OPPOSITION TO SEWER PROJECT IS EXPRESSED

You will be asked to vote to bond the city on the 28th of this month for $12,600 to complete a sewerage system, which has already cost some $19,000 under the supervision of a high-priced engineering firm, and is not yet finished, and useless as it now stands.

The streets have been covered with dirt and litter and are now in a disorderly condition, and never again will have the trim and neat appearance and green grass as in the years gone by.

The engineer in charge is said to be under a salary of $200 a month, and the work is a long way from being completed.

A meeting of the taxpayers was held at the City Hall Monday evening when the engineer in charge, Mr. Francis, explained that all the work so far done is in the section of the city between Dead Creek and the river, only, and it was necessary to have another $12,600 to complete that part of the work so it would operate. This would not serve the east side of the river, and not the north and south side, and he did not know how much might yet be required to complete the project, but hoped the Government would put up the money for 50% or 75% of the work if the city would put up the rest, and that we would have to grope and plod along hoping for the best.

Nothing was said about the necessity for the project nor what portion of the money to be spent would go to the workman, and how much to the officials in charge. We were told also that this matter had nothing to do with the waterworks scheme which has been launched and is now pending at Washington.

Nothing was said as to how the bonds were to be marketed—or paid, when due, nor how the man who cannot pay his taxes now is going to get money enough to make sewer connections, which would cost anywhere from $20 to $30, and pay the increased taxes.

We were told the system would cost about $245 a year with a little daily attention from the city marshal, except that once a month or so the sludge or refuse would have to be dug out and carted away and disposed of.

Some discussion was had as to the men employed, whether city or outside men, but nothing very clearly explained. Nothing was said about higher taxes keeping out men who might wish to come here with a factory or business, or that low taxes would (Turn to No. 3, Back Page)

FINE TRIBUTES PAID TO GEORGE A. PRESCOTT, Jr.

Many fine tributes were paid G. A. Prescott, Jr., Republican candidate for secretary of state at a banquet held in his honor at the Bear Track Inn on U. S. 23 last Monday night.

The banquet, sponsored by H. N. Butler of East Tawas, was attended by about 45 business and professional men from nearby Northeastern Michigan communities. Butler, acting as toastmaster, expressed it as his intention that the meeting should provide an opportunity for old friends to renew their acquaintance with the candidate, and for those unacquainted with him to meet him informally.

Several speakers were called on. Among them were Asa Whiting, Arenac county clerk; Probate Judge Roy Crandall of Standish; Harry Converse, prosecuting attorney of Arenac county; Sheriff John Johannes of Standish; Floyd Perilberg, editor of the Arenac County Independent; Rev. P. G. Wahlstrom, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church of East Tawas; John A. Stewart of East Tawas, prosecuting attorney for Iosco county; Sheriff Charles C. Miller of Tawas City; Will McGillivray, editor of the Oscoda Press, and T. F. Marston of Bay City, secretary of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau.

Delivering the final address of the evening, Mr. Prescott expressed his appreciation of the spirit of confidence and good will shown by the gathering.

Services Will Be Held Under Auspices of Legion

The services will be under the auspices of the Jesse C. Hodder Post, American Legion. The Tawas City public school, the Emanuel Lutheran school, and the St. Joseph's school will take part.

The Jesse C. Hodder Post will meet at the billet at 8:00 o'clock. From there they will march to the cemetery. The exercises at the cemetery, which will begin at 10:00 a. m., will consist of the opening by the Post Commander, Memorial prayer by the Chaplain, exercises by the school pupils, address by Rev. W. A. Gregory, roll call, Post Commander's Memorial address, decoration of the mound, the benediction, the salute to the dead by the firing squad, taps, and decoration of the soldiers' graves.

All ex-service men are urged to be present, and to take part in the Post formation.

Queen Esther Members Attend District Banquet

Tuesday, May 22nd, was a red letter day for the local Queen Esthers. Twelve members of the Tawas City group and three members of the Junior group of East Tawas accompanied by Mrs. McLean, Miss Worden, and Mr. and Mrs. Gurley, went to Bay City to attend the banquet of the Queen Esther department of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, held at the Madison Avenue M. E. church, hosts to the Saginaw district convention.

Our circle, which was organized in December, is the youngest in the district, and we were glad to have such a large representation. Miss Helen Pattinson, who is in charge of the Queen Esther work in this district, asked our circle to put on a ten-minute playette, which was very well received by all present. We have cause to be proud of our girls for the manner in which they presented their parts in this playette.

Queen Esther members were present from Alpena, Saginaw, Bay City and Tawas City and these, with friends and members of the W. H. M. S., numbered about 150 guests. Mrs. Homer Rodeheaver was the principal speaker. To those who have never heard her we will say as one of the girls did, "She's grand." We who have heard her will, if possible, avail ourselves of the opportunity to hear her again.

We are already planning to attend next year's meeting and are looking forward to another good time.

N. E. M. LEAGUE SEASON OPENS NEXT SUNDAY

Tawas City "9" Will Engage Standish On Local Diamond

Sunday afternoon promptly at 2:30 o'clock, E. S. T., the twelve teams in the two divisions of the Northeastern Michigan league will swing into action to battle for any honors "Lady Luck" has in store for them. Tawas City, winners of the title last year, will be hosts to Standish, runners-up to the champions, at the local diamond for the season's opener. These two teams battled almost evenly last year in some of the best played games seen in this section of the state. Last year they met five times, all being very close games, with Tawas City being victorious in three of the contests. Appropriate ceremonies will be arranged and due to the change in the personnel of the line-ups for both teams, much interest attaches to the "Hi-Speeds" and a large crowd is expected.

Last Sunday Tawas City played a 12 inning 4-4 tie game with Hemlock Road. Sloppy fielding by the locals in the sixth inning permitted their opponents to come from behind and tie the score. "Mub" Lixey pitched excellent ball and proved that he was ready for the opening game next Sunday. Frank, Hemlock Road hurler, also pitched a splendid game despite the fact that numerous errors were made by his teammates. Both pitchers struck out 15 men.

Sunday's opening day games in the league will find the teams playing as follows:

American Division

Standish at Tawas City. Alabaster at Whittemore. Beaverton at Gladwin.

National Division

Hemlock at East Tawas. Houghton Lake at Rose City. Ioscos at Au Gres.

Mother-Daughter Banquet Is Held At East Tawas

A mother and daughter banquet was held in the Methodist church, East Tawas, last week Tuesday evening, sponsored by the Older Girls' Class of the Sunday school. It was attended by one hundred thirty mothers and daughters. The following program was given: Ruby Evans, chairman, introduced Gladys Gregory, the toastmistress of the evening. The toastmistress called on the following: Caroline Gregory, Toast to Mothers; Mrs. Luther Jones, Response to the Daughters; Helen Turner, Piano Solo; Skit, "The Lighthouse Tragedy," presented by the Older Girls' Class; Mrs. Bernard Coggan, Vocal Solo; Mrs. Will Davidson, Address.

The tables were beautifully decorated with tapers, crepe paper, carnations, and hand-painted programs.

Mrs. Henry Miserer, a great-grandmother, being the oldest mother present, received a bouquet of carnations.

Fertilizing Gardens For Good Results Explained

Backyard manure is still the best fertilizer for a garden because of its organic content which will hold moisture, especially in a sandy soil. However, it is not a complete fertilizer and therefore phosphorus should be added at the rate of about 30 pounds to each ton of manure. Add from three to four tons to each quarter acre. The phosphate need not be added with the manure, but after the garden is spaded and worked into the soil with the subsequent hoeing and raking.

When manure cannot be had a commercial fertilizer is very satisfactory but a green crop, sod or similar substance should be added to provide organic matter. In general a fertilizer containing 3 to 6% of nitrogen, 8 to 12% of phosphate, and 4 to 6% of potash can be relied on for satisfactory results. Much should have a higher percentage of potash and a smaller percentage of phosphorus.

Commercial fertilizers are best applied more often and in smaller quantities to avoid burning.

Leafy vegetables, such as, lettuce, swiss chard, and cabbage need an extra supply of nitrogen. If growth is slow, sprinkle nitrate of soda or ammonium sulphate at the rate of one pound to 50 or 60 feet of row. Plenty of water is necessary.

Salute for Soldier Dead

MEMORIAL day is an occasion of various aspects and it may be approached from many different psychological angles. A day of war, it brings to mind the horror of fields of carnage. The imagination conjures up brave armies locked in struggle, battling for sacred national ideals, willingly offering all that men may give that those ideals may survive and prosper. The broken earth, the tortured sky, the shriek of shells, the rattle of musketry in repeated volleys, the cries of the wounded and dying—all these terrible sights and sounds are represented in the tragic picture, fearsome to ponder. But over them, canceling them, runs the thought of the heroism they imply, the grandeur of the sacrifice they entail.

A day of peace, it likewise prompts renewed thanksgiving for the security, harmony and freedom which the dead have earned for the living. The heart, conscious of the debt, throbs with acknowledgement of the benefaction which they have bestowed, the blessing which they have conferred, and the mind, no less aware of the obligation, soberly faces the problem of preventing further armed strife, of banishing fratricidal conflict from the world.

A day of patriotism, it challenges the attention for its demand upon each citizen, its implied prescription that each individual career shall be of use and value to the national welfare. Perhaps it is in this regard that it has most compelling significance—it summons the rank and file of the land to labor and live in obedience to the noblest of ideals.

A day of mourning, it calls for sorrow for the lost. But a day of joy, it promotes exultation in the knowledge that when need was for immolation there were men courageous enough and gallant enough to respond.

Above all a day of consecration, a day of prayer, a day to pledge renewed allegiance, it gives opportunity for the expression of brotherhood and love for living and dead alike.

IN CEMETERIES both small and large will assemble groups of patriotic citizens for the purpose of decorating the graves of those who fell in war. Brave veterans they were. Some fought with weapons which today seem to us rather crude. The army rifle of the Twentieth century is an immense improvement over the gun of the Civil war. Rapidly firing machine guns, poison gas, submarines, torpedoes and all the implements of modern warfare were to them unknown.

Like all the wars of history the Civil war was fought by young men. The following table indicates the ages of the Unionist soldiers who fought in the Civil war: Fourteen years of age and under, 2,111; fifteen years of age and under, 104,987; sixteen years of age and under, 844,891; seventeen years of age and under, 1,151,438; twenty-one years and under, 2,159,798; twenty-five and over, 46,626; forty-four and over, 16,071. The total number of enlisted men was 2,778,304, three-fourths of whom were under twenty-one years of age. "The power which hurled slavery from its throne was young men dreaming dreams by patriots' graves."

We cannot think of Decoration day without the portrait of Abraham Lincoln presenting itself vividly before us. What this country might have suffered without his leadership, only the Good Providence knows. The purpose of the war, as Lincoln conceived it, was not to free the slave, although that was a factor in the case; the principal reason for the war was to save the Union. The war of 1776 taught the world to know us; the war of 1812 taught us to know ourselves. The first won for us our independence, the latter our self-respect and solidarity.

Plutarch writes: "The fortune of all good men is that their virtue rises in glory after their death, and that the envy which any evil man may have conceived against them never survives the envious." So do we remember those whose supreme sacrifice has cemented into one nation our United States of America. All honor to their memory as we place the laurel wreath alike upon the graves of the khaki, the blue, and the gray.

AN UNEXPECTED FRIEND

WHILE Redcoat the Tanager was telling Peter Rabbit of his dreadful accident, Mrs. Tanager was flying about in the treetops nearby, calling anxiously. She did not look at all like Redcoat, for she was dressed almost wholly in light olive green and greenish yellow. "He can't even fly up just a little way so as to get off the ground!" she cried anxiously. "Isn't it dreadful, Peter Rabbit, to have such an accident happen? We've just got our nest half built, and I don't know what I shall do if anything happens to

Meanwhile Mrs. Tanager Came and Talked to Him and Fussed About Him.

Redcoat. Oh, dear, here comes somebody! Hide, Redcoat! Hide!" Poor Redcoat, with the old look of terror in his eyes, hurried along, trying to find something under which to hide. But there was no way of hiding that wonderful scarlet coat. Peter heard the sound of heavy footsteps, and looking back saw Farmer Brown's Boy coming. "Don't be afraid, Redcoat," he whispered. "It's Farmer Brown's Boy, and I'm sure he won't hurt you. Perhaps he can help you." Then he scampered off a short distance and sat up to watch what would happen.

Of course, Farmer Brown's Boy saw Redcoat. No one with any eyes at all could have helped seeing him because of that wonderful scarlet coat. He saw, too, by the way Redcoat was acting, that he was in great trouble. He understood instantly that something was wrong with one wing, and running forward he caught Redcoat.

"You poor little creature," said Farmer Brown's Boy softly as he saw the cruel twig sticking through Redcoat's shoulder. "We'll have to get that out right away," continued Farmer Brown's Boy, stroking Redcoat ever so gently. Somehow at that gentle touch Redcoat lost much of his fear and a little hope sprang into his heart. This was no enemy, but a friend. With his knife Farmer Brown's Boy cut off the twig on the upper side of the wing. Then, doing his best to be careful and to hurt as little as possible, he worked the other part of the twig out from the under side. Carefully he examined the wing to see if any bones were broken. None was, and after holding Redcoat a few minutes, he carefully set him up in a tree and withdrew a short distance. Redcoat sat there for some time as if fearful of trying that injured wing. Meanwhile Mrs. Tanager came and talked to him and fussed about him and coaxed him and made as much of him as if he were a baby.

After a while he ventured to try his wing and found that he could fly. Then he and Mrs. Tanager disappeared in the Green Forest.

"I knew Farmer Brown's Boy would help him, and I'm so glad he found him," cried Peter happily and started for the dear Old Brier Patch.

THIRST-QUENCHING DRINKS

LONG ago before a mixed drink was ever thought of, the lemon was the king of fruit, used for refreshing, healthful drinks as well as served hot, for medicinal purposes. Today it is more popular and more widely used, as it is needed to give zest to almost any other fruit drink.

For those who like to have a tinkling drink to offer a friend in a hurry, the fruit juice mixed with the sirup is a great convenience. Take one and one-half cupsful of lemon juice and add three cupsful of sugar. Bring to a boil and cook for ten minutes, then bottle and place in the ice chest. Use the sirup in glasses of water and ice without any further preparation. A tablespoonful or two to a glass is sufficient.

MARILYNN'S her name, but we Have another we employ! It describes her perfectly! Bundle of joy!

There are sacks of shining gold. There are silks of rarest dye. There are bundles, which unrolled, Capture the eye.

But a priceless tapestry Spread against the blue of day Does not mean as much to me As one clear ray

From a baby's azure eyes! With a glance both pure and coy She can bring me Paradise! Bundle of joy!

Howe About:

Education Lonely Old Men Shiftless People

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

IT IS often said the people must become educated before reform can be expected. This is accepted as meaning every man must be so completely educated in our modern way as to be able to teach in college. Education thus becomes so great a task we are discouraged in contemplating it. . . . Our estimate of an education is wrong. After a man is thirty, if not naturally a dunce, an intelligent reading of Wells' "Outline of History," combined with his own experience, will educate him. Those intending to teach should attend technical schools, as do doctors, lawyers, painters, engineers, etc. There are dozens of short summaries of everything one needs to know; a new one was added last fall, and writers are favoring that style of writing lately. These summaries not only educate a reader, but entertain him better than will detective stories or novels.

I know an old fellow whose children are all married and gone, and who does not sleep well. He does well enough during the day, but anyone passing his house late at night may see lights burning. The servants are kind, but he will not impose on them, so he is alone and wide awake a good deal at night; and night is especially lonely. Lately he employed a woman of sixty to assist him from 11 p. m. until people are moving on the streets again. She has a soothing way about her, and he gets to sleep oftener during his dangerous hours. If he awakens, he finds her asleep in her chair at the foot of his bed, but she awakens easily, and again she reads to him, or they talk. During these hard times, many good women are seeking employment, and the crop of lonely old men is large. Why not?

I regret shiftlessness, but have admired shiftless people. The man and wife I hang around most are the most shiftless people I have ever known, but both are "good fellows," and tremendously smart. They have long had in their employ an old colored servant they now owe so much they can't pay her, and thus get rid of her by discharge. The black woman needs an operation, and they are trying to find a doctor who will perform it on credit. They have had her teeth fixed four times, and still owe for it.

Americans are judged abroad by what American books, magazines and newspapers say; by speeches delivered at meetings of various social clubs and political organizations. All these are unnatural, and foreigners do not know us; our publicity agents have given us a character we do not deserve. What the average American thinks and believes is not known even in his own country; the American attends moving picture plays, not because he is much interested in the vulgar people who make them, but because they cost only twenty-five cents, and occasionally have a good news reel or comedy. . . . I lately attended a moving picture theater, and only six others were there. Never before have I seen a "show" presented to an audience of seven, and it was the best theater in town, showing the best available picture plays. American people are not as crazy about the disreputable crowd at Hollywood as is believed abroad.

I may be mistaken in what I think I know in my eightieth year, but I am more certain of it than ever before, and I have less time left in which to change my mind.

At eighty I am not afraid of the future. I have been treated with reasonable justice all my conscious life, and expect as much of the future. No one can convince me there is a devil after death to torture me for eating, drinking, loving, hating, trading, venturing. I have lived a long time, and thought as clearly and fairly as I could, and have heard not a word from a reliable source to make me fear a devil to torture me after I am dead. A million ghost dancers have howled dimly at me throughout life without frightening me. They might as well cease dancing; the truth is not what they say it is. There is more mercy than they claim.

I have a son I think is quite wise; rather able in taking care of himself. The other day he was at home, and a suspicious man kept calling him by telephone. I knew the suspicious man, and what he wanted: a big favor: to "work" my son. . . . I warned him, and the young man replied: "That's all right; don't worry; I'll 'work' him right back." . . . There are so many who try to "work" you I warn you to acquire the ability of my son, or you'll be ruined.

I have not looked it up, but am informed that the British Encyclopedia lists fourteen of Goethe's mistresses. The fact that all nations of the world joined in ceremonies to honor Goethe on the hundredth anniversary of his birth seems to indicate that such indiscretions are finally forgotten. . . . Still, sinner men should remember this great charity was not shown Goethe until his hundredth anniversary; probably when alive, he found gossip as annoying as do men of today.

HUMMING BIRDS

Nest of a Humming Bird.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

ALTHOUGH members of the humming bird family are the tiniest of birds, they belong to a huge family. There are 488 known species of humming birds and there are 150 or more additional sub-species or geographic races, making a total of more than 600 recognized kinds.

They are found only in the New world, where they range from the Strait of Magellan to Canada and Alaska, constituting one of the most brilliantly colored and specialized families of birds found in this vast region.

The family is most abundant, as regards species, near the Equator, in the Andean region of South America. The Republic of Ecuador has 148 kinds of hummers and Colombia 105 known forms.

In passing north and south from these centers of maximum abundance, species become fewer; so that in North America north of Mexico (but including Lower California) only 16 kinds of humming birds are found regularly, while three others may come casually within these limits.

In the United States humming birds are found in greatest variety in the Southwest, only one species, the ruby-throat, ranging east of the Mississippi river.

The mountain meadows of our southwestern states in midsummer, when their rich assortments of flowers are in bloom, frequently swarm with humming birds of a number of species feeding on the blossoms and pursuing one another pugnaciously in pure exuberance of life. It is under such circumstances that these sprightly birds appear at their best, and one never tires of watching them.

Humming birds are most abundant in regions where there are thickets or other woodland interspersed with meadows and openings where the birds may feed and disport themselves in the sunshine. Some kinds are inhabitants of heavy forests, these being found mainly in tropical regions, where certain species have become adapted to life in the dense rain forests.

Inhabitant of Dense Forests.
The emerald humming bird of Haiti and the Dominican republic lives in the densest of forest growths, where the vegetation drips constantly with water from the daily rains, and comes only occasionally into little openings to feed at flowers. Its deep-green coloration blends with its forest background, so that often the subdued humming of its wings, as it moves among the branches, may be heard for some time before one can distinguish the form of the bird in the somber shadows.

An existence of such a type is in strong contrast to that of the beautiful long-tailed Sappho hummer that is found in the Andean foothills of western Argentina, living in open valleys grown with low creosote bush, where the birds are constantly found in the open.

The majority of hummers are characterized by glittering reflections from their plumage, and as a general rule the males are more brilliant than the females.

The hues of the plumage are iridescent and are caused by the refraction of light. On close examination of the feather of a bird, it is found to be composed of many fine filaments, which under the microscope are seen to be divided into still finer divisions. In the shining feathers of hummers, there is an abundance of dark pigment in the tiny feather divisions known as barbules. The sheath overlying this pigment is either smooth and highly polished or has many minute lines on or under its surface. This structure causes a reflection or a refraction of the light, according to the circumstance, making the brilliant hues found in these birds.

As for form, the variation among hummers is truly astonishing. The smallest bird in the world is Helena's humming bird of Cuba, from two and one-fourth to two and one-half inches or a trifle more in length, with the wing only one and one-third inches long or less and the bill less than half an inch long.

This tiny sprite is sometimes called the fairy hummer. In contrast to it, there is the giant hummer of the central and southern Andean mountains that is about eight and one-half inches in length and has a wing five inches long. This species is as large in body as a bluebird and is strong and powerful, resembling a large swift in general appearance.

Variations in Form.
Variations in details of form are as remarkable as those in size. In one species of hummer, the sword-bearer, the bill is nearly five inches long, being longer than the rest of the bird. Another has the bill less than a quarter of an inch long.

Most hummers have straight bills, but there is the sicklebill, in which the bill is curved so that its outline forms one-third of a circle. Such adaptations allow feeding in special flowers, the sword-bearer frequenting long, trumpet-shaped blossoms, while the sicklebill is partial to certain orchids, palms, and other peculiar blossoms, where the throat of the flower is curved.

Variations in the form of the tail in this group are equally remarkable. Most species have the feathers of ordinary length, forming a square or slightly notched tail, but in contrast to these there are the racket-tailed hummers, in which the lateral feathers are greatly elongated, with the tip narrowed and then expanded so that it resembles a racket. The long-tailed hummers have tails three or four times as long as the body, the longest feathers being seven inches in length.

It is usual for male humming birds to have a spot of brilliant iridescent color on the throat. With this there are often peculiar feather developments in the form of crests, or gorgets, that provide increased surface for these areas of brilliant color, and often produce most remarkable and extraordinary appearances.

In search of specimens of humming birds for the National museum, Dr. Alexander Wetmore of the Smithsonian Institution visited the little island of Vieques, east of Puerto Rico, in the West Indies, and on his first morning in the country collected a tiny hummer feeding at flowers in the top of a small tree. In the air it had appeared ordinary, but, to his amazement, when it came to his hand it possessed a long, pointed crest of the most brilliant green imaginable.

The nests of humming birds are made of soft plant down, formed into a cup-shaped structure that in most instances is placed firmly on some small twig or branch, sometimes near the ground and sometimes high above it. The outside of this structure usually is covered with bits of bark and moss bound in place with spider web, so that the nest is inconspicuous, resembling merely a knot on a limb. Some species attach their nests to leaves or to the ends of branches, so that they are semipendent.

Two white eggs, resembling pearls against their background of plant down, are laid by most species whose nesting habits are known. Occasionally one egg constitutes a set, and rarely three. Though large in comparison to the size of the parent, in the case of the smaller hummers, the eggs are very tiny. Those of the verdain hummer of Haiti, a species that is barely larger than the smallest species known, measure less than half an inch long by one-third of an inch in diameter.

Eat Nectar and Insects.
That humming birds feed on the nectar of flowers is universally known, but the part that nectar plays in their diet is not so great as is popularly believed, since large numbers of tiny flies, bees, beetles, and other insects, as well as spiders, are captured in the flower corollas.

These tiny birds are hungry for meat as well as for sweets. The stomachs of the various species that have been examined to learn something of their food have been filled with fragments of insects and spiders. After the nutriment has been extracted from these, the indigestible parts are formed into tiny pellets that are regurgitated to empty the stomach for another meal.

Some kinds of hummers, particularly forest-inhabiting forms, pay little attention to blossoms, but spend much of their time in gleaning over the moss-covered bark of the trees of their forest haunt searching for animal food. Others have been seen feeding on tiny gnats gathered in whirling clouds in the air. The hummers hang with rapidly vibrating wings, seizing the minute insects one by one in flight and whirling about with the greatest celerity in securing their prey.

Flowers, however, are attractive to most humming birds. In the semiarid sections of western Argentina, a red-flowered epiphyte is highly attractive to them. The general tone of vegetation in these desert areas is gray-green, so that the red color of the flowers stands out prominently at a distance. It is evident that they are sought by the hummers, as the birds fly directly from clump to clump even when these are separated by a considerable distance.

In their feeding, hummers, like bees, carry pollen from blossom to blossom and some species are important agents in the fertilization of flowers.

Burns and Scalds

WHEN we think of all the people who have died following severe burns and know that now we are in possession of a form of treatment which prevents this terrible loss of life, we are indeed grateful.

You will remember that previous to 1928, from 15 to 40 per cent of those with severe burns died, whereas, now the death rate is about 4 per cent.

This is due to the treatment of burns by tannic acid.

Dr. P. H. Mitchener, London, tells us that during the period from 1929 to the present time, when tannic acid compresses have been used as the routine outpatient treatment for all burns and scalds, no deaths have occurred among the slighter cases, which average 800 a year, and of which about one-third are children under ten years of age.

The treatment of burns and scalds following proper cleansing of the damaged part, aims at lessening collapse by stopping the absorption into the blood of the substances which usually cause collapse and death in from 12 to 48 hours after the burn.

The treatment also aims at lessening the amount of fluid from the burned part which is often so serious and so often fatal in the first six to 12 hours.

Another aim is to prevent poisoning of the system from the harmful material on the burned surface, as this may cause bronchopneumonia and death in from five to 12 days.

Doctor Mitchener keeps on hand a stock solution of 2 per cent tannic acid and 1 to 2,000 bichloride of mercury.

In homes or shops where burns are not so frequent he compounded a tablet containing 17½ grains of tannic acid, ½ grain bichloride of mercury, and 1 grain of boric acid, which tablet dissolved in two ounces of water gives a solution of the necessary strength though slightly muddy in appearance. It can be used equally well for spraying when this method is preferred.

If there is no tannic acid available, strong tea poured over the burn has given good results.

The relief from suffering and the saving of precious lives by this tannic acid treatment certainly gives cause for thankfulness.

Don't Force the Child to Eat
IT IS only natural that parents should like to see their children eat, because they know that growth and development come from eating. To make sure that the child gets enough food, large meals at the regular eating time and an extra "bite" in the mid-morning and mid-afternoon is often given.

However, it is just here that some parents may be making a mistake, as the most important point is not the amount or quality of the food eaten, but the appetite, the natural appetite of the child.

Dr. A. C. Gipson, Gadsden, Ala., points out that since hunger is the natural stimulus under which appetite develops, it follows that all things which increase or decrease the feeling of hunger naturally increase or decrease the appetite. Therefore, methods should be used that will help to empty the stomach in a short time so that the youngster will be hungry by meal time.

This means that too much food should not be eaten at one time, and foods that remain too long in the stomach should not be used. Thus, foods rich in fat, pass out of the stomach slowly.

All fried foods and nuts remain a long time in the stomach and should therefore be avoided where an appetite needs development.

Milk also, although a fluid, is one of the foods most slowly to be passed out of the stomach. Thus the mid-morning glass of milk which is so helpful in building up most children may therefore be a bad thing for a child with a poor appetite.

Large amounts of sweets and starchy foods tend to destroy the appetite. Meats, broths, and especially meat extracts stimulate the appetite and are therefore used in the first part of the meal.

The meals should be spread as far apart as possible. The way the first attack of loss of appetite is treated is most important, if further attacks are to be prevented. On the first attack of refusal of food, the amount should be reduced instead of increased, to allow the child to develop hunger, as hunger stimulates appetite.

The whole thought then is not to try to force food into the youngster, but to try to develop a natural appetite.

Settlers Called Coureurs
Many of the earliest settlers of Ohio were what the French called Coureurs, or outlaws. The Canadian fur trade early fell into the hands of companies organized and chartered in France, and only members of these companies, or those to whom they gave permission, could trade in hides. Hence, to make a living by engaging in the beaver trade with the Indians, many Canadian settlers forsook their homes and families and took to the wilderness to the west. They were later driven onward by regular traders and officials, and finally vanished in the prairies and mountains of the Far West.

SEWER BOND ISSUE

Election

A MESSAGE TO THE TAXPAYERS OF TAWAS CITY

This advertisement is sponsored by the Tawas City Improvement Association. Through civic interest in our city, this organization has studied the proposed plan of bonding the city for $12,600 for the purpose of building a disposal plant, a pumping station, and constructing intercepting sewers, which will make possible the completion of our sewer system. After thorough investigation and discussion these individuals have seen fit to whole heartedly endorse this bond issue and also to ask for your support of this project when you as taxpayer cast your vote on Monday, May 28th.

What Has Been Accomplished . . .

To date the Federal Government has expended $14,000 for labor on this sewer project and an additional $5,000 for material. This sum of money has been given to Tawas City through the C. W. A., and after the C. W. A. ended, the Federal government carried on this work through the Federal Relief Administration which is now operating in Tawas City. This expenditure to date has provided 33,000 hours of work for men in our community.

This project has provided 51 Tawas City men with much needed work and also provides the city with a civic improvement. The work completed has been accomplished by only a small city expenditure. The cost of the proposed bond issue over a 20 year period will average $2.21 per $1,000.00 valuation. We believe that this bond issue should be approved by Tawas City taxpayers upon its own merits.

What is to be Accomplished . . . .

If this proposed bond issue is approved, it will provide a way of utilizing the sewer that has already been constructed. The sewers that have been constructed and those that are to be constructed will be connected to the disposal plant for immediate use. The Federal government is planning to continue relief work through the coming winter, and it is believed by those in a position to know, that if Tawas City co-operates at this time by raising $12,600 we will get the needed assistance to finish our system completely.

The money which we are called on to raise at this time is to be used for the purchase of materials, with the understanding that the F. E. R. A. will furnish labor equal to the amount necessary to complete the project and provide employment for Tawas City men who are in need of this work. The plan now calls for 2,500 hours of labor per week.

SYNOPSIS

Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies suddenly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. Years before, at the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for ranching and cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley.

CHAPTER I—Continued

On the crest of the spur they halted. Directly below them lay another valley even larger than Eden Valley, but save on its eastern side it was not timbered. Nor was it, even remotely, as verdant as Eden Valley.

"There," cried Robin Kershaw triumphantly, "is the land that needs the water old Mother Nature is wastin' off yonder. Some day when we're gone, our children will build that dam I spoke of, back the floor waters up most to the crest o' this spur, cut a canal across or drive a tunnel an' lead the water off down yonder. Good farm'n' valley there, Lorry."

He continued: "No, the Lord ain't treated yonder valley jest right. I reckon it gits enough rainfall to make it fair dry-farm'n' land, but come a dry year or a succession o' dry years an' that valley'll sure raise a crop o' broken hearts. Lorry, I sort o' figger we'd ought to call that country yonder Forlorn Valley."

"I christen thee Forlorn Valley," the girl answered, and blew a kiss into the solitude. Then, together, they rode down into it.

CHAPTER II

They spent that first summer in tents, while Kershaw and his men felled trees, peeled the bark from the logs and dragged them out into the sunshine to season. They dug a well, got out fence posts, and enclosed horse pasture with a stake-and-rider fence; and when the logs had been seasoned by late fall, they built a spacious and comfortable log house with a wide veranda around it.

The following spring Kershaw brought in fifteen thousand head of cattle. They were scrubs—old Spanish-California stock; but they were the only cattle he could buy and, since his feed cost him nothing, he was content with them and the profit he knew he would make after growing them out. Deer, elk, and antelope were plentiful, so he never slaughtered a steer for meat. He prospered.

For the succeeding eight years he was not disturbed. A few nesters came into the valley and set up small herds, but there was plenty of grass for everybody. After 1862, when the homestead law was enacted by congress, men began to come in and file on homesteads. Robin Kershaw and his wife immediately filed homestead grazing claims on the two sections immediately surrounding their ranch headquarters; thus, to a considerable extent, availing themselves of the first riparian rights on Eden Valley creek.

With the proclamation of the war between the states fully half the settlers in Eden Valley volunteered for service in both armies. One of the first recruits to the Union army from California was Robin Kershaw, despite the fact that he was now the father of six children.

He returned with a permanent limp in his left leg and the title of major, to find that his business had prospered. With the farms of the Middle West denuded of their cattle to a large extent by the war, beef prices were up, so Kershaw sold every head of stock he possessed and shipped them to Chicago and Kansas City via the newly built Central Pacific railroad. Then, with his checkbook, he commenced the elimination of his neighbors in Eden Valley.

By 1870 he owned in fee fifty thousand acres of Eden Valley—and then Joel Hensley, late of the Confederate army, came. Hensley had some capital and he, too, yearned for Eden Valley. He outbid Robin Kershaw for the lower half of the valley, and Kershaw let him have it, for, after all, Eden Valley was large enough for two, and Kershaw knew he had the cream of it.

Almost before he realized it was impending he had a bitter quarrel with Joel Hensley. Like Kershaw, Hensley was a Texan—a fierce, belligerent man of the breed that was responsible for the most heroic and dramatic epitaph in history:

"The Thermopylae Had Its Messenger of Defeat—The Alamo Had None!"

Kershaw had fenced off his portion of the valley, and in common justice, he asked Joel Hensley to pay for half this fencing. Hensley, glancing sardonically over the fence at the luxuriant meadows of his neighbor, access to which this fence denied his cattle, replied coldly that he couldn't spare the money. Thereupon Kershaw patiently informed him that he would loan him the money, with cattle as security. Hensley replied that he preferred not to be in debt.

"Well, I see you intend to be unneighborly," Kershaw answered, "so we'll not argue the matter further. However, there is another matter that must be adjusted, whether you have the money or not. I am turning loose on the summer range this year five hundred pure-bred beef-type bulls. Your herd bulls are scrubs, and your cattle and mine roam the public domain together. Hence, you are bound to reap an equal benefit with me from the use of my expensive pure-bred sires. That wouldn't be fair."

"Can't help that," Hensley retorted. "I have no money to buy pure-bred range bulls and compete with you."

"I'll loan you the money, Hensley, and it will be money well invested. And you will not be doing your neighbor a gross injustice."

Greed and envy incite men to strange decisions. Joel Hensley retorted: "You're too patronizing."

"Very well." And Robin Kershaw rode away.

In May the Hensley and Kershaw riders drove the cattle of their respective employers up into the summer range in the mountains. But when the Hensley riders returned to the valley the Kershaw riders remained, scoured the range and shot every scrub bull they found wearing "Bar H," the Hensley brand. Also they maintained a patrol all summer and rather effectually succeeded in keeping the Hensley cattle on a sequestered portion of the range. The result was that the Bar H had a 10 per cent calf crop that year while the Circle K (the Kershaw outfit) had 80 per cent.

Joel Hensley was torn between a desire to kill Kershaw or permit him to live, in order that he might borrow from him sufficient money to purchase pure-bred beef-type bulls. Finally he decided on the latter course.

Robin Kershaw saw him coming, so he buckled on a six-shooter and went to meet him. "Well?" he demanded coldly.

"Guess I'll have to buy them pure-bred range bulls, neighbor." Joel

"Lorry, I Sort o' Figger We'd Ought to Call That Country Yonder Forlorn Valley."

"Lorry, I Sort o' Figger We'd Ought to Call That Country Yonder Forlorn Valley."

Hensley forced a sheepish grin. "If you're still of a mind to let me have the money—"

"The situation has changed a mite since I made you that fair offer, Hensley," Kershaw's voice was very cold. "Your scrub bulls don't worry me now, so I'm not interested in helping you out. I wanted to be a good neighbor, but you wouldn't have it, so now we're enemies, and if you expect to drag yourself off the Circle K under your own power I reckon you'd better be startin' now."

Without a word Hensley wheeled his horse and departed. He had earned his humiliation and he realized it; yet the realization did not allay the fury that possessed him. Nor did he consider so seriously thereafter the advisability of killing Kershaw; he knew now that Kershaw was suspicious of him, else why had the latter appeared with a pistol at his hip? Evidently Kershaw would kill eagerly enough if driven to it; that he would back up for no man Hensley felt assured.

And there was Robin Kershaw II to be reckoned with, also. So he realized the danger of clashing with a prideful clan that was still fond of tracing its "kin folk" back a few centuries to a coat-of-arms!

So he nursed his hatred, borrowed money from a distant bank and bought pure-bred beef-type bulls. Indeed, he had to, or get out of the cattle business.

But Robin Kershaw was not yet through with him. Followed three years of subnormal snowfall in the mountains; hence, when the spring freshet came, Eden Valley creek overflowed but a tithe of the territory that was flooded in years of normal snowfall. But Robin Kershaw had put in a concrete diversion dam at the upper end of his ranch, backed the water up and over the low banks and led it by irrigation ditches all over his meadows. He could have permitted the water from these ditches to run under the line fence between his ranch and Hensley's, thus insuring Hensley the customary hay crop and pasture. But Kershaw turned the water, when he was through with it, back into the channel of Eden Valley creek.

Of course there was nothing Hensley could do about this. Kershaw had the first use of the water and when he turned it back into the channel at the boundary line he was quite within the law.

Kershaw put up his customary tonnage of hay that year and wintered his cattle well. Hensley had but a quarter of the hay he required and wintered his cattle poorly; and thin, undernourished cattle produce poor, undernourished calves and a lessened quantity of them.

Following the second year of subnormal snowfall in the mountains he suffered even greater losses. The third year he could stand it no longer. Again he called on Robin Kershaw.

He rode up to the latter's house and before the gate held up his hand, palm outward, in the old Indian sign of peace. Nevertheless, Robin Kershaw came out with a pistol on his hip; and the front veranda Robin II fondled a repeating rifle and watched Hensley as a cat watches a gopher hole.

"Kershaw," Hensley began, "you're ruining me."

"That's a lie. You've ruined yourself."

"I've got to have more water this year," Hensley shrieked. "When you're through with the water I want you to run it under the fence to my ditches. If you don't, by G—d, we'll argue this in the smoke. It's plain dirty of you to run it back into the creek again."

"Well, I suppose I could run it into your ditches," Kershaw mused.

"See that you do," Hensley reminded him, and rode off, little realizing that he had made an error of judgment. He thought he had bluffed Robin Kershaw.

When Kershaw was finished with his irrigation that summer, Hensley connected his lower irrigation ditches with Kershaw's and the water started running merrily down over the Hensley meadows. But almost immediately the flow ceased. Kershaw had opened the water gate on his diversion dam and turned the water back into the channel of the creek at the upper end of his ranch instead of the lower!

Hensley was now in a most unpleasant predicament. In the presence of witnesses (Robin II and two of the Kershaw cowboys) he had threatened, if denied the water, to argue the issue with Robin I in the smoke. "He'll make good," Robin Kershaw I decided. And he and his sons and his riders all rode armed with pistols and rifles.

But again Joel Hensley visited the Circle K. "Kershaw," he called from the front gate. "I'll pay for my share of that fence. With interest," he added.

"I don't need the money," Kershaw taunted him. "And I doubt if you'd maintain your share of the upkeep of that fence. How would you like to sell out to me? That's the best and easiest way to shed your water troubles. I'll meet you in a liberal spirit for the sake of peace, Eden Valley," he added, "ain't big enough for us both."

Two weeks later, as he rode in alone from the nearest settlement, Joel Hensley rode out on Kershaw from a clump of pines. Neither man hesitated; it did not occur to either to ask questions; simultaneously they drew and fired.

Mark, now the perversity of Fate. Had each killed the other the feud which, for the next forty years, was to make of Eden Valley a dark and bloody ground, would have ended then. But Joel Hensley's first cartridge had a defective primer—and Robin Kershaw's did not. Whereupon, a coroner's jury at Gold Run, the county seat, returned a verdict of justifiable homicide and restored Robin Kershaw to the bosom of his family. But Joel Hensley left a son—several sons in fact—and these inherited the casus belli.

CHAPTER III

No relatives, outside the immediate descendants of the Kershaw and Hensley clans, ever participated in the feud started by that defective primer, for it was a point of honor with both clans to "kill their own snakes." During three generations eleven Kershaws and four hired gunmen died with their boots on and two went to state's prison for varying terms. Of the Hensleys thirteen were killed, with five gunmen.

Neither side ever complained to the authorities; as they often said they preferred the good old six-volume law! Only very inquisitive sheriffs invaded Eden Valley seeking redress for the outraged law; and of the half-dozen who did, two, who knew too much, never returned.

At that, the feud surely must have died of inanition at times when the count on each side was even, but for the perennial casus belli of water. Years of lean snowfall in the mountains were years of lean profit for the Hensleys. Despite this disadvantage, the Hensleys prospered in the cattle business to the point where, in the year 1900, they were enabled to put in a diversion dam of their own in Eden Valley creek.

In 1917 there remained of the clan Kershaw its chief, Ranceford Kershaw, a widower of fifty, permanently crippled by reason of a soft-nosed bullet through his hip; his son, Owen, aged twenty, and a daughter, Lorraine, aged sixteen. Of the clan Hensley there remained three women, Angie Tichenor, a widow, and Hattie and Beulah Hensley, both old maids.

It was assumed, locally, that in the fullness of time Nathan Tichenor and Owen Kershaw would shoot it out together; hence, with one or both of the young men out of the way there should be peace, at last, in Eden Valley.

But the World war intervened. Neither Owen Kershaw nor Nathan Tichenor waited to be drafted.

War with Germany, it will be remembered, was declared on April 6, 1917. In March a furious freshet had washed out the Hensley diversion dam in Eden Valley creek. On the morning of April 7 Nathan Tichenor rode up to the gate in the white paling fence before the old log ranch-house of the clan Kershaw, and like his fire-eating grandfather, help up his hand, palm outward, in the old frontier sign of peace. From the veranda crippled Rance Kershaw glared down at him.

"Our diversion dam went out last month," said young Nate.

"Pleased to hear it, young man. Well?"

"I'm going down to San Francisco tomorrow to enlist."

"That's to your credit, if I do say so." Old Rance appeared to thaw perceptibly. "Still, you're a mite slow doin' your duty. My boy, Owen, left this morning."

"I wish him luck, Mr. Kershaw. What I came for was to ask you if you'd consider favorably the suggestion that one war at a time is enough for our people to be engaged in. Our dam's out, and I ask you, as a favor, to let us have the water after it's done its work for you."

"Why should you ask me a favor? And why should I grant it, young man?"

"Because my mother and my aunts have got to run our outfit while I'm in the army. I didn't figure you'd make war on women."

"How about the old fence bill, young man?"

Young Nate laid a check on the gate post. "My grandfather should have paid that, Mr. Kershaw. It was right law and ornerly of him not to. There's a check for it, with interest for forty years at 6 per cent added."

Science at Last Has Overcome Bar to Progress of Skin Transplanting

Surgeons for years have been able to transplant skin from one part of a person's body to another, says the Literary Digest, but tissue transplanted from one person to another almost invariably dies within a few weeks, probably because of slight differences in the composition of the blood, which hinder the transplanted cells in establishing themselves at the new site.

A method by which this difficulty may be met was announced recently by Dr. Harvey B. Stone, associate professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, Baltimore. In collaboration with Dr. J. C. Owings and George O. Gey, Doctor Stone has been able successfully to transplant thyroid and parathyroid gland tissue from one person to another by growing it for a time outside the body in a culture medium made from the blood serum of the prospective recipient.

In this way, he explained, the tissue becomes adapted to its future host, and when transplanted grows quite normally and survives indefinitely. An important feature is that only a few cells from the healthy gland are needed, and this missing tissue is readily replaced in the normal person.

This discovery, if other physicians are as successful with it as Doctor Stone and his associates, may be of the greatest practical importance. Individuals who have lost some essential gland may be permanently cured by transplantation. In the past such persons have required daily treatment for life with gland extracts. Further experimentation along the lines suggested by Doctor Stone may bring nearer the time when whole limbs or organs may be transplanted.

POULTRY

EARLY SEPARATION URGED FOR CHICKS

Experiment Station Expert Favors Segregation.

By Prof. W. O. Thompson, Poultry Husbandman, Rutgers University, N. J. WNU Service.

A great advantage to the poultryman will result if his birds are separated as to their inherited trait of early, medium or late maturity.

Students of poultry-breed improvement have found ample evidence to indicate that the best producers for the pullet-year, other things being equal, are the individuals which start laying early.

For Leghorns, this would be between 150 and 175 days of age. Such birds are precocious layers. In every hatch of chicks this spring there will be some individuals among the young pullets which will be precocious. There will be some which will not come into laying maturity until from 175 to 200 days of age, and there will be still others which are decidedly late maturing.

In preparation for such a basis of selection, every hatch of chicks should be toe-marked in such a manner that the date of hatch for every pullet will always be known. One hatch for example, might be marked with an outside left toe-mark; another hatch with an inside left toe-mark, and later hatches with other identifying toe-marks.

Keep Turkeys Away From Chickens, Specialist Says

Blackhead is one of the most serious ailments affecting turkeys, and one of the most common means for spread of this parasite is through chickens. Hence, larger turkey raisers of the state now make it a practice to keep the two kinds of fowl always separated, so that they cannot be on the same ground.

The name is a misnomer, C. M. Ferguson, state poultry specialist, says, for it has nothing to do with the head. It is evident in the bird by spots on the liver and by inflammation of the blind intestine. It causes heavy loss when it starts in a flock, and as yet no known cure has been announced.

Sanitation is the best preventive, along with isolation from chickens. The same organism is found in chickens but seldom causes death in them.

The "Billings" method, developed in Montana, is now a common method of rearing poults. This consists in raising the young turkeys on fresh ground, and again fencing off a space on one side of the house. After two months the birds are past the danger period, and then yards are rotated every month.—Ohio Farmer.

Scots Grey and Dumpie

Scotland has two breeds of poultry which may rightly be termed national and both, as might be guessed, by anyone understanding the practical Scotch, are hardy and useful. One is the Scots Grey and the other the Scots Dumpie. The latter fowls are so short-legged as to give them the appearance of being "creepers." That the Scots Grey has considerable antiquity as a breed is evidenced by the fact that the Scots Grey Specialty club, founded in Scotland in 1885, has traced it back for more than 150 years. Throughout the years the breed seems to have been noted for laying and table qualities combined with the hardness necessary for their native climate.

Poultry in Pastures

Wherever there is pasture for cows there is range for poultry. Fowls and chickens in a cow pasture keep it in better condition than when only cattle are running in it. Their own droppings are the best known fertilizer for grass. They spread the manure less evenly deposited by other stock. They destroy flies and other insects which annoy cows and horses at pasture. The farmer or dairyman who keeps what hens and chickens can be handled advantageously with his cows need not send more milk to market than can be sold at the established price.

New-Laid Eggs Important

New-laid eggs are the secret of successful hatches. Although hatching eggs are often kept for a considerable period before beginning their incubation, it is well known that a successful hatch is doubtful if they are more than ten days old and that two weeks should ordinarily be the limit. When held for several days the eggs should be turned daily. Eggs for hatching when shipped from a distance are generally held for 24 hours before "setting."

Slipped Tendons in Chicks

A condition known as slipped tendons is often found in chicks raised in battery brooders. It usually makes its appearance when the chicks are from four to seven weeks of age. The symptoms of slipped tendons are swollen hocks that assume a bluish-green color. The tendons slip out of place on either side of the hock, which often renders one or both legs useless. This trouble seems to be due entirely to defects in the ration.—Wallaces' Farmer.

YESTERDAY'S GENERATION ASKS—

DEAR Mrs. Post: My eighteen-year-old daughter is very fond of tennis and cannot understand why I hold it is not seemly for her to ride off with three boys to play tennis. I tell her she should suggest asking another girl to go with them. She considers me hopelessly "old-fashioned" and I have endeavored with little success to show her what you have voiced in the past: that conventions, though regarded by the present generation as irksome, have most excellent reasons for their existence, and observance of them would prevent regrets. Will you please express an opinion of my view?

Answer: Although, according to the present point of view, there is not the slightest impropriety in going off now and then with three boys to play tennis, I agree that it would be a serious mistake should she make going about alone with boys a habit. This is because a girl, who is always with boys, and never goes about with other girls, puts herself in a very insecure position. Perhaps you might explain to her that after all the word delicacy means a woman whom the wives, mothers and sisters of her men friends refuse to know.

DEAR Mrs. Post: What should I teach my son, who is nine years old, to reply to an introduction? I want him to say "ma'am" but I am told this is incorrect.

Answer: To a man, "How do you do, sir?" to a woman "How do you do, Mrs. Jones." "Ma'am" has always been a colloquialism—except when replying to royalty. But why "sir" is used when speaking to a gentleman and why "ma'am" is said to ladies in only a few localities is just one of those things that seem to have little reason further than that usage has made it so.

DEAR Mrs. Post: Will you help me plan a very small wedding in church, because it has been a long time since we've had a wedding in our family? (1) Is it necessary for the bride and groom to have any attendants (2) Is it permissible for the bride's mother to act as her matron of honor? (3) And may the bride's fifteen-year-old brother give her away?

Answer: (1) The groom must have a best man. All other attendants are optional. (2) Absolutely no, so far as walking down the aisle is concerned. But she could stand next to her and hold her bouquet. (3) Yes.

INVITATIONS

DEAR Mrs. Post: The other day we received this invitation: "Dear Mrs. Jones—Will you and Marie come in for tea on Monday, October 2 at 4:30? Mrs. Blank is staying with me and I have asked a few friends in to meet her." I know that ordinarily an invitation to tea written on a visiting card, or an engraved invitation, need not be answered. But what about this one?

Answer: This one is an especially polite invitation to tea in the form of a personal note. It should be answered with a note saying, "Marie and I will be delighted to take tea with you on Monday, and to meet Mrs. Blank."

My dear Mrs. Post: I am moving very soon, and a few days after I'm settled in my new apartment I would like to have a cocktail party. Could I tell my friends that I have moved to a new address and also invite them in the same invitation?

Answer: Of course!

DEAR Mrs. Post: My sister received a wedding invitation for the ceremony and reception of a very dear friend of hers who lives out of town and whom sister has not seen for several years. She cannot go and instead of the usual third person acknowledgment to her friend's parents, would it not be better for her to write a personal note and explain why she cannot be at the wedding?

Answer: Of course to this, too.

My dear Mrs. Post: We have invited out of town friends to come stay with us for a week. I feel that they will drive in their car, which means that they will have their chauffeur in town, too. Are we supposed to pay for garage rent and also to find a place for their man to stay, because we have no additional sleeping rooms where we could accommodate him?

Answer: No. Their car and their chauffeur are their responsibilities. If you have several servants and it is convenient to you to invite him to take his meals in your kitchen, he may perhaps accept this invitation. Or he may even then prefer to eat at a restaurant of his own choosing. At all events, the responsibility to lodge and board him would be yours only if you lived in a big house far out in the country.

SLICE ON COURSE GOLFING HAZARD; NO 'ACT OF GOD'

Hit in the eye by a golf ball as she was motoring, a New York woman took the eye to Judge Pettie's court the other day and sought damages in the amount of $1,000.

To this the golfer's counsel objected strongly, arguing that a gust of wind had carried the ball off its course, and that consequently, the accident was an "act of God."

The judge gave the case to the lady, who gets $750, and said in the course of a 19-page decision:

"It must be conceded that, although golf should not be deemed a hazardous game, a driven golf ball is a very dangerous missile and that its flight and direction cannot always be controlled by the player. The uncertainty is a part of the game. The ball, when struck, is liable to go down the fairway or fly off to the right or left or at any angle.

"The element of danger, therefore, though not intrinsic in the game itself, is nevertheless present, according to a given set of circumstances.

"The situation is not changed by the fact that the act of propelling the ball is in itself not wrongful and is for a lawful purpose, that is, to play the game.

"It is not likely that the conclusions I have reached would undue hardship upon any golf club, since the risk may be readily insured against for a premium which in the nature of things will be quite small."—Literary Digest.

Arthur and Round Table Very Real in Tintagel

Memorial Hall Erected to Mythical Warrior.

Washington.—Modern critics may doubt that King Arthur and his Knights of the Table Round ever existed, but in Tintagel Arthurian legend is so real that a stone memorial hall has been erected to the mythical warrior who is supposed to have led the Saxon kings of Kent in the Sixth century.

"Tintagel is a lonely, wind-swept village on the northwest coast of Cornwall whose chief claim to fame is the crumbling ruin of a gray old cliffside castle—one of the most remarkable monuments of antiquity in England," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"Whether or not King Arthur ever conducted his Table Round in the ancient stronghold that crowns Tintagel Head, it is certain that it dates back to an unfathomable age. To Cornishmen it seems logical that a legend which has survived so many centuries must have a respectable origin. So stories of King Arthur, Merlin the Enchanter, and others are preserved, if not strictly believed, in Tintagel.

Just Crumbling Walls.
"At Tintagel, as a matter of fact, what the visitor brings measures what he takes away. Come full of the Arthurian legend; come with Tennyson, with Geoffrey of Monmouth, with Malory, and in spite of the cynics, you will save nothing but romance.

"Nowadays Tintagel castle is but a tracery of crumbling walls on a vast headland, at the foot of which the most superb seas of Cornwall crash and glitter. So far below is the water that even when the thinnest mist is in the air it is hardly possible to see the white foam of the breakers.

"The castle is in two parts, separated by a deep ravine which, legend says, was once bridged. That is was impregnable before the days of artillery or aircraft is evident, defended as it is by steep cliffs and the sea. Roman, Saxon and Norman built here before the Cornish earls of recorded history.

"Today scores of sheep pasture fearlessly on the slippery slopes which plunge so swiftly to the sea. But the iron-studded door of the keep, as in days of yore, is still the only exit or entrance to the headland. Narrow, steep stone steps lead from it down the cliff to the high, narrow causeway linking the head land with the mainland.

"The banqueting hall of the castle is open to the sky and the sun and stars look down in turn upon its turf-clad floor. Grasses grow where once Ygraine, wife of the duke of Cornwall, watched the siege of Castle Terebil, on the mainland. When Terebil fell, Uther Pendragon, its conqueror, slew the duke and speedily

Demand for Horses Is Found to Be Growing

Ames, Iowa.—Despite the tremendous increase in sales of automotive units, which might be supposed to indicate a decrease in the demand for real horse power, it was predicted here this week that prices for "chunks," the middle size horse employed on the farm, would be much higher during the next year or two.

The demand now is far ahead of the supply, it was said by Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse Association of America, and by H. A. Aberg, state college authority.

In 1932 there were but 32 purebred stallions on the average in each Iowa county, against 100 in 1914. Iowa is indicative of conditions in other corn belt states.

The decrease in total number of horses has turned more than a million acres of land from pastures, on which the horses fed, to idle acres. Now, the farmers are buying more horses despite the fact that the demand for tractors is on the upgrade.

Chestnut Trees Coming Back, Say Foresters

Providence, R. I.—Chestnut trees are staging a comeback despite the fear of forest pathologists that they eventually might become extinct.

"We have found that sprouts from dead chestnut stumps are growing from two to five inches in diameter," said Dr. Walter H. Snell, chairman of the department of botany at Brown University. "They are growing 20 to 25 feet high in some cases.

"Until 1925, no forest pathologist believed that the chestnut had a chance of coming back," he said. "Its extinction was believed certain in spite of the fact that the chestnut is remarkable for its ability to send out sprouts from the stumps of dead trees."

Museum Adds Rare 165-Year-Old Bloom

Chicago.—A rare orchid of historic interest, collected in Tahiti 165 years ago by the English explorer, Capt. The specimen, dried and mounted according to herbarium practice, is preserved in as good condition as if it had been collected during the last year.

SNAKES HIS HOBBY

When Kenneth Johnson wakes up, looks at the foot of his bed, and sees snakes all over the place, it isn't what you think. In fact, it's quite all right. Because Kenneth, a student at the University of California, is in a fair way toward being an expert herpetologist. Johnson, who graduates from the university soon, has an ambition to be a zoo director. He's starting with snakes, and in cages along the foot of his bed he has two king-snakes, a six-foot indigo snake, a small boa constrictor, a moccasin snake from Florida, two chicken snakes from Texas, and a gila monster. He had seven rattlesnakes, but they developed something and died. He also has a black widow spider, reputedly fatal when it bites. He calls it Eliza and keeps it in a mayonnaise jar on his dresser.

True Friendship Shown by Child

Adults Might Do Well to Analyze His Ideas of the Word.

"There doesn't seem to be any more friendship these days, particularly in the large cities. People have no time for it!"

How familiar is that thought! People bemoaning that they see nothing of their friends, that they have no time for their friends, that friendship is dying out; others resenting the disinclination or inability of the friends to find time for them. "They begrudge the time for friendship," we hear.

And there may be the crux of the whole problem. Except for the instances when our friends need us, when there is some service to be done for them which involves a sacrifice of time, we should not be conscious of friendship taking time. It seems to me that when friendship is a drain on time it is no longer friendship, but a social rite.

Friendship is perhaps most perfectly exemplified in the relations of children. There is no more ardent friend, no truer friend, no friend more ready to give all and do all for his friend than a child. But does a child think of friendship as an obligation, as a drain on his time—is he aware of the necessity to take time from what he must or wishes to do to keep up his friendship?

No. The child does things with his friends. He makes friends in the first place with other children with whom he has interests in common. And they pursue those interests together. They do not regard their friends as people who must be called on, who must be "had over to dinner." They are rather the companions who exemplify the saying that a pleasure shared is a pleasure doubled—and the rest grows naturally out of that.

Of course the matter is not so simple for adults. The lives of children run more or less naturally in the same grooves: usually there is little to conflict with their loyalties. Whereas with people out in the world, there is constant conflict, constant divergence of thoughts and interests. It is none the less true, that many of the problems of friendship in modern life can be clarified if we stop to analyze those friendships, the motivation for them and the nature of them—in the light of comparison with how children are friends.

TOY SOLDIER HOBBY

One of the outstanding hobbies of European men is the collecting of toy soldiers. In fact, the hobby is so prevalent that there are not only numerous local clubs but an International Society of Collectors of Lead Soldiers which hold an annual exhibition. One man has more than 10,000 of these miniature warriors.—Collier's Weekly.

British Plan to Study Antarctic Region

Expedition Will Spend Three Years in South.

London.—A British expedition to discover whether the Antarctic is one or two continents will set out this fall.

It will remain in the frozen South for nearly three years, studying, principally, the thousand-mile coastline between Luitpold Land and Charcot Land.

This land practically is unknown. Sir Hubert Wilkins flew over it in 1929, but he saw only a small part of it.

The icy waste between Luitpold Land and Charcot Land is one of the largest unknown coastal areas in the Antarctic. An adequate survey of it will materially assist in establishing whether Antarctica is a whole continent or two.

The expedition will consist of 14 men.

of whom the following already have been chosen: J. R. Rymill, leader and surveyor and air pilot; W. E. Hampton, second in command, chief air pilot and engineer; Q. Riley, meteorologist; B. B. Roberts, surveyor and ornithologist; W. L. S. Fleming, chaplain and geologist; J. I. Moore, engineer and surveyor, and A. Stephenson, chief surveyor and meteorologist.

Rymill, Hampton, Riley, and Stephenson were members of the British Arctic Air Route expedition. The others all have had exploration experience.

The expedition also will make a trip down the west side of Graham Land, from Wilhelmina bay to Crane channel and back to Wilhelmina bay, approximately 700 miles. This coast has only been seen by Sir Hubert Wilkins from the air and never surveyed.

The expedition is expected to sail for the Antarctic in its own small ship in September. Meanwhile the exploration ship, Discovery II, will take a plane to Deception island, whence it will be flown to the mainland. The ship probably will reach Wilhelmina bay next December.

Three Arkansans Find Way to Aid Themselves

Fordyce, Ark.—Three brothers here are entering into the help yourself program with a real effort.

Oddie Word, Guy Word and Ollie Word have been receiving some relief from the government, but with the discontinuing of the program they have decided to start farming and raising whatever they can.

They found they had no mule to plow their ground, but that didn't stop them. Guy hitched up Ollie and Oddie and they plowed the turn plow while he plowed. They plowed the entire ground and have a crop started. They claim they plowed just as deep as any mule could have done.

Rats Must Play, Even if Cats Aren't Away

New York.—Two sizable cats tried to interrupt the gambols of nine larger river rats in a closed grocery store at Edgewater. For the fight that followed some 50 persons had ringside seats outside the store window.

When the clouds stopped rising from ripped flour sacks and the fur stopped flying, two cats lay dead on the floor with their paws in the air. The victorious rats resumed their interrupted foraging.

Firestone LEADERSHIP

"The Ultimate Test of Leadership is Performance"

FIRESTONE maintains its leadership in tire development by producing a new tire for 1934 with a wider tread, flatter contour, deeper non-skid, greater thickness, and more and tougher rubber, which gives greater non-skid safety, more traction, greater blowout protection, and more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

These achievements are made practical by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, providing greater adhesion between the plies of the high stretch cords and between the Gum-Dipped body of the tire and the tough, massive non-skid tread. It also provides greater strength, longer flexing life, and greater protection against blowouts.

Gum-Dipping made it possible for Firestone to design, develop and put on the market the first successful balloon tire in 1923. This tire was the pattern used by all others and completely revolutionized the tire industry and set new standards for the automobile industry.

For fourteen years leading race drivers have driven to victory on Firestone tires, built with Gum-Dipped high stretch cords. They have trusted their lives to Firestone Leadership—as they know that the patented Firestone construction features provide them with greater safety—longer mileage—and greater blowout protection.

council deserves high praise, Mr. Francis said. He commended the foresight that secured a large amount of sewer tile and other materials under the C. W. A., thus saving approximately $2,000 for the city.

Numerous questions asked by the audience were answered by Mr. Francis. He explained that the waterworks system, for which a P. W. A. application is now under consideration in Washington, must be thought of quite apart from the sewerage system. Although many persons have signified they would use the waterworks, if constructed, Mr. Francis emphatically stated that the waterworks system is not necessary for the proper working of the sewerage system. Extra sewer flushing, he said, is needed only where pipes have been laid almost flat. Nevertheless, provision has been made for such flushing through manholes should it be necessary.

Mr. Shepard, in describing the authority that the state department of health has over sewerage systems now being built, said that approval could not have been given the local project had plans not included a sewage disposal plant. The city, he said, would probably never again have so good an opportunity as a present to complete its sewerage system economically.

C. L. McLean, a member of the Iosco County Relief Commission was an impromptu speaker who pointed out how the county and city were helped in the matter of relief by the local work and expressed confidence that the federal government would continue relief work for many months to come. George Myles, a county supervisor, stated that out of 46 Tawas City men on the relief rolls who have been working on the sewerage job, 30 are taxpayers whose sole support is the present work.

of education was held Friday, May 25, at the Masonic hall.

In the first match of the tennis tournament Bill Mallon defeated Vernon Davis by the score of 6-7; 6-1. We hope to play more matches soon.

In a seven inning game last week Thursday the high school team defeated several players gathered from Tawas City by the score of 14 to 5. On Tuesday afternoon they defeated East Tawas high school in a close game by the score of 2 to 1, the game going to ten innings. Albert Quick was the star of this game, making four hits, one of them a triple, and making one run. Vernon Davis made three hits and Earl Davis made two. Jack Mark of the East Tawas team made three hits and scored East Tawas' only run.

attract new business. Nothing was said about how the city got along finely for 60 years without such a contrivance.

However, after a lot of discussion and explaining it finally simmered down that about the only benefit the city would receive would be the employment of working men during the completion of the sewerage plant, but that would be entirely contingent upon the Government furnishing the greater part of the money therefor. If the Government does not furnish this money then it will be up to the city to stand the whole cost and pay the bonds and increased taxes for the next 20 years. If the taxpayers of Tawas City desire to do this, well and good; it is up to them to go to the polls next Monday and vote to continue the expenditure of public money as it has been during the past months, but this $12,600 is coming out of the pockets of the taxpayers of Tawas City, not the Government, and it will mean putting a mortgage upon every home and business and all taxable property in the city.

The question is simply this: Does the city need a contrivance of this kind during the present hard time at this price?

The State of Michigan on a similar question this spring voted No, five to one.

Making Batiks
In making batiks, the first sketched on the cloth is well; then all the intricate designs which are to be protected by wax dye are carefully covered. The pieces of the cloth with melted wax on it is done by hand, by means of a tiny spouted cup the size of a teardrop. By dyeing, removing the wax, re-waxing and re-dyeing several times, the piece of batik is finally made. It seems simple enough, but weeks, or perhaps months, of patient labor go into its making. Some of the best cloth, worked in beautiful designs, is restricted to the use of royalty and the court dancers.

Electricity in the Hair
Electricity in the hair as evidenced by the cracking sound made when the comb passes through the hair is due to the friction of the gutta-percha comb upon the hair. This friction, or movement, produces a small amount of electricity hence, the sound.

Snow, Always Snow
Snow falls even in summer on the high slopes of Mauna Kea, the highest peak in the Hawaiian islands, although this is located only 20 miles from the equator.

Fish With Luminous Mouth
Among denizens of the sea is a fish which opens wide his large mouth, lights up the luminous organs around this mouth and waits for curious smaller fish to swim inside. There are luminous teeth, too, inside the mouth pointing inward to add a lure to a finny prey. As the bottom of the ocean is in darkness the brilliant lighting display of this fish is quite dazzling and inviting to any of the smaller creatures with a strong sense of curiosity.

Flies' Ears
In many flies, such as the blowfly, the ear is located in little hollow places at the base of each wing. Some other insects have numerous tiny "ears" which are nothing more than sensitive spots on the skin at various places on the body.

Mazatlan
Mazatlan, the Pacific port of Mexico, is set on a silvery beach shaded by coconut palms. Peaceful plazas and friendly natives help to make it one of Mexico's intriguing little cities. Back of it lies volcanoes and mountains, with strangely shaped contours, towering thousands of feet above green valleys studded with crystal lakes; vast fields of cotton, acres of corn and wheat and sugar cane; great groves of coconut palms; giant cypress trees, wide as streets, that were 6,000 years in making, and each stretching 20-foot talons toward the city.

British Import Skeletons
Britain has to import all skeletons used by its medical students. British law says that when a man dies he must be buried and when under the ground he must stay there.
