LOCALS WIN 2-1 GAME FROM BEAVERTON

Tawas City Takes Thrilling Battle In Ninth To Stay In Top Position

In one of the most hectic N. E. M. league baseball games played here so far this season Tawas City conquered Beaverton, 2-1, making it two straight from Beaverton and their third win in a row. A large crowd of howling fans witnessed the game at the local athletic field.

Johnny LeClair was the hero among his teammates as he was responsible for the winning run in the ninth inning. It was his single that scored Laidlaw, who had walked and stole second, that broke up the ball game and permitted the Hi-Speeds to continue in a tie with Gladwin for first place. Joining LeClair for honors were Lixey, who pitched a masterful game, and his battery mate, Laidlaw, who handled Lixey in wonderful shape and made several difficult catches of foul flies, once taking the ball virtually off the screen in front of the stands. "Mub" Lixey held Beaverton well in hand throughout the contest and allowed but three hits. He struck out ten men and did not issue a free pass.

It was a hard game for Feder-spiel, a young lad who had plenty of stuff on the ball, to lose. He permitted only four balls to go into the outfield. Two were caught, the third was dropped by the centerfielder while the fourth was LeClair's single, the hit that caused his defeat. Feder-spiel fanned ten men but his frequent wildness, walking seven men, put him in trouble on several occasions.

The visitors scored their lone tally in the opening inning. After Kasischke tossed out Blade, Dickens singled and moved to second as Lixey tossed out Mishler. Dickens stole third and when Welker topped a slow roller toward the mound, Lixey elected to get Dickens at the plate. Dickens beat the throw and put Beaverton in the lead.

The Hi-Speeds went down in order in their first turn at bat and after Lixey fanned the side in Beaverton's half of the second, the locals filled the bases on two walks and an infield hit but failed to score. Feder-spiel bore down and fanned the next three men.

Beaverton tried to start a rally in their half of the fourth. After two were out, the two Dull boys singled, but Rochel ended the threat by lining to Mallon. These were the last two hits the visitors made off Lixey.

Tawas City tried to even the score in the fifth. Davis batted for Moeller and fanned, after which Mallon walked. Kasischke grounded to Dickens but W. Dull dropped the throw trying to force Mallon at second. Zollweg fied to Dickens, and Laidlaw walked to fill the bases. Feder-spiel grabbed LeClair's hard bouncer and threw him out at first to end another unsuccessful attempt to tie the score.

The Hi-Speeds finally were rewarded for their sticktoitiveness in the sixth. After two were out, Musolf singled to deep short; Davis bounded a slow roller toward first, but Rochel let Tuohy's fast throw go through his glove into right field. Musolf scoring the tying run and Davis taking second. Mallon ended the rally by striking out.

The locals again filled the bases in their half of the eighth but failed to score. Then came the ninth and a grand climax to one of the most thrilling games played here so far this season.

Next Sunday Manager Neumann and his team travel to Standish to battle the Arenac county boys. This will be another interesting contest as Tawas needs this game to stay on top. Come and join the boys in Standish next Sunday and help them to stay in first place.

"Merry Wives Of Reno" Is Lively Divorce Colony Tale

A picture that is heralded as one of the liveliest and merriest comedies of error of the season, will come to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on July 4 and 5, under the title of "Merry Wives of Reno."

Miss Farrell plays the part of a flirtatious wife of a wealthy and middle aged man. She has a penchant for other women's husbands, which is the basis of all the merry Reno divorce troubles that take place in the picture.

Hugh Herbert is her husband, while others in the cast include Margaret Lindsay, one of the unhappy wives, Donald Woods, Guy Kibbee, Frank McHugh, Roscoe Ates, Ruth Donnelly and Hobart Cavanaugh.

IMPROVEMENT ASS'N ELECTS OFFICERS

At a meeting of the Tawas City Improvement association held last Tuesday evening at the City Hall, the following officers were elected: President, H. J. Keiser, succeeding Fred T. Luedtke; vice-president, H. Read Smith; secretary, E. D. Jacques, succeeding Bruce Myles; treasurer, Chas. Moeller.

It was voted to prepare a pamphlet descriptive of Tawas City and Tawas Bay, setting forth the advantages of this locality as a summer resort district. It was also resolved to present a request to the council that definite steps be taken to regulate automobile traffic within the city. It was voted as the unanimous opinion of those present that excessive speeding and reckless driving, particularly through the business district, is becoming a menace to life and property. It was suggested that a traffic signal at the corner of Mathews and Bay streets would be a valuable asset. The matter of regulating the erection of billboards within the city limits was also discussed.

Fred T. Luedtke, retiring president of the association, said, "I wish to thank the members for the fine cooperation which has been given during my term of office. This has been very gratifying to me."

CAR STOLEN IN OSCODA FOUND WRECKED HERE

Early Tuesday morning a car owned by Ed. Colbath of Oscoda was stolen from his garage and driven as far as Tawas City where it was found upside down by the side of the road about six a. m. The car, which had been traveling at a high rate of speed, had struck the stay-wire of a power line pole and turned over.

Sheriff Miller, who investigated at the scene of the accident, found a few traces of blood in the car. No glass had been broken, however, so it is believed that the thieves, who have not yet been apprehended, were not seriously injured.

Earlier the same night a car which had been stolen from Harrisville was found abandoned a few miles north of Oscoda where it had run out of gas. About two a. m. two young men were seen on the streets of Oscoda by the city marshal, who attached no importance to the fact at the time, believing them to be local boys.

Sheriff Miller and state police are making every effort to round up the guilty parties.

Hemlock Team Now In Division Leadership

As the result of last Sunday's games, Hemlock now has the top perch in the National division of the N. E. M. league all to itself. Previously Hemlock had shared first place with Houghton Lake. The joint leadership was smashed last Sunday when East Tawas topped Houghton Lake, 5-3, and Hemlock turned in a 4 to 1 victory over Rose City.

In the Hemlock-Rose City game played at the latter's diamond, the Hemlock boys outthrew their opponents by a 10-4 margin. Both teams played a fine brand of ball in the field. C. Frank, Hemlock hurler, was the hero for the victors. Besides holding the batsmen facing him to four hits, he struck out 20 men. Anschuetz, who banged out a triple and double, was the outstanding slugger of the day. Sieloff came next with a pair of singles.

T. B. Y. A. Meets Saturday To Complete Plans For Series of Events

The first of a series of ten races sponsored by the Tawas Bay Yachting Association will be sailed Sunday afternoon, July 1. The starting time will be 2:15.

The entries for this season's opening sailing race are the Sero, 1933 T.B.Y.A. trophy winner, entered by Katherine Schmelzer; the Gamble, 1933 regatta week winner, entered by James Nisbet; the Duster, entered by Adelaide Symons, and the Louise, entered by George Nash. A new boat in the line-up for this year, and one which promises to give a good account of itself, is the Dale, recently purchased in Alpena by Carl B. Babcock of Tawas City. The Dale was runner-up in the regatta week series last year.

An important meeting of the T. B. Y. A. will be held at 7:30 Saturday evening, June 30, at the Holland Hotel, East Tawas. This change of date for the meeting has been made in order that plans may be made and rules decided upon for the first race. All members are urged to be present.

JUDGE H. DEHNKE DECIDES McKAY-McAULIFFE CASE

State of Michigan, in the Circuit Court for the County of Isco.
Lloyd G. McKay,
Plaintiff
vs.
Lynman McAuliffe, Defendant.

Plaintiff is the Chevrolet automobile dealer at East Tawas. His salesman negotiated a contract for the sale of a Chevrolet automobile to Defendant. Payment was to be made partly by a used car taken over by Plaintiff, with the balance "cash."

This suit arises out of Defendant's claim that he made or tendered payment in "cash" or its equivalent for the balance, which is denied by Plaintiff.

Defendant's claim of payment or tender in cash or equivalent arises out of the following circumstances: He was a depositor in a private bank at East Tawas with a balance due him of $1000.00 when the bank closed early in November, 1926. The closing of this particular bank was an incident following upon the closing of a number of banks in the "Thumb" counties of Michigan which through interlocking partnerships were related to three private banks in Isco county in which Plaintiff was a partner. A suit was filed in the Circuit Court for the county of Tuscola, in chancery, by some of the partners against the others. It appears that bankruptcy petitions were also filed, but were discontinued when plaintiff herein made a proposition as to the liquidation of the three banks in Isco county which was acquiesced in by the depositors and approved by the chancery court. The terms of this agreement were important in this case because Defendant claims it establishes an indebtedness on the part of Plaintiff to him in an amount greater than the unpaid balance on the automobile. It is quite lengthy, and for present purposes it will be sufficient to summarize its general tenor and refer particularly only to those paragraphs which are directly important as to wording.

The substance of the agreement was that proceedings for enforced liquidation of the assets of the three banks in Isco county and of the property of the co-partners who were the owners (of whom Plaintiff was one), should be suspended or discontinued, at least for the period of three years. Plaintiff was to take over all assets of the three banks mentioned and add thereto his personal holdings with a few named exceptions. An inventory and appraisal had been filed which indicated that the combined assets mentioned were more than sufficient to meet the obligations to depositors. All assets were to be turned over to a trustee for purposes of orderly liquidation. The agreement provided that Plaintiff was to act as the trustee's agent in the liquidation at a compensation of $200.00 a month, but the proofs indicate that little, if anything, was paid to Plaintiff on this score.

It is evident that all parties interested in the banks were confident at the time (early 1927) that the assets could readily be turned into cash at not less than appraisal value during the three-year period contemplated, and the depositors paid off in full, except for interest, which was waived. It turns out that this confidence was not justified, and all that has been paid on deposit claims to date is 40%, although seven

PROGRAM FORMALLY OPENS SHORE ROAD

The formal opening ceremonies for the East Tawas-Oscoda link of the Huron Shore highway was held last Thursday afternoon and evening at East Tawas. Delegations from Alpena, Oscoda, East Tawas, Tawas City and other northeastern Michigan communities were present to take part in the program.

Business duties preventing the attendance of Gov. William A. Comstock and State Highway Commissioner Murray D. VanWagoner, Ray Foley, director of the Public Relations bureau of the State Highway Department, and Donald Kennedy, business administrator, officiated in their places.

The highway was formally opened in the afternoon when Donald Kennedy cut a ribbon which had been stretched across it by a string of young ladies from Oscoda, East Tawas and Tawas City. Band music for the occasion was supplied by the Oscoda high, East Tawas, and Alpena bands.

In the evening a banquet was held at the Holland Hotel, East Tawas, at which short talks were given by Herman Butler of East Tawas, Supervisor James McGillivray of Oscoda, City Manager George Lusk of Bay City, Director Foley and Administrator Kennedy of the State Highway Department, Mayor J. D. Bingham of Alpena, W. J. McDougall of Alpena, and Samuel Yockey of Harrisville.

Look—Zink

Miss Ruth Look, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Look of Tawas township, and Arthur Zink, son of Mrs. Charles Zink of Bay City, were united in marriage last Saturday afternoon, June 23, at the Emanuel Lutheran parsonage in this city. Rev. W. C. Voss performed the ceremony.

The bride was attired in a gown of white organza, with hat and slippers to match, and wore a corsage bouquet of gardenias. She was attended by her sister, Miss Hattie Look, who was dressed in peach organza and wore a corsage bouquet of roses.

Clyde Evril of Flint attended the groom.

Following the ceremony the wedding party returned to the home of the bride's parents, where a dinner and reception was held in honor of the newlyweds. About forty guests were present, those from out of town including Mrs. Charles Zink, Miss Ruth Zink, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bammel and son, Tommy, all of Bay City, and Clyde Evril of Flint.

Upon returning from a trip to Ann Arbor and Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Zink will make their home in Bay City.

BEAVERTON PROTESTS

Beaverton protests Tawas City's 2-1 victory over them last Sunday for the following reasons:

The chief umpire did not take his place behind the catcher as provided for in the constitution, article II, section I.

Improper pitching stance of Pitcher Lixey.

Abuse talk and profane language used by Tawas player when ordered off field because balance of team complained on the ruling.

Chief umpire failed to work in harmony with field umpire and ordered field umpire off diamond. Beaverton claims chief umpire admitted he did not know rules of baseball.

Hearing on the protest will be made according to instructions to be received from the president of the league.

BEAUTIES VIE SATURDAY FOR QUEEN'S CROWN

Parade At 10:30 A. M. Will Open Celebration; Other Cities Bring Floats

The second annual water carnival to be held at East Tawas July 4th in connection with the Independence Day celebration promises to be one of the outstanding events of the summer.

Saturday evening, June 30, a queen of the celebration will be chosen in a beauty contest to be held at the Family Theatre, East Tawas. The winner of this contest will later be sent to the Caro fair to compete in the annual sugar beet "Sweetest Girl in Michigan."

At ten-thirty on the morning of the Fourth, the celebration will officially start with a parade. Floats will be entered by the U. S. Forest Service and the U. S. Coast Guard. It is expected that Rose City, Lupton, and other towns of northeastern Michigan will be represented by floats.

James Nisbet, commodore of the Tawas Bay Yachting Association, announced that six sailboats have entered the lists for the afternoon races. It is expected, however, that the outboard motorboat races which are now being planned will provide the main attraction.

Boxing bouts staged by the boys from the Silver Creek C. C. C. camp will provide spectacular entertainment for those interested in such sport, and there will be a dance at the Community Building on the evening of the Fourth. The celebration will close with an elaborate display of fireworks.

YOUNG PEOPLE OF DISTRICT MEET IN CONVENTION

More than 250 young people from communities of the Saginaw Bay district of Michigan were enrolled Tuesday evening at the Young People's Institute of the Epworth League which was held at East Tawas during the past week, June 23-29. Delegates were present from Bayport, Saginaw, Bay City, Midland, Standish, West Branch, Tawas City, East Tawas, and other towns as far north as Alpena.

Although primarily a convention of the Epworth League of this district, the institute was open to young people of high school age of all protestant denominations.

A large number of the young people attending the institute have made their headquarters in the State Park under the supervision of group leaders. Among the visitors present from out of town points are Benjamin Gregory, editor of the Ben-jaminian Times, and Roy Boucher, son of Mrs. William Boucher of England, and Rev. John Gregory of Grand Rapids, both brothers of Rev. W. A. Gregory of East Tawas.

The marriage of Mary Elizabeth Jacques, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fabian Jacques, and Roy Boucher, son of Mrs. William Boucher of England, was solemnized at 7:30 o'clock Monday morning at St. Anne's church, Alpena. Rev. Louis T. Bouchard performed the ceremony at a nuptial high mass.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Della Jacques, her sister. Lavener Medore of Lincoln acted as best man. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served for members of the immediate families and a few close friends at the home of the bride's parents.

Upon their return from a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Boucher will make their home in Lincoln.

Sievert, to whom the congregation granted a leave of absence because of a nervous breakdown, will deliver a patriotic address. The flag will be raised to the strains of The Star Spangled Banner, the national anthem. The choir and the children of the Sunday school will also take part in the program. Community singing will be led by the choir. All are welcome.

Joan Crawford Reaches Peak In "Sadie McKee"

"Sadie McKee," Joan Crawford's new starring vehicle playing at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 1-2-3, is one of those rare pictures that will please everyone. The men will get their usual thrill out of watching the fascinating Joan; the women will get a kick out of her stunning new wardrobe, to say nothing of the perfect love scenes between the star and Franchot Tone, who in this picture marries her in the end.

Filed on a lavish scale, the picture, based on a Vina Delmar novel, depicts the rise of a servant girl who ultimately becomes the wife of a multi-millionaire. Gene Raymond, Edward Arnold and Tone are the men whom she meets on her way and between whom she has to make a final choice. The players mentioned are excellently cast and good work is done by Esther Raalston, Jean Dixon, Leo Carroll, Earl Oxford and Gene Austin. And it's another triumph for that ace of directors, Clarence Brown.

Signing the Declaration of Independence

America's Most Precious Document

IT IS 158 years ago since the 13 original American states broke away from the rule of Great Britain and proclaimed to the world their autonomy through the Declaration of Independence.

That historic instrument, promulgated on July 4, 1776, is the most important in American history. A beautiful shrine of bronze and marble in the Library of Congress, at Washington, is the resting place of this cherished parchment. Beside it reposes the Constitution of the United States as drafted by the nation's fathers. There, under amber glass which protects them from discoloration by the light, they may be seen by thousands of visitors annually.

Without reference to book or pamphlet, Thomas Jefferson wrote the Declaration out of his own heart. The original draft, submitted to a committee of trusted leaders appointed from the Continental Congress for the purpose, approved the instrument after minor changes had been made and it was accepted by congress two days later. This formal Declaration of July 4, 1776, gave full force and finality to the actual condition of independence which already existed.

Probably no two peoples have more in common or have lived in greater amity than Great Britain and the United States have lived for more than a century. Certainly nowhere else in the world could be found such a thing as an undefended boundary line of 3,000 miles. In the light of such facts it is with some difficulty that the present day tries to understand the situation of 158 years ago. The trouble of that far-off day may be ascribed to the mischievous theory of colonization which formerly prevailed in England and, indeed, in all the rest of Europe, a theory that parliament might enact laws binding upon the colonies "in all cases whatsoever" without regard to the wishes of the colonies. Acting upon this theory, England tried to exploit her American colonies.

AFTER the close of the Seven Years' war, during which the colonies stood devotedly by the mother country, parliament drafted certain measures for the "better administration of the colonies." Among these was the so-called stamp act, which levied a tax in America on stamped paper. It brought an outburst of opposition, but petitions that crossed the Atlantic were of no avail. Later it was followed by import duties on glass, paper, paints and tea. Because of protests, all finally were repealed except the tax on tea. Colonists refused to buy tea, but shiploads of it were sent anyway to New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Charleston. It appeared that Britain was attempting to force Americans both to buy tea and to pay a tax on it. Boston rallied to the occasion with the celebrated "Boston Tea Party," a midnight festivity in which men disguised as Indians boarded a ship and threw the tea cargo into the harbor. To discipline Boston for this, the British then closed the port to all shipping and sent soldiers to occupy the city.

There were other measures of reprisal also. Believing that Massachusetts was the fountainhead of resistance, parliament passed another act revising the charter of Massachusetts and providing for the transportation to England of certain offenders for trial. Massachusetts rebelled, the other colonies stood behind her. There were hurried activities which savored of preparation for war. Minutemen were organized and quantities of ammunition were collected and stored at Concord. General Gage, occupying Boston, determined to destroy these stores and sent 800 men from Boston to do the work.

When they reached Lexington on the morning of April 19, 1775, they found about 50 minutemen in their way. They fired on the "embattled farmers," killing eight and wounding ten, and proceeded to Concord. On their way back to Boston they were attacked by gathering militia forces and all but annihilated. The war had begun. A few weeks later followed the siege of Boston, the Battle of Bunker Hill and that great day when Washington took command of the Continental army.

THE war went on with a vengeance, and on May 15, 1776, a convention, held at Williamsburg, Va., adopted resolutions in which the delegates in the general congress were instructed "to propose to that respectable body to declare the United Colonies free and independent states." Three weeks later, Richard Henry Lee, in behalf of the Virginia delegates, introduced the resolution in congress. It passed and a committee was appointed to prepare a Declaration of Independence. America's "most precious document" was the result.

Declaration in Three Parts
The Declaration of Independence may be said to be divided into three parts. In the first, the colonists set forth their philosophy as to the right and duty of a people to throw off a government which has become despotic; in the second they rehearse a long series of grievances to show that British government in the colonies had become so; and in the third they actually declare themselves "free and independent states."

The NATION'S GREATEST PICNIC DAY

INDEPENDENCE day for every loyal American stands out pre-eminently as the one great national holiday among all the holidays of the year. It is observed by every state in the Union and by the District of Columbia.

Since the signing of the Declaration of Independence this greatest of all picnic days had not wanted for popularity with people in all walks of life, from the farmer and his family to the business man and his family from the great city.

What with the preparations that have been going on and are still in progress, principal of which is the collection of a great feast that will appeal to all in the party, thousands upon thousands of mothers are "chairmen of committees of arrangements"—especially the food supply. That they are doing their duty in a most wonderful manner is attested by the grocer, the butcher, the canned goods shops, and all other places that deal in the type of "eats" that will be suitable for such a great celebration. For everybody is picnic-minded this year and every one of the millions of outings promises to be "bigger and better" than ever before.

As is mother's usual custom on such an occasion she is stocking the special picnic larder with various kinds of canned meats and vegetables that call for little or no attention when time comes for serving. Anticipating that the family will not care to return home until late in the evening, she is planning on two picnic meals instead of only the noon feast; "supper" is to be served at the picnic grounds, where there is to be a night program, ending with the big fireworks display. Thus the day will be given over entirely to the Independence celebration as never before—judging from the plans, including the food supply. As the evening meal will come mostly from the splendid variety of canned meats, fruits, vegetables and such, as well as from attractive packages of foods that are prepared for just such affairs—all now is anticipation like never before, for an old-time celebration of the "grand and glorious Fourth."

PETER GETS ANOTHER SURPRISE

"DID you hear my cousin, Brownie the Thrasher, sing?" asked Jenny Wren of Peter Rabbit.
"Did I hear him sing?" replied Peter, his eyes shining at the memory. "He sang especially for me. He has a wonderful voice, has Brownie, and when he is singing he acts as if he enjoys it himself and knows what a good singer he is. I noticed that that long tail of his hung straight down, the same way Mr. Wren's does when he sings."

"Of course it did," retorted Jenny promptly. "That's a family trait. The tails of both my other big cousins do the same thing."

"What—wha—what's that? Have you got more big cousins?" cried Peter, staring up at Jenny Wren as if she were some strange person he had never seen before.

"Certainly," retorted Jenny. "Mocker the Mocking-bird and Kitty the Cat-bird belong to Thrasher's family, and that makes them second cousins to me."

Such a funny expression as there was on Peter's face! He felt that Jenny Wren was telling the truth, but it was surprising news to him, and so hard to believe that for a few minutes, he couldn't find his tongue to ask another question. Finally he ventured to ask very timidly, "Does Brownie imitate the songs of other birds the way Mocker and Kitty do?"

Jenny Wren shook her head very decidedly. "No," said she; "he's perfectly satisfied with his own song."

"He ought to be," declared Peter. "Anyone who can sing as he can should be quite contented."

Before another word could be said, the clear whistle of Glory the Cardinal sounded from a tree just a little way off. Instantly Peter forgot all about Jenny Wren's relatives and scampered over to that tree. You see, Glory is so beautiful that Peter never loses a chance to see him.

As Peter sat staring up into the tree trying to get a glimpse of Glory's red coat, the clear, sweet whistle sounded once more. It drew Peter's eyes to one of the upper branches, but instead of the beautiful brilliant coat of Glory the Cardinal, he saw a bird about the size of Welcome Robin, dressed in ashy gray with two white bars on his wings and white feathers on the outer edges of his tail. He was very trim and neat and his tail hung straight down after the manner of Brownie's when he was singing. It was a long tail, but not as long as Brownie's. Peter blinked and stared, for he was a very much surprised rabbit.

QUESTION BOX By ED WYNN . . . The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I have just written a song. The lyrics are very sad. They are about a young man telling how he made love to a young girl and of her promise to marry him, then on the day before the wedding she tells him she will not marry him because she found out he didn't have any money. Will you please give me a suitable title for my song?

Yours truly,
ART ISTICT.

Answer—The best title for your song (according to the above description) would be "She Looked Me Up in Bradstreet's, Now I'm Dun."

Dear Mr. Wynn:
Is it true that a Scotchman "loves HIS whisky?"

Sincerely,
JACK KNIFE.

Answer—It is true that he loves whisky, but not "his." He loves someone else's.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I am a young lady 22 years of age and considered very pretty. I am keeping company with three young men about my own age. Is it all right for me to go with three different fellows?

Yours truly,
I. M. A. FLIRT.

Answer—It is not all right if the other two find it out.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
In the government income tax notice, mention is always made of "A Full Return." What do you think that means?

Sincerely,
D. LINQUENT.

Answer—To me "A Full Return" always means when a man comes back home drunk.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I hear a great deal of talk about "Mermaids." I don't believe there are such things, do you? If so, maybe you are smart enough to tell me where they sleep?

Sincerely,
C. BEAST.

Answer—My dear child, "Mermaids" when they are little babies sleep in "the cradle of the deep," and when they grow up, "in the bed of the ocean."

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I have heard several authors of books referred to as "chemists." I know some authors have different degrees conferred on them, but never "chemist." Can you tell me what makes an author a "chemist?"

Truly yours,
I. REED ALOTT.

Answer—An author is called a "chemist" when his book becomes a drug on the market.

FOR WARM DAYS

ICED coffee prepared as usual, served with ice, sugar and cream, according to taste, makes a most refreshing drink for a warm day, served at luncheon. Here is a treasured recipe which it will be well to prepare and have ready for any emergency.

Lemon Sirup.

Grate the rind from one lemon, add the juice of six lemons with four cupfuls of sugar and two cupfuls of water.

A ROOM IN A HOSPITAL

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SEEN in the morning light, the creamy walls
Are tinged with the faint luster of the dawn.
Outside my room, a rustle in the halls
Whispers another night has come and gone.

The rattle of the trays proclaims the hours,
As steadily the day moves into night.
There may be visitors, new books,
Bright flowers
To touch the heart with exquisite delight.

There are good thoughts to share in spite of pain,
New friends to make, old friends to greet once more;
A slow advance toward health and strength again
To meet that strange old world outside my door.

But in the meantime, my affection holds
One world alone. . . . The sunlight speeds the gloom,
As I lie here, while all my love enfolds
My world. . . . the narrow walls of one small room. . . .
Copyright.—WNU Service.

Boil together for ten minutes; cool and put into a bottle in the ice chest. When serving pour a tablespoonful or two of the sirup into a glass, add chilled ice with cold water and serve at once. This is so good and is always ready to serve at a moment's notice.

Lemon Soup.

Add the juice and grated peel of a lemon to four cupfuls of water, bring to a boil and thicken slightly with three teaspoonfuls of arrow root mixed with a little cold water. It is better to add the juice of the lemon without cooking, just as it is served.

Mint Sangaree.

Crush three sprigs of mint with a lump of sugar, drop into a glass half full of cracked ice. Add four tablespoonfuls of grape juice and fill the glass to the brim with charged water. Shake thoroughly and strain into another glass. Serve garnished with a sprig of mint.

Chicken a la Stanley.

Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one large onion thinly sliced and two broilers cut into pieces for serving. Cover and cook slowly for ten minutes. Remove the chicken, rub the stock and onions through a sieve and add one and one-half tablespoonful each of butter and flour cooked together. Add cream to make the sauce of the right consistency, season well and serve poured over or around the chicken on a hot serving dish. Garnish with sauted bananas.

Model Farm House of the Future

ILLUSTRATING the changes in American living conditions, this model farm house erected by The Country Home, a national farm magazine, attracts much attention at the World's Fair in Chicago. It is in a beautifully landscaped lot adjoining the dairy exhibits. New ideas are embodied in its construction, which is of brick, steel and concrete. The lower floor contains living room, kitchen, laundry, wash room, farm office, work shop and two-car garage. The upper floor has four bedrooms and bath, plus a "roof deck" over the entire garage. The brick used is reinforced with steel rods, precast in panels, and set in place much as the so-called fabricated houses are built. The house is fireproof and can be built for less than $5,000. As shown at the World's Fair, it is completely equipped with all modern improvements. The house has no cellar, its architects maintaining that a cellar is obsolete and expensive.

Stratosphere Balloon

Gondola for Stratosphere Flight.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE huge balloon, which will be used in the stratosphere flight sponsored jointly by the National Geographic Society and the United States Army Air Corps, is the largest ever constructed. It will take the air from a protected spot in the Black Hills near Rapid City, South Dakota.

The balloon was made in a vast room in an Akron, Ohio, factory, whose windows were sealed, whose air was strained through cotton flannel, and where men and women employees wore grit-free "slumber shoes" of cloth as they walked over rubber-impregnated fabric. The bag is capable of holding three million cubic feet of hydrogen gas. This capacity is nearly three and a half times that of the largest free balloon hitherto built.

The finished bag which was rushed westward to the point of takeoff by truck, will lift two intrepid officers and a cargo of specially designed scientific instruments near fifteen miles above sea level.

Not a stitch was taken in putting together more than two and a third acres of cloth. Instead of being a job for a seamstress or a sail-maker, the task was closest to that of a news editor pasting together pages of "copy" or a librarian mending a torn page. Everyone of the 3,520 major pieces in which the fabric was cut, and each of the scores of smaller fragments, was cemented with the greatest care to its next-door neighbors with rubber cement. The next step was to cover the cemented seams of this jigsaw puzzle with fabric-backed rubber tape on both sides. When these operations were completed the seams were actually stronger than the neighboring fabric.

More than 300 gallons of cement—the purest rubber dissolved in gasoline and benzol—were required to put the balloon together.

Immensity of the Balloon.

Although the balloon room in which the great balloon was made is three hundred feet long and in places more than a hundred feet wide, that area was not a large enough one in which to spread out the completed bag. Portions of the bag as large as racing yacht mainsails, assembled on the floor during construction, represented relatively small fragments of the balloon area. Half of three "orange-peel" sections, or "gores," cemented together and spread out, covered nearly half the floor of the balloon room. Yet twenty-five sections equally as large had to be cemented on to this piece before the bag was finished.

Owing to the huge size of the balloon segments, final construction operations required piling them in long windrows of pleats with only the edges exposed for cementing. After large sections of the balloon were put together, thousands of cubic feet of air was pumped under the fabric to float it off the floor for inspection. Men under the cloth looked through it to strong light, finding any thin spots. These were reinforced with rubber patches.

Cloth for the balloon was made from specially selected cotton of unusually long, strong fibers. It was woven in strips 4 1/2 inches wide and 300 feet long. One hundred and thirty of these massive rolls were used in cutting out the balloon—39,000 running feet or more than seven and a third miles of cloth. Every square foot of the amazing acreage of cloth passed through a rubberizing machine thirty times, each time receiving a very thin coat of rubber.

More than 80 employees worked on the balloon under a balloon-building expert, who, during the past twenty years, has supervised the construction of more than a thousand balloons and airships for the army and navy.

Packing the completed balloon for its westward trip was no small problem. It was probably the largest unit of fabric that was ever transported. It required folding with extreme care and its surfaces, and folds had to be protected so that there would be no rubbing.

Gondola Is of Dowmetal.

Without a single rope, and without its valves, the bag weighs approximately 4,700 pounds. With ropes and valves, but without the gondola and its trappings, the balloon's weight is slightly over 5,000 pounds. When the balloon rises from the earth with all its attachments and load, it will weigh nearly eight tons.

The gondola is a huge hollow ball 8 feet 4 inches in diameter, that has been built up by welding together eight sections shaped like pieces of orange peel. The shell made of dowmetal is slightly less than three-sixteenths of an inch thick. At first glance the big metal ball seems to be built of steel; and it is almost as strong as though it were. But the shell, as it stands, without its various fittings, weighs only 450 pounds. If it were made of steel, it would weigh practically a ton.

The two largest openings in the gondola, just above the "equator line," are manholes—one each for Maj. William E. Kepner and Capt. Albert W. Stevens, the "crew." The manholes are fitted with covers, which will be clamped down until air-tight by a heavy bolt, easily tightened and loosened by hand from within.

On the way down from the stratosphere, when breathable air has been reached, these manhole covers will be lifted from their hinges and thrown overboard—attached to parachutes—as ballast.

Numerous small portholes have been provided in the shell of the ball. Some are covered with glass and will serve as observation windows; in some the lenses of cameras are mounted with air-tight fittings; and in others scientific instruments have been placed.

One glass-covered port is situated in the exact top of the sphere so that Major Kepner, the balloon pilot, can look up through it and through the open bottom of the balloon appendix, and can read a large thermometer dial near the top of the bag which will tell him at all times the temperature of the hydrogen gas.

The opening in the bottom of the metal ball was reserved for a large aerial camera which will make frequent photographs of the earth, straight downward. Part way up the curved side of the gondola is another camera opening for the taking of oblique photographs.

Shelves for Apparatus.

A series of shelves have been provided inside the ball between upright posts and the shell; and on them will be stored the dozens of pieces of scientific apparatus, batteries, oxygen flasks, and other paraphernalia needed for twelve hours of scientific "house-keeping" in the stratosphere. Around the edge of the floor will be piled forty-pound sacks of lead dust for ballast.

The most unusual assortment of scientific instruments that has ever been brought together to fathom the secrets of the upper air—many of them provided with "electric brains" and "photographic eyes"—were built and assembled at Wright field in the huge machine shop and laboratory of the United States Army Air Corps.

In this "pay load" of nearly a ton of apparatus lies the reason for the most ambitious stratosphere expedition yet planned.

All of the work at Dayton on the devices to gather scientific data was done under the personal supervision of Captain Stevens, famous aerial photographer and observer, who has himself designed some of the instruments.

Probably the most important instrument invented by Captain Stevens is a balloon valve of unique design. Heretofore it has been necessary to operate a valve in the top of a balloon bag by means of a rope tugged from the gondola far below. As balloons have increased in size, this type of valve has become less and less satisfactory. Captain Stevens' valve will be opened by means of a long rubber hose into which compressed gas will be admitted. When the air pressure is released, the valve closes. The principle is like that used for operating air brakes. The valve has been tested through 400 feet of rubber hose in a cold chamber whose temperature was minus 45 degrees centigrade. It worked perfectly.

Howe About:

Lincoln Cause of Humiliations Genius

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

ABRAMHAM LINCOLN was President during a critical time, and worried a good deal. He once said: "If to be the head of h—l is as hard as what I have had to undergo, I could find it in my heart to pity Satan himself."

Still Lincoln was far better off than millions of his fellow citizens during the Civil war. Think of the thousands of good Union men starved in Libby and Andersonville prisons; of the hundreds of thousands who were targets for enemy bullets; of the millions who suffered war privations. Lincoln was at least occupying a public office paying $50,000 a year, and lived in a palace provided at public expense. Whether his judgment was good or bad, his salary went on, and all the time he was accumulating great fame. The war hopelessly ruined many millions, but made Lincoln rich and famous.

We have heard of the poverty of his widow; I read the other day she was a rich woman when she died; and how little she deserved!

I have no sympathy for the woes of statesmen on the public payroll. From 1860 to 1864 millions of Americans had bad luck that Abraham Lincoln might have their share of good luck. During his four years in the White House, Lincoln should have daily thanked the gods, instead of complaining. I had an uncle George, with a young wife and baby at home, who had hard luck at Pittsburgh Landing that Abraham Lincoln might get $50,000 a year and endless fame.

Let any man think of the greatest degradations and humiliations throughout his life, and I believe he must decide sex was at the bottom of most of them. It is the one thing we should endeavor to subdue and regulate, yet it is the thing we regulate least, and let run wild. Our social system, our literature, encourage wildness in sex rather than regulation. The man bull is forever permitted to follow his lust, instead of locking him up until his services are needed. And instead of trying to keep him quiet, the objects of his bellowing aggravate him all they can.

An envious dull man once said genius is insanity, and other dull men have made the saying famous. It was never true, for genius has always meant special ability. There are millions of geniuses; thousands climbing to distinction, hundreds to great distinction. I have known several promising candidates in small towns where I have lived. Among cats, dogs, cattle, and the lower animals generally, a scrub never won a blue ribbon, but it is characteristic in the human family that scrubs oftener achieve great distinction than thoroughbreds. Probably this comes about because there is no stud book among men. Goethe had fourteen mistresses and no great poetry.

Mozart attracted attention all over Europe as a musician when six years old. Before he died at thirty-five he had written symphonies and operas now performed somewhere every week in the year.

He never sat down to display his genius that he was not disturbed by a bill collector, by the screaming of a woman in labor, a row with relatives, or some other incident of love affairs. Had he been as free to devote his time to music as "Reign Count" was to devote his time to winning races, there is no telling what heights Mozart might have easily reached. Many pampered race horses have won a quarter of a million dollars in two years.

Mozart received less than a thousand dollars from "Figaro," "Don Giovanni," and the Requiem, and when he died, was so poor his funeral cost under five dollars.

Except in the case of the late Thomas A. Edison I do not at the moment recall another American who became widely popular, and really deserved it. Mr. Edison was quiet, well-behaved, and a great worker; what little he said was proper for both young and old to remember, but somehow he attracted the popular fancy. . . . It is a very rare case. Millions of other popular men have been unworthy of popularity, as they have acted badly, and taught bad lessons. Look at Jean Jacques Rousseau. He was scarcely a respectable man, yet his popularity is growing a long time after his death. Millions of people in all parts of the world regard him as almost a saint, and his teaching as very important. Rousseau was once "kept" by a woman. When she threw him over, he took up with a kitchen wench, and sent their children to orphan asylums; he never later saw one of them.

All my life I have heard men clamoring for more rights. It has always seemed to me I exercise more rights than are good for me. I have the right to eat three enormous meals a day, and too frequently exercise it to my detriment. I am at liberty to do a hundred things I should not do. I have always been too much of a freeman; my greatest mistake has been. I have not been more of a slave to duties that, followed with reasonable effectiveness, would have made me a more useful, successful and healthier man.

Literary Output Shows Falling Off Since 1931

Last year 1,272 fewer books were published in this country than in 1931, the exact total of books published being 9,035, according to statistics in the Publishers' Weekly. There was a slight increase in the number of books of fiction—there were 1,988 last year as compared with 1,942 in 1932—but juvenile titles dropped sharply from 1,018 in 1931 last year.

There was a considerable drop also in what is called "general literature," 357 as compared to 494, and poetry and drama were cut from 711 to 573.

Ninety-nine fewer titles were issued fitting the classification "Religion, Theology," and there are 99 fewer books in "Geography, Travel." A biennial census of manufacturers made by the government shows a 25 per cent drop in the number of volumes manufactured in 1931 as compared to 1929. The total for 1929 was 211,853,000 volumes printed. The total in 1931 was 154,235,000.

SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract, which Kershaw's wife christens Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, Forlorn Valley banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. He proposes to play Nate against Lorry, assuming that they are carrying on the old feud. In this way getting control of the Key lands necessary to the project. Nate, however, has no intention of carrying on the feud. He tells Lorry that he and Owen Kershaw, Lorry's brother, met in France just before Owen was killed. They became buddies, and Nate promised that if he survived Owen he would look after Lorry as a brother might do. Babson, determined to secure Lorry's lake-site and Nate's dam-site makes legal application for the allocation of flood waters to the Forlorn Valley irrigation district, which he organizes.

Babson's face expressed a hypocritical concern. "That's much too bad, Henry," he replied. "I'm sorry about Rance. He was as hard as steel, but honest. You never had to guess where Rance Kershaw stood on any proposition." Secretly he could have given three long, raucous cheers.

"I suppose the girl will have to liquidate now," he continued after a moment's thought. "She can't carry on with that business alone, and the estate is badly embarrassed financially. I'll be going if I see, Henry, how this bank is being carried by the Kershaw estate along to take a chance on getting its money back."

"So I thought," Rookby answered. "By the way, Nate Tichenor's come back to Eden Valley."

Babson started as if hee-stung. "Rance Kershaw owed the Bar H a lot of money on chattel mortgage for cattle he bought in 1920. Henry, he must owe the Bar H three or four years' rent."

"Undoubtedly," Mr. Rookby opined. "Nate Tichenor's let that steer have all the rope he wanted; now that the estate is in so deep it can't climb out, he's come back to give the Kershaw clan the final clout that will finish it."

"I wouldn't be so sure about that, Mr. Babson." And Rookby went on to describe Rance Kershaw's death in front of the gate leading to the Bar H headquarters; the summoning by Lorry Kershaw of Nate Tichenor in that hour of stress; the kindly and neighborly action of Tichenor thereafter; the arrival of Rube Tenney to take over the job of riding boss on the Circle K; the apparent friendliness between Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw, as faithfully reported by Miss Lizzie Bachman to all in Valley Center who would listen to her eager recital.

"Lizzie was only up there with Lorry Kershaw three days and Nate Tichenor gave her fifty dollars for it," Rookby went on. "What's more, he paid her in advance. And he gave Bud Seamon and Jake Bacheller ten dollars each for digging Rance's grave."

"Liberal, ain't he?" Babson commented. "Henry, this is the most h—i—cracking piece of news that's come out of Eden Valley since Taylor Hensley and Rance Kershaw had their ruckus. Just the same, I'm banking Nate Tichenor's no softy in business matters; he's half Hensley and a grouch don't die easy in that breed. The Hensleys always did want all of Eden Valley, and now that Nate Tichenor sees a bully chance to get it cheap, together with the Kershaw cattle, he'll grab it. Has Lorry Kershaw been in here to see me since her father died?"

"In yesterday. Told her you'd be back last night so maybe she'll call today."

"How is she? Pretty well busted up?"

"Pert as they make 'em."

"I'm not surprised. Nothing weak about the Kershaws. Well, Henry, we shall see that which we shall see."

Two days later Lorry Kershaw came into the bank. Babson led her at once into his private office (usually he occupied a desk in a fenced-off corner of the banking room) and, with many protestations of sympathy for the loss of her father and regret that his absence from Valley Center had militated against his attendance at the funeral, begged her to be seated and inform him in what manner he could be of service to her. To his amazement the girl looked him over coldly.

"You should be sorry for father's death," she shot at him. "You killed him."

"I? My dear Lorry, how can you say such a thing?"

"You wrote him a letter and he knew you were going to close in on him. You knew he had a weak heart—that—shocks were bad for him—yet you shocked him. You wanted to. You bought up our mortgage and called it and our notes. You're a two-gun man, aren't you?"

"My dear girl, permit me to explain. Your father's notes had been renewed four times; they were overdue and the interest was in default, and the superintendent of state banks had jumped me about them more than once. I forgot your father should be spared shocks. The law forces us to protect the money of our depositors."

"Granted. But you bought our mortgage. Why?"

"For an investment and to save it from falling into the hands of your enemy?"

"Nate Tichenor." This was fast thinking and Babson felt a thrill of pride in his cleverness.

Her dark flashing eyes bored into his soul. "I think you're a contemptible liar."

He paled with anger, but controlled himself. "You will, of course, understand why I do not argue with you, my dear. You are under a strain—overwrought. Now I will repeat a query I made you when you first entered this room. In what manner can I be of service to the daughter of my old friend and revered customer, Ranceford Kershaw?"

"You Killed Him."

"You say you bought the mortgage as an investment. If I pay up the overdue interest, will you renew it for five years at the same rate of interest?"

"The present mortgage is at 6 per cent. It was made when money wasn't quite so tight as at present. I'm sorry, but a renewal will cost you 8 per cent. I'm getting that from others."

"Will you renew the unsecured notes and cut the interest on them to 3 per cent?"

"Perhaps. I'll have to have a statement of the financial condition of your father's estate first."

"The estate is land poor and cow poor and it hasn't any money. It's practically insolvent."

He threw up his hands and smiled wearily. "How like a woman to ask such favors in the face of such a statement," he sighed, then brightened suddenly. "However, we might strike a happy compromise. I was interested to note recently that your father made you a deed of gift to four thousand acres in the lower part of Eden Valley."

She nodded.

"I would be glad to entertain a proposition to buy that land from you, Miss Lorry. As agricultural land it is worthless, as grazing land it is very poor, but as a hunting and fishing preserve it is excellent. I know a man who would be willing to pay you a fair price for that land."

"How much?"

"Well, I'm pretty certain I can unload it on him at ten dollars an acre."

Nate Tichenor was at the Circle K headquarters when Lorry Kershaw came in that night from her trip to Gold Run.

Investigating Effect That Beaver Dams Have on Streams Where the Trout Lives

That ingenious little engineer, the beaver, is due for a spanking at the hands of scientists who have been given the job of determining what effect, if any, its dam building operations have on trout fishing.

Preliminary examinations by the scientists tend toward condemnation of beavers' presence on trout streams if good fishing is to be maintained, and the acceptance of this only means that a hundred thousand fishermen will be clamoring for beaver hides, says a writer in the Detroit News.

So far the investigators have found that a trout won't jump over a beaver dam that obstructs its free passage to the headwaters for spawning purposes, but that it will drop over going down stream. So this doesn't let the female trout get back to its spawning beds once it passes a dam, and that is bad for the natural reproduction of trout. It has been discovered also that the backwaters of a beaver dam create good fishing for two or three

I'll expect you to sell to me for nine, of course. I've got to have a profit."

"And if I agree to sell to you at that price, what?"

"That will enable you take up your father's unsecured notes and rehabilitate your credit at this bank. In return I'll renew your mortgage for three years."

"At 6 per cent?" she insisted. "Can't possibly," he defended. "Is that your final decision, Mr. Babson?"

"Absolutely. I dislike to appear harsh, but business is business and if I permit sentiment to—"

"Please spare me your stereotyped and hypocritical maudlinings," the girl interrupted angrily. "I'm not a fool and I see through you as if you were a window. Make out a satisfaction of mortgage, sign it before a notary public and give it to me. In return I will give you a bank cashier's check for the exact amount due. Hand me those unsecured notes, marked 'Paid,' and you shall have another bank cashier's check for the amount of them, with interest. There are the checks"—and she tossed them on the table before him.

He stared at them in frank amazement. "Why, where did you get all that money?" he demanded.

"That's none of your business, sir. You called upon my father to pay up in five days or stand spit. He's dead, but I'm obeying orders. Your bluff's called. Nobody has ever run a blazer on the Kershaw clan and got away with it. And you were trying to run a blazer, you know. Tried to scare me into selling you that land of mine."

He was desolated. "Do you mean to tell me you refuse the fine offer I have just made you?"

"I do. I'd rather give the land away than sell it to you."

He fled from her stormy presence and in about fifteen minutes Henry Rookby pussy-footed in and handed her the canceled evidence of her father's indebtedness.

Mr. Rookby's eyes were round with wonder and resentment as he watched her climb into her battered old car at the curb and roll out Valley Center boulevard in the direction of Gold Run. He knew she was going to the county seat to record the satisfaction of the mortgage.

"By George," he said to Babson, sycophantically, "that's certainly one salty dame, eh, chief?"

"She's a devil, Henry—a she devil on wheels. She's all the wild Kershaws rolled into one—and I'm a star-spangled jackass without brains enough to pound sand in a hole."

At three o'clock he went home, suffering from a violent headache, due solely to futile rage. But he was not at all in danger of a nervous collapse now, for the fight was in the open at last and he drew a subtle comfort from that knowledge. He knew now where Lorry Kershaw had gotten all that money. Undoubtedly she had sold her land to that mysterious power company. Well, he was routed in the lower end of the Pan, but he would go to the attack again at the upper end of the Handle. And, despite the fact that his alternative proposition would save the district the cost of erecting a huge impounding dam, Babson would gladly have abandoned it, for it carried risks and almost the certainty of expensive lawsuits which might so delay surface irrigation in Forlorn Valley as to ruin him and the Bank of Valley Center, even though at the last the valley should win the fight.

CHAPTER VII

Nate Tichenor was at the Circle K headquarters when Lorry Kershaw came in that night from her trip to Gold Run.

"Welcome, stranger," she greeted him, as she drove up. "Come out and help me admire my new car."

He came and looked the new car over soberly. "Aren't you a little bit reckless and improvident for a girl in your financial fix?" he demanded gravely.

"You talk like Silas Babson," she retorted gaily.

"Well, I'm not objecting, Lorry, but I greatly fear this new car will be regarded by Babson as an extravagance; it's bound to hurt your credit."

"Nate, Silas Babson can take a jump into Eden Valley creek for all I care. I'm washed up with him and his bank."

"No!" he cried simulating amazement. "How come?"

"I've sold my four thousand acres below the main ranch of the Bar H for four hundred thousand dollars—cash! And I've cleaned up Babson and his little red brick bank and have a hundred thousand dollars working capital left."

"Then God's in his heaven and all's well with the world. But why did you sell your land and keep the impending deal a secret from me? Somebody wants to put a dam in the gorge and they need your land for the reservoir. You know very well the Bar H owns the dam site; if we'd worked together we could both have sold, but now that they have your land they have a terrific advantage over me."

"But you're a low-flung rascal, Nate Tichenor, to suspect I'd leave you holding the sack. I told that man I wouldn't sell for a million dollars unless they secured your dam site first."

"I suspected the sort of girl you are, Lorry, but I wanted to make certain. Forgive my little deceit. I took the liberty of deciding to sell your land and naming the price to the Mountain Valley Power company. I would never have sold my dam site to that corporation until assured there would be no argument with you over the price of your land. Did Babson try to trade you out of your land today?"

She related to him in detail her interview with the banker.

"I should say you gave Babson a poke under the heart. How did he assimilate it?"

"As if his world was crashing about him. Perhaps I should not have attacked him with such ferocity, but I have a temper, Nate, and when a lying, scheming, hypocritical, cold-hearted snake like Silas Babson crosses my trail I like to shoot his head off."

Nate smiled approvingly. He liked the fire in her. Here was no wishy-washy, clinging vine of a girl, dependent, selfish, and sex-conscious. A man's woman with a code of conduct like unto that of a very gallant gentleman.

She laughed, walking round her new car and admiring it.

"A carload of smooth two-year-old steers, averaging ten hundred and fifty pounds, sold for seven cents in the Union stock yards in Los Angeles today," he announced. "Things are certainly looking up for old Rance Kershaw's girl."

She turned on him with shining eyes. "How did you get the news so quickly?"

"My valet has a portable radio."

"Your what?"

"Oh, Nate, I'm ashamed of you. A great, big, strong man like you, with all your heads and legs and arms and teeth! A valet! I know you had a chauffeur, which is bad enough, but you've kept the valet in hiding." Then she was suddenly tender. "Ah, Nate, you're a dear. I had thought Eden Valley would be unbearably lonely when dad left me, but it isn't."

"I had thought the same thing with respect to myself. It wasn't my plan to remain here more than a week—"

"But you're not going away so soon?"

"Why not? I've completed my business—all except renewing the lease on the Bar H to the Kershaw estate, its heirs and assigns. I suppose you desire to renew the lease?"

"Just because you know I have a hundred thousand dollars on hand you want thirty thousand of it." With this light banter she strove to hide the shock his announcement had given her. "Yes, I'll want a renewal. When are you leaving, Nate?"

"Tomorrow morning. Will you drive this shiny new car over to Gold Run tomorrow, lunch with me there and see me off on my journey?"

She shook her raven head. "No, 'No, I think not. Partings are little deaths—and we start our calf-branding tomorrow. There are only two men on the payroll who can rope a calf by the hind legs and drag him to the fire. The others are Indians—neck-roppers; so I have to take a hand at the branding, done quickly."

His face brightened. "If you'll give me a horse and a riata I'll stay over a few days and help you. It's so long since I've worked in a branding corral—and I ought to keep my hand in."

They sat down on the running board of Lorry's new car and chatted until Mrs. Tenney called them in to dinner, served them and discreetly retired to the kitchen. For a long time Lorry was silent, then, with the impetuosity of her nature, suddenly she returned to the subject nearest her heart.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

The "New" Diet System

YOU are hearing something of a "new" system of diet whereby you do not eat meat when you eat potatoes, or you do not eat bread when you eat meat.

The reason seriously advocated by those who use this diet is that your digestive apparatus should not be asked to do too much work at one time; thus if it is digesting starch it shouldn't be required to digest proteid also.

As a matter of fact there is nothing "new" about this system; every doctor has heard or read about it for a great many years but there never was a time when it was so much discussed or used.

You may remember how the 18 day diet swept over the country leaving many invalids and causing many deaths. It would appear that this fad is also interesting a great many people, but fortunately it is not likely to cause any serious trouble.

While it must be admitted that the enzymes or ferments in the digestive juices which break up or digest foods, act differently from one another in that one acts on starches, another on proteids, and another on fats, nevertheless as they all flow together at the sight and smell of food there is always enough of them to digest a "mixed" meal.

Will this system of not eating meat or eggs with bread or potatoes help certain individuals?

Dr. Ruth F. Wadsworth, in Collier's, says that while this new system is unnecessary for the average well individual, nevertheless anyone following it really gets a good all-round "mixed" diet. "If you won't eat starches with your meal you can't eat meat alone so you add vegetables, fresh fruits and salads. And if you can't eat meat and eggs with the other two meals you are bound by variety to have stewed or raw fruits with your cereals and more salads and vegetables. Consequently you are getting more variety, more vitamins, more bulk than you ever thought you had time for before."

Now there are a number of young people who have difficulty in digesting starches, and some older people who have difficulty in digesting fats. It is in these cases that this method of taking food might be helpful.

For the vast majority of people this method is not necessary or even advisable as it gets the "mind" too much on the food, and upsets the usual household arrangements.

However it makes sure of a good all-round diet and can't hurt you if you want to try it. In fact, it may really help you.

Hay Fever Sufferers

IT IS a mystery to many that one member of a family will be attacked regularly by hay fever and the rest of the family, living in the same household, breathing the same air, never have an attack.

You will admit that this is definite proof that there is something about this hay fever sufferer, something about the general condition of his body, or part or parts of his body, that gives him this tendency towards attacks of hay fever.

Dr. M. J. Gutman, Munich, states that the fact that pollen from plants put into the nose of normal persons is removed from the body unchanged, whereas in a hay fever patient sensitive to this particular type of pollen, the pollen is changed, some of it having burst, shows that the mucous lining of the nose, or the mucous (the liquid on the lining of the nose) differs from that of a normal person.

As you know the hay fever patient suffers with an inflammation of the eyes, nose, throat and bronchial tubes.

It is unfortunate that so many school teachers are afflicted with it, as it not only tires them but makes them very irritable. In addition to the symptoms in eyes, nose, throat and chest, in a number of cases there are skin eruptions such as hives (urticaria), intestinal distress and nervous symptoms.

Manufacturers of dust proof and noise proof windows are now quite widely advertising the use of these windows in relieving hay fever symptoms.

Naturally for a sleeping room, equipped with one of these devices, doors and key hole would have to be plugged, but certainly the patient should get relief during the hours of sleep, which might enable him to be fairly comfortable the rest of the time.

The treatment of hay fever continues the same, that is injections of serum, beginning two to three months before the usual attack occurs.

While this has definitely helped a great number, it has not helped others, and so other measures are found necessary—going away to a district where there is little or no pollen in the air, living in chambers or rooms a number of hours a day the air of which is kept free of pollen.

For a great number of sufferers the use of the various remedies containing adrenalin gives considerable relief.

BLACKHEAD BATTLE WON BY PREVENTION

Treatment Necessary While Birds Are Young.

By L. E. Cline, Extension Service, University of Nevada—WNU Service

Blackhead, dread disease of turkeys, can be prevented by holiday bird growers, but its cure is very difficult and not practical. Preventive measures are very successful if intelligently and persistently carried out when the birds are young and the cost is negligible. Now is the time to take them.

Sanitary measures are essential for control, but cannot be depended upon entirely, so the next precaution is to render harmless so far as possible any infection taken into the young turk's body.

Practical prevention of blackhead lies in keeping the turkey flock free of cecum worms, which act as intermediate hosts, and this can be done with pulverized tobacco in a simple and inexpensive way.

When the young birds are three to four weeks old, add two pounds of powdered tobacco to each 100 pounds of starting mash, feeding the tobacco mixture exclusively, except for the usual supply of green feed, water, and milk.

The tobacco mixture is given for two full days, followed, on the morning of the third day, by a physic of one pound of epsom salts to each five gallons of water or milk. The birds should be forced to drink the salts solution for about two hours. This eliminates the blackhead organisms and the cecum worms.

Once a month until the turkeys are at least four months old, the treatment should be repeated. While being purged and for the day following, the birds should be kept warm to prevent colds and piling up. Immediately after each treatment the pens and houses should be thoroughly cleaned.

Only fresh tobacco of a guaranteed nicotine content of 1½ per cent and kept in sealed containers should be used.

Eggs in Water Glass Is Good Plan for Storage

Eggs are best stored in earthenware vessels, in the cellar or other cool place. For this purpose, says Wallace's Farmer, thoroughly clean and scald, say, a five-gallon crock. Mix one-half gallon of water glass with four and one-half gallons of water that has been boiled and allowed to cool to room temperature, and pour it into the crock. Into this solution place clean, strictly fresh, infertile eggs from day to day, as they are gathered. Keep on adding eggs to within two inches of the top of the liquid.

Dirty eggs should never be stored in this way, nor should any attempt be made, if dirty, to clean them. Washing an egg removes the natural protective covering which prevents spoiling. Also watch every egg put away, to see that the shell contains no cracks whatsoever. This is very important.

Eggs may be stored in this manner and be kept until November or December. When removed, and they are to be boiled, a small hole should be made with a pin in one end of the egg, to prevent the shell from cracking in the cooking process.

Why Eggs May Be Dark

Many amateur poultry keepers are surprised and sometimes alarmed when they find their eggs changed in color. This change is seen in both the color of the whites and the yolks. The yolk is frequently of a much darker yellow, and the poultry keeper thinks there is something seriously wrong. Nothing is wrong, and the eggs have the same quality and food value as the lighter colored eggs. The change is due to two causes. First, the hens store up much coloring matter during the winter months and this is released to the egg yolk when warm weather comes. Second, the succulent green grass, weeds, etc., eaten avidly increase the coloring matter in the system.

Poultry Hops

The turkey is the lone native already domesticated in 1617 by Fernandez along the coast of Yucatan.

If high quality is to be maintained, eggs should be gathered frequently, kept dry and stored in a cool place.

Flock records show that the early hatched chicks return more money to a farmer than chicks hatched later in the year, for they begin to lay eggs when prices are higher.

Hens may live and lay some eggs even when kept in a poorly constructed house, but a flock kept in a good house and given proper care is much more likely to be profitable.

It is unsafe to hold back pullets by limiting feed when production starts. It seems wiser to feed such birds liberally so they can maintain weight while laying.

Ability to rear a thrifty flock of chickens is the best test of a successful poultryman.

Retort Goofy

Anniversary Observed by City of Pied Piper

Recalls Legend of Six and a Half Centuries Ago.

Washington.—Six and one-half centuries ago, legend relates, a spiteful musician lured away the children of Hameln (Hamelin) by his weird pings, because the village fathers bickered over his bill for having rid Hameln of a plague of rats.

Hameln is observing the six hundred fiftieth anniversary of the tragic event with a grand homecoming of all living "children and children's children" of the little German town, and will even let bygones be bygones to the extent of dedicating a Pied Piper monument, on June 26.

"Modern Hameln, with its busy industries and its salmon fisheries of River Weser, still retains many richly ornate houses and quaint, narrow streets that hark back to the days of its rat-catching legend, immortalized in Browning's ballad, 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin,'" says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

Sell Chocolate Rats.

"Along one of its gabled byways stands the beautifully ornamented stone Rattenfaenger-Haus, or 'Rat-catcher's House.' It dates from 1602, and therefore could have had no connection with the wandering piper of 1284, who had no home at all. It derives its name from the frescoes along its walls illustrating the legend. The caretaker makes a good living today selling chocolate rats to tourists.

"Another reminder of the town's famous story is the Rattenfaengerbrunnen, or Rat Catcher Fountain, on the Thiewall, a pleasant little channel in the northern part of the city. It was erected in 1885.

"Then there is the River Weser, wherein all the rats 'plunged and perished.' The Weser today is an artery of commerce for shallow-draft boats, linking Hameln with many river towns south of it as far as Karlshafen, and north to Minden. Dangerous rocks were avoided when a new channel was cut near Hameln in 1734, and deepened in 1873. The Weser's best know port, however, is Bremen, the oldest seaport in Germany, near the mouth of the river.

"Like many other towns of western Germany, Hameln owes its origin to an abbey, but it possessed a number of small dwellings and a market place in the Eleventh century. It was in turn controlled by the French, the kingdom of Westphalia, the Hanoverians, and the Prussians. Today it lies within the Prussian province of Hanover.

Mecca for Artists.

"That Hameln once was a place of considerable wealth and culture is evident from the number of stately stone and timbered Renaissance mansions that line its winding residential streets and face the banks of the Weser. Like Rothenburg, it is a happy hunting ground for artists, etchers, and photographers in search of medieval architecture and quaint vistas.

"Today most of Hameln's 25,000 inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of chemicals, leather, and paper. Sugar refining and tobacco curing plants are also important, and there is some shipbuilding. Life is leisurely among the burghers of this picturesque old German town. The chief pastimes are salmon-fishing and boating along the Weser, or walks to the ivy-clad ruins of many ancient castles

In Germany, one of the first countries under consideration, the institute found there are about 150,000 German university graduates who are seeking employment.

Under the most favorable circumstances, states the report, "not more than 10,500 vacancies can occur in the course of the same year."

The German government, according to the institute, is attempting to remedy this situation by limiting to 15,000 the number of bachelors admitted to the universities in 1934.

France, Italy, and Sweden, the institute found, are attempting to find work for unemployed university graduates by the formation of university bureaus, which announce in advance the possibilities of employment in the different branches of intellectual professions.

Lack of Skilled Labor

Seen in Industry Revival

Scranton, Pa.—An increase in the tempo of industrial activity has revealed a dearth of skilled labor in many lines, regional directors of the international correspondence schools report to officials of the school here.

"One of the unexpected results of the depression years," Ralph E. Weeks, president of the schools, said, "is that now when an industry urgently needs highly skilled men, it finds in many cases there are not a sufficient number to fill the demand.

"Many of the older men have died and others have moved in an effort to secure jobs. As a result, it has become a real problem to train qualified skilled help."

Soviet Machines Are Well Constructed

Mail Service Is a Surprising Expose of Inefficiency.

Moscow.—The Soviet union in these days gives the foreign observer much the same impression as a long battle line where a general's troops are pushing the enemy forward in one salient while retreating in another.

Out of thousands of available snapshots of life and industry in this vast land, two may be taken to illustrate the point:

Recently there was held an exhibition of the products of Soviet industry under the "five year plan." When it is remembered that Russia, until the revolution, imported virtually all of its machines save those made here under foreign supervision, the array of complicated machinery exhibited was impressive.

In one room, for instance, were moving picture cameras and projectors made by a factory in Leningrad. To a layman, at least, they appeared to be well made and modernly equipped. Nearby were models of Soviet tractors and other farm machinery appearing quite similar to American ones. There were examples of Soviet made textiles, not so perfect as those made abroad, but at least wearable.

In still another part of the building one saw a model, faithfully reproduced, of a modern Soviet oil field. New and radical designs in aircraft were shown, as were a modern gold dredge and the newest, most powerful types of locomotives.

Now, it is difficult to realize that a nation which can build giant locomotives and complicated moving picture projectors must groan and sweat under the simple job of delivering mail. Yet that is exactly what the Soviet union does. The newspapers are filled with protests about and criticisms of the mail service.

Recently an official was sent to inspect the post offices in Tashkent. His report on mail service there (which may or may not be worse than in the average town) was a surprising expose of inefficiency.

Registered letters, he found, sometimes were not delivered for six or eight weeks after their receipt. Collections from the city mail boxes were irregular. Sometimes only 19 of the city's 50 mail boxes were cleared during the day.

The sorting of the letters in the post office was extremely slow. None of the post office officials seemed to know the correct rate for mail or parcel post.

Indian Mounds Opened on Shiloh Battlefield

Washington.—On the Civil war battlefield of Shiloh, an expedition of CWA workers, directed by Dr. Frank H. Roberts, Jr., of the Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonian institution, has unearthed a group of Indian mounds of marked historic interest.

Located on a high bluff above the Tennessee river, the group is believed to have constituted an ancient refuge and ceremonial center. Within a radius of two miles, it was pointed out, are sites of six once-populous aboriginal villages.

Well protected on three sides by high bluffs and on the fourth by a palisade fence, the group is believed to have been a center for worship, refuge from floods, and civic government. Remains of what probably was an ancient temple were uncovered on one building site.

Larger mounds, Doctor Roberts said, disclosed no artifacts or skeletal material—a distinct peculiarity. However, under smaller mounds, traces were found of approximately 30 houses and, Roberts added, one small mound contained the flexed remains of 30 skeletons.

Date or identity of the tribal inhabitants has not been determined, although it is believed they were proto-Bnskhegans, from whom evolved the highly cultured Indians encountered by the first white explorers in the Gulf states.

Bridges' Part in Warfare

Structures Over Which Conquering Legions Marched, and Vanquished Fugitives Fled, Figure on Almost Every Page of History.

For a long time the River Danube, of waltz fame, had been flowing peacefully by the busy, industrial town of Linz, in upper Austria. Across the bridge there that spans its gray-green, not "blue," waters, orderly traffic daily shuffled.

Suddenly, as civil war flamed over the country, the Linz bridge changed from trade artery to battle ground. Machine-gun fire sputtered from its sides as Socialists desperately tried to hold their line against government troops. On shore howitzers were wheeled into position and the big guns spoke, while rifles and machine guns raked the water.

Farther downstream, at Vienna, there was more activity on the Danube, as soldiers poured across the river against rebel suburbs, taking cover behind pillars of the bridge to avoid snipers. On another bridge, Socialist leaders stood with ammunition and guns to distribute to all who would accept. And nearby, government engineers worked hurriedly on the emergency pontoon bridge that would facilitate army transport.

Such scenes from recent uprisings in Austria remind one that bridges and rivers have known many tragedies and always play an important part in war.

"If I had had ten pontoons," wrote Napoleon in 1814, "I should have captured 10,000 wagons, beaten Prince Schwarzenberg . . . and closed the war. . . ."

Hundreds of years before Christ, the Persian King Xerxes, enraged at the storm that destroyed his boat bridge over the Hellespont, ordered the waves lashed and pontoon builders executed. Then, across another stronger bridge, he marched his powerful army against Greece.

Many old bridges, still standing, were under foot when history was made, dripping with the blood of conqueror and vanquished. The bridge of St. Angelo at Rome is one such. Over it Goths and Vandals came—and went. In its time the Coliseum crumbled.

In the Middle ages, practically all important bridges were scenes of bitter conflict. Fortified construction was the order of the day. Bridges with thick stone gateways and towers were built to withstand siege. Many had openings for crossbow men to shoot through and ledges over which hot oil could be poured on the heads of enemies.

Old London bridge, started in the Twelfth century, had such heavy stone arches and huge piers that it was dangerous to sail between them. Men used to say "London bridge was made for wise men to go over and fools to go under." But not too safe at that for wise men, as numerous struggles and disastrous fires testified. Once several thousand people were trapped on this old causeway, to burn or drown, when houses at both ends caught fire.

An every-day reminder of the death meted out to bandits and traitors, human heads were sometimes prominently displayed on this old bridge, as at many such public thoroughfares. In the tower of the Karlsbrücke bridge, at Prague, Czechoslovakia, the heads of 27 Bohemian noblemen were hung in iron cages, after their defeat in the battle of White mountain in 1620.

Those days have gone forever. But people still shudder at some memories that cling to bridges. There was the Philippine insurrection that occurred on San Juan bridge, near Manila, and the fairly regular shooting by armed guards of Chinese boatmen who—inadvertently or otherwise—came too close to the Harbin bridge over the Sungari river in what was then Manchuria.

Closer home, the Indian massacre at the bridge of Deerfield, Mass., in 1703, and the encounter of Washington's Continental troops with the British at Jeffrey's ford on the Brandywine in 1777 are recalled.

Haunted bridges, like "haunted houses," are everywhere. They are part of the price man has paid for his progress from stepping stones to steel girders. And though such sinister names as "Butcher's Bridge," "The Priest's Widow," or the "Bridge of the Little Hell" remain, tradition also leaves pleasant and humorous memories, like the good friar in his old bridge chapel at Avignon, France, "healing the sick and maimed," or that frugal queen of the Middle ages who offered at the chapel of St. Mary only six and eightpence in honor of 11,000 virgins!

"Even in New England," says a writer in describing covered bridges there, "it was always considered proper to steal a kiss from a pretty girl while passing through the bridge."—Washington Post.

Year of Dryness
Perhaps 1934 will be known in history as the year of the drought. Abnormally dry weather prevailed over Central Europe and in early June it damaged German crops to a minimum of 25 per cent. In England more than 160 rural areas were short of water and the rainfall for the year ending May 31 was the lowest ever recorded. The level of the Thames fell so much that fish were landlocked in many backwaters.—Literary Digest.

Most Amazing Proof
OF EXTRA STRENGTH • SAFETY AND DEPENDABILITY Ever Known!
THE NEW FIRESTONE HIGH SPEED TIRE FOR 1934
Greatest Tire Firestone Has Ever Made WORLD RECORD BROKEN
It is almost inconceivable that human ingenuity could build tires that would withstand the terrific punishment of the 500-mile grind at Indianapolis, May 30.
Round and round the blistering track they streaked, hour after hour, under the blazing sun . . . the low moan of powerful motors rose to a terrific roar as they hit the straightaways at 150 miles or better—grinding, pulling, pounding around treacherous tire-destroying curves faster than they ever dared before. Sliding into the turns at these terrific speeds, there was nothing to hold the car to the track except the tire.
Mile after mile, lap after lap, greater and greater heat and increased centrifugal force developed to separate the tread from the body of the tire. Every conceivable force known was working to tear the tires to pieces—yet Firestone High Speed Tires, with Gum-Dipped High Stretch Cords, withstood this most grueling test.
Thirty-three demons of speed—thirty-three cars equipped with Firestone High Speed Tires—all protected by Gum-Dipped High Stretch Cords—entered the Annual Speed Classic. Every tire was bought by the driver or owner of the car.
In all the heat—in all the grinding—in all the straining and pulling—not one cotton strand loosened—not one life was endangered by tire failure—not one car was forced out of the race by tire trouble. Six of the winners finished without a tire change. What a tribute to the Extra Strength—Safety and Durability built into Firestone High Speed Tires.

WHAT THIS MEANS TO YOU
The amazing record of Firestone dependability at Indianapolis was made possible by the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping. Every fibre of every cord in every ply of the tire is saturated and coated with pure liquid rubber; there are eight extra pounds of rubber to every 100 pounds of cotton cords.
There is greater adhesion between the plies of the Gum-Dipped Cord body and between the body and the tread. As a result of this patented process of Gum-Dipping Firestone engineers have been able to build a wider tread of flatter contour, with more and tougher rubber and deeper non-skid, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.
Don't delay! Call on the Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store in your community today and equip your car with the new Firestone High Speed Tires for 1934. Drive with security and peace of mind. Choose the Tires that Champions Buy!

Coloradoan Painted Himself Out of Jail

Fort Collins, Colo.—Carl Duskey made his way out of the Larimer county jail with a weapon no more lethal than John Dillinger's now-famous wooden pistol.

Sentenced to serve fifteen days in jail for a traffic violation, Duskey got out in ten days by effective use of a paint brush. He painted landscapes and portraits for county officials and for the decoration of the jail.

His success in reducing his term inspired another prisoner, Don Chavez, to "do" a portrait of Sheriff George Saunders in the hope he would get clemency. When he started the portrait he had seven months to serve.

No. 2 Continued from the First Page years have now elapsed since the making of the agreement.

Specific provisions of the contract: "Article II, Sec. 1. The party of the first part covenants that he will, within three years from date hereof, pay the principal of the claims hereby secured but without interest except as provided in Section I, Article I."

"Article III, Sec. 1. This indenture contemplates that collection will be made by the trustee of all of the indebtedness owing to the partnerships of Ealy, McKay & Co., and that the trustee shall make sale and disposal of such of the property as may be necessary to provide sufficient funds to pay the expenses hereinafter enumerated and the claims of creditors as hereinbefore set forth."

"Article IV, Sec. 1. This agreement contemplates that all creditors of the three banks shall have been paid their lawful claims in full without interest from November 1, 1926, and within the period of three years from date hereof.

Sec. 2. In case all of the property hereinabove described shall have been disposed of in accordance with the terms of this instrument without providing payment in full of creditors' claims against the banks, the party of the first part agrees to pay said claims in full within two years thereafter.

Sec. 3. In case of the failure to pay all of the lawful claims against the partnership of Ealy, McKay & Co. within three years from date hereof the trustee is authorized at its option to sell and dispose of the remainder of the assets held under this instrument in parcel or as a whole either at public or private sale at the best price obtainable and to distribute the funds as herein provided."

"Article VIII, Sec. 1. Whenever the creditors of the partnerships of Ealy, McKay & Co. shall have been paid their lawful claims in full, after payment of all other lawful charges as contemplated by this instrument, the trustee shall return to the party of the first part all moneys and other property in its hands and shall execute and deliver to the party of the first part proper conveyance, releasing and discharging the lien of this indenture."

"Article X, Sec. 1. This instrument shall not affect or apply to the following assets, enterprises, and activities of Lloyd G. McKay: (a) Any interest that Lloyd G. McKay may have in the bank of McKay, McDonald & Co., located at Rose City, Mich. (b) Any interest that Lloyd G. McKay may have in the automobile sales and garage business conducted by him or under his name at East Tawas, Mich. (c) Any real or personal property independently acquired by Lloyd G. McKay after February 12, 1927."

It is Defendant's theory that because of this agreement Plaintiff was personally indebted to him in a sum greater than the unpaid balance on the car. He at first undertook to plead set-off, but was obliged to concede that under our practice such a defense is not available in replevit. His plea was then amended in conformity with the claim that a purchaser to whom the seller of an article is indebted may make payment of the purchase price by giving credit on the amount due the purchaser from the seller, and that the giving of such credit, or the tender thereof, is the equivalent of payment "in cash"; that he indicated to Plaintiff that he was paying the balance of the price of the automobile on that theory, and that Plaintiff wrongfully refused to recognize his right to do so.

Counsel for Plaintiff argue that under the terms of the agreement Plaintiff is not personally indebted or obligated to any of the depositors in the banks mentioned; that his obligation was satisfied when he turned over all the property mentioned in the trust agreement; that the depositors are not entitled to anything more than may be realized from the liquidation of those assets; that such liquidation is under the control of the Tuscola county circuit court, in chancery, and that consequently this court has no jurisdiction to entertain the claim.

I think the language of the paragraphs quoted from the contract, when construed together and in the light of the contract as a whole, definitely establish an obligation on the part of Plaintiff on his personal responsibility to pay any unpaid balance due creditors after three years from the date of the contract, enforceable in court at least at the expiration of two additional years hereafter. Plaintiff frankly admitted that the proposition must have been so understood. It is clear that the depositors were induced to forego their right to prompt liquidation of assets, to prosecution of the bankruptcy proceeding, and to interest on the assurance that if these were waived the assets would be liquidated over a three-year period and that if such liquidation failed of paying all claims Plaintiff and his non-exempt assets would be bound for the balance. By acquiescing in the agreement on this basis, the depositors lost the right to enforce their claims as such, and can now rest only on the agreement for adjudication of their rights and remedies. Having procured such acquiescence in the manner stated, Plaintiff is bound by the agreement and may not escape its burdens because results realized have fallen short of results anticipated. It is only fair to say that so far as Plaintiff personally is concerned, he seems disposed to recognize the obligation as legally and morally binding, but feels that he would be better satisfied to have available assets distributed proportionately among all creditors than to have some receive a greater percentage than others, which would be likely to result if each creditor were to undertake enforcement of his claim in a separate proceeding.

If I am correct in my conclusion, that the contract establishes a personal liability of Plaintiff to Defendant, it follows that it is presently enforceable in a proper form of action. With reference to the point raised that the exception to Plaintiff's interest in the automobile business bars this claim in any event, I conclude that the only effect of the provision mentioned was to free the particular properties mentioned from the lien of the trust indenture, and that any property of the defendant not exempt from execution would be subject to levy under judgments obtained on the basis of the agreement.

On the question of whether a purchaser may satisfy his obligation to pay "in cash" by giving the seller credit on a debt due from seller to purchaser, there is an irreconcilable conflict in the authorities. A simple illustration is that of a customer going into a store and ordering a quantity of groceries or other goods and, after having obtained delivery or possession, telling the merchant: "Now, I am paying you 'in cash' for these groceries by giving you credit for the amount on your debt to me," no previous arrangement to that effect having been had.

Some courts have held this to be entirely proper and legitimate, on the theory that in such case the seller, knowing he is indebted to the buyer, would expect that the buyer probably would choose to pay in that manner. Other courts have ruled to the contrary, and some have rather pointedly condemned the practice as a particularly ill-smelling species of fraud or imposition. Our Supreme Court has not had the question before it. It has held that a purchaser may not satisfy an obligation to pay "cash" by giving credit on the seller's note to a third person which has meanwhile been assigned to the buyer, but these cases may be distinguished on the reasoning that in such case there is no basis for saying that the seller must have expected the buyer might wish to pay in that form. It appears there are arguments pro and con as to both theories, and I refrain from indicating a preference, for the reason that I think the case must be disposed of in Plaintiff's favor on another angle.

Suppose we assume that the Defendant might legally have satisfied his obligation to pay the balance of the purchase price in cash by giving or tendering credit on Plaintiff's debt to him. The question of fact then arises: Did he so give or tender credit? The testimony shows that the Defendant was obliged to go to some pains to get the car into his garage without arousing the salesman's suspicions as to the method of payment he had in mind. When the car had been delivered, he handed the salesman, in a sealed envelope, not a receipt for the amount showing a credit on Plaintiff's debt to Defendant, nor a letter offering to make payment in that way, but an order on a re-worded blank check directing the trustee to pay the amount to Plaintiff. The trustee had no such amount of funds in his hands at the time belonging to Defendant. I am constrained to find that what Defendant did in this connection was not a giving or tendering of credit on Plaintiff's debt to Defendant, and he did not therefore make or tender payment in the equivalent of "cash" even if it be assumed that as a legal proposition the obligation to pay in "cash" might have been so satisfied, as to which there are grave doubts.

"Defendant not having made or tendered payment in accordance with the terms of the purchase contract, Plaintiff was undoubtedly entitled to re-possess himself of the automobile in accordance with the agreement. It follows that he is entitled to judgment in the usual form in replevit."

Herman Dehnke, Circuit Judge.
