TAWAS CITY LOSES FINAL LEAGUE GAME

Whittemore Chalks Up Its Second Victory Over Locals, 4-2

Whittemore defeated Tawas City in the final N.E.M. league game at the local athletic field last Sunday. The score was Tawas City 2, Whittemore 4.

Lixey for Tawas City and E. Franks for Whittemore engaged in a pitchers' duel. Both pitchers allowed only seven hits, but the visitors took advantage of the errors and by timely hitting outscored the local nine. Lixey fanned 15 men and E. Franks 17.

The visitors took a two-run lead in the opening inning and were never headed. Reid worked Lixey for a free ticket and moved to second on Newton's single. St. James fanned. McKenzie sacrificed and both runners scored on Monroe's single.

Another brace of runs was scored in the third frame aided by errors. Mallon threw wide on McKenzie's grounder to start the rally for the visitors. Monroe and Whitehouse singled to put the visitors four runs in the lead.

Tawas City scored a run in their half of the third on Becker's single. Kasischke forced him at second and later scored on Zollweg's single to right field. The locals wasted two hits in the fourth. Davis opened the inning with a double. Mallon singled to short left, Davis stopping at third. Ross fanned and Becker rolled to Newton to end a promising rally.

After two were out in the sixth the locals tallied their final run of the game. Lixey doubled and Mallon walked. Ross singled, scoring Lixey, but Mallon was out at the plate when Kelly threw perfectly to L. Franks.

Hemlock and Houghton Lake Play Tie Game

Hemlock and Houghton Lake played to a 10-10 tie last Sunday at the Houghton Lake diamond. When the game was called off during the first half of the tenth inning on account of rain. Hemlock had runners on second and third, with one out at the time play was discontinued.

The result of this contest leaves some question as to the winner in the National division of the N.E.M. League. AuGres, by downing East Tawas last Sunday, will still be in the race for top honors providing Houghton Lake defeats Hemlock in the play-off of the tie game, which will take place Sunday at the Tawas City diamond.

GRAVE RESULTS OF AMENDMENTS TOLD BY BERRIEN JUDGE

Judge Charles E. White, circuit court, Berrien county, recently stated in court, that if the constitutional amendments were likely to pass of which the object was "to limit the powers of the State to fix weight or gas taxes, it is a matter of great importance to the public."

It was further pointed out by Judge White that such action would "seriously interfere" with the function of county government and that organizations promoting such constitutional amendments were not "trying to protect taxpayers from a sense of public duty."

During the hearing Philip A. Hadsell, Niles, an attorney for county officials, pointed out the serious credit affects from decrease in revenue from constitutional amendments to fix gas or weight taxes. "The only course would be to default on bonds," Mr. Hadsell pointed out, "just as we are coming out of our difficulties."

"Real estate taxes would have to go up," Mr. Hadsell said, "if the proposed constitutional amendments to fix weight and gas taxes are successful. The subject has no business in the constitution and I am not interested in making jobs for Automobile Club officials," the speaker concluded.

Miss Katherine Loker returned Sunday to her home in Lansing after a three weeks visit at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. L. B. Smith.

Masters Gilbert and James Abbey returned to Flint Thursday after an extended visit at the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Braddock.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Syze of Flint visited friends in Iosco county over the week end.

EAST TAWAS POST OFFICE IS ROBBED

Thieves Take About $40.00 In Early Monday Burglary

Early Monday morning the East Tawas post office was entered and about $40.00 taken. The barber shop next door to the post office owned by Charles Wesendorf was also broken into, and about a dollar in change removed.

The thief, or thieves, gained entrance to the post office through an upper window, which they reached from the roof of the barber shop. The theft was discovered Monday morning when Postmaster Arthur Dillon discovered burned matches lying on the floor. The fact that the mail is made up Sunday evening in order for it to be put on Monday morning's train indicated that the theft had been committed sometime during the night.

The robbery is being investigated by the Iosco county sheriff's department. State troopers from the Bay City barracks were on hand Monday to aid in the investigation. Finger prints were obtained and sent to Lansing for identification. Several suspects have been questioned, but as yet no definite evidence as to the identity of the robbers has been obtained.

NEW SAILING SERIES STARTED SATURDAY

Event Is Added To Regular Summer Program

A new series of sailing races has been started, to be known as the Commodore's race. The race will be run at three o'clock each Saturday afternoon for the duration of the season, the first having been run last Saturday. Four entries were out, the Sero, Gamble, the Duster and the Dale, with Commodore James Nisbet as skipper of the Gamble and N. C. Hartingh skipper of the Dale. Mr. Hartingh upheld the good standing of the Dale and took first place in this race.

Last Sunday's race proved to be very interesting and a good crowd was out to see the start. The wind was northeast and blowing a small gale, at times recording as high as 32 miles per hour on the U. S. Coast Guard wind meter. The same four entries were out for the larger class with all under single headed main with the exception of the Gamble, which was out with full canvas, and while the Dale was over the starting line last she was able to round the beach marker first and thereafter established such a good lead that she was able to finish about eight minutes in front. The Tawas City marker had drifted some due to the high wind, and the Dale, Duster and the Sero did not try to pass it but cut, while the Gamble grounded while attempting to round.

CHICAGO BOYS EMULATE FEAT OF PIONEERS

Two Youthful Adventurers, Homeward Bound, Stop At Tawas City

When Gerald Mallon went to work last Monday morning, at the Tawas Bay Boat Works, he found two young men sleeping on the floor of his shop. They were none other than the two adventurers, Jack Broberg and Don Hughes, ages 22 and 24 respectively, of Chicago.

These boys, students of Chicago Art Institute, left Chicago January 26, and have traveled approximately 6400 miles since that time in a canvas-covered canoe 17 feet long and weighing 70 pounds. They paddled 600 miles through ice-floes and blinding snow storms, averaging six miles a day during the severe weather, but during the spring and summer the climate has been more lenient, and some days they averaged 110 miles per day.

Their trip was as follows: Down the Mississippi to New Orleans, then down the Gulf of Mexico to Florida, up the Atlantic coast and through the St. Lawrence River to Lakes Ontario, Erie and St. Clair, thence through the St. Clair River to Port Huron where they visited for a week. From Port Huron they came to (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

Mrs. John W. Applin

Mrs. John W. Applin passed away Monday morning, July 30, at 11:28 o'clock. She had been in fair health for the past five years. On Friday, July 13, however, she suffered a paralytic stroke, and was confined to her bed for more than two weeks. Her health was improving until a few days ago, when gangrene set in and finally caused her death.

Edna Harald was born in Gamblakarby, Finland, of Swedish parentage. She came to East Tawas at the age of 18. On November 22, 1884, she was united in marriage to John W. Applin at Oscoda. To this union were born 11 children, six boys and five girls. Two of the girls, Julia and Lillian, passed away in 1901, and the eldest son, Wenner, died in 1929. Those left to mourn her loss are the husband, John W. Applin of East Tawas; three daughters, Helen of East Tawas, Emmelle (Mrs. J. F. Mark) of Tawas City, and Irene (Mrs. Harmon Boice) of Farmington, Michigan; five sons, Fred, Arthur, Ernest R. and Roy Applin, all of Detroit, and Phil Applin of Shanghai, China; 14 grandchildren, and two brothers, Victor in Oregon, and John in Finland.

Mrs. Applin was a member of the Irene Rebekah Lodge, the Maccabees, the American Legion Women's Auxiliary, the Abigail Lutheran church, and the Ladies' Aid.

Russia Erects Port on Bleak Coast of Siberia

Hopes to Open Ship Routes Through Arctic Sea.

Washington, D. C.—Along the bleak Arctic coast of Siberia, at the mouth of the River Lena, the Soviet government is constructing the most northerly port in the world.

"Through one of the six longest rivers in Asia, being almost 3,000 miles in length, the River Lena plays a minor role in the life of the continent. The sparse population of its basin, and its ice-jammed mouth on the dangerous, little-known Arctic ocean has prevented the Lena from taking part in world trade and limited it to internal commerce," says the National Geographic society.

"As Russian population spreads toward the Orient, however, this new port and the opening of navigation routes through the Arctic sea, may mean that the Lena will become a busy trade artery, through which will pulse the wealth of minerals, timber, and valuable furs of Central Siberia.

"Rising as a clear mountain torrent in the Baikal mountains, the Lena rushes northward between steep, forest-clad cliffs of red sandstone from 200 to 300 feet high and then between lower chalk cliffs, gutted with innumerable grottoes. At the town of Vitim, 876 miles from its source, it is joined by the Vitim river, noted for its gold mines.

Cliffs Resemble Castle.

"Its volume doubled, the Lena flows for miles through the dense taiga, a primeval coniferous forest stretching from the Arctic circle to Turkestan. Through the dark wild shrubbery run packs of howling wolves. Flying squirrels leap from pine to pine above prowling brown bears, sables and ermines.

"The monotony of the forested slopes is broken occasionally by the flickering red camp fires of hunters, tent settlements surrounding post-houses, and limestone or sandstone cliffs. One series of cliffs, the famous 'Colonnades of Lena,' resembles a castle, whose battlements of red and green limestone strata stretch for miles along the river. Shortly beyond the junction with the rapid Olekma smoke from burning coal fields is seen rising from the banks of the Lena. These banks were long ago ignited by forest fires, giving rise to legends of volcanoes in central Siberia.

"The Lena valley has a wealth of minerals. Because its tributaries, the Vitim, Olekma, and Vilyui, flow through a region rich in gold, the Lena carries more of the precious yellow metal in its sands than perhaps any other river. Coal is found in several places along the Lena valley. In the region of the upper Lena are petroleum fields and whole mountains of salt. Near Yakutsk are silver mines, iron and zinc. Sulphur springs bubble on the banks of the middle Lena. Jasper is found at Zhigansk. Platinum is so abundant in the Aldan valley that natives are reputed to make bullets out of it.

Yakutsk Is Chief City.

"Yakutsk, the chief trading post of eastern Siberia, and an important fur market, is built on alluvial soil about two miles back from the Lena and about halfway between its source and mouth. When the ice breaks in June, floods sweep the town. For this season, many houses are built on high platforms. Yakutsk boasts a wooden blockhouse fort built in 1632 by Yermak, the Volga boatman who turned pirate.

"Yakutsk has a few brick office buildings, schools and churches, but most of the city is an unprepossessing collection of skin yurts (tents) pitched in spaces between snow-swept log houses. The few muddy streets become quagmires when the ground thaws. Many of the inhabitants are exiles, reindeer-riding Tungus, who breed cattle, and the more advanced Yakuts, who occupy the entire length of the Lena valley, farming on the fertile elevated banks almost to the Arctic circle.

Clock in Deserted Cabin Runs 8 Years

Placerville, Calif.—An eight-day clock in a vacant mining cabin has been kept running for eight years. When the mining company abandoned work in 1927, some one tacked a sign, "Please wind the clock," beneath the timepiece.

Fishermen and hunters using the cabin for overnight headquarters have been faithful in following instructions. Enough of them visit the cabin during the spring, summer and fall to keep the clock running.

During the winter, Ed Ramsey, who lives three and one-half miles away, makes a weekly hike to the cabin.

Winding the clock has become a sort of tradition.

Beyond are only insignificant tributaries and the Lena flows northward for 1,200 miles, a majestic stream, four to twenty miles wide.

"Steamers carry about 15,000 tons of freight a year on the Lena. To Yakutsk come barges bringing trade from the Sea of Okhotsk via the Aldan, and smaller craft with fox-skins from Bulun, with sables, ermine, and fossil ivory from the tundra of the Arctic. Skin-boats full of fish pass great rafts of timber, white steamers and leisurely ferries.

"The vast delta of the Lena covers an area of 8,800 square miles. It is formed partly by alluvial deposit, and partly by a group of ancient marine islands connected by silting or upheaval."

Ancient Civilization Uncovered in Tennessee

IN TENNESSEE near the Clinch river, where the Norris dam is being built, archeologists have uncovered a prehistoric civilization. First an Indian burial mound dating from long before the arrival of Columbus was excavated. Below this was found a much earlier building containing 17 well preserved skeletons, and still further down were discovered remains of an ancient temple, shown in the photograph.

IN MEMORY OF A BABY

By ANNE CAMPBELL

I DO not know why angel wings Should flutter near me in the night; Then swinging, as a starling swings, Desert me for eternal flight.

I do not know why baby hands Should cling one moment to my own, Then reach for the celestial lands, And leave me weeping all alone.

Perhaps by heaven's outer gate There is a tiny sentinel, Who waits, as I have learned to wait, To hear the tolling of a bell.

I longed to keep a little soul From this world's sadness undefiled, And weep that by the starry goal, Stainless, there waits a little child.

PETER SAVES A FRIEND

PETER RABBIT sat in a thicket of young trees on the edge of the Green Forest. So far as he knew he was all alone. It was very quiet there and it wasn't long before he was dozing. Now, Peter is a light sleeper, as all little people who never know when they may have to run for their lives must be. By and by he awoke with a start, and he was very wide awake, indeed. Something had wakened him, but just what it was he couldn't say. For a few minutes he heard nothing and saw nothing. Then, near the other edge of the thicket, he heard a great rustling of dry leaves. For just an instant Peter was startled, but only for an instant. His long ears told him at once that that noise was made by some one scratching among the leaves, and he knew that no one who did not wear feathers could scratch like that. "Now, who can that be?" thought Peter, and stole forward very softly. Presently he saw the brown leaves which carpeted the ground fly this way and that, and in the midst of them was an exceedingly busy person, just a little smaller than Welcome Robin, scratching away for dear life. Every now and then he picked up something. His head, throat, back, and breast were black. Beneath he was white. His sides were reddish brown. His tail was black and white and the longer feathers of his wings were edged with white. It was Chewink, the Towhee, sometimes called the Ground Robin.

Peter kept perfectly still, for it was fun to watch some one who hadn't the least idea he was being watched. Chewink's feet were made for scratching and he certainly knew how to use them. For some time Peter sat there watching. Just as he had about made up his mind to make his presence known and have a bit of morning gossip, he happened to look out beyond the edge of the little thicket. There he saw something red. It was something alive, for it was moving very slowly and cautiously toward the place where Chewink was scratching, forgetful of everything but his breakfast. It was Reddy Fox, and quite plainly Red-

Ohio Man Given Permit to Kill Robin Raiders

Dumosterville, Ohio.—Cheery robins, believed by most ornithologists to be man's friends, are the bitter enemies of D. L. Swarts, who believes he has the only federal permit to kill them. Swart's home is a bird haven. Doves, starlings, wrens and cardinals flock there. But robins—that's different.

"The robin is one of the fruit growers' most destructive pests. One day I counted fifty robins at my place, and every one was averaging a berry every five seconds," Swarts said.

"I get mad at them, but I can't shoot them until the fruit begins to ripen. Then I'm going to protect my property."

Swarts, who said robins cost him several hundred dollars' loss every year, applied last spring for a permit to kill the birds. The government granted it and the state conservation department approved.

Expert Finds Flowers Keep Better in Copper

New York.—If you want to keep cut flowers for a long time, try keeping them in copper containers. John Ratsek, floriculturist on the staff of the New York State College of Agriculture, placed snapdragons, stocks, roses, primroses and other flowers in such containers and by so doing he found that their life span was increased by one to three days. He explained that the copper kills bacteria which would decay the flowers.

Plan Steel Building With Roof Airport

French Show "Last Word" in Metal Construction.

Paris.—In times of peace prepare for war is obviously the motto that inspired the architect of the new exposition building to be erected at Issy-les-Moulineux on the outskirts of Paris along the Seine river.

Commissioned to erect a building that would be at once the last word in steel construction and at the same time suitable for showing all the different uses to which steel can be put, M. Leon-Joseph Madeline, the architect, has gone even further.

He designed a building with an airplane landing field on top and surrounded with lagoons, where hydro-airplanes may land.

His design has been approved by the committee of distinguished architects.

11-Year-Old Bridegroom Has to Attend School

Belgrade.—Europe's youngest married couple are Mustafa Bashitch, eleven, and Brisha Kasapovich, seventeen, of Bosnia.

Although a full-fledged husband, the young bridegroom has to go to school every day and his bride helps him with his lessons. He is in the third grade. Early engagements are no rarity in Banovitch, which is a Moslem community. The above couple, however, break all records. In the village of Rasnu recently a young couple thirteen and twelve, respectively, became engaged. Both were in the same class at school. The bride-to-be's father, however, decided that the marriage should be postponed until they finished their schooling and the groom-to-be had become apprenticed to a carpet-weaver.

SUCH IS LIFE

Charles Isle Home of Strange Exiles

Story of Their Lives Is Almost Unbelievable.

Kansas City.—On a burned and blackened volcanic island that rises precipitously from the sea nearly 600 miles west of the South American republic of Ecuador is gathered an astonishing assortment of queer human beings, says the Kansas City Times. An account of the lives of these persons on lonely Charles island furnishes an incredible, almost unbelievable story.

Weird stories of strange happenings on the bleak, lava-strewn bit of land that once was a convict settlement have been filtering into civilized haunts of man. Captains and crews of small trading vessels which put in at the island have told outlandish yarns of the inhabitants and their modes of living. So disturbing were the accounts that the government of Ecuador sent officials to the isolated point of land to investigate. The inhabitants of the island were questioned and their methods of living were inquired into. Then an official report of the investigation was filed with the Ecuadorian government and authentic information about the island was made available. And, surprising thing, the report substantiates the fantastic accounts that have been coming from the island!

Cast of Characters.
This barren, jagged, rocky island whose shores are washed by the equatorial waters of the Pacific has nine inhabitants. The cast of characters: Frederick Ritter, of Berlin, eminent German physician, dentist and philosopher, who left a brilliant career in Germany to seek a modern Eden on the Pacific island.

His mate, Frau Dore Strauch Koerwein, who went to the island with him from her German home. She and Ritter forsook civilization to live a life of peace, which, they charged, modern civilization denied them.

Baroness Bousquet de Wagner, of Vienna, who went to the island after Ritter and his helpmate. Soon after her arrival she set herself up as "empress" of the isle and governs her "kingdom" clad usually only in abbreviated pink silk panties and armed with a .22-caliber pistol.

Phillipson, Alonzo and Arends, men companions of the "empress" who came to the island with her.

A German couple, names unknown, and their infant child, born soon after their arrival on the desert island.

Ritter and Frau Koerwein were the first inhabitants of the isle. They landed there with a pick and shovel and a bag of seeds and perhaps a score of books, among them a volume of Lao-tse, the ancient Chinese mystic. Ritter refused an offer of a professorship at Freiburg, and left behind a brilliant career as an experimenter in nutrition when he left Germany seeking a lonely spot to "live his own life." He and his woman companion landed on the island in 1929 and have lived there since.

Will Not Touch Meat.
They are vegetarians and will not touch the fish, turtle eggs, wild pig, birds, wild goats, or other meat which is abundant on the island.

Fruits, vegetables, nuts and occasionally a little chicken forms their only food. Everything they partake is mashed into a pulp before it enters their mouths. A dentist, Ritter, has extracted all his teeth and those of Frau Koerwein. It is one of the theories that teeth are a cause of shortened lives. With their teeth out, he believes he and his companion may attain ages of at least one hundred and eight years. However, to assist them in their mastication, he has made sets of rubber teeth which they slip into their mouths at meal times.

The two food enthusiasts live either in a one-room shack built of rough timber or in a faded tent near a spring. Their homes are remote and accessible only by climbing a stony path which winds up a steep, mountainous way. At the foot of the path is a bell with a sign instructing chance visitors to ring it before they approach "The Hermitage," which is the title they have given their home. The signal is to warn the two exiles, as, when they are alone they wear no clothing. It is only when visitors appear—which happens on the average of from six to eighteen months—that they don a bit of covering.

Strips of matting bound with color make inexpensive rugs for summer use to replace orientals and room-size carpets. They're especially effective in bedrooms.

"Taking the Profits Out of War"

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Numerous suggestions have been made for the abolition of war. Some of these have been tried but not with success. Public opinion is at present aroused with an enthusiasm which argues that if we would end all war, we must strike at the direct benefits which result from it. One of these is profits. "Take profits out of all war," seems to be the slogan. With this sentiment dominating the public mind we are not surprised to read press dispatches as follows: "One of the surest ways of preventing war would be to give the government the power to draft, not only men but wealth, industry, agriculture, and make them work without profit." The American Legion is quoted as having declared that when men are drafted, all machinery, even to the plow and tractor, and all farm implements everywhere in the country should be drafted also.

der will be fostered. There is always a margin permissible for accidents which are not due to deliberate carelessness and foolhardiness. Recklessness is a form of irresponsibility either towards one's self or towards others, or both.

Courage is a totally different thing, for it is always used to avert calamity, while recklessness is taking a chance with the balance favorable to disaster. Courage is one of the traits of greatness, recklessness of little natures, chiefly, although it may permeate fine ones. It is sometimes the outstanding fault in what would be greatness without it.

Lack of responsibility is found in children who take no precautions to prevent a ball from smashing a window. Parents can stimulate responsibility by making the child earn the money to pay for the replacement of the glass. A first offense can be made easy to settle through letting the child be paid for running errands, etc., whereby he can earn the small sum needed. But repeated carelessness should not be allowed to pass so lightly.

Inculcating Responsibility.
Crime in children would be distinctly lessened if parents would help their children from a very early age to feel responsibility, not by thrusting responsibility on them, but by seeing that they take what falls naturally to little ones. Caring for pets stimulates responsibility. The knowledge that their cats or dogs, birds or rabbits, are dependent upon them for food and water and shelter, that without such care the pets would suffer, serves the double purpose of inculcating responsibility and helping the children to love dumb animals.

A large number of auto accidents are the direct results of lack of responsibility. Take a chance and it may come out all right, and when it doesn't and terrible suffering and death result, penalties must be paid, but life cannot be restored.

Anticipate Pleasures.
There are few people who do not

Mr. Bernard M. Baruch, whose judgment is respected by many persons, in a recent address, remarked: "Recapture all profits made by all industries engaged in war supplies above a small and reasonable return on the monies invested, and that all profits which are an incentive to war must be absolutely destroyed."

When we remember the fabulous fortunes which have been made out of the manufacture of war materials as well as the profits created by the sale of food stuffs and other necessities incident to war, we are inclined to believe that "taking the profits out of war" would help to remove one of the incentives to warfare. We have tried other schemes, why not try this one?
It should be remembered, however, that a disease is not cured permanently until the cause has been removed. The cause for war lies much deeper than just money profits. That profit is a large factor goes without question, but nations do not go to war just for the purpose of increasing their national treasuries. It seems to be a serious question if war can ever be abolished through the application of a rule of practice which is wholly negative. Many suggestions have been of this character. Do not do this or that, remove this cause or that cause. Very good so far as they go, but negations never get beyond a certain point in the development of any great object. Some commanding suggestion of a positive character seems to be needed. If the cause of war is "Greed," why not advocate the infusion of Christianity which has never yet been honestly tried.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

ONE of the most difficult things to teach some children is responsibility while others have a natural sense of it. It is true that every normal person has to take to himself the responsibility for his or her actions in mature years, in fact, in all years except young childhood, when the responsibility for actions reverts to parents who are held accountable. When a person is irresponsible, he is not normal and must be treated as such. Parents who will pardon their children on flimsy excuses would resent being told their offspring was irresponsible. It is for them to help their youngsters to realize their responsibilities, and thus strengthen their characters.

This is no plea for severe punishment of children. This does not always, by any means, help them to feel responsibility. But it is written with the hope that there may be an awakening of this sense, for thereby law and order will be fostered. There is always a margin permissible for accidents which are not due to deliberate carelessness and foolhardiness. Recklessness is a form of irresponsibility either towards one's self or towards others, or both.

Courage is a totally different thing, for it is always used to avert calamity, while recklessness is taking a chance with the balance favorable to disaster. Courage is one of the traits of greatness, recklessness of little natures, chiefly, although it may permeate fine ones. It is sometimes the outstanding fault in what would be greatness without it.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

The Diet So Helpful in Epilepsy

ALTHOUGH the cause of cancer has not been discovered lives are being saved daily by the use of the knife, the X-ray, and radium.

Similarly with epilepsy; although the cause has not been found, treatment of epilepsy is so successful that thousands of epileptics are being kept entirely free from attacks, and others have attacks that are extremely light.

The convulsions are prevented or kept under fair control in the majority of cases by cutting down on starchy foods, salt, and water.

Dr. D. S. Pulford, Sacramento, Calif., reports that by these methods alone, without the use of drugs, one-third of the intelligent and willing patients can be kept free of attacks, another one-third are benefited to the extent that they are willing to continue the diet low in starches, but one-third are not helped.

Notwithstanding the fact that this method of treating epilepsy was discovered in 1921, a "cure" is no nearer now than when this diet treatment was discovered.

Any danger from this diet is overcome by the use of yeast, viosterol and lime.

Another interesting point is that just as insulin has been found to have a number of uses besides saving the lives of diabetics, so also has this diet in which starches are decreased and fats increased been found of help in other conditions.

Doctor Pulford states that it is of help in the treatment of one-sided headache, in asthma and in infections of the bladder and urinary passages. Persons taking this diet are found to be more free of the common infections of the nose, throat and chest such as colds and influenza.

Further, in the acute infectious ailments of childhood—measles, scarlet fever—the children appear to be better protected from the attacks or the effects of the attacks, when on this diet.

For the ordinary healthy individual the diet should be composed of one part meat and eggs to two parts fat—fat meat, butter, cream—to four parts starches—bread, potatoes, sugar, pastry.

In this special diet for epilepsy—the ketogenic diet—the meat and eggs are cut down slightly, the starches cut down to about one part (instead of four) and the fats are increased to make up for cutting down on the starches.

Children Below Normal Mentality

IT IS very gratifying to see the change in the treatment of what are called mental defectives, that is individuals whose mental ability is not up to normal or 100 per cent as it were.

Formerly they were simply thought of as "crazy," and the best treatment to separate them from their families and everybody else, as some of them had instincts that made them unsafe to those around them.

However, careful investigation shows that there are large numbers of feeble-minded persons whose behavior in the community is not any worse than that of persons who are not classed as mental defectives.

Nowadays they rank these defectives from the idiot up past the imbecile and the moron to those of normal mental ability.

This means that while the idiot and the next above him, the imbecile, may need special care in an institution, the next higher mentally, the moron, may be so helped that he can return to his family, and to the community, where, under ordinary supervision, he may lead a happy and useful life.

The whole thought then is that instead of thinking of these defectives as diseased or dangerous individuals, that we think of them as having just a little less mental equipment than the rest of us, and by giving this amount of mental equipment an opportunity to do its best, progress may be made in their development.

Dr. W. C. Sandy says that as most defectives will continue to be problems to the community, perhaps a menace if not cared for, an actual asset if trained, it means that there is urgent need for early discovery of these cases, correcting any physical defects, special training for certain cases, and removal of unsuitable cases to institutions.

In many cities now there are classes for those who are not as bright as the normal child, and the teachers in charge of these classes are specially trained for this work.

The thought then is that when a youngster doesn't seem to be able to keep up with his class, when he seems unable to concentrate, or when there are definite signs that he is not as old in his mentality as in his body, the parents should not be ashamed to recognize this, and should give the youngster every possible chance to be his very best self, even if this best is not just up to normal.

SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife names Eden Valley. Joel Hensley settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. Babson orders Joe Brainerd, editor of the local paper, to attack Nate as an enemy of the people. This Brainerd refuses to do. Nate comes to Brainerd's rescue financially. The editor celebrates by punching Babson's head.

ding a linotype into a vacant store in the Babson block; above the door a new sign informed the world that presently the Forlorn Valley Citizen would here go to press.

Certainly Babson was losing no time moving into action. Nor was Joe Brainerd, as Nate discovered when he paused at the office of the Register, hoping to glean news of interest that might have occurred during his four days' absence. He found Brainerd writing an editorial cordially welcoming his competitor into the field.

"Going to press tomorrow with a two-page issue, Nate," he announced. "Practically all of my local advertising has been withdrawn."

"Why not run the canceled ads just the same, Joe? If I were you I would decline to let Babson see how badly he has hurt me. He may think his slaves have not obeyed orders and start a fight with them in consequence. If anybody cancels his subscription continue sending him the paper as usual. I'll take care of your deficit. When I'm fighting a bitter fight it's against my religion to cry out or admit I'm hurt."

Brainerd grinned, for this was the sort of fight he loved to wage, if he could afford it. "I'm running another front-page editorial on the water question, Nate. Forlorn Valley has to have the water and if it cannot get it from the Mountain Valley Power company it must tap the creek up in the Handle. I'm living up to our agreement, boy, and making the fight for my subscribers."

"You'd be a traitor not to."

"What did your lawyer say?"

Nate related in detail his conversation with Gagan. "Perhaps," Brainerd suggested, "I'd do well to write a new editorial pointing out to the people the possibility of failure of the plan upon which, led by Babson, they are about to embark. What do the poor devils know about it? Only what Babson tells them."

"That's a splendid idea, Joe. The people will then have an opportunity to read your editorial and digest it."

Rube Tenney Used the Ramrod.

before attending the mass meeting. Consequently they will be more favorably inclined toward the proposition I shall have to make them at that meeting. And when the editorial has been written and set up, pull a proof and send it over to Babson. It may give him food for reflection."

Within two hours Brainerd sent his devil over to the bank with the proof and a note from Brainerd to the effect that he was running the editorial in his next issue and inviting comment. After reading the editorial Babson passed it to Henry Rookby for the latter's reaction.

"He asks for my comment, Henry. Well, I'll oblige him." And Babson wrote in red crayon across the proof: "When Forlorn Valley has its own reservoir filled, you and Tichenor have my permission to jump into it and drown yourselves, and greatly oblige, yours, etc., S. Babson."

"Shoot 'em in the foot," Mr. Rookby urged wittily.

When the bank's messenger took the proof and Babson's message back to Joe Brainerd, that astute individual sighed and, after the fashion of newspaper men, who always save the written expressions of opinion of their enemies, locked it up in his safe!

CHAPTER X

Darby, Nate Tichenor's chauffeur, was enjoying to the fullest his master's visit to Eden Valley. Distinctly a New York product, Darby had heard there was considerable space west of the Hudson river, but he had not been prepared to admit that the country was as wide-open as he had found it.

Darby had enjoyed the branding, but most of all he had enjoyed the idleness of his job.

Miss Kershaw had been very kind to Darby, too, in that she had sent him down an old, safe saddle horse to ride. Also, she had sent a horse down for the gloomy but efficient Joseph, but unfortunately she sent a stock-saddle with him, and as Joseph had never ridden anything but an English saddle, his conservatism forbade that he should try anything new. He compromised, therefore, by taking long walks, after the fashion of his kind, shooting blue-jays and hawks, and fishing. Like Darby, he rejoiced because his master required but little service from him.

Before leaving for San Francisco, however, the master had given the task of posting "No Shooting, Fishing or Trespassing" notices from the gate at the entrance to Eden Valley to the farthest limit of the Kershaw ranch. This task pleased both servants, particularly Joseph, who possessed a truly Britanic passion for privacy and the protection of private shooting and fishing preserves from alien invasion. The notices once up, therefore, Joseph saw his duty plainly before him. With much misgiving, therefore, he climbed into the stock-saddle on the horse Lorry Kershaw had sent him, slung a .22 calibre rifle in a scabbard and set forth to apprehend poachers, a poacher being considered by Joseph as absolutely the lowest form of human life.

For two days he ambled through the pleasant valley, enjoying the solitude.

The day Tichenor came home from San Francisco Darby seized upon his absence to go fishing, while Joseph saddled his horse and set forth again on his delightful journeying, his heart still beating high with the hope of finding a poacher. And late in the afternoon, as the shadows were growing long in Eden Valley and Joseph was reminded that he must return home soon and prepare dinner for his master, who had informed him he would dine at home that night, he discovered a poacher.

He had ridden into a thick grove of yellow pines when, happening to glance up the side of the ridge that separated Eden Valley from Forlorn Valley, he saw a man descending through the buckbrush and laurel. Through his master's binoculars the excellent Joseph made appraisal and discovered the man carried a rifle.

The man could really have found more open going, yet he preferred to stick to the tall brush, nor did he advance confidently as an honest man should. Arriving at last at the foot of the ridge, the fellow found himself a hiding place in a clump of laurel about 30 feet above the road, and Joseph both saw and heard him break off some branches as if to clear his view of the road. Then he sat down.

"Something devilish queer about this fellow, what?" Joseph decided. He got off his horse cautiously and slipped from tree to tree until he was within 40 yards of the man, when he sat down behind a clump of manzanita to await developments. Through his binoculars he could now make out the man's form; he saw that the fellow's rifle rested in a crotch in a laurel bush.

"He's waiting for somebody," Joseph concluded. "By Jove, a bally assassin, what? The blighter will bear close watching for a bit, I fancy."

Suddenly, up the valley, Joseph caught a faint rumbling. He knew that would be his master's automobile crossing a loosely planked little bridge across one of the small lateral streams that flowed down the hillside to Eden Valley creek. Instantly there was a slight movement in the laurel bush; a little later Nate Tichenor's car hove into view. Joseph saw the hiding man's hand come up and grasp the rifle, saw his head come down to cuddle the stock—so Joseph, horribly excited but with his duty clear before him, sighted on the man's head and pulled away. He was rewarded by hearing a grunt; then the bushes parted, the man leaped down into the road and scuttled across it for the haven of the clump of sugar pines in which Joseph was hidden. As he passed the bush behind which Joseph knelt concealed, the valet leaped up, followed and banged the fellow heartily over the head with his rifle barrel. Then he helped himself to the stranger's rifle and stepped out into the road.

"It's quite all right, Mr. Tichenor," he shouted. "Joseph speaking, sir. The blighter was out to scupper you, I fancy, but I've scuppered him. Do come and have a look at the rascal, sir."

Nate drove up, alighted and followed Joseph into the pine grove, where he rolled the unconscious man over and looked at him. "That's Pitt River Charley," he announced. "He's a half-breed Indian and years ago he used to be a professional killer. I thought the fool had retired, but somebody must have made it worth his while to get back into harness. Are you quite certain he was gunning for me, Joseph?"

"Absolutely, sir. I've been watching him for an hour, sir. His gun was at his shoulder and he was sighting on you, sir, when I fired at his head, sir."

"You're a rotten shot, at that range, Joseph. You've put a .22 calibre bullet through his biceps. However, it sufficed to spoil his plan and stampered him, so he ran for these trees."

He helped himself to the canteen on Joseph's saddle and dashed some water over Pitt River Charley's dusky face. Then he emptied the fellow's pockets and found two hundred and fifty dollars in crisp new bills. Tichenor grinned at his servant. "It seems I'm worth five hundred dollars dead to somebody, Joseph. It's the custom to pay half down and the remainder upon completion of the job, and who ever hired this fellow is a fool, because Pitt River Charley would have worked for a lot less money."

"Good G—d, sir," cried the horrified Joseph.

"Well, you haven't got a killing on your honest British soul, Joseph, and I'm obliged to you for saving my life," Joseph was horribly embarrassed when Tichenor slapped his back several times and assured him he was a brick and a stout fellow and that he, Tichenor, craved a glimpse of the man who could thereafter pry Joseph loose from his service. "I'll guard this fellow," he continued, "while you take the car, drive up to the Kershaw ranch and, without letting Miss Kershaw know anything about this affair, find Rube Tenney, her superintendent, and tell him I want to see him immediately. He'll come back in the car with you and bring his riata."

"Sorter like the old days ag'in, ain't it, son?" Mr. Tenney declared, as he gazed upon Pitt River Charley, now recovered consciousness and sitting with his back against the bole of a tree, his dark, evil face absolutely expressionless. He turned to the valet. "You drive down the road a bit, hombre, and wait there fifteen minutes. Then come back with the car. Me an' Mr. Tichenor's goin' to hold court here an' it's to be a private session."

He removed the steel ramrod from the butt of Joseph's little rifle, screwed it together and wrapped his bandana handkerchief around one end, in order to get a good grip on it.

He grasped a handful of shirt in the middle of Pitt River Charley's back and with one savage jerk the man's torso was naked.

"Run along, Joseph," Tichenor ordered gently, "or you'll be sick to your stomach." He was already binding Pitt River Charley's hands in the loop of Rube Tenney's riata, and Mr. Tenney was gazing earnestly upward for a limb to pass the rope over.

So Joseph, sickened, departed in the car and before he had gone two hundred yards he heard a succession of screams echoing through the valley. "They're cutting 'is bally back to ribbons with that steel ramrod," the valet decided.

Nate Tichenor questioned Pitt River Charley and when the halfbreed refused to talk and took refuge in aboriginal sullenness, Rube Tenney used the ramrod, while his victim hung helplessly from a limb, his toes just touching the earth. His judges know his kind—knew that only quick work and dirty work would bring the information so vitally needed.

Science Hopes to Determine Freshness of Meat by the Use of Electric Current

At Gloucester, Mass., where the artists go every summer, the United States bureau of fisheries maintains a station where Drs. Maurice E. Stansby and James M. Lemon are substituting science for the hand, the eye and the nose in judging the freshness of fish. You see them grinding up a had-dock, shaking it up with some water, then adding a little quinhydrone and finally passing a feeble electric current through the mass. A voltmeter, familiar to radio enthusiasts as a potentiometer, tells how many volts are passing through and hence indicates how fresh the fish is, says Waldemar Kaempfert in the New York Times. The test means simply that more electricity can be passed through a fresh than through a stale fish.

Clearly this is no test to housewives. But dealers who buy and sell fish by the carload and shipload can make money by use of it. "It is not necessary to tell how long it has been since a fish was caught," say Stansby and Lemon, "but it is important to know how much longer a fish may be expected to keep in an edible condition if handled properly."

After a fish is landed it stiffens, which explains why firm flesh has always been the housewife's tried and true test of freshness. Soon a softening process sets in. First the complex proteins break down. Later the bacteria set to work and bring about further decomposition. Mere softening detracts from the value of a fish but not from its edibility. Bacteria spoil the fish.

Since fish is packed in ice for as long as two weeks, during which softening may occur, the test is of commercial importance. The scientists believe that their method may be equally applicable to meat and other packing house products.

Guadalajara

Public Letter Writers in Guadalajara.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

AT DAWN comes the clang and peal of countless bells. The din is startling in its unexpectedness. It sounds like a battle call—or an alarm that Guadalajara is burning.

Hurriedly you get up and go out on the hotel balcony.

"All these churches," says a voice at your elbow, "and every bell with a different tone." It is the man from the room next to yours, a Spanish friend from the sugar plantations, in pajamas and straw sandals.

"I first came here more than 40 years ago, from Spain," he adds. "We made the last stretch in a four-mile stagecoach on leather springs, after a night battle with bandits. We got in just at dawn, with these same bells ringing. Nothing here has changed much—the same people habits, churches, and bells. Even the bats are still here. Read at night, and your light draws the moths; turn out the light, and the bats fly in to eat the moths. But they don't eat their wings—next morning moth wings are all over your floor!"

In the street below now black-garbed women, their heads covered, are walking quietly to mass—women of all classes, peon and aristocrat, but hardly any men. Rattling heavily, a water cart turns the corner, sprinkling the streets and raising that ammonia smell of old adobe towns where the absorbent soil too closely. You meet that same smell, mixed with the scent of roasting coffee, when at early morning men wet the dusty streets of Aden or Baghdad.

"Ice!" "Bread!" "Morning paper!" All voices of the awakening city as truly as cackles, crows, grunts, and squeals are the alarm clocks of the farmer. Before the doorway halts an old man on a mule, carrying two big cans. A sleepy girl, with a clay jar, comes out and buys some milk. And the man rides on, calling his singsong "Leche, leche," milk, milk, in a despairing wail, more like a cry of pain than an invitation to buy.

asleep beside him, an old Indian artist plucks a few hairs, twists them deftly into his tiny, frayed brush, and resumes painting eyebrows on a clay head of Pancho Villa, master outlaw.

Other heads, new and shiny, stand on a board: Obregon, Carranza, George Washington, Henry Ford—and an American Shriner in a red fez.

Pose for your own bust, if you like, and watch your nose and ears form swiftly from the mud. In half an hour old Pandura (Hard Bread), famed Indian sculptor, makes a fair likeness.

"This Guadalajara clay art is fragile and hard to ship," says a buyer from the States. "But it sells well. Not the busts so much, but these urns, vases, and water bottles, in old Aztec patterns. These dancing girls are good, too, in their wide skirts and big sombreros."

Around Tonalá village and the suburb of San Pedro Tlaquepaque, Indians have worked in clay from time immemorial. The Spaniards found them at it, making idols for domestic uses, making dishes, images, and figurines of men and beasts.

Untaught, and working far from the patter of studios and talks on art, these Indians produce excellent sculpture. Tiny pack mules, street hawkers, market women with chickens and baskets of fruit, vaqueros on rearing horses—all are formed and painted with fidelity to life. Sophisticated and erotic pieces also appear, with miniatures, ornaments, and vessels carrying a raised fretwork of deer, rabbits, ferns or palms. A fat clay pig, hollow, with a slit in his back through which coins can pass, is much sold as a child's savings bank. Happily for the child, these figures break easily; all you have to do is drop them.

San Pedro Tlaquepaque, once the retreat of Spanish wealth and fashion, is linked with the city proper by tram, through an old customs gateway. Country people taking things into town to sell had to pay a tax in the old days to pass this gate.

A tiny, bright-eyed nurse girl, certainly not more than ten, comes by, carrying a big fat baby. You feel the baby should get down, for a change, and carry the tired little girl.

Turkeys for Sale.

Now a country boy in a ragged straw hat comes driving a flock of turkeys. He carries a long stick, with a whip-like piece of string on one end, for flicking any errant turkey on the neck. He urges them on by hissing sounds, his tongue against his upper teeth, in the familiar Indian warning. They market thousands of turkeys on foot here, as in parts of Texas, the inquisitive, shapely birds marching with quick, graceful strides, necks jerking sharply with each step. One strutting gobbler, with pendent red wattles long as a prophet's beard, ruffled his bronze plumage and dragged his wings.

By the time you dress, clap your hands for coffee, and read a Mexican paper still damp and smelling of fresh ink, all Guadalajara is swarming. Trams are crowded; so are busses. Bobbed-haired señoritas, in bright organdie, silk hose, and high heels, chatter and giggle their cheerful way to work in stores, beauty and curio shops, at switchboards or typewriters. Many are pure Andalusian types with blue eyes and blond hair, small, shapely hands and feet. The ease and joy with which many can look upon woman-kind in Guadalajara are proverbial. "In all Mexico, no others are so fair."

"Surely St. Peter must have opened the gates of heaven to let down such a beautiful damsel," Mexicans say when a maid of pulchritude is passing.

Along with the crowd, ogling the girls, come sleek young bank clerks, bookkeepers in the brewery, the factories, motorcar and other agencies, splck and span in flannels of Hollywood cut, carrying sticks, smoking pungent native cigarettes.

The sidewalks of Guadalajara! Walk them at this hour and you see the city eye-high and close up.

Workmen idly dig up the pavements, as always; traffic police in "white gloves blow whistles and wave cars to stop. And they do stop; for one disputer with an alert Guadalajara traffic cop and the big jail yawns for you. On an open space soldiers are drilling and women wait before the colossal prison to get in at visiting hours. "They built the jail big enough to hold everybody in town, as a warning," is a local saying.

Workers in Clay.

Through the suburbs you meet more groups coming to work. In a flower garden a sandal-footed man is setting out young plants to make a fancy pattern of birds and flags.

From the tall of his big black dog,

DISTINCT CHARM IN THIS DESIGN

PATTERN 9941

Yes—it really does unbutton at the neck so as to go on and off without a lot of trouble. It's a frock for anything feminine from size ten to size eighteen—and any age looks prettier when wearing it. For cottons it couldn't possibly be nicer, with its long front panel and neat little pleats which make it smart and give its wearer plenty of room to get about gracefully. The belt is separate—and if you like, it may be of a plain color to match the buttons—repeating a shade in the print, perhaps.

Pattern 9941 may be ordered only in sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size

BAD GUESS

He saw her sitting in the darkened room. Noiselessly he stole up behind her, and before she was aware of his presence he had kissed her.

"How dare you," she screamed.

"Pardon me," he bluffed readily. "But I thought you were my sister."

"Ass!" she exclaimed. "I am your sister."

Telling No Lie

Judge—You say you are a lock-smith. When the speakasy was raided were you pursuing your occupation there?

Prisoner—Well, yes, your honor, I may say I was. When the policeman nabbed me I was making a bolt for the door.—Boston Transcript.

Proper Deferences

"Do you enjoy horse racing?"

"Very much," said Miss Cayenne.

"But I never bet. I regard the horse as a highly intelligent creature. But it always thinks it is going to win whether it can or not. Why should I assume to know more about its business than the horse does?"

Events in the Lives of Little Men

Simple Christian Names for Children of Today

Curious changes in the fashions of bestowing Christian names are brought to light in a compilation made from the records of English public schools—schools, that is, corresponding to our Groton and St. Paul's and Exeter. There is apparently a going back to the old, simple names. There is a great predominance of the name John. Seventy years ago it occupied only fifth place in the lists; now it is almost double that of its nearest competitor, which is Peter. Peter, it seems, was not represented in any of the lists of 30 years ago. During that period Robert and Richard have more than doubled in popularity, and Michael and Anthony have risen from no place at all to the twentieth. One name that is steadily but not spectacularly popular is William, and we imagine that that might be found to be true in this country as well—at any rate among those who are British in their origin.

The English are not so inclined as Americans to name their children after heroes and heroines. We hear of no Horatio Nelson Smiths, no Arthur Wellesley Browns. The Williams are just plain Williams. William Ewart Gladstone Joneses are so scarce as to leave not a trace; so are the Benjamin Disraeli Thompsons. Among girls of the same classes there are few Victorias. There are, of course, thousands of Georges and Marys, but no George Windsor So-and-So, no Mary Windsor So-and-So. It seems to savor of presumption to name a young Britisher after one of the great or near great. It is only in those rare periods when the lion and the unicorn are fighting for the crown that Englishmen name their children to show their political partisanship. In the early days of the Georges, when the banished Stuarts had enough followers to make an effort twice, in 1715 and again in 1745, to wrest the crown away from the Hanoverians, any little James or Charles in the families of the nobility meant just as surely that his father was a Jacobin as every little George meant that his father was a Hanoverian whig.

It is perhaps as well that English children are not so generally named for heroes as ours are. One of these days Vice Admiral, the Hon. Reginald Aylmer Ranfurly Ernle-Erle-Drax-Plunkett, now chief in command of his majesty's fleet in North American and West Indian waters, may win a famous victory.—Boston Transcript.

Animal "Family Tree" Explains Many Facts

A gigantic "family tree," showing the interkinship of mammals from man down to the egg-laying duckbill platypus has been projected on the floor of the Harvard Museum of Comparative Zoology, says a Cambridge (Mass.) correspondent in the New York Times. The diagram is regarded as an educational innovation.

The larger branches demonstrate the zoological orders which may be divided into smaller branches or sub-orders, and these in turn into even smaller and more compact groups called families.

The colors on this chart, as well as the branching of the limb, help to explain group relationship. For example, the blue stem follows the branch culminating in the great apes and man, but before reaching these twigs at the top of the tree, it passes through the insectivora and the lower primates and finally the Old world monkeys.

Branching from the blue stem quite low down near the base of the tree there is a red limb out of the end of which spring many smaller branches representing the carnivores.

NEED OF CENSUS TO SHOW VITAL NATIONAL FACTS

A good deal of the governmental, business and social activities of our community depends upon accurate knowledge of the number of inhabitants which compose it.

Such vital information is seriously lacking these days. A leading life insurance company discusses the subject in a statistical bulletin under the heading, "How Many Are We?"

Apparently there is no reliable information regarding the population of the country as a whole or of any of the states or large cities. The depression is to blame. Formerly it was comparatively easy to make population estimates in the years between the decennial census, but today it is difficult to make even an approximate guess. The simple and usually reliable methods then employed no longer are suitable to the sudden and fundamental changes which have taken place in our population during the last few years.

Economic conditions have pushed down the birthrate, the tides of immigration have reversed, and millions of people are coming and going in search of work, never settling down in one place long enough to be counted. Washington has given up and is no longer preparing the annual estimates of population.

Meanwhile business men and governmental officials are clamoring to know the population facts about the various states and cities. It is information necessary for the apportionment of representatives, taxes, water supply, schools, roads, transportation, police services and for the conduct of industrial and commercial enterprise. Only another federal census can solve the problem, and the suggestion has arisen to take one in 1935, or five years early.—St. Paul Dispatch.

CAN DETERMINE SEX OF UNBORN

Sex determination, breeding male or female animals as desired, has been accomplished.

Baby rabbits, 180 out of 200 having the sex that was planned for them, so far constitute living proof of the success of the method. Several hundred births among Russian cattle and swine this summer will show whether the method has practical value for cattle breeding, as is expected by Prof. N. K. Koltzoff, the biologist who devised it.

The technique will be successful in bringing human children of the desired sex also, Professor Koltzoff claims. But the human application is minor and chiefly sentimental in his opinion. Parents should be happy whether their baby is a boy or a girl, says the professor, who himself is childless.

His chief interest is in its application to cattle breeding. In nature the sexes of animals are about equally divided. To eliminate almost half that are useless for increase—the males—and to supplant them with progeny-bearing stock spells an annual profit or growth dividend of 50 to 80 per cent.

Professor Koltzoff's method is based on the discovery of American investigators, Prof. E. B. Wilson of Columbia, Prof. E. C. McClung of the University of Pennsylvania, and the late Dr. N. M. Stevens. These investigators showed that sex in animals is determined by the fertilizing elements which are equally divided into those having male and those having female potentialities.

These elements are living cells, and Professor Koltzoff found that, like other cells, they carry an electrical charge. Accordingly he was able to separate them by passing an electric current through them, and to produce male or female rabbits, according to which electrically separated group of elements he used to impregnate the rabbit mothers.—Science Service, New York World-Telegram.

it. Although she was able to get off without assistance the Coast Guard cutter, the "Tawas," stood by and later took her under tow over to her mooring at the Beach. Some damage to the keel was reported, the extent of which is yet undetermined. She will be pulled out at the Tawas Beach shop to undergo repairs.

A new entry was listed in the small class this week, the "7," entered by Robert Allen of Indian Lake. She, skippered by John North, Sr., and the DoNo of East Tawas were the only entries out. These boats sailed the same course as the larger boats and both were under full sail. The skippers showed very much skill in taking them over such a stormy course. The waves out at the can were six to ten feet high and about 30 feet wide and at times the DoNo was reported to nearly go under them. The crews on both boats were busy bailing most of the time. After such an exhibition of seamanship as was shown by John North and Floyd Fernette in taking two such small boats over the course Sunday, we feel confident that we do not have to go to the East coast to find great sailors, either young or old. We have them on our own little bay, and we will match them against the best. (It might be of interest to know that the DoNo is just under 12 feet long and the "7" about 11.)
