TO HOLD PARADE FOR "HENRY'S WEDDING

Three-Act Comedy Is Filled With Surprise and Fun

One of the many high spots in the production, "Henry's Wedding," being sponsored by the Baptist Ladies Society of Tawas City next Wednesday and Thursday, September 5 and 6, at the Community Building, is the big parade Monday morning at 10:00 o'clock. Be sure not to miss it.

Attention should be called to the change in plans concerning the children's show. There will be no special performance as advertised on hand-

The play is a three-act comedy based on the difficulties encountered by Uncle Henry Macey in his attempt to participate in a double wedding. The plot is full of surprise, action and funny situations.

Variety and color are added by the groups-girls' chorus, minstrel scene and business men's specialty.

The following local people are giving time and energy for the production:

Uncle Henry—J. F. Mark. Samantha—Mrs. Iva Mallon. Jack—William Leslie. Ted-E. D. Jacques.

Harris-Frank McCourt. Mary—Helen Misener. Marie—Mildred Deckette. Virginia-Elsie Ahonen.

Austria Center of Main Trade Routes From East

Geographical Position Gives It Undue Importance.

Washington. - "Geographical position gives Austria a place of exaggerated importance in international affairs," says a National Geographic society bulletin. "No less than six nations touch the borders of a country no larger than the state of Maine. Germany, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Italy, and Switzerland, watch every event inside these borders with consuming interest.

Austria was reduced by the treaty of Versailles to a mere shadow of her former self. A vast empire was whittled down to one small state, overloaded with industries, and deprived of most natural resources. Her wheat fields went to Hungary, her coal mines to Czechoslovakia, and her sea ports of Trieste and Fiume to Italy. Today Austria has to import most of her coal and much of her foodstuffs.

Battles Handicaps.

"Against these handicaps she has waged a sturdy battle-increasing agricultural production and developing water power as a substitute for coal The fertile plains north of the Danube have been under intense cultivation, agricultural schools were established, and every possible effort was made to aid and educate the farmer.

"On the other side of the scales are her mines and her industries, always provided that she can find a foreign market for her products. The mountains of Styria, a province in the Southeast, are rich in iron, and the furnaces and steel works of Graz, Leoben and Donawitz supply the country with 99 per cent of the metal used. Carinthian iron was familiar to the Romans, and later greatly in demand for the armor and trappings of knight-

"Austrian salt mines, also old in history, were known to the people of the Bronze age. In addition to upper Styria there are two other important industrial districts-Vorarlberg, famous for embroidery and cotton weaving, and Vienna with its textile mills and machine shops.

"Factories and machinery make a poor introduction to the gay mistress of the Danube. But the Vienna of today is a city of sharp contrasts and puzzling contradictions. The Baroque facades of Hapsburg palaces still line the wide Ringstrasse, but beyond rise the clean, straight walls of a huge municipal apartment block. The Schonbrunn palace, luxurious residence of Maria Theresa, is now an orphanage for workers' children. Ideals of modern socialism mingle with imperial

"For sixteen years Vienna has been a capital without an empire. The sources of her wealth and power are gone, but there is one thing that treaties could not take away, and that is her geographical location. She lies at the crossroads of Europe, where the main trade routes from the Baltic to the Adriatic cross the great east-west highway of the Danube.

Tourist Trade Important.

"Geography destined the city to play en important commercial role, and geography may prove a deciding factor in her future recovery. The Danube continues to carry a heavy burden of shipping. No less than seven great railway lines meet within the city, and it seems likely that Vienna will remain an important center of distribution, despite political upheavals.

"During the last few years Austria has relied increasingly upon tourist trade to balance the budget. More than two-thirds of the country is mountainous, with towering snow peaks, narrow valleys, hidden villages, and deep blue lakes—an ideal vacation land. Austria is famous for her lakes, particularly those of Salzkammergut in the vicinity of Salzburg. There are sports for every season. During the summer, spas and health resorts are crowded, tiny flatboats shoot down the swift waters of the Inn, and energetic mountaineers assault the most forbidding of Alpine peaks."

Russian War Debt Question Still With Us

Conferences Held Looking to Settlement.

By WILLIAM L. BRUCKART

Washington.—The Russian debt question is still with us. Away back in 1917, it will be remembered, the Wilson administration in its conduct of the World war authorized and made enormous loans to foreign governments to aid in the fight against Pan-Germanism. Some of the debts have been funded. Some, like the Russian, have been virtually repudiated. But the Soviet government, after renouncing all obligations of its predecessors in Russia, is now trying to work out some sort of settlement of the obligation, which amounts to three or four hundred million dollars.

Upon recognition of the Soviet by President Roosevelt, plans immediately were made by this government to aid in financing exports to Russia. To accomplish this, the first exportimport bank was established. But along came a bill by Senator Johnson of California which prohibited extension of credit to any foreign government which owed money in this country. That effectively precluded aid by the export-import bank for American exporters who desire to sell to the Soviet. The result was early moves by the Soviet ambassador to Washington looking to a settlement of the old war-time debt so that the effect of the Johnson law would be abrogated, insofar as they were concerned. These conferences are now under way. Little progress has been made, but Secretary Hull of the State department, the American commissioner, is

Evans said that charges that sheep destroyed feed needed for game were false, as they usually ranged on lands unsuited for wild game in any considerable numbers.

Menace to Forest Work London.-Forestry work in Britain

now scarcely is a place in Britain where a forest plantation is safe against rabbits, whereas in Germany one never sees a rabbit, and the only fencing around forest plantations is an occasional one against deer.

Sources of Chocolate

Cacao Beans Are Cleaned by Shuffling Feet in Brazil.

O YOU like hot chocolate

candy? Chocolate cake? Or chocolate ice cream sodas? Then you'll be interested in the news that science is waging a determined fight to save the famous cacao plantations of Trinidad, an island in the West Indies, from a destructive plant disease.

Trinidad is one of the principal sources of the bean which furnishes "the makings" for a hot beverage surpassed in world importance only by coffee and tea, as well as for candies, sweetmeats, etc.

Chocolate was a gift to man's palate from the western hemisphere. Like tobacco, the potato, and a number of other plant products, it was taken back to Europe by explorers soon after Columbus opened the road to the New world, and launched on the way that has led to world markets.

In trade circles today three terms are used: chocolate, cocoa and cacao. The tropical tree which is the source of chocolate is called the cacao. In its leathery, cucumberlike fruit are cacao pods which contain cacao beans. But when the beans are roasted and ground, and much of the fat is pressed out, the remaining brown substance (ground to a dry powder), is cocoa. If the fat is not pressed out, the darker substance is chocolate.

Credit for the manufacture of chocolate from the hidden seed of an unprepossessing fruit belongs to the original inhabitants of Mexico. In 1519, when Hernando Cortez invaded that country, he discovered that the cacao tree was widely cultivated. The natives had concocted a drink called "chocolatl" or "cacahuatl," from which have come the names "chocolate" and "cocoa." Frothing pitchers of chocolate were served by Montezuma when he entertained Cortez.

Long in Use in Mexico.

Students of American native customs have estimated that the drink was in use 1,000 years before the arrival of Europeans. According to Mexican mythology, the seed of the cacao tree was carried from a New world version of the Garden of Eden into Mexico by Quetzalcoatl, God of Air. The fruit, it is related, was a favorite food of the gods. The great Swedish botanist Linnaeus, christened the fruit theobroma cacao, meaning in Greek "Food of the Gods."

Cacao was used as a means of barter and the payment of tribute by the Aztecs and Mayans. A man's wealth was often judged by the number of cacao beans he possessed. In Mexico a good slave could be purchased for

Its highly concentrated food value, low cost of production, and numerous uses, have stimulated cacao cultivation to such an extent that now it is grown in practically all tropical countries. The wet tropical areas of the West African colonies of Great Britain and Portugal, and the South and Central Americas are especially well suited to the cultivation of the trees. The introduction of the cacao tree in Africa has resulted in a remarkable growth of the industry and economic development of the continent. The Gold coast has taken first place away from Brazil in the world's production of cacao. What were once trackless and useless African jungles, inhabited only by savage bushmen and wild animals, today are cacao plantations, operated for the most part by natives. America Largest Consumer.

As an international commodity, the cacao bean has grown in importance to such an extent that the United States alone, in 1933, imported 474,-270,000 pounds, valued at $18,739,000. The United States is by far the largest consumer, cacao ranking sixteenth in value on our list of imports. Germany, Great Britain, and the Netherlands follow in the order named.

For many years the Spaniards of South America and of some of the West Indies monopolized the cacao industry. Chocolate was introduced into Spain by Cortez and his conquistadores about the beginning of the Sixteenth century, but the process of chocolate manufacture was kept a secret for almost 100 years. In 1606 an Italian discovered the method of preparation. Shortly afterwards, monks and travelers spread the news throughout Europe. The Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries found the popularity of the drink steadily increasing. Cocoa houses were established in England, as well as on the continent. Chocolate, however, was a luxury which only the rich could afford, since It sold for as much as $5 a pound. Today good chocolate can be purchased for a few cents a pound, and is consumed in one form or another by millions of people the world over.

Modern methods of cocoa and choco-

Prepared by National Geographic Society, late manufacture differ little from Washington, D. C.—WNU Service. those used by primitive people centuries ago. In Mexico the natives roasted the beans and then ground them between two warm flat stones until a fine paste was obtained. This was sometimes mixed with maize (corn) and flavored with vanilla and spices. The paste was molded into forms desired and allowed to cool. Modern preparation of the commodity is more scientific and thorough, but the principal steps taken are much the same. Cocoa butter is an important byproduct of the cacao bean, which contains 50 per cent fats. The butter, removed by crushing the beans under hydraulic pressure, is extensively used in confectionery, and in pharmaceutical preparations. Almost every household has some commodity that contains this vegetable fat. Cocoa butter is an ingredient of many soaps, pomades, perfumes, ointments, plasters, and cosmetics.

The Gold coast colony in Africa is normally the world's largest producer of cacao. In one recent year the colony shipped 54,000 tons of cacao, valued at $10,000,000, to the United

While the Gold coast no longer puts its trust in gold, cacao has displaced the metal only within the last few years. For 400 years gold was the hope that glittered for white men on the Gold coast. Gold mines built the railroad to Seccondee, for which Takoradi is the port. In 1924 gold shipments reached more than $4,000,000, but the mines seem to be nearing exhaustion. A geological survey of the Gold coast colony in 1915 revealed other minerals which may themselves relegate gold to the background. Manganese and bauxite are important exports. The first is used in steel making and the second for aluminum.

Big Industry in Brazil.

In the state of Bahia in Brazil are about 80,000,000 cacao trees; this fruit has been grown here for about 150 years, and a tiny railway serves the heart of the great cacao region. It hauls more tons of freight per mile than any other railway line in South America. Leaving the coastal plain and entering the foothills, one sees the cacao plantations in long shaded groves. Among Digger, protecting trees the small cacao trees are planted, thus sheltered from sun and wind. Twist off a green fruit, break it open and taste the whitish seeds; the flavor is like watermelon. Barefoot men and women split the pods, empty the seeds on a wide platform, and tread them free of pulp and pith. They call this "Dancing the Cacao."

The seeds are dried by stirring them in a big flat bin. A wide roof, set on wheels, is at hand, to be hastily hauled over the bin if it rains. Turning a dark brown when dried and tasting of unsweetened chocolate when ripe, the beans are packed in bags and sent to Europe and the United States. In 30 years Bahia's export has risen from 150,000 to 1,200,000 bags a year. Brazil drinks very little chocolate, but much coffee.

Near a station named "Lava Pes." or 'Wash Your Feet," the visitor may stop to watch a long file of umbrella ants. Each carries a leaf, as if it were an umbrella. Many ants are up in a tree, biting off bits of leaf and dropping them to other ants waiting on the ground. This line of marching ants is often a mile or more long. The ants carry the leaves to their une derground home, and store them. On the leaves a fungus forms, and this the insects eat.

Farther up the line one crosses a small stream running among cacaocovered hills. Long chutes made of boards run down the hillsides to the water's edge. Down these chutes natives slide fresh cacao beans, which empty into waiting dugout canoes, Although cacao has been grown here for so long, the methods of harvesting it are still primitive, for human labor is cheap.

White men find life here hard, because of so many insects and malaria. Bugs are a plague: horned tumble-bugs more than seven inches long-larger than many kinds of birds, snails weighing half a pound, and the fer de lance and other bad snakes.

Legend of the Passion Flower The legend of the passion flower follows: The leaf symbolizes the spear; the five anthers, the five wounds; the tendrils, the cords or whips; the column of the ovary, the pillar of the Cross; the stamens, the hammers; the three styles, the three nails; the fleshy threads within the flower, the crown of thorns; the calyx, the glory or nimbus; the white tint, purity; and the blue tint, heaven.

One of the greatest aids has been work itself; the patient accomplishing some real physical work such as farming or carpentry work.

Of still greater help, has been sports. The patient is encouraged to take part in games, learn to look for his turn to bat, and to go out in the field 'en it is his turn to do so.

You can readily see that if he finds he can do things, that he is treated respect, he is going to be "taken out of himself," and become one of the crowd, one of the community, instead of being odd or out of things.

He really hasn't the time to be dreaming about himself if he is mixing with others at play, work or other occupation.

The Margin of Safety in Your Body

ONE of the subjects the engineer must study is "strength of materials" so that if he builds a building or bridge he knows just what is needed to support that building or bridge when it is carrying its heaviest load.

In order to make the structure safe. he makes it stronger than is necessary extra strength is spoken of as the "margin of safety." What about that body of yours? Is it built with this margin of safety, so that if undue stress or strain is put in competition. Restaurants, hotels, upon it, it will be able to withstand it? summer resorts, and others might be one who has given the body even a slight amount of study knows that practically all parts of the body from the bones outward to the skin, have a margin of safety surpassing anything designed by man.

You need food and water every day, yet men have done without food for 40 days, and water for 7 to 10 days, because the fat on the body and the water in and among the tissues have been able to maintain life.

The heart beats 72 times to the minute, but it can, if necessary, beat twice as fast and pump twice as much blood as it normally does.

Nature has provided you with two eyes, two ears, two kidneys, two lungs, and in many cases two glands for various purposes, yet even when there are two organs or glands it is possible to have all of one and part of another destroyed and yet the body will continue to do its work.

Research laboratory physicians have been able to show that four-fifths of the pancreas can be destroyed and the remaining one-fifth will manufacture the insulin needed by the body. Similarly with the liver. Despite all its different jobs in the system-breaking up fats, storing sugar, removing poisons from the blood, manufacturing bile, helping to color the blood-threequarters of the liver may be destroyed and yet it will carry on all the above

The stomach can be entirely removed, half the small intestine and nearly all of the large intestine removed without damage to the body.

In addition to this your body can actually repair itself when something is injured or broken down. All it needs is time.

WNU Service. The decline in egg production during the hot summer months can be partially or wholly offset if the flock is given the right kind of care.

The main factors to observe are: checking for mites and lice, proper ventilation of laying houses, adequate shade, full feeding, an ample supply of fresh water, and rigid culling. Mites inhabit the laying house and are usually found on perch poles. They attack birds at night and return to secluded spots in the day. A thorough spraying of the house with carbolineum or a mixture of old cylinder oil and kerosene is recommended. Lice stay on the birds all the time. Nicotine sulphate painted on the perch poles will drive lice away from the birds. Or the individual birds may be dusted with sodium fluoride or a similar preparation or dipped into solution of one ounce of sodium fluoride to one gallon of water. The treatments should be repeated every ten days if necessary. The houses should be well ventilated, but without drafts. Shade is a necessity, since the temperature of the birds influences their productivity. Sunflowers grown around poultry houses or brush arbors provide good

The body weight of birds should be watched closely. Excessive fat or leanness should be avoided by decreasing or increasing the amount of fattening feed as necessary. The feeding of a moist mash at noon will stimulate the production of birds which do not lay well while at the proper weight. Two and a half pounds of dry mash mixed with water or milk is enough for 100 birds.

Growing Mash to Turkeys, Poultry Experts' Advice

The Michigan State College poultry department acrises feeding a good growing mash to turkeys. One which can be mixed at home is made up of twenty pounds coarse ground yellow corn, seventeen pounds fine ground oats, ten pounds bran, ten pounds flour middlings, five pounds alfalfa meal, fourteen pounds meat scraps, ten pounds dried milk, ten pounds soybean meal, two pounds calcium carbonate, one pound salt and one pound cod-liver oil. Scratch grain, equal parts cracked corn and wheat, is fed in addition to the mash after the birds are six weeks old.

The feed should be kept in hoppers where the birds can get it at all times. The hoppers should be moved often enough to keep them on clean ground.

The Michigan State college brings up a further important consideration for the man raising a few turkeys but interested in making them pay out the best possible. Gluten Meal for Poultry

Results of experiments at Cornell university indicate that corn gluten meal may be used to a considerable extent in poultry feeds, provided it is properly combined with other feeds One-half the protein requirements of laying hens may well be made up of corn gluten feed, with the other half supplied by meat scrap. Hens fed in this way laid just as heavily as hens fed on rations containing meat scrap as the only source of protein. For growing chicks, gluten feed gave good results when combined with wheat middlings and wheat bran, along with 10 per cent dried skimmilk. If meat scrap were used, along with the gluten feed, the per cent of skimmilk could be reduced to 7.5. The chicks made good growth on rations of both

PETER DISCOVERS LINNET

IT DIDN'T take Peter Rabbit long to find the sweet singer whose happy trills had caught his attention. He spied him sitting on the tip-top of a fir tree in Farmer Brown's yard. Peter didn't dare go over there for already it was broad daylight. But he didn't have to, for the sweet singer flew over in the Old Orchard and alighted just over Peter's head. "Hello. Peter!" he cried.

"Hello, Linnet!" cried Peter. "I was wondering who it could be who was singing like that. I ought to have known, but you see it is so long since I've heard you sing that I couldn't remember your song. I'm so glad you came over here for I'm just dying to talk to somebody."

Linnet the Purple Finch, for this is who it was, laughed right out. "I see you're still the same old Peter," said he. "I suppose you're just as full of curiosity as ever, and just as full of questions. Well, here I am, so what shall we talk about"

"You," replied Peter promptly. "Lately I've found out so many surprising things about my feathered friends that I want to know more. I'm trying to get it straight in my head who is related to who, and I've found out some things which have begun to make me feel that I know very little about my feathered neighbors. It's getting so that I don't even dare guess who a person's relatives are. If you please, Linnet, what family do you belong to?" Linnet flew down a little nearer to Peter. "Look me over, Peter," said he with twinkling eyes. "Look me over and see if you can't tell for yourself."

Peter stared solemnly at Linnet. He saw a bird of sparrow size whose entire body was a rose red, brightest on the head, darkest on the back, and palest on the breast. Underneath he was whitish. His wings and tail were brownish, the outer parts of the feathers edged with rose red. His bill was short and stout. Before Peter

In High Gear When President Travels

Secret Service Must Anticipate Every Danger.

Washington .- In the face of world violence, secret service men are taking no chances in protecting the President from cranks and fanatics. Their authority is greater than that of admirals, generals and contributors to campaign funds, according to Herbert Corey and George Holmes, two Washington political writers, who describe, in the Cosmopolitan, each step these officers take to safeguard the Pres-

When the President is in the White House, they explain, the secret service system works so smoothly it is automatic; when he leaves the White House, the men go into high gear; and when he leaves Washington on a long trip, an advance campaign that anticipates every possible danger is mapped out by Dick Jervis, chief of the White House detail.

Take Every Precaution.

"When Jervis gets the news that a Presidential tour is in contemplation," they state, "he calls in Col. Ed Starling, a rawboned Kentuckian, handy with a gun. Starling is given a schedule of the route with the stops and times tentatively defined. He then gets in touch with the police chief in each city and tells him when and where the President will be, and arrangements are made.

*Sometimes two hundred or three hundred policemen are needed at the station. Perhaps more. A lane is policed from the door of the private car to the automobile waiting with its engine running. Every man in every one of the cars that are to follow has been inspected and passed by Starling before he gets his green

We are emerging from the worst depression in the history of our country. Many who were not able to weather the storm sought refuge in self-pity, which in some cases led to self-destruction. Self-pity always seeks to place the blame on some other person or condition, and not upon one's own judgment. When a person builds a house he should remember that storms blow hard and fire destroys. If he be a wise builder he will take precautions and have lightning rods placed on the roof of his house and will seek protection against fire and storms through adequate insurance. If he does this he will be secured against the ravages of the elements, if he fails so to do, whose fault is it if the elements play havoc with his building? He certainly cannot justly place the blame upon anybody but himself.

A storm in the economic world struck hard upon the financial structures many persons set up. Proper protection in some cases speeded recovery; where this protection was absent the inevitable was the result. No house built upon sand can withstand the havoc of storms.

While self-pity dominates the minds of some persons, the contrary attitude is discovered in other experiences. A man who suffered a very heavy loss financially, remarked that perhaps it was worth it, because he discovered the value of his own health, and who his friends were. That man had something left to build on. When the finer resources of the mind and soul are burned out by worry and self-pity, nothing remains upon which another structure can be built. The only enduring substance upon which any permanent recovery is possible lies within. @. Western Newspaper Union.

TAPESTRIES are unexcelled for fascinating wall decorations. They vie with rare paintings which alone are their peers. In fact some of the finest painters made designs for tapestries. Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, Michel Angelo, among the very early artists and Rubens, Van Dyke and Durer also made the drawings, or cartoons as they are called, for famous tapestries. Tapestries are considered woven textiles but the weaving is a distinct and different type from regular weaving, even hand weaving as it is known today. It is, of course, woven by hand, but the colors are either introduced on tiny separate bobbins or by means of a sort of threaded needle passed over, under and about warp threads. Whichever way the colors are introduced by hand, they are woven into the gorgeous pictorial patterns in the same way. An Embroidered Tapestry.

It is interesting to note that one of the most famous of all tapestries is not actually a tapestry in the strictest sense, but is an embroidered picture. It was Queen Mathllda of England who told the story of her famous husband William the Conqueror's exploits not with her pen but with her needle. There are people, ships, animals, trees, earth, and sea, all wrought in colors which today are a feast to the eye just to look upon. The foundation is fine linen unornamented except in the embroidered portions, which tell the story which is real history. Unlike other tapestries which are of large proportions the linen of the Bayeaux tapestry is only some 24 Inches wide. While its width is slight, its length makes up for it, being 227 feet. The background is a wonderful bit of weaving. The embroidery is the most stupendous undertaking of all ages, and shows marvelously against the unworked foundation.

It is this embroidered tapestry which lends sanction to the thought of modern tapestry embroideries. These can be of rare beauty provided the worker has the ingenuity to conceive of handsome pictorial effects worthy of careful embroidery, and then uses embroidery materials of artistic tones | ties.

ODD THINGS AND NEW-By Lame Bode

Important to Be Fair to Friends

Moments of Irritability Will Be Overlooked by the Wise.

Some of the most delicate adjustments in life come in the changes which occur in friendships. No two friendships are exactly alike, because no two people are, and it is equally true that no single friendship which outlasts years remains unchanged throughout its course.

It is according to the amount of loyalty and adaptability that one possesses how many enduring friendships one may enjoy. It is all too frequently the case that an enthusiastic and spontaneous attachment becomes brittle and breaks at the first occasion which requires any patience in understanding, or leniency in judging. Frequently such adverse snap judgment which does not wait upon events is really misjudgment. How many people blame themselves, too late, for not waiting long enough to really learn what motives were true!

A friendship which is easily suspicious is no true friendship. It is much better to give a person a "break" on the lenient side than to do the opposite when offense has been given by the other. A tolerant and suspended judgment is the attribute of most true friends. Life does not usually wait a great while to prove which persons of those we know are qualified for friendsh. and which are to be held with the more aloof touch of acquaintances.

A strong element of jealousy or an overbearing curiosity about one's personal affairs are qualities that help separate one's acquaintances from one's friends. Also, if an acquaintance has a habit of taking offense without cause, better settle the matter at once and leave that supposed friend in the category of acquaintances.

If, however, a long-enjoyed friendship seems to be going on the rocks through one of the persons taking offense easily, it is not taking too much of a chance to consider that overwork or some nervous strain. has caused a thoroughly nice friend to become temporarily irritable. Responding in kind or demoting the friend to an acq aintance is unfair under these conditions. Surely when friends have enjoyed each other's company for years it is probable that an upset should be considered of no permanent importance.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued -16-

"I do. But the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district will not go bust, and with the increased fertility and, consequently, the doubling in value of the lands and their increased earning power, this bank's security will be ample and the mortgages and deeds of trust will be paid. If not, they can be foreclosed and the bank can take over the lands, subject, of course, to the bond issue against them. And they can then be sold very readily. I have no apprehensions on that score and if you are trying to frighten me you are not making a very successful job of it."

Nate Tichenor pointed through the open door of the bank to a lot across the street where a gang of workmen were engaged erecting a one-story building of cream brick. "That lot and building are mine," Tichenor informed the banker lightly. "I'm going to start a bank there with a million dollars capital."

"You'll have to prove a genuine need for another bank and you'll have to prove that your bank has some sound hopes for success. And you cannot do that while the Bank of Valley Center continues to function as at present.'

"Well, I'll be all set, ready to take over the wreck of your bank, Babson. I'm patient. I can wait."

As Tichenor walked out, Babson turned to Henry Rookby. "Henry, that fellow's so rattled he doesn't know what to do. He'd like to start an injunction suit against the district, but he's not at all certain he can win. Henry, he's actually erecting a bank building across the street, hoping to scare me into a compromise to save his face. Can you beat him?

"He's small change," Mr. Rookby replied disdainfully. "Forget him."

But Mr. Rookby's airy advice failed to bring the measure of comfort for which Babson yearned. Even his own assurances presently failed him. Nothing in life is more distressing than uncertainty, and the uncertainty as to whether Nate Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw would apply for an injunction restraining the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district from diverting water from Eden Valley creek was a profound uncertainty, indeed. Babson wondered whether Tichenor was really depressed over the situation, really disinclined

That night Silas Babson went home with a violent headache. He did not sleep well, either, and the following hives, and their long journey was night he was very weary, indeed. The necessary because there had been a third night he was still sleepless and failure of blossom in their neighbor- then his old enemy insomnia claimed

Nor was a single dollar of Tichenor money expended in Valley Center for anything that could be purchased in Gold Run.

The irrigation district's engineer reported to Babson that before the first of April Lake Babson would be filled to the top of its flood-gates. Babson was jubilant. Under his urging, promulgated in the Forlorn Valley Citizen, thousands of acres of land had been prepared for alfalfa the preceding fall. They had been seeded just prior to the first rains, and succeeding rains at brief intervals had kept the new crops growing steadily and had deposited in the lands sufficient moisture to last until the spring rains ceased and it would be necessary to employ surface irrigation to develop the first crop about the first of June. Babson decided therefore, to open the Lake Babson headgates for the first time on May first and to make the occasion one of general rejoicing; the descent, for the first time upon Forlorn Valley of the life-giving waters of Eden Valley creek should be an epic event.

The prospect filled him with delight, thrilled him to an unwonted generosity. He owned rather a lovely farm on the western edge of the district, and through this far the main canal had been dug, with the laterals leading from it down a gentle slope to the east and taking advantage of every contour. There was a grove of Valparaiso live oaks growing on this farm close to the edge of the main canal and here Babson decided to hold a barbecue for his people.

A dramatic frenzy gradually seized May-day, immemorially dedihim. cated to festivals, was to be his day of triumph, a day that should repay him for his years of labor, and selfsacrifice for the public weal. Of course, as president of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, his right to be the orator of the day could not be gainsaid and nobody tried to gainsay it. He dictated his speech to his secretary, edited it, revised it, labored lovingly over it, and when it was complete he memorized it and delivered it, with appropriate gestures, to Henry Rookby after the bank/had closed for the day. Meanwhile he had had an electrical contrivance installed at the reservoir headgates, and a wire led eight miles down country to connect with a push-button on the speakers' stand at the barbecue grounds. He had the district's engineer figure approximately how long it would require the water to flow from the headgates to the grove, for he planned, at the moment of mounting the platform to press his push-button, which would raise the headgates at the reservoir and release the water. Then at a certain dramatic point in his oration the water would make its dramatic appearance. Henry Rookby was to discover its approach and interrupt Babson with shrill and appropriate cries of amazement and joy.

Babson had a motion-picture camera man from a news reel agency engaged to photograph the head of the vast brown flood as it rolled down the dry forty-foot main canal, bank-deep. He sent out engraved invitations to the great of the county and plastered the barns and fences of Forlorn Valley with notices of the great event and a cordial invitation to attend-everything free. At the last moment he forgot his early religious training and erected a dance platform. He decorated everything liberally with red, white and blue bunting and the American flag, and resurrected the striped trousers, Prince Albert coat, and top hat he had once been forced to purchase-or look ridiculous when acting as pall-bearer to a defunct congressman from his district.

He was so happy he elected to forget that Joe Brainerd had once punched him several times on the nose, and sent over to the office of

of his plans, for he was ever one who loved publicity. Promptly Brainerd carried this news to Eden Valley, where Nate Tichenor's eyes glowed strangely. He set off immediately for the county seat.

The great day arrived, and as Babson mounted the speakers' platform and gazed out over the hundreds of happy faces before him-as the Gold Run Silver Cornet band broke into "Hail, the Conquering Hero Comes!" and three cheers and a vigorous tiger burst from the audience, Babson turned to Congressman Beatty, whose valiant work in Washington had aided to tap Eden Valley creek and secure permission to run the diversion canal through the public domain, and remarked that he was convinced at last that he had not lived in vain.

Bowing to the audience, he removed his shiny top hat and laid it on a small pine table before him. He gazed lovingly at the magic push-button, his hand reached lingeringly out to press it, all unseen by his auditors (happily, he had taken the precaution so to place his hat that the pressing of the button would not be observed) when a rude interruption occurred.

A commanding voice cried sharply, "Stop that, Babson!" and Babson stayed his hand to glance up angrily. Nate Tichenor stepped up on the platform; behind him came his wife and Rube Tenney, and a silence that was almost thunderous settled over the grove as it was observed that all three were wearing two six-shooters each. Straight to Babson's side Tithenor strode; he delivered upon the Babson shoulder a gentle accolade with a bluebacked, legal-looking document and then thrust it into Babson's hand, the while he said so all might hear:

"This is a temporary injunction from the judge of the Superior court of this county, restraining the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, its officers, members, employees and agents, from diverting the waters of Eden Valley creek to Forlorn Valley, and ordering the district to show cause, within ten days, why this injunction should not be made permanent. I warn you, Silas Babson, that if you press that button you will be in contempt of court." There was not a sound. For fully

two minutes the three on the platform

said: "Eat, drink and be merry, for | tomorrow you'll be broke." His wife put her arm through his and together they descended the two short steps to the audience, while Mr. Tenney, grinning evilly, trudged stolidly in the rear. Down through the center aisle they passed to an automobile waiting outside the grove; they entered and rolled away, as Silas Babson was reading aloud to his people the damnable legal document that had changed his hour of triumph into one of despair. With difficulty controlling his voice he

"Mr. Tichenor has a habit of dramatizing himself, and while he has, of course, robbed this historic moment of certain high lights I had provided for your entertainment, still his rude and ungenerous interruption need cast no shadow o'er us. We are here to enjoy ourselves and we shall do so." And he proceeded to deliver his speech. Congressman Conrad Beatty followed him and assured his hearers that they had nothing to fear for the futuretake his word for that. Henry Rook by, invaluable in desperate moments had the band play whenever the speakers paused for breath or a drink of water, and little by little the gloom of Nate Tichenor's dramatic visitation was dispelled and the party took on most of the aspects of a genuine jollifi-

announced:

In Nate Tichenor's latest move Silas Babson and his fellow directors read only a last-minute effort, inspired solely by malice, to embarrass the district with a lawsuit that would drag through the summer and thus for another year deprive the valley of water. To thwart this, therefore, it was imperative that the district employ an imposing array of legal talent immediately and have Tichenor's suit to obtain a permanent injunction go to trial without delay. Four days later both sides had finished with their witnesses, both legal batteries had fired their last broadsides, and his honor looked gravely over the top of his desk at the belligerents.

"Since this case went to trial," he announced, "the Supreme court of the state of California has rendered a unanimous decision in an appeal from a decision rendered by the Superior court in a case similar to this. Due to the recent decision of the Supreme court, an advance copy of which has only this morning reached me, I find myself in the embarrassing position of having to reverse my previous view as to the constitutionality of Paragraph 534 of the Code of Civil Procedure, upon which the defendant corporation has based its argument in the issue at trial.

"In general, the Supreme court of the state of California holds that there is no such thing as flood, storm or freshet waters in a stream, but merely a seasonal rise and fall of the stream and that all waters therein, not merely the so-called summer or normal flow, are riparian to the bed thereof, and may not be diverted from such riparian lands for the use and benefit of a non-riparian owner. The Supreme court holds that all of the waters of said river (which, of course, applies to all streams throughout the state) are an inalienable and vested right of the owners of the lands riparian thereto.

"This court has no alternative but to award to the plaintiff the permanent injunction prayed for, restraining forever the defendant public service corporation, Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, from diverting any of the waters of Eden Valley creek. This court also assesses the costs of this action to the defendants, as prayed for in the complaint, and it is so ordered. At a later date the court will issue a formal written decision, but the court can see no reason for refraining from rendering an informal decision at this time and referring the defendant corporation to its sole and inalienable right at law-the right to acquire the lands of the Bar H Land and Cattle company et al. through condemnation suit or purchase by private treaty. Court is dismissed!"

There was nothing else for Silas Babson to do save weep-and he did. He laid his tired head on the counsel table and sobbed as if his heart must break. "Don't take it so hard, Mr. Babson," his counsel continued. "You have one more arrow in your quiver. The district can still condemn Eden Valley and acquire its water rights."

"Of course it can." Nate Tichenor was speaking from the other side of the counsel table. "But Eden Valley's fertile acreage far exceeds that of Forlorn Valley, and it is infinitely more valuable. You cannot have Eden Valley for less than two million dollars and the lands in the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district are already mortgaged to the limit."

Babson, red-eyed, gazed at him with something of the malevolence of a trapped mink. "You've ruined Forlorn Valley." he quavered. "You realize that, don't you?"

"I haven't given any thought to Forlorn Valley," Nate replied coldly. 'Just now I'm reveling in the joy that comes of the knowledge I have ruined you. All I have to do to save Forlorn Valley is to press a button.

"For God's sake, Mr. Tichenor, do it," Babson pleaded. "All these poor people-"

"Who refused to permit me to be kind to them and save them from ruin," Tichenor Interrupted harshly, "All these poor people who followed their false leader blindly and stupidly, who refused to believe Lorry Kershaw and I had hearts in our breasts! All these poor people who hooted at me, cried me down, smashed my body, and smeared me with road oil and feathers! All these poor people who rejoiced in reviling my wife and me, in reciting our sorry family history!" "Then." said Babson, aghast, "you on Forlorn Valley?" "The minute you default on the payment of the interest, Babson." "And then-you'll-press the but-intend to foreclose the deed of trust ton?" "Naturally. I'll have to-to make my investment sweet. Just now it's a wee bit sour."

Silas Babson gave vent to a moaning little cry, like a hurt animal; he slid softly out of his chair to the floor. He had fainted.

A group of farmers seated in the rear of the courtroom now got up quietly and stalked out. Tichenor followed them to the door and stood watching them. As if acting under the stimulus of a common purpose they walked to their shabby automobiles parked along the curb and drove out of town at a high rate of speed,

When Babson let himself in the side door of the Bank of Valley Center about four o'clock that afternoon Henry Rookby's white face peered out at him from the cashier's cage where Rookby was balancing his cash.

"We got to do something an' do it quick," Rookby quavered. "I've had a run on the bank since noon. What are we going to do tomorrow if this run continues, Mr. Babson. We haven't more than twenty thousand dollars in the vault now."

"Don't open the bank tomorrow if you see a crowd in front waiting. Paste a notice in the window that this bank has closed temporarily and will reopen as soon as I have returned from San Francisco with cash to meet all demands for withdrawals. Got to have an excuse to keep 'em quiet." TO BE CONTINUED.

Boiler of Ill-Fated Tug Erie Belle Salvaged From Lake After Fifty Years

50 years ago, when the captain of the tug Erie Belle vowed, with a mighty oath, to pull the schooner Carter off the rock-bound shore south of Kincardine, or blow up his tug in the attempt, were awakened when the boiler of the ill-fated Erie Belle was hauled from the lake bottom to the shore, says a Kincardine (Ontario) writer in the Detroit Free Press.

Charles Macpherson, who undertook the prodigious task of drawing the boiler from its resting place, proposes to have it placed in Victoria Park as a relic of the days when Kincardine was a noted lake port. Of course, the boiler, rusted and corroded, will be painted and on it will be placed a plaque telling the story of the illfated tug, proving the old adage that truth is stranger than fiction.

Of half-inch steel, 10 feet in height, with copper flues, only one of which remains to show that the boiler was once a part of the Erie Belle, made difficult the task of drawing the steel hulk from its resting place in two feet of mud and rock, 150 yards from the shore. Several abortive attempts were made before the boiler could be dragged to shore. As if reluctant to waited grimly, then Nate Tichenor leave the scene of the catastrophe in southern outskirts of the negro village.

Vivid recollections of a summer day | which seven men went to their deatha, the boiler snapped chains which were placed around it.

Just half a century ago the Erie Belle blew up from an overtaxed boiler, which was too small to pull the huge schooner from the rocks. With pieces of machinery and woodwork, the crew and spectators who were aboard the little tug were blown into the air by the mighty blast.

Find Ancient Indian City The existence of an ancient Indian city where the African negro settlement of La Labrada now stands, on the Pacific coastal plain of Guerrero, is reported by archeologists, Science Service says. In the official list of known pre-Spanish sites in Mexico, La Labrada has not been featured, although beautiful carved stones there have been known. According to local Mexican history, Indians of Guerrero towns on the coast frequently fled to the mountains when the negroes first came as slaves from Africa, because these blacks stole their women. The Indian remains of La Labrada may represent a black settlement on such an abandoned native site. The center of the ancient Indian city was apparently a long terrace. This rises on the

Delicacies for the Winter Menu

Preserving Season at Hand; Abundant Supply of Cheap Fruit.

Midsummer is a time looked forward to by the thrifty housewife, for with it comes the pleasant task of canning and preserving for the family's winter need of jams, jellies and preserves.

Market reports indicate a plentiful supply of pears, peaches, grapes and other delicious fruits.

Here are two tested and economical recipes:

Concord Grape Jelly. 4 cups (2 lbs.) juice ½ bottle of fruit pectin 71/2 cups (31/4 lbs.) sugar

To prepare juice, stem about three pounds fully ripe grapes and crush thoroughly. Add one-half cup water, bring to a boil, cover, and simmer ten minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. (If malagas or other tight-skinned grapes are used, the juice of one emon should be added to prepared Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard one-half minute Remove from fire, skim, pour quick ly. Paraffin hot jelly at once, Makes about 11 glasses (six fluid ounces

Ginger Pear Jam.

(Using crystallized ginger)
4 cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit
½ to 1 cup diced crystallized ginger
1 bottle fruit pectin
7½ cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar

To prepare fruit, peel, core and crush completely or grind about three pounds fully ripe pears. Dice about one-half pound crystallized

Measure sugar and prepared fruit, tightly packed, into large kettle. Add ginger, mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard one minute. Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just five minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 11 glasses (six fluid ounces each). This product may take a week to reach a

Gentle Deer a Nuisance

A night watchman for the flowers sounds like a simple enough job, but in Jasper park, Canada, the man who holds the job has to keep hopping. The flowers cultivated in profusion about the lodge would disappear overnight if a special watchman were not detailed to chase the deer away.

The herds of deer seem to dote on asters and pansies, but will munch at any bloom in season except chrysanthemums. If they don't like the flavor of a particular flower they tear it out anyway, just to register disapproval.

Which explains why people visiting the Canadian national park this summer were startled by the form of a panting guard dashing through the gardens in the moonlight after the not-so-gentle deer.

Earthquake Prophet Earthquakes give no warning of their approach, and the seismograph gives only an accurate record of the intensity and duration of the shock, But a Japanese professor, the late T. Omari, carried out a great deal of research work on a method that has now been perfected. He took hundreds of shock measurements at egular intervals in areas where the horizontal and vertical stresses due to earthquakes bad accumulated for years. By this method he was able to predict the exact time and location of the next shock. Shortly before his death he warned a fishing community that their village would be wiped out within a few days. The place was evacuated and the shock arrived and demolished the place to the minute. Another method is to watch the movements of the Japanese catfish. When these are stirred into activity and rise to the surface, a serious earthquake is imminent .--Tit-Bits Magazine.
