who is regarded as one of the world's foremost anglers, the great mako is so swift and ferocious a fighter that it is more like a torpedo than a fish.

"Never in my life," writes Mr. Grey in the current issue of Natural History, journal of the American Museum of Natural History, "have I seen such a magnificent fish spectacle as his leaping. He is a stubborn, strong fighter, too, and must be put in a class by himself. While it cannot be proved against him that, like some sharks, he will stalk men, I know that when provoked or hurt he will kill, and that, if he is angry and tastes blood, he will become as ravenous as any shark."

A Leaping Fool. "One morning, trolling, we had one of the marvelous leaping mako strikes which makes this sport exciting. This mako, which weighed 486 pounds, struck our bait and came out in a magnificent leap, shining in the sunlight, a beautiful blue-and-white shark, thrilling to see. He dropped back in a huge splash and sounded.

"We ran as close as we dared, but nothing happened. I began to fear that this particular fish was not going to perform of his own accord. In cases like this I usually grow impatient and relax vigilance, when as a matter of fact, the thing is to be all the keener. After about a half hour more, we appeared to be getting the upper hand and had the mako close. Its big fin, sharp and triangular, cut the surface. We ran closer, hoping to get pictures of what happened at the gaff; and we were perhaps 200 feet away when the mako leaped unexpectedly.

"He came out slick and fast, without a splash, and as he swept upward, stiff as a poker, gleaming blue-white, with wide pectorals spread and huge tail curved, his great savage head narrowing to a spear point, he was assuredly a spectacle to fire any angler. Then came the second leap—a long, low greyhound bound over the sea, ending in a furious white splash as large as my boat. He shot out so close to our bow that he could have been touched, and he went up to half the height of our mast, 15 feet above the water, and turned in the air to smack down with a resounding roar. Then he split the water just opposite the cockpit and frightfully close. We waited, tingling with suspense, but he did not leap again.

Wore Himself Out. "All this happened in a few seconds. But he did not break out again. He stayed down and wore himself out in the succeeding half hour, so that when we finally hauled him up to the boat and got the gaff he had only one wag left.

"Our next notable experience with a mako occurred some days after that. We sighted one on the surface and circled him with a bait. He took it. That mako flashed straight for the boat, coming like a streak on the surface. He seized the rudder in his powerful jaws and churned the water into seething foam in his efforts to bite it off. It was iron, of course, and he could not do much damage, except to his teeth. Neither was he huge enough to tear the rudder off, as the sharks do at Suva. But he got away."

During the months of New Zealand fishing, Mr. Grey caught about 70 mako. Ten of these weighed about 400 pounds, while one weighed 590 pounds.

180 Mosques to Close Istanbul.—Owing to the decline in religious practices in Turkey, the number of mosques open for devotion will be reduced. Out of 500 temples, it is expected that 180 will be closed by next June. The clergy, muezzin and servers of the closed mosques will be split up among the ones remaining open.

OUR PROBLEM

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Whatever may be our attitude toward the security of western civilization, it is very certain that no drastic change will take place instantly. The verdict of history is that it has always taken a long time, centuries in some cases, for a civilization to become exterminated. The disintegration of a civilization is caused by certain forces which like the "mills of the gods grind slowly but they grind exceedingly small."

reserve in the moral order of her citizenship, and while this may be heavily drawn upon in a crisis, it is not readily exhausted.

The fear of a disintegrating civilization is due largely to the loss of faith in economic values. Many persons believe that when securities go to pieces and the value of money is discounted, the end is perilously near. The truth is that the stability of a civilization does not depend upon economic values. History informs us that many decadent civilizations were at their height economically when the crisis came.

It is not an economic problem but very definitely a racial and moral problem. By common consent, western civilization is attributable to the culture and character of the white race, and our real problem is its enduring quality. If through intermarriage the moral and cultural fiber of the white race is allowed to deteriorate there is grave danger ahead. If our inherited belief in monogamy should be supplanted by a code of morals which undermines the sanctity of the home and denies to children the right to be well-born, we shall face a serious menace. If the oriental interpretation of culture should undermine the stability of America's educational and religious institutions, we would be sailing our ship of destiny dangerously near the rocks. How long will western civilization be able to overcome the subtle influence of some of these destructive forces? True, it is no cause for immediate alarm but the fact that the permanence of our civilization is not an economic but rather a racial and moral problem, gives us cause for grave concern. Will the Caucasian or some other race ultimately dominate the world?

Howe About:

Silerius' Third Wife Minding Your Business American Waste

By ED HOWE

SO FAR as my reading goes no one has ever more candidly, intelligently or fairly discussed the relations of married couples than Silerius, who lived near the time of the most famous outrage on women recorded in history: that suffered by Sabine women who were carried off by invading soldiers. Some authorities claim Silerius himself was a general in the conquering army concerned, and that a screaming Sabine woman was delivered at his tent as his part of the loot.

As near as can be learned from the vague history of that time this woman, so violently courted, became the third wife of Silerius; and although carried from her own country to a strange one by a conqueror, with no other preliminary than being suddenly seized by rough invaders, she was so capable in looking after her own interests that her abductor later married her; indeed, she became prominent and respected in the inhospitable city in which her husband lived.

In his memoirs Silerius gives the impression that his third wife pleased him more than any of the others, to two of whom he was married with elaborate ceremonies, and after very sentimental courtship. In writing of his experiences with women, Silerius tells in a rather amusing way of the gentle and cunning arts his third wife exercised in bending him to her will, and I get the impression that she loved him more sincerely than any of the wives he acquired in a more conventional way.

What part of your attention do you give to your own business? Say you are merchant, lawyer, doctor, mechanic, farmer. What per cent of your enthusiasm goes to your business, and what per cent to politics, vacations, clubs, automobiling, radio, moving pictures, welfare work, social affairs? Many a good business has been wrecked by its head man neglecting it for other things. It is charged that one of the most notable of American commercial enterprises is on the rocks because its head, in receipt of an enormous salary, neglected it for outside activities. The same principle applies to those occupying fifteen, twenty or forty-dollar-a-week jobs. Very few Americans mind their own business.

A doctor connected with the government says that 71 per cent of the hospital cases now being cared for by the government were not cases that in any way could be traced to the great war; that the Veterans' Disability act was the greatest steal ever put over on the American people.

Here is another startling illustration of the waste and dishonesty in American public affairs; in this case, in relieving twenty-nine men honestly entitled to relief, the politicians, relieved seventy-one not entitled to it. The figures hold in everything else in American public affairs. I have no doubt that for every twenty-nine dollars the government necessarily spends in its operation seventy-one dollars are wantonly and villainously wasted. The only way for the government to properly balance the budget is to cut off 71 per cent of taxes already levied, and wasted, instead of adding new burdens.

I do not know just when, but some of these days I intend to confess I am as tired of my writing as others are, and no longer hold on to the coat tails of the drunken world in attempts to better it.

And in my final notice I think I shall pay the people who have dismissed me a good many compliments. Millions of them are admirable. My final message to them will be: "Keep the few good things you have accomplished, and try to accomplish a few more. All the comforts and pleasures we have come as a result of men succeeding in doing a little better."

When I know what women expect of men, I am willing to grant it. Just how much attention from men do women decide is proper? I have been in doubt at times. . . . There is in my town a woman who is very strict; she promptly resents the slightest familiarity from men, and frequently talks indignantly of their boldness. One day I learned, from the private talk of the women, that a friend of mine had squeezed her hand, and that she was very mad about it. Later, when I was in her company, the name of the bold wretch came up, and I felt that she would vigorously denounce him. She didn't know I had heard of the affront offered her, but I was certain she would express a very unfavorable opinion, knowing she was very strict. . . . And this was what she said: "He is the most entertaining man I ever met in my life."

I have long wondered that the doctrine called Communism has persisted through so many centuries, although every reasonably intelligent man acknowledges it is foolish and impractical. I think the explanation is we are all natural Communists. Children impose on parents, and everybody else, until broken of it. Some children impose on parents until fourteen, eighteen or twenty-one-two-three-four years old; some continue to believe in Communism long after they have families of their own, and trouble with the police.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

WHEN there is need of instilling zest into a company of adults at a party, try the following games. They are suggested for their novelty, and because a large or small group can play them equally well.

It is not easy to costume a woman when four colors are not permitted to be mentioned. Each time any one of them is named it scores five against the player. The one whose score is lowest wins the game.

For the person who wishes to furnish a house with beautiful old things at moderate cost, good auctions are a boon. But she is wise if she goes many times and buys little until she gets to know the auctions of hand-some old things and those of what are known as second-hand pieces. Many of these are excellent, and low-priced, but just now we are considering antiques, and their present-day acquiring.

The older they are the more valuable, provided they are still in good condition. And good condition in antiques is not quite the same as in modern pieces.

Antiques have had long wear and usage, and their very appearance indicates this in a mellowing of the wood or other materials, and in the peculiar overlay which time puts on certain substances and which is called patina. Woods take on a deeper hue, while textiles fade and grow duller. Both of these things, according to their kind lend beauty to the materials. Fortunately for us articles were sturdily fashioned in by-gone days, and textiles were hand woven and made from choice yarns and silken threads. Their very endurance proves their fine make.

What costume do you wish to buy for your spring wardrobe? The questions following depend on what the buyer has chosen, but always the question of color should come in. The colors to be excluded may be white, brown, blue and green, or gray, blue, red and violet, or any preferred ones. The third player to name one of these forbidden colors changes places with the salesperson, and proceeds to question those seated, who represent her customers.

The hostess provides six or seven different colored sheets of tissue paper, scissors and library paste. Each guest cuts several circles from the papers, having them about 1 1/4 inches in diameter. Each represents a flower, and should be held in the center and pulled toward the circumference to give a flower-like formation.

A large sheet of wrapping paper is thumb tacked to the wall or a door. On the paper is drawn a large circle, marked off into one inch squares. This represents the bouquet. Each player is given a number, and when the hostess calls it, the one called puts a dab of paste on the center of her flower and goes to the bouquet and sticks it in any one of the squares, before the hostess finishes counting ten. Failure to do this scores minus five.

The object of the game is to avoid putting a duplicate colored flower in any adjacent square already having its colored flower in it. At first this is easy, but it becomes more and more difficult as the squares fill up with flowers. The one who puts a duplicate flower in an adjacent square, either in a straight line with it or diagonal to it, scores minus ten. When the bouquet is filled with flowers, the one whose score is lowest wins the game.

Rocket That May Reach the Moon

Ernest Loebell, chief research engineer of the Cleveland Rocket society, pictured holding the completed model of the rocket ship, and the full-size motor for the proposed ship of space. The finished rocket will be twenty feet long and two feet in diameter. Liquid oxygen and rectified gasoline will be the fuel used to raise the rocket, ignited by a spark plug located at the top of the motor. The motor Mr. Loebell is holding will be capable of lifting from 500 to 1,000 pounds, depending upon the pressure with which the oxygen and propane (rectified gasoline) is forced into the combustion chamber. The fuel will be carried in the fins of the completed rocket.

Howe About: Ideal Playing Space for Italian Children

Stairs are eliminated in a seaside castle for children, inclined passages or ramps leading from bottom to the top of the 12-story structure. The castle, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, is a mammoth round tower built by an Italian motor company as a holiday home or nursery for the 3,200 children of its employees.

Resembling a lighthouse, the tower can be seen for miles at sea. Each floor has quarters for 30 children. Large windows admit plenty of fresh air and light. On the ground level are halls used for refectories, playrooms, kitchens, store rooms, servants' quarters, infirmary and showers.

One hall contains a half-mile shelf and cupboard for the children's sand pails and shovels. Ample playground space surrounds the tower, and the sandy beach offers numerous forms of recreation.

"What are your plans, darling?" she asked. "Where are you going to live?"

"Tom hasn't told me," Celia answered, twisting the stem of the goblet. "He says it's a surprise."

Tom calmly threw a bomb into the family circle.

"Mr. Grove has sold me the 'Governor's House,'" he said.

Celia lifted startled eyes. "You're going to live in the Square?"

"Of course," Tom leaned back in his chair. "These are the people who will support me when I break into politics. This is where I shall live."

"That's a good idea," Father smiled his approval. He liked Tom. He thought that he would succeed. "We'll keep one of them here, Helen," he added, reaching down the table to pat Celia's hand. "I consider it a great idea."

Uncle Charlie chuckled. Mother looked distressed. Celia said nothing at all.

"Besides," Tom continued, "that house, for years, has been my favorite dream. The Governor's House."

"You'll probably make the title authentic," Father said. "You'll probably get there, Tom."

"Thank you, sir," Tom expected to make the title authentic. There was a confidence about him. Mother brightened. Celia's lashes lifted. Great-uncle Charlie made gallant amends.

"To the Governor's Lady!" The old man lifted his goblet and smiled his waggish smile.

They made a ceremony of drinking the toast. Celia was very gay. Janie wondered what she was thinking.

She knew, after dinner, when she heard Mother and Celia talking upstairs in Celia's room. Celia was weeping. Mother was attempting to soothe her. Janie, who had meant to enter the room, paused outside the door.

"It's a fine old house," Mother said, "and very attractive inside."

"But this Square, Mother."

"I know, dear," Mother sighed. "There's no use coaxing Tom," Celia said plaintively. "He does exactly as he pleases."

"He isn't unkind to you, darling?" Mother asked quickly.

"Not exactly," Celia admitted. "But he's as stubborn as a mule. It's very hard to bear."

"Why did you do it, Celia?" Mother, by wire, by mail and in person had asked that question a hundred times.

"Do you think I would stand in Janie's way?" Celia murmured reproachfully.

"Of course not, dear," Mother said proudly. "You are always generous and kind. Aunt Rose wrote me that it was brave but very foolish of you to make such a sacrifice. She's going to give you a complete set of flat silver."

"Is she?" Celia, Janie thought, was forgetting to be plaintive. "I want the same pattern as Muriel's. Do you think she will get it, Mother?"

"I'm sure she will," Mother answered. "Aunt Rose understands."

"I wanted to do what was best," the silver harp strings were muted. "Janie's happiness means a great deal to me."

"I've always said," Mother murmured tearfully, "that you have a sweet disposition."

Janie's left eyebrow cocked itself whimsically. She couldn't feel angry at Celia. There was no room for resentment in her happy heart. She curled herself up in the window seat and fell to dreaming.

"Janie wouldn't have minded staying," Celia said presently. "It's strange that she should be the one to go."

"I don't understand it, Celia," Mother never understood anything that she didn't want to believe. "I don't understand it at all."

Janie didn't understand it either. It was amazing that Hugh should love her. She fell into wide-awake dreams which, miraculously, were true. It had been an eventful year. But the hard times were over now. Mother was at home. Father was taking a nap in his own room down the hall. At any moment, Hugh might be calling her to ride with him out into the country. It seemed like a beautiful dream.

She wanted Celia to be happy. She sounded happier now. She and Mother were making plans to go to Washington for Muriel's wedding.

"Poor Muriel!" Janie heard Celia say with a note of complacency in her voice. "She has always loved Tom."

"And Carter Shelby really wasn't?" Mother hesitated.

"I'd rather not talk about it, please." Janie knew that Mother would always believe that Carter Shelby had been rejected because he had failed to measure up to Celia's high ideals. That was just as well. It would make Mother feel a little superior to Aunt Lucy. People were amusing. Janie sighed and smiled.

Tom presently came up the steps with a square white box in his hand.

"Where's my wife?" he asked. "You like to say that, don't you?" Janie teased.

"It makes me feel important," Celia met him at the door of the lilac and ivory room. She kissed him prettily. Tom presented the box.

"For the Governor's Lady," he said. "Thank you, dear."

Celia assumed an imposing manner. She wasn't unhappy, Janie thought. Celia could never be very unhappy. She was playing the Governor's Lady and Tom was faintly amused.

"Janie!" That was Hugh!

III

It was quiet under the mulberry trees. The hurdy-gurdy had trundled itself away. The children had gone and the shabby old men who sat at night in the Square.

They sat on a bench near the fountain, Janie and Hugh, with the mulberry leaves, rough and heart-shaped and silver-lined rustling softly above their heads.

"It's like the night we sat here a year ago," Hugh said.

"Only very much nicer," Janie nestled close beside him. Her hand slipped into his. "I shouldn't have dared to do this—a year ago."

"Did you want to, little fellow?" "I liked you," she confessed.

"And I liked you." "You hated Mulberry Square."

"I don't hate it now . . . Do you remember that I told you I had found right here the loveliest thing in life?" She remembered distinctly.

"But you didn't mean me," she said. "I think I always meant you," Hugh said thoughtfully. "You have all the qualities that I tried to find in Celia."

They were silent for an interval. The mulberry trees whispered quietly together. The locusts scattered their fragment blossoms. The tipsy old lamp-posts tried to stand up straight. They all knew Janie. She was a favorite in the Square.

"Hugh," she said presently. "Yes, darling?"

"There's one thing that bothers me very much."

"What is it, little fellow?" "You might be disappointed some time. You might be sorry . . ."

He tilted her chin, smiled at the solemn expression on her grave little pointed face.

"There isn't much to you," he said softly, "except your hazel eyes and your lovely smile and your courage and your loyalty. I love you. I think I can make them do."

(THE END.)

The Elizabethan Period

An authority says of the Elizabethan period: "The Age of Elizabeth was a time of intellectual liberty, of growing intelligence and comfort among all classes, of unbounded patriotism, and of peace at home and abroad. For a parallel we must go back to the Age of Pericles in Athens, or of Augustus in Rome, or go forward a little to the magnificent court of Louis XIV, when Cornelle, Racine and Moliere brought the drama in France to the point where Marlowe, Shakespeare and Jonson had left it in England half a century earlier. Such an age of great thought and great action, appealing to the eyes as well as to the imagination and intellect, finds but one adequate literary expression; neither poetry nor the story can express the whole man—his thought, feeling, action, and the resulting character; hence in the age of Elizabeth literature turned instinctively to the drama and brought it rapidly to the highest stage of its development."

POULTRY

SKIPPING BROODER FUEL CAUSES LOSS

Poor Judgment to Economize on Heat for Chicks.

By H. P. Alp, Poultry Extension Specialist, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

With the possibility that poultry and egg prices may advance following continued improvement in business activity and employment, poultrymen cannot afford to economize on brooder fuel at the expense of death losses in their baby chicks.

Every year, it is said, there are many instances where great damage is done to growing chicks by not maintaining a fire in the brooder stove until all likelihood of cool weather is past or until such time as the chicks have started to roost.

It is not uncommon that each spring there are several days of exceptional warm weather at which time many poultry raisers decide to save on brooding expense by discontinuing the artificial heat for the chicks. This unusual weather is often followed by cold and rain, and where the chicks are not old enough to roost, they will crowd together for heat. This results in some becoming too warm and others being chilled. Many outbreaks of coccidiosis have been observed under such conditions.

It is always a good plan to encourage early roosting, for when the young birds can perch above the floor there is less probability of ill effects from sudden severe changes in the weather, other housing conditions being satisfactory.

The poultryman who cares for his chicks so as to save the greatest number to laying or marketable age has a lower initial cost for each bird and is in a better position to make a profit whether prices are low or high. With the possibility of improved prices, he has an additional advantage over the less efficient producer.

Culling in Spring Is Found to Be Good Plan

Those who manage their flocks in the most efficient manner possible do not confine their culling to late summer and early fall, but to a certain extent cull throughout the entire year. Especially do they pay a good deal of attention to spring culling when the flock comes into the peak production period. Some of the birds that have produced heavily throughout the previous fall and winter months often break down toward spring. They are the individuals that could not stand continuous heavy feeding. In some flocks, the percentage of these partially broken-down birds is larger than in others, but invariably some are found in every flock that are no longer profitable producers.

That is why spring culling is usually a profitable proposition. As soon as a bird is unable to pay its feed bill and its total cost of keep, and yield a small profit, it is time for it to go to market. For rough figuring, one may assume that the feed cost of a hen is only half of her total cost of keep. To pay her way, therefore, assume that her egg income must be twice as large as her feed bill before any profit can be derived from her.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Color of Poultry Skin

A dealer in market poultry once stated that in his opinion the American preference for yellow legs and skin was based on the undeniable fact that a fowl with good yellow legs and skin was invariably a good bird in good health, while if one let his color preferences guide him in the other direction, he was quite likely to get a poor chicken. He thought the preference for white skin must help the sale of poor poultry wherever it existed. Without taking a position for or against the possible value of the presence in the meat of a fowl of elements which determine the color of skin, fat, or plumage, sufficient grounds exist for scientific study of the matter; and that breeders of the black breeds of meat type might well give it their attention.

Chickens Need Water

Plenty of clean, fresh water should be available for chickens at all times. Chickens don't swim but they do get thirsty as well as hungry, no matter how much it is fed. For a flock of 75 to 100 hens there should be a 10 or 12 quart pail or trough. For larger flocks larger containers are necessary. Even baby chicks need water. They should be provided with a place to get a drink without the danger of falling in and drowning.

New England Demand

The demand in New England is for eggs weighing 25-26 ounces to the dozen with two ounces the minimum weight of individual eggs. In general consumers take eggs below that standard only at prices representing a loss to the producer. In the nature of the case weight requirements cannot be accurately measured in retailing shell eggs. Hence as the buyer does not greatly desire them anyway, he takes small eggs only at a price he feels gives him his money's worth.

Newfoundland Sealers

Dragging Pelts to a Sealing Vessel.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—W.S.U. Service.

DURING the late spring each year, St. Johns, Newfoundland, is a beehive of activity; for the vessels of the famous Newfoundland sealing fleet are returning from the northern seal-hunting grounds.

Sailing dates for sealing vessels are fixed by law and not by weather. No killing is permitted before March 14 nor after May 1.

At eight o'clock in the morning, March 7, St. Johns is black with men. On that day the sealing fleet weighs anchors and sails for the annual hair-seal hunt, the second most valuable fishery of Newfoundland. St. Johnsmen line Water street and crowd the piers where the ships lie.

The heartfelt wishes of St. Johns and the whole island go with these men and ships as they move out of the harbor. Whistles scream Godspeed, bells ring out, cannons fire salutes, bunting flies on ship and shore, boys and men race along the Battery road, cheering the ships to the Narrows and beyond.

The sealing hands come from various parts of the island, some of them starting for St. Johns late in February. It is the worst time of the year—rough weather. The men bid good-by to their families and start out, many on snowshoes, walking to trunk-line railway stations.

St. Johns begins to fill up with them the first days of March. They wear canvas jumpers over homemade guernseys (sweaters), moleskin or homespun trousers, one to four red or white flannel shirts, and home-knit, heavy drawers. Some wear sealskin caps and some elsinors or whalers, which are leather, wool-lined caps with ear flaps. Their mittens are also homemade.

Husky Men Are Needed.

Captains like to sign up men who frequent the open bays fishing and hunting birds and who are seasoned in the woods. A man who has been dragging a sled and lugging wood all winter is in fine fettle for the job ahead of him. He's got good wind to go after the seals. A man snogging seals has to be light-footed, running and jumping over the ice like a deer. A big fellow with broad shoulders has to be followed around with a life belt; he will be falling into the water all the time.

They want men light and nimble, raw-boned fellows, small. Sometimes, to get light, the men take off everything except their underwear and boots, in order to follow fast after the seals, which can go as fast or faster than a good man running.

The day is appointed for the signing of the men. "The John Doe will sign her crew at nine o'clock," says a placard on the office of the ship owners. Men fill up the room and the clerk reads the whereases, the wherefores, the whys, and the shares. Then the sealers put down their names or make their crosses if they can't write.

Each sealer then receives a ticket with his number and name on it, and also a "crop." A crop is an advance of a small sum of money. Some men send the money home; others don't use it; and others buy tea, sugar, belt, sheath and knife, skin boots, oilskins, or tobacco.

If they think they are getting something for nothing, some of the sealers will buy anything—anything from a needle to an anchor.

The ship clears Channel Head and hauls up for Cape Ray. The ice is about ten miles offshore and the lop (big sea) hoves down from the northwest. The ship, with engines wide open, takes them green over the forecastle, clean over the bridge. In about 20 minutes she is one solid block of ice.

With the coming of night the wind drops, enabling the vessel to make the ice—that is, get under the weather edge of ice, where the water smooths. Here the craft lies until daylight next morning. At the first crack of dawn it is under way, following the leads and open water, and at length meeting the big level sheets of slob (new) ice. For a while the ship makes good progress, but, on working in, the leads begin to narrow and close up and the sheets get heavier.

Not Fur Seals.

At last the lookout reports seals ahead.

Where do these seals come from? What kind of seals are they?

The seals on Pribilof islands in Bering sea are different from the harps and hoods that are hunted off Newfoundland. The Pribilof is a fur seal (near relative of the sea lion) and its skin is used for making beautiful coats, worn by fair ladies to give them an air of distinction. It hauls out on the land. It pups or whelps on the land, while the harp and the hood haul out on the ice to give birth to their puppies. Newfoundland fishermen call it seal "fishery," because the Atlantic seals live as much in the water as cod and haddock. During the season of Lent the sealers eat the hair seals just as they would fish.

Capt. Robert A. (Bob) Bartlett, a veteran sealer, once said, "When I tell girls about the large number of seals we get off Newfoundland, some of them ask why I don't bring them fur coats? I feel like thirty cents, knowing I can't comply with their wishes. Well, I am sorry, I tell them, but the seals we go after are the hair seals, and all they are good for is to make soap and pocketbooks."

There are several different kinds of seals around the shores of Newfoundland and the Gulf of St. Lawrence: the square flipper, the horsehead or gray seal, the jar or ringed seal, the bay or shore seal, the harp seal, and the hooded seal. The harp and the hood are the two kinds that the Newfoundland sealers hunt in their sealing vessels. The first four varieties mentioned hang about Newfoundland and other northern waters, in small groups, but only the hood and the harp herds beat away to the northward and return to their whelping grounds in an annual migration over 2,000 miles of ocean.

Harp Is the Best Seal.

The seal par excellence is the harp. As an adult it carries a gray-colored patch on the back, shaped like a harp, for which it is named. The harp yields more oil than the hood and the young are easy to handle. Because it gathers in close herds, less time is required in hunting it.

After having been down to the Banks, the harps work northward to a vast sea eddy eastward of Belle Isle strait, and also in the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the west of the Magdalens. Now they are the sport of wind and weather of stormy March, and until the coming of the airplane spotter the seal skippers had nothing but their own judgment and experience to bring them to the herd.

The harp seal seeks new ice—that is, ice a few inches thick that forms in the open leads between the heavier ice. Only in new ice can the harp bore bobbing holes and get to its young, which are born on the new ice.

The baby harp looks like a fluffy white muff with two large, liquid brown eyes peering out. It is as woolly as a gosling. Later the hairs become longer and whiter, until in about 20 to 25 days the young seals roll the white coats off in their movements around the ice and become "ragged jackets." This white, woolly coat is replaced by a hair coat covered with dark spots the size of an American quarter-dollar.

In its first days the puppy seal is helpless and dependent on its mother. It whines like a baby. The weight at birth is about seven pounds. Drinking its mother's rich milk, it puts on a pound to a pound and a half a day.

Sealing is a hard life. Men on board a sealer are jammed in as tight as sardines in a box, particularly in the smaller wooden vessels. Going out, every available bit of space is filled with coal, with ice-fighting equipment, sealers' chests, dunnage bags and sealing gear, and men as thick as flies around a molasses puncheon.

A sealer carries provisions for two months and a half—70 to 80 barrels of potatoes, 100 quintals of codfish, 80 barrels of flour, 35 barrels of pork, many pounds of tea, molasses to sweeten the tea, butter, turnips, and beans.

Contrast in Menus.

Could some of the old sealing crews take a look at what's going on now, they would be shell-shocked with wonder. They'd think the fishery was ruined on account of luxurious living. They had nothing but hard biscuit and tea, pork and duff, with little grease in the duff. No soft bread whatever.

The men go overboard in gangs, or watch crews, 40 to 50 men in a watch. The master watch is responsible for the working of the men and their safety. Each crew tries to beat the other crew, and each man tries to beat the other man. Where the seals are fairly plentiful, the master watch raises a marker flag and leaves some men, and then another flag and more men.

The mother harp goes down a bobbing hole, as the sealer approaches. Young seals are saucy and will come for a man until he snogs them with his hat. He turns the dead whitecoat on its back and slits it down the belly. Then he carefully cuts the body away from the pelt, which is the skin with the white fat fastened to it, and then cuts off the hinder daddles (black flippers). One or both front flippers may be removed.

PATTERN 9668

Soft lines, planned carefully to give slenderness of appearance—that is an achievement in the designing of dresses for the heavier woman. And here is the pattern that does the clever trick. It can be made up in one of the fresh new prints, preferably with a small-figured design in it. Or it can be made of plain silk in any of the new spring shades. The jabot finish at the yoke-line is particularly good, covering a full bust and lending interest to the dress in an unobtrusive way.

Pattern 9668 may be ordered only

In sizes 30, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth St., New York.

Gas Saves Human Race

From Sun's Death Rays

An eighth of an inch of gas is all that stands between the human race and destruction by "death rays" from the sun, according to Dr. Charles G. Abbot in his annual report to the Smithsonian institution. This ozone "wall" lies forty miles above the earth in the upper reaches of the stratosphere and is spread through considerable space. But if it were concentrated it would be less than one-eighth of an inch thick. "The ozone absorbs short-wave ultra-violet rays that would blind, blister, and eventually destroy all earthly life if they could penetrate the 'wall,'" declares Doctor Abbot.

"The ultra-violet waves known to us as beneficial to health are of a longer wave-length. If the ozone layer were 1 1/2 inches thick the beneficial rays could not get through either and rickets would be prevalent throughout the earth."

The Smithsonian institution calculates that the heat generated by the sun is equal to that which would be produced by burning 400,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons of anthracite coal a year.

PUT IDEAS IN MIND OF CHILD

Suggestion May Work Where an Order Fails.

OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON, in the New York World-Telegram.

One of the mother's greatest allies in reaching a young child is suggestion.

So peculiar are the mind centers and so quickly suspicious of criticism or even direct telling, that they will receive impressions quite happily by suggestion that they would otherwise throw away at once.

Suppose her mother wants Mary to learn to put her overshoes in the hall closet each time she comes in.

One day she picks them up and personifies them. Quite casually she may say, "I am sure these friendly little fellows must think we haven't much heart leaving them about to be worried and chewed by Peter."

Mary may regard her for awhile and not say anything, or she may pretend even not to notice at all.

But the next time there is a good chance she will open the closet door and put them away herself.

There is nothing wrong with a direct order. Unqualified obedience has its necessary place in all child-parent relationships. But it often falls for a clear reason.

Small children forget, or they are deeply interested in something else, or their attention is off wool-gathering. Sometimes when they are told to do too many things they become apathetic and careless from too much to remember, or just plain resentment.

Children are great imitators. The power of suggestion combined with interest is at work here. The conduct of the family will reflect almost instantly in a child's manners, his speech, his tastes and his behavior.

Suggestion in its active sense can be used nicely and happily. The time chosen is important. It usually fails if the child has set up a determined wall of refusal already. No use in turning diplomatic in the middle of a tantrum or a stubborn spell. And it won't do much good if he is deeply interested in something else at the time. Suggestion should be applied with judgment.

School Notes

High School

The high school team played two ball games during the past week and one more is scheduled with St. Joe for Friday. The first game on May 4 with Harrisville was won by the score of 9 runs, 10 hits and 5 errors for Tawas City; for Harrisville, 8 runs, 8 hits and 8 errors. On Tuesday they defeated Whittemore by the score of 11 runs, 9 hits, and 4 errors for Tawas City; and 1 run, 4 hits and 7 errors for Whittemore. This is a fine send-off for the boys this season. Let's hope they keep it up.

The American history class is about to begin the study of the World War. This should be of much interest to all members.

G. I. Nippess, manager of the Saginaw Business Institute, addressed the high school assembly Thursday of last week. Mr. Nippess has been an annual visitor of the school for several years, and he always brings an excellent message for the young people. He spoke this time of several personal characteristics which do much to determine the success of each individual. Some of these characteristics are: Industry, loyalty, courtesy, dependability, and education.

The English class is engaged in preparation for inter-class debates. This is being done in an effort to interest our high school pupils in league debating.

Our trip to Traverse City to the speech contest was interesting as well as successful. A tour of the State Hospital was very instructive; and the amount and variety of work accomplished and the organization rather amazed us. Both of our contestants, Evelyn Bigelow and Richard King, offered strong competition. Richard placed second with his declamation, "The Valley of Bones."

Seventh and Eighth Grades

David Sims has been absent all week on account of illness.

Our room will be represented in the spelling contest which is to be held in Alabaster Saturday night, May 12.

The following pupils have had perfect spelling papers the past week: Seventh grade—Violet Carroll, June Brown, and Ruth Clark; in the eighth grade—Thelma Herman, Dorothy McDonald, Myrton Leslie, and William Koepke.

Fifth and Sixth Grades
The boys and girls of the fifth and sixth grades are entertaining their mothers Friday, May 11. They are presenting the play, "Helga and the White Peacock." Those in the cast are as follows: Helga—Marion Musolf; the Spider Woman—Margaret Davis; Olaf, Helga's brother—Allan Miller; the Vain Peacock—Myrtle Bowen; the Troll Mother—Dorothy Blust; Youngest Troll—June Smith; West Wind—Janet McLean; Symb—Sprites—Betty Rapp and Lucille Bowen.

Additional entertainment will be furnished by the boys' quintet, Irene Cunniff, Janet McLean, Lucille Bowen, and Margaret Davis.

All the boys and girls have had a part in the planning and giving this party for their mothers.

Third and Fourth Grades
Annette Murray visited our room one day last week.
Betty Nelson won the spelling contest Wednesday afternoon.

East Tawas School News

Neil McKay won first place in extempore speaking in District 3 of the Michigan High School Forensic Association last Friday evening at Traverse City. Neil was presented with a dictionary for winning the sub-district honors which was donated by The Detroit News, and a banner for winning the district honors and this was given by the University of Michigan.

In debate, Hettie Jean McKay, Faye Gurley, and Neil McKay won a plaque for the school and also individual pins. All awards were donated by The Detroit Free Press.

A great deal of credit should be given to Mrs. L. G. McKay and to Debate Coach Stephen Youngs for the successful debating season.

Paul D. Kelleter, Supervisor of the Euron National Forest, will be the speaker for the P-T. A. at its next meeting Monday, May 21.

Hale News

A serious accident occurred one-half mile north of town Saturday night about 9:30. Mr. and Mrs. Dillenbeck and their two daughters were going home after doing their Saturday shopping when struck by another car traveling south with a party of five from Flint. The driver of the car, a new Pontiac, struck the Dillenbeck car when attempting to pass another car with his vision obscured by the cloud of dust. Mr. Dillenbeck was cut about the face and his arm broken above and in the elbow. Mrs. Dillenbeck was badly cut about the head and one of the little girls had a broken arm. Dr. Hasty, who happened to be in town, gave the victims first aid and took them to West Branch to the hospital. Both cars were badly wrecked. The occupants of the Pontiac were cut and bruised. Mr. Dillenbeck and his family were brought home early Sunday morning. Mrs. Dillenbeck and the girls are getting along nicely, but Mr. Dillenbeck's arm is in a serious condition and may have to be amputated.

Mr. and Mrs. John Brandal and little daughter of Flint, who have been visiting Mrs. Brandal's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Livingstone, during the past week, returned home on Sunday.

Mrs. John Harris is convalescing from a severe attack of quinsy.

Dr. Rowland of Shady Shores has established an office in the old post-office quarters. He will be in his office Tuesday of each week.

The little son of David Bernard is seriously ill with pneumonia.

Mr. and Mrs. James Brandal and family have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Cash Brandal during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Follette and little daughters were week end guests of Hale relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Rex Jennings and little daughters of Port Barrios, Guatemala, Central America, for an extended visit. They are at the present time in Hale, the guests of Rex's mother, Mrs. Nellie Jennings. Mr. and Mrs. James LaBerge of East Tawas were the guests of Hale friends Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Miss Marion Jennings and a friend, Harold Parkin, of Royal Oak were week end guests of Mrs. Nellie Jennings.

Miss Laura Johnson entertained a party of her school friends on Friday evening of last week. Games, music and lunch gave the young folks a happy evening.

Mrs. Pettys, late of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, will assist Rev. Harvey, pastor of the Baptist church, and with her daughter will occupy the parsonage at Hale after June 1st.

The local lodge, F. & A. M., conferred third degree work at their regular meeting Tuesday evening. Nine visitors from East Tawas and Oscoda were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Summers of Saginaw were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. John O. Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Atkinson and Mr. and Mrs. John Shaum, all of Flint, were guests of Hale friends over the week end.
