Travel Over the World..

While Sitting in Your Easy Chair

MOT all of us can go, as we would like to, and see for ourselves the strange peoples who live in foreign lands and the wonders of nature that lie beyond the horizon.

It is for such stay-at-homes as us that the writers and travelers of the National Geographic Society are scouring the world for interesting accounts of the "far places" which we would like to see, and their descriptions of what they have seen and what they would have us see are appearing regularly in this newspaper.

Look for the travel articles in this paper. Then tell your friends about it for they will be as interested in this leature as you are.

Modern Metropolis in Palestine Is Thriving

ebrates Birthday.

Washington,-Mention Palestine and ago-old customs, tribes, and cities come to mind. Yet Palestine, like the rest of the world, is changing. Tel Aviv, a thriving modern metropolis of nearly 70,000 population, did not exist in 1909. Its site was then only a deserted area of rolling sand dunes, north of the port

Tel Aviv celebrated its twenty-fifth birthday with a trade fair to which nine foreign nations and scores of commercial concerns sent exhibits. The exposition, known as the Third International Levant fair, was given a permanent site north of the city between Yarkon river and the Mediterranean. Last year the Levant fair drew visitors from Syria, Egypt, Transjordan, Persia, and Iraq as well as Pales-

"Tel Aviv, Palestine's boom city, owes its origin to a small group of Jewish residents of the distinctly Arab city of Jaffa, who moved out to the sand dunes north of the city in 1909 and began a garden suburb," says a bulletin from the National Geographic Second City of Palestine.

"Since the World war Tel Aviv whose name means 'Hill of Spring,' has witnessed spectacular growth. Today this all-Jewish community is second in population only to Jerusalem among the cities of Palestine, and is the most modern town of the eastern Mediterranean region. Continued Jewish immigration to Palestine, much of it from Germany, adds monthly to Tel Aviv's growing population.

"With its modern homes, paved streets, shops, clubs, steamship offices, and bathing beach, Tel Aviv resembles a European city rather than one in Palestine. Many of its trim houses are surrounded by small gardens, preserved from drought by sprinkling systems-an unheard of extravagance so close of Jerusalem, which is often short of water even for drinking. Attractive shops display wares from many lands, while steamship offices advertise excursion rates to Europe and America on garish signboards in Hebrew and Latin characters.

"At the bathing beach there is a modern casino with jazz bands, and the sands are used for sun-bathing by men, women, and children-a custom almost unknown in Palestine before the Zionists developed their own city.

"The population of Tel Aviv is ultra modern, thinking in terms of social science and business as well as advanced agriculture. The city contains over a hundred schools and kindergartens under Zionist direction, and a school of the Universal Israelite alliance. There are also two libraries: the Municipal library, with a large collection of sociological works bequeathed by the Wealth in Oranges.

"Tel Aviv's most spectacular holiday comes during the feast of Purim, during which horse and motor-drawn floats may combine the seven-branched candlestick and modern display advertising. A carnival spirit prevails among the noisy crowd, and young girls masquerading in heavy beards poke good-natured fun at Orthodox

"A more cosmopolitan crowd than that seen during the Purim procession would be hard to find even in ancient communities, for here are immigrants from the Ghettos of Europe side by side with residents who have made their fortunes in America and other lands, and have followed the Zionist's dream to this sand-dune city from whose house tops one may look across the Philistine plain to the rocky backbone of old Judea.

"The real wealth of this region is in oranges, and whole shiploads of the famous Jaffa oranges are loaded for European ports when the weather permits. Most of the new plantations have been set out by Jews, who market many of the oranges co-operatively, and are helped by the Palestine shoes, candies, orange cases, etc."

Dudes Drop Canes;

Feel Almost Nude London.-The dandles of the town are discarding the walking cane, long the symbol in America of the foppish Briton. Years ago a man would have felt "almost naked" if he had ventured along Picadilly or Bond street without his cane; nowadays only foreigners and the infirm carry them.

Automobiles are chiefly blamed for this almost total disappearance of the walking stick from crowded city streets.

H. Howell, managing director of one of the oldest established houses had the following to say:

"We have been making walking sticks for more than 100 years, and yet we had our record years as recently as 1919 and 1920. Since then, however, the demand has steadily diminished."

government in keeping down fruit diseases and maintaining high standards of inspection. Before the war the Jaffa orange groves shipped less than a million cases of fruit. The number is now close to three million, with a value running perhaps as high as four to five million dollars a year.

"Tel Aviv also possesses Palestine's pioneer industrial plant-a brick factory which makes hundreds of thousands of silicate brick for the construction of homes of cubistic design and of other buildings for immigrants each year. It also has smaller plants turning out furniture, textiles,

A Philadelphia plastic surgeon who for professional reasons wishes his name concealed, has explained what can be done to "save your face."

You may swap a Roman nose for a Greek one; or a pair of Carnera legs for those of Marlene Dietrich. You

Star Photography Aided by Aluminum Reflectors

Pasadena, Calif.-Opening up new worlds, astronomers at Lick observatory have found that the use of aluminum instead of silver in the mirror of an astronomical telescope increases the instrument's power, possibly 50 to 60 per cent. After photographing a star in the North polar region with a telescope whose mirror was coated with silver, the astronomers sent the mirror to the California Institute of Technology, where the silver was removed and polished aluminum applied. The star was rephotographed, and a long extension of the star's spectrum, barely visible in the former photograph, could be seen plainly. The effect will be to widen former astronomical "horizons," scientists are

Town in New York Has Monument to Bernhardt

Geneva, N. Y .- Its existence virtually unknown to the outside world, an odd memorial to Sarah Bernhardt, French tragedian, erected by a Geneva admirer, stands in a little frequented spot south of the city, near Plattsburg. It is believed to be the only monument ever erected in this country to her memory.

The monument, composed of concrete blocks of stone and a cement base stands 14 feet high. It was built by Charles B. Bean, Geneva lawyer and descendant of Colonial settlers, who followed her career in this country and foreign capitals.

A plaque, of Vermont marble, bears the following inscription:

"To Madam Sarah Bernhardt, the greatest actress in the world, whose lyric fire and divine voice gave more intense and supreme life to the poets, in profound admiration is built this rugged memorial, by the Knights of Cyprus and devoted friends. "Romance Holds Open the Door to Eternal Spring." The memorial is situated on Bean's estate. Bean is an officer of the Knights of Cyprus.

Old State Line Marker Found on Ancient Tree

Iron River, Mich .- A century-old inscription discovered on an ancient tamarack tree recalls the days when the Wisconsin-Michigan state line was being established.

A group of surveyors had been sent here from Detroit to lay the boundary between Michigan and Wisconsin. At that time Wisconsin had not yet been admitted to the Union.

At the exact spot determined by the inscription, the party was beset by unfriendly Indians, who would neither allow them to go ahead nor turn back until they had divided their supplies with them.

MORE TROUBLE FROM SALLY SLY

A FEW mornings after his talk with Jenny Wren about Redeye the Vireo, Peter once more visited the Old Orchard. No sooner did he come in sight than Jenny Wren's tongue began to fly. "What did I tell you, Peter Rabbit? What did I tell you? I knew it was so, and it is!" cried Jenny.

SUCH IS LIFE—Young Chesterfield

Beggars Live High as Money Rolls In England Finds Barnum's Estimate Too Modest.

London.-How true the saying is, "there is one born every minute," is emphasized by an interview in London with B. E. Astbury, inquiry secretary of the Charity Organization society. Mr. Astbury is inclined to think that, in England at least, there is more than one born every minute, and tells of some of the extraordinary methods employed by tricksters who specialize in begging letters, writes John Steele in the Chicago Tribune.

"In London today," he says, "there lives a man who has for more than a quarter of a century done nothing to earn a living except by writing begging letters. He lives in a well appointed flat in Kensington, has an office and maintains a staff of clerks, and has an international organization which operates in America and on the continent. He poses alternately as an ex-army officer, an ex-naval officer, and a doctor of literature.

"We first made the acquaintance of this individual 25 years ago. Then he was preying upon elderly women who were interested in the suppression of 'blood sports,' He formed, so he claimed, a society for the purpose of

King of Islamistan

Dr. Khalid Sheldrake, former London pickle manufacturer, who has assumed the title of "King of Islamistan" and claims the overlordship of Sinkiang, Chinese Turkestan, has arrived in Peiping, China, with a large retinue. He was converted to Mohammedanism several years ago, and was visited by a deputation last March from Chinese Turkestan, who told him they had been commissioned to invite him to become king of the area.

organizing a campaign-to stop 'blood sports,' and subscriptions simply rolled

"The man is certainly one of the eleverest of begging letter writers, and is always up to date in his ideas. Now he has turned poet and a doctor of literature, but of what university he does not say.

The Same Old Story.

"Then there is the dear old soul who for years has been making a comfortable living by telling of her hardships. Using accommodation addresses in different parts of London, she writes to titled people. Always it is the same story; her husband has just died, she is in terrible distress; owes $5 as rent. And she encloses her 'rent' book of

"In the last twenty years we have known that woman, and I have at least a dozen of her 'rent books,' each very carefully written up and showing the amount said to be owing. She uses a score of different names, and is most sympathetic in her appeals. She never makes the mistake of writing to the same person twice with the same story. That she makes a really splendid living at this sort of thing is shown by the fact that only a few weeks ago we went to one accommodation address near London which she was using and found more than 30 letters waiting for her there, and on the envelope of nearly every one was a crest or a cor-

"The begging writer specializes very definitely. There is one woman who follows the birth announcements and immediately writes her appeal: 'How happy the new mother must be. Yet I, who became a mother on the same day, am destitute and my child dead. Now I have nowhere to go, for my husband was killed in an accident only a week before the child was born.' Another woman specializes on the engagement column and has a sad story to relate, ending with an appeal for help.

Profession Overcrowded. "Then, of course, there is always the old soldier or old sailor who writes to widows of naval or military officers, claiming to have served under their husbands. Another clever and persistent begging writer is a man who claims to have been employed at one time by a firm of court jewelers in an exclusive part of London. The man certainly posssesses a list of old clients of the firm, and writes his appeals to them, pretending to have done them a service years ago.

"The profession of begging letter writing is rapidly becoming overcrowded. In the last twelve months we have had between 3,000 and 4,000 more inquiries regarding the genuineness of letters than ever before."

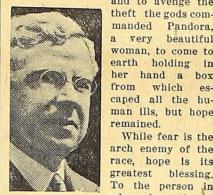

In a recent police case in London it was revealed that a man had lived for 20 years on begging letters, keeping a man and woman servant, an automobile and four dogs. It was also stated that the man had a small cottage in the country, and went abroad every year for a couple of months to avoid London fogs and bad weather.

HOPE By LEONARD A. BARRETT

According to Greek mythology, Prometheus stole fire from heaven, and to avenge the theft the gods commanded Pandora, whose heart burns the light of hope, every cloud of discouragement has a silver lining. Hope constructs a future which becomes a sort of goal summoning all one's strength to reach it. Hope knows no present tense, it functions wholly in the future. "Come ride along with me, the best of life is yet to be," can only be said by those whose lives are dominated by hope. Hope knows no discouragement, because the latter is a thing of the present moment, and hope is interested in the future.

There is a popular phrase, "As long as there is life there is hope." The opposite is more the truth, as long as

Fox Draper is the latest track star developed by Coach Dean Cromwell at the University of Southern California. He is small but very speedy and is being groomed for the N. C. A. A. championship meet to be held at Los Angeles June 22 and 23, there is hope there is life. "When hope dies within the heart, a common grayness silvers everything" and purpose, ambition and even faith itself are near the end. No more severe fate could befall any person than to be bereft of the light of hope.

Hope calls out all latent energies and makes each adventure in life a "stepping stone to higher things." Hope quickens the mind, sharpens the perspective and stimulates the heart. Hope is like the lighthouse. Out upon the stormy sea it throws its light. Penetrating the darkness with its beams the ships are guided to safety.

Hope is an innate gift, deeply implanted within the heart. We may kill it or cultivate it, just as we choose. It develops, however, through selfexpression. "If we have no hope we are of all men most miserable."

Hope was unknown among the ancients as a virtue to be cultivated. They emphasized courage, physical strength, endurance, but seldom mentioned hope. It is a virtue especially characteristic of a Christian civilization. Hope is named as one of the blessings which still remain, "Now abideth, Faith, Hope and Love." © by Western Newspaper Union.

Curves Are a Pronounced Feature of the New Furniture.

A NEW style of furniture is coming | in. When named, it is variously called modern classic and Twentieth century furniture. It is designed on classic lines and is, therefore, in pronounced contrast to the modernistic furniture which has been featured in the past few years. This new type may be said to "mix well" with other styles, while the modernistic type requires more special settings suited to itself. The incoming furniture vogue is far from bizarre. It is not difficult to introduce pieces into already furnished rooms when new furniture is needed to be substituted for wornout pieces, unless the previous furnishings were modernistic.

The new furniture is restful in style rather than striking. One is not impressed by its presence in a room because it is different, but because it pleases the eye. Straight lines so omnipresent in modernistic furniture are neither stressed nor avoided, but neither are curves shunned.

Return of Curves.
One striking feature of the Twentieth century furniture, in fact, is the return of curves. These are lines of beauty which have been sorely lacking in modernistic pieces. So pronounced is this feature, that the up-todate modernistic furniture already is influenced by it, as instanced in modifications of the severity of the usual straight and angular shapes. There is no doubt that furniture and figures both are returning to curved contours and lines of beauty.

The name modern classic which is applied to the new or Twentieth century style of furniture, is revealing. It gives in its name its two characteristics. It is modern but built on classic lines. It is graceful without extravagance of embellishment. It does not feature carving, either the choice sort done by hand, or the mechanical reproductions made separately and glued in place. It is simple but not severe. Since curves are introduced as instanced in cabriole legs, the standard supports for mirrors on bureaus, etc. the furniture could scarcely be severe. It can be stately, gracious, and pleasing and it is these characteristics which are focusing attention.

About Ash Trays.

For these reasons there is nothing better than pottery for ash receivers. This substance is not inflammable, it is a nonconductor of heat, and it washes to look like new. Pottery, or semiporcelain is preferable to china for both are heavier than china. The intense heat of glowing stubs when pressed against the last ware may crack it. The ashes, of course, would do no harm, only intense heat of the burning tip when carelessly pressed too long, without releasing the stub continually while the fire is being quenched.

Glass ash trays are attractive in their pristine clearness, for their gay colors. They should be fireproof. It s chiefly through carelessness that either the glass or the china cracks. but smokers are proverbially heedless with cigarettes.

Metal ash receivers have the adv tage of being unbreakable, but they cannot have all the points in their favor. Metal heats through very quickly. If a smoker carelessly or hurriedly leaves a burning stub in the tray, as we all know happens occasionally, the heated metal is liable to mar a highly polished table top of wood. When the smoker's stand or table top is of marble or tiling, such possibility of damage does not exist. ©. Bell Syndicate.-WNU Service.

CONFESS to 80 years of idleness, work, observation, mischief, wisdom, folly. What have I found my most important job? To constantly strive to better manage myself, that I may increase efficiency of mind and body.

A man named F. C. Fox became general manager of the Sante Fe system some years ago, and went out on the line in a special car. Two or three of the older officials were with him, and they sidetracked one morning, somewhere. An Irish section foreman soon appeared who was well acquainted ous mangrove roots and rotting with the older officials. The Irishman had come down to demand more wages (really very generous, and he knew it. but like the rest of us, he was always clamoring for more). So to the officials he knew he recited what a good man he was; how he had long been imposed on; how valuable his services were to the company, etc.

The officials he had long known agreed with him (in our disposition to get along, we all lie to a man's face, and roast him behind his back). "The man to see is inside," the officials said; "the new general manager." Then the Irishman started climbing the car steps, grumbling his protests, and declaring he intended to speak a piece of his mind, after long suppressing his indignation. . . . Almost immediately the Irishman returned from his visit to the new general manager. "A big fellow, ain't he?" the Irishman said, and returned to his

F. C. Fox is a large man; at that time young and athletic. Mr. Fox was sitting at his desk, back turned. The Irishman sized him up, did not speak to him, and quickly backed out. Everybody respects the Big Fellows, although nobody admits it. Perhaps they should not; such admission may be confession of cowardice-of lack of nobleness; I do not know, and am not discussing the question here. I only wish to say everybody, respects the big fellows a little more than they respect the little fellows.

We ail bluff a good deal; and bluffing is mostly foolish.

Your "hand" has a certain value. The ten will take the nine; and so on up to the controversy between the two spot and the ace, or the controversy between the section foreman and the general manager. There may be a certain satisfaction in indignation meetings, public and private, but they have brought me so little through my many years that I attend few of them.

The world has widely accepted H. G. Wells as a man of unusual fairness, education and intelligence, by giving him honorable distinction. He recentmade a speech in London, and said: 'In many regions of the earth there is an epidemic of intolerance which takes ugly and novel forms. To me it seems, more than anything else, a rebellion of the clumsy louts against thought and sanity; and they are now rampant everywhere with idiotic symbols, and idiotic salutes contriving idiotic cruelties. Is the civilized majority safe? Personally I do not think so; I expect to feel uneasy for another ten years; by that time I expect the clumsy louts to be conquered by a capable majority which should have better controlled them long ago."

Mr. Wells' statement is true enough, but it isn't new. I've been saying the same thing, in almost identical language, at least four years. . . .

Why should not grand opera be given for what it will bring in at the box office? Why should we go so far in art as to pay a lot of men and women enormous salaries to screech in a manner we do not actually care a great deal for, and then demand that business men or the government, pay the deficit? . . . All the rest of us are compelled to advertise our show, and take whatever comes in. Why should not artists do the same? . . . You may reply they simply will not. All right; then let them go to the devil, or to Italy, or wherever they come from.

"The less we have to do with women," Schopenhauer wrote, "the better. They are not even a 'necessary evil'; life is safer and smoother without them. Let me recognize the snare that lies in women's beauty, and the absurd comedy of reproduction will end. Thus the extinction of the race will be achieved. Why should the curtain that has just fallen upon defeat and death always rise again upon a new life, a new struggle, and a new defeat? How long shall we be lured into this endless pain that leads only to a painful

I do not endorse this sentiment; I quote it only that more women may know about its author, and hate him.

A man may be a fool in three or four ways, and wise in five or six others. (I have never known anyone who was not a fool about two or three things).

The human race may go further, and over an easier road; that is all I claim in such reforms as I advocate.

I know many people I like first rate, and consider them creditable on the whole, but often wonder they can be so foolish as they occasionally are in

Fragrance of Zanzibar

The sight of lovely Zanzibar, nestling in the placid waters of that ocean which Kipling called "so bloomin' blue," is enough to gladden the most jaded traveler. For here, Ernest D. Moore writes, in Asia Magazine, are beauty, color, freshness, such as few spots have. All along the island shore, for miles and miles, blue and white waves break gently on pink coral sand; green fronds of 100,000 palms sway, line one line, as far inland as the eye can reach; and far ahead, off the ship's bow, the soft pastel colors of the town look like a rainbow's end. Then, as you draw near the town, you sniff the perfume-laden air of Zanzibar. Other places on your journey out, you then recall, had their auras, too; Aden, the gaunt old man of old Araby, smelled of his camels, and Mombasa reeked with malodorcopra; but Zanzibar, the cunning profligate, scents herself with spices to attract her callers, not repel them. Perhaps this little whimsy came first from the age-old Arab trait of smothering a bad smell with a good one; for in the old days the elephant and slave blood on the ivory tusks stank mightily, actually as well as figuratively, and the refuse-strewn beach along the town fouled the very winds of heaven Now the cruel ivory and slave traffic is no more, and the beach has been swept of all its dirtiness, but the fragrance of the clove remains. I have an Arab chest I filled with cloves at Zanzibar full twenty years ago. The cloves are still as pungent, as biting, as they were that sunny day I put them in. That is the attar of Zanzibar, the clove.

Descrt Plants

As a general thing the plants to be found in desert regions have short, stunted stems and very small leaves or none at ail, these being largely replaced with spines. But the root development of such plants presents a marked contrast to the growth appearing above ground. True desert plant roots are extremely long and branch out widely in every direction.

SPEND YOUR VACATION IN MICHIGAN

Michigan's tourist and resort business brings large sums of money to the state each year. It provides employment for thousands, and greater prosperity for all of us. We can increase that business further by telling out-of-state friends about Michigan's vacation advantages and by spending our own vacations here.

And, no matter which part of Michigan you visit this summer, banish worry by telephoning home and office frequently. Call ahead for reservations, or to tell friends you are coming. Long Distance calls will add but little to the cost and much to the enjoyment of your vacation.

The Michigan Bell Telephone Company is a Michigan concern. It prospers only as does the state as a whole. For the past six years it has devoted advertising space to calling attention to the advantages of Michigan as a vacation-land, and will do so again this year. Such advertising is good for Michigan, and therefore is good for the Michigan Bell Telephone Company.

Sheep Everywhere

Before and After Shearing.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service. HEEP owners of the United States produce about 350,000,000 pounds of wool annually, or enough to supply each inhabitant of this country with a wool garment weighing nearly three pounds.

The lowly sheep, from which comes the world's yearly wool supply of slightly less than three and a third billion pounds, is no respector of persons or geography. A meeting of all the world's wool growers would reveal a motley gathering of all creeds and colors, from Icelanders to South Africans, from Canadians to Argentines, from Siberians to Indians. There also would be present natives of many is-

The sheep-raising industry is pretty well confined to the temperate zones, however, though some flocks graze near the Equator in high altitudes, and others are found in the Arctic, where there is sufficient forage.

The world's sheep population is more than 500,000,000—a quarter as great as the human population. Australia, although a comparative youngster in the wool industry, is the world's leading wool producer, India and China are the outstanding sheep countries of Asia. Argentina and Uruguay have the heaviest sheep population in South America. The greatest concentration of sheep herds in Africa is along the Mediterranean coastal zone from Gibraltar to Tunisia, and in South Africa. Every country of Europe raises sheep, but in Norway, Sweden and Finland there are few flocks, scattered over wide areas. The United States, with upwards of 50,000,-000 head of sheep, is the only country in North America that has taken to wool growing in a big way.

Where America's Sheep Are.

About four-fifths of the sheep in the United States graze in the mountains and on the plateaus and plains west of the Mississippi river. Texas, which has been dubbed the "Cotton State" and the "Sulphur State" because of these commodities, also has earned the right to be called the "Wool State." In 1932, its contribution to the United States' pile of wool was about 57,000,-000 pounds, or about one-sixth of the wool produced in this country. Montana, whose sheep gave up more than 32,000,000 pounds in the same year, ranked next to the Lone Star state, with Wyoming, Oregon, Utah, California, New Mexico, Idaho, and Ohio, each of which produced more than 15,-000,000 pounds, following in the order named.

As in the case of cotton, historians and naturalists have been stumped by the query, "when and where was wool first used?" Sheep and wool are mentioned in the Bible and it is known that the Romans practiced sheep breeding. Some of their prize animals wore jackets to protect the fleece. Shortly after the beginning of the Christian era an Italian took several sheep from Italy to Spain to breed them with the native merino sheep. Incidentally, the merino sheep produce the finest of wools, and have been bred with many other inferior sheep to Improve the latter's fleece.

The growth of the wool industry in the United States has been phenomenal. Two years after Capt. John Smith and his followers landed on the Virginia coast the first sheep were introduced into America at their settlement. Twenty-one years later a shipment of the fleecy animals from Europe was landed on the Massachusetts coast. Indians' appetites, predatory animals and severe winters made serious inroads on the colonial flocks, so most of the animals were kept inside town walls, on islands, and on peninsulas fenced off from the mainland. While Indians no longer are a menace to wool growers, predatory animals. parasites, and poisonous plants still cause great losses to the industry.

Growth of the Wool Industry.

As cotton clothed the colonists of the South, wool clothed those of the North. Private homes then were America's woolen factories. The American wool trade began when sheepowning families exchanged their wool and surplus homespun for other commodities. With the increase in colonial population the demand for wool cloth rose and the federal government as well as local governments encouraged wool growing.

By 1810, just two centuries after the were 7,000,000 sheep grazing over the settled area of eastern United States. Four years later there were 10,000,000. About this time foreign wool flooded the United States markets and the wool industry was as hard-hit as other industries in the panic of 1819. As large American cities and towns took form, demand for homespun waned and factory-made woolens took their place. Prices paid for wool by manufacturers encouraged sheep raising so that by 1840 the range of the animals had spread from the Atlantic to every state east of the Mississippi, as well as to Missourl and Louisiana.

With the western migration in the middle of the last century went sheep. By 1860, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Arkansas, Texas, California and the areas that now are Oregon and Arizona, joined the wool-growing regions. Two decades later, there was not a state in the Union that did not have a sheep population of at least 50,000. By 1933 the "national flock" had grown to more than 50,000,000.

To sheep, many regions of the world owe at least partially their discovery and growth, for these animals often have been the companions of pioneers. Magellanes (formerly Punta Arenas), Chile, the southernmost city of South America, was saved by the fleecy animals. The city was an important coaling and ship supply station for craft doubling Cape Horn before the completion of the Panama canal. The canal stripped it of former prestige, and even many of its staunchest citizens prophesied its doom. Smart business men, however, saw the possibilities of sheep industry on the surrounding mainland and nearby islands, and turned their faces from the sea to the land for their livelihood. Thanks to sheep, Magellanes still is a thriving

How Fleeces Are Handled.

While, in a few remote regions of the United States, homespun is worn, factories have almost entirely erased the home industry from this country. One of several hundred modern American manufacturing companies normally operates 60 wool mills that employ 40,000 workers. A display of one company recently included 3,500 different styles of wool fabrics.

Wool greatly differs in quality. The same breed of sheep in the same country may produce different qualities of wool. The best wool grows on a sheep's shoulders and sides.

When a sheep is sheared the fleece holds together. The whole fleece then is tied and with other complete fleeces is placed for shipment in bags containing from 100 to 500 pounds each.

At the factory expert workmen sort the wool. Some sorting tables are covered with wire netting through which dust and other loose foreign matter falls while the sorters tear the fleeces apart. In some wool-growing countries wool is washed before it is sheared from the sheep. Unwashed fleeces contain grease from the skins of the animals. After sorting, the wool is scoured by passing it through a series of vats of warm, soapy water. From the washers it is conveyed to drying rooms and thence to carding rooms where it begins the journey that ends in woolen cloth and other wool products. Worsted fabrics are made of yarns whose fibers are parallel, while woolens are made of fibers crossed and mixed. Foreign matter that cannot be washed from the fleece is destroyed by chemicals. Burrs are removed by machinery.

Wool is constantly moving in commerce. Although the United States normally produces about one-tenth of the world's annual wool clip, it is only a little more than half of the wool required by American cloth and carpet manufacturers. American manufacturers call upon the wool growers of Australia, Argentina, Uruguay, South Africa, China, England, and many less important wool producing countries for additional raw material. England is the leading importer of wool, for most of the export wool from all the leading wool producing regions of the globe is shipped to British markets. Much of it is reshipped to other countries. London is the largest wool market of Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies sudden-ly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christens Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, Forlorn Valley banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Having decided upon his course of action, Babson fell into a refreshing slumber; the next morning he was down at the bank at eight o'clock. looking quite his old self and wearing a white rose in his lapel. Emblematic of hope, doubtless.

Shortly after the bank had opened crippled Rance Kershaw limped in to borrow a thousand dollars to meet his monthly payroll. Babson demurred to loaning it, but finally compromised with a warning that such indiscriminate borrowing would have to cease very soon.

"By the way," he said, as he initialed his approval on the note, "are you going to retain your lease of the Bar H ranch?"

"I think not," Kershaw replied. "It expires next month, but I'll be hanged if I know where I can get the money to pay for a year in advance."

"Better retrench," Babson advised. "Let the Bar H ranch go, sell off half your cattle, even at the present low prices, get out of debt, quit paying interest and be happy. Where does Nate Tichenor reside now?"

"I don't know. I only know his lawyer's address. Why do you ask?"

"There was a man from San Francisco in here some time back. He'd been looking at the Bar H ranch and had a notion he'd like to buy it. I thought perhaps I might get in touch with Tichenor, negotiate a sale of his ranch for him and clean up a few dollars in commission. And yet, if you renew the lease it may militate against

"Go ahead," Rance Kershaw replied sadly. "I'm not going to renew the lease. You've been pretty good to me. Silas, and I won't stand in the way o' your turnin' a profit."

"Thanks," Babson murmured. "And

Kershaw gave it to him, and a week later an attorney in San Francisco wrote Nate Tichenor, in care of the latter's attorney, requesting a price on the Bar H ranch in behalf of a client of his.

Ten days later Babson knew that the Bar H ranch was not for sale; whereat the banker had an immediate return of his former nervousness and depression and went home at noon. The situation was thoroughly beyond his comprehension; he had decided Nate Tichenor would sell the Bar H ranch and Nate Tichenor had disappointed him.

Of course, in a larger sense, Nate Tichenor's decision not to sell could not affect the interests of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district (Mr. Babson had decided to call it that), since the district could acquire the property via the condemnation suit

Immediately after church the following Sunday he motored up to Eden Valley, ostensibly to fish but with the intention of spending several hours inspecting the dam-site and lake-site. To his signal perturbation he discovered in the gorge a camp of three tents, a motor chuck-wagon, and five shirt-sleeved young men playing a modest game of poker under the shade of a cottonwood tree. Under an ad-Jacent tree a field drafting table stood; it had a sheet of tracing paper tacked to it and hard by this table a surveying instrument was set up.

"Hello," Babson hailed them cheerfully, confident that his rod and creel would excuse him of undue inquisitiveness in penetrating to the camp.

"What are you boys doing here?" "Playing poker, sir, How about taking a hand? Twenty-five cent ante and a dollar limit."

Mr. Babson, not being accustomed to such gentle rebukes, flushed and passed on down the creek, leaving the engineering crew to their non-sabbatical

Evidently Tichenor had sold, or was about to sell, his dam-site and lakesite to a power company, which had sent an engineering crew to make a preliminary survey and report before deciding to close the deal. His curiosity aroused, Babson crossed the creek, climbed the side of the hill, and was rewarded by finding the stakes of the engineering party. He followed them readily; they led him over the approximate route which any man with a fair eye for contours would have selected for the ditch to lead the water to the penstocks.

As a country banker Silas Babson

had a far better knowledge of the law than most laymen; hence he realized now that if Nate Tichenor's dam-site and lake-site had been acquired by a power company, which is a public service corporation, no other public service corporation could condemn its property! Hence once more the Babson soul was steeped in despair.

The following morning Mr. Henry Rookby, his cashier-paying-teller-receiving-teller and confidential man, came to Babson's desk and laid upon it a copy of the latest edition of the Gold Run Nugget. Mr. Rookby had marked, in blue crayon, an item under the head of Real-Estate Transfers.

The item recorded the transfer by deed of gift, of four thousand acres, more or less, of certain lands, from Ranceford Kershaw to Lorraine Kershaw.

"Can't be a portion of the Circle ranch," Babson decided, and drew down from its case a map of the

Mr. Babson made a most surprising discovery. He had always assumed that Rance Kershaw owned no land east of the fence that divided the Circle K from the Bar H. To his amazement he had now discovered that Lorry Kershaw was the owner of four thousand acres, more or less, in that portion of Eden Valley which, in the event of a dam being built in the gorge, must constitute all or the greater portion of the area that must be inundated when the dam filled up! And Babson had always thought Nate Tichenor owned that land!

He could have cheered. No matter what Nate Tichenor might do with his dam-site now, he would have to consult Lorry Kershaw before selling it to a power company, and Babson thought he knew what the girl's answer would be. A deadlock between the two survivors of the feud!

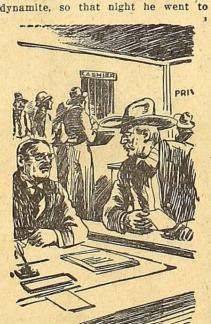

"Got to get that four thousand acres more or less," Mr. Babson exulted. 'The girl will sell to me. You bet she will. And then I'll do some trading with Nate Tichenor."

Within the week he had arranged his personal finances and purchased from the Savings Bank of San Francisco the first mortgage that the latter institution held on the Circle K ranch. With the mortgage in his possession, Babson dictated to Ranceford Kershaw a letter as firm as granite and as cold as a penguin's tail. He informed Kershaw that unless the mortgage was paid within five days a suit n foreclosure would be instituted. Then he dictated another letter, which he signed as president of the Bank of Valley Center, calling some thirty thousand dollars of Kershaw's notes.

He was striking at Rance Kershaw over the shoulder of the latter's daughter, quite confident that she would protect her father when Babson suggested that, in return for a renewal of the unsecured notes and mortgage, she should sell him at a reasonable price that four thousand acres with which he planned to embarrass Nate Tichenor!

He realized he must keep such a deal in abeyance until he could organize the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, for, with the district formed before Nate Tichenor could complete his deal with the power company, the district could enter a condemnation suit against Tichenor, and thus block the aspirations of the power company.

He distrusted the local legal talent in a crisis loaded with potential legal

San Francisco to engage the services of a legal firm noted throughout the state for its knowledge of water law. Indeed, Babson was rather in a hurry to get out of town, for he considered it good strategy to be absent when old Rance Kershaw should come into the bank to argue and plead. Leave a frightened, worried man alone for four days and he's much easier to handle on the fifth. So Babson departed, unconscious of the fact that his bluff, complicated with the sudden return of Nathan Tichenor to Eden Valley, was to kill Rance Kershaw and turn the current of the Kershaw hatred upon Silas Babson and all his works and

Nate Tichenor, from early boyhood, had had more than his share of experience with sudden death and tragedy and it had developed in him a certain stolidity and philosopny in such emergencies. For ten minutes he held Lorry Kershaw's head against his shoulder and neither spoke nor moved.

"Now, then, Miss Kershaw," he soothed presently, "this is no time for weakness. You're a Kershaw and none of your clan ever needed time out for that. You said you wanted to take your father home?"

She nodded drearily. The Kershaws, like the Hensleys, always buried their own dead.

"And I wouldn't, if I were you, permit my mind to dwell on the thought of your absolute aloneness in the world," he continued. "That way madness lies. I know. I've been through all that. After two years in the A. E. F., where, it seemed to me, I lost every comrade I managed to achieve an affection for; after losing my mother and aunts while I was in France and realizing I hadn't a single friend in the community where I was born and raised, I found myself, when the war ended, the loneliest human being imaginable. Often I wanted to come back to Eden Valley and know you better but-"

"Yes, I understand. Father was what he was, poor dear."

"Well, be that as it may, you're not nearly so badly off as you think you are, and one of these days, when you have time to think about it, I'll tell you why." He was almost abrupt. "I suppose we'd better get along."

"Yes, I suppose so," she agreed and started her motor. Nate Tichenor followed in his car. Arrived at the Circle K headquarters no men came out to meet them.

"Where are your riders?" he queried. "They started with the cattle drive up into the forest reserve this morn-

He lifted Rance Kershaw's body out of the car, carried it into the house and disposed it on Kershaw's bed.

He drew a sheet over the corpse and rejoined the girl in the living room. "I reckon," he said, in the homely mountain idiom, "you Kershaws never have any truck with undertakers. Seems to me the Kershaws don't use preachers, either."

"No, we just read the service our-forgot we're the last survivors of two clans that were beyond the pale. Well, we'll hire somebody. There must be a practical nurse in Valley Center. When we get there I'll telegraph my old superintendent, Rube Tenney, to come up here with his wife and two children."

She yielded without argument to his suggestions-commands, rather.

Doctor Donaldson made no comment when, in his office an hour later, Lorry Kershaw informed him of her father's death. He readily issued a death certificate. He was a gruff old fellow and not in the least politic, as Tichenor realized when Donaldson growled:

"So you two have buried the hatchet,

He flushed as Tichenor's bleak blue eyes rebuked him.

"It's none of my business, of course," Donaldson apologized. "I merely hoped for Miss Lorry's sake—"

Nate Tichenor smiled at him. "I understand, doctor. No offense if your intentions were kindly." "Thank you, they were. When will the funeral take place?"

"Tomorrow, at two o'clock," Lorry answered him.

"I'll telephone the coroner," Donaldson went on. "He'll take my word for it that an inquest isn't necessary, and issue the burial permit."

While Lorry Kershaw waited in the car, Nate Tichenor scouted around town and succeeded in engaging the services of a Miss Lizzle Bachman, who in her youth had almost graduated from a nurse's training school in San Francisco. Not for considerable would Miss

Bachman have missed this assignment. It was too meaty with gossip. Nate Tichenor dancing attendance on Lorry Kershaw! Tichenor's next action was to call

The editor said his name was Joe Brainerd and that he was pleased to meet Mr. Tichenor.

"Mr. Ranceford Kershaw died about three hours ago, very suddenly, Mr. Brainerd," Nate told him. "No, I didn't kill him. He perished of heart disease and will be buried in the Kershaw family cemetery in Eden Valley at two p. m. tomorrow. Friends and neighbors are invited to attend. And may I ask, Mr. Brainerd, as a special favor to Miss Lorry Kershaw and myself, that you do not take this opportunity to print a couple of columns of ancient history? Although you do not know it, the Hensley-Kershaw feud ended in 1917. Both Miss Kershaw and I would like to think that the matter is by way of being and we'll both be very grateful for your co-operation."

"My dear sir," Brainerd replied with dignity, "you mustn't presume to formulate my editorial policy."

Nate Tichenor looked Brainerd over bleakly. "Very well, run it. Next week there'll be another newspaper in this town, with a real newspaper man in charge, and you'll have a taste of active competition. And now that we understand each other, I want you to run off a hundred black-bordered death notices and send a man to paste them up in various conspicuous places around the town. That used to be the custom in this country. A few people might like to know of Rance Kershaw's death, so they can come to his funeral as advertised."

He wrote out the copy for the jobprinter, paid his bill and departed without further conversation. The editor put on his hat and walked over to the local hotel upon the veranda of which sat Mr. William Rooney, the deputy sheriff of the Valley Center dis-

"Bill," he queried, "what do you know about Nathan Tichenor?" "Nothing bad. Why?"

"Would you say that a threat of his should be taken seriously?" TO BE CONTINUED.

"Although most of us believed that the deer herd was increasing very fast during the past few years, this number of 162 deer is much greater than was generally believed to be present," commented the keeper of the reserve for the University of Michigan museum. The use of the reserve has been given to the university as an area for blological observation.

About thirty people, which included many members of the scientific staff of the university museum and the Michigan conservation department, participated in the deer drive and tal-piled, it was found that there were 88 does, 43 bucks and 33 fawns. According to the keeper, it is quite possible, however, that these numbers are not entirely accurate, since the count was not completed until late afternoon, when it was quite possible for a spike horn to be counted as a doe.

As the deer herd continues to muitiply on this small area, the university museum hopes to discover at what point the height of population will be reached, when parasites and disease will enter in because of overcrowding. together with other facts of importance to the welfare of all of Michigan's white-tailed deer .- Detroit Free

Living Safely With Heart Disease

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that thousands of men with "leaking valves" in the heart fought in the war without difficulty, and notwithstanding that thousands of individuals with leaking valves live to a good age, there are still a great many who worry because they have this condition.

The leak in the valve has been caused by some ailment-scarlet fever. rheumatism or others, which left the little valve with an "escalloped" edge instead of one that was smooth and well fitting. Naturally, when the valve is closed a little blood is going to flow back through these small openings at the edge of the valve. But, if the heart continues to pump enough blood, despite this little leak, what difference does it make to all your

It is just like a pump that leaks year to and year out but still supplies all the water the household needs.

Therefore, physicians do not talk very much about "leaks" in the heart, but talk rather about the strength of the heart muscle and try to measure its ability to do the necessary work and how long it is likely to continue to do this necessary work.

The individual then who has a heart leak can go along in his usual manner and feel safe as far as his life is concerned. As you know, the first sign of a failing heart is shortness of breath, getting out of breath doing little tasks that formerly did not cause this breathlessness.

Now, what can the individual do who finds that he is getting "breathless" on slight exertion?

He should first see his doctor, as this shortness of breath may be due to an acidosis in the system, or to a failing heart. If it be due to acidosis, then less food and more exercise may be necessary.

If due to a failing heart, the physician will advise as to health habits in regard to amount of exercise that may be taken, the necessity of one or two rest periods during the day, and the need of resting the mind as well as the body.

In other words as the ability of the pump (heart) to do work has lessened, then the individual must simply lessen the needs of his body for blood by resting more.

In this way he can live safely.

Hot Weather Eating

THERE are two mistakes many of us make during warm weather; the first is eating too much or at the wrong time, and the other is not eat-

Sometime ago I quoted Dr. W. C. Alvarez of the Mayo clinic and it is worth remembering. "On trips to the mountains I have noticed that the man who comes into camp hungry from an exhausting climb and immediately sits down to a heavy meal, will occasionally suffer afterwards for several days with abdominal pain, gas pressure, and diarrhoea." This is due to the fact that the tiredness dried up all the important ferments that digest the food and prevent decomposition or spoiling of the food when it is taken into the body.

Similarly in hot weather. The heat has tired or exhausted you temporarily, and when you eat there is no digestion takes place for some time, thus allowing the formation of gas with pain from gas pressure.

The thought then is that instead of sitting down at once to a meal, that you lie down quietly on the right side for a few minutes until you are somewhat rested and then eat some food. Your whole body will be rested and the digestive organs more able to pour out their juices, thus enabling you to digest your food properly instead of suffering pain which you naturally think is due to some bad or "tainted" food you have eaten.

What about not eating enough food in the hot weather? Should you not eat less in the hot weather anyway?

As a matter of fact you should eat a little less food in the hot weather, but really, only a very little less.

The reason that you should eat almost as much food in the hot as in the cold weather, is because the processes of the body-your muscles, your heart, your blood, your lungs-all have about the same amount of work to do all seasons of the year. A very small amount of food is needed extra during the cold weather to create heat.

In fact, if you are outdoors more, do more work or take more exercise in the warm than in the cold weather, you may quite correctly eat more food during the warm weather.

Thus we find many individuals, thinking that all that food does is to heat the body, eating less than they actually need during the warm weath-Remember, then, don't eat when you are very hot or tired; rest a while

Remember, also, that you need almost as much food in the warm as in the cold weather.

The normal person is likely to get all of the real necessities from a diet in which meat, milk, eggs, and the ordinary vegetables are included. The American Medical association.

he says, maintains that the talk about rheumatism, gout, lumbago, and many similar diseases being caused or even aggravated by meat is not backed by known facts. "Red meats." they say, "have nothing whatever to do with uric acid. Nor have they anything to do with causing gout or rheumatism, because neither of these diseases is due to food or drinks of any sort, but solely to focal infections: small pockets of pus around the roots of the teeth, in the tonsils, nasal passages and sinuses, in ulcers of the stomach and bowels, around an inflamed appendix or bladder, or even an inflamed in growing toenail, a bunion or a corn The present belief is; no pockets of pus, no rheumatism or gout.

"Even in chronic inflammations of the kidneys such as the various forms of bright's disease, moderate amounts of meat do no harm what ever. The worst cases on record in all medical history of hardening and turning to lime of the arteries all over the body, and in the kidneys and intestines particularly, have been found in certain orders of oriental monks, who live almost exclusively upon starch and seeds such as peas beans, and lentils. They abstain entirely from meat."

With present knowledge of the value of meats disproving many past il lusions, Professor Hinman urges families to restore meat in the diet; not the finest cuts available, but the nutritious soups and stews, varied with boiling pieces. When two pounds of boiling meat can be bought for a dime, the cheap cuts are too health-

Hatch Pheasant Chicks by Artificial Methods

The state of Pennsylvania, which probably turns out more pheasants than any other state, discarded its hen-hatching system last spring and made a complete change over to artificial hatching and rearing, with the result that out of 27,263 eggs set 20,164 chicks were hatched and 16, 660 pheasants were raised. Chicks are hatched in electrically heated machines at 103 degrees and after hatching are kept in the incubator hatcher compartment at 100 degrees for 24 hours.

They are then transferred to the brooder house under hover at 98 degrees. The second weel: they are given access to a sun porch. The third week they are given access to a ground runway and the hover temperature is reduced gradually until by the fifth week the artificial heat is turned off completely. The sixth and seventh week the chicks are transferred to a holding field and are released during the eighth have as much weight as "it simply to the tenth weeks.

Find New "South Pole" in Northern Patagonia

Discovery of another "South pole" is announced by the United States weather bureau.

It is the south pole of cold, the second most frigid spot on earth. There the thermometer sometimes goes as low as 70 below zero, comparable to the record of the Arctic cold pole in northern Siberia.

Neither the North pole nor the South pole are very cold in relation to these two spots. The southern cold pole, described by Director Navarrete of the Chilean weather bureau, is an area about 80 miles wide in the Andes mountains of northern Patagonia, along the Chilean-Argentine frontier. It is a place of deep valleys with high mountain walls-an ideal repository for the cold, heavy Antarctic air that descends from above at this latitude. Cold waves radiate from this pole to the central valleys of Chile and the pampas of Argentina.
