Democrats and Republicans staged rallies during the past week in Iosco county. Congressman Roy O. Woodruff was the principal speaker at a meeting held at Oscoda and Hubert J. Gaffney of Bay City, Democratic candidate for congress, addressed a rally which was held Monday evening at East Tawas.

About 100 Democrats attended Monday evening's meeting. A testimonial dinner was held for Mr. Gaffney at Oscoda. In his address, Mr. Gaffney said:

"Obstruction of President Roosevelt's program by unfriendly partisan congressmen may wreck the New Deal and bring to utter waste the money already spent."

Speaking of the cost of the recovery program, which has been bitterly criticized by Republicans, Gaffney said that "the cost was not made necessary by the New Deal; the need was created by the old order and the New Deal is meeting the need fearlessly."

"There is only one issue facing the nation and district today," Gaffney said. "Do we follow President Roosevelt on the road to permanent recovery or do we scrap for purely political reasons the machinery that has been set up and abandon the progress already made?"

About 200 Republicans greeted Congressman Woodruff at Oscoda. In his address the congressman spoke of the many advantages of this section of the state as a summer playground. He told of his many efforts to secure a harbor appropriation for Oscoda.

In speaking of the political situation Congressman Woodruff said that in 1932 people, becoming disheartened and discouraged, wanted a change in government, but "you cannot make me believe that with the people becoming ever more impoverished and discouraged, that conditions are getting better. Do you realize that in Detroit more than 1,000 additional families are taken on the welfare every week?"

"Every hungry mouth in this country must be fed. But, I maintain here tonight that the way to relieve the hunger of the country is not by the destruction of food. You cannot feed a hungry people by making fertilizer of 6,000 hogs. You cannot make me believe that is a good policy."

"We are not going to bring the country out of this depression without the full co-operation of business and banking. Manufacturers everywhere, with their plants closed, are complaining that they cannot secure the necessary line of credit. * * *

Every bank in the country today is full of money. The Comptroller of Currency, after we put the guaranty of bank deposits on the statute books, says that our banks must be 80% liquid and they must have on hand the cash or government securities on which they can realize this money within a few hours. If a bank is 40% liquid it is just as liquid as any bank ought to be. With the government guaranty the people will not feel that their money is in danger and make runs on banks. There is no necessity to restrict loans of money to legitimate business and the president should insist that more liberal credit be allowed."

He said, "I am not a 'rubber stamp.' You sent me to congress to think seriously of the things which come before that body. You expect me to do the things I believe are for the best interests for all the people of the country. I went along with the President on many of his proposals, but I disagreed with him on the things which I thought were wrong."

Hits Gas Tax Amendment In Letter To Detroit News

The following is from the Detroit News Letter Box of October 21: "To the Editor: "Certain big interests are putting on an intensive campaign through their various and numerous mouthpieces in favor of the proposed amendment reducing the tax on gasoline and many are thereby deceived. "In the interest of good roads and their maintenance this tax was instituted by popular referendum by a large majority; this, in the face of bitter opposition by the same groups who are now trying to nullify it in this amendment. These groups ground their appeal to popular interest while the underlying incentive is the selfish interests of these few groups who are trying to make it a people's cause and make 'suckers' of the latter in digging the former's chestnuts from the fire. "If this amendment carries, the home-owning taxpayer will be compelled to pay just that much more taxes on his little home. "Furthermore, if this amendment carries, we will continue to bump over the thousands of miles of hubby dirt and gravel roads through lack of adequate funds to build pavement or build more than the few paltry miles of concrete as in the last few years. "If this amendment carries, the thousands of users of gasoline will not pay one penny less for their gas; it will all go into the pockets of the masters of the oil refineries—W. J. Conway." Mammoth Musical Comedy Coming To Family Theatre

"Dames," Warner Bros.' newest and most spectacular musical comedy romance, comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, October 28-29-30, with an all star cast headed by Joan Blondell, Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler.

Three hundred beautiful girls dance and frolic in beautiful and complicated ensembles that are said to be the most novel and most sensational yet created by that master of special numbers, Busby Berkeley.

The picture is said to contain a number of the catchiest songs of the year, written by three teams of ace songsters, Warren and Dubin, Fain and Kahal and Dixon and Wrubel. Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler furnish most of the romance as a pair of lovers whose match is anathema to their families. Three famous comedians, ZaSu Pitts, Guy Kibbee and Hugh Herbert, provide a large share of the comedy.

Others in the cast include Arthur Winston, Sammy Fain and Arthur Aylesworth.

Kidnaped Louisville Woman Ransomed for $50,000—Jugoslavia's Murdered King Buried—Collective Bargaining Plan of General Motors.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

LOUISVILLE'S sensational kidnaping case came to a climax with the return of the victim, Mrs. Berry V. Stoll, to her home. The young society matron had been held captive for six days in Indianapolis by Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., a maniac who had twice been held in insane asylums. She was treated rather roughly but not really injured, and was set free after Mr. Stoll paid $50,000 ransom. Robinson fled with all but $500 of this sum and a country-wide hunt for him was at once begun. His wife and father were arrested, charged with complicity in the kidnaping. Mrs. Robinson, however, was said to have protected Mrs. Stoll to the best of her ability and it was she who returned the abducted woman to her relatives, abandoning her crazy husband.

In Detroit one Edward Lickwala, a youth with a police record, was arrested for attempting to extort $5,000 from Edsel Ford under threats of death. He was promptly indicted by a federal grand jury, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve ten years in the Leavenworth penitentiary.

WITH overpowering pomp and ceremony Alexander I, assassinated king of Yugoslavia, was laid to rest with his fathers, the founders of the Karageorgevitch dynasty. Nearly every nation on earth was represented at the funeral rites. King Boris of Bulgaria and King Carol of Rumania were there, as was President Lebrun of France. King Victor Emmanuel of Italy was represented by the duke of Spoleto, and Chancellor Hitler of Germany by Gen. Hermann William Goering, premier of Prussia, who flew from Berlin. England sent Prince George, now duke of Kent. Other notables present were Prince Cyril of Bulgaria, a delegation from Poland, Foreign Minister D. Maximos of Greece, Foreign Minister Dr. Tevfik Ruzst Bey of Turkey, Foreign Minister Dr. Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia, Foreign Minister Nicholas Titulescu of Rumania, Prince Nicholas of Rumania, and Undersecretary of Justice Karl Karwinsky of Austria, with many others.

Belgrade was thronged with many thousands of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes. One entire village of 900 peasants arrived from Herzegovina, a picturesque crowd many of whom had sworn not to shave for three months in token of their grief.

For two days Alexander's body lay in state in the palace while the people passed by the bier. Then it was removed to the cathedral for regular high mass, after which there was a two mile procession to the railway station. From there the body was conveyed to Topolo, 53 miles from the capital, and interred in the family mausoleum.

FRENCH police having caught three of the companions of "Kalemen," really Tschernocemsky, who slew Alexander and Louis Barthou in Marseilles, the authorities of half a dozen countries were making progress in unravelling the assassination plot.

From the confessions of those captured and from the investigations of the police of France and Belgrade it was learned that Kalemen was a notorious Macedonian terrorist named Valda Georgeff Tschernocemsky who killed two Bulgarian political leaders several years ago. He and his associates in the plot were directed in their murderous work by a mysterious "master mind," whose authorities assert this man, who the assassins knew as "the doctor," controlled the activities of several distinct terrorist bands who were ignorant of one another's moves.

Dr. Ante Pavelic, described as the leader of the Croatian terrorists, and Eugent Kvaternik, his aid, were arrested in Turin, Italy just as Alexander was being buried in Yugoslavia. Kvaternik was known as the "delegate" and was supposed to have acted as liaison man for Pavelic, making contact with the Marseilles assassins.

The police had hunted them throughout Europe. Kvaternik was trailed as far as the village of Etaples in France, where the trail was lost. Pavelic, however, was known to be in Italy, and the search turned there, on the theory that the two would get together.

Continental police were still hunting for Maria Vjondroch, blond siren, who is supposed to have smuggled into France the murder weapons, and Gustav Perche, alleged to have conducted the Croatian exile "murder farm" at Janka Butfa, Hungary, where the assassins held target practice.

Premier Doumergue's French cabinet was considerably changed as a result of the tragedy in Marseilles. Albert Sarraut, minister of the interior, and Henri Cheron, minister of justice, resigned and were replaced respectively by Paul Marchand and Henri Lemery. Laval was made minister of foreign affairs to succeed Barthou and his place as minister of colonies was given to Louis Rollin.

FRANCE lost another of her elder statesmen in the death of Raymond Poincare, who was president from 1913 to 1920 and returned later to public service as premier. It was during that period that he seized the Ruhr in an effort to compel Germany to pay the war reparations to France. Poincare was born in Lorraine, and that fact explained in part his unrelenting attitude toward Germany in dealing with post-war problems. Entering political life in 1887, he was mixed up in many prominent "affaires" and made a record as an intense patriot and a liberal republican. In 1923, when he was called out of retirement, he succeeded in saving the country from its disastrous financial state. Poincare was seventy-four years old when he died, and had been in poor health for some years.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL is vexed by what he calls the "indefensible practice" of certain countries in boosting tariffs or other restrictions to obtain concessions by reducing them again in negotiations with the United States for trade agreements. He made a statement about it, intimating that under such conditions there may be a failure of negotiations.

Although no nation was named, Germany has begun a program of controlled imports and has denounced its most-favored-nation treaty with the United States, and France is increasing tariffs.

FIRST shot in the coming contest between the automobile manufacturers and the American Federation of Labor was fired by the General Motors corporation in the form of an offer to its 130,000 employees of its own plan for collective bargaining. In a letter sent to every worker President Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., said: "We of the General Motors recognize 'collective bargaining' as a constructive step forward, both for the employees and the management. Regardless of any obligations that may exist, we propose not only to continue the idea, but to develop it."

The plan, which actually is already in effect, was designed to meet all requirements of section 7A of the National Industrial Recovery act. Though the company in its communication did not mention the A. F. of L., it declared that "membership in a labor union or other type of labor or employee organization does not in itself establish the right of any such union or other organization to represent employees in collective bargaining negotiations. Representatives for such purpose must have been specifically chosen by the employees they are to represent and the fact of such choice must be established."

Employees must be given complete freedom in setting up collective bargaining organizations and choosing representatives, the company declared. The management may, however, assist any employee organization in plans for employees' mutual benefit, provided that in the determination of the right of employees to participate in the benefits there is no discrimination by management on the ground of affiliation with any labor organization.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT went to Williamsburg, Va., and took part in the ceremonies attendant on the inauguration of John Stewart Bryan as president of the old College of William and Mary. In return for his courtesy Mr. Roosevelt was given the honorary degree of doctor of laws. The same honor was conferred on Gov. George C. Peery. The exercises were conducted in the reconstructed main building of the college, designed by Sir Christopher Wren.

On the same day took place the formal rededication of Duke of Gloucester street, the city's main thoroughfare, which has been restored nearly to its original appearance as the last major construction project of the restoration of colonial Williamsburg. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., financial backer of the restoration which already has cost approximately $15,000,000, was among the distinguished visitors present, along with cabinet members, congressmen, diplomats and educators.

ALL the members of the German cabinet took the oath of loyalty to Chancellor Hitler at their first full meeting, and then Dr. Hans Heinrich Lammers, chief of the chancellery office, announced that "Adolf Hitler is fuhrer for life." He added that the Weimar constitution no longer exists. Many laws were decreed by the cabinet to carry on Hitler's policies. These included laws reducing the tax burdens of the big families and the cost of tax administration, laws reorganizing cooperative associations and "purifying the auctioneers' trade," laws altering bankruptcy sales, reorganizing the traffic in grain "to enable the National Grain company to control grain even when the harvest is reduced."

TWELVE hundred coal miners at Pecs, Hungary, won a sensational fight for better wages, risking their lives on the outcome. They imprisoned themselves far underground for days, declaring they would die there voluntarily unless the employers would raise their pay, which had been only $2 a week. Food sent down by their friends was returned, and many of the men were crazed and nearly dead before the company was forced by the government to make a settlement the workers would accept.

The owners agreed to eliminate a wage cut, to raise the working time from two to three days a week, and to pay a bonus of $3 a man to help tide over the winter.

REPUBLICAN senatorial candidates in five states have incurred the displeasure of organized labor, and President Green of the American Federation of Labor has called on the members to work for the defeat of those men in the November elections. The five are Senators Reed of Pennsylvania, Walcott of Connecticut, Hatfield of West Virginia and Fess of Ohio, all seeking re-election, and George M. Bourquin, Republican nominee in Montana.

Circular letters signed by Green review the records in congress of Reed, Walcott, Fess and Hatfield. They say the candidates voted against the 30-hour work-week bill, for reduction of federal salaries, for the sales tax and for confirmation of Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina to the Supreme court after he had upheld what union men call the "yellow dog" contract between employers and workers.

Each letter reminds the members of the federation's declaration to "stand faithfully by our friends and elect them; oppose our enemies and defeat them."

ORGANIZED labor doesn't like S. Clay Williams, chairman of the new national industrial recovery board recently appointed by President Roosevelt.

S. Clay Williams

At the San Francisco convention of the American Federation of Labor, a resolution was adopted demanding an investigation of Mr. Williams' attitude as vice chairman of the board of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company of Winston-Salem, N. C., the charge being that he was opposed to trade unions and to collective bargaining with them. The federation's executive council instructed President William Green to present the matter to Mr. Roosevelt on his return to Washington, and he promised to do so. Incidentally, it should be recorded that Mr. Green was re-elected president without opposition.

It is not considered likely that the federation will get far with its fight on Mr. Williams. He was deliberately selected for membership on the board because his conservatism will be a foil to the comparative radicalism of other members, especially Sidney Hillman and Leon C. Marshall. The other two members, Arthur D. Whiteside, head of Dun and Bradstreet, and Walton Hale Hamilton, are rated as moderately conservative.

The new board is hard at work on the problems which beset the NRA. It has devised methods for quicker transaction of business and has strengthened the subordinate executive personnel, and, in the matter of enforcement, it has agreed not to interfere in labor disputes, these being relegated to Secretary Perkins and the labor relations board.

TO THE White House correspondentents President Roosevelt said that a federal housing program with a great many ramifications undoubtedly would be submitted to the next congress and also would constitute an important part of the administration's future relief policy.

The President expressed approval of the latest undertaking of the Federal Emergency Relief administration, which is to develop small communities of from 100 to 500 families. The families are taken off the direct relief rolls and moved into small houses, where they are intended to become self-supporting on communal farms provided by the government.

NAZI dictatorship over religion in Germany was bitterly attacked by 16,000 Protestant pastors from their pulpits, despite the presence in every church of secret police and spies. The congregations cheered and shed tears as they were told that a crisis in the rebellion against the tyranny of Reichsbishop Mueller was nearing a crisis. Mueller and Dr. August Jaeger, commissioner of Protestant churches in Prussia, were held responsible for the "triumph of violence and hypocrisy" in a manifesto distributed to congregations.

"Through Mueller and Jaeger Satan does his work," the manifesto said. "The church regime has nullified the gospel. It has violated the constitutional church government, and is using political force to gain its end."

"It splits Bavaria's unified church into two parts, but still it talks of unity. It denies the Ten Commandments and employs lies against truth and robbery against justice. Still it talks of Bible and creed."

"Caprice and falsehood have gained the upper hand in the church."

NEARLY fifty persons lost their lives in a typhoon that swept over Manila and nearby provinces of the Philippine islands. Property damage in the city was estimated as high as $2,500,000, and undoubtedly was heavy in the country.

Turkey Decides to Raze Istanbul Grand Bazaar

Where the East Meets, Buys and Gossips.

Washington.—Turkey, in its steady march toward modernization, is considering plans to raze the Grand bazaar of Istanbul, according to news dispatches from the former Turkish capital.

"The East without bazaars would be as difficult to imagine as America without filling stations, county fairs, and corner drug stores," says the National Geographic society. "In fact, these things, and others that give America its atmosphere, have sprung up in recent centuries; whereas bazaars are the essence of the East, distilled through long ages. To the city-bred Oriental, these dim, noisy hives of trade are the westerner's factories, department stores, theaters, and daily newspapers, rolled into one."

"Unlike fairs, which are held annually, and markets, of the kind that are held in open spaces, bazaars occupy permanent structures throughout the year. The labyrinth of bazaar streets in any large city of the East covers many acres. In some places, such as Fez, Marrakech, and Kashgar, these streets are protected against the broiling noonday sun by latticed roofs of reed or brush. Other bazaar streets, such as those of Cairo, Istanbul, Tehran, and Jerusalem, are roofed over with domes of brick or mud."

Great Rabbit Warren.

"Of this latter type is the Grand bazaar at Istanbul, built by Sultan Bayezid II, which covers a square mile of ground. Its exterior resembles a fortress; its interior, a rabbit warren with 1,200 noisy narrow streets under one arched roof. In more than 4,000 shops Turks sell leather, brass and copper ware, Persian shawls, embroideries, soft oriental rugs, sparkling jewels, heady perfumes, furs, sewing machines, and egg beaters.

"The narrow bazaar alleys of Masqat, Arabia, are more like tunnels than streets. Jerusalem's bazaar is a maze of long dark thoroughfares, vaulted with ancient masonry. Tehran's bazaar has more than 25 miles of low, dark winding passageways that open occasionally into large caravanserais, or courtyards, where camel caravans are unloaded, and reloaded from goods stored in surrounding warehouses.

"The streets of some eastern bazaars are so narrow that a camel stalking through them, laden with bundles, almost grazes the walls on both sides. The jirricksha-cluttered streets in the bazaars of Suchow, China, were originally built 8 feet wide, but even this width has been reduced as one merchant after another has built his shop farther and farther out into passageways.

"The mud or cobbled streets of most bazaars are far from clean. Although a few have been modernized, the majority still have gutters running down the center. Passing pedestrians, camels and panniered donkeys trample on raw camel hides spread out on the rough paving stones of the street to be tanned, and over fine oriental carpets submitted to the same treatment to give them a prized antique appearance.

"Bazaar shops themselves are small recesses, seldom more than 12 feet wide, set in the dark tunnels.

"Although many oriental bazaars now have electric lights, most of them close at sundown. The doors of the shops are shut and fastened with wooden bars. Deserted by man and pack animal, the alleys are black and silent.

"Artisans and vendors of one type of goods usually display their merchandise in adjacent shops. These tiny cell-like shops are factories as well as stores, where articles are finished while the customer waits.

"Characteristic of the country are the goods sold in its bazaars. Dilals (auctioneers) in Marrakech auction off pomegranate-red morocco bookbindings, and saddles. In Cairo, squatting turbaned men and boys sew var-colored cloth into patchwork decorations for inner walls of tents. Signs lettered in Chinese characters flapping outside of Suchow and Peiping bazaars advertise pottery, pet birds in cages, jointed bamboo dragons. Candy and dates are the chief articles of sale in Masqat, Arabia.

"In Persia, women shrouded in black chadars (robes) purchase tiny silver

No Human Sees Fall of Giant Sequoia

Yosemite.—The third large Sequoia to fall in the Mariposa grove, Yosemite National park, since its discovery in 1857, the Stable tree recently crashed to earth, unobserved by human eyes. Twenty-nine and a half feet in diameter at its base, 269 feet high and estimated to be 1,800 years old, the tree fell in a dead calm and measured its length on the ground without striking a single obstacle as it fell.

pots of kohl with which to underline their eyes; while men with henna-dyed beards buy cut seals, which they use in place of signatures; and peaches, which were introduced from Persia, whence the botanical name amygdalus persica. The bazaars of Kabul, Afghanistan, are piled high with bright red, green, or blue vests, heavy with gold braid, which are worn by Afghan dandies; and the flaglike silver bracelets, earrings, and amulets beloved by veiled Moslem women.

"Long famous are the bazaars of Baghdad; and of more recent fame, the bazaars of Beyoglu (Pera), Turkey, where Russian exiles sold the last of their jewels for food.

"Bazaars are important not only as places of commerce but as places for social intercourse. Customer and merchant take recess from shopping to enjoy tea or coffee on the carpet in front of a shop. Gossip is exchanged among the wayfarers pressing around the water-carrier with his distended goatskin bag."

HOW TO SHOOT

By Bob Nichols
Shooting Editor, Field and Stream

UNTIL a gunner learns to shoot with both eyes open he can never be rated a first-class upland field shot. You cannot accurately judge angle, speed, or distance, with one eye closed. Nature gave you two eyes for exactly this reason. Even if it handicapped you in no other way, squinting one eye tight shut when shooting introduces a certain amount of muscular and nervous strain that certainly adds nothing whatever to your speed or accuracy.

With one eye closed you are immediately deprived of the advantages of "universal focus" which is so necessary to quick and accurate gun pointing. You do not see everything in your field of vision. Your one-eyed vision is too intently concentrated on the flying target. A sudden swerve or dip, such as is characteristic in the slight of the woodcock and the jack-snipe, will almost certainly fool you into a miss.

With both eyes wide open, not focused too intently on any particular object, you are alertly aware of everything that moves and everything that happens. If the game darts to right or left from its initial line of flight, you are so instantly aware of the change that you shift your gun pointing with lightning-like speed. All of which frequently means the difference between a clean kill and an exasperating miss.

Quite frequently you will find the "one-eyed" shot a slow shot. The sudden elimination of 50 per cent of his eyesight, on the rise of the bird, makes it necessary for his single-aiming eye to take extra time to adjust itself to carrying all the burden of watching game and gun. The good two-eyed shot will have the game down dead before Mr. One-Eye can let off his gun. The man who closes one eye is at his best where the shooting is in the clear open spaces. But let him flush his quail or grouse in the woods, or in dense brambled thickets, and there he begins to get into difficulties that are quite often beyond him. I have seen a two-eyed shot shooting a pump gun on quail knock down three birds on a rise of the covey, and yet with all this would be able to tell where most of the remaining birds went. Let the squint-eyed shot, wedded to his idols, try to accomplish this!

Learning to shoot with both eyes open is particularly difficult if you have the misfortune not to have your "master" eye on your gun side. I have been through this and can speak with experience. A right-handed shot, my "master" or controlling eye happens to be on the left. The English gun makers try to make allowance for this, in fitting a gun to a shooter, by supplying what is called a "cast-off" stock. That is, the stock is bent in its vertical plane so as to bring the breech of the gun in nearer to the middle of a man's face, or nearer to the sighting line of the "master eye." This does help to a certain extent, although I personally feel that a stock so bent is likely to prove something of an interference to quick, instinctive gun pointing.

The partial cure I suggest is to shorten the stock somewhat below its normal length of about 14 inches. My own favorite stock is just exactly 13 1/2 inches. With this shortened stock I can bring the butt clear in to my shoulder where the base of my neck will prevent it from coming any farther in. Then I cut my comb down somewhat until I can get most of my jaw-bone pretty well over the top of it. With the gun in this position I can use both eyes wide open without tilting my head too far over to the right in aiming. In my opinion the head should not be tilted over anyhow. Angles, speeds and distances are best and most accurately estimated with the head erect—the normal position in which you are accustomed in the ordinary ways of life to look at anything.

In any event, whether your "master" eye is on your gun side or not, seat your gun butt clean in on your shoulder as far as it will go when mounting your gun. There it will have the solid support of your body. Many shooters catch the butt on the upper part of their arm—a moving support—and this causes many an otherwise unexplainable miss.

Cumaean Sibyl Sanctuary as Described by Virgil

The 2,500-year-old sanctuary of the Cumaean Sibyl has been found at Cumaean, near Naples, after 1,200 years of conjecture and several hundred years of search, says a writer in the Montreal Herald. Within the sanctuary is the private rough-hewn chamber wherein the Sibyl offered her predictions on the fate of Rome. The surroundings are exactly as described by Virgil in the sixth book of the Aeneid.

Evidence has also been brought to light that the sanctuary was used in the first century of the Christian era as the refuge and burial place of Christians. The discovery is the result of four years' survey and exploration by Professor Majuri—already renowned for his work at Herculaneum and Pompeii. Happening by chance on an unexpected clew, some time ago Professor Majuri began secret excavations which have led to these revelations.

Modern Trend in Toys Leans to Realism

Advance Information From Santa's Workshop.

Philadelphia.—Streamlined skates, with a spare roller and a tail light—that is what Santa Claus is going to bring many good kiddies this Christmas.

Toys, according to a preview for the United Press had at Santa's workshop at the North pole, will be more durable.

Toy automobiles will have streamlined effects, "pants" over the wheels and really be a miniature model of the real thing.

Little sister's dolls will not be so large, but will have real human hair, flirting eyes and smooth, flesh-colored bodies. Some will eat and drink. Her stove will be electric and there will be

Italy Builds Huge Dry Docks for Ocean Ships

Rome.—It is predicted that within five years the port of Naples will have the biggest dry dock on the continent, with accommodation not only for the largest ships now afloat, but also for those of even greater dimensions that are planned or in course of construction. The dock, in which work has already begun, will be over 1,100 feet long, and it is noted that the biggest Italian ships, which must at present dock in England for repairs and overhaul, will no longer be dependent on a foreign port when the new dock is completed. The dock will accommodate two ships.

The total cost has been estimated at 50,000,000 lire (over $4,000,000), a large sum in view of the unsatisfactory state of Italian finances; but it is pointed out that many thousand workmen will be employed, directly or indirectly, both on the work itself and afterward, and the moment chosen is regarded as opportune because of "an undeniable world tendency toward a revival of maritime traffic," and also because nearly all countries are renewing their naval armaments.

Non-Skid Collar Button
Oyster Harbors, Mass.—Chain-store executives, in convention here, decided to market a square collar-button—one that can't roll under a man's dresser, a separate switch for the coils in the oven.

Bicycles, scooters, wagons and velocipedes, too, are following the trend to streamlines. In addition to all those improvements the new wagons, scooters and other toy vehicles will have pneumatic tires.

The toy makers have done big things for the kindergarten youngsters. Toys this year will have more educational features than ever. Small dumb-bells have just enough weight to give the youngster good muscle building as he swings them.

Several new adult games are being brought out. One of the most popular is expected to be "Monopoly," in which four to fourteen may play. "Sorry," an English game; "Igo," from Japan and "Harlem" are other games on the market. Backgammon is due for a comeback.

Singing French Songs Is Called Language Aid

Springfield, Mo.—Singing French songs is an excellent method of learning the language, Lambert Orton, professor of modern languages in Drury college here, believes. He has obtained permission to introduce this innovation to his classes this fall.

Simple French folk songs will be sung by beginning students and advanced students will have some French operas, Professor Orton says.

The plan has been tried out during the last two years and has been found to be an aid in learning correct pronunciation, according to the instructor. Moreover it helps students learn French spelling, and, best of all, it is a lot of fun, the undergraduates say.

Professor Orton recently returned from Paris, where he spent the summer studying linguistics and music in the Sorbonne.

Man Weighs 638 Pounds, Has to Ride by Freight

Buenos Aires.—Argentina claims the world's fattest man. He is Pedro Cardozo, a butcher, weighing 638 pounds.

He arrived here from Rosario after traveling in a baggage car because he could not enter the coaches. He is thirty years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, with a waist line of 7 feet 10 inches, a forearm of 1 foot 10 inches and a thigh of 3 feet 9 inches.

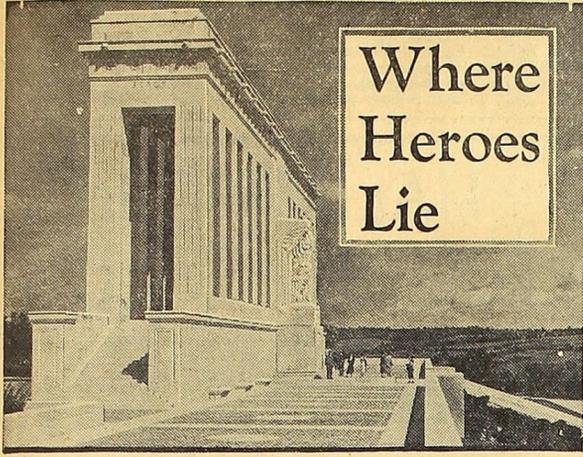

When he was nineteen he weighed only 158 pounds, but he had to quit working at twenty-five because he had reached his present weight and could not stand on his feet more than a few minutes at a time.

Radio Burglar Alarm to Frighten Intruders

London.—A woman has just paid $250 for a radiophone—to play one record only.

When it is played, a dog's bark is heard, followed by a man's cry of "Who's there?"

The purchaser is a widow, living with an elderly maid in a district which has had epidemics of burglaries. With her new radiophone loudspeakers will be installed in every room, the radiophone will be connected with "invisible light" alarms across each window, and any would-be thief will get the shock of his life if he tries to enter.

Where Heroes Lie

American Memorial on Hill Near Chateau-Thierry.

Prepared by National Geographic Society.

WITH the approach of Armistice day the patriotic American's thoughts turn back to that day in 1918, when the World war ceased, and to the men who gave up life for world peace.

Today 30,880 heroes sleep in beautiful cemeteries in the shadows of handsome memorials near the scenes of their war engagements.

In order that the gallant achievements and noble sacrifices of American troops might be suitably commemorated, the American Battle Monuments Commission was created by an act of congress approved March 4, 1923. Gen. John J. Pershing is its chairman.

Eight memorial chapels, of singular beauty and dignity, now stand in the eight American military cemeteries in France, Belgium and England. Eleven monuments rise on the principal American battlefields and at certain chief bases of our operations. Two of these, one at Brest and the other at Gibraltar, have been built in tribute to the achievements of our navy's World war forces.

In size and design the battlefield monuments range from the towering Doric shaft, topped by a statue, on the dominating hill of Montfaucon, to the simple, effective monument near the town of Ypres, with its low lines blending with the plains of Belgium.

The imposing monument on Hill 204, near Chateau-Thierry; the majestic circular colonnade on Montsec, in the St. Mihiel region, and the other memorials in their size are proportionally representative of the strategical importance and greatness of the operations conducted in those areas by American military forces.

On many of these monuments have been inscribed the names of places where the troops engaged in heavy fighting. Orientation tables assist the visitor in identifying these positions on the landscape, and maps engraved on the walls indicate the progress of the offensives, as well as the divisions which took part. Decorative features also show the insignia of the divisions and larger units, types of equipment used by the American soldiers, and the coats of arms of the United States and allied nations.

Beautiful Chapels.

The chapels in the military cemeteries likewise vary widely in design. Each is a gem of architectural beauty and an enduring shrine consecrated to the memory of those who fell in battle. On their walls are carved the names of the 1,289 men whose final resting places are unknown and of all those whose marble headstones bear the inscription, "Here rests in honored glory an American soldier known but to God." This inscription, prepared by the commission, was afterward engraved on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National cemetery.

At each of the cemeteries beautiful and comfortable reception rooms have been established near to or in connection with the caretaker's offices for the convenience of visitors and those desiring information regarding the soldier dead.

All of the memorials were designed by carefully selected American architects of note, whose work has more than justified the confidence that the commission reposed in them. Each memorial, too, was planned with full consideration of the inherent beauty of the particular position it occupies. In every case infinite care has been exercised in the selection of the quality and in the utilization of the stone, marble, and other materials that have gone into their construction.

The general locations of the major battlefield memorials are enduring reminders of the three historic localities on the western front where American forces in large numbers engaged in active combat. These are known as the Aisne-Marne, the Meuse-Argonne, and the St. Mihiel battlefields. Only the last named of these areas was in Lorraine, that part of eastern France set aside in the summer of 1917 as the concentration area for the American army.

The British army had been established in the northern part of the long battle lines, near the Channel ports, thus protecting its direct line of communication with the British Isles. The French army protected Paris.

Yankees to the Rescue.

The American army was assembled well to the east of Paris, where it could be supplied by the railways leading from the comparatively unused South Atlantic ports of France, thus avoiding the congested area around Paris.

Early in 1918, while the American army was being built up in this section, the Germans commenced their series of major offensives. Available American troops were immediately turned over to the allied commander in chief to use as he saw fit. To help stop the enemy drive of May 27, which started north of the Aisne river, American divisions were hurried into line in the vicinity of Chateau-Thierry, directly across the German line of advance toward Paris.

Other American divisions took part in the great counter-offensive which began July 18, 1918, and within three weeks had driven the enemy to the north of the Vesle river. The American First, Second, Third, Fourth, Twenty-sixth, Twenty-eighth, Thirty-second, Forty-second, and Seventy-seventh divisions took part in the battles which raged in the vicinity. Of the 300,000 Americans participating in these operations, 64,000 became casualties.

Therefore, on historic Hill 204, rising just west of Chateau-Thierry, has been constructed an imposing memorial, with twin rows of majestic columns. The site of the monument commands a sweeping view of the Marne valley, in an area rich in fields of grain, sugar beets, and vineyards, flecked with quaint towns and quiet villages, crisscrossed by little streams.

Here devastation stalked with the progress of battle. Every town was a target for artillery. Farms were furrowed with myriads of trenches and subterranean shelters, subsoil was turned up over formerly fertile land, fields were implanted with barbed wire and sown with shell fragments.

Two Great Cemeteries.

There would be little in this vicinity in years to come to remind American pilgrims of the heroic deeds of their countrymen who fought in the Aisne-Marne region were it not for the monument and the two American military cemeteries.

One is located on the northern side of the hill on which stands the famous Belleau Wood. The other is near Fere-Tardenois, just north of the Ourcq river. The Oise-Aisne, near Fere, is the second largest of the American cemeteries abroad, with 6,012 battle dead resting within its confines.

The first operation of a complete American army as an independent unit in the World war was the attack of September 12, 1918, in the St. Mihiel region, which lies southeast of Verdun, between the Meuse and Moselle rivers.

German attacks early in the war had driven a wedge between Verdun on the Meuse and Pont-a-Mousson on the Moselle. The apex of the wedge included St. Mihiel, about 20 miles south of Verdun. This sector, occupied by the Germans for about four years, was the St. Mihiel salient.

A study of a map will show how geography generally determines the strategy of war as well as the commerce of peace time. The enviroing hills to the east and west dictated that the main attack should be delivered northward. The First, Second, Fourth, Fifth, Twenty-sixth, Forty-second, Seventy-eighth, Eighty-second, Eighty-ninth and Ninetieth divisions took part in the offensive, in which approximately 550,000 Americans were engaged.

The American Second army was organized in this region a month afterward, in October, 1918, and later the Seventh, Twenty-eighth, Thirty-third, and Ninety-second divisions undertook a general attack in the direction of Metz. The signing of the Armistice halted that battle.

Memorial on Montsec.

These operations, and the services of American units in the quiet sectors to the southeast and in the Vosges mountains, are commemorated by an imposing memorial on the isolated hill, Montsec, located a few miles east of St. Mihiel and lying close to the southern face of the salient, in the area liberated by the American offensive of September 12.

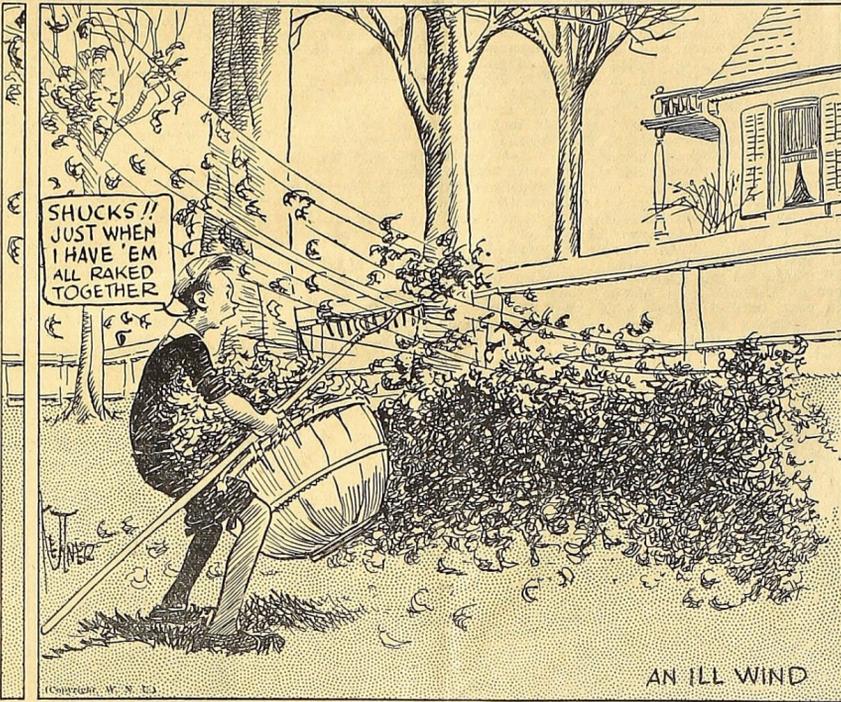

For miles around it dominates the landscape, yet when one passes between the pylons and mounts the steps leading to the topmost flight of the approach, the majesty and impressiveness of the monument assume even more surprising proportions.

At Thiaucourt, is the third largest of the American military cemeteries with 4,152 headstones. The graves lie in a large rectangular area, cut by tree-bordered walks and beds of flowers. At one end stands a cross-shaped monument, on the front of which is a compelling statue depicting the typical youthful American soldier, with trench helmet in hand and side arms and canteen slung on his waist and shoulder.

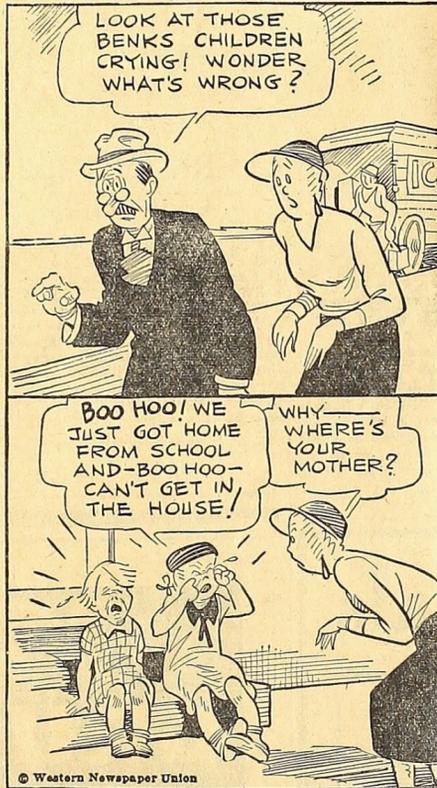

At the north end, beyond the eagle-shaped central sundial of stone, stands the chapel, an open, circular colonnade, or peristyle, flanked by a chapel room and a museum. The chapel interior contains richly colored mosaics, which include, above the carved altar, the Angel of Victory.

To the Voters of Iosco County

I desire to announce to the voters of Iosco county that I will be a candidate at the November election for the office of County Clerk, and you will find the slips at the various voting precincts. As you know I was a candidate in the primary election held recently and lost out by five votes in a contest between four different candidates.

I was but five votes behind, and owing to the fact that I was busy at the office and couldn't do any campaign work, I have been advised by my friends to become a candidate at the November election and I have finally consented to the same. I have been a resident of Iosco county for over 50 years and for 50 years have been a taxpayer in this county, and I want to thank the voters for their support in the past and assure you that if elected to this important office, I will conduct the same along business lines the same as I have applied to my duties in the past.

Thanking you again, I am,
Yours sincerely,
Frank E. Dease.

POULTRY FACTS

SPECIAL FEED FOR GROWING BROILERS

Care Is Necessary to Obtain the Best Results.

There are generally considered to be two broiler seasons—one near the holiday season and one near Easter time. The popularity of producing two or three-pound young chickens is increasing each year. With the development of this enthusiasm have come a number of new problems not heretofore encountered in any large degree, cites a writer in Wallace's Farmer.

Winter broilers are reared either on the floors of brooder houses or in the more modern battery brooders. There is less difficulty for success with floor brooding, but the battery method seems to present reactions that are difficult to analyze.

Cannibalism and feather picking are problems in all confined systems of brooding, but seem to show greater aggravation in batteries.

The battery plan of management has developed a new obstacle or disease, commonly termed "hock disease," or slipped tendons. The tendon at the hock slips out of place and the leg turns to one side. It has often been confused with leg weakness, or rickets, but this is an error. Rickets results from deficient mineral assimilation and can be corrected by some vitamin D carrier, such as cod-liver oil or sardine oil.

Experiments at the Pennsylvania, Ohio, and United States government experiment stations showed that slipped tendons were caused by too much mineral intake, and more particularly by not having calcium and phosphorus in the proper balance or relation with each other.

In order to handle this situation, rations for broilers are now so constructed that there is one and one-half to two times as much calcium as phosphorus, and not more than a total of 3 per cent of both.

The job of growing chicks to broiler size, indoors, is an extremely artificial one, and the ration must be adjusted to meet the unusual conditions.

Leg Weakness, Blindness, Bother Young, Old Birds

"Leg weakness" may be a disease of young or old stock, manifesting itself without discoverable cause, or it may be an accompaniment of other disorders that show this weakness as a part of the symptoms observable, says a correspondent in the Rural New-Yorker. Protruding vents, particularly in pullets laying heavily, show birds unable to stand up under the strain of such production.

Blindness may accompany chronic coccidiosis or other chronic affections or may seem to be an affection of the nerves of sight not dependable upon any known disease elsewhere. About all that can be said of it in many cases is that it is "A disease of the optic nerve."

Unless autopsies reveal a definite disease or definite diseases to account for the mortality in the flock, it will have to be ascribed to the lack of constitutional vigor, and overcome, if at all, by greater attention to that necessary ingredient of flock welfare; very possibly at the expense of such heavy egg production as layers are now forced to.

Cut Poultry Mortality

Heavy pullet mortality has long been recognized as one of the major problems for the poultryman, reports H. H. Kauffman, poultry extension specialist of the Pennsylvania State college. On many farms it has been found that 40 to 60 per cent of the pullets fail to complete their first laying year. These figures come from surveys made in several different states. The birds either die or are removed from the flocks because they are poor producers. Culls or market hens may be partially counted as mortality, as many fail in production because they do not have sufficient stamina to stand up under heavy production. There are, however, some vigorous hens that fail in production because they are by heredity poor producers.

Pastures for Poultry

Poultry raisers in England use special pastures for poultry. They use rations lower in protein and yet get good growth and egg production. As protein is the most expensive part of the ration, any method which permits lower protein feeding is important to the poultryman. Climatic conditions in England are more favorable than in this country for providing green range for poultry throughout the year. A system used there is to keep a large number of hens in portable houses.

Cull Old Hens

Five years of experimental work at the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture shows that it is not profitable to keep the average hen more than three years. These records show that all birds gave their best production their first year and decreased in production each succeeding year. In these experiments production decreased 67 per cent by the fourth year and in some cases as much as 70 per cent was noted by the end of the third year.

THIS CHANGE gives Children a Chance

Perhaps you have tried nearly every sort of way to keep a child's bowels in proper condition, and failed.

Yet, almost any child who has been convalescing in a hospital, will usually come out with bowels working like a well-regulated watch.

The average mother gives any laxative the family may be using, while doctors give children a liquid laxative of suitable ingredients, suitable strength, and in suitable amount.

Make the change now to pure, California Syrup of Figs instead of harsh medicines, you risk no more violence to your child's appetite, digestion, and general physical condition. You'll have a safer, more satisfactory result, too. Those little upsets and complaints just disappear and the child is soon normal again. Try it!

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

On the Loose
He—"What part of the car causes the most accidents?" She—"The nut that holds the wheel."

For good digestion

—there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric, digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect... it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions... and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemo-glo-bin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices... so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important.

By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive... accumulative... and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion... sound sleep... and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Do not be misled by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

Nobility Shrouds New York Valley

Once Home of Refugee Who Feared Napoleon.

Syracuse, N. Y.—More than a century and a quarter ago in a valley in central New York, known till this day as Bronder's Hollow, a refugee member of France's nobility, who stood in line as a future king of that country, is said to have sought escape from Napoleon, who was making quick work of his opponents by way of the guillotine.

Here in the forest recesses of hills in a fortress-like mansion hewn from sturdy cherry trees, this Frenchman founded a settlement which after a brief, colorful existence crumbled back into forest wilds to become one of the forgotten villages of this section of New York, according to the Syracuse Post-Standard.

Built Imposing Chateau.
The story had its beginnings in 1808, when a Frenchman who called himself plain Louis Anathe Muller, and who never ventured forth with an armed bodyguard, purchased 2,700 acres of land in this isolated region near Slab City, now Georgetown, and employed 150 men, whom he paid in gold and silver, to construct a palatial, bullet-proof chateau on the summit of the highest hill on his estate.

Beside a stream a mile southeast of his homestead, in the valley of Bronder's Hollow, named after John Passon Bronder, one of the men who had accompanied him to this country, the Frenchman who called himself Muller established a village which contained two stores, a mill and a storehouse, as well as numerous dwellings.

During the half dozen years that he lived in this forest mansion, Muller's reticence and eccentric conduct greatly stirred the curiosity of his neighbors and gave rise to many a wild rumor as to his identity. But never by an idle word did he betray his real story, and when after hearing of the collapse of Napoleon's fortunes he departed jubilantly for France, he left in his wake a mystery which never has been explained to the full satisfaction of his central New York acquaintances or their descendants.

Home Destroyed by Fire.

The modern visitor to the site of the old Muller house, which was leveled by fire in 1907, must stretch his imagination to believe that this once was the estate of a French nobleman, says the writer. If he drives along the narrow country road that winds across the hills toward Bronder's Hollow he will pass densely wooded stretches that look as if they never had known the pioneer's ax.

A few bleak, gray farmhouses with desolation staring through their paneless windows, decrepit barns with doors that creak on rusty hinges and the shapeless frames of occasional abandoned automobiles along the way are the only evidence that man ever conquered or cultivated this isolated territory.

When Muller departed for France after the downfall of Napoleon he left his central New York property in the hands of an agent who proved untrustworthy, and two years later, in 1816, he returned to find his house stripped of its rich furniture, his garden covered with weeds and his village forsaken.

After viewing the wreck, he sold the land to Abijah Weston, a New York city merchant, for the sum of $10,500, and then went back to France, where no doubt he reclaimed a prouder name than plain Louis Anathe Muller, and calmly wiped the American chapter off the slate of his life with never a quail for the throes of curiosity which were bound to torture posterity when it encountered the mystery of Muller Hill.

Police to Investigate Purse Snatching Ducks

Fresno, Calif.—Fresno police planned to peer down the gullets and cross-examine members of the famous flocks of ducks at Roeding park, city playground.

The ducks, it became known, were charged with purse snatching.

Mrs. A. Van Fleet of New York, who was spending the summer in California, made the charge before Yosemite national park rangers.

Mrs. Van Fleet embarrassedly explained at a park entrance that she could not pay the entrance fee because the ducks snatched her purse, containing $90, as she rested in Roeding park en route to Yosemite.

Economic Security

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Two principles are essential to economic security. The first and perhaps most important is thrift.

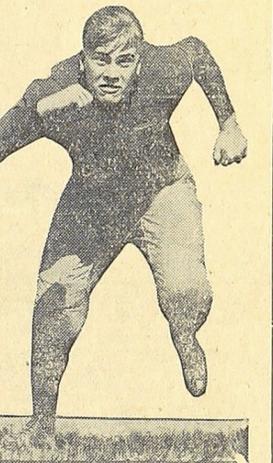

Extravagance leads to ruin but thrift assures financial stability. The thrifty man saves something, however small, out of his weekly pay roll. These savings are permitted to accumulate and are never used except from grave necessity and that only as the last resort.

Many homes have been built on weekly and monthly savings. Small fortunes have been built upon the principle; always spend a little less than you earn. It would be an interesting study to determine the profits derived by the use of by-products. In the meat industry the blood of the animals was formerly thrown away, now it is profitably utilized in many ways. A dentist, known to the writer, sent his office rug to the refiners and received a check for a neat sum for the gold found in the rug. A well managed business sees that there is no waste in its process of manufacturing or salesmanship. Extravagance is always waste.

We are facing a serious menace in the industrial situation by having to provide large sums of money to take care of those on relief rolls. If all the waste in foodstuffs in all the leading hotels in our cities could be gathered together it would be sufficient to feed a very large percentage of this dependent class.

Another essential principle is, to avoid debts. This was the principle upon which our fathers built their modest fortunes. They never bought anything until they had the money to pay for it. A mortgage was a nightmare. Pay as you go and do not borrow if you can possibly avoid it was the prevailing spirit of the past generation.

The present generation presents a distressing picture in contrast. Not only are we urged to spend all we earn but a little more by buying on the installment plan. If we are in debt we are urged to be in no hurry to pay it. Later it may be paid in greatly depreciated dollars. Let taxes ride. The man who owes money seems to be in a better position than the man to whom the money is due.

Measures which violate the fundamental principles of our forefathers cannot be depended upon as stabilizing forces, upon which to build the return of prosperity. Let us return to the spirit of our fathers—Save and avoid debts.

Estimate Texas Rangers Have Killed 10,000 Men

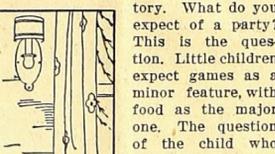

Austin, Texas.—Texas rangers have killed 10,000 men, Dr. W. P. Webb, professor of history at the University of Texas, has concluded after years of research in preparation for a history of the celebrated polling force.

Doctor Webb puts that estimate on 100 years of ranger activities. "Arranged in a row, head to foot," he said, "the dead would make a line 11 miles long."

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

THE word party has a flexible significance. It may be a political group, or a social assembly, or any one of many things, but as a home word it means a company invited to come at a certain time on a specified day with entertainment as the object. There is an interesting question which arises in connection with such an assemblage, although the above is appreciated as explanatory. What do you expect of a party? This is the question. Little children expect games as a minor feature, with food as the major one. The question of the child who was belated in arriving has become classic. "Is the party over?" he asked, and was delighted when he found the refreshments had not been served. Almost every child would agree that the real "party" was the refreshments.

There are adult parties which proclaim that food is the main feature such as a dinner party, luncheon, supper party, tea party, theater supper, etc. And although there is no mention of a meal in an after the theater party it is as well recognized as one for refreshments, as if it were called a theater supper, the latter, however, suggesting more of a meal than the former.

Entertainment Essential.
While food is one element expected of a party, it does not in itself provide the gaiety needed. A group of persons eating food, however excellent and elaborately served and prepared for the guests, fails of its function as a party unless the persons are entertained. Brilliant and witty conversation is pleasing diversion in itself, and when accompanied by a "dish of tea" or more elaborate dishes, it provides the required merriment and good cheer. It devolves upon the hostess to invite congenial spirits for such an occasion. Nothing is more depressing than a dinner or supper party without laughter and gaiety. No amount of edible delicacies can make up for such a lack. On the other hand simple food with a happy group has the necessary elements of a party. There is entertainment.

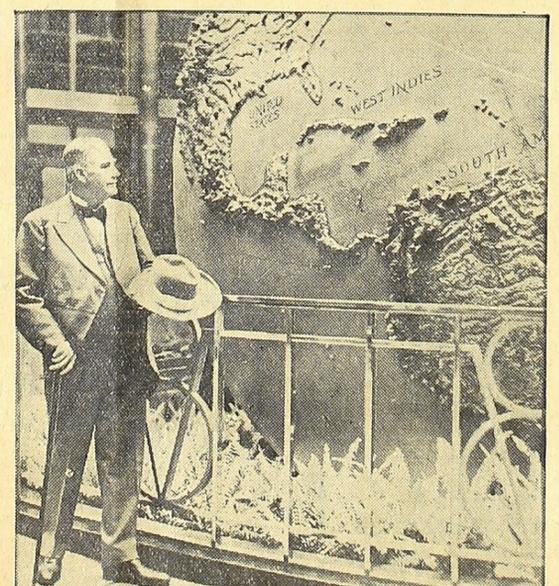

This matter of entertainment is more important than food. Ask any bridge expert whether it is the food or the games of contract which he looks for at a card party. All persons who go to a party, whatever its kind, unless actually hungry or over-fond of eating, hope to have a good time apart from the taste of the viands. Laughter, gaiety, companionship, absorbing entertainment, these are wanted, something which takes them out of themselves, which makes them forget their usual engrossing work, their perplexities or possibly physical pain, and which makes life even more worth living. A hostess who can instill any or all of these pleasant elements into her parties has successful ones, whatever the refreshments. Parties need not cost much, since merriment, happiness, gaiety, good cheer are apart from monetary values. This is a period when parties are heartening. Happy events lead cheer to perplexed spirits.

Decorative Doors.
Decorative outside doors are the style, the accent naturally being on front doors. This idea of making the doors distinctive sprang into favor first in tea houses, but the popularity has spread until there is almost a craze for dressy doors.

The decoration may consist of bright paint. This may be featured also in blinds, and possibly in trim of the house. The vogue of extending the color scheme to front doors, and then, necessarily, to all of the outside doors, pushes the fashion to its furthest limit on the house itself. Occasionally a low fence is painted to match, or a trellis against the house. But it is the doors that are the bizarre feature. Hitherto these have been conservative architectural elements, as far as color was concerned. There is something refreshingly cheerful about having an entrance door gay.

Bachelor Quail Mother and Adopt Orphaned Chickens

Male bob-whites, jilted by coy hens, will adopt and mother orphaned bob-white chicks, it has been discovered by Herbert L. Stoddard of the United States Department of Agriculture. The quail bachelors will take credit for the work of incubation, and lead broods of day-old chicks off into the coverts and raise them as their own.

The significance of this discovery lies in the fact that while quail will raise only one brood in the wild, each hen may lay as many as 60 eggs in captivity. These eggs may be gathered and hatched artificially.

Until now, the introduction of the chicks to natural environment was always a risky procedure. With the bachelor quail acting in the role of foster father, it may be possible to eliminate many of the early losses, since the chicks will be under the watchful eyes of wild birds.

CHAPTER V

Jean Gerard regarded the desk in the gun room at High Ledges with pursed lips and angry eyes.

"Gee, but you make me mad!" She addressed the piece of furniture as if it were maliciously responsible for her frustration. She wriggled a hairpin in the lock of the top drawer. Then with teeth set, she grasped the handles, jerked with all her strength. The drawer came out with a suddenness which sent her sprawling and scattered three letters from the desk onto the floor.

Ruefully she rubbed the back of her head. She knelt beside the drawer and eagerly examined its contents. There were several photographs of a pretty girl. One showed her in bouffant tulle on the back of a horse. Jean's eyes dilated.

"Circus rider!" she crooned. "Goody, I'll see one like her tomorrow." She turned the photograph over. On the back was scrawled:

"Miraculous escape. From calico and Calloway to liberty and lo— Fondly, Milly."

"She's a cutey all right. I— Jean gulped as a shadow fell across the photograph.

"Where's your uncle?" The photograph fell from her hand and lay with piquant, smiling face upward as Jean stared at the scowling man who loomed over her.

"I—don't know. Shall I try to find him, Mr. Calloway?"

Len Calloway removed his glance from the pictures and letters on the floor long enough to glare at her.

"Tell him I want to talk with him. Scram!"

Frightened at the grayness of his face, Jean fled. She scurried through the different rooms. Called. No answer. She had better go back and tell Mr. Calloway.

As she entered the gun room, one of the long French windows banged.

"He's gone. I guess that's that."

She dropped to her knees beside the drawer. Better put it back before anyone saw it. She scrambled up the contents. Where was the picture of the cutey circus rider? Gone. Had Mr. Calloway taken it? Why should he want it? Would her uncle be mad with her for having touched the desk?

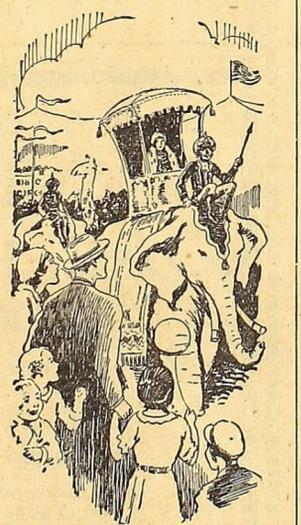

"I'd better get a move on." She hurriedly replaced the drawer, picked up the letters. Only two! There had been three when they fell. Had Mr. Calloway snatched one? What would he do with it? "Gee, have I started something?" she thought.

In the library after dinner, Rodney Gerard glanced at Jean speculatively as she bent demurely over a book. Her absorption was out of character. She was too quiet. She had been prying with rather frightening results; he recognized the symptoms.

He glanced about the room as he refilled his pipe. Good room. Big, yet not too full of things, mellow, dignified. Not too bad a place in which to spend part of a winter. He glanced at his sister-in-law knitting rapidly in the light of one of the softly shaded lamps. Not so restless. He was in for battle. He'd better go to it.

Mrs. Walter Gerard looked up. She laid down her knitting.

"I have planned to close the house on Thursday, if that suits you, Rodney. The days are getting so short."

"Elephants Are Coming! Hold Your Horses!"

"You needn't bother to do that, Annie. I shall remain here for part of the winter. I have decided to thin about a thousand acres of woodland and it will require my personal oversight. You and Jean toddle along to New York as you planned."

"The idea! Of course I shan't desert you, Rodney. I can stay, at least until after Christmas; then my cousin, the ambassador, has asked me to visit him."

Gerard buckled on his armor of determination. He hated to hurt her, but he couldn't, he wouldn't have her under his feet, and that's where she would be. "I appreciate your kindness, Annie, but Jim Armstrong, one of my roommates at college, who is a forester, will arrive soon to look over the timber and advise me as to what should come out. I hate like the dickens to say it, you have been so kind to keep house for me this summer, but I would prefer not to have you here."

Jean flung herself at Gerard. "Hey there, Kurious Kid, go slow. Want to push me into the fire?" The girl's grip tightened.

"Uncle Rod, please let me stay with you, please! I'm not going to school this winter anyway. I hate New York, and Mother and Father are always fighting, and I love to be with you, and I'll be a perfect lady, honest I will. Please let me stay. I'm—I'm always sort of peaceful with you."

Gerard's eyes were tender as he looked down at the pleading face. Peaceful. Poor, lonely kid. She did have a tough time. Not much fun living with her parents. Walter rarely came to High Ledges now. Was it too dull for him, or were there other reasons? Should he let Jean stay? He was fond of the funny little thing. Prue Schuyler was taking an interest in her; she was making her happier, more human than the impish child she had been.

"What say, Annie? Will you let Jean stay with me until after Christmas? No," he anticipated, as his sister-in-law started to speak, "it will upset my plans to have you here; besides, you should be in New York with Walter."

"Walter doesn't want me, either." For the first time since he had known her, Rodney heard Annie Gerard acknowledge defeat. Mighty hard on her. Walter was a bad egg, of course, but she had a cruel tongue and was so affected. That didn't excuse Walt; a man should be true to his wife no matter how she developed—but—the gods be praised, the problem of being true to Annie wasn't his.

THE STORY FROM THE BEGINNING

Prudence Schuyler comes from New York to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, whose health has been broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, who lives at High Ledges on the neighboring farm. There is at once a mutual attraction between the two, but Prudence decides to maintain a cool attitude toward him. She suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway, a rival of Gerard, tries to buy the timber off Prue's land, but she dislikes his conceited attitude and contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. On the evening Prue is expecting David from New York she is visited by Mrs. Walter Gerard and her thirteen-year-old daughter, Jean. They are hateful, curious persons and leave Prue rankled. A few days later Prudence comes in contact with them again when she accompanies Rod to his place. A clown comes, advertising a circus in a nearby town. Prue promises to accompany Rod and Jean to the circus.

"Look here, K. K., if I let you stay, will you solemnly promise not to pry into my affairs—or the affairs of the—the neighbors?"

Joy glowed beneath the tears. "My promise I'll be the finest girl ever, Uncle Rod."

"I'll give you a try. May she stay, Annie?"

"If you want her, Rodney. The doctor said she should live out of doors this winter, so perhaps she'll be better off here in the country."

"Then hustle to New York, send down warm clothes for her and the bill to me. Take the servants with you. I'll pay them for lost time. Jean and I will be off early, perhaps before you start."

"Ouf! Where?"

"There's a circus in the next town and we—we are going in a party."

"A party! I see. I think I know who the party will be. I wasn't born yesterday, Rodney."

How he detested her wink, Rodney thought, as he watched her leave the room. Jean slipped her arm through her uncle's.

"She's mad!" she observed in a strident whisper. "Cut that out, K. K. Never criticize your mother. You make good or you'll be packed off to New York on the first train. Get me?"

"I will, Uncle Rod. Cross-my-throat-an'-hope-to-die. What time will we start for the circus? I'll be ready. I won't go to sleep for a minute to-night."

"I'll bet you won't. I'm not so old that I've forgotten the nights before your father and I went to the circus. Go to bed. Get going."

He watched her as she ran to the door. "You sure have taken on responsibility," he reminded himself.

The next morning Rodney, with Jean snuggled in the roadster beside him, stopped before the red brick house. Prudence was waiting at the gate; her vivid lips were curved in a radiant smile.

"Good morning, Jean. I'm thrilled! My heart is so light it's bouncing along on balloon tires. Will there be room for me on the front seat, Mr. Gerard?"

"Cut out that 'Mr.—Gorgeous. It doesn't click with a circus. Rod—to you. Of course there's room in front. Hop in."

Jean bounced in her seat. "Hurry up, Miss Prue. Let's go, Uncle Rod." The main street of the town was already lined with crowds when they reached it; it lolled with children, echoed with the cries of fakirs, blazed with mammoth black and red posters. Gerard parked the roadster on a side street. Jean's feet barely touched the ground as between Prudence and her uncle she was swept along in the hurrying crowd. She stopped short in front of a poster showing an equestrienne in rose-color tulle skirts and a brief bodice, with the caption:

MADemoiselle MILLEE

"Why, there's my cutey—" Gerard looked at her sharply as she bit off the next word.

"What do you mean, K. K.? You—" "Buy the kid a balloon! Buy the kid a balloon! Say, listen! What's a circus to a kid without a balloon?"

The hatless man with an unkempt mane of black hair and a flock of colored balloons straining at their leashes, blocked the way. Jean's eyes were like dancing stars.

"May I have one, Uncle Rod?" "Sure. Choose the color. Have one, Prue!"

"Of course. I want that fat green one which looks as if it were about to burst from its own impotence."

What fun she was! How friendly she had been on the drive over. Had she buried the hatchet she seemed always to have up her sleeve for him? She was so alive mentally and physically. Life never could get one by the throat if one had a girl like her with whom to travel through the years, Rodney thought.

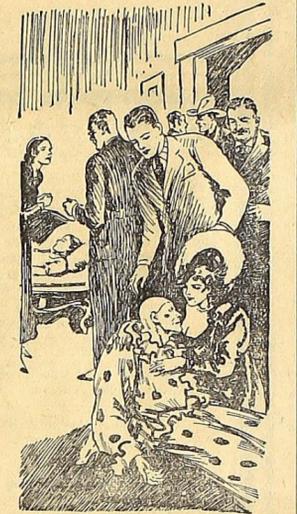

"It's coming! The parade's coming!" Prudence gripped Gerard's arm. "Hear that bugle, Jean?"

Rodney pushed Jean in front of him. Crushed his arm against his side to keep Prue's hand there. Far down the street was a restless sea of waving plumes, shining helmets, brilliant flags. Music, billowed forward. Snare. Drums. Cornets. Clarinets. He said to Prudence:

"The thrill of the Big Top. It's got Jean's excited voice cut into her uncle's. She darted forward. Rodney grabbed for her. Missed. The motorcycle clown, looking back in a parting wisecrack, shot forward at full speed. The crowd shrieked. Chicot caught the girl. Flung her back with all his force. The panic-stricken cyclist crashed into him.

Aeons after, it seemed to Rodney Gerard, the physician, bending over

"Be a Good—Girl, Milly."

Jean's limp figure on the black half-cloth sofa in a nearby house, straightened.

"She's coming out of it all right. Prolonged faint from shock. Better get her home as soon as she can sit up."

Prudence whispered: "Don't look so agonized, Rodney. See, her eyelids are quivering."

"I'm all shot to pieces over this. I—I didn't know how much I cared for the Kurious—" Gerard choked on the words.

Across the room on the floor where they had dropped him lay the clown. Rodney Gerard bent over the twisted body, laid his hand on the dirt-streaked shoulder.

"You saved her, Chicot. Can you hear? You—"

"Let me in! Where's Grandpop? Let me in!"

A girl, in the cotton velvets and plumed hat of a circus rider on parade, burst into the room. Patches of rouge stood out like fever spots on her colorless face. Her black eyes were distended with fright. With a shriek she flung herself to her knees beside Chicot, put her arms under the old clown's shoulders, and lifted him until his head rested against her breast.

A spasm of pain contorted the grotesque face. The lids under their painted brows opened. He tried to put his hand over hers. It wavered futilely and dropped. His whisper seemed to fill the still room.

"Be a good—girl, Milly. You'll be a great—rider—if you keep at it. I've kept you—with me—you're safer—now. I—must—get up. Time—for—my act—"

The last faint word fluttered in a sigh. Chalky lids drooped over dull eyes. The crumpled figure settled lower in the girl's arms.

"Grandpop! Grandpop! Don't leave me! I can't bear it to have you hurt! First I hurt you and now—"

The physician gently loosened the girl's arms and eased the body of the old clown to the floor. Rodney Gerard laid his hand on her shoulder.

Confederation Articles and U. S. Constitution

The articles of confederation conferred upon congress none but the delegated powers and recognized the absolute sovereignty of the states, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Aside from the right to make war and peace, regulate foreign intercourse, receive and send ambassadors, control and coinage of money, and settle disputed boundaries, congress had no power to act without the consent of nine of the states, each casting one ballot. It could not levy taxes, and before 1787 the war debt had destroyed the financial reputation of the United States abroad.

The states were divided in their interests, and at the last Colonial congress but eight of the states sent delegates. Not the least of the weaknesses of the confederation was the nonprovision of a chief magistrate, or for a national judiciary.

To meet these needs it was found necessary to frame a new Constitution, systematically organizing a permanent form of government.

This document arranges the powers of government under three heads—legislative, executive and judicial—and places the supreme power in the people of the whole country, instead of vainly endeavoring to maintain a multitude of independent states. It replaced a disjointed confederacy of jealous states with a nation.

No One Recipe for Apple Sauce

Variety of Methods Can Be Employed in Making Delicacy.

The two most fundamental points of difference in the making of apple sauce lies in the cooking, is the opinion of a noted chef. She says: In my mother's kitchen when it was made, it was a point of pride to see that the apple slices preserved their shape during the cooking and serving. The apples, first peeled, cored, and sliced in segments were dropped into an already boiling sirup of sugar and water, one cup to a quart of fruit being sufficient. They were covered and cooked gently. The upper slices were pierced with a fork and the saucepan removed immediately they were tender, to avoid the additional cooking that would disintegrate the pieces.

Then, as well as today, another "school" of apple sauce making had its adherents. To these there was no sauce like that apple sauce which was put through a colander after cooking, and was of the consistency of a rather thin cereal, smooth as to texture, and so nearly liquid as to require separate serving dishes.

In this apple sauce the fruit is freed of its seeds but need not be peeled. A beautiful color is imparted when the skins are red, as some of the color is in the finished sauce. After cooking until tender, in sugar and water, the excess liquid is drained, and the fruit pressed through a colander. Makers of canned apple sauce seem to have favored this method, as well as many makers of fresh.

The spices and flavors to be described can be used in making either kind of apple sauce. A cautious shake of the cinnamon holder imparts a delicious flavor. Some tastes incline toward the addition of a few thin slices of lemon in the cooking. The lemon may be removed when cooked. If served it should be cut very fine. Grated pineapple in small quantity is included in the dish at times. A combination of cranberry sauce is made by adding one part cranberry sauce to two parts apple sauce. With the whole apple sauce as first described, this is the most successful.

Why Doctors Favor a Liquid Laxative

A doctor will tell you that the careless use of strong laxatives may do more harm than good.

Harsh laxatives often drain the system, weaken the bowel muscles, and even affect the liver and kidneys. Fortunately, the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you needn't take a "double dose" a day or two later.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin gently helps the average person's bowels while nature is restoring their regularity. Why not try it? Some pill or tablet may be more convenient to carry. But there is little "convenience" in any cathartic which is taken so frequently, you must carry it with you, wherever you go!

Its very taste tells you Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is wholesome. A delightful taste, and delightful action. Safe for expectant mothers, and children. At all druggists, ready for use, in big bottles.

15c now for tins of 12 tablets.
25c now for bottles of 24 tablets.

And the big, family size, 100 tablet bottles again reduced!

These new low prices are now in effect throughout the United States.

So—Always Say "Bayer" When You Buy

These new low prices make it unnecessary now to accept unknown aspirin tablets to save money.

So—see that you get the real Bayer article now by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, when you buy; but always say B-A-Y-E-R Aspirin, and see that you get it.

Remember, scientists rate it among the fastest known reliefs for headaches, and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia.

ALWAYS SAY "BAYER ASPIRIN" NOW WHEN YOU BUY

YOUR TOWN YOUR STORES

OUR community includes the farm homes surrounding the town. The town stores are there for the accommodation and to serve the people of our farm homes. The merchants who advertise "specials" are merchants who are sure they can meet all competition in both quality and prices.

FARMERS, ATTENTION!

As we have some Agricultural Lime manufactured by the U. S. Gypsum Co. that we have left on hand and we wish to give the farming community a chance to get this lime at a low price to improve their lands for their crops, we will sell this lime at our warehouse for $8.50 per ton. This is a very low price for it, as at the present time it's worth at least $15.00 per ton. If time payment is wanted, will take your note for 6 months or longer if you wish, so it is a good chance to improve your soil.

Just received a carload of fresh Alpha Portland Cement, which is as good a grade as is on the market today.

Have a good stock of all kinds of lumber and builders' supplies at this season's prices.

House to rent, containing 6 rooms and bath, in good location, with garage. Cheap rent.
