PARENTS URGED TO ATTEND CHILD TRAINING MEETS

Specialist to Lead Discussion on Common Problems August 23-24

Michigan State College, through its extension department, is offering the fathers and mothers of Isosco county the opportunity of attending two discussion meetings on common everyday problems of child training. This is one of the regular home economics extension projects being offered this year to urban and rural people of the state.

The title of this project is "Meeting Your Child's Problems" and will be given by Mrs. Lydia Ann Lynde, specialist in child care and training, Michigan State College. Mrs. Lynde is especially fitted for this work through her training and experience. She is a graduate and has the Master of Science degree from Purdue University and has studied in the graduate schools of Indiana University and the Universities of Minnesota and California. In 1927-28 as National Fellow in Child Development under the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Memorial Fund she spent eleven months studying the problems of childhood. She has had many years as a home-maker and is the mother of two sons who are now twelve and fifteen years old. As a teacher of home economics she worked with under-nourished, under-privileged and problem children and helped many children and their parents happily work out their difficulties.

Meetings are to be held at Hale School House, Hale, Thursday, August 23, at 2 p. m.; Whittemore School, Whittemore, Thursday, August 23, at 7:45 p. m.; Court House, Tawas City, Friday, August 24, at 2 p. m.; School Building, East Tawas, Friday, August 24, at 7:45 p. m.

As you will note, two evening meetings are being held in the county so that fathers as well as mothers can attend and two for afternoon, when mothers can bring in their particular problems. This study is for all parents and others interested in children.

At this first meeting of the County Child Study Group, "Children's Behavior and Its Causes" will be discussed. Each group member attending will receive a problem analysis blank and will be shown how to study a problem in the home through the study of some common problems. Fathers and grandparents are particularly urged to attend, too.

Fredrick Caverly

Fredrick Hugh Caverly died at his home in Logan township, Ogemaw county, on Sunday, August 5, after a lingering illness of more than five years. Mr. Caverly was a veteran of the World War.

He was born in Uby, Michigan, on August 23, 1890, making his age at the time of his death nearly 44 years. At the age of three years he moved with his parents to Whittemore and in that locality he made his home for the remainder of his life with the exception of two years spent in Saginaw. On February 14, 1918, he was united in marriage to Emma Margaret Barnum. To this union were born six children, Waneta, Joseph, Barton, Francis and Alex, one child dying in infancy.

The deceased was a patient sufferer, always greeting his relatives and friends with a smile. During the last seven months he was confined to his bed.

He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his loving wife and five children, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Caverly of Whittemore, and one brother, Allan, of Saginaw.

Funeral services were held at the home Tuesday afternoon, with military rites being given by the American Legion. Interment was made in the Logan cemetery.

At home in the beautiful hills of God, By the valley of rest so fair; Some day, some time, when our task is done, With joy we shall meet him there.

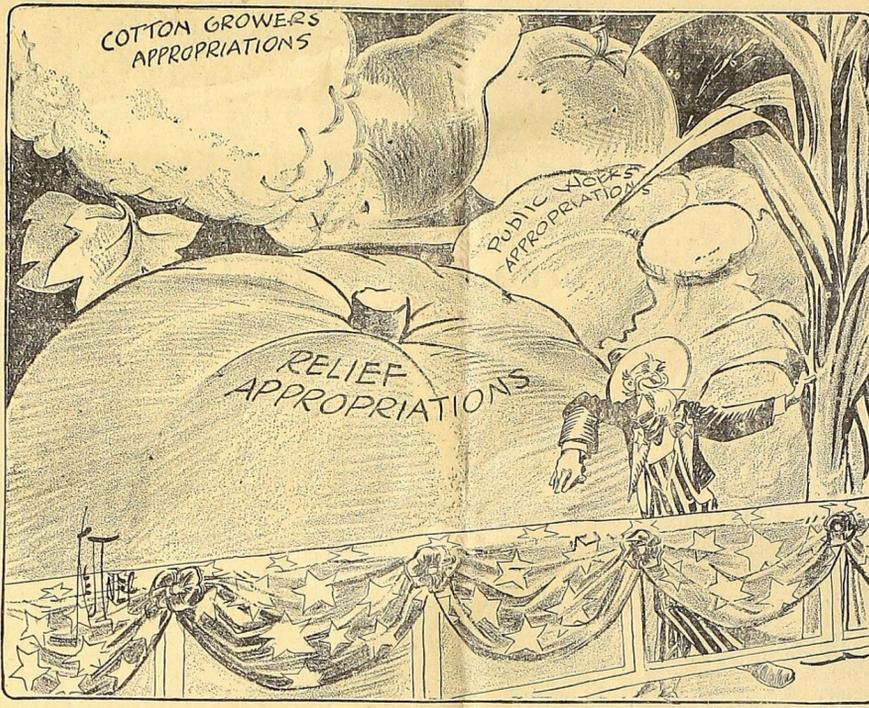

No more shall we see him in action; May the birds sing sweet songs at his grave, And the merciful God of our fathers Reward him because he was brave.

Boat Basin Being Dug At Mouth Of Tawas River

As part of the development program of the Tawas Yacht Club, Joseph Lubaway of East Tawas has employed the services of a dragline shovel owned by Walter Toebe of Shingleton, Michigan, in digging out a boat basin near the mouth of Tawas river.

When completed the project will consist of a basin about 50 feet square at the water level and a dredged channel 25 feet wide leading from it to the river. The basin is located on the northeast side of the river about 200 yards upstream from the mouth, and less than 100 yards from US-23. Clay from the excavation is being piled on the side toward the bay as protection in case of an unforeseen rise in the lake level.

It is hoped that in the near future it will be possible to complete the breakwater, which now exists as a pier, or double row of piling, extending into the bay about 200 yards northeast of the mouth of the river. The completed breakwater would consist of a seawall extending from the mouth of the river to the existing pier. As the final step in his project, Lubaway contemplates filling in the land thus enclosed, and constructing a clubhouse on the site.

Although aware that the realization of his plan is a matter of time, and is dependent on the interest of the businessmen and citizens of the community, Lubaway is, nevertheless, confident of its feasibility. In the meantime, he is in hopes that the boat basin now being constructed will serve to stimulate the needed interest by furnishing a sheltered harbor for the motorboats and small sailboats now owned by various residents of East Tawas and Tawas City. It is expected that this work will be finished by the end of this week.

Health Department No. 2

T. H. Johnston, M. D., Director
Infantile paralysis has been fairly common in Southern California for some months past, latest reports indicating over 1200 cases which include several notables from the movie world.

Last week, the disease made its appearance at Camp Nissokone, located in this health district. So far, no local cases have been observed.

Infantile paralysis is usually seen during the period June to November. It tends to diminish in October and to disappear with the approach of really cold weather. As the name suggests, it is mostly a disease of the young, though adults are sometimes attacked. President Roosevelt contracted this affliction while on a vacation in Maine in 1921.

The protection of a child against infantile paralysis is difficult since the exact cause of the disease has not been determined. There is reason to believe that it is caused by an organism too small to be seen with the ordinary microscope. Persons who are carriers of the disease may spread it just as healthy carriers of scarlet fever and diphtheria may serve to spread those diseases.

Authorities on infantile paralysis recommend the following:

1. Avoid sick children.
2. Avoid unwashed fruits and vegetables.
3. Call a physician promptly where the disease is suspected.

STERLING BOY SHOT; DIES OF INJURIES

Milo Mann, 15 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Mann, Sterling, died at Omer hospital at 4:00 o'clock Tuesday morning as a result of being shot by Frank Magyar, 72 year old farmer living a half mile south of the Sterling school.

Milo and eight other youngsters of the village had gone out to the Magyar farm to "coon" some watermelons at about 9:00 o'clock Monday evening. Magyar had been the victim of previous raidings by groups of youngsters and was on the watch for the boys, awaiting them with a loaded shotgun. When the boys were about 30 feet from the field containing the melons they were commanded to "hold up their hands," and at the same time he discharged his gun. Milo was wearing a white shirt which made him an easy target in the darkness. He fell but the other boys escaped, though one youngster did receive a few shots about his body.

The boys state that the shots were fired without a chance for them to "put up their hands." Magyar was still standing near the melon patch when Deputy Sheriff Thomas Solomon arrived on the scene to make the arrest. He offered no resistance, nor did he offer assistance to the suffering boy. Fred MacPhail and Milo's father were also called to the scene of the tragedy. He was still conscious and able to talk to them. He was rushed to the hospital, but died soon after. In a post-mortem it was discovered that he had been shot several times in the heart as well as about the right side of the body and hands. Loss of blood also helped bring about his end.—Arenac County Independent.

Isosco County Grange To Hold Annual Picnic

The Isosco County Grange will hold its annual picnic at Kokosing Resort, one mile east of the village of Long Lake in Plainfield township, on Wednesday, August 22. Mrs. Dora H. Stockman will be the principal speaker on the program that has been arranged, and other speakers will also be present. Everyone is cordially invited.

Interior Of Masonic Temple Redecorated

The lobby, dining room and kitchen of the Tawas City Masonic temple has been completely redecorated during the past two weeks. The walls are light and dark buff with cream ceilings. The material for this improvement was furnished by the Eastern Star. Work was by Masons and members of the Eastern Star. The rooms now present a very pleasing appearance and the members of the two organizations should be congratulated.

Duck Hunting Season From October 15 to November 15

The members of the State Conservation Commission, in session last week, decided that the duck hunting dates for Upper Michigan this year will be from October 15 to 30 inclusive and for Lower Michigan, October 15 to November 15, inclusive. This covers all wild fowl not protected by Federal regulations and is in conformity with the 30-day season allowed by the government. All attempts to stagger the shooting days over a 60-day period failed to interest the Commission and its action is now considered final.

Real Estate Takes Burden If Gas Tax Is Reduced

The 15 mill limitation as passed last year as an amendment to the constitution does not limit taxes for debts obligated before the passage of that amendment. In Isosco county there is over $125,000 in township and Covert bonds that may be levied in excess of 15 mills. At present these bonds are being paid out of the weight and gas tax returned to the counties.

The proposed reduction of the gas tax from three to two cents that is to be submitted to the voters this fall, if passed, will likely mean that property tax will go above the 15 mills and undo a lot of good that has been done in the last few years by replacing property tax by gas and weight tax.

There is today no county property tax for roads, which accounts for the greater part of all tax reduction in real estate in the last few years. If the gas tax should be cut one cent, a lot more men will be thrown on welfare, making less money available for those who are now being taken care of in that way. Supervisors' Committee.

The program will consist of races each day in A and B classes, as well as several novelty races. The boats which will come up from Bay City and Saginaw on Wednesday will be met at Point Lookout by several of the local skippers, and all will engage in a free-for-all from there to Tawas Bay. A pennant for the winner of this race, as well as trophies and prizes for all races of the series, is being offered by the Tawas Bay Yachting Association, the official hosts of the event.

The program for the week's events will be as follows:

Saturday afternoon: 2:30, 2:45 and 3:00 o'clock—Final heat in the cup race for "A" class, "B" class, and catboats, respectively. The trophy for first place for "A" class boats in the cup race will be a cup presented by the business men of East Tawas and Tawas City. This cup must be defended each year. The second prize will be 100 feet of three-quarter inch running line presented by the T. B. Y. A. The Schmelzer cup will also be awarded to the winner under the same conditions as last year. The class "B" trophy for first place will be the Mary I. Dwight cup, which must also be defended each year. The prize for second place will be a set of oilers, offered by W. F. Jennison of Bay City. The trophy for first place in the catboat class will be a cup. The N. C. Harting cup offered last year will also be awarded to the winner of first place in the catboat class.

Sunday, August 19, will mark the end of the contests between the local boats, when the final battle for the coveted trophies will take place. In last Sunday's race, the Dale, owned and skippered by Carl Babcock of Tawas City, again took first place. The Gable, owned by James Nisbet, placed second, with the Sero, the Mistral, and the Louise following. Among the smaller boats the Do-No triumphed over the Gull by five seconds. These were the only boats in the race, and the contest was a close one throughout. As a result, the Do-No is now only a point or two behind the Gull in the fight for the season's championship.

Last Saturday's Commodore's race was taken by the Sero, sailed by Miss Katherine Schmelzer of Tawas Beach. The Dale, which was sailing under single reefed mainsail, finished second, and the Mistral, Louise, and Gable crossed the line in the order named.

A crossing will be held at the Holland Hotel next Tuesday evening at 8:00 o'clock. All members should be present as this is the last meeting before the regatta.

Tawas City B-B Team Is Defeated By Oscoda

The Tawas City "B-B's" journeyed to Oscoda last Sunday and were defeated by a score of 8 to 2. The northern boys grabbed an early lead off H. Woiahn, and were never headed throughout the game. H. Knuth, Oscoda moundsman, pitched good ball to protect the comfortable margin given him by his mates, and kept the Tawas City hits well scattered.

Next Sunday the "B-B's" will play the Selfridge Field Flyers at the Tawas City diamond. The game will start at 2:30.

"Paris Interlude" Is Smartly Acted Film

Lindbergh's arrival in Paris, the great Artists' Masquerade in the Latin Quarter, a spectacular fashion show, with beautiful women displaying the latest Paris finery in a replica of a famous fashion salon; these are some of the sensational details that embellish "Paris Interlude," film attraction at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, August 19-20-21.

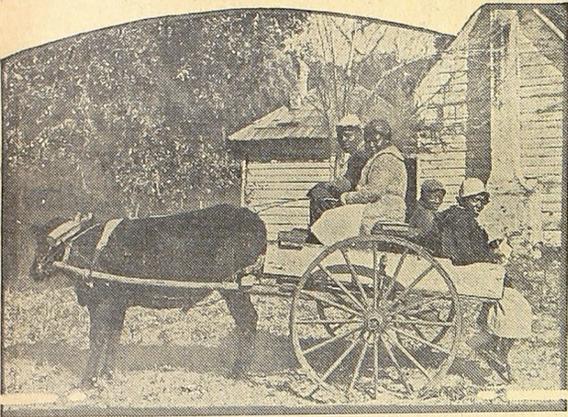

With a cast headed by Madge Evans, Otto Kruger, Una Merkel and Robert Young, the new comedy romance of Paris and its festive American colony is a mixture of comedy, drama and romance, directed by Edwin L. Marin.

Kruger plays a suave American newspaper correspondent "covering" the Lindbergh arrival. Miss Evans is seen as the girl he jilts, and who, stranded in Paris, wins fame as a writer on fashions. Una Merkel plays the comedy role of her companion, a cynical illustrator. Young is the faithful friend with whom in the end she finds happiness.

Golden Isles of Guale

Native Transportation on the Sea Islands.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE Atlantic's rolling waves do not break against the mainland of Georgia. A startling statement, that. Yet it is true, for the surf shatters on the smooth sandy beaches of the islands that stretch like a protecting band off the coast.

These are the famed Sea Islands of Georgia, the "Golden Isles of Guale" as they were known to Sixteenth century Spanish map-makers.

The low-lying lumps of land, spawned by the tides and winds off the 100-mile arc of the Georgia coast, were once friendly hunting grounds, where Indians stalked deer, wild turkeys, raccoons, opossums, and water-fowl. Today, as subtropic playgrounds and winter retreats of happy isolation, they have again become hunting preserves and game sanctuaries.

What history has marched across the savannas and hammocks and beneath the moss-scarfed arms of the mighty live oaks of these islands in the nearly four-century span since white men entered this New world theater!

Here, in the late sixties of the Sixteenth century, came Spanish grandees and black-frocked friars, from their Florida headquarters at St. Augustine, to plant sword and cross among the Indians to the "glory of the king." Here, too, came adventurous French voyagers to trade and to make unsustained colonial claims.

Bold pirates and buccaners, such as Argamont (the notorious "Abraham") and Blackbeard, after plundering along the Spanish Main, brought into the hidden anchorages of these secluded waterways their treasure galleons and, under cover of the island oaks, found respite from their high adventures.

Here, in the 1730's, came Gen. James Edward Oglethorpe and his followers, who, within a few years, struck blows that helped preserve for the Anglo-Saxon race a large portion of the continent.

Refugee Santo Domingo planters, escaped French royalists, human cargoes from African "slavers," wealthy antebellum aristocrats of the old South, masters of extensive island plantations; then ruin, and, finally, delayed rehabilitation, mark the succeeding chapters of the Sea Islands' history.

Five flags have waved over this offshore cluster of lands where some of the earliest seeds of American trade were sown.

Lesson in Coastal Geography.

However, the unfolding panorama gained from the vantage point of an airplane cockpit is essentially a lesson in coastal geography, not history, even though isolated bits of old Spanish ruins, Oglethorpe's Fort Frederica, and remnants from prosperous colonial days can still be distinguished through the foliage.

Between the leeward side of the islands and the mainland lie expansive reaches of salt marshes, ranging roughly from two to eight miles in width. Generally wide at the northern end, toward Savannah, they narrow at the lower portion of Cumberland, the southernmost member of the Golden Isles.

As you fly along the chain of islands you can trace a continuous serpentine passage in the network of sounds, delta-divided river mouths, and meandering creeks. It is the Inside, or Florida, Passage, a portion of that inside water route which extends all the way from New York to the Florida Keys.

As you swing to a course over the ocean side of the islands, an interesting feature of their formation is revealed to advantage. Heavily wooded areas appear in long bands, stretching in a north-and-south direction, and are separated by slender marshes and ponds, in some cases even expanding into narrow lakes.

Through the passing centuries the tides and winds have plied the sand and river-debouched sediment into a series of parallel dunes interspersed with the swamps—hammocks and sloughs, they are termed in Georgian parlance. Enormous live oaks, pines, cedars, and other trees luxuriate here. On Sapelo Island alone remain the wide, open fields where colonial plantations flourished.

Here and there are tiny islands, with little more than a fringe of sandy beach to inclose a small area of marshland.

Where De Aviles Landed. One cannot visit St. Catherines without recalling that April day in 1566 when Menendez de Aviles, one of Spain's ablest pioneers, and his party of 50 men dropped anchor and came ashore on this island. He had established St. Augustine, in Florida, only the year before, and was already out to destroy the remaining traces of any settlements the French may have founded.

One writer pointed out that nowhere else had he seen such a delightful setting for a great house as that on Sapelo Island. In the midst of a cathedral-like bower of live oaks, with hoary beards of Spanish moss depending from their outstretched limbs, stands a majestic colonial home. Projecting from the porticoed entrance is a cruciform formal pool which catches and tosses back the reflection of mossy oaks and vast white walls.

Since its reconstruction, two Presidential parties have been guests at the mansion. One day, while one of First Ladies was admiring the nearby rock garden, her cicerone was heard to remark, "They even used imported stone for this rock garden."

The big house of the South End plantation was first built by Thomas Spalding in 1800-1802, after he had returned from England to take up plantation farming on Sapelo.

As noted a farmer as he was a builder, Spalding cleared more than a thousand acres on his island kingdom, and raised indigo, sea-island cotton, sugar cane, and staple foodstuffs.

He it was, in fact, who introduced cane cultivation and sugar manufacturing into Georgia. The live oaks which he cut while clearing the forests to make bigger fields serve to fill large timber contracts for the budding United States navy. He also supplied the navy and merchant marine with beef and hogs.

As a slave owner, however, Spalding came ultimately to suffer, even though he treated his "helpers" with such kindness that the planters in the South dubbed Sapelo "Nigger Heaven." Then came the Confederacy, against every protest of this aged man. Sherman's march to the sea laid waste the big house and the plantation developments. Fortunately, Spalding did not live to see that day of ruin.

Vines and bramble claimed the fire-smoked tabby walls of the mansion until the present owner cleared them and rebuilt again in 1925.

Modern Improvements.

Today, too, the old canals have been dredged and new ones have been cut in many places to supplement the drainage of the island. An adequate supply of fresh water is provided by 36 gushing artesian wells. More than a thousand beef cattle now graze on the luxuriant carpet grass, Japanese clover, and Bermuda grass that have been sown in the one-time cotton and indigo fields.

Delightful trails and motor roads lace the island retreat. In many places they wind beneath bewhiskered old oaks; elsewhere they skirt the broad savannas and cross between marshy ponds that teem with ducks, teal, and other waterfowl.

On the west shore, commanding the approach to the Florida Passage, stand the tabby ruins of the octagonal fort built by the Spaniards in 1680. Within its concentric walls troops were stationed to protect the friars of the Mission of San Jose de Zapala. Thomas Spalding built a sugar mill on the mission foundations, and within recent years the "long tabby" has been converted into a guesthouse, a portion of which is now used as a schoolroom for the nine white children on the island.

A short ride farther north brings one to the ruins of Le Chatelet. This old site recalls the colonial efforts of five Frenchmen who bought the island and settled at several places in their little haven. The agreement which they made in St. Malo, France, before the beginning of their venture, is one of the treasures of the Sapelo library.

Soon to disagree, four of them moved to Jekyll Island. Later Le Chatelet passed into the hands of Marquis de Montalet, a French nobleman who had fled from Santo Domingo, where his whole family had been massacred in a slave uprising.

Many of the descendants of Spalding's slaves still live on tiny farms on the island. Of the three settlements—Raccoon Bluff, Hog Hammock, and Shell Hammock—the former is the largest.

At Hampton Point and Retreat on St. Simon Island the first sea-island cotton was grown from seeds introduced from the island of Anguilla, in the West Indies. This remarkable long-fiber cotton created much comment among cotton buyers when the first crop, shipped from Hampton Point reached Liverpool.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

Results in Thyroid Operations

ONE of the problems facing both patient and physician in goiter or thyroid ailments is whether an operation should be performed at once or whether treatment by rest, iodine, X-ray or other methods should first be tried.

Now no one likes the idea of an operation because there is the anesthetic, the time in hospital with its expense, and the danger of the operation. Naturally then if all this can be avoided it would seem like good sense to wait.

However, physicians always keep in mind that the extra juice from the thyroid gland makes the heart beat more rapidly all the time and this extra work, together with poisons in the system, can so damage the heart that rest and other forms of treatment are of no avail.

Therefore we now find that the condition of the heart itself and the strength of its muscular walls in pumping the blood, is the factor that influences the physician whether or not to advise operation. In fact many surgeons favor operation even when heart symptoms are mild.

What is this operation? The operation consists in the removal of a large part, but not all, of the thyroid gland in the neck. In former times this operation was considered so dangerous that patients traveled hundreds and often thousands of miles to have it performed by some renowned surgeon. Today, in practically every hospital, surgeons are performing this operation with splendid results and with a very low death rate.

Thus Dr. J. de J. Pemberton in Journal of Surgery and Obstetrics reports a death rate of less than 1 per cent.

What about the results obtained by operation?

Statistics from Kocher's clinic in Vienna and Mayo's clinic, Rochester, Minn., give 86 per cent of satisfactory results after operation in serious cases of the severe type of goiter.

The thought, then, is that where rest and other forms of treatment are not giving results in these thyroid cases when the heart is affected, the earlier the case is turned over to the surgeon the less danger there is from the operation.

Sometimes the operation is performed because the patient can't spare the time required by the rest treatment.

Overweight Individuals

OVERWEIGHT individuals will cut down on bread, potatoes, pastry, butter and cream, in an effort to reduce their weight, but will continue to drink large quantities of water and other liquids, because liquids do not put on fat.

Strictly speaking, liquids do not put on fat tissue, but they do put on weight and they do prevent fat from being used up as readily as it would be were the liquids not taken.

It isn't a matter of water not being good for all mankind. Water is the very first thing needed to maintain the proper working of the body, just as food is needed to provide the structure of the body.

But the body at all times has a good supply of water on hand, and only needs a certain amount every day to keep its needs supplied.

Just as you see storage tanks of water on the roofs of factories to be used in an emergency, so all your tissues have a goodly supply of water stored away. This water is not in any one place like the storage tank, but in and about all the tissues, and actually forming part of the tissues themselves.

When you exercise and the perspiration pours out on the surface of the skin, then your tissues have given up that much water and you are just that much lighter in weight. Some fat tissue has been used up by the exercise, but water makes up most of the weight loss.

If, however, after exercising and losing all this water, or even if you simply perspire without taking exercise, and because you feel thirsty drink three or four glasses of water then immediately you are just that much heavier again.

With those of normal weight, this perspiring and then drinking water is helpful to the system; in fact it is helpful also to the overweight individual in a general way, but as a matter of fact he doesn't need all this water, and it only increases his weight.

In other words the tissues and spaces of the overweight hold so much more water than he needs, that he has really too large a "storage tank" of water. Thus if he loses considerable water by perspiration and uses up some of the water in his storage tank, he is bound to lose some of his weight.

Lioness Loose in Circus

When the electric lights went out during a lion act of a circus in Cardiff, Wales, recently, five beasts were caught in the dark. Attendants lit matches. Carrying a torch, the trainer managed to get four beasts back into their cages, but the fifth, a lioness, was missing. After a search, she was found in another part of the tent, badly frightened, and was happy to return to her cage. The audience of 1,500 thought it all was part of the show, and enjoyed it.

THE NIGHT BEFORE YOUR BIRTHDAY

THIS spent year will not come again.

A happy year of childhood done, When every path was broad and plain, And there was never dearth of sun.

You may not call its magic back, Although Time gives you wisdom's gold; And often you will feel the lack Of its allure when you are old.

A careless, happy, sunny year Has slipped into the evening skies. For you the future has no fear. It climbs on straight to Paradise.

Upon each birthday eve, dear child, May you with the same trustful gaze, Look backward on hours undefiled, And forward to enchanting days!

Bedtime Story for Children

ANOTHER MEMBER OF A BIG FAMILY

PETER RABBIT was just about to ask if he might go along with Chewink and see his nest when a new voice broke in. "What are you fellows talking about?" it demanded, and there flitted just in front of Peter a little bird the size of a sparrow, but lovelier than any sparrow of Peter's acquaintance. At first glance he seemed to be all blue, and such a lovely bright blue! But as he paused for an instant Peter saw that his wings and tail were mostly black, and that the lovely blue was brightest on his head and back. It was Indigo the Bunting.

"We were talking about our family," replied Chewink. "I was telling Peter that we belong to the largest family among the birds."

"But you didn't say anything about Indigo," interrupted Peter. "Do you mean to say that he belongs to the same family?"

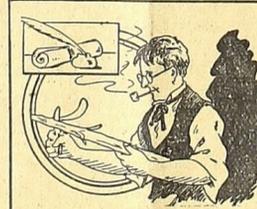

"I surely do," replied Indigo. "I'm rather closely related to the Sparrow branch. Don't I look like a Sparrow?"

Peter looked at Indigo closely. "In size and shape you do," he confessed, "but just the same I should never in the world have thought of connecting you with the Sparrows."

"How about me?" asked another voice, and a little brown bird flew up beside Indigo, twitching her tail nervously. She looked very sparrow-like, indeed, so much so that had not Peter seen her with her handsome mate, for she was Mrs. Indigo, he certainly would have taken her for a sparrow. Only on her wings and tail was there any of the blue which made Indigo's coat so beautiful, and this was only a faint tinge.

"I'll have to confess that so far as you are concerned it isn't hard to think of you as related to the Sparrows," declared Peter. "Don't you sometimes wish you were as handsome as Indigo?"

Mrs. Indigo shook her head in the most decided way. "Never," she declared. "I have worries enough raising a family as it is, but if I had a coat like his I wouldn't have a moment of peace. You have no idea how I worry about him sometimes. You ought to be thankful, Peter Rabbit, that you haven't a coat like his. It attracts altogether too much attention."

Peter tried to picture himself in a bright blue coat and laughed right out at the mere thought and the others joined with him. Then Indigo flew to the top of a tall tree and began to sing. It was a lively song and Peter enjoyed it thoroughly. Mrs. Indigo took this opportunity to slip away unobserved, and when Peter looked around for Chewink, he, too, had disappeared. He had gone to tell Mrs. Chewink that he was quite safe and that she had nothing to worry about.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN . . . The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a boy eight years old, and am in the fourth grade at school. My teacher has offered a prize for the boy who can write a sentence with the two words "Peaches" and "Gruesome" in the same sentence. Can you help me out?

Yours truly, A. TRUANT.

Answer: Sure I can help you. Here is a sentence with both words you mention in it: "The man planted an orchard full of trees and 'gruesome' peaches."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

What is meant when they say: "A man died standing up"?

Truly yours, M. BALMER.

Answer: When a man dies standing up it means his feet are so large he can't fall over.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My father and I like to go to the theater. We are both very fond of all kinds of shows. But after every show we disagree as to its merits. He insists the shows today are not like the shows when he was my age. If there is any difference will you kindly tell me about it?

Truly yours, I. C. PLAYS.

Answer: The only difference I notice is that it has changed from the "ears" to the "eyes." What I mean is, years ago we used to go to the theaters to hear "new ditties," now we go to the theater to see "nudities."

Fire Dance Rites May Be Forbidden

Holy Synod Would Stop Pagan Ritual in Bulgaria.

Sofia.—In the little village of Vulgar, deep in the forest which extends from a few miles south of Burgas to the Turkish frontier, an amazing annual ceremony which dates from pagan times took place recently. It is now strangely combined with Christian ritual, but it is performed in defiance of the Holy Synod.

It was the festival of Sts. Constantine and Helena; and upon that day every year several women of a small community known as the Nestinarki—dancers upon fire—dance with bare feet upon red-hot embers, an act of self-mortification which brings fruitfulness and health to their village and friends, and yet, according to witnesses, apparently causes them no pain.

After a service in the village church which is attended by all the villagers in their best clothes, three young men carry from the church an ikon and other sacred symbols. Before them walks the master of ceremonies, Kiro Kostadinoff, a man sixty-nine years old, swinging a censer. Kiro leads across the village to another tiny church dedicated to St. Constantine, the church of the Nestinarki, a dark place hung about with pictures of saints. The villagers crowd in after him, each bringing a present for the church.

Big Drum Is Used.

On the wall hangs a big drum, which is taken from its peg only upon this day each year; and by the drum, holding a burning candle, waits old Baba Nuna, the "high priestess" of the Nestinarki. At the door the villagers buy their slender candles, as they do in all orthodox churches, and light them from old Baba Nuna's till shadows dance on the walls.

Then all emerge again. At a sign from Baba Nuna a man with the drum and another with the crude bagpipes common in Bulgaria strike up strange music. The Nestinarki—there were four at the recent ceremony—dressed in black, their faces pale, begin to dance rhythmically, their hands outstretched, chanting as they go. Faster and faster goes the music and old Baba Nuna urges on the dancers till they are in a frenzy, though apparently oblivious of their surroundings. Suddenly the music and dancing stop and the procession re-forms, winding its way from the village to a little valley where there is a holy spring in a grove of ancient oaks. Here another service is conducted by the village priest, while the people drink the water of the spring and eat unleavened bread.

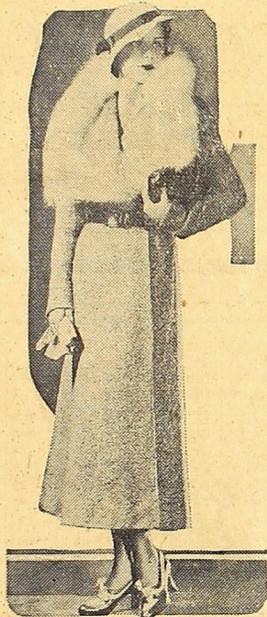

Dance on Glowing Embers.

In the dusk the procession returns to the village square, where a great wood fire has been lit. As the flames die down the embers are spread, their glow giving the only light. The smell of incense mingles with the acrid fumes of smoldering wood. On one side of the carpet of red embers stand the bearers of the ikon and holy symbols, on the other side the musicians, who now strike up their wild tunes again.

Suddenly the Nestinarki run forward, take the holy symbols in their hands and dash upon the glowing embers with their bare feet, dancing as before, faster and faster, for ten or fifteen minutes, round and round, and finally twice across to describe the sign of the cross. Then the music suddenly ceases, all go to the church again, the oldest inhabitants first, and sit upon the floor to end the day's performance with a holy feast.

Vulgar is the only village where this strange ceremony survives, though it used to be common to many villages of that region. Spectators are not encouraged. This year the ceremony has attracted so much attention in the Bulgarian press—the papers being no longer able to fill their columns with political news since the establishment of the dictatorship—that the Holy synod considers it time to intervene and is considering what measures must be taken to put a stop to such pagan rites.

A MORAL CRUSADE

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

At last the public mind has become aroused at the indecent element in the movies. Righteous indignation has expressed itself in unmistakable terms. An organized censorship has been created which not only means business, but will prove relentless in its efforts to clean the silver screen of its immoral pictures.

For many years there was supposed to exist a censorship for this very purpose. It made many promises but they were never fulfilled. Movies grew worse and worse. Those that would not be tolerated in an American theater were sent to China and other foreign countries. The sole object of those who had charge of exporting these pictures seemed to have been the amount of money which the picture could earn. The educational and moral factor never entered their calculations. It seemed that the production was to be made as quickly as possible, and who hoped that she would accompany them. The girl would pay her own way, but she would be able to be saved all expense of guides, couriers, interpreters, etc., and she would be relieved of the bother of seeing to tickets, and all traveling problems, and have the companionship of a dearly loved. In the days of her youth the details of travel were many more than in 1934. Now there are various agencies to help lone travelers and tourists. Also the placard "English spoken" is generally found in shops and pensions. The lady mentioned let the chance pass by, and never again did it present itself, and never did she go to the places she would so have enjoyed in England and Europe. Hers was the chance of her "today."

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

A VOID making work for yourself. There are women, really competent, who make themselves more work than they need to. They get things done, but not in the easiest way. They employ more dishes when preparing food than they actually need. They surround themselves with extras when sewing, such as odd pieces of a pattern not required at the time, and yet not folded and put back as taken out, although known to be unwanted pieces, etc. We all know such persons if we are not ourselves of the group. It is worth taking some trouble to acquire ways of doing things easily, so some suggestions are made today.

If, as soon as a kettle or saucepan is emptied of its contents, it is filled with hot water, if convenient, or cold, if not, it will be the work of but a moment or two to clean it later. It is even better to wash the container immediately. It will be hot from the stove, the food will not have had time to harden on edges, or the scum to stick. If there is a jiffy, if done immediately, and what a delight it is not to have an accumulation of pots and pans to wash after the dishes themselves have all been done. Sometimes these pots and pans seem the last straw. Try doing them immediately, and note the difference in the task of cleaning up.

Keeping "Cleared Up."

When sewing avoid spreading the work about more than you can possibly help. If materials have to be gotten out, or laces, or notions, etc., don't let them stay out when what is wanted has been found and set aside. Immediate putting away seems part of the process of getting them out, instead of a totally different bit of work, as it appears to be and really is, when left until later on. Be sure whatever time you do put the things away, that no odds are left out. You surely make work for yourself when you do. The entire process of taking out the box or drawer and putting it back must be gone through with.

Avoid leaving things around. It is one of the commonest ways of making one's self work, and it is a habit once fallen into that is very hard to break. To hear "Have you seen anything of my gloves"—or whatever it is, becomes annoying to the rest of the household. The loser feels annoyed with herself, and it often reacts in a querulousness, until the family is drawn into a vortex of discussion. It is trouble saving as well as labor saving not to make extra work for one's self.

Present Pleasures.

It is a mistake to have one's expectations of good things dim the enjoyment of present ones. Or to let opportunities slip by for pleasure and happiness, that come day by day. I remember hearing one elderly woman speak with regret of an opportunity she let slip when she was a young woman. She was privileged to be one of a party of relatives, a family going abroad, and who hoped that she would accompany them. The girl would pay her own way, but she would be able to be saved all expense of guides, couriers, interpreters, etc., and she would be relieved of the bother of seeing to tickets, and all traveling problems, and have the companionship of a dearly loved. In the days of her youth the details of travel were many more than in 1934. Now there are various agencies to help lone travelers and tourists. Also the placard "English spoken" is generally found in shops and pensions. The lady mentioned let the chance pass by, and never again did it present itself, and never did she go to the places she would so have enjoyed in England and Europe. Hers was the chance of her "today."

Doctors Ponder on Odd Accident Case

Albany, N. Y.—A case described as one of the most unusual in medical history continues to puzzle surgeons here.

Frederick McCredie, a machinist, accidentally was struck on the head with a hammer by a fellow worker in 1925. He appeared to be unhurt. One month later, however, he was found wandering along the streets, unable to remember his identity, or recognize his wife and children.

Gradually his memory returned, but he discovered he had forgotten his trade completely.

ers concluded that the public conscience had been completely calloused, consequently their efforts to present the grotesque and immoral became bolder and bolder. All of a sudden something happened. The mind of the public spoke. These producers were given something to think about. As one critic put it, "They've got it coming to them."

There are many channels through which the public conscience may speak. The most effective is the one through which this protest has come, the organized forces of Christianity. Never in the history of modern times have the different divisions of organized Christianity spoken more earnestly or unitedly on any moral issue. The Roman Catholic, the Jewish and the entire Protestant world have arisen in vigorous protest, saying you have gone far enough, you can go no farther, we declare a moratorium, or better still, a complete elimination of the immoral picture. These Christian forces hold the balance of power. The producers know that well; so we may soon expect good things for this part of our present program. The movie may become an important source of great good. Perhaps that day is near.

Why not go farther—why not have a concerted action against the immoral element in all our yellow journalism, our cheap vaudeville shows, etc. Why not? When once the public conscience becomes aroused, something is bound to happen!

Howe About: REAL COMFORT IN COAT DRESS

Our Indignation Simple Writing Nostalgia

By ED HOWE

A JUDGE in Philadelphia lately declared from the bench that bandits are 'bums and parasites who should be exterminated like rats, as they are not worth the expense of keeping them in penitentiaries. He even went so far as to say that if "members of the American Legion should engage in revolver practice, they would not find the judges in our courts loath to assist them."

Everywhere the indignation against racketeers and politicians is ferocious, but the pitiful fact is, nothing is being done. Even this fierce judge did the same old thing: sent the bandits to the penitentiary, to probably be pardoned after a few years more of expense to decent taxpayers.

Irvin Edman recently wrote of "the instincts that masquerade as faiths, and the lusts that parade as ideals." . . . To me this is not only very good writing, but indicates sense. Edman also wrote: "In these matters (the doctrines of the relativists, the patter of the new physics) I think it is important to be simple; in all the complexity of modern scientific formula, it is the same old sky with the same things beneath it. I believe in the common world of things as they are about us, the things I touch, see, taste, smell, hear; in the world that worldings feast and want in."

I plead for the use of simpler words by writers, and simple forms of expression. There is a writer named Immanuel Kant, admittedly a man of unusual intelligence, yet his sentences are so involved that his name has become an epithet: people say a long and involved statement is kant, meaning it is poor argument and poor sense.

People of his own time named their dogs Immanuel Kant. Had the man been content to write more simply, his good ideas would have accomplished more good.

I arraign the ugly and unnecessary word nostalgia. It means homesickness, a more expressive and better-looking word. Our dictionary contains many other instances of annoyance and waste of time. I believe I can name from memory a hundred words often used and which I do not quickly know the meaning of in reading, although I have looked them up many times. I know the meaning of nostalgia now, having just referred to the dictionary, but the next time I encounter it, I shall be annoyed again in my reading.

I know a young soldier who served, during the late war, only two months in a military camp near his home. He told me at the time he never had more to eat, less to do, or enjoyed himself more. And while he was off soldiering, his wages at home went on.

Now, this soldier is as fanatical and unreasonable about the soldiers' bonus as some preachers were about prohibition.

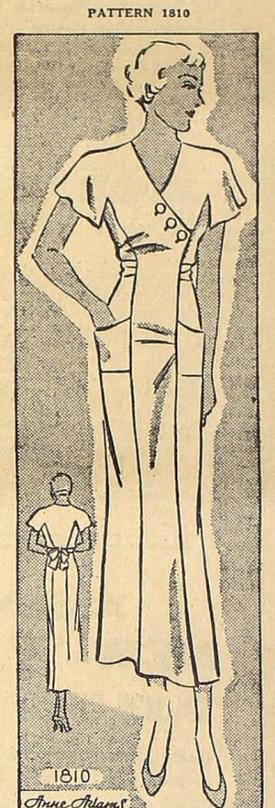

(Let me add in parenthesis intended only for dunces that in denouncing this fellow, I intend no lack of respect for those former service men who actually engaged in battles, and were incapacitated.)

"I went to India," says a traveler, "with the idea that the British bedeviled the country, but when I got there realized that the real parasites are not the British, but fourteen million sacred cows, which not only destroy meager crops, but eat food needed by the women and children. The people are unbelievably ignorant, dirty and poor. It would be a crime against humanity and against India's own future for England to withdraw, and let India's three hundred and sixty million people develop into a political and moral breeding ground for world retrogression. Its land is naturally very poor; in addition, wornout, and this handicap has been added to by the people widely accepting a religion worse than constant war during a period of constant famine and slavery."

The women have various organizations intended to improve the condition of their sex; a very commendable work, if well attended to. . . . I often wonder they do not induce the managers of telephone companies to conduct schools to teach women manners and efficiency. I have never known a telephone girl not above the average in these respects; and they are untrained girls taught in schools conducted by the heads of telephone companies.

It seems to me (speaking again of the panic) that every man's other troubles have increased, and that tires go flat more frequently on every road in 1934 than in 1929, or any other of the Good Old Days.

Old Cornelius Vanderbilt, first of the family to amount to anything, used to say he was as big a rogue as anybody, but practiced honesty because of the profit in it. "I've associated with thieves all my life," he said, in old age, "but never knew one to get along half as well as an honest man." . . . The strongest argument for honesty is that it pays; don't let any of the professional sentimentalists make a fool of you with the story that morality is a noble thing you should suffer martyrdom for.

Since it is perfectly obvious from the sketch how smart this house frock is, we are going to begin by calling your attention to how nice it is to slip into a coat dress the first thing in the morning or when one comes in from outdoors and wishes to get into "working clothes" as quickly as possible. One throws it around her—ties the sash—and that is that, so far as putting it on is concerned. But the enjoying of it has just begun. It is such a satisfaction to know that one is looking pretty and well dressed as one goes about doing this little thing and that—everything seems easier!

A baby crab is less like an adult crab in structure than a tadpole is like a frog when it is born, and it does not achieve the familiar crab pattern until it is about a month old. From that time on for a period of six months or more it grows so rapidly that it has to discard its outgrown shell about twice a month. At the end of that time it will have become a fair sized crab.

Ohio's Topography

The most peculiar feature of Ohio's topography is a low, flat ridge called a watershed, which winds across the state from the middle of the western boundary to its northeast section. On a farm, seven miles west of Mansfield, upon the actual divide at an elevation of 1,265 feet, stands a barn from whose eaves the rainfalls flow from one side into the Lake Erie basin and from the other into the Ohio river basin.

Lentil Ancient Food

Lentils are not produced to any great extent in this country, though a small variety of lentil is grown in New Mexico and Arizona, as well as in Mexico, the seed of which was probably brought from Spain centuries ago. The lentil is a very ancient food and has been cultivated in western Asia, Egypt and the Mediterranean countries from the earliest times. Germany, Holland and France also raise them, but it is stated that most of our imports have come from southern Europe and Egypt.

Species of Arthropods

There are more species of arthropods, which include the crayfishes, crabs, spiders, insects, centipedes and many other animals with jointed legs and segmented bodies, than of all the other groups of animals combined.

The exceptional popularity which Chevrolet has enjoyed for many years has naturally had its effect on Chevrolet prices. Large sales have enabled Chevrolet to maintain consistently low purchase prices, which were recently lowered even further. As a result Chevrolet now offers you the lowest priced six-cylinder automobile obtainable—a big, comfortable car with Fisher Body styling and refinement—safe, weatherproof, cable-controlled brakes—the smoothness and economy of a valve-in-head, six-cylinder engine—and typical Chevrolet dependability. In offering this car, and the Master models, at substantially lower prices, Chevrolet hopes to repay the motoring public in some measure, for consistently placing Chevrolet so high in public favor.

"I did, sweetheart. Who'd shoot for you if I wouldn't?"

"Good clean shooting," he mumbled, "but too low. Did you get Babson?"

"I tried and they wouldn't let me. But I smashed Henry Rookby's fool head, dearest. He organized the ruckus at Babson's bidding, but if he lives after the two raps I gave him with the barrel he'll think twice before tackling another such job."

Nate Tichenor smiled a terrible smile. "We backfired on the little cuss, didn't we, love?" He placed an oily finger on her adorable nose and pressed it gently upward. "You'll do. You're a man's woman. I'm going over to the curb now and sit down before I fall down. If anybody takes me from behind shoot him—and shoot high and for the middle this time. I'm all out of patience. Look after old Rube."

Rube needed looking after, indeed. He was unconscious and a three-inch slit on the top of his bald head told the story. Also he had received his share of punches and kicks before Lorry Kershaw's bullets had dropped his assailants on top of him. The two doctors carried him over to the little grassy strip that ran parallel with the sidewalk and laid him out thereon, then turned to look after Lorry's victims. As they sat up, Joe Brainerd photographed them. When that was done he wrote the names of the fallen on a fragment of copy paper and, in his mind, began arranging the lead for this, his biggest news story.

"Get a truck out of that garage, Joe," Doc Donaldson ordered, "and we'll haul our trade over onto the grass under the shade trees in the plaza. I've used worse dressing stations. Every mother's son of them got it through the foreleg and some of the said legs are busted. I only wing-tipped them," says she—the little wizen."

"You've got to grant her the great gift of charity, Doc. And tremendous forbearance."

"Rats. She was saving them for the hangman. Hello, her hired man is beginning to take an interest in things."

Mr. Tenney's little round baleful eyes had, indeed, commenced to flicker. Lorry bent over him and raised his burly head to her shoulder. "How about you, old-timer?" she crooned.

"Shot all to pieces but not fatally," Mr. Tenney murmured slowly. "Where was you, boss, when the shootin' started? I figured you to guard my rear."

"I guarded it, never fear, Rube. I did all the shooting."

"—!" Mr. Tenney murmured. "Sorry. Spoke out o' my turn, I reckon. I'll be up in a minute; I'll make a hand yet."

A small boy came running down the boulevard as if pursued by a demon. "There's some fellers over to the office of the Register smashin' things up," he screeched.

Lorry dropped Rube Tenney as if his big body was scorched her and ran for the office of the Register a block away.

As she came panting to the front door she saw a dozen men inside, with axes. They had smashed the editorial desk and the counter in the business office, piled the type for the next issue of the Register, upset the fonts of type and smashed them and were busy wrecking the linotype when the girl's voice reached them above the clang of axes on metal.

"Put 'em up!"

They whirled, facing her, and before the menace of her gun their hands went skyward. Thus she held them until Brainerd arrived with his camera.

"Mug 'em, Brother Brainerd," she commanded. "Steady, boys. Not a move out of anybody. I'll put a bullet through the hand of the man that spoils this picture. This is a time exposure, I believe, because the inside light isn't so good."

Joe Brainerd took three photographs of the vandals in his wrecked print shop and turned to the girl. "Where do we go from here?" he demanded humorously.

"To Bill Rooney's calaboose. All right, men. Come out, one at a time, in single file and wend your way to the lockup."

They wended it. Bill Rooney was in his little jail office, thinking things over and gazing dolorously at a hole in a forty-dollar hat, when men began filing silently in on him. "What's this?" he exclaimed.

Lorry's gun covered him from the doorway. "Take his gun, Mr. Brainerd. Take his keys, too. No nonsense, Mr. Rooney, or you'll dance to my music again."

Brainerd secured the deputy sheriff's gun and keys, unlocked the two cells and closed them again as the wreckers of the Register filed consolately in. Then Lorry ordered Mr. Rooney to go home to his family, and Joe Brainerd locked the jail.

"The remainder of this party is yours, Mr. Brainerd," Lorry then announced. "I've got my boys to look after now."

"Thanks a lot, Miss Kershaw,"

"Not at all. No trouble to show goods," she retorted merrily. "If I were you I'd see that old idiot, Anson Towle, and swear out warrants enough for these twelve lunatics to keep them in jail till Christmas. I'd scare Towle if I were you. Threaten him with a mysterious fate so he'll make their ball the limit."

"Babson will ball them out, of course."

"I suppose so, but he'll not like it. The action will tie him to his gang."

CHAPTER XI

The succeeding week Nate Tichenor spent in a hospital at Gold Run whither Doctor Donaldson had ordered him for observation as to possible internal injuries. When at last Nate came to the Circle K ranch again, Lorry saw that, outwardly at least, he appeared to be normal.

"Doc thought my backbone had been tramped out of alignment," he announced, as he kissed her, "but it was only a couple of ribs sprung loose from my spine. Doc warned me not to move around, but I couldn't stay away. Outlaw that I am, I couldn't neglect you for another week."

"I wasn't ready to be a clinging vine; I'm accustomed to man's work—and if you're worth having Mr. Tichenor, you're worth fighting for. I enjoyed it."

"I'm almost afraid to marry you now," he teased. "You'd be a tough wife to handle in a family row. Have you been arrested yet?"

"No, dear. Joe Brainerd appears to have smoothed over the aftermath of that ruckus. He traded with Babson. Babson loaned him the new plant of the Forlorn Valley Citizen and then had a talk with the men we jailed. Babson levied an assessment to pay for the damages to Brainerd's plant, and Joe absented himself at the preliminary hearing of the case, so Anson Towle waited five minutes for Joe and his counsel to appear and then turned the men loose for lack of evidence.

"But I Am Curious to Know How You Accumulated All the Money You Appear to Have."

The men I winged are all going to get well, although they'll be on crutches for a month or two; I think they are glad to let the matter drop. We've all had enough undesirable advertising throughout the state."

"As for undesirable advertising, you and I haven't had any of it. We're heroes."

"Oh, do tell me, Nate. I've been afraid to read the papers."

"When a mob sacks a newspaper plant the entire fourth estate regards the act as a direct blow at the freedom of the press, and instantly the fight is no longer a private one. The Gold Run Nugget has burned Forlorn Valley to a crisp and so have all the other county newspapers. The Forlorn Valleyites have been called thugs, murderers, bad citizens, rioters, bullies, and cowards. I am advertised as a peaceable, well-meaning citizen and a distinguished ex-soldier of whom the county is proud. I sought to do Forlorn Valley a signal service and was mobbed and brutally beaten and bruised in return. All of the papers have cried out upon the senseless brutality of visiting upon a blameless young man the sins of his forebears—and they have done as much for you. In fact, they've made a heroine of you. You are commended for your great charity in 'wing-tipping' my assailants instead of killing them. You have a nickname. You're Wing-Tip-Lorry Kershaw now."

She turned to him suddenly. "But I am curious to know how you accumulated all the money you appear to have. For you do look like cash money, Nate."

"Well, the fact that I have a few dollars doesn't imply that I'm a financier," he protested. "The Hensleys had great veneration for cash but I'm only half Hensley. My father was a paleontologist. He came up into these hills one summer to hunt for fossils. Nothing would do but he must be our guest and have a horse to ride into the hills and a man to protect him from the Kershaws."

"My mother was twenty-four years old at the time and already beginning to be regarded as a fossil, so father added her to his collection and stayed on in Eden Valley and wrote some books nobody ever read, and resolutely refused to learn the cow business. He did manage to put a little bit of culture and uplift into the Hensleys. I made up my mind to stay out of Eden Valley and forget cows as a first aid to making a million dollars."

"When my mother and aunts died I was the sole heir to the Bar H Land and Cattle company, and the corporation was in excellent shape. There was about two hundred thousand dollars in the bank and no debts; there were twelve thousand head of cattle and the ranch was unencumbered. I decided to sell the cattle and lease the ranch. Rube Tenney, who was in command of the ranch, classed the cattle, so I knew what I had and what they were worth. I wrote my attorney to see your father and try to make a trade. It seemed the fair thing to do to let him have first chance. He'd always wanted all of Eden Valley. So he bought all the cattle and leased the Bar H ranch for thirty thousand dollars a year, for five years, with an option to buy the ranch at any time prior to the expiration of the lease and on very easy terms."

"The result was that early in 1920 I found myself foot-loose and with about a million dollars cash in bank. Now, while I was in France I secured a commission. My captain and I got along splendidly together. I got to know this man and to trust him and admire him. In civil life he'd been general manager of a large New York stock brokerage house. He had about fifty thousand dollars and he wanted to buy a seat on the New York Stock Exchange and go into business for himself. But he didn't have enough money to buy the seat and finance his operations."

"I told him I'd finance him—one hundred thousand dollars in cash against his fifty thousand in cash, his experience and ability, and we should be equal partners. We made money from the day we opened our doors."

"And you say you're not a financier."

"The lust for money has never overwhelmed me. I find, too, that I love Eden Valley. I'm going to close out my interests in New York and return here in the fall."

"I shall be very lonely while you are away, Nate."

"And that reminds me that I've sent down to San Francisco for a ring and here it is. If it's too big we'll have a tuck taken in, and if it's too small or you prefer some other stone I'll change it." And he slipped on her finger a square emerald worth at least a hundred steers. It was the first piece of jewelry she had ever owned and her hot tears of emotion baptized it; her warm lips caressed it in a silent promise he knew would never be broken.

"Suppose we get married in a hurry and make the New York trip a honeymoon," he said.

She shook her head. "Impossible until dad's estate has been settled. I can't leave here now. I have to work this outfit out of debt, because I can't afford a trousseau until I do. However, dear, you run on to New York, complete your business there, and when you return we'll make those two mergers you spoke of. I'm too busy now. I've got a lot of those early calves still to brand and I'll have to brand about a thousand late calves in the fall. I don't want to leave any worries behind me when we go on our honeymoon."

"And we'll spend our summers in Eden Valley and our winters outside," he suggested.

She leaned against him a little wearily and held him tight but did not answer.

Somebody once remarked that nothing can be of surpassing interest for a period greater than nine days. For forty-eight hours following the unexpectedly painful and highly dramatic denouement of his plan to sway public opinion against Nate Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw, Silas Babson suffered acutely, not because he was sorry for what he had done but because the effect had been so wholly unexpected and pregnant of disaster to him. After having arranged to prevent the expose of the whole affair in court with probable penitentiary sentences for a couple of dozen hitherto respectable but mercurial citizens, he began to view life with a less jaundiced eye; and when, at the expiration of the proverbial nine days, he felt morally certain that "that Eden Valley gang," as he now referred to Nate, Lorry and Rube Tenney, was going to cling to its ancient tradition and have nothing whatsoever to do with legal reprisals, all of his old jaunty and optimism returned.

He waited two weeks longer and when at the expiration of that period Henry Rookby, looking faintly reminiscent of a potato sprout put forth in a cellar, returned to his labors, Babson left the business of the bank in Mr. Rookby's hands and proceeded to motor forth among the Forlorn Valleyites and argue them into signing the petition to the county board of supervisors for permission to organize the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district. Having had a surveyor delimit the areas susceptible to surface irrigation, he knew the identity of every farmer whose signature was necessary for his purpose, so a week's time sufficed to acquire the number of signatures legally necessary, and at the next regular meeting of the board of supervisors, of which Babson was a member, he presented the petition in person and addressed his colleagues at some length and with unusual eloquence on the desirability of favorable action by the board.

The chairman of the board rapped with his gavel. "The pros appear to have their innings," he announced smilingly. "Are there any cons to be heard from?"

A man rose in the rear of the hall, walked up to the railing in front of the dais upon which the board sat, and bowed first to the board and then to the audience. "Mr. Chairman—gentlemen: My name is John W. Gagan, a member of the San Francisco law firm of Brooks, Gagan and Brooks, and I appear as the legal representative of the three riparian owners along Eden Valley creek, to wit, Estate of Ranceford Kershaw, deceased, the Bar H Land and Cattle company, and the Mountain Valley Power company, the last two companies, as is generally known, being owned in their entirety by Mr. Nathan Tichenor. On behalf of my clients, I desire formally to protest to this honorable board against the formation of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district and will state my reasons briefly."

Gagan immediately proceeded to do so, painting to his auditors precisely the picture that Nate Tichenor had painted to him, challenging Lon Morton to gainsay one single legal statement. Gagan spoke simply, earnestly, arraying his facts in logical sequence.

When he had finished his address Gagan bowed to the board and started to leave the chamber. There was silence until he was half way down the aisle, then a storm of hisses and boos broke around him. Gagan looked back as he reached the door and saw that Silas Babson was on his feet, his hand raised for silence.

"So you're going to refute my statement, eh?" Gagan called back. "Well, before I depart I'll give you and your deluded followers some very good advice, free. The man who acts as his own attorney has a fool for a client."

Insects Take Huge Toll in Damage to Books, According to Some Librarians

Insects of various kinds take a yearly toll in book destruction that amounts to millions of dollars, says Scientific American. Perhaps the worst offenders in this respect are bookworms, the larvae and an insect known generally as the "drug store beetle," and scientifically as Sitotroga panicea. It seems to have a particular fondness for practically everything, and thrives on arsenic, lead, pepper, and other poisonous and irritating substances.

Once this beetle lays its eggs in a library and the larvae begin feeding, librarians are likely to age overnight, for the larvae feed voraciously on all parts of books whether they be cheap modern editions or priceless ancient volumes. Many poisons have been used, by various methods of application, to defeat this foe of books. Thomas M. Hams of the Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery, San Marino, Calif., in the Library Quarterly, told of several infestations of the larvae in that library and the attempts to destroy them.

Acting on the advice of Dr. Tracy I. Storer of the University of California Agricultural college, hydrocyanic acid gas and several other powerful fumigants were used but with indifferent success. It was then decided to resort to vacuum fumigation. This would give perfect fumigation into every crevice of books, of which large numbers could be fumigated simultaneously. Also, this method would destroy the microscopic eggs of the beetle, as well as the larvae, by rupturing the thin membrane at one end of the egg and permitting entry of the poison gas.

The problem of an ideal fumigant was solved when Dr. Arnold O. Beckman of the California Institute of Technology, discovered that ethylene oxide and carbon dioxide could be combined in a liquid that is neither inflammable nor explosive.

Good Taste Today

BY EMILY POST
Author of
"ETIQUETTE," "THE BLUE BOOK OF SOCIAL USAGE," ETC.
WHAT PRICE SILENCE?

DEAR Mrs. Post: I have been engaged for over a year to a man who has risen above his family, though he is not ashamed of them. He is innately refined and highly respected for himself and his professional achievements. I have not heard a word from his mother, which I can feel embarrasses me terribly. It does not trouble me because I can easily imagine it possible that she cannot perhaps write very well, and does not want to display her lack of education. But whatever her reason, I feel sure that she intends no slight to me. But my mother is making a great "fuss." She takes a hurt attitude and feels mortified about the discourtesy to me, and threatens to take the matter up with my fiancé. Personally, I would rather never hear from his mother than hurt his feelings. So my question is: Couldn't I, without bringing down all the walls of convention upon my mother's head, write to his mother (she lives too far away to go to see her) and perhaps make her feel at ease with me enough to write to me? This is a long story but it does seem cruel to wreck my whole happiness on the keeping of the rule that a man's mother should write a letter to the girl her son is to marry. Are the rules of thumb so important that we should take serious offense at my fiancé's mother without even knowing anything about her real intention—which you have so often written, is the one thing that counts? Actually, I'm not sure that anything counts except my fiancé's love for me and mine for him.

Answer: I think your last sentence answers the question. The only thing I can suggest is that you talk to your fiancé frankly. Surely you ought to be able to ask him whether he would like you to write or whether he prefers that you do nothing. Make as little fuss as possible but say something such as, "Tell me, John, what would you like me to do about your mother; do you think she would like a letter from me? Of course I want to do whatever you want me to."

I can't quite understand why you are not able to say everything in your heart to the man you love. After all, your married happiness must rest on mutual understanding, on trust and confidence. You must not let unshared thoughts build a barrier between you.

COURTESIES AND PROPRIETIES

DEAR Mrs. Post: I am a business woman and live alone. Naturally there are many things that I must do for myself (cleaning, sewing, laundering, etc.) in the evening. There is a neighbor in the apartment house who keeps coming in all the time and stays and stays, and there is apparently nothing I can do about it because she lives on the same floor and, without announcing her intentions, simply walks in. Could you suggest anything to do without having her think I am disagreeable and unfriendly? As a matter of fact, I like her at times when I am not busy, but I cannot stand having work pile upon me for nothing.

Answer: In your place, I am afraid I should be tempted to move! But as this is probably not practical, the only thing I know of to suggest, is to explain to her politely, but quite frankly, that you are sorry you can't sit with her and talk because you must do your washing or sweeping or sewing on the machine or whatever it may be. And then go on doing whatever this is as though she were not there. You would of course have to give her as much of your attention as you can, without interrupting your work. If your manner to her is courteous, she could have no cause to resent your preoccupation. When she finds that she cannot often usurp your attention she will probably prefer to spend most of her evenings with neighbors who have leisure for conversation.

Dear Mrs. Post: Is all white proper mourning in summer for a young wife to wear to her husband's funeral? Should it be worn with or without a veil?

Answer: It is true that all white is deep mourning in the house or in the country. But at the funeral she should certainly wear all black. A white widow's veil on such an occasion, would be very conspicuous and therefore unsuitable.

My dear Mrs. Post: I gave a picture of myself to a friend and framed it attractively before sending it. I have since been told that it is improper ever to frame a picture before giving it. Is this true, and why?

Answer: If you sent the picture to some one whom you knew slightly, nor would a girl send a framed picture of herself to a man to whom she is not engaged—unless, on the contrary, he has been a life-long and completely unromantic friend.

POULTRY

QUIT CONFINEMENT IDEA FOR PULLETS

Raising on Range Is Best, Poultrymen Say.

Raising of pullets in close confinement, a method recently tried by leading Ohio poultry men, is now largely a discarded system. The swing is toward the former method of growing pullets on good range.

Experience has shown that birds raised on range are better feathered and more likely to produce well during the fall and winter months, according to Poultry Pointers, published monthly by the department of poultry husbandry, the Ohio State university.

Another practice urged by the publication calls for the separation of the older birds from the pullets. When old and young birds occupy the same range the hens are a source of infection of coccidiosis, tuberculosis, cholera, and other diseases, as well as for infestations of intestinal parasites.

Rotation of range, one year with another, is recommended. Old range is a source of worm infestation. "Worm pills in the fall are a poor substitute for prevention," states the publication.

Feeders and waterers should be moved every few days to prevent contamination of the range and killing of the grass.

"Poultry men hold the belief," reads the publication, "that if pullets are fed a ration that is too high in protein they will begin laying before they attain a proper weight. As a result, eggs will be small and it will be difficult to maintain production without a fall molt. On the other hand, experiments have shown that if the protein content is limited too much, the pullets will be stunted."

"A very satisfactory method of feeding is to continue the birds on the mash ration on which they are started and supplement with hopper feeding of grain from the time they are six to eight weeks old until maturity. For this purpose it is more desirable to feed a grain mixture than to use corn alone."

Eggs in Storage "Eat" Themselves, Tests Show

An egg deteriorates in storage because it is digesting itself. Work by food chemists of the United States Department of Agriculture shows that trypsin, one of the enzymes present in the pancreatic juice of the human body, is present in egg white and is quite probably responsible for the changes that occur in eggs when they are stored for several months. The function of trypsin in the human body is to digest protein foods. Presumably that is just what it does in the egg white.

For years scientists have suspected that trypsin or some other proteolytic enzyme was responsible for two of the important changes that take place under storage—a weakening of the membrane around the yolk, causing it to break more easily, and an increase in the amount of thin white.

As a check on their conclusions the investigators took a fresh egg, punctured a small hole in the end and injected trypsin into the thick white with a hypodermic needle. Fresh eggs so treated took on in a few hours the characteristics of eggs held in storage for many months. The whites became thin and watery and the yolks became fragile. Within two days it was almost impossible to break the egg without breaking the yolk.

Thin Shelled Eggs

In the summer time eggs often become thin-shelled. When the birds are going out of production there is a tendency for a lack of calcification of the shell. There is nothing to be done in this case except to collect the eggs several times a day, which will save them from being broken in the nest. There is a possibility, however, that the birds are not receiving sufficient calcium. This should be supplied by having oyster shell or ground limestone available for the birds at all times. A careful check of the flock will indicate whether the birds are going out of production or whether there is a deficiency in calcium.

Poultry Squibs

Gather eggs at least twice a day and cool them before packing.

The total chicken population of the country is approximately 400,000,000.

A goose in Downpatrick, Ireland, recently laid an egg weighing one pound.

In the aggregate, 700 eggs are laid every second by the hens in the United States.

Two pounds of wheat have about as much value in the poultry ration as a pound of bran and a pound of flour middlings.

A total of 311 eggs in 50 weeks is the record of a New Hampshire red pullet owned by E. N. Larrabee of Peterborough, N. H.

If hens start feather pulling or egg eating and the flock management seems all right, the best remedy is to turn them on range, even if the weather is not ideal.

Seven Years' Work on World's Smallest Book

Completion of what is described as the smallest printed book in the world, a tiny volume of 28 pages of verses by the Persian poet, Omar Khayyam, was announced recently at Worcester, Mass.

The book, so small that its entire contents would barely cover half of an ordinary postage stamp, contains 46 quatrains of Omar's poetry from a translation made several years ago by a Worcester man, Eben Francis Thompson, a widely known student of Persia.

The tiny book is the work of Philadelphia publishers, who completed it some time ago, after more than seven years' effort. In its final form, bound in leather covers, it is 3-16 by 5-16 of an inch in dimension.

It was printed from copper plates. Seven plates, each containing four pages, were made by photo-engraving. Two quatrains appear on a page. The completed book weighs a third of a carat.

The smallest printed book previously known was a miniature printed in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1900. This volume, which has since become a literary rarity, was also a book of Omar's verses, made up from the fourth edition of Fitzgerald's translation. It was approximately one-eighth of an inch taller than the local book.

Child's First Three Years

Character Then Developed Lasts Through Life; Writer Cites a Case Which Would Seem to Prove Truth of Jesuitical Theory.

By L. F. RAMSEY, National Kindergarten Association.

Ursula has just been to see me. She is a young composer, in the twenties, of whom the world will hear. And when recognition comes, as it surely will, no one will be more thrilled than I, who had a share in developing this musical genius. Please notice that I said, only, "in developing."

In the beginning, it just happened. I used to practice the piano each morning during the time Ursula's Nannie was having breakfast, and from the age of three weeks the baby was brought into the room and lay there while I played. It made no difference whether she was awake or asleep; she never cried. When she was able to sit up I was startled one morning to see her swaying backwards and forwards to the rhythm of the music.

At six months old, she sang her first musical sounds, two notes at the interval of a third, in imitation of the sound made by the swinging of a hanging lamp. At eleven months old, she sang the first phrase of a song, of which I had just played the introduction—a phrase which did not occur in the pianoforte part.

Ursula now began to show strong likes and dislikes. Mendelssohn's "Lied No. 10" in B minor was a favorite and she always chuckled when I played it. Heller's "Studies" appealed to her and Handel's "Harmonious Blacksmith." Before she was a year old, she surprised everybody by snatching at a copy of her brother's "Little Folks" which contained a page of music, shouting gleefully: "Pian, pian!"

A pile of old magazines was brought and she picked out the page of music from each one, with the same cry. She now began to identify me with the instrument, calling out: "Pian, pian," directly she caught sight of me. At twenty-two months, she could sing fifteen songs, such as "Since First I Saw Your Face," and other old English songs.

She never wearied of listening. One Sunday afternoon, I played to her for over three hours, and she sat by the piano in her high chair listening intently and occasionally volunteering a comment: "Dat welly jolly!" or asking, "What dat called?"

One of those popular airs that spread throughout the world like an epidemic was all the rage and I played it over one day to Ursula, before she was two. She was standing by the piano and had never before interrupted me, but before I had sung two lines she protested: "No, no." Then, as I paid no attention, she threw herself face downwards on the floor, sobbing out: "Baby not like!" It was just about this time that her brother had a humming-top that was not in tune and Ursula would howl with her hands to her ears if she heard it. He thought it a joke, but it was no joke to a child with a musical temperament.

At two years old, Ursula recognized any of Beethoven's sonatas and would find the one she wanted in the volume. She began then to recognize similarities, and once when I was playing the "No. 10 Lied," she remarked: "Like 'Pastorale.'" I was playing bars 67-73 and it is noticeable that bars 75-78 of the "Pastorale" are similar.

She now began to recognize the styles of different composers and would remark confidently: "Dat Grieg!" or "Dat Gounod!" Before she was three, she was taken to a pianoforte recital and sat through it, one of the most interested listeners.

The Jesuit who was confident that if he might have the care of a child during its early years he need not fear the influence of any later environment has given us food for thought. Ursula seems to support his theory. She will always choose the companionship of good music. She is a genius, doubtless, because of inheritance, though we know not from what ancestor or ancestors, but her cultured taste—who can doubt that such idealistic discrimination is the result of her early education?

Costs No More to Operate

than an ordinary hand iron!

Don't entertain the false notion that a Simplex Ironer is expensive to operate. As a matter of fact, your electric bill should be no more than what it is now with a hand iron. Although the Simplex uses about three times the volume of current, you can do your ironing in about one-third the time.

So... you might just as well enjoy the convenience of ironing while comfortably seated and having your ironing come out perfectly smooth with a beautiful sheen.

The Simplex is the world's leading ironer. The new 1934 model gives you the finest and most advanced features available. Phone 23 and ask us to send a machine out to your home and let you try it out for a week free of charge.
