CANDIDATES ARE READY FOR PRIMARY RACE

Both Major Parties In Isoco County Have Well Filled Tickets In Field

Tuesday, September 11, the date of the primary elections in Michigan, will find both of Isoco county's major parties, the Democratic and Republican, ready for the biennial battle with well filled tickets. The contest will probably be keen, as both ballots contain the names of popular and well known citizens contesting for national, state and county offices.

In both parties are a number of candidates who, because of having no opposition within their party, are automatically nominated to their respective offices. The names of these candidates and of their offices, therefore, will not appear on the primary election ballots. For the information of our readers, however, we list them here.

Republican: U. S. Representative—Roy O. Woodruff; U. S. Senator—Arthur H. Vandenburg; Prosecuting Attorney—John A. Stewart; Drain Commissioner—Robert Arn; County Surveyor—John W. Applin; Circuit Court Commissioner—Nicholas C. Harting.

Democratic: Representative to State Legislature—H. Eugene Hanson; County Clerk—Charles A. Bigelow; Treasurer—Maude Jordan; Register of Deeds—Anthony B. Schneider; Drain Commissioner—Frank Dorsey; Coroner—E. D. Jacques; County Road Commissioner—Frank Bissonette; Prosecuting Attorney—T. G. Sternberg.

Following are the candidates for nomination whose names will appear on the Republican and Democratic ballots:

Republican—State officers: Governor—Orla A. Bailey, Frank D. Fitzgerald, Alexander J. Groesbeck, and John W. Smith; Lieutenant Governor—Ernest T. Conlon, Fred R. Ming, and Thomas Read; State Senator, 28th district—Ben Carpenter and Ben N. Mercer; State Representative—Fred C. Holbeck and James MacGillivray. County officers: Sheriff—Edward L. Golbach, Jay A. Collins, Clarence Fowler, George A. Hosbach, A. P. Krueger, John MacIntyre, John Moran, Felix Stapanian, and Edgar C. Youngs; County Clerk—R. Deneen Brown, Frank E. Dease, Russell H. McKenzie, and John A. Myles; Treasurer—W. H. Grant, Allan A. McLean, and Grace Miller; Register of Deeds—Warren Phillips and Frank F. Taylor; Road Commissioner—Frank Brown, David Cooper, and William J. Grant.

Democratic—State officers: Governor—William A. Comstock, Arthur J. Lacy, and John K. Stack, Jr.; Lieutenant Governor—John T. Bailey, Patrick H. Kane, and Allen E. Stebbins; National: U. S. Senator—Claude S. Carney, Alva M. Cummins, Frank A. Picard, and Ray D. Schneider; Representative, 10th District—Mrs. Woodbridge N. Ferris, Hubert J. Gaffney, William J. Kelly, and Otto C. Schroeder. County officers: Sheriff—Roy Charters and Richard E. Look.

Emanuel's Will Observe Mission Festival Sunday

Emanuel Lutheran church of Tawas City will observe its annual Mission Festival next Sunday, September 9. Two separate services will be held. The German services will begin at 10:00 a. m. Rev. F. M. Axness from Lansing, vice-president of the Michigan District of the Wisconsin Synod, will deliver the sermon. An English service will be held in the evening at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Arnold Wilkening, Unionville, of the Missouri Synod, will deliver the English sermon. The choir of Emanuel church will render appropriate hymns at both services.

Everyone in general is invited to attend these services.

AuGres-Gladwin Title Contest Is Rained Out

The final of a three-game series between AuGres and Gladwin to decide the championship of the North-Eastern Michigan League for 1934 which was scheduled for last Sunday at Standish was called off on account of rain. The game will be played next Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock on the Standish diamond.

With each team having won one game in the series, AuGres taking the first by a score of 9 to 4 and Gladwin the second, 4-2, the two squads will be out in full force next Sunday and will make every effort to win this final contest and thereby gain possession of the flag for this year. A large attendance is expected at the game.

Bi-Partisan Election Board Is Declared Constitutional

The Ruff Election Law, which provides for bi-partisan election boards, has been declared constitutional by the State Supreme court.

The court this week issued an order in the case of W. F. Connolly, Andrew Baird and Ferris Fitch, against the city of Detroit, asking a writ of mandamus to compel its election commission to comply with the law.

The mandamus issued and the court will file a written opinion later. Attorney General Patrick H. O'Brien has notified all state election commissioners that they must follow the law.

EMILIE LORING
Author of "Hilltops Clear"

DAUGHTER of George M. Baker, who was associated with a great publishing house and whose plays are still being acted all over the English-speaking world, and granddaughter of Albert Baker, one of the founders of the newspaper which is now the Boston Herald, Mrs. Loring, whose latest story is to appear serially in this paper, had the background which led her naturally into a literary career, but her entry into the field of fiction writing was delayed by the fact that her family claimed her first attention.

Mrs. Loring is the wife of Victor J. Loring, a Boston lawyer, whose far-flung interests in civic, church and legal affairs she credits with having done much to broaden her outlook.

"When our sons fared forth to 'prep school,' she said, in response to an inquiry regarding her career as a writer, 'my husband vigorously fanned a spark of literary ambition to which I confessed. For a year I wrote a book-letter for a Boston paper. I tried an article and, lo, it hit the bull's eye. Encouraged, I essayed a short story. It was accepted on its forty-fifth trip. I believed in that story, and so, evidently, did one other person in this great U. S. A. There followed other stories and articles and then came my first serial, 'The Key to Many Doors.'"

Since the appearance of this first serial, Mrs. Loring has written a number of other stories that have won her an established place among present-day authors. "Hilltops Clear" is in her best vein and presents a delightful combination of romance and adventure. Do not miss the opening chapters.

Mrs. David M. Small

Mrs. Christena Small of East Tawas died Friday, August 31, at the Mercy hospital, Bay City, after an illness of several weeks. The cause of death was given as a weakened condition due to an operation.

Christena Marguerite Oles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Oles of Crosswell, Michigan, was born July 3, 1893. She was an active member of the O. E. S., the Rebekahs, and the Women's Auxiliary, American Legion.

Mrs. Small is survived by her husband, David M. Small, three children, Robert, Owen and Alice, all of East Tawas; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Oles of Crosswell; and three brothers, George Oles of Detroit, John Oles, Jr., of Pointe Aux Barques, and Lewis Oles of Crosswell.

Funeral services were held at the home at two o'clock Sunday afternoon, September 2. Rev. Gregory and Rev. Kilpatrick officiated. Burial was in the East Tawas cemetery.

Seek To Have New Receiver Appointed

Suit has been commenced by L. V. McAuliffe, Charles Conklin, J. A. Mielock and H. E. Friedman against Lloyd G. McKay and the Bay Trust Company of Bay City for the purpose of obtaining an accounting of the administration of the trust involving the trust assets of the three Isoco county banks of Eady, McKay and Company, and to determine the extent of the liability of Mr. McKay to the creditors of these banks. This action also seeks to remove the trustee and to secure the appointment of a receiver, acting under the local circuit court.

This action is the outgrowth of recent meetings of depositors of these banks, held in East Tawas and at Hale. The parties named as plaintiffs in this action are members of a committee selected by those depositors who were at the recent meetings in March and June of this year.

September Federal Relief Allocation Is Announced

The Federal Emergency Relief Commission has announced an allocation of $4,349,320 for Michigan to care for the September welfare relief budget. The balance of the relief budget is made up of $1,000,000 from the sales tax revenue appropriation, making a total budget of $5,349,320. The budget is designed to defray the cost of direct relief for 100,000 families and work relief for an additional 60,000 families during the month of September. In addition it will provide funds to finance an emergency education program which will be put in effect during the month.

This emergency education program will be conducted along the lines of the C. C. C. camps where work and courses of instruction will be given to graduates from high schools. It will give these young men credit for a first year's college course.

The State Emergency Welfare Commission has decided to centralize bulk purchases of commodities to reduce welfare costs. Included in the commodities is 750,000 tons of coal.

Nominate Allan A. McLean for County Treasurer on the Republican ticket.

Abigail Lutheran Church Holds Reunion Sept. 1-2

The first annual reunion of the confirmands of Abigail Lutheran church was held Saturday and Sunday, September 1 and 2. A reunion banquet was held at the Holland Hotel Saturday evening. Rev. Professor Carl Arthur Anderson of Augustana College Seminary, who was formerly an East Tawas boy and who graduated from the East Tawas high school, was the speaker of the evening. He gave a very inspiring address, taking as his topic "Be Thou Faithful." Other features of the evening's entertainment were community singing, roll call of confirmation classes since 1886, and a vocal solo by Arthur Applin of Detroit. Blaine Christensen very ably acted as toastmaster. Short talks were given by Rev. Wahlstrom, John Anderson and Harry Haight.

Sunday morning Holy Communion was celebrated at ten o'clock. Special music was given by Miss Selma Hagstrom, soloist, and a male quartet composed of Rev. Wahlstrom, J. W. Applin, Arthur E. Applin and Fred Johnson. Rev. Carl Anderson gave the sermon.

A community dinner was held in the basement at noon.

The evening service was a praise and thanksgiving service with a sermon by Rev. Wahlstrom and special music by the boys' choir and Rev. Wahlstrom.

Presentation of 'Henry's Wedding' Is Big Success

A good crowd reports an evening well spent in attendance at the play sponsored by the Baptist Women's Society, Tawas City, on Wednesday and Thursday nights, in the Community Building, East Tawas.

The show was a side-splitting comedy, full of action, excitement and suspense. Uncle Henry Macey, the bachelor bridegroom, was well portrayed by J. F. Mark. Samantha, his domineering bride, was made true to life by Mrs. Iva Mallon. They were ably supported by an excellent cast in every respect.

The chorus girls furnished song and beauty for the general effect while the black face minstrel scene and the business men's group greatly increased the music and comedy.

The entire production was approved and enjoyed by all present.

MRS. VAUGHAN APPOINTED TO COUNTY POST

East Tawas Woman Is Made State Pension Bureau Investigator

Mrs. Bernice Vaughan of East Tawas has been appointed Old Age Pension Bureau investigator for Isoco county. The appointment was made by F. A. Kren, supervisor of the Old Age Pension Bureau, Lansing.

Mrs. Vaughan's duties will consist of investigating cases of applicants for the Old Age Pension, in order that the Bureau may ascertain their eligibility. At the time the investigator calls it will be necessary for the applicant to have ready documentary evidence as to date of birth, citizenship, and residence in the State of Michigan.

Act No. 237 of the Public Acts of 1933 (the Old Age Pension Act) states as follows:

"Old age assistance may be granted only to an applicant who has attained the age of 70 years or more; has resided in the State of Michigan for a period of at least ten years continuously, or a total of twenty years; has been a citizen of the United States for a period of 15 years; and has property of a value not to exceed $3,500.00."

The Pension Bureau is appealing to the public to pay the $2.00 head tax, so that a greater number of pensions can be paid. The Pension Act provides that this tax is payable at the same time as the state tax by all residents of the state 21 years of age or over, whether citizens of the United States or not, except inmates of state and municipal institutions, who have resided in the state six months or more. Pensions in Isoco county will be paid from the head tax collected from that county. There will be no administration expense taken from the pension fund. All expenses are to be paid from the general state fund.

Proposed Gas Tax Cut Is Not Economy

There are many states whose state gas tax is much more than that of Michigan and in which the retail price of gas is less than in Michigan. Michigan has a three-cent state road tax, Tennessee has seven, Alabama has six, Wisconsin has four, Virginia has five, Florida has seven, Ohio has four, Oklahoma has four, Texas has five, Kentucky has five. In all these states as well as in many others gas retails for less than it does in Michigan.

We quote the following from a recent address by Murray D. Van Wagoner, State Highway Commissioner: "I am as much interested in economy as any automobile club on earth. But I am not interested in economy that spells ruin for our investment of hundreds of millions of dollars in highways. I am not interested in economy that says to Uncle Sam, 'Give some other state our share of your road funds because we can't match it.' I am not interested in turning millions of the people's money out of the people's treasury to the treasury of the oil companies. Yet that is what I expect to happen if the gas tax is cut. There will be no material reduction in the cost of gasoline to the consumer. The oil companies are behind this move for their own gain. They never yet have proved themselves the enthusiastic friends of the common people and I don't believe they have changed. So if you want highway maintenance and improvements in the future turn down the gas tax amendment at the fall election."

Plan to Protect Arctic Musk Oxen

Valuable Animal Is Threatened With Extinction.

Washington.—The recent birth of two musk oxen in Alaska, the first in a century, may be the beginning of a New Deal for this remarkable animal, which has been threatened with extermination by Eskimos, Indians, explorers and hunters.

"Beyond the tree limit, on bleak, treeless tundras, deserted by man and most animals, lives the musk ox—one animal that thrives in blizzards," says a National Geographic society bulletin. "Over the frozen prairies of the Barren Grounds, where no Indians dwell, and across vast expanses too cold for Eskimos, the musk ox plods through the darkness and whispering silence of the Arctic night, cropping frozen grass that sticks up through thin snow. Pausing occasionally to rub frost from its eyes, grazing contentedly as a cow in a sunny pasture, the musk ox wanders from the Barren Grounds to Cape Morris Jesup, where the northernmost point of land meets the glittering ice of the polar sea. Under the musk ox's shaggy dark coat, protecting him from bitter winds, is a dense coat of wool.

Sheds Winter Suit.

"In the Arctic summer the musk ox sheds its unnecessary wool. "To those familiar with the protective coloration of Arctic animals—the silvery-white polar bear, snowy wolves and owls—the dark brown coat of the musk ox seem to afford no protection.

Back With Giants

Phil Weintraub, a Jewish lad, who measures 6 feet 1 inch in his stocking-feet and weighs 185 pounds, has been called back by the New York Giants, with whom he made a rather unfavorable appearance some time ago. Now he is holding and batting with the best of them.

Such is not the case. Grazing, not on snow, but on dark windswept areas, or snowy slopes strewn with large boulders, the musk ox might well be mistaken for another boulder. Hereditary enemies of the musk oxen are the wolves. Although they can do little damage to a herd of adults, they follow it to seize the stray calves and sickly old musk oxen driven out of the herd. "Seeing a musk ox walking along a hill crest, heavy head and massive body bulking large against the sky, hunters have thought him a small buffalo. Although his shaggy hide makes him appear larger, the average musk ox is only about the size of Highland cattle. He usually stands about four feet high and his average weight is 450 pounds dressed. His robe of straggling dark brown hair, stiff as a horse's mane, grows to great lengths, sometimes 20 inches, and trails in the snow. Eskimos call the musk ox Oo-ming-muk, which means 'animal with skin like a beard.' In the roots of this coat grows the protective coat of wool.

"The hoofs of the musk ox are hairy underneath, which makes him sure-footed on the most slippery ice.

Feeds on Hill-sides.

"Like the goat, the musk ox's favorite feeding grounds are on rocky hillsides, which, in spite of his short massive legs, he ascends with agility. Hunters have marveled at the ease and speed with which startled musk oxen have run away from them.

"Although classed with walrus and polar bear as the big game of the north, shooting a musk ox is about as difficult and as much sport as shooting a cow in a pasture. Startled, a herd will run, but not far, to form a huddled, trembling mass that stands facing the enemy until shot down.

"With their bows and copper-tipped arrows, and lances, Eskimo hunters did not seriously deplete the herds, but since explorers gave them rifles, they have slaughtered hundreds upon hundreds without thinking of the future.

"The juicy steaks of musk oxen have saved the lives of many Arctic explorers. Frost-bitten and starving, pemmican exhausted, caches lost, explorers have fallen on a herd as on manna.

"Zoological gardens caused further extermination of musk oxen by offering $5,000 apiece for young ones.

"However, the Twentieth century, in its battle for the preservation of natural resources, has taken steps to save from extinction this valuable animal. Various countries have passed laws protecting it, and a few are importing and breeding herds, and setting aside sanctuaries for them."

Chocolate should always be cooked in a porcelain saucepan in which it can be done rapidly and a large surface exposed. The oil does not separate as it would in a covered pot and when the chocolate is cooked slowly.

OUR REAL NEED

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

A writer on economics is quoted as having said, "What the people of this country really want is not spiritual resources but material values." Perhaps so; but it is rather a sweeping statement to affirm that material resources in place of spiritual values is the desire of all persons. Of course many persons, perhaps the majority, earnestly desire the elimination of poverty, less hours of work which means more leisure, and the assurance of dividends. "A condition devoutly to be wished"—someone says, and what's wrong with it?

Granted that to every family in this country there shall be guaranteed the security of home, plenty of work, and a reasonable pension for old age. Would they be any better off? The materialist, who sees no farther than values expressed in houses and lands, unhesitatingly replies, "we would be a great deal better off." The idealist, who looks beyond material values, replies with equal emphasis in the negative. He reminds us that we would doubtless be just as self-indulgent and greedy; perhaps more so. Surely we would be just as sensual and mean. In other words the conditions which brought on the depression would still exist and, perhaps, in a more intensive form. Instead of conditions improving they would become much worse.

"Man shall not live by bread alone." Nations as well as individuals who have attempted to build the superstructure of their life's ambitions upon no more permanent foundation than the desire for "bread" soon discovered that the tower of their best efforts fell, much like the Babel tower of old. No—the writer on economics is wrong. What this country needs most of all is a resurgence of spiritual power which will rebuild character and make permanent such values as education, culture, home and government. What this country of ours needs is an attitude toward life which not only belittles sensuality and greed but also eliminates self-indulgence and false pride.

The question still remains—Are we going to learn anything worth while from the experience of the past four years, or, are we anticipating the return of another prosperous period in order that we may again repeat the same mistakes and be plunged farther than ever in the gulf of despair?

Trout Encircled by Rubber Washer

Salida, Colo.—D. J. Dewland landed a "rubber-tired" fish near here. It was a 6-inch rainbow trout. About its body was embedded a 1/4-inch rubber washer. The rubber had apparently been around the fish for some time, as it had sunk deep into the fish's flesh just in front of the fins.

The Household

BLUE is a color which can be used in decoration, with reservations, it is true, since it is so cold a color, but it is not alone in decoration that it is valuable. The quality of the color makes it particularly suited to certain practical purposes. It has a tendency to preserve the whiteness of articles kept next to it or surrounded by it. This is a fact that was recognized by old-bygone years this word was more comprehensive it has come to signify table linen.

Literally napery is linen of any kind, but long years ago it was used chiefly to indicate table linen, and this is the use of the word today. The word comes from the French napperie which comes from the Latin naps a cloth. It is very easy to see that napkin is but another form of these words. Literally napkin means a little cloth. The largest dinner napkin of today deserves to be called a little cloth, because of its size. It equals that of some of the smaller luncheon or breakfast cloths. The napkins to match these small tablecloths certainly are diminutive and well warrant the term little.

The material which fashions these modish lounging pajama outfits is a dull-luster chardonize. The color scheme for the attractive model to the left is burnt orange trimmed with cream color. About Tablecloths.

The history of tablecloths is a subject to interest every homemaker who delights in knowing about her household furnishings as well as in using them. Today there is a pronounced trend toward the return of dinner tablecloths of pure white linen as well as those of lace and colored linens. This makes the subject of tablecloths especially timely. The cloths with the napkins are termed napery. While in EAGLES usually nest in out-of-the-way places. But recently two American eagles were discovered housekeeping only 30 miles from Baltimore. Accustomed to living in the vicinity of water, they selected a tall pine tree near the Magohy river as the site for an immense nest.

Building a huge structure of sticks at considerable height from the ground, several large white eggs were laid, and the two birds took turns remaining on the nest for the month's period of incubation. An enthusiastic ornithologist who scaled the tree numerous times was fortunate enough to observe the two young eaglets from the time they were hatched until they flew away eleven weeks later.

Eagles and their many relatives among the hawks and vultures are distributed throughout the world, except over the open seas, the barren Antarctic continent, and the smallest and most isolated of oceanic islands. Wherever found, they appeal even to the novice in knowledge of things outdoors because of their manner of life and predatory habits. Robust of form and strong in flight, they are remarked at every appearance.

The emblem of the Sumerian city of Lagash, in the third millennium before the Christian Era, was an eagle, which was engraved on the tablets and seals of the leaders and was carried as a military standard by the army. An eagle also appeared on the seal of the King of Ur, and continued in double-headed form in Hittite art, on certain coins of the Mohammedans, on the flags of Turkoman princes, and so on into modern times.

The eagle symbol is probably derived from forms similar to our golden eagles or closely allied to that species, as several species of that type are found in the regions mentioned.

Messenger of Zeus.

To early Greeks the eagle was the messenger of Zeus and the only bird that dwelt in heaven—a fancy based, perhaps, on the high-flying powers of these birds. A silver eagle standing on a spear was placed on the military standards of the legions of Rome, and this emblem has been used widely as a conventional badge of military power. Today it is a common decoration on flagstaffs in many countries.

An American species of this group, the bald eagle, is found in the design of the coat of arms of the United States, which appears on the Great Seal. A representation of it is blazoned on many of our coins and decorations. It also appears on the President's flag, and on the President's seal in the bronze plate on the floor of the vestibule of the White House.

The fierce harpy eagle, a bird of dauntless courage, called by the Aztecs "the winged wolf," is engraved on the official coat of arms and seal of Mexico and appears on the flag of that country. It is distinguishable from our species by its prominently crested head.

The eagles and their kin form the group of birds of the order of Falconiformes, which includes about 288 distinct species, with many additional geographic races, so that in all there are recognized somewhat more than 700 living forms. The order is divided into four principal families.

The eagles, hawks, kites, and their relatives, forming the family Accipitridae, include the largest number of forms. They are mainly birds of medium to large size, with broad wings, strong legs, feet armed with sharp claws, and strongly hooked bills. Many possess light-colored eyes, which, with their active interest in any movement that might indicate possible prey, give them a fierce and aggressive appearance.

Their Methods of Flight.

Flight in the hawklike birds varies considerably, according to the kind. Eagles, the large hawks, and the vultures, both of the New and Old Worlds, have broad wings which they flap slowly. Frequently they soar with set wings, utilizing air currents rising from the heated surface of the earth or currents generated by winds. These birds frequently soar for hours with scarcely a wing beat, turning and wheeling in the sky, often at such altitudes that they appear as mere specks against the blue.

The turkey vulture is a well-known species that is particularly adept in this art. In fact, it finds this method of progression so adapted to its needs that frequently it remains in its roost through the day when the air is heavy and still.

The falcons have longer, more pointed wings that enable them to fly with great speed, and, though they may enjoy soaring, they do not practice this so constantly as the other hawks. The larger species can capture the swiftest flying sandpipers and ducks on the wing without the slightest difficulty.

The food of birds of the hawk group is highly varied, though it is taken entirely from the animal kingdom. The larger species of falcons subsist mainly on various kinds of birds and small mammals, but the smaller kinds, such as sparrow hawks and falconets, eat lizards, grasshoppers and other insects, and mice. The bearded vultures of the Old World are said to carry turtles and large bones from the carcasses of dead animals to a great height, in order to drop them on rocks, where they break open so that the bird can eat the marrow.

Some species of hawks, particularly certain forms that range in the Tropics, eat snakes as their principal food. There is one group of species found in India and adjacent regions in which this habit is so constant that the birds are known as "serpent eagles." The osprey and some of the sea eagles confine their attention mainly to fish, which they capture alive by plunging after them as they approach the surface of the water. The powerful harpy eagle feeds regularly on monkeys.

The golden eagle, one of the most powerful of American birds of prey, has a varied menu. Where prairie dogs are present in large numbers, these are favored food; a pair of eagles will destroy several hundred in the course of a season. At times they turn to sharp-tailed grouse when these are abundant, proving a scourge to the flocks. Jack rabbits, cottontails, marmots, and ground squirrels are killed in large numbers. In winter, when other food is scarce, they may come to dead carcasses, being sometimes hard put in severe weather when the meat is frozen, even with the great strength that they possess in bill and feet.

They also attack lambs and fawns on occasion, and one observer records that three golden eagles working together pulled down and killed a pronghorn antelope during severe winter weather when other food was scarce. They will kill and eat coyotes caught in traps, and will also steal the bait when wolf traps are baited with meat. Snakes and wild ducks, and an occasional goose, also may figure in their diet.

Hawk Tribe Always Hunted.

The hand of civilized man has been raised universally against the hawk tribe, and birds of this group are shot or otherwise destroyed at every opportunity. It is rare, indeed, for hawks to come within gun range of a hunter without receiving a charge of shot, and they are killed in many localities by setting steel traps on the tops of posts or poles that the birds utilize as perches.

The majestic bald eagle, our national bird, has fallen under the displeasure of some farmers and has been rather relentlessly hunted.

Bird lovers have taken up the fight on behalf of this great bird of freedom, declaring that he has been misrepresented and that his occasional thefts of poultry are more than offset by services in keeping our beaches clean of dead fish.

The flight and appearance of hawks and other birds, and certain of their anatomical features, were used by the augurs of ancient Rome in their prophecies of the future. A more practical use of these birds was found among the North American Indians, particularly of the Plains and Pueblo groups, when beautiful headdresses were made from the large feathers of the golden eagle, and other ornaments and decorations were fashioned from the smaller feathers of this bird and from the feathers of hawks. The downy bases of the eagle feathers sometimes were twisted in strands that were woven into feather blankets of a peculiar and interesting type. Hawks and eagle claws were used to make necklaces and other decorations.

"Big Ditch" Recovering From World-Wide Slump

President's Trip Stresses Strategic Importance.

Washington.—Opened to the world's shipping traffic 20 years ago, the Panama canal has grown constantly in its importance in national and international affairs of the United States. Built at a cost of $539,000,000—figures computed by the government bureau of efficiency—the canal suffered at first from landslides and the chaotic commercial situation prevailing during the World war. A period of prosperity followed and then the canal was struck by the world-wide depression.

Last year, however, world trade began to revive, bringing increased business to the "big ditch" and coincidentally the canal's strategic importance was dramatically impressed on the world in May when the entire United States fleet crossed from the Pacific to the Atlantic in one unit and within 48 hours.

Further attention to the canal's importance in relations between the United States, its insular territories and possessions and the international policies of the republic was occasioned when President Roosevelt passed through aboard the U. S. S. Houston en route to Hawaii.

Building Required Ten Years.
Building of the canal by the United States required about ten years. While American money and brains are generally credited with its construction, European labor furnished most of the brawn, and the efficiency of the "Gallegos," Spaniards from the region of Galicia, is still remembered.

In 1906, when work on the dredging was intensified, about 1,200 Spaniards were employed. Their services were so satisfactory that in 1907 and 1908 about 7,000 more were brought to the Isthmus. They were a hardy, vigorous group, trained to severe and continuous labor, and accustomed to meager wages and frugal living.

Most of the contract labor, however, was obtained from the nearby West Indies, which furnished 30,000 laborers. About 2,000 Italians, 1,500 Colombians, 1,100 Greeks and smaller numbers of Frenchmen and Armenians.

Benefits Many Regions.
While the canal was opened August 15, 1914, it subsequently had to be closed on account of landslides, which delayed its usefulness and greatly increased the cost over advance estimates. On July 20, 1920, it was reopened and during the last 14 years has exerted a tremendous influence on maritime affairs.

Many regions profited, but some, especially southern Chile, which formerly profited by trade around Cape Horn, were adversely affected.

Commercial traffic rose until the peak in 1929, then the depression hit the world. Shipping everywhere was reduced and for the first time in many years, some steamers found it cheaper to make the long journey around the Horn, than to pay the tolls through the canal. The low ebb was reached in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1933, when only 3,393 ships made the transit, paying tolls of $19,620,450, compared with 4,506 the year before, paying $20,707,856.

Recovery began in August 1933, and in the year ended June 30, 1934, the canal showed an increase for the first time, 5,533 ships and tolls of $24,063,789. Principal gains were registered

Strange "Animule" Found in Bay State

Somerville, Mass.—Frank Buck, noted animal hunter and importer, need not go to Africa for strange animals; he should make his next trip to this city. Somerville police captured a strange animal, all white, and bearing a resemblance to a donkey, mule and jennet. Taken to the police garage, the strange creature refused water, oats, sandwiches and milk.

In trade between continents outside North America, offset by other losses. Commerce between Europe and the west coast of South America improved recently, as did that between the Atlantic coast of the United States and the Pacific coast of South America, and between Europe and Australia. Trade between the Pacific coast of the United States and Europe declined, due to the curtailed oil and grain shipments, usually second largest in the trade of the canal.

Nazi Flag in a New Jersey Camp

Sponsored by The Friends of New Germany, Camp Wille und Macht (Will and Might) is being conducted near Griggstown, N. J., and 200 boys of German descent are learning the rudiments of military drill. The lads carry the Nazi swastika flag and are taught German and the first principles of Nazism.

Yellowstone Park Draws More Visitors

Big Increase in the Attendance Over Last Year.

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—Travel into Yellowstone National park continued its amazing increase over last year, and is still 10,000 greater than 1929, the largest travel year in park history, according to the summary released by Roger W. Toll, park superintendent.

Visitors to date numbered 149,403 as compared with 94,255 last year and 139,631 up to August 1, 1929. Besides the thousands of rail passengers, 43,319 passenger-laden automobiles have been checked in at the five gates thus far. The east gate continues to lead in auto arrivals, with the West Yellowstone gateway a close second and the north, south, and newly opened northeast entrance following in order. The latter leading in from Cooke City over the Red Lodge highway, has brought 1,792 visitors through the scenic mountainous passageway leading to the park.

California continues to hold the lead for state representation, with 11,637. Montana, Idaho, Utah, Wyoming, Illinois and New York follow. Every state in the Union, every province in Canada, Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, Mexico, the Panama Canal Zone, Alaska, China, Chile, Porto Rico and the Dutch West Indies were represented among auto licenses displayed by motorists at the gateways. Fish reported caught by visitors as they leave the gateways total 101,875. This does not include those caught by employees, permanent residents of the park, or rail travelers.

New Law Compels All Turks to Take Surnames

Istanbul.—It took a long time to draft the bill under which all Turks are to adopt surnames, but the Ankara national assembly has passed it.

This means that within a year every Turkish family will have a new appellation. Or rather not every family, but the vast majority, for some two or three hundred families already have surnames.

Now surname-bearing is to be made universal by law under a penalty of a fine of $45.

The main advantage of the adoption of surnames is expected to be the elimination of the present confusion due to Mehmed Ali, for instance, having 10,000 rival bearers of the same name. The consequence is that one of them is arrested and jailed when it is another who is wanted.

Immense Ball of Metal Shows Earth's Rotation

Philadelphia, Pa.—A large metal ball weighing 1,688 pounds has been suspended in the Franklin institute here to illustrate the rotation of the earth on its axis.

The ball swings on an 87-foot wire under the institute's main staircase, changing its direction about ten degrees in an hour, and making a complete revolution once every 36 hours. The arrangement is known as the Foucault experiment, Jean Bernard Leon Foucault, French physicist, having originated the pendulum arrangement in 1851.

Montana's Youngest Town Given Name "New Deal"

New Deal, Mont.—New Deal, Montana's youngest town, was founded by C. W. Whisenand, a farmer, because the present administration's New Deal made it possible. It already has a population of about 500 persons, nearly all of whom are employed on the nearby $63,000,000 Fort Peck dam being built by the United States government.

Employ Unique Method in Poisoning Crickets

Billings, Mont.—Mormon crickets that have invaded the Crow Indian reservation and parts of the Custer National forest south of here, destroying between 15 and 20 per cent of the wheat crop in that section, are being poisoned by a novel method. A poisonous dust spray is scattered over the ground. The insects habitually clean their feet by putting them in their mouth. They step in the dust, then put their feet in their mouths and swallow the poison.

Costly Mineral in Dust Pile Company's Problem

Atolla, Calif.—A million and a half dollars piled outside the door, and no way of releasing it—that is the problem which confronts the Atolla Mining company here, operators of one of the world's two tungsten mines.

In 1914, when the war proved tungsten, a very rare mineral used for hardening steel, to be a necessity, it jumped from $6 a unit of 20 pounds to $84 overnight. Previously processing tungsten was almost unknown and the methods very primitive. In the scramble ore valued at more than a million dollars was rushed to a grinder and ground so fine that it was impossible to separate the mineral from the waste. There it has lain to date, looking like any sand heap, a huge pile of potential wealth, but unavailable.

Tapestry Tells Whole Custer Massacre Story

Miles City, Mont.—The most unusual description of the Custer massacre, which occurred near here, is in the possession of Chief One-Bull, nephew of Sitting Bull, Custer's nemesis.

Now in his eighties, One-Bull has completed weaving in cloth the complete story of the massacre.

Residing on the Standing Rock reservation at Wapala, S. D., One-Bull visited here recently and explained he wove the tapestry because he was unable to speak enough English to answer many queries he received about the battle in which he participated.

Eleventh Century Flour Mill in England to Close

London.—An Eleventh-century flour mill, dating back to 1086, will close when the venerable mill loses its workers and milling to new works at Victoria Docks.

At one time the property of the ancient Syon monastery, the mill has passed through many an illustrious hand, including that of Henry VIII, who, after he dispersed the monastery, gave it to the ancestors of the duke of Northumberland.

Schuylkill Loses Pearl Honors to Brandywine

Philadelphia.—The Schuylkill river, once noted as the only Pennsylvania stream harboring pearl-bearing mussels, is forced to share the honor with the historic Brandywine.

Paul G. Masters, of Huntington Valley, Pa., has a collection of Brandywine pearls found over a period of 20 years.

Playing to an Empty House

For Morning or Afternoon Wear

Pattern 1795

Here's the latest in feminine chic for morning or afternoon wear. Ruffles to accent the smart line of the yoke are irresistibly flattering, and the sleeves have puffed-up charm. A white yoke to top a sprightly silk or cotton print would be ever so lovely. The cost of pattern and fabric is so nominal that you could make this frock without imposing on your budget. A perfect model, too, for the beginner because of its utter simplicity—the front and back are without wasteline seams and the yoke is just no trouble at all to set in place. The sleeves may be omitted.

Pattern 1795 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 1/4 yards 36-inch fabric and five-eighths yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York.

To the Voters of Iosco County

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for the nomination for Treasurer of Iosco county on the Republican ticket.

I was born in Grant township of this county and lived there until I entered the East Tawas public school from which I graduated in 1916. Later I had state normal training at Ypsilanti. I taught two years in Taft school in Reno township and later taught in the Junior high school of East Tawas.

Through the loyalty of the citizens of Iosco county and the appointive board I am now serving as Sheriff of the county and owing to the duties of the office I shall not be able to make a thorough canvass nor be able to meet as many of the voters as I should wish to, so I take this opportunity to ask the support and vote of the electors of the county. I fully realize the responsibility of the office and if nominated and elected will perform such duties as is becoming to the office.

FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION

In asking your support of my candidacy for the office of Clerk of Iosco County, I do not wish you to give it blindly or without careful consideration. I stand squarely behind the following platform:

1. Efficiency in keeping county records which will be at the citizens' disposal upon a moment's notice.
2. Economy in county expense that the hard earned taxpayer's dollar will be spent as wisely and as economically as possible.
3. Sound, progressive methods of handling the work of the office in order to keep Iosco county on a basis of equality with other counties.

I have endeavored to see each of you at your home but for those whom I have not seen I wish to state the following facts, upon some of which you may have been misinformed.

I have always been a Republican. I have spent several years in public service. I am a property owner in the county and am a longtime resident of the same. I have conducted a clean campaign and have done or said nothing to the detriment of any other candidate. I am and will be on the square with every citizen and will serve each section of the county equally.

I stand before you on my record. Examine it as well as that of all other candidates and vote for the man whom you believe will serve the county most efficiently as County Clerk.

On the above platform and statement of the facts which I will stand behind, I ask you to stand behind me in this election.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HANDSOME, HAPPY CHICOREE

"DID you ever see a happier fellow than my cousin, Chicoree?" demanded Linnet the Purple Finch of Peter Rabbit, as they watched Chicoree coming toward them. "I'll venture to say that he has been having such a good time that he hasn't even thought of building a nest, and here half the people in the Old Orchard have grown families. I've got a nest and eggs myself, but that madcap is just roaming about having a good time. Isn't that so, Chicoree?"

"Isn't what so?" demanded Chicoree, perching very near to where Linnet was sitting.

"Isn't it true that you haven't even begun thinking about a nest?" demanded Linnet.

"Quite true, but what of it?" said Chicoree. "There's time enough to think about nest-building and household cares later. Meanwhile Mrs. Goldfinch and I are making the most of this beautiful season to roam about and have a good time. For one thing, we like thistledown to line our nests,

"Quite True, but What of It?" Said Chicoree.

and there isn't any thistledown yet. Then there is no sense in raising a family until there is plenty of the right kind of food, and you know we Goldfinches live mostly on seed. Just as soon as the children are big enough to hunt their own food they need seeds, so there is no sense in trying to raise a family until they can find plenty of seeds when needed. How do you like my summer suit, Peter?"

"It's beautiful," cried Peter. "That black cap certainly is very smart and becoming."

Chicoree cocked his head on one side the better to show off that black cap. The rest of his head and his whole body were bright yellow. His wings were black with two white bars on each. His tail also was black with some white on it. In size he was a trifle smaller than Linnet and altogether one of the smartest dressed of all the little people who wear feathers. It was a joy just to look at him. If Peter had known anything about canaries, which of course he didn't, because canaries are always kept in cages, he would have understood how Chicoree is often called the Wild Canary.

"I suppose," said Peter, "it sounds foolish of me to ask if you are a member of the same family as Linnet."

"Very foolish, Peter, very foolish," laughed Chicoree. "We belong to the same family, and a mighty fine family it is. Now I must go over to the Old Pasture to see how the thistles are coming on."

Away he flew, calling "Chic-o-ree, per-chic-o-ree, chic-o-ree!" As he flew he rose and fell in the air in much the same way Yellow-Wing the Flicker does.

UNUSUAL DISHES

WE ALL like to serve occasionally something a bit different and out of the ordinary, but for the daily diet the common foods simply served will enjoy the best.

Golden Coconut Shortcake.

Allow two slices of sponge cake for each serving. Prepare orange sauce by using one cupful of orange juice thickened with corn starch, adding a bit of sugar and butter. Cover each slice of the cake with the sauce in sandwich fashion, cover with thinly sliced oranges and top with freshly grated and sweetened coconut.

Stuffed Tomato Salad.

Scoop out the centers of six ripe even sized tomatoes. Chop the centers and add one cupful of cooked rice, one-half cupful of diced celery, four tablespoonfuls of cheese grated, one hard cooked egg, two tablespoonfuls of pimiento and one small onion, all minced; season with salt, a little lemon juice and any other desired seasoning. Fill the tomato cups and chill. Serve on lettuce with salad dressing.

Pot of Gold Dessert.

Mix one-half cupful of sugar with one-fourth cupful of cornstarch, add a bit of salt and a cupful of rich milk, one cupful of orange juice and when cooked until smooth and thick in a double boiler add two tablespoonfuls of butter and the well beaten yolks of two eggs. Let cook until smooth. Serve molded in individual molds, with whipped cream.

Maple Junket.

Dissolve one junket tablet in a tablespoonful of cold water, add to a pint of lukewarm milk, a little almond flavoring and a half cupful of maple sirup. Serve with the top of the sherbet glasses sprinkled with grated maple sugar or sprinkled with finely shredded almonds.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN . . . The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: I met a friend of mine today I haven't seen in years. He told me his father died on the "scaffold." He didn't seem ashamed to tell me about it, that's what got my goat. Can you account for a fellow who will go around and say a thing like that about his father, without blushing?

Sincerely,
I. D. CLAIRE.

Answer: Because your friend told you his father died on the "scaffold" it doesn't necessarily mean he was hanged for murder. He might have been a bricklayer and, if so, probably fell.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am secretary of a little social club. We needed some money, so we decided to raffle off a piano. We had 2,000 tickets printed to sell at a dollar apiece. A day after they were all sold, our club rooms caught fire and the piano was burned to ashes. We are in a quandary what to do. What can you suggest?

Sincerely,
C. SHARP.

Answer: Very simple. Hold the raffle just as you had intended and instead of finding out who won the piano, you'll find out who lost the piano.

Dear Mr. Wynn: Do you believe in the old saying: "It's the deeds that count, not words?" Yours truly,
ROSIE CHEEKS.

Answer: Not when I'm sending a telegram.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I have not been well and don't feel strong enough to work. In fact, I haven't worked a day in the past six months. Can you advise me what to do that will make it possible for me to work?

Sincerely,
M. PLOYMENT.

Answer: Ginger ale is very good for your strength, but you must take it right away. Go to any drug store and take six bottles of ginger ale, run out of the place without paying for them and let a policeman catch you. When the policeman tells the judge that you took six bottles of ginger ale without paying for them, I guarantee that you will work hard, very hard, for the next six months.

Sincerely,
O. FOOD.

Answer: Of course, I believe it. In the first place the girl is seven years of age. That means she is quite small, being small she must have a tiny neck. The reason the clam cuddles by her neck is very plain. It probably is a "Little Neck Clam."

HOW TO SHOOT

By Bob Nichols

Shooting Editor, Field and Stream

MOST beginners in upland wing shooting make the mistake of trying to use a gun too heavy for their strength. Shooting quail, woodcock, grouse, pheasant and rabbit calls for fast snappy action. The game bursts from cover, usually at the most unexpected moment. When this happens in dense cover, as it most frequently does, one must be able to snap his gun into position instantly and shoot in a flash.

If your gun weighs too much for your arms you simply cannot do effective work. The over-weight in your heavy gun not only tires you out before the day's hunt is done, but it gives you an ever-present sense of uneasiness. You lack composure. You lose that confidence that is so necessary to good shooting—the feeling that you can hit anything that gets up in front of you. Down in your lower nerve centers always lurks the fear that you will not be able to swing your gun into action fast enough.

The result of such fear is usually a hurried, uncertain shot. Time and again you shoot and miss. Yet you do not understand why you miss. You may have shot over, and under, or wobbled right or left. But until you learn to call your shots, to know why you are missing, you can never progress very rapidly towards becoming a crack wing shot.

The good shot is practically never in doubt about a miss. He knows where he shoots. When he makes a mistake it is frequently because he misjudged the rise of the bird and consequently under-shot. Or he fails to take into account the bird's speed in a sudden swerve to right or left and shoots behind his target. It is little errors like these that first led gun makers to add a second barrel, or a magazine with extra shells, to their guns.

Using a gun that is too heavy is one of the chief reasons why the poor field shot continues being a poor shot—definitely. Point your finger at any object and you not only point with accuracy, but with effortless ease. Nature beautifully proportioned your hands and arms to the weight of your body. But suppose your pointing hand suddenly had five pounds of dead weight added to it. Your pointing would not be near as quick or as accurate. The same thing is true of your gun. If you want to hit what you shoot at, with reasonable regularity, see that your gun weight is proportioned to your weight.

The average upland gunner has no business with a gun that weighs more than about 6½ pounds. Yet remember also, that the weight of your gun should be proportioned to the charge it shoots. A 6½ pound 12 gauge gun is just a trifle too light to shoot heavy loads. Especially for the beginner. It kicks like samhill and before you know it you may acquire that worst of all shooters' curses—the finching habit.

The 16 gauge is an admirable gun for upland work. But best of all, especially for the beginner, is the 20 gauge. It is a powerful and deadly gun. Shooting the ounce loads it has 80 per cent of the maximum killing range of the 12 gauge. Rating the dead certain killing range of the 12 gauge at 50 yards—and this is all you can expect of it, claims to the contrary notwithstanding—the 16 gauge has a range of 45 yards, and the 20 will kill with absolute certainty at 40 yards. So what's the sense of toting a 7½ to 8 pound 12 gauge in the field for a mere 10 yards extra range? Especially since the lighter weight 20 can be brought into action quicker and thus reduce its handicap over the larger gun. And especially, too, since more than 90 per cent of all upland game is killed within 30 yards.

Cut down your gun-poundage and you will find you have more comfort—and you will get more game.

After all, the shot gun is distinctly a short-range weapon that calls for fast, snappy action in handling it. Try a 6 to 6½ pound 20 gauge. See how quickly it will help you gain confidence in your ability to use it. See how quickly your shooting improves.

Life Is Saved by Poison

Given to Combat Poison

Found unconscious after taking 225 grains of poison (four and one-half times the average fatal dose), a young woman in London was saved recently by injections of another poison totaling six grains (twelve times the average fatal dose), according to the British Medical Journal, official publication of the British Medical Society.

The account is given as an example of the new use of strychnine in massive dosage as an antidote for poisoning from hypnotic drugs of the veronal group. The injections of strychnine were given the woman for an hour or so, and the six grains would have caused violent convulsions in a normal individual. Although she remained in a state of coma for sixty hours, it is stated, a complete recovery was made.

Howe About:

Protection for All Destroyed Illusions Coal Oil Johnny

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

I AM a man of peace, but, when the provocation is sufficient, believe in a fight; even in shooting.

Robberies of banks have become so common that in many towns alarm systems have been installed to summon, on occasion, citizens with arms in their hands. I am cheered frequently of late by hearing of bank robbers being shot down in the streets.

It is not for the greatest good of the greatest number that an armed loafer, with murder in his heart, should demand money belonging to industrious citizens. The majority of men do not approve of such methods, therefore are not only within their rights in stopping such outlawry, but are to be highly commended. An occasional man lying dead in the street, if discovered in violence, is as fine an exhibition of morality as assisting the unfortunate.

I believe congress has violently assaulted the rights of conservative citizens who represent the majority. Our country, our homes, our places of business, are as clearly entitled to protection as banks. Measures sufficiently vigorous to be effective should be resorted to in protecting them.

A writer in a Baltimore paper says the trouble with Americans now is, they are suffering from the destruction of their old illusion of superiority and infallibility. Having been blown completely out of our serene confidence that one of us could lick thirty-seven Frenchmen, it was inevitable that we should begin to doubt that we can lick any Frenchman at all. We have been suddenly and frightfully convinced that we are no better than so many foreigners, whereas, for a hundred years, we have been assuring ourselves that foreigners are low and feeble fellows. What wonder, then, that we have fallen far into the dumps?

Americans were originally in possession of a virgin continent, which they exploited with unprecedented speed, and making many mistakes on the way. The resultant colossal wealth naturally gave us the impression that our business acumen was prodigious. Everything conspired to maintain us in the opinion that the American is in all respects the most potent man who walks the earth.

Then came the crash of matter and the wreck of worlds in 1929. Suddenly it was revealed to us that some of the most awe-inspiring figures in the American business world were in reality appalling chumps; that many political demigods really knew no more about statecraft than the average barber does about geometry, and that there is, with possible exceptions that may be counted on the fingers of one hand, not a really competent international banker in Wall Street. The country swarms with smart young salesmen, but the wise old heads in the business world are few in number, and far, indeed, from being in control. Naturally, our first reaction was a stunned bewilderment that swiftly passed into paralyzing fear, and everybody bawling absurdly for help.

No figure in history has impressed me more than a man called Coal Oil Johnny. He was a fool fellow living in average American fashion in Pennsylvania. Oil was found on a piece of worn-out land he had fallen heir to. Taxes had not been paid in years, but the final limit had not been reached, and redemption was possible. The oil discovery made Johnny rich, and he at once moved to New York, where he became the most reckless spender the world had up to that time known. Because of his unexampled folly, he became one of the world's most famous men.

One morning he awoke to find himself stripped, forsaken and forgotten, except that we say now he was the greatest fool in all history.

I don't know about that. Have not many millions been equally foolish all over the world in the past dozen years? The men who loaned billions abroad in the first years of the war: was even Coal Oil Johnny equally reckless or foolish? Look at the appropriations of congress in the past dozen years: were the financial operations of Coal Oil Johnny worse?

Instead of noble monuments to Wilson, Harding, Hoover, Borah, Norris, Brookhart, or the La Follette boy, I think there should be erected monuments of a disheveled, dissipated, careless man, and labeled: "A Typical American: Hon. Coal Oil Johnny, of Pennsylvania. Remember what a fool he was, and try to be wiser."

I have long observed that when I have behaved reasonably well yesterday, it is easier to behave reasonably well today. If I neglect to perform a natural duty today, it is doubly troublesome tomorrow.

In the long contest between poor and rich men, the rich call fewest hard names. Whoever heard the rich speak ill of the poor? Yet the rich might throw rocks, if they desired; the poor actually have many bad habits. . . . When we argue we speak grandly of the principle of the thing we fight about, and seem to have decided the under dog has the most principle on his side. . . . The rich are great cowards. As a poor man I have accused many rich men of strutting offensively when actually they were sneaking through life too humbly.

In both synods the Sunday school was discussed and a deep interest was evident in the work. The Methodists in Ceylon have about 250 Sunday schools with 15,000 scholars and 1,200 teachers. Mr. Mendis has also visited four Sunday school centers lending much inspiration and encouragement. The Lesson Syllabus committee has included some special lessons to meet particular needs in this year's syllabus, and a special book of prayers is being worked out for use in children's services.

DO YOU SUFFER FROM NEURITIS?

American and European Scientists Agree That Mineral Water Is Beneficial

TRY THIS NATURAL WAY

People spend hundreds of millions of dollars every year going to the great mineral water health resorts of Europe and America.

Many of these people have to travel thousands of miles. Many of them were suffering untold pain from "rheumatic" aches, from arthritis, from neuritis, from gout. Others suffered from certain stomach ailments or excess acid or sluggishness or a general rundown condition.

The scientific and medical records of Europe and America show that a very large percentage of these people gained blessed relief and help by these natural mineral water treatments.

Today, however, you do not have to travel long distances to partake of the healthful qualities of fine natural mineral water. You do not even have to pay the excessive cost of having it shipped to you in quart or gallon containers. For Crazy Water Crystals bring to your own home the precious minerals of one of the world's fine mineral waters in crystal form at a great saving in expense.

To Crazy Water Crystals absolutely nothing is added. All you do is add Crazy Water Crystals to your drinking water and you have a great mineral water which has benefited millions.

If you, or any of your friends, suffer from "rheumatic" aches or pains we suggest you investigate Crazy Water Crystals at once. Just ask any of the millions of people who have given them a full and fair trial and you will realize how beneficial they have been to so many sufferers.

The standard size box costs only $1.50 and makes enough mineral water for several weeks treatment. Crazy Water Co., Mineral Wells, Texas.

Babson got out his life insurance policies and read their provisions carefully. He knew there was a clause in them which nullified them if the insured committed suicide, while sane or insane, within a certain period following the issuance of the policy. Yes, that period had now passed. He had two hundred thousand dollars' worth of life insurance in force and his wife was the beneficiary. His creditors could not levy on that. So he wrote his wife a letter, instructing her how to invest the insurance money safely to yield six per cent, enclosed this note in an envelope and returned it to the tin box marked "S. B.—Personal." This box he placed in the bank vault where it would be found readily; then he left a note for Mr. Rookby, got in his car and drove away up country.

Two weeks later Rube Tenney found his body floating beside the headgate at Lake Babson. A gentle wind was blowing across the lake and Mr. Babson's body was bumping the headgate gently and persistently, as if he still insisted it be opened.

CHAPTER XIV

When Silas Babson failed to come home for dinner the night the Bank of Valley Center closed forever, his wife waited until eight o'clock and then telephoned Henry Rookby. Upon Mr. Rookby immediately fell a suspicion that something tragic impended. He found Babson's tin box unlocked, so he opened it and found Babson's letter to his wife in the envelope with the life insurance policies.

Shaking slightly with apprehension, Mr. Rookby went into his cage and found there an envelope addressed to him. It was from Babson and read:

"Dear Henry: I can't stand it. If I live my wife and children will be paupers and I'll be the most hated man in this county. I could never beat back—and I'm too old to try. And I'm too tired. Look for me in Lake Babson. Good-by and good luck. S. B."

So Mr. Rookby telephoned the superintendent of state banks at the capitol to send somebody up to take charge of the Bank of Valley Center. Then he pasted a notice on the window, announcing the closing of the bank.

The payment of the semi-annual interest had been due on July 1. Alas! The funds of the district had been deposited in the Bank of Valley Center, and all but 30 per cent of them had been lost in the collapse of the bank; so the district, not knowing what the holders of its bonds purposed doing, defaulted on the interest payment.

On July 2 the trustee for the bondholders notified the district that unless payment of the defaulted interest was made by August 1 legal action would be taken to foreclose the deed of trust given to secure the bonds.

The directors of the district held a meeting. They recalled Nate Tichenor's threat to buy the bonds from the original purchasers. Was he scheming to delude the farmers of Forlorn Valley into growing more and more alfalfa and planting trees, thus enriching his land to a point where his threatened foreclosure would make the disaster all the greater?

The secretary was instructed to write to Tichenor's attorney and ask him for a frank exposition of Nate Tichenor's intentions. Back came a prompt reply to the effect that Tichenor's intentions were unknown to his attorney; that Tichenor was in Europe.

A mass meeting was held, but while there was much talk there was no concerted action; since nobody knew what to do, nothing was done, and on the first day of August the interest payment was still in default. On the second day of August suit was filed by the trustee to foreclose the deed of trust, and Forlorn Valley, realizing that all was over, sat dumbly and patiently awaiting the end.

The farmers could do nothing else. They had no place to go, so they waited to be dispossessed formally by the sheriff.

On December 30 Nate Tichenor and his wife came home. Darby met them with the limousine when they got off the train at Gold Run and noticed that they were accompanied by a nurse who held a two-months-old baby in her arms.

"Hello," said Darby, "I see I got another boss."

Halfway through Forlorn Valley they met one farmer who had decided not to wait to be evicted. He was driving a four-horse team attached to a farm wagon upon which were piled his household goods, and on an old mattress atop the load four children sat. His wife was on the front seat with him and following up the wagon came a fourteen-year-old boy on horseback, herding before him some loose work horses, two milch cows and their calves. There was about the sorry cavalcade an atmosphere incredibly forlorn. . . . the woman was weeping; as the Tichenor car slid by, the farmer gazed at its occupants apathetically and raised his hand in a gesture that was half a greeting, half a farewell.

"There's one of them moving out, sir," Darby said over his shoulder.

"It's terrible of the bondholders to dispossess them in the middle of winter," Lorry declared.

"That's the man that kicked my ribs loose from my spine," her husband reminded her. "Still, now that his kicks are only a memory, I can't say I'm enjoying his pitiable condition as much as I thought I was going to."

"He waved to you, Nate. He didn't appear to be hostile."

"Oh, he knows me pretty well. I went to school with him. An ignorant chap but not a bad fellow. I wish him luck."

Her hand stole across and over his. "I always knew you couldn't hold a grudge, darling."

"I'm afraid it has to be fed regularly in order to thrive, Lorry, and my grudge against the people of Forlorn Valley has been starved for nearly a year. . . . Well, I went through with it, just as I promised them I would—I can forgive my own enemies, I think, but forgiving yours is quite a different matter."

"I've felt the same about you and your persecutors, Nate. Still, I wish we hadn't met that man and his little family."

He stared stolidly ahead. "Would there be any sense in paying our debt of hate if we couldn't see our enemies suffer?" he demanded.

"Oh, Nate!" He looked at her and saw her eyes were moist with emotion.

"We're still hillbillies, dear, we should have stayed outside several years more. We're not quite civilized yet."

"Are you chiding me, Lorry? I can't recall having heard you put in a kind word for these people heretofore."

"I know it, Nate. I had my share of conceit, too. The words came tremblingly. "I thought I could hold a grudge better than you could and I told myself I had to be strong—for your sake. I was afraid you'd weaken—and I wanted you to triumph in a big way."

"Well, I had figured on a very different sort of triumph, sweetheart. I wanted to let the people know that something fine could come out of Eden Valley. But my back is still a little weak; sometimes it hurts—just enough to keep my hate alive—just enough to make me think that mercy would be weakness—"

"Poor dear! So you've been having a rough time, also? I'm glad. I think we ought to fight our fights together and in the open. I think, too, Nate, we ought to be strong for our son's sake. He is so dear to us, why shouldn't we forget our triumph over our enemies and teach him to love humanity, even if human beings often prove unlovable?"

"You're a quitter," he charged.

"There are two little cemeteries up in Eden Valley that are sound arguments in favor of quitting, Nate. We had our code—an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, and we lived up to it; but it seems to me we never derived any happiness from it. I can't be happy in Eden Valley any more, because every time I'll leave it I'll have to drive through this—this desolation—this place where men have lived and loved and fought and struggled and dreamed their futile little dreams—and went away in despair. I'll never forget that wherever these dispossessed people may wander they'll always hate you and me."

"We can get along without their approval, Lorry."

"But can we get along without the approval of Nate Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw, young Robin Tichenor and those that, please God, will come after him?"

"Darby!"

"Yes, sir."

"Turn the car around and overtake that farmer we just passed!"

They passed the man and at Tichenor's command Darby stopped the car and Tichenor got out and walked back to the approaching wagon. The man pulled up, set his brake and waited for Tichenor to speak.

"Hello, Dan," said Tichenor. "You're Dan Clanton, aren't you? We went to school together in Valley Center."

Clanton nodded.

"Where are you headed, Dan?"

"God knows. I don't. The bondholders foreclosed on my farm and told me to go."

"Tell you what you do, Dan—turn around and go back to your farm and stay there until you're evicted. If that happens while there's snow on the ground you just pull out to the old Bar H headquarters in Eden Valley and put up there. The old house is furnished, and you can remain there until spring. You'll be very comfortable. January is a bad month to be out on the road with your wife and children. Besides, I think I can give you a fair job looking after our golf course. Turn around, Dan. You'll have time to get back to the old farm house, get your beds and the cook stove set up and be settled after a fashion before sunset."

"You mean that, Tichenor?"

"Of course I do."

"After what I done to you—"

"Tut-tut, Dan. That was a bully fight while it lasted. I would have forgotten it if you hadn't reminded me of it." He smiled at the man and his wife and entered his limousine, which had turned and was now waiting alongside Clanton's farm wagon.

In silence they drove on toward Valley Center.

"Drive around to Joe Brainerd's plant," Nate ordered Darby as they came into Valley Center.

Obedient the imperious summons of the horn, Joe Brainerd came out and welcomed them. Tichenor explained, "Joe, I have a big story for you—so big I think it's worth getting out an extra and having it in the post office tonight. This is the thirtieth of December and the day after tomorrow will be New Year's day. I have a curious desire to give Forlorn Valley a Happy New Year, and I have also a curious desire to write the head for your story, which must be seven columns wide and in the biggest and blackest type in your shop."

"I'll run your head if I like it, Nate."

"You'll like it. The line is: 'Forlorn Valley Saved.'"

"That's a great head, Nate."

"I thought you'd like it." Dryly.

"Joe, I made up my mind to smash Silas Babson—and I did, but in order to smash him I had to smash his bank and in order to smash his bank I had to smash Forlorn Valley."

"Then something of tremendous importance happened. My wife presented me with a son, and I was so grateful to her I bought from that New York bank all of the lands of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district which had come into its possession by foreclosure. I paid that bank just half what the lands had cost them and I have since deeded the lands to my wife—just a little gift for presenting me with a son. Of course I haven't the slightest idea what Lorry intends doing with Forlorn Valley, but I wouldn't be surprised if she decides to deed back to those people the farms they have lost, taking a first mortgage to secure her for the amount each individual farm was bonded. That will give her better than a half-million-dollar profit."

"And then you'll let the farmers have free water, Nate?"

"Joe, you are much too optimistic. I haven't a word to say about that water. Last year I killed the Mountain Valley Power company and deeded the dam-site and the lake-site back to the Bar H Land and Cattle company. Just abandoned that dream. Then I married Lorry, and we merged the Circle K and the Bar H into a new corporation known as the Eden Valley Land and Cattle company, with powers, under our charter, to sell water. However, the Circle K was a larger and more valuable ranch than the Bar H—and after Lorry had thrown her cattle into the deal I'll be hanged if she didn't emerge from it with a controlling interest in the capital stock. Consequently she controls the water of Eden Valley creek, and she owns most of Forlorn Valley and Lake Babson and a whole smear of canals and laterals, so if she asks my advice in the matter I'll suggest that she hire a good engineer to run her irrigation system, and a bookkeeper to bill the water to the farmers and collect the money and give the poor devils the water at a nominal price for enough years to enable them to catch up even on the losses they suffered when Babson's bank went bust."

"Nate, that's fine as far as it goes and provided your wife follows your advice, but this valley can't function without a bank."

"I'm supplying that, Joe. The bank building has been ready for months and I have a charter from the superintendent of state banks and will open for business in a week or two. I've hired a good man to be cashier and manager and have told him to be a banker, not a pawnbroker. I think I'll take on Babson's old board of directors. They know more about this valley and its needs than I do, and those that lost their stock in Babson's bank will be permitted to pay for it out of their dividends and the increased valuation of the stock as the years go by."

"Do you know, Lorry, I think we should put in another nine holes of golf and build a nice little club house up in Eden Valley and throw it open to the boys and girls of Forlorn Valley. Get their minds on golf and off rural gossip, you know. Buck 'em up and make 'em feel less provincial. After all, is there any reason why farmer boys and girls shouldn't play golf?"

Lorry made a dive for him; her arms went tight around his neck. "Oh, Nate, you fakir! You fraud! You great-hearted schemer—" And then she was weeping tears of joy in his arms.

"This is certainly a whale of a story," Joe Brainerd mumbled, and wiped his eyes on the hem of his villainous old compositor's apron. "Don't you think I'd better put a box in the center of the page, in black type, to the effect that Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Tichenor wish Forlorn Valley a happy and prosperous New Year?"

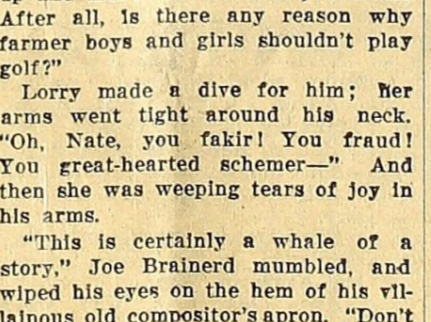

Nate nodded. "Come up for dinner New Year's day, Joe. There are a number of things I want to talk over with you—sort of stand at my right hand and hold the bridge with me."

"Thanks. Happy New Year, folks. Now if you'll excuse me I'll fly at that extra. I want to get out what Babson used to call a 'rousing' editorial." He proffered an inky paw to Nate and Lorry in turn. "It's a pretty good old world, after all, isn't it?"

"It is," said Lorry, "if you make it so. Isn't that so, darling?"

"It is," Nate Tichenor replied, with a wink at Joe Brainerd, "even if one has to wing-tip it to make it behave."

Old Prison Place of Horror

Remains of Century Old Australian Penal Settlement
Bring Vividly to Mind the Long Story of Man's Inhumanity to Man.

Short of hanging, banishment to Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania), was the worst penalty inflicted on offenders a century ago. The six farm laborers of Tolpuddeen, sentenced for combining in a trade union, whose centenary was commemorated by the trades union congress this August, were sent there.

Mr. Stanley Unwin, the publisher, and Mr. Severn Storr have visited the remains of this dread penal settlement at Port Arthur in Tasmania's peninsula. Near a peaceful beach, shaded by gigantic gum trees, they state in "Two Young Men See the World," they found the ruins of the village and prison with its exercise yards, pitch-black "silent cell" for prisoners who raved, and long triangular cages.

"Each man was let loose in a cage to himself for an hour or so a day, during which time he could neither speak nor make signs to the man in the next cage to him without earning extra punishment. Here he clanked up and down, up and down, in his heavy irons that tore the skin from his ankles and wrists, more unhappy, poor wretch, than the wildest of wild beasts!"

"For one man, who had the strength of a gorilla and doubled up ordinary iron bars in his grip, a special cell had been built; for another, a special run and house, because the horrors of the chain gangs had driven him mad and no one dared go near him. It is recorded that sometimes, when two prisoners were confined together, they drew lots to decide who should strangle the other and be hanged for it."

Across the small bay was another building, Point Puer, where juvenile prisoners were housed. Adjacent was a steep rock overhanging a lagoon, called "Suicide Cliff" because here the lads used to throw themselves to death. Amid the ruins of Port Arthur are the ivy-clad walls of a once beautiful church which one of the convicts designed, buying his freedom for work that is superb even in its ruined state.

Many daring and ghastly attempts at escape were made, but "once the prisoners had contrived to elude their would-be captors and gained the mainland of Tasmania, it meant certain death from starvation in the impenetrable bush, or murder and cannibalism among their own ranks if there were several in their party."

Only a few months before the visit of Mr. Unwin and Mr. Storr, a woodman had made a gruesome discovery on the densely wooded slopes of Mount Arthur—a human skeleton with the broken iron fetters still clinging to arm-bone and leg-bone. Beside it, in a straight row, lay the buttons that had adorned the convict's clothes in "those bygone days of harsh tongue and cruel lash." Evidently, this man had escaped, contrived by almost superhuman efforts to break his fetters, and struggled on until he collapsed and died.

The penitentiary itself was a huge building of two floors where some of the convicts worked.

If a convict rebelled, his irons were made heavier, his meager diet was reduced, his term of solitary confinement prolonged, or he would be put to grind cayenne pepper—the worst task of all. Some convicts became warders, and these proved the most brutal of all. "We look back in wonder," the two travelers remark, "at the callous inhumanity of those days."

Mark of the Evil One

A Canadian legend, which has its counterpart in several places in France, tells of Satan being forced, by a trick of a priest, to work, in the form of a wild horse bridled with the priest's stole, on the construction of a church. One day the mason, moved with pity at the efforts of the beast to free himself, untied the knot so that he might drink with ease. The devil gave one of the stones a kick in getting away, and the charm was broken. The blighted stone is to be seen today in the church of St. Francis, on the island of Orleans. No one could ever carve out the marks of the Evil One's kick.

FLIES TRANSMIT 18 DREAD DISEASES

Research has proved that the common house fly is an active carrier of more than eighteen types of deadly bacteria. These germs are picked up by the fly while feeding or breeding on human excrement, sputum, the carcasses of diseased animals, manure, and other polluted filth. The germs are carried on every part of the fly's body, inside and out, and deposited wherever the fly goes, on whatever it touches. Nothing is safe from the contamination of these dirty pests. Protect your home against health-menacing flies. Use inexpensive, clean, effective Tanglefoot Fly Paper—the leading fly exterminator for fifty years. Available at your nearest store in the standard size, or the Junior size in convenient holders, also in ribbon form.

IT ALWAYS STARTS "A QUARREL" I'LL PROVE IT! THIS ONE IS NEW!

NONSENSE! I TRIED ONE ONCE!

Controversy always follows the introduction of any new scientific discovery. But no discovery in years, probably, has caused so much heated discussion and had such far-reaching effects as Missouri housewives.

IT JUST SEEMS LIKE I NEVER GET THROUGH WASHING. I'M SICK OF IT ALL.

WHY, MARY, NO WONDER IT TAKES YOU SO LONG TO WASH. ISN'T THAT A BAR SOAP YOU'RE USING?

BUT LOIS, WHY BOTHER? I TOLD YOU I TRIED FAST WASHING GRANULATED SOAP ONCE...AND IT WAS TOO HARSH.

NOW MARY, DON'T BE STUBBORN. YOU NEVER TRIED OXYDOL. IT'S ABSOLUTELY SAFE ON COLORS...AND IT LOOSENS DIRT OUT IN 15 MINUTES' SOAKING—GETS CLOTHES 4 TO 5 SHADES WHITER THAN OTHER SOAPS WITHOUT ONE BIT OF SCRUBBING OR BOILING.

15 MINUTES' SOAKING! WHY THAT SOAP MUST BE TWICE AS STRONG AS THE ONE I TRIED. DON'T YOU DARE--

SAFE? I'VE USED OXYDOL AT LEAST 20 TIMES ON ALL MY COLORED GOODS...AND THEY'RE JUST AS FRESH AND NEW BRIGHT AS NEW!

WHY THAT'S MIRACULOUS! ONLY 15 MINUTES' SOAKING AND THEY'RE SHADES WHITER THAN EVER BEFORE. I'LL USE OXYDOL FOR EVERYTHING—IF YOU'RE POSITIVE IT'S SAFE FOR COLORS.

BUT MARY, HAVEN'T YOU HEARD? THERE'S A NEW GRANULATED SOAP INVENTION... OXYDOL... THAT'S ABSOLUTELY SAFE! WAIT A MINUTE—I WANT TO SHOW YOU.

YES, IT'S BAR SOAP BUT I'D RATHER SCRUB ALL DAY THAN USE THOSE HARSH GRANULATED SOAPS. I TRIED ONE ONCE... AND IT PRACTICALLY "ATE UP" MY CLOTHES. NEVER AGAIN!

I'M DOING YOU A FAVOR: YOU WAIT AND SEE. JUST LOOK AT THOSE SUDS NOW. IMAGINE THOSE IN OUR HARD WATER!

15 MINUTES LATER

YOU, TOO, WILL BE ASTONISHED... READ THESE FACTS.

MADE by a patented process, New and Improved OXYDOL dissolves instantly and completely in hard or soft water, and does these things:

- Gives thick, 3-inch suds, rich as whipped dairy cream. Suds that go to work on grease, dirt, and stains—in any water—2 to 3 times faster than less modern soaps.
- Sets up a unique "soak and flush" washing action. 15 minutes' soaking loosens dirt so it flushes away—without scrubbing or boiling.
- You save long hours of washboard drudgery. You get clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter than washboard wear and tear. And yet, due to its special formula—OXYDOL is safe. Absolutely safe to hands, colors, fabrics!
- Get new, improved OXYDOL from your grocer today. Money back if you don't have the whitest, sweetest wash ever. The Procter & Gamble Company.

OUR PARLOR WOOD-WORK LOOKS LIKE NEW SINCE MARY GOT AFTER IT WITH OXYDOL!

New Domestic Animals Have Been Added by Modern Science to Be of Aid to Man

How important have become the new domestic animals added by modern medical and biological science to the short list of creatures domesticated by mankind in previous ages, says Dr. E. E. Free, is indicated by a recent warning of the Wistar Institute of Philadelphia, concerning bogus strains of Wistar white rats believed to be on sale by unscrupulous dealers. The number of guinea pigs used as test animals in medical laboratories undoubtedly exceeds by many times the number of wild guinea pigs ever alive at once in their native South America. The tiny vinegar eels sometimes seen under a microscope in old vinegar have been "domesticated" in at least one biological laboratory.

At Yale there is a domesticated strain of the animalcules called paramoecia, often found wild in ditch water. Prof. S. O. Mast of Johns Hopkins university has domesticated amoebas, another lowly microscopic creature of ditches and ponds. The small crablike creatures called Daphnias have been domesticated both as food for aquarium fish and as material for biological experiments. The fruit fly called Drosophila is domesticated in scores of laboratories, where it is used in studies of heredity. A new medical procedure is the treatment of certain bone diseases by living maggots of another fly; so that these, too, have joined the bees as domesticated insects.

The Wistar Institute has domesticated for experimental purposes the opossum and the Mexican salamander or axolotl. The chief laboratory animal, however, is the white rat; so useful that pedigrees are kept and purebred strains established just as is done by breeders of pedigreed horses or dogs.—Pathfinder Magazine.

"To Run the Gantlet"

Gantlet, in this case, was originally gantlope, meaning the passage between two files of soldiers. The reference is to a punishment formerly common among soldiers and sailors. The men were drawn up in two lines facing each other. All were provided with rope ends. The offender had to run down the lane thus formed, all men inflicting punishment as he passed.

To Voters of Iosco County

I wish to announce that I will be a candidate for Congressman from the 10th District on the Democratic ticket at the primary election September 11. My platform favors protective tariff, especially on sugar, wool, and pulp wood. I believe that this would boom Michigan farm lands considerably, and make white poplar valuable as paper pulp-wood. I am also in favor of U. S. commercial banks, which I believe the people need.

I am 48 years old; was born in Michigan, raised a Lutheran Christian, and studied law through a home course. I do not belong to any secret lodges or associations, although I believe in insurance lodges.

If you wish to vote for me and my platform, kindly call for a Democratic ballot.

Otto C. Schroeder,
Candidate for Congressman,
10th District.

Syria

Syria is a former province of the old Turkish empire, which with Bulgaria, joined the central powers of Germany and Austria-Hungary. Syria was made an independent state by the Treaty of Sevres, August 10, 1920, and administered under the mandate given to France by the supreme council of the allied powers. The mandate went into force on September 29, 1923.

To the Voters OF Iosco County

Next Tuesday you will go to the polls to nominate a candidate to head our County Republican Ticket as Sheriff. The people of this county are very fortunate to have a candidate with the qualifications and record of Jay A. Colling, who has offered his services as a candidate for that office.

I have made a personal investigation of his record while sheriff of Tuscola county. He comes highly recommended by the business men, county officers, and every citizen of whom I made inquiries. They all gave about the same answer. "He was the best sheriff this county ever had," and their only regret was their loss of him as an officer and citizen of their county.

I believe it's the duty of every voter and citizen to consider him on Tuesday, September 11, as our nominee for sheriff.

E. O. PUTNAM, Secretary
Colling for Sheriff Club
Hale, Mich.
