CHARTERS WINS NOMINATION IN LONE IOSCO DEMOCRATIC CONTEST

Carpenter Defeats Mercer; Holbeck Wins Over MacGillivray

About 2,700 ballots were cast in the primary election last Tuesday. This equaled the large vote cast two years ago, and furnished an unexpected climax to the campaign activities of the last few months. In view of the unusual lack of excitement aroused among the voters of the county by the political situation, such a large number of votes was not looked for.

In an eight-cornered race John Moran of East Tawas won the Republican nomination for sheriff with a close margin of 88 votes over the next highest contender, Jay Colling of Plainfield township. Moran received 579 votes and Colling 491 votes. The other candidates rated as follows: Youngs, 364; Colbath, 316; Fowler, 224; Martindale, 223; Stepanski, 153; Hosbach, 46.

Roy Charters of Whittemore took the Democratic nomination by a wide margin with a total of 214 votes. Richard Look of East Tawas, Charters' only competitor on his own ticket, received 84 votes.

The Republican race for the nomination for county clerk had breath-taking results for its two highest candidates, Russell H. McKenzie of Whittemore winning over Frank E. Dease by a narrow margin of five votes. McKenzie's total for the county was 734, and Dease's 729. This is one of the closest victories to be won at the polls of Iosco county in several years. With results as close as this, a call for a recount by Dease would not be unprecedented. John Myles of Tawas City ranked third in the final line-up with 542 votes, and R. D. Brown of Hale followed with 328. Charles Bigelow, unopposed at the primary, is the Democratic candidate for clerk.

The Republican nomination for county treasurer was a most decisive victory for Mrs. Grace Miller of Tawas City who won by a sweeping three-to-one vote. A total of 2,362 votes was cast, of which Mrs. Miller received 1,590. W. H. Grant, East Tawas, received the next highest number, 439, and Allan McLean of Whittemore took 343. The Democratic candidate is Mrs. Matt. Jordan of Sherman township.

Frank F. Taylor of Tawas City took the nomination for register of deeds on the Republican ticket with (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

Mrs. John Anschuetz

Mrs. John Anschuetz, age 58 years and six days, died at her home about three o'clock Sunday afternoon, September 9. Mrs. Anschuetz had been in ill health for the past four years. On June first she underwent an operation from which she recovered for a short time. She suffered a relapse, however, about a week after being taken home, and was operated on again July 2, but never fully recovered her strength.

Augusta Johanna Kobs, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Kobs, was born in Tawas township, September 3, 1876. On June 13, 1893, she was united in marriage to John Anschuetz.

Mrs. Anschuetz is survived by her husband, John; two sons, Elmer and Arnold, and one daughter, Mrs. Wilfred Youngs, all of Tawas township; also seven grandchildren, besides other relatives, and a large number of friends throughout the county.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon, September 12, at the Emanuel Lutheran church. Rev. W. C. Voss officiated. Interment was made in the Emanuel Lutheran cemetery.

First East Tawas P. T. A. Meeting Next Monday

Joseph Sparks, a Detroit artist, will speak at the first East Tawas P. T. A. meeting next Monday night, September 17. Mr. Sparks was secured through the efforts of Paul D. Kellety, supervisor of the Huron National Forest. The Detroit artist is employed by the U. S. Government to work with the C.C.C. boys of Michigan as a part of the educational program.

Mr. Sparks has traveled extensively, spending a great deal of time in Mexico and Russia. The subject for his talk will be "Men and Trees as Viewed by an Artist," and he will make sketches to accompany his talk. Mrs. Burrows, president of the P. T. A., will preside.

Bay City Masons Hold Banquet September 20

Masons of the Bay City territory will be entertained Thursday, September 20, at a banquet honoring the Rev. W. Clyde Donald, newly-elected Grand Chaplain of Michigan Masons.

The banquet, sponsored by the Masons of Bay City, will be held in the Scottish Rite Cathedral, Bay City, starting at 6:30 p. m. Local Masons and any guests they may wish to bring have been extended an invitation to attend. A program of music and a speaker have been announced. Tickets are 50 cents per plate.

Meeting Your Child's Problem

At the second meeting of the County Child Study Group, home life and its influence on the child will be discussed this Friday evening, September 14, at the public school, in East Tawas.

Mrs. Lydia Lynde, extension specialist in child training, will lead the meeting and interpret some of the problems of home life. Parents who attended the first meeting were glad to have had this opportunity of hearing Mrs. Lynde. County Agricultural Agent Casper Blumer has arranged meetings in several parts of Iosco county.

Endorsements Should Be Given Northeastern Michigan's Candidate

C. A. PRESCOTT, JR.

When the Republican county conventions are held next Thursday, Northeastern Michigan's candidate for secretary of state, George A. Prescott, Jr., should receive the unanimous endorsements of this section of the state. This territory has not had recognition from the party for a period of thirty years.

Gas Tax Cut Would Eliminate Sales Tax On Auto Accessories

It is not generally known by the public that if the proposed amendment to cut the gas tax from three to two cents is approved all automobile accessories such as tires, repair parts, gas, oil, etc., will be exempted from the sales tax. This clause has been cunningly written into the amendments to be presented to the voters in November.

We do not believe that the average voter will consider exempting these articles from the sales tax while he will still be required to pay the sales tax on everything else, including bread and the necessities of life. It is contended by those who favor this amendment that automobile taxes are exorbitant. However, the present weight tax on automobiles is in lieu of a personal property tax and it is considerably less than the tax on other personal property. This being the case, it would seem that the automobile is taxed less than other personal property and its accessories have exactly the same sales tax applied to them that is applied to all merchandise.

The oil companies do not want the road tax on gasoline; the automobile manufacturers do not want it on the automobile; neither do the accessory manufacturers want it. We think it preferable that the users of the roads should pay for their use in proportion as they use them rather than have the roads maintained through some other form of taxation. Your total road tax amounts to less than six per cent of your total cost of transportation.
Supervisors' Committee.

Notice To Duck Hunters of Iosco County

The migratory water fowl stamps which every hunter of migratory birds must have in his possession while hunting have arrived at this office and are now on sale. These stamps must be placed on the hunter's license. Be sure you bring it with you.
The stamps in this county are on sale only at the post office at the county seat. The price of the stamp is $1.00.
Martin C. Musolf, Postmaster.

To Voters of Iosco County

I wish to express my sincere appreciation to the voters of this county who so loyally gave their support in my behalf in my candidacy for the office of County Treasurer.
Thank you.
Allan A. McLean.

Notice

I wish to express my deep appreciation to the voters of Iosco county for the nomination for county treasurer on the Republican ticket. I wish also to thank James LaBerge of East Tawas and J. A. Campbell of Tawas City for withdrawing in my favor.

Hemlock Team Defeats Oscoda By 12 to 9 Score

Hemlock gained a 12 to 9 decision last Sunday at Oscoda in a loosely played game. The poor condition of the diamond resulted in a number of errors for both teams, Hemlock making five and Oscoda seven. Each team collected twelve hits. Dumont of Oscoda was the heavy hitter of the day, getting five hits in six trips to the plate, including two doubles.

Townline and Hemlock will play at the Sand Lake diamond next Sunday.

SUCH IS LIFE—Mom vs. Pop

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY
by Vance Wynn
Public Ledger

POULTRY
WEEDS FOR POULTS
SERVE AS GREENS

The Bed That Was Not Occupied

SOME years ago Lemuel R. Boyce, an officer on the St. Louis police force, was murdered while trying to arrest a burglar.

He was very popular among his associates, and there was an almost universal desire to find the man who had committed the deed and to give him the full penalty of the law.

But the difficulty was to get a clue upon which to hinge their investigations.

It was learned that a number of colored men had been seen in the vicinity of the hotel where the officer was shot, but there was nothing to connect them with the crime.

Chief of Police Smith determined to comb the city in order to locate the known colored criminals.

The job was well done, but it did not bring very practical results.

Just about that time the chief learned that one of the men who had been seen loitering in the vicinity of Cardinal street on the night of the murder had been sent to the Missouri reformatory a week later on some minor charge.

He called upon the mother of the suspect and questioned her regarding his movements for the previous month.

She admitted that he was wayward, but was positive that he could not have been the murderer of Policeman Boyce.

She was cross-examined, and as a result of that it was found that Frank White—for that was his name—had not slept at home on the night of March 31.

This was extremely important because that was the night the officer was shot.

In addition to ascertaining this bit of information, the chief of police also came away with a bunch of pawn tickets.

One of them called for a revolver. The officer called on the pawnbroker and obtained the weapon.

It was taken to headquarters, and it was found to be the caliber revolver with which Policeman Boyce had been shot.

The proof of this was discovered by means of the bullet that had been taken from the wound.

Thus armed, the chief of police was in a position to confront the suspected man.

He took the train for Boonville and arrived at the reformatory late at night.

In order to make doubly sure he took the mother of White with him. The superintendent was perfectly willing to have White interviewed, but thought it might be postponed until the next morning.

Chief Smith did not agree with him. On the contrary, he said there were several reasons why the meeting should take place that night.

One of them was that the suspect would be confronted unexpectedly and without opportunity of manufacturing an alibi.

He was roused from a solid slumber and brought into the waiting room.

By previous arrangement, the mother had been placed in an adjoining room.

White was surprised when confronted by the detective—but he was also defiant.

He positively denied all knowledge of the Boyce murder and said that he was sleepy and wanted to go back to bed.

"Where did you spend the night of March 31?" asked Chief Smith suddenly.

"At home in my bed—just where I should have spent it."

"But you did not sleep at home that night," replied the detective in his most positive manner.

Young Turkeys Need Plenty of Succulent Feed.

Poults will consume large quantities of green feed if it is available. The digestive tract of turkeys requires lots of bulk and succulence and green feed is necessary for them if good performance is to be had.

And, if large amounts are consumed, green feed will help cut down the consumption of other costly feeds, not only promoting a better growth but making for efficient production as well.

When poults are small, says a correspondent in the Missouri Farmer, succulent greens such as lettuce, spinach or rape, should be free of stems and cut finely so as to avoid choking.

Later, as the poults grow larger, the greens need not be cut although the flock should be watched for choking.

As the season advances succulent greens become scarce, when other sources of greens must be sought.

The best sources of greens later in the season are alfalfa and clover, but where these are not available weeds can be fed with safety and at a profit.

Generally speaking, weeds should be fed that are relished by such animals as cows, and weeds that cows do not eat readily such as Jimson, burdock, cocklebur and iron weeds should be avoided.

Some of the best weeds to feed are wild lettuce, lambs quarter, worm weed, sour and narrow dock, morning glory, and pig weed.

Turkeys are especially fond of narrow and sour dock.

Stems should not be given, the leaves being plucked off, but where stems are accidentally fed they should be removed from the turkey pens after the leaves are eaten off.

Occasionally, when weeds are fed, a turkey will become choked on a large stem and when this occurs it should be caught, held by the feet with head downward and the stem worked out of the throat and mouth with the hands.

The operation is simple and will not harm the poul.

Shavings Are Superior to Straw to Protect Eggs

Shavings in the nests, straw on the floor, and wire netting over the dropping boards—such material and equipment lead to the production of clean eggs.

These are the results of tests as reported by P. B. Zumbro, extension specialist in poultry husbandry for the Ohio State university.

Under such conditions only 23 per cent of the eggs produced were dirty.

When straw was used for nesting material in place of shavings, the proportion of dirty eggs rose to 49 per cent. When no nesting material was used, the percentage of dirty eggs was 77.

Consumers want eggs that are free from stain and dirt, but they do not want washed eggs. Washing not only takes time; it also removes the protecting "bloom," which detracts from the appearance of the egg.

It was found that one nest is required for each five birds in the house. Gathering two or three times each day was recommended by the investigators.

Sanitation Important

The poultryman should exercise care with reference to sanitation at all times, but in hot weather it is necessary to take extra precaution.

The presence of a dead chicken on the range may result in limber neck which is a symptom of an acute intestinal disorder such as comes from ptomaine poisoning.

Then, too, one should be careful to provide liberal quantities of clean water and this necessitates the daily cleaning of the drinking utensils.

Anything which can be done in the way of sanitation to discourage the presence of flies may also discourage tape worm infestation.

Frequent cleaning of the poultry house and periodic inspection of the house for the presence of mites may do much to eliminate some of the losses in the poultry yard.—Missouri Farmer.

Crimean Coast Is Soviet Playground

Former Watering Place of Imperial Russia.

Washington.—The Crimean coast, playground of royalty, has become the most popular vacation land in Soviet Russia. It is the Soviet Riviera.

Along the southeast coast high mountains slope steeply to the shores of the Black sea. Rough peaks of the Yailadagh protect these shores from northern winds that sweep over the inland steppes.

Sea breezes are warm and gentle, spring follows autumn, and flowers bloom perpetually.

"Many of the Crimean palaces of princes and grand dukes have been turned into sanatoriums and rest houses for Soviet workers," says the National Geographic society.

"They are supported by social insurance and public health funds, and are administered by the government.

"Livadia, favorite estate of Tsar Alexander III, has become a vast convalescent home. The magnificent white palace and its adjacent buildings accommodate 1,500 patients at a time.

Workers from every part of the Union are sent for rest cures and special care. The shaded park, gardens, and terraces of the estate are on a hillside above Yalta, best known of Crimean resorts.

Hothouse of Moscow.

"Yalta with its broad promenade, wide bathing beach, and gay cafes was the most fashionable watering place of imperial Russia. The sea baths, sun baths, and mud baths that attracted Petrograd nobility now are in even greater demand through the energetic Soviet campaign for public health. High mountains surround the resort on three sides, making it a favorite center for climbing—a Cannes and Cham-onix combined.

"Leaving the cypress, magnolia, and mimosa of the coast, one climbs through luxuriant acres of fruit trees and vineyards. For centuries the Crimea has served Moscow as hot-house and wine cellar. Figs, olives, pomegranates, cherries, apples, and pears are shipped to northern markets. Crimean wine is unexcelled.

Two of the largest wine cellars are at Massandra, a few miles from Yalta; one stores 375,000 gallons and the other 2,000,000 bottles.

"The higher mountain slopes are forested with pine and birch and fir. Here, 1,600 feet above Yalta, is Dolossy—Soviet tuberculosis sanatorium.

"An excellent motor road connects Yalta with neighboring resorts along the coast. To the east are Artek, where there is a large camp for Young Pioneers (the Boy Scouts of Russia), and Sudak, famous Genoese citadel of the Thirteenth century.

Endless Warfare.

"Still farther east are the ancient cities of Kerch and Theodosia, stern fortresses of Greece and Rome. Since the dawn of history a succession of conquering peoples have occupied the little peninsula no larger than Vermont. Wealth of natural resources, safe harbors, and a strategic position on the great trade route between Europe and the Orient have doomed Crimea to endless warfare.

"Scythian hordes conquered the ancient Cimmerians. Greek colonists dotted the shores with their cities, and Mithridates made Kerch the capital of his Bosporan kingdom until Julius Caesar declared it a Roman province. Following destructive raids by Huns and Goths, Venice and Genoa fought for possession of the important harbor cities, and finally came the Tatars to stay.

"Seventy-five years after Russia won the Crimea from Turkey she was forced to defend it against the allied forces of England, France, and Turkey in one of the most futile wars in history—the Crimean war (1853 to 1856). Sevastopol remembers other bloody battles of more recent years. In the revolution of 1905 Sevastopol harbor was the scene of the mutiny of the Black sea fleet, and in the revolution of 1917 it witnessed bitter struggles between the reds and the whites.

Virginia Town to Fine Drunken Buggy Drivers

Falls Church, Va.—From now on it's the water wagon for thirsty buggy drivers in this little town—all because the town council has become a stickler for sobriety and cracked down on drunken charioteers of horse-drawn vehicles. Under a new ordinance, driving a buggy while drunk will cost $100 to $1,000, or from one to six months in jail.

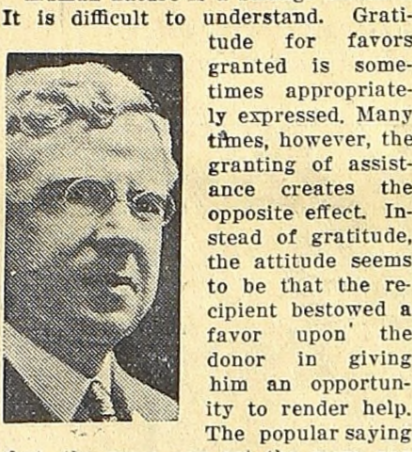

Senators Get Benson

This gentleman is Allen Benson, twenty-five year-old pitcher, who formerly hurled for the House of David team—which explains the beard—and is now a member of Clark Griffith's Senators. He was signed to bolster the capital team's pitching staff, and to revive, if possible, the waning chances and hopes of players and fans of Washington of getting into the world series.

SELF RESPECT

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Human nature is a strange mixture. It is difficult to understand. Gratitude for favors granted is sometimes appropriately expressed. Many times, however, the granting of assistance creates the opposite effect. Instead of gratitude, the attitude seems to be that the recipient bestowed a favor upon the donor in giving him an opportunity to render help.

The popular saying that, the more you get the more you want, has proven true in our study of the attitudes of many who were the recipients of relief during the depression.

A man was asked why he abandoned his vegetable garden. He replied, "Why do the work when the relief board furnishes all I need?" A woman at a certain grocery, having exhausted her buying privileges granted by the relief board, found the purchases too large to conveniently carry home, so she ordered a taxi for that purpose. A boy was given a dollar by one who was prompted to make the gift because of the statement that this was his sister's night to eat supper, and as there was not sufficient for both, he continued to play on the sidewalk. The donor later learned that the mother to whom the lad gave the dollar decided that, as supper was all over, they would use the money in enjoying a movie. The writer handed a young man sufficient to buy a sandwich and a cup of coffee. The coin was thrown back with the remark, "How do you expect me to eat on that?" and later upon parking his car was asked by a passerby for a half dollar to get his lunch. Just so! Doubtless every person has encountered similar experiences.

We speak of these happenings in a joking way. They are, however, indicative of a very dangerous undercurrent in the minds of a large number of our unemployed. The breaking down of self respect is a serious mental attitude. Its boasted claim is that this country owes every person a living and they will see that they get it. Such attitudes have been forerunners of revolutions. Unless something more important than food and shelter is given those seeking relief we are in danger of facing a serious national calamity. The breaking down of the morale is the most dangerous menace in an army. Just so with our citizenship.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

OLD things can renew their value when put to good use. The articles may have outgrown their first usefulness, but they may have a secondary use to fill successfully. While the second use may be a far cry from the original one, there should be nothing incongruous about it.

Sometimes, in a desire to make the most of things, articles are put to amusing and absurd uses. To properly make the most of things there must be nothing inconsistent in the transfer. There are, of course, many things which are not convertible; but, even then, they may have some trifling value sold as junk.

It is not these latter, however, that interest us just now, but the convertible things.

There is one fine charity I know of, which is supported entirely by the income from discarded articles. Friends of the work send in all sorts of things, from old shoes to handsome clocks, and beautiful things which they have ceased to care for, yet which they know will bring money to support the activity. They send these things in lieu of money, thereby relieving their homes of what they wish to discard, yet realizing they are good. Perhaps there is some such charitable work in your community. Many insignificant articles go to this little shop called the salvage shop, and it is surprising how they fill the needs of those who buy them.

Home Salvaging.

In the home there should be a sort of house salvage work going on all the time. Have you a velvet frock which you have worn until you are tired of it, or perhaps it has worn out in places. How about transforming it into sofa cushion covers, if you need them. Or you may need a runner for a living-room table. Use the good length of the velvet for the runner and sew a border of fancy silk, embroidery, brocade, or tulle, on each end, edging it with metal gimp. Line the runner. You will have a handsome table runner with the small overlay only for the border strips. This will be little, as the amount of material required will be small. Or, you may have something that will be just the thing for the borders. Silk or satin can be used for these runners, if you have either material.

Beautiful bags can be the secondary use for good parts of frocks. The good parts of old linen sheets or dresses make material which is excellent for luncheon sets, napkins, tray cloths, etc. Picture frames make good rims for glass trays. Be sure to have them securely backed with wood to make them strong. Dishes are heavy and a tray must be substantial.

Expedition in Arctic Reunites Lost Brothers

Moscow, U. S. S. R.—Two brothers, separated during the vicissitudes of Soviet Russia's revolution and civil war, have been reunited as a result of the national publicity given the rescue of the Cheluskine expedition in the Arctic.

Fedor Reshetnikov, a former street walf, was one of the members of the expedition. After being rescued, his name and picture appeared in many soviet newspapers. Ivan Reshetnikov, long separated from his brother, saw one of the pictures. Letters were exchanged and they were reunited after sixteen years.

Man Claims $6,000 After Three Years

Fort Worth, Texas.—A $6,000 account in a local bank was unclaimed here for three years—even after the bank began liquidation. But a few days ago H. D. Beacham, forty, a Jackson (Miss.) barber, walked into the bank and claimed the money after he had read in Mississippi of the liquidation program. Beacham opened the account almost ten years ago. He made regular deposits and few withdrawals up until the time he moved to Mississippi three years ago. The bank made numerous unsuccessful attempts to locate him.

Quince Jelly.

Quinces have too little acid and too much pectin to make a desirable jelly when the juice alone is used. An equal amount of twice as much tart apple improves the flavor. Equal parts of cranberry, quince and apple juice give a jelly of rich, red color and delicious flavor.

Cut the quinces into small pieces, do not pare, but remove core and seeds, as they prevent the jelly from forming correctly. Add sufficient water to cover and cook until tender. Quinces require long cooking to become tender and to bring out their flavor and deep, rich color. Drain off juice. Use about two-thirds as much sugar as fruit juice. Follow general directions for making jelly. The pulp may be used for making conserve or butter.

Boost in Farm Incomes Is Figured at a Billion

Federal Aid and Increased Prices Chief Factor.

Washington.—Despite the ravages of drought and reports of great losses caused, the combined cash income of American farmers this year will exceed that of 1933 by about 20 per cent, or more than $1,000,000,000.

Present official estimates are that farmers will receive from the sale of all crops and livestock this year a total of $5,450,000,000. To this will be added benefit payments for acreage control under adjustment programs of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, amounting to $500,000,000, of which $150,000,000 was paid in the first half of this year.

The resulting total of $5,950,000,000 compares with a total cash income to farmers in 1933 of $4,868,000,000. Although prepared by federal economists, the estimate of 1934 income cannot be attributed to any government agency. This is because the separate items going into the total must be approved by experts specializing in the various phases of agricultural production before being officially given out.

Emergency Sales Included
In arriving at the 1934 figure it has been assumed that proceeds from the sale of all crops and livestock in commercial channels during the last half of the year will be about $86,000,000 more than farmers received during the corresponding period last year.

Total income during the latter period was estimated by the bureau of agricultural economics at $2,836,000,000, so that the comparative figure for the last half of 1934 would be $2,922,000,000. To this is added $100,000,000 expected to be received from the emergency sale to the government of about 7,000,000 cattle and calves and 5,000,000 sheep at an average of $13 and $3 a head, respectively.

The figures for anticipated livestock purchases by the government are admittedly conservative, and the estimate of income from this source would be increased to the extent that purchases are larger. This is one of the items which may be changed before the 1934 income estimate is officially announced.

Addition of the tentative estimate of $100,000,000 to receipts from sales in commercial channels during the last half of 1934 leaves the total at $3,022,000,000. When the $350,000,000 expected to be paid out in benefit payments is added to other income during the last half of the year the combined result is $3,872,000,000. Combining this with the $2,578, 000,000 received during the first half of the year gives the $5,950,000,000 figure.

Marketing Heavier Than Usual
It is assumed by government agronomists that the sharp reduction in farm products available for marketing as a result of drought will be slightly more than offset by correspondingly sharp increases in prices for such products.

Government estimates of cash income to farmers are based on the marketings of 37 of the more important agricultural products normally making up about 90 per cent of all cash income received by farmers. Although the total of the 12 monthly estimates on which the calculations are partly based is about the same as the annual estimates of income from farm production, they are not strictly comparable.

Slight differences between the two estimates occur because the annual estimates of cash income are the total income from the crops sold or to be

Underground River Abounds With Fish

Harmony, Minn.—Fish which may never have seen the light of day are thriving in turbulent underground channel waters of the recently-discovered scenic wonders cave near here.

The source of the underground river remains undiscovered. The stream rushes through a 300-foot rock-lined chamber and, piercing a stone abutment, crashes 60 feet down to lower cave regions not yet explored.

The fish species, though unverified, are held to be common varieties.

sold from the production of the year, while the monthly estimates are based upon marketings, regardless of when the crops were produced.

Although gratified by the improved showing for 1934, officials said it was no indication that estimates of drought damage had been exaggerated. There is general agreement that, without the $25,000,000 relief program, coupled with the alleviation of human distress previously inaugurated, many farmers from the Dakotas to Texas might face starvation.

Ribs of a Prehistoric Monster

Some 125,000,000 years ago what is now the state of Wyoming was a gigantic tropical swamp, and the bones shown here were the ribs of a huge monster that waded around in the marsh grasses. Bit by bit the area dried. The last of the monsters huddled in a lake. The lake was dried, too, and proved to be their grave, now the hunting ground of paleontologists. Dr. Barnum Brown, examining his "find," is the head of the American-Sinclair expedition.

No One Is Found Free From Superstition

Survey Shows False Beliefs Are Universal.

New York.—A survey of the sources and prevalence of superstitions in the United States has just been completed by Dr. Julius B. Maller and Dr. Gerhard E. Lundeen of the Institute of School Experimentation of Teachers college.

In their nation-wide investigation they found not one person entirely free of some unfounded beliefs.

They discovered that in general women are more superstitious than men and that persons who lived in the country have more need of rabbits' feet than their urban cousins.

The main source of superstitions, according to the investigators, is statements made by friends. Parents are evidently more practical for they are responsible for only such minor superstitions as "Winters are not as cold now as they were 40 or 50 years ago." And in view of last winter's freezing weather, the authors of the research are willing to concede that this superstition may very like become a myth of the past.

Two-thirds of those interviewed confessed that they had learned from friends and accepted as true the statements that four-leaf clover and rabbits' feet brought good luck. A like number believed that if two persons walked on the opposite sides of a post they will quarrel.

Bridge Arch Packed in Ice for Contraction

St. Louis, Mo.—Possibly the strangest use to which ice ever was put was recalled here recently when the sixtieth anniversary of the famous Eads bridge across the Mississippi, was observed.

A speaker related how the last steel section of the arch would not close—being too long—despite the most careful engineering calculations in advance.

"The weather was warmer than had been expected, and the steel in place was longer than it should be," he said. "To reduce this length, they actually packed the ribs of the arch in ice. As much as 60 tons were used in one day."

Doubt New Giant Liner Will Pay Its Own Way

London.—The new giant Cunard liner "534"—pride-to-be of the British mercantile fleet—may prove to be the "white elephant" of the trans-Atlantic shipping world. This was intimated at the annual meeting of the White Star line, when John Watts, chairman of the board, said he doubted whether the unfinished "534" could be economically successful. Sharp criticism has been leveled at the new liner during the course of the meeting before Watts reluctantly admitted that the ship was not likely to pay its way.

Massachusetts Doctor Gets British Annuity

Andover, Mass.—Dr. William Bacre Walker, fifty-five, of this town, has become the recipient of an annuity paid by the British crown, as the direct descendant of Elizabeth Pendrell, whom history credits with saving the life of King Charles II.

Charles escaped the Cromwell forces after the battle of Worcester in 1651 when Elizabeth Pendrell and her five brothers concealed him in a hollow oak tree near Foscofel.

The king's annuity, declared by him in perpetuity in gratitude, has since been paid to the descendants of Elizabeth Pendrell, and with the death of Dr. Walker's eldest brother in Italy recently, it is now to be paid to the local man.

The annuity amounts to about $90.

Texans Drive Backward to Century of Progress

Chicago.—The queerest mode of transportation by which persons have yet arrived at A Century of Progress made its appearance recently when Bates Williams and Doc Watson Wood arrived from Houston, Texas.

They drove in, driving backward all the way from Houston in a 1924 model Lambert friction drive automobile. The wheels of the vehicle are wood. They warp in the sun and Williams explained that they would have been here earlier had it not been that about one-third of the elapsed time was spent fixing the wheels.

Folks have arrived at the fair by train, bus, private automobile, airplanes, and lighter than air motored craft. Others have swum from nearby lake points and come by dog team, on foot, horseback, horse and carriage and automobile. But the backward driving tops the record.

Frock That Makes Its Own Appeal

PATTERN 9905

Probably you are already quite prepared to pounce upon this design. It usually has that effect. If you are a woman who "budgets" and counts her pennies, we are dead certain about your frame of mind. It will be simply devastating in any of those pretty inexpensive cotton prints—and Bridget will beam on you when it goes to the laundry. Those graceful sleeve flares alone, not to mention the scalloped details, are enough to make a woman decide she cannot live without it.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Pattern 9905 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric and 3/4 yard 2-inch ribbon.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER AND SIZE.

Send your order to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York.

Lawyers on Witness Stand

The Code of Ethics of the American Bar association says that when a lawyer is a witness for his client, except merely as to formal matters such as the attestation or custody of an instrument and the like, he should leave the trial of the case to other counsel. Except when essential to the ends of justice, a lawyer avoids testifying in court in behalf of his client.

CHAPTER I

The automobile lurched over deeply rutted roads. When it didn't lurch, it skidded. A cold, bone-penetrating fog transformed trees into ghostly giants, houses into weird dwarfs and filled the world. Moisture dripped from twigs and branches. The faint far moan of a buoy drifted through the grayness with melancholy monotony. The smell of the sea crept behind the slackly fastened side curtains of the car. The lean, angular driver stopped the engine and climbed out.

"What is the matter, Mr. Puffer?" Prudence Schuyler inquired from the cavernous gloom of the back seat.

"Tires leaky. Guess they'll hold out till we get there, though."

His passenger valiantly swallowed an exclamation of concern. She patted encouragement on the hand of the woman beside her. She really needed someone to pull her spirit out of the pit of depression, she told herself.

A motor purred alongside.

"That you, Si? What's the matter? Tire trouble? Flat?"

The voice was hollow, muffled, a man's voice. Shut within the curtained car, Prudence could see nothing but the uncanny mist.

"Taint flat yet."

From the gruffness of his answer she judged that Mr. Puffer did not care for the person who had hailed him.

"Has the girl come?"

There was eagerness in the question, a hint of anxiety, more than a hint of arrogance. If the wheel under her could talk, she would have said that its shake was warning her to get quiet, Prudence decided.

"Gorry-me, you wouldn't expect city folks to come to the country in this storm, would you? Whatta mean is, guess she'll get to the red brick house 'bout tomorrow."

The red brick house! Her house! The voice in the fog was inquiring for her, Prudence Schuyler! Why had Mr. Puffer evaded the question? She watched him as he resumed his seat.

"Phone me the minute she arrives, Si."

A grunt from the man at the wheel was the only response. A red tail light shot into the golden mist of its own powerful headlights and dwindled to a spark.

Prudence leaned forward. "Was that voice, which sounded like a demon of the fog, inquiring for me, Mr. Puffer?"

"Yep."

"Why did you sidetrack him? Why tell him that I was arriving tomorrow?"

"Gorry-me, you wait an' you'll see, Miss Schuyler. Whatta mean is, by tomorrow you'll have kinder got yer bearin's an' I'll know what to say. Len Calloway'll tie you up tight to him, if he can."

"Tie me up! You're not alluding to a matrimonial tie by any chance, are you?"

The driver looked back. "Glad to hear you laugh. When I met you at the station, I was afraid you was going to break out cryin'. It sure is a mean night for you to arrive. Not much further to go. We're passing the Gerard place now."

It was evident that he considered the voice in the fog a closed incident. Couldn't he feel that she was fairly tingling with curiosity? Prudence asked herself. She had better seem indifferent. She said lightly.

"I'm glad to know there is something tangible to pass."

"Taint always like this; just wait till the sun shines. Gerard is your neighbor on the east, that is, if you can call it being a neighbor when the houses are two miles apart. His folks come down only for the summer, but I reckon you've come to stay, judgin' by the truck load of stuff I carted up to the red brick house the other day."

For no reason she could explain to herself, Prudence Schuyler evaded an answer. With the intention of turning the driver's attention from her affairs, she suggested:

"Tell me about the Gerard family."

Her ruse succeeded. "I'll tell you about the Gerard's; perhaps 'twill take your mind off the rough going. The estate, which includes plane landing field, golf links, mountain streams, an' 'bout two miles of pond shore besides the sea front, belongs to Rod Gerard. His name's Rodney, but the townspeople call him Rod. He's one of those rich fellers you read about who fly airplanes, own a string of polo ponies, an' have a vally to bring up their breakfast, crease their pants, an' lay out their pink silk pajamas—but he ain't a bit stuck-up."

"Sounds like a first family of Hollywood."

"Whatta mean is, folks here think a lot of Rod, but he has an older brother Walter an' that brother has a wife. Walter was the son by old man Gerard's first marriage; that wife didn't have any money, neither did he. After she died, Gerard, who was a handsome, gifted man, married an heiress and Rod's their child. They built a house of stone and oak on a high ledge; that's the name of the place—High Ledges."

"It has a sort of approach-if-you-dare sound."

"As I was sayin', Rod's mother loved every inch of the land, turned abandoned quarry holes into gardens. She and her husband are buried in one of them. Old man Gerard died, then she went several years ago, and Rod—well, Rod was just out of law school and crazy about flying when he came into a big fortune; perhaps you've met fellers like that."

"Just like that!" Prudence concurred bitterly, and hoped in the next second that the man had not noticed the sting in her voice.

"He didn't show up here for two years after he lost his mother. Then last June he opened the place, and who'd he bring with him but Walter Gerard and his wife and little girl. Walt lit out pretty quick, but the Mrs. seized the reins of management and how she did drive. She's one of them women who's so busy helpin' God run his world that she lets her own folks get along as best they can. She's all atwitter, winks one of her cold blue eyes when she thinks she's bein' smart; before you've been talkin' for five minutes, she'll lug in a remark about 'my cousin, the ambassador.' She kept the house full of company all summer, young folks, but the girls were so homely they'd have stopped even one of them electric clocks which is supposed to run forever. She's a wise one."

Prudence temporarily forgot the fog, the reason for her coming.

"I hadn't supposed there were any 'homely girls' now, they know so well how to look like a million. Why is Mrs. Walter Gerard wise? Not because she doesn't care for beauty?"

"Whatta mean is, Walt, her husband, is handsome as a movie actor. She is tall, with horses' teeth and a kind of horse-shaped face. Guess she was handsome once—the women here say she's a nifty dresser—must have been or Walt never would have married her. He—well, he knows where the corn crib is. Their kid is thirteen years old. She's cute, but that curious that folks lock up everything when they see her coming. Rod's awful good to her and she worships him. The Walt Gerards haven't much money. Rod gives them an income. That's another reason his sister-in-law doesn't want pretty girls around. 'Twould upset her apple cart terrible if he should marry."

"Has Mr. Rodney Gerard no mind of his own?"

"Yes—yes, he has, but since his mother passed away, Rod's kinder lazy; besides, he's got the idea some girl will marry him for his money." Puffer's voice deepened with affectionate anxiety. "You see, he has all he can spend. This is, I'm guessing so. Perhaps he thinks, why should I work now an' take a job from someone else?"

"Here we are, Miss Schuyler, this is your uncle's place. I forgot; it's yours now. Sorry you had such a tough night to arrive."

He stopped the car in the road before brick gateposts and sounded a lugubrious horn. In response, the house door opened and let out a stream of yellow light; a soft, cushiony voice called:

"That you, Si?"

"That's Mother—my wife," Puffer explained, as he unfastened the curtains on Prudence's side of the car. He helped her out, then extended a bony hand to the gaunt woman who seemed to unfold like an extension ladder as she stepped cautiously to the ground.

Prudence Schuyler's throat tightened as she blinked at the red brick house she had inherited. Its white trim, its hooded doorway glowed faintly through the fog with a sort of phosphorescence.

A woman, designed on the feather-bed plan, with an extra chin or two in the best Rembrandt manner, greeted her in the hall. She looked quickly away from the girl's face, patted her arm with motherly understanding.

"Come right in and wash and take off your hat. Supper's all ready, dearie. When you get something to eat, things'll look different. Life can seem awful dark and dreary on an empty stomach."

Prudence achieved a smile. "Thank you, Mrs. Puffer. This is Jane Mack, who has come to help me keep house. She has been a standby in our family since the first day she came to make little girl frocks for me. Will you tell her where to find things, please?"

As the two women disappeared, Prudence lingered in the hall, slipped out of her rain coat, pulled off her close turban. She entered the room on her right. Her brown eyes, already black from emotion, dilated as she saw herself reflected in the long old-fashioned pier glass between the windows.

"Not too bad." She made a gamine face at the looking-glass girl, before she turned to inspect her surroundings. The room was cozy, homey. Her spirit stirred damp wings. Her back-to-the-farm venture might not prove the flop it had seemed a few moments ago.

The dining room was cheery with crackling logs in the Franklin fireplace when she entered a few moments later. A huge platter of savory beef stew, garnished with fluffy white dumplings flanked by piles of plummy brown bread, gave out an appetizing aroma. For the first time she had left New York Prue's heart felt warm.

"Oh, how tempting! Come, Macky, aren't you starved? Mrs. Puffer, won't you sit with us and serve? It will seem more homey to have you here."

Stark, thin-lipped Jane Mack, her high cheek bones flaunting red flags of excitement, took her seat with an air of being about to commit a social blunder. The rosy-faced stout woman plumped into her chair with a contented sigh.

"Dearie, I'll do just that." After an interval devoted to serving and eating, she sympathized: "Hope you didn't mind the trip from the railroad station. Seven miles isn't far, but it's a long way to drive over a strange road in a fog."

"Only seven! I thought it must at least have been a thousand." The satisfying food was ringing up the curtain of depression. "That is ungrateful when Mr. Puffer diverted our thoughts by most interesting descriptions of our neighbors."

Jane Mack made her one contribution to the conversation.

"Do you have movies here, Mrs. Puffer?"

"Three times a week in the village.

Prudence Schuyler's Throat Tightened as She Blinked at the Red Brick House She Had Inherited.

The manager tries to show the films people want to see."

"Does he?" Jane Mack's eyes snapped. "I love mystery and gangster pictures."

Prudence gazed at the thin face in speechless amazement. She had known the woman almost all her life, but had she been taking her to a picture, she would have selected one with de luxe settings and smart frocks. How little one could tell what was going on in a person's mind, even the mind of someone near and dear. She said aloud:

"Now we'll help clear away and do the dishes."

"That you, Si?"

"Not you, dearie. You go into what your uncle called the living room, and set. If Miss Mack wants to lend a hand, perhaps she'll be more contented to be busy."

Curled in the depths of a wing chair before the purring fire, Prudence looked about the room—indubitably a man's room—which almost over night had become hers. It had the musty smell of furniture drenched with stale tobacco smoke. There was an air of mystery about the closed secretary. When her uncle had last sat at that desk, had he felt the faint far breath of eternity blowing toward him?

Her interested eyes wandered on. Above the mantel hung the one picture the room presented: a delicately colored engraving of Franklin at the court of France. Benjamin, stage center, bent his head to receive a wreath from the gorgeously appareled Countess Polinac; while from a divan, Louis the Sixteenth and Marie Antoinette looked on with royal indifference.

They all had been real once, the girl mused; they had held their heads high while their hearts broke, they had smiled through tragedy, while she, with youth, health, opportunity, and her brother, had fairly wallowed in self-pity these last few weeks.

She sprang to her feet. "I'll make a vow, now, that from this moment I foreswear self-pity. I will regard this experience at—at—what shall I name the place which has a lift to it? I know! Prosperity farm! Grand!—at Prosperity farm as an adventure which will lead to health for David and great, good fortune."

"I thought I was coming to a treadmill of endless monotonies, and within the first hour a hollow voice—which set little merry pranks pricking through my veins—rumbles through the fog: "Has the girl come?"

"Meaning me. Why does the man want to know the moment I arrive? Why will he try to 'tie me up tight to him? That was an interesting bit of biography Mr. Puffer volunteered about our neighbors. I'm willing to wager my first crop of chickens that I shall detest the Gerard heir. Rich playboy. I have no illusions about his type. If I meet him, I'll be colder than an electric ice-box running on high. Also something tells me that Mrs. Walt and I will be antagonistic from the start. Maybe, though, I won't meet her; maybe she won't see her farming neighbor even as a dot on her social horizon."

"Miss Prue, I'm ready to go up now," lean, lank Jane Mack announced from the threshold. "Mrs. Puffer showed me where to find the supplies. I guess she'll be a good neighbor. Wish I hadn't seen that procession in my tea cup, though."

"Now, Macky, don't look for trouble in tea grounds; haven't we had enough fairly sitting in our laps these last weeks without hunting out more? Come on up, let's see the rest of the house."

Interest in Prue's eyes glowed into excited anticipation as they went from room to room.

"Macky, think of having a whole house in which to spread out after years in an apartment! We'll make it a dream. We will warm it with color till it makes hearts glow just to come into it."

A faint pink crept under the woman's skin. Her washed-out eyes shone with a lovely light.

"You'll make hearts glow all right, Miss Prue. Your brother said to me just before we left the apartment, 'I'm not afraid for Prue. She'll make a home wherever she is. She's like her mother.'"

Prue slipped her hand within the crook of the woman's thin arm and for an instant pressed her cheek against her hard shoulder.

"I suppose there isn't a person in this village who doesn't know that my brother's wife ran away with my sister's husband," she said in a muffled voice.

"There, there, Miss Prue, suppose they do? 'Twasn't your brother David's nor your sister Julie's. If folks here know about it at all, they know that. If you make too much of it, they may think there's something back of it all you're ashamed of. I know folks."

Prudence smiled and patted the woman's bony hand before she entered the room she had selected for herself.

Long after she had extinguished the light, she lay with wide-open eyes staring at the fog which hung like a curtain of gray gauze before the wide-open window. She watched the steamy fringe of water dripping from the window as she lived over the last weeks. As if his heart had not been sufficiently uprooted by the desertion and tragic death of his wife, David, whose health had been undermined by service overseas, had been ordered to give up work and live in the country.

"The country! The inexorable command had staggered her at first. How could they go with no money for living? When the crash had come in their fortunes six months before, she had opened a studio and had worked professionally at what had been a delightful avocation—the craft of designer and maker of jewelry and silver boxes. Each month had seen an increase in the number and importance of her orders; then had come the command to go to the country, which had meant that she must give up her shop.

While she was struggling with her problems and doggedly assuring herself that she would find a way to relieve the situation, a way opened, but not from her effort. Her father's brother, Austin Schuyler, had invested part of his small fortune in an annuity, then had made the dream of years come true by buying and stocking a Maine farm with the remainder. For the first time in his life, he had said, he had what he wanted—and then one morning he didn't wake. He had willed the Maine property and five thousand dollars in cash to his niece Prudence.

Cleopatra, Dark Queen of Egypt, Maybe a Blond

According to the popular belief, Cleopatra was a brunette, and is frequently referred to as "the dark queen of Egypt." But historical sources do not supply positive evidence as to her actual complexion, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. She was a Greek by ancestry, and Egyptian only by birth.

So far as records go, she had no Egyptian blood in her veins. It is supposed the Ptolemies remained pure Macedonian Greeks, and their capital, Alexandria, was the center of Greek rather than Egyptian culture. Cleopatra, therefore, must be regarded as a Macedonian type, and the dark skin and hair of the native Egyptian afford no clue as to her complexion. Many Greeks were dark complexioned, but white skin, fair hair and blue eyes were not uncommon among the Macedonians.

One of Cleopatra's ancestors, Ptolemy Philadelphus, is described by Theocritus as having light hair and a fair complexion.

Opossum Is Protected, but Is Found Nuisance

State wild life investigators who are endeavoring to determine whether the opossum should be classed as predatory in Michigan have so far found little to justify the protection that is now afforded this animal. Paul Hickie, state analyst, who has examined the stomach contents of a number of opossums, states that the specimens examined have been guilty of eating both eggs and birds, the latter of which he believes to belong to the pheasant family, and that these findings indicate the 'possum to be of no benefit whatever.

The opossum made its first appearance in the state about five years ago. It has long been declared a nuisance and a pest by farmers, hunters and others, despite the protection afforded it by law.

HOW TO SHOOT

By Bob Nichols
Shooting Editor, Field and Stream

ONE of the commonest errors of the novice upland hunter is to try to shoot a gun that is too long in the barrel. There is a widespread belief that long barrels make a gun shoot harder. Practically speaking, this isn't true. The short barrel gun shoots just as hard, and kills game just as far away, as the old-fashioned "Long Tom." The gun with 32, or even 30-inch barrels, is too long. You will do better work with 28—better still, with 26-inch barrels. I am even of the opinion that most standard gunstocks are slightly too long. The standard stock is about 14 inches from front of trigger to the middle of the butt-plate. My favorite gun has 26-inch barrel and 13½-inch stock. The shortened gun—at the barrel as well as at the stock—speeds up your handling of it tremendously.

In the latest designs of American shotguns being turned out today, one trend is definitely towards the 26-inch barrel. This is undoubtedly the gun for upland use. Robert Churchill, the famous English gun maker, was the pioneer in this field of shotgun research. Some years ago he brought out his now well-known line XXV guns, so named because of their 25-inch barrels—and most immediately it became apparent that the users of these short-barrel guns were to do better work in the field than sportsmen of equal skill using longer tubes. The reason is easy to demonstrate. The shorter you make your "pointer," the quicker you can point it. Try pointing with a walking stick. Much quicker. Try pointing with your finger—instantaneous.

If you want to learn to shoot, and learn it quickly, begin now with a short-barreled, lightweight 20-gauge. Have it properly stocked to fit you. Then watch your scoring begin to climb!

Just within the last year I have had a fine opportunity to observe how the right gun can make a wonderful difference in speeding up a man's acquisition of skill. I have a friend who has been hunting for the past ten years. Up until last summer, even with all his experience, he was still a miserable shot. Shortly after I met him early last spring he told me, jokingly and regretfully, that the only reason his friends ever took him on a hunt was because he has big feet and had the reputation for kicking up more game than any other shooter in the party.

He finally showed me his gun. It was all I expected it would be. A 12-gauge with 30-inch barrels that tipped the scales at exactly seven and three-quarter pounds. Moreover, it was bored modified and full choke—much too close for a field gun. As a crowning fault it had a good 3 inches of drop at the heel of the buttstock—in other words, an "under shooting" gun. The big drop explained why he could kill an occasional rabbit, for the right way to shoot rabbits is to slightly under-shoot. But pheasant, woodcock, or grouse, were too much for him. He had arrived at the hopeless stage where he was convinced that he could never become a decent shot.

Shortly after that he did me a kind favor. In return I presented him with an extra gun I had in my cabinet—a neat little 20-gauge pump gun, with 26-inch modified choke barrel, that weighed just short of six pounds. He was grateful, but just a little dubious about so small a gun. In fact the gun did look funny in his hands, because he is better than a six-footer.

During the remainder of the summer and on up through September, I took him crow and hawk shooting frequently. Slowly I taught him that he had to swing from behind his target, swing past, and shoot ahead of it. Before long he was tumbling the corn-stealers and chicken-snatchers from 30 to 40 yards out of the sky with fair regularity—and was delighted!

Later, during the hunting season, he shot with the same friends who formerly regarded him as the "game dog" of the party. Only this time the laugh was on them. He killed grouse, pheasant, woodcock—and taking bunnies, he told me later, was like shooting fish in a bathtub. On two occasions he out-shot every man on the party.

Anyone can learn to shoot if he gets the RIGHT gun!

ODD RELICS OF OLD AMERICANS

Experts Not in Accord as to "Folsom Points."

Two pointed bits of stone, chipped neatly along the edges and undeniably the handiwork of man, have been discovered in Virginia by David I. Bushnell, Jr., collaborator of the bureau of ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution. They are like ordinary arrow points in some respects, but in others greatly unlike them. Their discovery in Virginia poses a problem for students of American pre-history which may lead to important revisions of current ideas about the early settlement of this continent.

For these are not Indian arrow heads, but remains of a race much older and long since extinct on this continent. Flint points of this kind first were turned up in 1925 near Folsom, N. M., in the course of some excavations for the Colorado Museum of Natural History, Denver. Later, working in the same place, more curious points were discovered by Barnum Brown, of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, and first were recognized by Mr. Brown as relics of a race more ancient than the Indians.

The relics consequently have been called "Folsom points." In the opinion of Mr. Brown they date back to 15,000 or 20,000 years, to the close of the last great Ice age on this continent. Part of the proof of their great antiquity lies in the fact that they were associated in the Folsom quarry with bones of a type of bison now extinct, and were overlaid by many feet of wind-blown silt deposited by dust storms which followed the retreat of the glaciers.

Moreover, a little later, points of similar type were discovered by Edgar B. Howard, of the University of Pennsylvania museum, in a cave near Carlsbad, N. M., with charred remains of many extinct animals, and the burned horn of a musk-ox. Asking what conditions would make it possible for musk-oxen to live as far south as Carlsbad brought scientists to the conclusion that in the time when Folsom men lived and hunted there, New Mexico must have been a sort of sub-Arctic tundra.

But here is the difficulty: the eastern part of the United States hitherto has been considered uninhabited in those times, since the Folsom culture evidently was a plains culture, while the East was heavily forested almost to the ice belt which once came as far south as the present site of New York city. The discovery of Folsom points in Virginia thus presents a queer difficulty, something of a paradox, yet perhaps not one incapable of solution. The Folsom culture may have been a very extensive one, which lasted on this continent for many hundreds of years and gradually adapted itself to conditions in the East.

The characteristic "Folsom points" are not arrow heads. It is consid-

CONTRAST SHOWN IN ENGLISH AND AMERICAN VIEWS

Paragraphs of Charles F. Thwing in the Review of Reviews:

The Englishman is inclined to trust no man till he has proved himself good and true. The American is inclined to trust any man till he has proved himself a scoundrel.

The English tendency is to develop the individual, the American to develop the community.

England makes few laws and enforces them. America, in both state and federal government, makes many laws and enforces few.

In England the criminal has few chances of escaping conviction, and fewer still of pardon. In America the criminal has few fears of conviction and many hopes of freedom. In one case the motto is "He ought to be punished—punish him." In the other, "Give the poor dog a chance."

The Englishman lives more in a world of reality, both in thought and act; the American more in a world of imagination and optimism.

The Englishman remembers yesterday, and anticipates tomorrow. The American works for today and takes little thought for tomorrow.

The thinking of the Englishman is more consistent, more continuous, more concentrated. The thinking of the American is more diffuse, more general, more volatile.

The Englishman believes in and uses the understatement; the American believes in and uses the power of the overstatement. In the interest of truthfulness the first represents the right of magnifying, the second represents the duty of minimizing.

Three Asian Cities

Milking a Rubber Tree Near Singapore.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THREE cities of Asia that have figured prominently in former England-to-Australia flights will be on the route of the London-Melbourne race which will take place in October. They are Baghdad, Allahabad and Singapore.

Baghdad is near the Persian frontier, hard by the traditional site of old Eden, man's birthplace. Here on the classic soil of Babylon, Nineveh, and Opis once flourished the pick of the human race; here was the center of the world's wealth, power, and civilization. And back to this ancient region modern men are turning, to reclaim its lost areas, open its mines and oil deposits—to restore the Garden of Eden!

From the deck of a Tigris steamer Baghdad looms up boldly, its splendid skyline of domes and minarets reminding one of some "midway" of World's fair memory. An odd pontoon bridge connects the two parts of the city, separated by the yellow Tigris. On the west bank is the old town, enclosed by date and orange groves. From here the new Baghdad-Mosul railway starts on its long run across the trackless desert. East of the river, on the Persian side, is "new" Baghdad, with its government offices, barracks, consulates, prisons, etc.

Beyond, as far as the eye can reach in every direction, stretches the vast, flat, treeless, empty plain of Mesopotamia—a region once more populous than Belgium.

To "go native" one must paddle ashore from the steamer in a "goofah," a queer, coraclelike craft in use here since Jonah's day. A goofah is woven from willows about 6 feet in diameter, is perfectly circular and basket-shaped, and is coated outside with bitumen. Some say Moses was cut adrift in one of these goofahs.

Another strange craft at Baghdad is the "kelek," a Kurdish invention. The kelek is a raft made of inflated goat-skins, held together by poles and covered with a platform of straw mats. These keleks come down to the city in hundreds from Mosul, bringing wool, pottery, grain, and skins.

Not the Baghdad of Ali Baba.

A great wall encircles Baghdad. Flat-roofed, huddled Moorish houses, many almost windowless and each surrounding its own open court, are a distinct feature of the older parts of the city. On these flat roofs Arabs spend the summer nights with tom-toms, futes, water-pipes, and dancing women. Facing the river, removed from the Arab town, are built the imposing foreign consulates, mercantile offices, and the sumptuous homes of rich Jews, Armenians, Greeks, and Syrians—the men who made New Baghdad.

But the Baghdad of Ali Baba's day, with the splendor of Aladdin's enchanted age, is gone forever. The palaces, the mosques, and minarets are mostly in ruins. Even the tomb of lovely Lady Zobeide, favorite wife of Harun-al-Rashid, is tumbled down and decayed. It is into modern monuments to New Baghdad—into roads, bridges, public buildings, irrigation works, army organization, dredging the Tigris, etc.—that the prominent citizens put their money.

Modern Baghdad is in safe hands now; no dissipated royalty guards its gates. Sober, clear-headed men, drilled in the best schools of modern Europe, able to hold their own anywhere, administer its affairs. As late as 1880 the Tigris overflowed its banks, swept through Baghdad, and drowned 15,000 people in one night.

Allahabad Attracts Millions.

Normally, Allahabad, India, is a city of 175,000 people. It lies in the V-shaped region between the Jumna and Ganges rivers, at the meeting place of the two streams. It is this location that draws huge crowds to the town annually; and, at twelve-year intervals, tremendous hordes. Both the Jumna and the Ganges are sacred streams, and their meeting place is doubly sacred. The mystical Indian mind finds still a third reason for holiness: it is believed by the pilgrims that the Saraswati, a river which is swallowed up by the sands southwest of the Punjab, emerges at the junction point of the Jumna and Ganges. Both the Ganges and the Jumna are coffee-colored streams, heavily laden with silt. At low water in late winter a large expanse of dusty sand is exposed below the Allahabad fort which stands on the bluff overlooking the confluence. It is on this beach that the millions of pilgrims assembled recently.

The Indian police have their hands full during the great religious fair or Kumbh Mela. All vehicles are excluded from the river plain, and all efforts concentrated on maintaining order among the multitude of men, women, and children that move about in the dust, slip on the wet clay near the stream banks, and attain merit by bathing in the murky waters.

A torrid sun beats down, and to screen its rays little shelters of rushes have been erected on the sands. Under these sit all manner of people wearing a minimum of clothing. Among them are holy men, their bodies smeared with gray coats of ashes. Groups of idols are set up that the faithful may contribute coins. Among the crowds go men carrying water-skins, sprinkling the water in an effort to lay the dust that millions of bare feet stir up.

The Kumbh Mela is a mecca for money-makers, and the principal thoroughfare is lined with mat-shed shops for the sale of sacrificial brassware, tiny brass idols, holy berries made into dark necklaces, and shining brass bottles, zoned with mellow-tinted copper, in which holy water can be taken to remote parts of India by credulous people. Here and there one finds men with small furnaces full of heated pitch, sealing the water vessels so that not a germ or an atom of holiness can escape.

Allahabad is old. In the enclosure of the fort is a pillar erected by Asoka, the great Buddhist king, during the Third century B. C. It may have been moved to the spot later, however, so it is not conclusive evidence that a town existed on the site of Allahabad during Asoka's reign. The first town known to history on this site was Prayag, about which a Chinese traveler wrote in 700 A. D. The Hindus still call the town Prayag, "the place of sacrifice." It received the name by which it is now known to the world from its Mohammedan conquerors in 1575.

Singapore a Great Free Port.

Singapore is an island 27 miles long by 14 wide and just misses being the southernmost point of the continent of Asia by a half mile water channel. It is at the funnel point of the Strait of Malacca which extends between the Malay peninsula and the island of Sumatra, the great water highway between India and China.

Little more than a hundred years ago the island, owned by the sultan of Johore on the nearby mainland, was a deserted jungle save for a little fishing village. Ships in the China trade passed it by as they passed many another jungle shore; the only ports of call in that region of the world were those on the Dutch islands of Sumatra and Java. But these ports took a big toll in fees, and Sir Stamford Raffles, an official of the East India company, began to dream of a free British port that would facilitate trade. In 1819 he obtained the seemingly worthless island of Singapore for his company for a small fee. Developments soon proved him a prophet, for within two years the little trading center he established had a population of 10,000. It was 1822 before the British government consented to take an interest in the place.

In the little more than a hundred years since it was founded, the jungle of Singapore has given place to a huge city of close to 400,000 population, carrying on trade normally valued at a billion dollars annually—one of the metropolises of the British empire. Its quays and anchorages serve thousands of craft of all sorts and sizes, from the picturesque, graceful Malay sampans and the stodgey Chinese junks to the familiar freighters of the West, and what Kipling asserts are the "lady-like" liners. They build up Singapore's shipping to the tremendous total of 17,000,000 tons yearly.

Dragon Fly Myth One of Oldest on Record

Oh, the devil's darning needle! exclaimed Miss Damsel Fly to Mr. Dragon Fly as the bad boy made a cruel swat at them with a big stick. Now wasn't that awful of the bad boy to wish to kill these harmless insects? Before condemning him for his cruelty, however, consider his side of the story.

"There are numerous myths, legends, superstitions, beliefs, etc., about dragon and damsel flies, known scientifically as "odonata." The odonata have been called "devil's darning-needles," "snake-doctors," "snake-feeders," "horse-stingers," and many other "harsh" names. Bad boys the country over have been warned that if they persist in their wayward ways the devil's darning-needles will sew up their ears. Naturally the boys dislike the big insects and try to kill all they see. Providing, of course, they are not scared of them.

Perhaps the most widely circulated myth about these insects is that they are "snake-doctors" and "snake-feeders." They are accused of administering to snakes when sick or hurt. In some localities they are even credited with the power of bringing snakes back to life after they have been killed. And some people believe that wherever you see a "snake-doctor" there you will find a snake—so beware! Others are afraid of these needle-like creatures for it has been handed down from generation to generation that one sting from the "poisonous" thing will mean instant death. Yet, as no human has ever been stung by one of them they are called "horse-stingers." But this notion that they sting even horses is equally mistaken. The truth of the matter is that dragon flies, damsel flies, snake-doctors, devil's darning-needles or whatever you choose to call them are harmful or dangerous only to other insects. The only time these creatures will harm a person is when one is so foolish as to poke his finger into one's mouth. Some of the larger species have fairly strong biting jaws which are capable of slightly nipping a finger. They actually help man by feeding on such injurious insect pests as gnats and mosquitoes. All odonata live in water until they get their wings. Thus they are always found around ponds, small streams and other watering places in summer. Some 300 species are found in the United States.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Birds Foretell Weather

Many of the larger birds are good weather prophets. Those roosting on cliffs, such as buzzards, ravens, and eagles, will use the same sheltered ledge for years in succession, but if a storm is likely to rise in the night and blow directly into their shelter, they will move to more favorable spots.

FUTURE 'PLANES TO BE MARVELS OF RAPID FLIGHT

Whirling through the stratosphere at well over a thousand miles an hour in the hermetically sealed cabin of a giant air liner, guided entirely by wireless control stations on earth—can you imagine the possibility? Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, hero of the recent record-smashing flight to Australia, believes this not only possible, but likely. In an astonishing vision of aerial development within the next fifty years he foresees air travel brought to such a pitch that ships and railways will become semi-obsolete, their sole use being as carriers of heavy freight.

"There will be no human pilot, but gyroscopic control," said Sir Charles. "The huge flying liners which will move through the stratosphere at a uniform speed of 1,200 miles an hour, carrying 100 passengers in their luxurious cabins, will be fitted with super-efficiency, super-charged engines and variable pitch propellers. "Risk will be negligible. Each plane will have ten, twelve or fifteen engines. In the event of one cutting off, the officer in charge will simply declutch that engine from the propeller while the mechanics repair it en route. Crude oil will probably be used as fuel."

Actually, to accomplish the amazing speed of which Sir Charles speaks we do not require more powerful engines than some already built. The atmospheric density 60,000 feet above the earth is about a quarter of what it is here, so that an engine, which under normal conditions today attains the high speed of 350 miles an hour, would hurtle through the rarefied atmosphere at 1,400 miles an hour.—Montreal Herald.

Conserving Fur Bearers

Fur production on Louisiana's bird sanctuaries has increased eight-fold in the last three years, Armand Daspit, director of the wild life division of the state conservation department, said in a report. He estimated that 350,000 muskrats would be taken from the bird refuges this season, compared with 48,000 three years ago.

SAFEST TIRES IN THE WORLD! PRICES REMARKABLY LOW!

Here's PROOF OF SAFETY

TWO BREATH-TAKING ENDURANCE RUNS ON SAME TRACK—A DRAMATIC COMPARISON OF SAFETY! READ BOTH LETTERS BELOW!

THE proof of leadership is performance! Many claim it, but Firestone proves it. Never before have tires withstood such severe, continuous, grinding torture, breaking 77 records for 3,000 consecutive miles at 127.2 miles an hour. Not a Gum-Dipped cord loosened, not a tread separated, not one blowout.

Hour after hour, on through the scorching heat of the day and inky blackness of the night, with temperatures as high as 120 degrees—breaking record after record for speed, strength, safety and blowout protection—all in a stupendous demonstration of safety performance for the car owners of America.

This remarkable achievement was made possible by Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process which saturates and coats every fiber within the cords with liquid rubber—counteracting friction and heat and preventing the tire from heating up and blowing out.

Have the Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store equip your car with Firestone Tires, Spark Plugs, Battery and Aquapuf Brake Lining. Protect your life and the lives of your family with the safest tires in the world. Buy them this week before prices go higher.

Ab Jenkins praises Firestone tires in toughest endurance run he ever made.

Lake Bonneville, Utah Aug. 18th, 1934

Mr. Harvey S. Firestone, Chairman, Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. Firestone:

Under A.A.A. supervision I have just completed a 3,000 mile endurance run on the hot salt desert at Lake Bonneville, Utah. My car, weighing over 5,000 pounds, traveled the 3,000 miles at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, breaking 77 World, International and American Speed Records—all without tire trouble of any kind. Firestone Tires gave an almost unbelievable performance in this run, particularly when you realize that the temperatures were as high as 120 degrees and that the holes in the course had been filled with crushed rock that was hard as flint and had knife sharp edges.

This endurance run was the severest test to which I have ever subjected any automobile and especially tires. Last year I made a similar run with a car of less power and less speed using tires of another make whose national advertising featured blowout protection. Yet, I had a blowout and made a number of tire changes.

This year I also used Firestone Spark Plugs and a Firestone Extra Power Battery made with your new All-Rubber Separator. Not a Spark Plug failed and the Battery required no service of any kind.

If every car owner knew what my Firestone Tires went through they would appreciate what Gum-Dipping means in strength and heat protection that make Firestone Tires safe from blowouts.

This is the toughest run I have ever made in my twenty-three years of breaking speed records and after a short stay here I am coming East. Hoping to have the pleasure of seeing you then, and with best regards, I remain

Sincerely yours,

Ab Jenkins

Wilbur Shaw, using widely advertised competitive tires, had eleven tire failures, preventing him from establishing records worthy of the car he was driving.

Lake Bonneville, Utah Aug. 18th, 1934

Mr. Harvey S. Firestone, Chairman, Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio

Dear Mr. Firestone:

I have just finished a 2,000 mile test run on the salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, driving a car equipped with a nationally known brand of tires which a large manufacturer has recently brought out as the newest development in tire construction and for which their 1934 advertising has made many extravagant testing and performance claims.

With these tires on this run I had eleven tire failures and made two precautionary tire changes. When a right front tire blew out, my car left the track of a mile, leaving a trail of rubber and fabric on the hot salt beds.

After an experience of this kind, I appreciate tires have played in my success during the fourteen years I have used them on my racing and personal cars. Without them I know that I could never have made the many speed records that I have established.

I understand that you expect to be in California soon and if convenient, I would like to see you.

Very truly yours,

Wilbur Shaw

● A story of love and of adventure, breath-taking and thrilling, with the crisp and fragrant Maine woods for a setting. This delightful tale of a girl who finally found happiness in a world from which she had run away is to be published serially in these columns. You will enjoy it from beginning to end.

No. 1 Continued from the First Page

Wesley Groff, Charles, Ernest, Ed. and Walter Moeller attended the Detroit-Boston ball game at Detroit last Sunday.

Miss Irene Sommerfield of Ann Arbor came Thursday to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Sommerfield.

Douglas Ferguson is visiting in Detroit this week.

Miss Winifred Babcock and aunt, Miss Amanda Hamilton, of Detroit spent the week end at their cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ferguson and Betty of Saginaw spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. S. Ferguson.

Miss Anne M. Brown of Bay City spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. L. H. Braddock, and family.

Mrs. Victor Herriman spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. C. L. McLean.

A family reunion was held at the home of Mrs. B. Galbraith last week end and Labor Day. Thirty-eight were present. They were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thompson and family of Wilber, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Archer and family of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Tate of Cheboygan, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Winslow and daughter of Flint, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Bamberger and family of Saginaw, Mr. and Mrs. Jay E. Bentley and family of Flint, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Galbraith and family of Detroit, and Mr. and Mrs. Ervin B. Galbraith of Dearborn. A good time was enjoyed despite the rainy weather.

Who Iamed the Animals?

The story of how prehistoric men first domesticated animals is not known.

European Pawnshops

The government pawnshops of France and Belgium are known as Monts-de-Piété, originally "Monts de Pitié" or Banks of Charity. They are colloquially known as one's "aunt".

Name Is Spanish

Florida was given that name by Ponce de Leon for two reasons—first, because it was a flowery land; and, second, because he landed on the day of the Spanish festival called Feast of Flowers, which corresponds with Palm Sunday.

ELECTRICITY is cheaper than GLOOM

Good lighting—penny tonic. It is a tonic for the eyes, and a tonic for the appearance of the home. Eyesight is priceless. The difference between good lighting with bulbs large enough to do the job and insufficient gloomy lighting will cost you only a few cents a day.

Poor lighting is no bargain nor saving. Good lighting adds cheer and color to your home. Most valuable, it saves the eye strain that creates headaches, nervousness and fatigue. Save eyesight with light. Enjoy your home more.

Electricity in the home today is at the lowest price in history. Its many penny-priced services are worth dollars in better home living.
