DISPOSAL PLANT FACTS GIVEN BY ENGINEER

Cost of Proposed Project To Individual Taxpayers Is Estimated

To inform taxpayers concerning the proposed Tawas City sewage disposal plant, the $12,600 bond issue for which will be voted on May 28, Edward C. Schneider, engineer in charge of construction, Wednesday gave The Tawas Herald a comprehensive interview.

The disposal plant, Mr. Schneider said, would be located at the foot of Seventh avenue between the D. and M. railroad track and the Tawas river. The intercepting sewers, a force main made of six-inch cast iron pipe, would run from the sewage pumping station at the foot of Second avenue to the disposal plant.

The treatment works planned for the disposal plant is known as the primary system. A septic tank, based on 100 gallons of waste per person per day, would be so constructed that its capacity could be enlarged while retaining all original equipment in use.

Explaining that the average private septic tank has a capacity of only 50 gallons per person per day, Mr. Schneider showed that the disposal plant will have a flexibility that a house septic tank does not have. Private septic tanks must eventually be cleaned out, and they may not be overloaded without resultant clogging. Sludge in the disposal plant tank would regularly be drained off through pipes to a drying bed.

Constructed according to specifications of the state board of health, the proposed disposal plant, intercepting sewers, and pumping station would be as modern and efficient as any in the state.

G. A. PRESCOTT, Jr. IS CANDIDATE FOR SECRETARY STATE

After much urging by many representative citizens throughout Michigan, George A. Prescott, Jr., of this city announced his candidacy today for the office of secretary of state to succeed Frank D. Fitzgerald.

This decision on the part of Mr. Prescott is very pleasing to the people of northeastern Michigan who feel that this section should be recognized at this time in the election of state officials. They contend that Mr. Prescott would be the logical man to select as candidate for secretary of state and would ably fill that office when elected.

"In announcing my candidacy for the office of Secretary of State in the coming Republican convention," said Mr. Prescott this morning, "I am voicing the opinion that northeastern Michigan should receive recognition from the voters of the party. This territory, always staunch in its Republicanism, has not had a major state office since 1905."

"In recent years the Republican party has been torn by strife and factionalism and now the need for new leadership is stronger than ever before. This leadership is being brought about by reorganization and rebuilding. During the process of reconstruction the party, in order to return to power, must advance a constructive program with the Republicans of Michigan solidly behind it."

Home Gardens For Families Is Plan Of Federal Welfare

It is the plan of the Federal Welfare that each family have a home garden. It is urged that this garden be made of sufficient size to provide a good supply of fresh vegetables in season and the required surplus for canning.

Every possible assistance will be given to provide ground, preparation, and the needed seeds, that this garden objective may be realized. To this end, definite supervision is being provided.

We urge that any family which has not received a planting blank and would like one, make application to us as soon as possible.

"Rock-Made" Waves Wash Away Fishing Hamlets

Norway's Worst Disaster in Half a Century.

Washington.—Huge waves, set in motion by tons of falling rock, washed away two fishing hamlets and drowned nearly 50 persons in Tafjord, western Norway, recently. It was one of Norway's worst disasters in half a century, recalling the similar Loen lake tragedy in 1905, when 61 persons lost their lives.

"Tafjord is a narrow, stone-ringed finger of water branching off from Storfjord, one of the dozen great arms of the sea that penetrate the heart of the Scandinavian peninsula," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"Wildly picturesque, with bare red and brown cliffs rising almost sheer from black water, Tafjord is a typical example of these deep-water ravines, around the edge of which are generally thin fringes of pebbly beach. Along the beaches a few pine, birch, and elder trees and the toylike, sod-roofed cottages of sturdy fishermen find precarious footing.

Unusual Scenery.
"Tourists seldom visit these deep, winding waterways, although they would be rewarded with some of the world's most unusual scenic spectacles if they did. From snow-clad mountain tops and ice fields of the plateau, torrents rush to the cliff-tops, bursting over the rims and plunging headlong into the fjords like long ribbons of silver. When low-hanging fog banks obscure the brink of the cliffs, these dazzling waterfalls, like raveled clouds, seem to be dropping from the sky itself.

"Tafjord possesses three high waterfalls, two of which come into view as the steamer enters the fjord. The largest, Muldalsfos, drops almost 500 feet (three times the height of Niagara), and is considered one of the finest waterfalls in Norway.

"One reason why Tafjord has few contacts with the outside world is that it is practically inaccessible except by water. Only narrow bridge paths twist up the rocky walls of the fjord and over the plateau to neighboring villages, and these trails can be used only during the mid-summer months. The rest of the year they are blanketed in heavy snow.

"The villages of Tafjord and Fjoera, where the greatest number of fatalities occurred during the recent wave disaster, nestle in a cove at the head of the fjord. Small steamers reach them only once or twice a week with mail and supplies, although many of the natives own fishing boats in which they sail some 50 miles down adjoining fjords to Aalesund, one of Norway's chief cod fishing centers and the nearest large city. Aalesund occupies a few of the 150,000 islands known as the Skjaergaard (Skerry Guard), which fringe the mainland and increase Norway's coast line to 12,000 miles.

Mining and Fishing.

"Practically the only other industry of the region, in addition to fishing, is mining. High on the face of a cliff above Tafjord a British company operates a mine which pours red ore

Columbus Found Pacific Ocean, Says Frenchman

Paris.—Columbus made five voyages to the Americas and saw the Pacific ocean long before Balboa.

This is the opinion of Maurice Privat, author and biographer, who has written a book, "The Prodigious Adventures of Christopher Columbus," refuting much historically accepted Columbiana.

The man erroneously known as Christopher Columbus probably was called Juan Colon and was of Mallorean origin, according to Privat.

An aristocrat by birth, a Franciscan layman, like Queen Isabella, and a prolific and brilliant writer in Castilian, Columbus, or Colon, was a naval engineer, a mathematician and a seer, and, contrary to historically accepted legend, his adventures were more planned than fortuitous.

"He knew where he was going when he was on his way," said Privat. "This is because he was one of history's greatest navigators and an astronomer and astrologist of first rank in his day."

Columbus allowed the legend to take root that he was of Genoese origin, according to Privat.

"His chief aim was not to discover the Grand Khan's realms or go to India, but to find the source of Solomon's treasure, which undoubtedly was somewhere in Central America," continued M. Privat. "And it was important to him, for the sake of his delicate and dangerous mission to hide his identity."

Women's Painting Is Just Old Custom

London.—The modern art of making-up women's faces is just an old Egyptian custom.

Pigmentary adornment of the facial epidermis was no secret to the women who lived 4,000 years ago in the Babylonian city of Ur of the Chaldees.

Archeologists have discovered jars of cosmetics and powders of various shades, according to C. Leonard Woolley, who has just returned here from his excavations on the site of the ancient city.

down chutes to vessels waiting to take it to smelters. In the nearby highlands, a little south of Tafjord, however, farmers find pasturage for small herds of cows and goats. In the summer months they drive live stock to these upland meadows and settle down in huts for two or three months of butter-and-cheese making. Flowers and bright green grass often spring up at the very edge of glaciers and snow fields.

"Only a few miles southeast of Tafjord is another narrow finger of salt water that is sometimes visited by big cruise steamers. This is Gieranger Fjord, an S-shaped basin festooned with scores of leaping waterfalls. The inlet is only 11 miles long and from 200 to 400 yards wide, but the mountains soar perpendicularly to heights of 3,000 and 5,000 feet along the gorge, and in some places actually overhang the water.

"Liners visiting this fjord usually anchor long enough to permit tourists to go ashore to Merok village. At Oye, another village near the mouth of Geiranger Fjord, shore parties may experience the thrill of riding in a stolkjaerre, a light, two-wheeled mountain cart which accommodates two passengers in front. The driver perches on a small seat behind and the reins pass between the passengers. The Norwegian fjord horse is an active, hardy little beast, drawing the stolkjaerre smartly along narrow, dusty roads to inland villages that possess many relics of Viking days."

Lively Race for Sunday School Honors

Two Missouri Men Stage an Interesting Contest.

St. Louis, Mo.—An unheralded endurance race that has been under way for many years, continues weekly in two different sections of Missouri.

At Mexico, Mo., David Owen is reported to be trailing by ten years and J. A. Hendry of St. Louis claims to be the record holder and hopes to keep his ten-year advantage over Owen.

The race is for the world's championship Sunday school attendance title.

When Owen recently passed his fortieth successive year of attendance at Sunday school without a miss it developed that he had a competitor with a 50-year record.

Hendry, seventy-eight years old, says he has credentials to prove that he hasn't missed a Sunday school for half a century. "I'm going to stretch it as near the one hundred mark as I can," he said.

Hendry, a salesman, said he attended Sunday schools in Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, and Kansas.

"I started regular attendance at Sunday school in Randolph county, Georgia," Hendry said. "I went to a revival meeting and heard an old

Hymn Singer Trapped

"Gathering at the River"

Chicago.—Police Sgt. Harry Schuller was a boy tenor in a church choir years ago and he knows all the hymns. Recently, as he sat in a restaurant, he heard a dishwasher in the back room singing gaily:

"Shall we gather at the river, The beautiful, the beautiful, the river?"

Schuller referred to a police bulletin he carried and went into the kitchen, where he placed Carl Anderson, thirty-six-year-old clergyman of Washington, Conn., under arrest.

"It was that beautiful hymn," Schuller said. "It gave you away, and now you're going back to face a charge of wife and child desertion."

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

PETER FINDS A FRIEND IN TROUBLE

SEEING Farmer Brown's Boy coming through the Old Orchard, Peter Rabbit decided that that was no place for him, so he scampered for the Green Forest, lipperty-lipperty-lip. Just within the edge of the Green Forest he caught sight of something which for the time being put all thought of Farmer Brown's Boy out of his head. Fluttering on the ground was a bird that whom not even Glory the Cardinal was more beautiful. It was about the size of Redwing the Black-bird. Wings and tail were pure black, and all the rest was a beautiful scarlet. It was Redcoat the Tanager. At first Peter had eyes only for the wonderful beauty of Redcoat. Never before had he seen Redcoat so close at hand. Then quite suddenly it came over Peter that something was wrong, and he hurried forward to see what the trouble might be.

Redcoat heard the rustle of Peter's feet among the dry leaves and at once

"What is it, Redcoat? Has Something Happened to You?"

began to flap and flutter in an effort to fly away, but he could not get off the ground.

"What is it, Redcoat? Has something happened to you? It is just Peter Rabbit. You know you don't have anything to fear from me," cried Peter.

The look of terror which had been in the eyes of Redcoat died out. He stopped fluttering and simply lay panting. "Oh, Peter," he gasped, "you don't know how glad I am that it is only you. I've had a terrible accident, and I don't know what I am to do. I can't fly, and if I have to stay on the ground some enemy will be sure to get me. What shall I do, Peter? What shall I do?"

Right away Peter was full of sympathy. "What kind of an accident was it, Redcoat, and how did it happen?" he asked.

"Broadwing the Hawk tried to catch me," sobbed Redcoat. "In dodging him among the trees I was heedless for a moment and did not see just where I was going. I struck a sharp-pointed dead twig and drove it right through my right wing." Redcoat held up his right wing and, sure enough, there was a little twig sticking out from both sides close up to the shoulder. The wing was bleeding a little.

"Oh, dear, what ever shall I do, Peter Rabbit? What ever shall I do?" sobbed Redcoat.

"Does it pain you dreadfully?" asked Peter.

Redcoat nodded. "But I don't mind the pain," he hastened to say. "It is the thought of what may happen to me."

MY CABIN

By ANNE CAMPBELL

I SHALL have a cabin with no pictures in it. There will be wide windows gleaming in the sun. Every oaken frame will hold a landscape in it. Changing in the morning and the setting sun.

Nothing ever painted will excel the splendor Of the lovely scenes that bless my weary gaze. Dawn will come with fingers silver-tipped and slender, And the midnight moon will leave her misty ways.

Paintings cannot tempt me when the hills and valleys March outside my window in eternal pride. From my hilltop cabin where the east wind dallies, I shall see the treasures Time has deified.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

Hernia Is Very Common

THE fact that more men than women are afflicted with hernia, or rupture as it is commonly called, is sometimes blamed on sport or the more active life of men.

However, reliable figures show that while about four times as many men as women undergo operation for hernia, nevertheless hernia is found about six times as often in infant boys as in infant girls.

This then proves that while the condition may be brought about by sport or heavy lifting, in a great majority of cases it is a weakness in the abdominal wall itself that predisposes or gives the tendency to hernia.

And it is this point that should be remembered when operation is being considered. There is no question but that operation is the ideal method of correcting the condition; that is the radical operation which is now often done under a local anaesthetic.

Another operation coming into some favor now is what is called the injection method whereby scar tissue is formed which seems sufficient in some cases to strengthen the abdominal wall enough to prevent the hernia.

However, this method has not yet met the general approval of surgeons. If the operation is performed does this guarantee that the hernia will not occur again?

Unfortunately the hernia does occur after operation, not because the operation was not done properly, but because of the natural weakness or tendency of the abdominal wall to sag or rupture.

There is no question but that a properly fitting truss is a great boon to the wearer and affords a good measure of safety, but in those cases where an operation has a reasonable chance of success (and most cases have a reasonable chance) it would seem only like good sense to be free of the truss and be able to do the things other individuals can do.

Even in those cases born with weak abdominal walls, about 50 per cent of the cases who undergo operation have no return of the hernia.

Your best plan if you have a hernia is to undergo an examination by your family doctor and a surgeon, as your age, your occupation, the condition of your abdominal walls must all be taken into consideration.

If operation is not considered advisable a well fitted truss and the avoidance of heavy work should prevent further trouble.

Curing Cases of Mental Conflict

WHEN statistics show that at the present rate of increase in mental ailments 50 years from now half the civilized world will be confined to mental institutions with the other half taking care of them, we must all give this some thought.

The world has gone through a lot of trouble in the past 20 years and mental illness must be expected, but the very large number afflicted has brought so much attention to the matter that new methods of treatment are having, and will continue to have, a most helpful influence in curing many cases.

In the first place children that are a little "different" are being treated and will become men and women able and willing to take their normal or natural place in the world. This means prevention of mental ailments.

And even in adults many cases now confined to mental institutions are being cured by painstaking treatment. After all physical defects—teeth, tonsils, eyes, ears and other parts—are corrected, careful questioning of the patient is undertaken.

Dr. W. H. Cassels, of Provincial Mental hospital, Ponoka, Alberta, states that many cases are due to some "conflict" in the patient's mind. He puts these conflicts into three classes: (1) the actual condition existing when the patient has done something wrong, or which conflicts with what he thinks is right; (2) where the patient desires something different from his present condition although the condition might seem normal or satisfactory to most people; (3) where the patient's standards of living are so strict that he is in conflict with them because it is almost impossible to live up to them. This is called the "rigid" type of personality.

What are the methods by which many of these cases are cured? In the first case the patient is shown that he is only human, and that to err is human; that mistakes are forgivable.

In the second case where desire for a different condition exists his unsatisfied desire is directed into other channels. For instance a bereaved mother may give vent to her feelings by charitable work.

In the third case the patient is shown that his standards are too strict for the world in general and that he'll have to give and take to a greater extent in order to get along with his fellow men.

Cedars of Lebanon Are Planted in U. S.

Good Will Offering to People of United States.

Washington.—Sent by the American University of Beyrouth, Syria, as a good will offering to the people of the United States, 13 living cedars of Lebanon from the Phoenician coast at the eastern end of the Mediterranean were recently unloaded in America. At the direction of the President they were planted in the grounds of Arlington National cemetery, overlooking the Potomac river.

In the Bible these majestic trees are called "the trees of Jehovah, the cedars of Lebanon, which He hath planted." Their most famous appearance in history was when King Hiram of Tyre transported Lebanon cedars to Jerusalem for the building of Solomon's temple.

Famous Trees Never Numerous.

Scholars differ as to how many cedars of Lebanon there were in antiquity, according to the National Geographic society.

It is probable that at no time were the limestone ridges of the Lebanon completely clothed in these majestic trees. In ancient times the wood was already valued, not only for its great strength and resistance to rot, but also for its rarity.

Some decades ago, with the encouragement of Queen Victoria, the small remaining cluster of giant trees was inclosed by a stone wall. The trees had long been considered sacred to man, and Hadrian issued an imperial order that the groves should not be harmed. Later the Maronites, who have a small chapel amid this tiny forest, threatened excommunication for anyone who harmed the trees. But herds of goats have showed less respect than man, and by nibbling at the saplings have prevented new growth.

A count of tree rings, made on small branches, indicates that the Lebanon cedar has a slow growth and a long life. The cedars are not nearly so tall as sequoias, but they have thick trunks, as large as 47 feet in circumference. A notable feature is that the horizontal branches are so thickly carpeted with needles that the heavy, firm cones appear as though up-ended on a well-kept lawn.

On Republic's Flag.

The site of the chief cedar grove is one of rare beauty, the stage of a massive amphitheater miles across and 4,000 feet high. Immediately behind them the long line of the Lebanon rises to its culminating ridge, more than 10,000 feet above the Mediterranean.

The famous cedars are in the Lebanese republic, at the eastern end of the Mediterranean, just north of the Holy Land. Although the Lebanon is included in the French mandate with Syria, it has its own government under a Syrian president. The flag of the republic is the flag of France with a green cedar of Lebanon in the center.

The cedar of Lebanon also appears on the seal of the American University of Beyrouth, donor of the group of cedars to America, and lapel buttons bearing the university's insignia are worn by graduates throughout the Near East. The cedars have been studied by specialists of the university. Dr. George E. Post of the faculty, authority on Syrian botany, made the statement, "There is not and never has been a rotten Lebanon cedar. The imperishable cedar remains untouched by rot or insect." The wood, like that of the cypress and the sequoia, is close grained and aromatic.

Eye Expert Says Eight Proper Age for School

Boston.—Children should not be permitted to go to school until they reach the age of eight, in the opinion of Dr. Laurence P. Folsom, president of the New England Council of Optometrists.

"The eyes of the human being," he says, "do not reach the state of maturity until the child is eight years of age, and much of the unnecessary strain to which we subject the eyes of children in the classroom should be avoided to insure healthy eyes among the future generations."

Christianity and Civilization

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

In a recent issue of a metropolitan newspaper appeared a cartoon in which our Capitol building at Washington was securely embedded in a huge rock which rose from an angry sea. The waves dashing against the rock were variously named: Marxism, Red Revolt, and Leninism. But the rock was named Christianity. That picture was more than a cartoon. It was a preachment of the highest order. In it rushes for expression, history, nationalism, patriotism and experience. The Gibraltar rock upon which all civilization safely rests is Christianity. This is the final verdict of history.

By Christianity, however, is not meant a traditional creed or an ecclesiastical tenet. It has no reference whatever to the "isms" which for so many centuries have given rise to the

Record Shot Put

"splits" in denominational organizations. It has no reference to the divisions which even now seem to make an organically united Protestant world impossible. Christianity as pictured in the cartoon, harks back to those fundamental virtues and beliefs to which every person can give assent, and upon which the entire Christian world can build a permanent civilization. Principal among these virtues is brotherhood—a condition of society in which the spirit of mutual helpfulness dominates and not the Epicurean philosophy "every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost." The principle of liberty is important, but it is in danger of being misunderstood. Liberty is not license. Liberty is always limited by the sanctions of the moral law. Christianity also eliminates the ultimate domination of that spirit of selfishness which always destroys. It emphasizes the importance of "service" without which neither nationalism nor business can succeed. Christianity has always emphasized the importance of education. Very near the church has always been located a school.

Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness will never perish from the earth if fortified by Christianity. Let us have more of such cartoons! © by Western Newspaper Union.

Sun Dogs and Halos

A sun dog, or parhelion, to use its technical name, is a bright spot which appears near the sun when sunlight shines through a thin cloud composed of ice crystals floating in the atmosphere. Halos are the result of the refraction of the solar rays by these crystals. Sun dogs are sometimes tinged with color, and may appear at all times of the year, because even in the warmest weather the temperature of the upper atmosphere is below freezing.

The Household

An Arrangement of Furniture and Furnishings to Accent Good Outline Decoration.

IF YOU wish to have your rooms attractive you must consider outline decoration. This is not confined to shapes of furniture and articles in the room, although these play a part. It chiefly consists in the imaginary lines which are subtly registered on the vision by the linear contours of articles against or close to the walls. For example some articles are high, some low. The eye takes in these differences almost as clearly as if a line were drawn on the wall up and down and across the tops of the things. If, there is a continuity of high or low pieces the outline decoration is monotonous. It is inartistic.

Breaking Up Wall Spaces.

There is the expression, breaking up the wall spaces, which in effect, brings about much the same desirable result. However, the decorative outline has nothing to do with depth of articles but of their flat silhouettes, while the bulkiness or lack of it comes into the equation when breaking up wall spaces.

In the consideration of outline decoration there immediately springs to mind built in bookcases, with their long even line across the tops. Good decoration not only sanctions these shelved walls, but recommends them, notwithstanding the unbroken wall outline. There are two ways of breaking the monotony until it actually dissolves from the picture. One is when bookcases are from floor to ceiling, and the other when they end part way up.

Variety in Effect.

In the first instance the varying heights of shelves are restful to the eyes, and couple this with the infinite variety in kinds and colors of bindings, and no monotony exists. In the instances of low bookcases, the shelves have the variability of heights just mentioned, and the tops provide excellent opportunities for decorative ornaments. The difference in height of these things and the open spaces left between them relieves the evenness of the outlines. Care must be used in positioning the ornaments so that good outline decoration, the result desired, will be achieved.

It is well to study the treatment of rooms already decorated and furnished, and see whether the outline decorations are good or whether changes should be made for improvement. Do not sacrifice comfort to decoration, but so manipulate the things to produce good outlines without diminishing other necessary and desirable qualities and characteristics. It is the combination of comfort with artistry that distinguishes good decoration. © Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

Basket ball was the result of a deliberate attempt to invent a game which would fill the same place during the winter that football and baseball fill during the other seasons. It was invented in 1891 by James Naismith while he was teaching at Springfield (Mass.) Y. M. C. A. The first cages were the tall, cone-shaped peach baskets in general merchandising use in the era. Thus the game got its name. The ball used was a soccer football.

Firestone LEADERSHIP

The Ultimate Test of Leadership is Performance

FIRESTONE has maintained its leadership in tire development by producing a new tire for 1934 with a wider tread, flatter contour, deeper non-skid, greater thickness, and more and tougher rubber, which gives greater non-skid safety, more traction, greater blowout protection, and more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

These achievements are made practical by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, providing greater adhesion between the plies of the high stretch cords and between the Gum-Dipped body of the tire and the tough, massive non-skid tread. It also provides greater strength, longer flexing life, and greater protection against blowouts.

Gum-Dipping made it possible for Firestone to design, develop and put on the market the first successful balloon tire in 1923. This tire was the pattern used by all others and completely revolutionized the tire industry and set new standards for the automobile industry.

Firestone also developed the first all-rubber non-skid tire, and has always been first to give motorists the benefits of new discoveries in non-skid design, providing more traction and greater non-skid safety.

For fourteen years leading race drivers have driven to victory on Firestone tires, built with Gum-Dipped high stretch cords. They have trusted their lives to Firestone Leadership—as they know that the patented Firestone construction features provide them with greater safety—longer mileage—and greater blowout protection.

CHAPTER I

When Ranceford Kershaw came out of the post office at Valley Center, his daughter Lorraine, seated at the wheel of the Kershaw car at the curb, saw instantly that he had received some mail of a disturbing nature. His head was bowed a little, as from a blow, and in his tread there was a lag that bespoke an inhibition slightly greater than that induced by the bullet that had shattered his hip many years previous.

When he reached the car he leaned against the front door; then slowly his head came down until his face was hidden. He shivered faintly and a sigh, half pain, half despair, escaped him. His daughter watched him with something of the alert, professional concern of a trained nurse. Only in Lorry Kershaw's eyes, profound affection and pity showed.

She knew her father suffered from angina pectoris, and two doctors had told her a long time ago that she must be prepared to lose him suddenly. They had warned her against exhibiting the slightest concern during one of his attacks, since that would merely add to the grief and worry of his father and perhaps hasten the end.

So the girl waited until he raised his face and smiled at her a trifle sheepishly. "That was a real twister," he gasped. "I figured I was a goner for sure. I don't think I could stand another like that one, Lorry."

"Nonsense," Lorry twisted his great nose. "You ain't sympathetic," he protested, with a show of irritation. But the girl knew he was secretly pleased; that her comradely badinage helped materially to allay his excitement and the resultant furious pounding of his heart.

"Too bad about you, isn't it?" she jeered. "You know very well the doctor's orders are to avoid excitement and to cultivate a placid outlook upon life at its worst. Nevertheless, the instant you receive bad news you selfishly hoard it. Don't you know that bad news split between us doesn't occupy nearly so much valuable space in that stifled breast of yours? You climb into this car, Rance Kershaw, and cease your nonsense."

Rance Kershaw grinned at his daughter lovingly. He relished being bullied by her, for he was fully aware of her reason for bullying him; aware that under her calm, debonaire exterior there were tears and terror.

They drove in silence for about two miles. Then her father said: "You were right, darling. I found a real jolt waiting for me in the post office. The Valley Center bank has bought our mortgage from the Savings Bank of San Francisco, an' Babson's called it. Got to pay up in five days or the bank'll enter suit to foreclose."

"Yes, that was quite a shock," Lorry agreed, "but it might be worse. We have a year in which to redeem the ranch, and in that time we may be able to refund our mortgage."

"We'll be counted out thirty days after the suit is filed. Nate Tichenor will close in on us and take the cattle as soon as he hears Babson has fled suit. And after that it wouldn't be worth while tryin' to refund the ranch mortgage. A cattle ranch without cattle on it is a liability."

"Still we're not downhearted," the girl protested. "We have two thousand head of feeders that aren't mortgaged to Nate Tichenor and we can get twenty dollars a head for them. If we sell them now we can escape with forty thousand dollars, but if we hold them to put more fat on them Babson or Nate Tichenor will attach them to help cover a deficiency judgment. Forty thousand dollars can be made to earn 5 per cent net. That's two thousand a year. And I have a high school teacher's certificate secured in the University of California. I can earn eighteen hundred dollars a year teaching school—and on thirty-eight hundred a year you and I can live the life of Reilly. Not a worry in life, old-timer."

"You can live the life of Reilly on it, honey, but I shall not. It will kill me to give up Eden Valley—an' you know why."

"It would have been a blessing if our family had never seen Eden Valley," the girl cried passionately. "It's been paid for in blood and tears and heartbreak and social ostracism, and all we have to show for the years is a private cemetery filled with Kershaw women who died heartbroken and Kershaw men who passed away with their boots on. And at last the Hensleys have triumphed over us."

"They got two more in their cemetery than we have, Lorry."

"But they haven't any debts—and after fighting fifty years to own all of Eden Valley they'll win at last. Nate Tichenor must have money enough to buy in our ranch at the sheriff's sale. Well, he's earned his victory. If anybody is to get our part of Eden Valley, I hope it will be Nate Tichenor. I wonder what sort of man Nate Tichenor has turned out to be?"

"I dunno, Lorry. I wouldn't attempt to figure even a half-breed Hensley. His father, folks do say, was a right peaceable, fair man, an' when he married Angle Hensley he wrote me, enclosin' his photograph, an' advisin' me that marryin' into the Hensley family didn't mean he'd married into the Hensley-Kershaw feud. I took him at his word—an' he kept it. But his son was raised a Hensley. He went armed after his fifteenth birthday. I figured him an' your brother, Owen, would shoot it out some day, which was why I never sent Owen to the high school at Valley Center. The principal discovered Nate Tichenor were a forty-five in a shoulder holster, an' ordered him to leave it home thereafter, but young Tichenor wouldn't do it, so they hove him out o' high school. An' they do say he was the smartest boy in the country."

"He's been gone from Eden Valley since the war," Lorry mused. "Nine years of life outside may have civilized him. I hope so. You've got to admit, dad, he hasn't been an importunate creditor."

"He don't have to be. The longer he holds off the more interest'll accumulate an' the more cattle he'll have to levy on for his deficiency judgment. He's smart. He don't figger to do no half-way job bustin' us."

"Too Bad About You, Isn't It?" She Jeered.

"Well, whatever happens to us it will be worth while," the girl finally suggested, "provided it ends this senseless, bloody feud."

"The feud ended," Ranceford Kershaw replied, "when your brother was killed in France. The last Hensley I tangled with put me out of the runnin'. A man so crippled he can't walk a mile or set a horse has got to wait for his enemies to come to him."

They were passing a cluster of buildings set among some scattered bull pines in the meadow about a quarter of a mile to the left of the road. A lateral road led from a gate on the main highway down to these buildings which constituted the headquarters of the Hensley ranch. Since 1920 when Angle Tichenor, the last of the Hensleys, had died while her son was with the army in France, the Hensley headquarters had been deserted.

For thirty years Ranceford Kershaw had never passed that gate without keeping a wary eye on the Hensley headquarters. And since the habit of thirty years may not be broken in six, he gazed upon the buildings now—and started as he saw a column of smoke issuing from the chimney of the low ranch-house. Lorry saw the smoke also, and instantly stopped the car.

"It'll be too late to dispose of them two thousand feeders now," her father told her. "Nate Tichenor's back. Him an' Babson are both after us. They'll strike together. Ah, poor Lorry—my poor little girl. Sorry, honey—so sorry—"

He sighed deeply and lurched over against her; his head fell on her shoulder. She set the brake, moved a little in her seat, put her right arm around his neck to steady him and with her left tilted his face upward toward hers with a look of love unutterable; racked by excruciating pain, nevertheless his high courage was equal to the effort of a smile; and then the light went out of his eyes and his heaving breast was stilled forever.

For a long time she had known that some day he would leave her thus—hove him out o' high school. An' they do say he was the smartest boy in the country."

"The Kershaw pride was in the dust at last. The last of the Kershaws was appealing to the last of the enemy for help!"

For two hundred years the Kershaws had not been able, with patient submission, to tolerate more than a modicum of civilization. The first progenitor in America arrived with Lord Baltimore; thereafter each generation moved at least one state farther west; one might have traced the begonia of the tribe by its headstones, albeit many a Kershaw never found a grave at all. They were hunters, trappers, soldiers, and cattlemen.

When Robin Kershaw, at the age of twenty-two, came home from the Mexican war, he discovered that during his absence his father's ranch in northern Texas had been raided by Comanche Indians, his family slaughtered and the cattle stolen or dead in a drought. Robin Kershaw rode with Fremont to California and, when gold was discovered, was among the first to stake a claim in the Sierra foothills. Before the snow flew in the winter of '52, he had amassed a fortune of half a million dollars—and it was time to be moving on.

He was now twenty-eight years old and he could afford to marry and move on to the solitude the Kershaws called peace. The land hunger was gnawing at his heart; he liked the cattle business and he had in him in full measure the ancient primitive urge for free grass and free water. So he married a Juno who had walked to California beside a covered wagon in '49 and with her rode up into northeastern California and cast about for a spot where the Kershaw odyssey should end.

On a day in the year of 1853 he drove his three pack mules out of the timber on to a bald spot on the crest of what is now known as the Goose Nest range, and saw three thousand feet below him the land of his heart's desire.

"Lovely—and lonely," the girl beside him murmured, and she spurred her horse in beside him and slipped her soft hand into his, so rough and calloused. Thus they looked upon their heritage.

It was a wild elliptical valley into which he gazed; Kershaw estimated it should contain nearly one hundred thousand acres. It was, in reality, a vast mountain meadow. No trouble to winter cattle there. He could cut sufficient wild hay to insure bringing them out in the spring strong and fat. A large stream meandered down the approximate center of the valley.

After a long, searching, wistful contemplation of the scene below him Robin Kershaw said: "We'll call it Eden Valley."

The two youthful pioneers slid down through the talus and pine needles at last into the beginnings of Eden Valley—a canyon about a quarter of a mile wide and four miles long.

Bulgaria Ranks Third for Men and Women Who Live More Than 100 Years

Recent investigations reveal that there are 158 persons in Bulgaria who are more than one hundred years old, according to a correspondent in the New York Times. This figure, in proportion to the total population, gives Bulgaria third place for the world record, Lithuania being first and Portugal second. Of these 158 persons, only four have lived their lives unmarried; 85 are men and 73 are women; among them are 143 Bulgarians, four Pomaks, three Turks, three Gypsies, two Jews, one Armenian, one Kutzovlach and one Rumanian.

Of the women, eleven have had five children, four had eight, eight have had nine, three had ten, one has had eleven, one has had twelve, four have had thirteen, one has had fourteen, one has had fifteen and two have had sixteen.

Of these men and women, thirty-seven were parents before they reached the age of sixty, but twenty-eight became parents between the ages of sixty and sixty-five, forty-one between the ages of sixty-five and seventy, twenty-one between seventy and seventy-five, nine between seventy-five and eighty, while two had children when over eighty.

Longevity appears to be hereditary, for the parents and grandparents of these old people mostly lived longer than the average. Thirty-three of them are teetotalers, while 125 drink moderately, but only 48 smoke, a curious fact in a country which grows tobacco. They are all even-tempered, cheerful folk.

Sixty-nine of them have spent their lives as shepherds or shepherdesses, forty-eight have worked upon the land, eighteen were servants, three were blacksmiths, two dressmakers, two gardeners and one nondescript. Only fifteen spent their lives as housewives.

Managing Canadian Indians
The administration of all Canadian Indians is carried on by the department of Indian affairs at Ottawa. Every province is divided into agencies each of which includes several reserves. An Indian agent is made responsible for the welfare of the Indians residing in his agency. On reserves where agriculture is carried on, a farm instructor promotes agricultural work among the Indians. Each band of Indians also has a government of its own elected by the members of the band. The chief and councillors (or headmen) are elected every three years. Each band cannot have more than one chief and fifteen headmen. Two headmen are allowed for every two hundred Indians.

Kershaw rode his horse out into the brown whirling creek waters until they lapped his stirrups, then turned back and joined his wife on the high ground along the foot of the hills.

"A creek in the summer and fall, but a good-sized river in the winter and spring, Lorry," he announced. "There'll be no dry years in this country, Lorry; and there'll always be a world of water for summer irrigation."

The partner of his brave dreams nodded, for she, too, was a child of the soil and could understand his enthusiasm. "The country's laid out like a frying pan, Robin. This narrow canyon is the handle and the big valley is the pan."

Keeping to the high ground at the base of the hills they journeyed down the Handle to the Pan, fording numerous lateral torrents that roared down the mountainside to the main stream below.

Debouching from the Handle into the Pan (for so they continued to allude to the peculiar disposition of the country) Kershaw discovered that the creek was now, indeed, a river. And, as was the case in the Handle, so it was in the Pan. For fully a mile on the west bank of the stream the ground was inundated.

"God's the ditch-tender in Eden Valley, Lorry," he exulted. "Once a year for perhaps a month. He gives free surface irrigation on a strip two miles wide and no man knows how long."

He left her and rode out into the sluggish wash to a point within a hundred yards of the main channel. "From a foot to six inches deep," he announced, when he rejoined her on the high ground. "What a grand soaking! And then a couple of inches of new rich silt from the high country back yonder is left behind to fertilize the grass when the waters recede to the channel!"

She smiled upon him, rejoicing with him in this discovery of unlimited free grass and water.

On a mesa about forty acres in area, and backed up against the western hills, they found the location for their future home. Perhaps a hundred stately pine trees grew upon this mesa, with lush green grass between.

"I can have a garden," Lorry murmured rapturously.

"And there's timber on our hand for our home and outbuildings," he added. "We'll build a grand big log house and well furnished. When this valley has been surveyed and thrown open to settlers we'll have a squatter's right to this site, on account we've been here first."

They camped that night in the pine grove. Side by side, on a foot-deep carpet of soft pine needles, they lay under the stars that night and talked and made brave plans for their future.

Truly, they were as Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden; and there, beneath their heavy woolen blankets, content in each other's arms, they saw no vision of the Serpent. They dreamed not of the hatred and envy of humankind that one day should make them, their children and their children's children fight to the death for this dear silent land; that one day the waves of a new civilization would engulf them; that one day they should be crowded!

The following morning they continued their journey down the valley. Half-way down, the land on each side of the creek rose to a slight angle toward the hills on each flank, thus gradually narrowing the area subject to annual overflow from the creek. The channel of the creek grew deeper, too; the man who would irrigate these lands in summer would have to erect a very expensive dam to raise the waters above the bank level and divert them out over his haylands. Unquestionably, the upper half of the valley was, by far, the most desirable from every point of view, and there rose in the heart of Robin Kershaw a fierce desire to own it. Yes, he must have not less than fifty thousand of those rich acres. He could support a cow to every three acres, probably less; that meant he could run, in the valley alone, not less than fifteen thousand head.

"I'll be the cattle king of Eden Valley," he told his wife suddenly.

Presently the valley commenced to pitch downward, the angle of pitch increasing gradually as they rode. The quality of the soil and the quantity of grass decreased with the pitch; the valley commenced gradually to pinch in until finally they found themselves riding through a gorge about two hundred feet wide, walled in by towering granite cliffs about a hundred and fifty feet high. The gorge suddenly debouched into a vast, semi-rid plain into which the surging torrent of Eden Valley creek poured, gradually flattening out in the inhospitable soil.

Robin Kershaw turned in his saddle and looked back. "If a fellow wanted to an' there was some other good country off yonder that wanted irrigation, he could easy put in a dam in this box canyon. Plenty o' buildin' material right handy."

The buttress of forested mountains on the northern side of the valley had gradually decreased in height until at the lower end of the valley they degenerated into a spur of grassy hills.

Virginia Dare's Birth.

On August 18, 1587, five days after the baptism of the Indian, was born John White's granddaughter, Virginia Dare, the first English native of America. She was baptized on the following Sunday. Thus was Elizabethan civilization anchored here by a baby, a mother, and the American family.

Around little Virginia Dare remained more than a hundred men, women and children. They were left alone for three years. Then John White, who had gone back to England after establishing the colony, returned to find that they had disappeared.

The only promising clue White found was the sign "CRO" blazed on a tree. Since these letters were part of a code agreed upon by the colonists three years before, the rescue party hoped that their friends had gone to Croatan, home of the friendly Manteo, who had promised sanctuary in emergency; but the captain, pleading bad

ROANOKE ISLAND

Modern Transportation on Roanoke Island.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

MODERN engineers have thrust Virginia Dare trail down the islands off the North Carolina coast and built the Wright Memorial bridge across Carrituck sound, bringing the islands into touch with the modern world, yet the visitor still finds in Roanoke Island the speech and customs common in the days of Sir Walter Raleigh whose followers established there the first English settlement in America.

From the skipper of the small mail boat that plies between the islands one may supplement his limited knowledge of this region supplied by obsolete descriptions and by copies of the original letters and maps left by Sir Walter Raleigh's adventurers. He learns that Roanoke Island perfectly exemplifies the adage that byways of isolation pocket the choicest realities of life. Here is a genuine, inbred dignity, expressive of a mild-mannered, hospitable folk. The islanders are proud of their physique, speech, manners, and customs—historic survivals of old English Devon.

The ubiquitous automobile did not reach Roanoke island until less than a decade ago. For land transportation there were up to that time only two-wheeled carts and sand ponies and occasional oxcarts. Even the little sand ponies' tradition went back to castaway vessels, to the Portuguese and to Sir Walter Raleigh's voyagers.

On Raleigh's attempts at colonization hinged momentous results in the New world. The "Lost Colonies," though they began and ended Sir Walter's ventures upon the North Carolina Sea Islands, were the first English-speaking settlements in America.

Discovered in 1584.

In 1584 the adventurer obtained a patent from Queen Elizabeth, whose favors his genius readily commanded, and dispatched to the New world the first of his expeditions. The little band, under Amadas and Barlowe, sailed through an inlet on July 4, 1584, to discover Roanoke island—a spot so favored in climate and setting and so rich in fruits, game, and bird life that it seemed to them a veritable paradise.

Back to England they sailed to describe it, taking with them two friendly Indian chiefs; and also tobacco, saffras, maize, pumpkins, squash, grapes, and other fruits. Their story created excitement, and in the following year Raleigh sent out Sir Richard Grenville with a second colony, numbering 103 souls, determined to make a permanent home on Roanoke island and establish plantations.

They landed on August 17, 1585, and built a log fortification, to which they gave the name "The New Fort in Virginia," also spoken of as "Fort Raleigh." However, they could not live at peace with the Indians, and the entire colony sailed back with Sir Francis Drake in 1586, just two weeks before the arrival of reinforcements. Finding the fort deserted, the new group also returned to England, but left 15 men on the island.

A third expedition, sent out by Raleigh in 1587, found the fort demolished and no trace of the 15 men except the bones of one slain by the savages. The gruesome discovery was a shock to the homeseekers, and they willingly followed the advice of their leader, John White, to forestall future hostility by making friends of the Indians. The plan succeeded admirably. Manteo, one of the friendly chiefs, was even baptized and given a title of nobility as Lord of Roanoke—the first English peerage in America.

On August 18, 1587, five days after the baptism of the Indian, was born John White's granddaughter, Virginia Dare, the first English native of America. She was baptized on the following Sunday. Thus was Elizabethan civilization anchored here by a baby, a mother, and the American family.

Around little Virginia Dare remained more than a hundred men, women and children. They were left alone for three years. Then John White, who had gone back to England after establishing the colony, returned to find that they had disappeared.

The only promising clue White found was the sign "CRO" blazed on a tree. Since these letters were part of a code agreed upon by the colonists three years before, the rescue party hoped that their friends had gone to Croatan, home of the friendly Manteo, who had promised sanctuary in emergency; but the captain, pleading bad weather and lack of supplies, forced the party to sail away before the clue could be investigated.

What had been the colonists' fate? The blazed sign was all that was ever found of the Lost Colonies, except hasty marks of departure, burned chests, rusty iron implements, household effects, and books. Even in that wilderness colonists of Shakespeare's day could not exist without books.

Whatever the fate of the colonists, either they or their early successors left their Elizabethan English dialect, manners, customs, and features in this American byway.

As the little mail boat bobs along toward Roanoke island, the traveler's thoughts turn from the story of Virginia Dare and the first colonists to another historic drama of the Banks. In 1812, just across the channel from Roanoke island, on the ocean sand spits of Nags Head, the pilot boat Patriot, carrying Theodosia Burr Alston, daughter of Aaron Burr and wife of Governor Alston of South Carolina, ended its last voyage. After the tragic collapse of her father's career and the loss of her little son, the only hope of the Burr family, Mrs. Alston was in the depths of despair. She set sail from Georgetown, S. C., to join her lonely father, and disappeared forever!

Life on the Island.

A bit of life on Roanoke is revealed by a recent visitor, a woman doctor.

An old midwife and nurse, the widow of a life service man, was to care for her temporarily in her ancient cottage by the sound, where she lived alone. Her name was "Mis" Bashi—the "Mis" an island designation for mistress, and "Bashi," she said, "a Bible name after Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah; but they call me Bashi." Surmises on the island do not denote the individual, for the families in a hamlet are usually all members of one or two clans.

"I'll wipe the dusties off you, your cornbread is waitin', and your cake all dressed up in coconut."

Mis' Bashi stirred about the spacious old brick fireplace, with its crane and firedogs, and brought from the coals an old four-legged skillet in which she had baked a delicious cornbread. Lying on the hearth was a mammoth bushy-tailed, long-haired cat, one of the numerous beautiful descendants of an island Maltese and a brown, bushy-tailed Norwegian cat that had been the sole survivor of a wreck.

In a worn slab-wood rocker in which the old woman had rocked her six children the doctor rested after dinner and listened to her tale of a remarkable life history.

What she learned entitles Mis' Bashi to a place in the annals of medical history. The old nurse belonged to the island's remnant. Her blood, her sterling character, and her beautiful, broad dialect were heritages of the old Devonshire castaway. She was comely and agile, her visage one of strength and thought.

Of only five weeks "schoolin'," she had never learned to read, but had been taught to work indoors and out and to spin. At sixteen "out" (old) she married and at twenty-one "out" in a far life service station hamlet, she undertook her first obstetrical case.

"Doctor, I knew nothin' of it; but Mehaley read me a doctor book, and the moon was comin' to full, so the baby would be thrifty. One born in the dark of the moon is not."

Mis' Bashi's Nursing. On her little plantation, in pine woods by the sound, though widowed later, she cared for a psychiatric mother, raised her own brood and her mother's and her brother's children, cared for cows, pigs, and gardens. Then for 45 years she ministered to all the sick of the region, a local doctor coming only at rare intervals.

Her sand pony Napoleon carried her in a two-wheeled cart through woods and sand and water, in gale or sunshine, to her patients. Often afoot she swung with her Viking stride down beaches or through the woods. She was smart, exact, and knowing, though she signed by mark, and she was known as a "couthy" (capable) woman. Her dignity of bearing and courtesy were exquisite. Thus she fell into the role that nature cast for her.

Months later the doctor realized how the personality of this island woman, linked with a touch of science, prevented morbid results from household conditions. She established her own art of medicine and it worked.

SOLOMON'S MINE AGAIN

Finding of King Solomon's mine, search for which has caused the death of thousands, has been reported by a prospector in Broken Hill, northern Rhodesia. He declares that he discovered it while following a wounded buck, but refuses to give the exact location except that it is in the center of a mine concession. For more than 300 years men have been searching for the legendary mine. In Solomon's day it was said to be so fabulously rich in gold that silver became of little value in his court. The search has gradually narrowed down to an area of about 250,000 square miles. Arabs tortured many natives in an effort to extract information about it and many Portuguese tramped hundreds of miles in search of it.

Point of Order for Young Hubby

"Remember the Bride," Is Advice Offered to Bridegrooms.

Some time ago there appeared, under the authorship of Francis F. Belne, a set of "Warnings to Bridegrooms."

Advice was given the man about to make the transition from bachelor to benedict on many of the difficulties he would have to contend with.

He was advised about his engagement and his bachelor dinner. How to survive to his wedding day and how to survive that. He was warned about the pitfalls of a honeymoon, such as ocean travel and too-expensive resorts. And he was given good sound advice in the matter of his finances.

All the details of getting married being conscientiously warned against, I searched diligently for warnings on the most important detail in a man's marriage, which, in my opinion, was the bride! It developed, however, that these "warnings to Bridegrooms" were entirely from the man's point of view in which the bachelor dinner and avoiding embarrassment at the wedding entered very largely; the bride not at all!

Hence it is up to this column to amend the "Warnings to Bridegrooms" as from the woman's point of view.

The bachelor's dinner and how to slip the clergyman his fee may be matters of exorcising importance—at the moments of their importance! But these soon pass. There remains then the permanent item which will have the greatest effect upon the success or failure of the bridegroom's marriage. That is the bride. And one warning which anyone with the bridegroom's interest really at heart must feel impelled to express is, "Remember the bride."

Remember that without the bride

you would be no bridegroom. Remember that in this wedding which you want so keenly to get over and done with, she also has an important share. And remember, above all things, how you got her to be that bride! Don't make the mistake of assuming that being a bridegroom is rightly the dividing line between what you have made her think you are and what you really are. If when you remember the methods of your courtship, you feel that marriage is no time or place for such nonsense, don't reveal that too suddenly! Let your bride down easy. Be diplomatic in adapting her to realities. Don't drop all the illusion at once. There are limits to what a bride can take on the chin.

The trouble with brides is that they believe everything you have told them. They have built you up, with your assistance, of course, into a most attractive and satisfying dream of a husband. With years and experience they can develop resignation. But you can't expect that at one fell swoop. So keep some control on your revelations. The picture will have to change, of course, from lover to husband. But use some discretion.

Remember—and this is without doubt the most valuable item in this woman's advice to bridegrooms—there is no truth in the old saying that "Once you've caught a car, you've got it, and that's all there is to it." That is a fiction in which lies the greatest danger to the success of that wedding at which you are the bridegroom. Women have discovered that, but not the bridegrooms. So I'm telling you—and here's luck to you!

Pulitzer Prizes

One doesn't compete for the Pulitzer prizes. The poetry award, according to the will of the late Joseph Pulitzer, is made for the best book of verse by an American author published during the year. Usually the publisher submits to the committee awarding the prizes what he considers the best book of verse he has published during the current year. The committee then is the judge, and the awards are announced some time in the spring.

"spring fever" time is here

...and what does it mean to you?

JUST THIS: if you feel listless, run-down, appetite dull, with a weak, let-down feeling... perhaps nervous and worn out... why not make an effort to "snap out" of this condition?

Try toning up your appetite... increasing your red-blood-cells... the best way to be happy.

You need a tonic—not just a so-called tonic... but a tonic that will tone up your blood. S.S.S. is specially designed to do this for you. Unless your case is exceptional you should improve as your oxygen-carrying hemo-globin increases.

At all drug stores in two convenient sizes. The larger size is more economical. © The S.S.S. Co.

MORE THAN 50% LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE

IN THE NEW Firestone HIGH SPEED TIRE FOR 1934

THE new Firestone High Speed Tire for 1934 is the greatest tire Firestone has ever built. With its wider, flatter tread, greater thickness, deeper non-skid, more and tougher rubber, and greater non-skid contact with the road, you get more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

This new development is made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, whereby the cotton fibers inside the high stretch cords are soaked and coated with pure liquid rubber. This provides greater strength, safety and blowout protection.

Firestone engineers pioneered and developed the first successful balloon tire in 1923, and it is only natural that Firestone would lead in the further development of tire construction to meet the demands of the high-powered high-speed cars of today.

Preference is being given Tawas City men on the relief rolls in assigning sewerage construction work.

Mr. Schneider said:

Free labor and materials for sewerage construction totaling $16,809 has already been given the city under the C. W. A. Under the P. E. R. A. set-up, Mr. Schneider said, the city received $2,500 of free labor up to May 15. Construction materials obtained under the C. W. A. are still being used.

Of ten-inch sewer pipe 836 feet has already been laid, while 4,038 feet of eight-inch pipe has been placed.

Sewerage construction already completed is as follows:

Sherman street between railroad and Sixth avenue; Fifth avenue from Sherman street to Second street; Second street from Fifth avenue to Eighth avenue; Second avenue from railroad to North street; First street from Second avenue to First avenue; First avenue from First street to North street; Second street from Second avenue to Third avenue.

Under the original C. W. A. project the following sewers are yet to be laid:

Second street from Third avenue to Fourth avenue; Fourth avenue from State street to First street; Third avenue from State street to North street; First avenue 225 feet north; State street from Fifth avenue to Seventh avenue; Sixth avenue from State street to First street; Fifth avenue from Second street to 1,000 feet north; Seventh avenue from 150 feet south of State street to First street; Eighth avenue from Second street to First street; Ninth avenue from M-55 north 300 feet; M-55 from Eighth avenue to Tenth avenue; Tenth avenue 200 feet north.

Sizes of sewer pipe already laid or to be laid were given by Mr. Schneider. Ten-inch pipe is provided for Sherman street from the railroad to Fifth avenue; Fifth avenue from Sherman street to State street, and in Second avenue from railroad to Second street. The balance of the sewer pipe is eight-inch size, except for 225 feet of six-inch pipe in First avenue, north from North street.

School Notes

Two games were played last week by the high school team. On May 11 they defeated St. Joseph by the score of 6 to 5. On Tuesday afternoon of this week they journeyed to Harrisville and again defeated them, this time by the score of 14 to 7. On Thursday afternoon they played East Tawas at the home diamond.

The first match of the tennis tournament will be played today. Several entrants in both boys and girls singles and doubles, and mixed doubles have been registered.

On May the eleventh, the Senior class and high school teachers were entertained by several mothers of the Seniors by a theatre party. All attended a double feature at the Rivoli theatre and afterward they lunched at the city hall. Hostesses were: Mrs. Bing, Mrs. DePott, Mrs. Cholger, Mrs. Boomer, and Mrs. Brugger.

On Thursday, May 17, fifteen eighth graders from some country schools were entertained by the school. In the morning they visited with friends and in the afternoon they attended a program in the high school and then a program in Miss Brown's room.

The Senior class took the fourth standardized test last week in civics. The median obtained was 42, which was the lowest that has been obtained by the civics class for four years. This result shows that there is considerable room for improvement.

Third and Fourth Grades

Doris Clark and Mary Ann Nelson visited our room Monday afternoon.

Primary Room

Jack Smith, who has been absent a week because of illness, is back at school.

We enjoyed seeing the play, "Hedge and the White Peacock," which Miss Brown presented last week.
