FALL ELECTION BALLOT HAS TEN TICKETS

Fate Of Six Amendments To State Constitution To Be Decided

Tuesday, November 6, general election day, will bring the climax to several months of campaigning on the part of candidates for public office and exponents of the six proposed amendments to the state constitution.

On the general election ballots this year appear the names of ten political parties. The Democratic party appears first on the list. It is placed thus because of its victory in the 1932 elections. The Democratic party has candidates for every office of importance in Isosco county and the state. It is the most nearly complete Democratic ticket that has appeared in Isosco county in several years.

The Republican ticket holds second place on the ballot with candidates for every office. It is followed by the remaining eight parties, named here in the order in which they appear: Socialist Party, Communist Party, Commonwealth Party, Socialist Labor Party of America, American Party, People's Progressive Party, Farmer-Labor Party, and National Party.

The titles of the six proposed constitutional amendments, which appear on a separate ballot, are as follows:

No. 1—Amendment to provide for non-partisan elections of judges.

No. 2—Amendment limiting the specific taxes upon gasoline and like fuel sold or used to propel motor vehicles upon the public roads and highways of the state, prescribing the purposes for which such taxes may be used, and providing exemptions of certain other taxes for those engaged in the manufacturing, refining, selling, importing, storing, transporting, or distributing of gasoline and like fuels.

No. 3—Amendment limiting registration license fees or taxes on all motor vehicles except commercial motor vehicles and motorcycles, prescribing the purposes for which such fees or taxes may be used and providing for exemptions from certain other taxes.

No. 4—Amendment permitting the adoption of home rule government by counties.

No. 5—Amendment to abolish the uniform rule of taxation and to permit the classification of property for taxation purposes and an income tax for public schools.

No. 6—Amendment permitting raising of jurisdiction of justices of the peace in cities of more than 250,000 population to $1,500.00.

Proposed amendments two and three are without doubt familiar to every voter in the state. They have received the greatest amount of publicity of any in the list. Amendment No. 6, even if adopted, would have no effect in Isosco county. The first amendment, also, would probably have little application locally. It is designed principally for localities in which candidates for judicial office are not widely known personally. The fourth amendment is another, the passage of which would probably have no immediate effect in this county.

MOVEMENT PLANNED FOR BETTER HOUSING

The Federal Housing Administration, through Raymond M. Foley, Michigan director, has designated T. George Sternberg, local attorney, to organize the Isosco County Better Housing Committee. This work is in line with the program of President Roosevelt in his drive for recovery. The Roosevelt administration is attempting, through a better housing and modernization program of homes and farm homes and buildings, to revive building trades throughout the country and provide a means of furnishing necessary funds to home owners and farmers for the purpose of repairing, remodeling or modernizing their buildings.

This plan provides for loans to be made without security to such people who can qualify for these loans and who need this money for the purposes stated. It is expected that this housing program will provide a way for employment of labor that has not yet received any assistance from the Government. More details of this program and the modernization plan will be given in succeeding articles in this paper.

ANNUAL APPEAL OF RED CROSS IS ANNOUNCED

Membership Drive Will Last From Armistice Day To Thanksgiving

In accordance with a long established custom, the American Red Cross will conduct its annual Roll Call in this and thousands of other communities throughout the country from Armistice Day until Thanksgiving. This statement was made today by W. A. Evans, chairman of the Isosco county chapter.

Appointment of Mrs. J. D. LeClair as Roll Call chairman also was announced. Other leaders in the membership appeal will be selected at an early date, the chapter head said.

"Manned almost entirely by volunteers," said the chapter chairman, "the organization's 3,700 chapters form a bulwark of hope and safety for distressed citizens everywhere."

"The Red Cross is no stranger in this community. Locally, it has rendered an indispensable service during the period of depression and partial recovery, and will continue to do so after the recovery the same as it did before the depression. Its work must go on. Since all its activities are made possible by individual support, I am convinced that the local citizenship will respond quickly and graciously when the membership campaign gets under way on Armistice Day."

LEGION DANCE TO BE HELD NOVEMBER 12th

Annual Armistice Party Will Be Elaborate Event

The American Legion at East Tawas is making elaborate plans for its annual Armistice party to be held at the Community Building, East Tawas, on Monday night, November 12th. This has always been one of the finest parties of the year and a get-together party from this section of the state.

The Legion has tried to vary its program by securing different orchestras on each occasion. For the coming party Nate Frye's ten-piece band of Lansing, Michigan, has been engaged, and a record party is expected as the band is well known, having played at the Graceland at Lupton last season.

A novel arrangement has been made which is expected to please the crowd as the music will be continuous fifty minutes of each hour instead of taking the regular intermission.

To the Voters of Isosco County

I desire to announce to the voters of Isosco county that I am a candidate for the office of prosecuting attorney on the Republican ticket and will appreciate your support at the election on November 6th, next. The office is one of great importance to the taxpayers of the county, as the prosecuting attorney is the attorney for the county and must give legal advice to all county officers as well as to the board of supervisors of the county, and he must appear in court in behalf of the people of the state of Michigan and prosecute those who are charged with criminal offenses. Many times, the friends and relatives of the convicted person become sore because their friend or relative has been convicted, and take their spite out on the prosecuting attorney, forgetting that a jury passes their judgment on these cases finally. In other words, some want the prosecuting attorney to prosecute those who they believe to have committed a crime and to overlook something they or their friend may have done. This is wrong and in all the time that I've been prosecuting attorney I've always conducted a thorough investigation before commencing a case, and friend or foe has always received a square deal at my hand in so far as I know how. Human nature is frail at its best, and anyone is liable to make a mistake. For the four years ending December 31, 1932, we handled four hundred and forty-two criminal cases and secured four hundred and ninety-nine.

Roy Charters, Democratic Candidate For Sheriff

Having received the nomination for Sheriff on the Democratic ticket, I would appreciate your vote and influence at the November 6 election. I was born and lived all my life in Isosco county. I have been a taxpayer for 20 years, and deputy sheriff for 12 years. Should I be elected in the coming election, it will be my ambition to give service to the county that will reflect credit to the citizenship which I represent. I shall endeavor to meet personally as many of the voters as possible before election. Should I miss you, please take this as a personal message from me.

Vote for Roy Charters for Sheriff November 6th.

Leslie Howard, Kay Francis Head Dynamic Film Cast

An exceedingly large and powerful cast was selected for the dynamic roles in the First National Productions feature "British Agent," which comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, November 4-5-6. Two of the most popular stars of the day, Leslie Howard and Kay Francis, head a list of twenty talented players in important speaking parts while there are a score more smaller roles and hundreds of extras playing in many of the spectacular scenes.

Howard and Miss Francis furnish the romantic interest as two lovers, the former an unofficial British agent and the latter an aristocratic Russian turned Red. Unofficial representatives of America, Italy and France are played by William Gargan, Cesar Romero and Phillip Reed respectively.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Bankers and President Roosevelt Move Toward an Accord; War Clouds Still Hover Over Balkans; Legion for Bonus Cash Payment.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

FOUR thousand or so financiers gathered in Washington for the annual convention of the American Bankers' association, and it became apparent at once that they were far from unanimous in their opinions concerning the economic policies of the New Deal. Francis Marion Law of Houston, Texas, retiring president of the association, gave out an interview in which he said he believed that economic recovery had arrived at a point where bankers of the United States could honestly advise business men to go into debt again in order to put idle bank reserves to work. Further, he stated that bankers feel that the securities of the United States government are the best investment "on the face of the earth" and that there need be no concern over the condition of government credit.

What made this expression especially noteworthy was the fact that only recently the federal advisory council, composed of leading bankers, issued a warning that government credit was being menaced by the unbalanced condition of the federal budget and the unstabilized dollar.

Then appeared before the bankers in Constitution hall President Roosevelt himself and made an appeal for "an alliance of all forces intent upon the business of recovery." He called on the banks to lend more money to finance the New Deal program.

"Government should assert its leadership in encouraging not only confidence of the people in banks but the confidence of the banks in the people," he said.

"In March, 1933, I asked the people of this country to renew their confidence in banks. They took me at my word. Tonight I ask the bankers of this country to renew their confidence in the people of this country. I think you will take me at my word."

He said that the administration stood squarely back of continuance of the profit system and that emergency activities would be curtailed as fast as private business could pick up the load.

"Government should assert its leadership in encouraging not only confidence of the people in banks but the confidence of the banks in the people," he said.

"If the government and the banks continue in the role of antagonists it will invoke the gravest consequences to our country, perhaps even the destruction of many institutions and principles we have long held dear.

"The poor, whom we have always with us, will not be much worse off. The rich will survive in comfort at least, as they always have, but the great stratum of our people between these two groups will be irretrievably ruined.

"If, on the other hand, we abandon our antagonism for friendly, understanding, sympathetic co-operation, I believe we can make a great contribution toward the perpetuation of our cherished institutions, the encouragement of our fellow citizens, and the gradual and sound rebuilding of the shattered economic and financial structure of our country."

Further overtures to the bankers were made by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and J. F. T. O'Connor, controller of the currency. Both of them gave assurance that the economic condition of the country is sound, and Mr. Jones urged the bankers to expand their loans to business.

To all this the bankers responded by unanimously adopting resolutions promising to co-operate with the government but demanding a balanced budget.

complications may result. The permanent councils of both the little entente and the Balkan entente, which include Rumania, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Greece and Turkey, have issued identical communiques asserting their solidarity with Yugoslavia and laying responsibility for King Alexander's assassination upon terrorists urged on by the foreign policies of nations which were not named but which clearly are indicated to be Hungary and Italy.

The communiques gave warning of a probable war unless "international measures are loyally adopted" to stop political assassination and conspiracy. Both the ententes decided to adopt common measures against all political conspirators.

So far, Hungary is bearing the brunt of the blame for the Marseilles assassination, but Premier Goemboes asserts his country is "entirely guiltless of any connection with the foul crime."

BREAKING records all along the route, M-10001, the new streamlined train of the Union Pacific, made an extraordinary run from Los Angeles to New York in 56 hours 55 minutes. The best previous time for a transcontinental train crossing was established in 1906, when the late E. H. Harriman, then chairman of the Union Pacific, traveled from San Francisco to New York in 71 hours 27 minutes.

The new tube-shaped train also established a world's speed record of 120 miles an hour as it sped from Buffalo to New York. The train passed over the 30-mile stretch of straight-away between Buffalo and Batavia, on which the Empire State Express of the New York Central achieved a speed of 112½ miles an hour on May 10, 1893.

IMMEDIATE cash payment of the veterans' bonus certificates was demanded by the American Legion in convention at Miami, Fla., despite the knowledge that it is opposed by President Roosevelt and the belief that he would veto any legislation providing for such payment. The vote was 987 to 183.

The Legion's new national commander is Frank Belgrano, Jr., of San Francisco, now a banker. All other candidates withdrew and Mr. Belgrano, Jr. was elected unanimously. In his speech of acceptance he said he would conduct his office with vigor and determination and would give it his undivided attention.

"Our country is filled today with too much talk about isms," he said. "Everywhere we hear about Communism, Socialism, Fascism, Hitlerism, and others too numerous to mention.

"There is room in this country for only one ism. That is Americanism. Without equivocation or reservation, I say to you that under my administration this American Legion is a sworn enemy of every other ism. That is a declaration of war."

The following were elected as national vice commanders: Daniel J. Doherty, Woburn, Mass.; Harold J. Warner, Pendleton, Ore.; John Kenelly, Mandan, N. D.; Milo J. Warner, Toledo, Ohio; and Quimby Melton, Griffin, Ga.

Rev. Dr. Park W. Huntington, pastor of St. Stephen's Lutheran church in Wilmington, Del., was chosen unanimously as national chaplain.

John D. Crowley of Cambridge, Mass., was elected chef du chemin de fer of the "40 and 8," play organization of the Legion, and Mrs. A. C. Carlson of Willmar, Minn., was elected national president of the American Legion auxiliary.

Next year's convention was awarded to St. Louis, Mo.

PROF. JEAN PICOARD made another balloon excursion into the stratosphere, and accompanying him was his plucky wife, Jeanette, the only licensed woman balloon pilot in the United States. They ascended from Detroit with their 600,000 cubic-foot bag, passed over Lake Erie, rose to a height of about ten miles, and then came down on a farm four miles west of Cadiz, Ohio. The gondola landed in a tree but the two occupants were only slightly bruised and scratched, and it was believed the delicate scientific instruments they carried were uninjured.

EIGHT federal officers led by Melvin Purvis, head of the Justice department's bureau of investigation in Chicago, caught up with Charles A. Floyd, known as "Pretty Boy," on a farm near East Liverpool, Ohio, and a few minutes later the desperado of the Ozarks was dead with fifteen bullets in his body. He had two automatic pistols but did not fire a shot as he sought to escape across a field. Floyd, accused of at least seven murders and lately of complicity in the Kansas City depot massacre, was hunted for years. He was Oklahoma's most notorious outlaw since the days of Al Jennings and the Daltons.

SILK and rayon dyers did not join in the recent general strike of textile workers because of their contract, but 30,000 of them in the Passaic valley and the New York metropolitan area have now quit their jobs and the dye houses were closed perforce.

When negotiations for a new contract began two months ago the union asked for a 30-hour week at $1 an hour and a closed shop. The closed shop was the sore point of issue. Neither side would change its attitude.

George Baldanzi, president of the Federation of Silk and Rayon Dyers, then waived the demand for a 30-hour week at $30 a week and said the union would accept a minimum guarantee of $20. This proposal was rejected by the employers.

P. W. Chappell, conciliator of the Department of Labor, was on the ground trying to effect a compromise.

JOHN B. CHAPPEL, Republican candidate for United States senator from Wisconsin, proved himself to be a gentleman at Waukesha. He was listed as principal speaker at a rally there. John Gay, candidate for congress, preceded him on the program and alluded to President Roosevelt as "a man who can't stand on his own feet without crutches." Mr. Chappell arose and said:

"Men and women of Waukesha, the President of the United States has been insulted by a previous speaker on this program in a serious personal way, and while I may differ with Democratic policies, I will not stand for that kind of an attack on the President's physical infirmity, and I therefore refuse to speak on this program and will return to Waukesha at some later time."

CONVERSATIONS preliminary to the 1935 naval conference opened in London, and the Japanese did what was expected of them. Ambassador Matsudaira and Admiral Yamamoto told the British and the Americans in turn that Japan was not satisfied with the existing treaties—everyone knew that—and set forth these main points:

1. The powers should agree that Japan may have equality, "in principle," in defensive armaments.
2. The ratio system should be abolished, and "defensive" ships limited on a total tonnage basis, instead of by categories.
3. Each nation would drastically reduce "offensive" armaments, thus cutting down the chances of any war of aggression, while building whatever "defensive" ships within the tonnage limit agreed it feels it needs for security.

LIEUT. FRANCESCO AGELLO of Italy, known as "Crazy Boy" because of his daring aerial performances, set a new record for speed in flight when he drove his seaplane over a course at Desenzano, four times at an average of 440.29 miles an hour. It was his own record that he broke by about 16 miles an hour. He used his old plane but it had a new Fiat AS 6-V type motor developing 3,500 horse power.

MAHATMA GANDHI has quit as leader of the All-India Nationalist congress. He insisted on the importance of the spinning wheel in the home of every congress voter and on the wearing of homespun, and asked various changes in the constitution of the congress. Other leaders did not agree with him, so he refused to act longer as their chief.

THREE American physicians have been awarded the Nobel prize in medicine for 1934. They are Dr. George Minot and Dr. William P. Murphy of the Harvard medical school and Dr. George H. Whipple of the University of Rochester. The prize of $41,000 is divided among them for their development of liver therapy in anemia.

C. W. A. SCOTT and Campbell Black of England, flying their Red Comet plane, won the great London to Melbourne air derby, reducing the record by many hours. The second plane to arrive in Melbourne was that of K. D. Farmentier and J. J. Moll of Holland. They gave the winners a close race though flying a longer route. Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, Americans, lost time when they wandered from the course near Allahabad, India, but came in third. James and Amy Mollison, the famous flying couple from England, led at the start, but were forced to quit in India by damaged motors.

Tragedy marked the race when Harold Gilman and James Baines of England crashed in flames in Italy and were burned to death.

BRUNO HAUPTMANN'S effort to avoid extradition from New York failed, so he was taken to jail at Flemington, N. J., to await trial for the murder of Colonel Lindbergh's baby boy. Attorney General Wilentz and his staff of assistants were completing their arrangements for presenting the case against the carpenter.

Hauptmann was arraigned before Justice Thomas E. Trenchard and pleaded not guilty. The trial was set for January 2 at the request of Mr. Wilentz, who said: "I don't think this trial should go through the holidays. I think it would be distasteful to the people. Then, too, this is a capital case and the defense should have ample time to prepare its case."

HOW TO SHOOT

By Bob Nichols
Shooting Editor, Field and Stream

THE novice in wingshooting finds it hard to believe that you must shoot ahead of flying or running targets in order to hit them. He reasons that the speed of the shotgun charge is so fast that one ought to be able to aim dead on the target and hit it. But the fact of the matter is—you simply can't. Actually, the speed of the shotgun charge is not so very fast. It is only about one-third the speed of the modern high-power rifle bullet. In skeet shooting I can frequently hear the shot charge strike the clay target after the report of the gun. Yet the speed of the shot charge is only part of the story.

In America, shooting ahead of your target is called leading it. Without intending to pun, this term is actually misleading. Leading a target implies aiming out in front of the target and swinging along in this position until you judge you are far enough ahead of the target before firing. This is wrong. The right way to do it is to swing on the target from behind it, swing on past it—that is, ahead of it—and shoot after you have passed it. But make up your mind to shoot instantly as you swing ahead of the target. Instead of calling it "leading," the English gunners refer to this as "forward allowance." A more readily understood term, I think.

"Forward allowance" is absolutely necessary, not so much because it takes the shot charge a certain fraction of a second to travel 20, 30, or 40 yards—although this time must be taken into account—but mostly because it also takes time for your eye to register the impression of the target, for your eye to tell your brain to shoot, for your brain to tell your trigger finger to pull, for your trigger finger to snap home, for the hammer to fall, for the primer to explode the powder charge and send the shot hurtling on its way. All this takes time. Very little, to be sure. But remember that the target isn't standing still either. The target may be traveling anywhere from 30 to 90 feet a second, depending on whether it's a rabbit or a canvasback duck. And your shot charge must start towards a point that is ahead of the moving target and in its path.

Only experience will teach you where this point is. No other shooter can tell you exactly. No two shooters function exactly alike in their muscular and nervous reactions. On the skeet field, to the best of my knowledge I believe I shoot at a point about 3 feet ahead of my targets on the crossing shots, and possibly only 2 feet or less on the quartering shots. Just as a tip to you, I will hazard the guess that at least 80 per cent of the targets missed in skeet are shot behind—too far behind.

On a straightaway running rabbit, shoot under him. Shoot 6 inches under his hopping white tail and you'll tumble him every shot. Try a shot on the surface of a pond to see the reason for this. You'll notice that the shot charge strikes the water in a 10-yard long pattern. If you shoot just slightly under your straightaway rabbit you can't miss. On a rabbit running across your line of fire, again shoot just a little low and at a point about 3 or 4 feet ahead of him, depending on how far he is away from you. Remember that the longer the range on any game, the farther ahead you shoot. And the faster the slight of any game, the farther ahead you shoot. On a famous Long Island ducking ground there is an old saying that "if 10 feet seem too much lead, try 20." Which in plain language only means that we seldom miss our game by shooting too far ahead of it. Invariably we miss the target by shooting behind it.

Good shots who are at all conscious of their movements in gun pointing all agree that the best way to swing on a moving target is to come from behind the target, and then at the instant the gun swings past the target to let 'er go. In fact, that last bit of swing past the target, and the trigger pull itself, happen at almost the same instant. Come from behind—swing past—bang! Never stop the swing of your gun. Follow through. To stop your gun as you pull trigger is a fatal mistake—even a hair-line instant pause means that your target has caught up with and passed your forward allowance, and your shot charge goes behind for another miss!

Find Two Sets of Forces Cause Bands of Jupiter
Study of the bands and spots of the planet Jupiter has convinced scientists the changes in them are caused by two sets of forces—the tidal forces of Jupiter's moons and the changes in the intensity of sunlight. These solar changes also control earth's weather so astronomers are now studying them to determine if weather on earth can be forecast by the changes in the bands and spots on the distant planet.

Looking at Jupiter through a telescope, light and dark bands of a brown or reddish color may be seen. Previous to 1926 these stripes were simple, thin bands very similar to stripes painted on a rubber ball but in two years' time they changed, and after 1928 they appeared as irregular dark bands and had many isolated dark spots.

Now these bands appear to be changing back the way they were.

Utah Town Recalls Pony Express of Pioneer Days

Famous Link in Early East-West Mail Route

Washington.—[Tbapah, sun-blistered town in Utah's Deep Creek valley, recently turned back the pages of 70 years' history and dedicated a shaft marking the location of the Pony express station which was the forerunner of the town. The village, home of 213 residents, lies at the edge of a desert, about five miles east of the Utah-Nevada boundary.

"This 'station' was one of the 190 established between St. Joseph, Mo., and San Francisco, Calif., in an effort to cut in half the time necessary to communicate between the east and west coasts of the United States," says the National Geographic society. "It was in this region that Indians, by frequent attacks, nearly caused the abandonment of the Pony express within two months after it was established.

Inaugurated in 1860.
"By 1860 the outside edges of the continent had been colonized and white men's activities penetrated inland from the east as far as the Missouri river. But between 'Saint Jo' and San Francisco lay a forbidding 1,996-mile expanse—Indian infested plains of Kansas and Nebraska, mountains of Colorado and Wyoming, and deserts of Utah and Nevada. At that time, men generally linked the two jagged edges of the nation by a circuitous 28-day route—sailing from New York to Panama, traveling by mule train across the isthmus, then taking ship to San Francisco.

"But the nation was growing. Men in the west sought closer contact with those in the east. So was born the Pony express to brave the wilds of the direct route, St. Joseph to San Francisco.

"On April 3, 1860, all was ready for a simultaneous start from the two ends of the line. From the east into St. Joseph puffed a railway train bearing special mail bags from New York. A waiting rider transferred them to his saddle and sped away to the west. For ten days and nights thereafter, horses' hoofs pounded constantly over the trail—now quietly in soft sands, now clattering across stony mountain passes, now echoing through deep canyons—until the mail arrived in San Francisco. It was done in a little over ten days. The next trip took two weeks, but later several trips were made in nine days.

"That same April 3, mail from San Francisco started eastward, going to Sacramento by boat. There a daring rider tightened his saddle girths, strapped on the pouches, and was off. He covered the first 20 miles in 59 minutes, traveled 55 miles farther and relayed the bags to a waiting rider. The second ride past the summit of the Sierra Nevada, where the next man took up the ride. The first three men covered a total distance of 185 miles, part of which was through 30 feet of snow; they did it in 15 hours and 20 minutes! From there five others followed one another, galloping through Ruby valley, Deep Creek valley, Rush valley, and Camp Floyd to Salt Lake City. Eastward from the Mormon settlement the mail was hurried to Saint Joseph, where the town went wild with excitement over the successful undertaking.

"Incredible as it may seem, the quickest time ever made by the Pony express was in winter weather. The document transmitted was President Lincoln's inaugural message of March 4, 1861. It was borne over 2,000 miles in seven days and 17 hours, said to be the fastest long distance horseback riding ever done.

Five Dollars Per Letter.
"To maintain the speed of nearly 250 miles a day, there could be no excess weight carried. Preference was given to riders light as jockeys whose endurance and bravery were unquestioned. Their pouches were small, a bundle containing hundreds of communications often being no larger than an ordinary writing pad. Each letter was written on the thinnest tissue paper—and for its transportation across the continent, five dollars was paid in advance. The large newspapers of the country furnished much of the business.

"A rider's safety rested largely with his wits. To keep down weight, he carried generally only a revolver and a knife. He frequently relied on his feet-footed pony to outdistance his pursuers. Usually this could be done, unless, as happened sometimes, both rider and horse were pressed into double duty when the rider of the next stretch had been killed or injured."

Farmers Cheering as Bug Fights Bug

Medford, Ore.—Oregon orchardists are hopeful that the law of nature, survival of the fittest, will rid pear and apple trees of moths. Larvae parasites have been liberated in orchards in this district by entomologists.

The parasite, a black, four-winged, wasp-like insect, lays its eggs in codling moth eggs. The egg hatches quickly and the grub enters the body of the young codling moth worm before it leaves its own egg.

Codling moths lay their eggs on apple or pear blossoms. The eggs hatch, with the worms eating into the growing fruit.

Specialist Says Hair Is Link of Man to Plants

Chicago.—Experiments through which he hopes to prove an evolutionary theory that the hair is a "missing link," which will show that animal life developed from plants, are being made by Paul A. Thomas, noted scalp specialist.

"Outward similarities in the functions and characteristics of the hair and plant foliage are remarkably numerous," Thomas said. "Similarities in the tiny tissue cells of human and animal hair and the foliage of some plants are equally striking.

"As foliage forms on the top of vegetables, in the air and light, the hair of man and animals grows on the part most exposed to the elements."

Thomas said that numerous tests have shown that the growth and development of hair and foliage are affected very much the same by the seasons and climate.

Say Indians Threaten Last of Bald Eagles

Extinction Feared by Cornell University Expert.

Ithaca, N. Y.—The threatened extinction of bald eagles by Indians who use the wings and tails of the birds for commercial purposes was declared a possibility by Dr. George N. Sutton, curator of birds at Cornell university, who has just returned from an expedition to the British Columbian wilds.

Doctor Sutton, who was accompanied by John Bonner Semple of Sewickley, Pa., the financial sponsor of the expedition, reports that Knights Inlet, British Columbia, is an amazing rendezvous for bald eagles. While eagles are common along the entire British Columbia coast, there is a much heavier concentration at this spot. The Indians have been killing large numbers of them. They sell the wings and tails to the plains Indians at $1 a wing and 50 cents a tail.

Sea Lion Delays Train; Engineer Is Used to It

Santa Ana, Calif.—Flapping sedately along the cross-ties, a sea lion held up a northbound Southern Pacific local several minutes. L. A. Litterer, engineer, was warned of the sea lion's presence as he approached San Clemente. He sighted it, a few miles north, sidling up the track and occasionally rearing its head to bark at motorists on a nearby highway. Repeated hoots from the whistle finally moved the sea lion off the tracks. Litterer's train had been delayed before, once by an elephant, and another time by an ostrich.

Site of Patriot's Burial Found, Solving Mystery

Philadelphia.—The mystery of where Francis Hopkinson, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence was buried, has been solved. Bones unearthed in the graveyard of the old Christ church here last December are those of Hopkinson, it has been revealed by Dr. Oscar V. Batson, professor of anatomy at the University of Pennsylvania.

"The probable height, weight and age of the man whose bones these are and the profile of the skull all accord with what is known about the Revolutionary war patriot's stature and looks at the time of his death in 1791," Doctor Batson said.

The bones were unearthed when Dr. Charles Penrose Keith, of the church vestry, obtained permission to dig in a plot where the body of Elizabeth Conde, Hopkinson's daughter, was buried. The digging led to the skeleton of a man.

Other Revolutionary war heroes buried in the old Christ church cemetery are Benjamin Franklin, Dr. Benjamin Rush, George Ross and Joseph Hewes, all signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Hopkinson was born in Philadelphia in 1757. He was the first student ever enrolled in the College of Philadelphia, now the University of Pennsylvania.

French Writer Declares Gorilla Much Maligned

Paris.—In a Paris review, Andre Demaison, French writer and authority on the subject of African wild beasts, declares that the gorilla has been much maligned in literature.

Instead of being the ferocious, chest-beating terror of the jungle that it is often depicted, M. Demaison says that the natives of Africa regard it as a beast of calm and peaceful temperament, and that they are not as a rule frightened by the presence of a gorilla. Its terrific muscular strength and the fact that it is given to fits of violent rage are responsible for its reputation.

The gorilla, says M. Demaison, lives quietly with its family. It eats fruits and tender leaves and destroys wide areas of vegetation in the search of food, and for that reason is obliged to keep traveling.

Coral Reefs

Turk Islands, Surrounded by Coral Reef.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—W.S.U. Service.

AMONG the marvelous mysteries concealed by the surface of the ocean are the vast stony structures built by the ceaseless activities of the tiny coral animals that ply their trade in the warm waters skirting the continents and oceanic islands of tropic seas.

These fragile, fairylike creatures multiply by millions on the sea bottom and erect castles of limestone which rise, turreted and domed, among forests of marble trees until they pierce the surface of the sea, and, lo, a coral reef is born!

Coral reefs may grow in isolated clumps or they may fringe the beach close to the shore. They often parallel the coast for miles, forming a barrier against the open sea, and enclose a strip of quiet water between it and the mainland.

The longest barrier reef in the world is the Great Barrier reef of Australia, which parallels the eastern shore of that continent for more than 1,200 miles, enclosing a lagoon varying in width from seven to a hundred miles.

Most barrier reefs are located on the eastern side of the body of land which they skirt, facing the equatorial trade winds. Consequently, the sea outside is dashed violently against the barrier and breaks upon its serrated face in long rollers of white foam, in striking contrast to the smooth waters sheltered within the lagoon. In times of storm, vessels that can make the channel find a haven, but a far different fate besets the craft driven by the tempest upon the front of the reef.

Those stern ramparts, though erected by fairy polyps of the utmost delicacy, will crush and utterly destroy the proudest ship.

The finest barrier reef in the West Indies borders the eastern shore of Andros Island, in the Bahamas. It is some one hundred miles long and grows near the edge of a submerged cliff facing the trade winds. A short distance to windward the submarine precipice plunges vertically more than a mile into the depths of the Tongue of the Ocean, an arm of the sea penetrating the heart of the Bahaman archipelago.

Studied by Scientists.

On the sea floor outside this reef scientists made studies of the barrier with a view to reproducing a portion of it in the Hall of Ocean Life in the American Museum of Natural History, New York city, making five trips for that purpose during the past ten years, beginning in December, 1923. The following summer, with the aid of a submarine tube, a chain hoist mounted on pontoons, and diving helmets, the expedition obtained 40 tons of coral, thousands of feet of undersea motion pictures, and many color sketches of the wonderful submarine forest.

On three subsequent expeditions, equipped with diving helmets, undersea explorers made careful studies of the living reefs of Andros and other islands of the Bahamas. They wandered on the sea floor, four fathoms below the surface, through coral jungles of limestone trees which spread their grotesquely interlacing branches far above their heads, peered into vaulted caverns of eroded coral rock, and threaded their way between fantastic columns capped with domes of Orbicella coral, which rose like giant mushrooms about them.

Now and then they gazed through arches of living coral, buttressed with contorted subsidiary growths, and adorned with brilliant encrusting sponges of scarlet, purple and green. Huge blue parrotfishes leered at them from shadowy corners and gorgeous queen triggerfishes sailed majestically into view, their kite-shaped orange-and-green bodies slashed with irregular stripes of startlingly vivid azure.

The coral heads in the foreground were alive with clouds of small yellow fishes, which flitted about like canary birds in a tropical jungle, and everywhere sea bushes, sea plumes, and sea fans, waving back and forth above the coral terraces in beautiful masses of soft rich color, contributed a rhythmic play of stately motion to the scene.

How the Diver Works.

The magic of the diving helmet unlocks the wonders of this watery Paradise. One looks over the side of a launch through wavelets like facets of a liquid crystal, so transparent that the white sand of the sea floor four fathoms below, at the end of the coral reef, is clear in every detail, yet continually oscillating in apparent rhythmic motion.

The diver stands on the brass rope ladder with the water lapping his shoulders. On either side of the gangway above are the diving helmets, erect on their ordered coils of rubber tubing, which in turn are attached to the symmetrically placed long-handled air pumps.

The copper helmet is lifted by the handle on its top. The wearer leans forward, the helmet is lowered over his head, and one of the pumps starts. As the heavy weights bears down on his shoulders, he hears the comforting "clank, clank" of the pump close to his ears. He descends the steps of the ladder and sees the surface water climb up the window before his eyes and vanish above his head.

The undersea gardens are a perpetual wonder. It is hard to realize, as you gaze through the windows of a diving helmet at the towering pinnacles of the reef, and clamber in half-floating leaps over the rounded heads of massive coral that rise in terraces to the water surface, that these huge castellated structures were erected through the vital energy of such delicate coral polyps. Yet there they are by the millions covering every square inch of the growing coral.

Among the Living Polyps.

In the mellow light of the more protected areas, their serried communities expand with outreaching, feathery tentacles surrounding their miniature mouth slits—veritable petals of animal flowers. In patches of stronger sunlight, whole phalanxes are flattened to a mere investment of the underlying hard parts with thin gossamer films of living tissue, often embossed with close-set hemispheres, marking the location of the contracted polyps. The tapering, tawny branches of the staghorns are crowded with starlike living forms, while the waving gorgonians, rising toward the sunlit water surface in moving forest growths of vertical branchlets, show each slender subdivision limned as with a halo of translucent white or golden polyps.

These myriads of tiny creatures are the architects and builders of the coral limestone structure, as well as the horny supporting substance forming the flexible gorgonian "skeleton." They, in partnership with calcareous sea plants, shell-bearing mollusks, and protozoa, are largely responsible for the amazing submerged limestone barriers so perilous to navigators of tropic seas.

Many varying species of coral are associated to form the community of the living reef. What is the secret of their marvelous power to multiply their kind, the technique by which they construct their ramparts, and the mysterious source of their building materials?

Over here, on this submerged ledge, where the sunlight dances through the flickering waves, a beautiful lettuce coral expands its clustered polyps like a nosegay of green and lavender blossoms. A half-dozen polyps, with partially united bodies, each an inch or more in diameter, compose the colony, and display their mottled green and brown shafts, crowned with flowerlike disks of lavender and gray flecked with white.

The diver draws nearer and, looking through the windows of his diving helmet, examines the cluster more closely. Each individual is a cylindrical sac crowned with a circular disk, in the center of which is an oval mouth slit. A circlet of about forty-eight slender, petal-like tentacles radiates from the edge of the disk and contributes to the flowerlike appearance of the creature.

A dozen tentacles bend over from the margin of the first polyp it touches and seize hold of it. It struggles for an instant and then becomes limp. Other tentacles reach over and grasp it, first from one polyp, then another. Neighboring mouths protrude their oval lips and start to engulf it, pulling in opposite directions until the poor creature's body is torn apart and the fragments are swallowed by the contending mouths.

BETTER PRICES FOR CHICKENS AND EGGS

Outlook Is Encouraging for the Poultryman.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—W.S.U. Service.

Farmers may expect better prices for their chickens and eggs compared with last fall, mainly on account of the reduced production which it is expected will result from the scarcity and high price of feed, according to the bureau of agricultural economics in its poultry and egg outlook report.

Poultry production this year is the smallest since 1925, reports the bureau. The number of chickens hatched this year was about 10 per cent less than last year, and the number of hens in farm flocks was less than last year. There has been more than normal disposal of hens and pullets in drouth areas of the central states.

Scarcity of feed in many important poultry producing states is forcing poultrymen to dispose of some of their surplus young stock earlier than usual, and a considerable reduction in number of layers carried through the winter is expected.

"The prospective reduction of eggs throughout the fall and winter, and the relatively small production in prospect next spring, should result in a level of farm prices sufficiently high to offset in part a higher price of feed," says the bureau.

The bureau suggests that producers who are able to do so, maintain their laying flocks and carry young chickens over to heavier weights where natural range is available.

Must Keep Eggs Moving, Advises Poultry Expert

Producers who desire their eggs to reach the consumer in the best condition must not only give the eggs proper care while they are being held on the farm but the eggs must be kept moving from the time they are laid until they reach the consumer, says Berley Winton of the Missouri College of Agriculture. The consumer wants eggs with a thick, jelly-like white, and an upstanding, firm yolk. Such eggs bring the most money and find quickest sale.

Many eggs are reduced in quality while they remain in the nests. This is due to the fact that the temperature of the laying hen is normally 106 degrees Fahrenheit. If eggs are permitted to remain in nests during the forenoon when most hens lay, considerable deterioration takes place. It is a good practice, therefore, to gather eggs three to four times daily. After gathering they should be placed in a basket or exposed to the air, rather than kept in a bucket, and be permitted to cool over night before they are placed in the case. Exposure to the cool air will cause the body heat to escape the eggs and they will keep for a longer period.

Table Scraps for Chickens

Table scraps are usually an extremely concentrated, highly seasoned food and often produce dire results if the birds are allowed to gorge themselves. Where only a few birds are kept and fed only a grain ration the scraps undoubtedly supply some of the deficiencies brought about by such a feeding method. This system of feeding, however, does not bring out the best in the birds and causes low vitality as well as a decreased production. For best results all birds should have the proper ration and be well housed.

Importance of Sire

It is an old adage that the sire is half the herd. In poultry breeding it may be assumed that the sire is half the breeding flock, since the potent male stamps certain characteristics of his line upon each cockerel or pullet reared from the matings of which he has been one parent, whereas each individual breeding hen has the opportunity of stamping the characteristics of her line upon only the progeny hatched from her own eggs. High capacity egg production is transmitted by both sire and dam.

Poultry Notes

Every hen that drops into a molt is out of the production race until late in the season.

One of the greatest troubles most poultry men have to maintain winter egg production is to maintain body weight.

Infertile eggs may be left in a temperature of 103 degrees Fahrenheit for 72 hours and still be good for food, poultry tests have shown.

It is best for the beginner not to cull too heavily, and not discard a hen on one point but rather on a combination of points.

It is surprising what the changing of growing chicks to fresh, new, untainted ground will do for them. It seems to act as a wonderful tonic.

Since four-fifths of the poultry in this country is raised by farmers and only one-fifth by commercial poultrymen, grass is an important feed item.

Now Science Explains Why So Many People Past 40

Feel That They're Slipping Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people "round 40 think they're growing old." They feel tired a lot... "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach.

All you have to do is to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed. That's all!

Try this. Soon you'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'" or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

Bares Massacre of Old Alaskan Race

Scientists Find Skeletons on Kodiak Island.

Washington.—Evidence of a prehistoric "massacre" on desolate Kodiak Island, Alaska, at a time when it was inhabited by an unknown race of advanced culture, was uncovered this summer by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution, who has just returned to Washington.

This was the sixth expedition of Doctor Hrdlicka to Alaska, and the third summer he has conducted extensive excavations on this site, which in some respects probably represents the highest aboriginal art in North America north of Mexico, although there is as yet practically no clue to the exact identity of the people who developed it or brought it from Asia.

"Nest Burials" Puzzle.

In past years Doctor Hrdlicka has been puzzled by what he terms "nest burials," where a number of skeletons would be found together, of all ages and both sexes and without any of the customary mortuary offerings which the ancient people ordinarily placed in graves.

The clue came with the discovery that many of the skeletons had cracked skulls and other evidences of combat. This is a strong indication that they were not wiped out by some epidemic and justifies a picture of a village massacre from which a few escaped, to return later and bury their dead in heaps.

Assisted by five volunteer college students, Doctor Hrdlicka was able to make substantial progress this summer in uncovering the remains of the old settlement—apparently the "metropolis" of the bay on which it is located in the days when the island was an important center of population. The site rests on glacial till and in places on a peculiar geologic formation called by Doctor Hrdlicka "butter earth," a gritty, yellow clay, identified by geologists as representing old metamorphosed volcanic ash.

Had Higher Culture.

The unknown people were master craftsmen, especially in the making of beautiful stone lamps and in the caring of ivory. The latter art they carried to the extent of carving individual portraits.

Doctor Hrdlicka added extensively to his collection of skeleton remains and artifacts gathered there in other years; besides what was sent previously there are more than forty boxes of material on the way to the institution. But, he reports, one of the most important results of the excavations this summer was the great family difference found in the many ancient households studied.

All partook of a common culture, yet each family group had its own variation. Some were good lamp carvers, others specialized in other artifacts. The work furnishes a potent illustration of the fallacy of considering a prehistoric culture as almost invariable from individual to individual, or of judging of the whole culture of a people from a localized sample.

VICTORIOUS VITALITY

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The fatalist believes that, regardless of our best efforts, conditions occur according to the decrees of fate. Fruitless are all efforts to alter that decree. We may as well accept the inevitable without argument or explanation. If the decrees of fate are thus final and irrevocable the only alternative is wholehearted acquiescence. But is fatalism the true interpretation of values? Is there not some other explanation of the ills of life? Is a complete surrender to fate the only way out? If fatalism were accepted as a philosophy of life in the business world all progress would be blocked and complete disintegration of economic values would be near at hand.

A man must either drive his work or be driven by it. The latter may produce the fatalist but never the former. Resigning himself to the inevitable, like the prisoner caught with the goods on him, he sees no way out but suicide, so the fatalist commits mental and spiritual suicide. The man who drives his work, however, substitutes for the law of surrender the law of control.

A sudden calamity will either paralyze us or urge us on to "vaster issues." Much has been written about Theodore Roosevelt's "second wind." He never recognized defeat and the word failure was not in his vocabulary. This same philosophy of life which substitutes control for acquiescence is very greatly needed in the depression experiences through which many people are passing. Acquiescence kills pride, lowers the "morale" and makes one a prey to many of the false social theories rampant today.

Control creates a victorious vitality which refuses to be mastered by outward conditions. Instead of surrendering to fate it uses every unfortunate experience as a means to higher ends. The loss of money may lead to the conviction that "life does not consist in the abundance of one's possessions," and that life should be counted by heart throbs and not dollars in a bank. Using misfortune for higher ends creates values which we may never have thought existed. An entire new world has been opened up to many who refused these days to surrender to the irony of fate. Victorious vitality may come to everyone who uses misfortune as a "stepping stone to higher things," and who hears, "A deeper voice across the storm."

GLASS is invading the realm of interior decoration. Never before has it taken quite the place it does now, although it has had repeated revivals. Today even the walls of a house may glint from tiny filaments of spun glass introduced into the wall paper together with similar filaments of metals to give a burnished surface. Mirrors have returned in all their glory and are hung to duplicate beautiful portions of rooms, or of bough, branches and landscapes glimpsed through windows. It is easy to see that the positioning of mirrors is important to bring out the desired reflections for beauty or for impressions of space.

Mirror dolly reflections of vases, usually of silver or glass, and flower-filled, give added attraction to tables, since the arrangement is in duplicate. These table mirrors are fascinating dining-table centerpieces as fleeting visions of those seated across the table are often caught, adding to the jollity of an occasion, or permitting swift, unspoken messages to be exchanged. It is true that these are matters apart from the decorative function of the dolly mirror which is to reflect the ornamental centerpiece standing on it, but interest is added just the same. Dolly mirrors come in round, oval, etc., shapes merely beveled at rims, or with dainty etched decorations on the glass. These mirrors are again in high favor after a lapse of several years.

Collector's Glassware.
Glassware is still in the ascendancy as a collector's hobby. It results to the advantage of interior decoration as many of the pieces take their places on mantelpieces, tables, sideboards, and also on glass shelves in windows. The light shimmers through the transparent crystal white or colored surfaces in a gay and enticing fashion. Many of the pieces can be of genuine practical use, serving as vases, salad bowls, cream pitchers and sugar bowls, compotes, etc., if not for everyday use at least on occasions. Whether used for ornament or service, the decorative element is present.

Glass desk sets and book ends are popular, although breakable and requiring what we may call "special handling." The cleaning is an item, for crystal must be polished to be at its best, whether it is crystal glass or rock crystal. However, the glass for these things is not delicate nor fragile, but of size and shape to insure its being as durable as possible. We have long been accustomed to glass ink-wells and paper weights, but we are not so familiar with glass book ends, paper cutters, and letter holders. Novel they are and handsome, whether in plain solid blocks or molded and chiseled or cut and engraved. Speaking of cut glass, its vogue is becoming more and more in evidence each season.

Cut Glass Comes Back.
Cut glass is returning to favor. It may be said that it has always been in fashion since very light cutting has been in style during the many years when deep cut glass was demode. But the cutting was so very delicate that it made little impression on the surface of the glass, and also but little impression of cut glass in the minds of purchasers. Etched glass has been in higher favor than cut glass.

Two designs are especially featured—pineapple and star cutting. Cut-glass goblets come in all sizes from the very small wine-glass size to the large water goblets. The cutting on this stemware has to be completed on the sides of the glass, for the rims must be polished smooth.

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a more natural movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a prescription. It is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they may do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Disowned

A Scotsman's dog stole a bit of meat from a butcher's shop.

"Is that your dog?" asked the butcher.

"It was," said the Scotsman, "but he's keeping himself now."

DRUGS?

Don't make the mistake of giving even a 14-year old boy strong medicines meant for adults.

Boys and girls who have reached their "teens" are not ready to be given powerful drugs!

It is not wise to give laxatives of adult strength to a child, just because you give them less frequently or in less amounts. Many stomach upsets and bowel troubles of growing children can be traced to this single mistake.

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Give that headachy, bilious child a little of this gentle laxative when constipated, and a little less, if dose is repeated until bowels seem to be moving regularly and thoroughly without need of help.

Get the true California Syrup of Figs containing senna and cascara, which will not weaken the bowels or irritate the kidneys. You'll soon have full evidence that it safely relieves constipation in children.

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

CHAPTER V—Continued

"Nothing can hurt him again, Milly. You—"

"So, I've run Milly Gooch to earth at last! Mademoiselle Millee! And with you, Gerard! She would be!"

With a smothered imprecation, Rodney wrenched to face Len Calloway who leaned against the side of the door. With difficulty he kept his voice low.

"Don't you see what has happened? If you can't keep your dirty mouth shut, get out."

The sound Calloway made was more a snarl than a laugh, though an expression of sardonic mirth doubtless had been his intention.

"I'm going."

He turned to Prudence who, white and still, knelt beside the couch on which Jean was stirring restlessly.

"Any ten-year-old child would get wise to what's been going on between those two, Miss Schuyler."

Rodney Gerard shut his teeth hard into his lip. Prue could deduce anything from Calloway's voice and implication. What would she think?

Milly Gooch caught his hand and with a choking sob laid her cheek against it.

"What shall I do, Roddy? Grandpop's gone and I have only you now."

Half of her appeal to him was genuine grief, half was staged to irritate Len Calloway who was glaring at her from the threshold, Gerard decided.

With a suggestive laugh Calloway departed. The physician touched Gerard's shoulder.

"You'd better get that youngster home—quick."

"I will."

Rodney bent over the girl crouched beside the crumpled body of the clown. He freed the hand she still clutched. "I'll see you tonight, Milly. Pull yourself together." He laid his hand on the bowed head before he turned away.

"Come, Jean. I'll carry you, dear."

The town behind them, Gerard sent the roadster forward along the smooth road between its gay borders of fall shrubs. Once he looked at Prudence. She had her face against Jean's hair; the child's long lashes lay like fringes on her pale cheeks. He said gruffly.

"What a mix-up! A town burns up. A circus is thrown off schedule. A clown sent scouting. He took a chance on your garden—he'd try anything once—and then—a man who hates me lays his hand on my shoulder—and this for Jean—and tragedy for Chicot. Chicot's daughter, her husband, and child lived in the red brick house when Milly Gooch was a little girl. He visited them. That was what he meant yesterday when he said that he had lived in this region."

"I suspected you had seen him before."

"And because of what Len Calloway implied, you have me tried and sentenced, I'll bet."

She did not answer, only pressed her cheek closer against Jean's hair. He kept both hands tight on the wheel. Why had he let her invade his life? Why had he allowed her to make him madly happy or so infernally miserable by a look? Rapture and agony. He knew what the words meant now.

"I'll drop you at your gate," he proposed curtly.

"No. I will go on to High Ledges. I won't leave Jean until I see her with her mother."

Jean opened her eyes and lifted her head from Prudence's shoulder.

"I'm not going home until Mother has gone. There's nothing the matter with me except that I feel kind of dizzy; it helps steady things to keep my eyes closed. You won't mind if I stay with Miss Prue for a while, will you, Uncle Rod?"

"You should be with your mother, dear."

"I'm not going to be with my mother, so that's that."

"Getting back to normal fast, aren't you, K. K.?"

"Course I am, Uncle Rod. Let me stay with Miss Prue today, that's a peach. I'll wait on Mr. David. I love him."

She began to cry.

"Let her stop with me," Prudence pleaded.

"No. She's going back to High Ledges and I hope I land her there before her mother gets away. I had persuaded her to leave Jean with me; it is only fair that she should know what happened, what a flop I am as a guardian."

Except for an occasional query as to Jean's comfort, Gerard said nothing more during the long ride home.

They reached the red brick house. Gerard looked down at Jean.

"Pull yourself together, K. K. If you and I are to be on our own, we've got to go forward like soldiers, not whimper when we have to do things we don't like. Get me?"

Jean straightened, wiped her eyes, gave him a watery smile.

"Sure I get you, Uncle Rod. I feel fine now, really I do." She slipped a hand under his arm. "Perhaps, perhaps Mother has gone already," she whispered hopefully.

In his mind Gerard echoed the hope as they approached the house of stone and oak which his grandfather had built. He stopped the roadster at the front steps.

Judkins appeared as if by magic. Gerard sprang from the car, lifted Jean out.

"Where's Mrs. Walter, Judkins?"

"She went soon after you left, sir. She decided to motor to the city."

"Ask your sister to take a look at Miss Jean, will you? I want to phone."

"Yes, sir. Mr. Armstrong arrived soon after you left."

"Armstrong! So soon! Where is he?"

"He went for a walk. Mrs. Walter was just going, and things were in kind of a stir, so he—"

He coughed discreetly behind his hand.

"So he stepped out. I get you. Go up and lie down, Jean, and if you are good and feel fine, you may dine with us. You'll like Jim Armstrong, K. K., he's a great old boy."

"I won't move from the couch all day, if only I may have dinner with you just as if I were grown up, Uncle Rod. Do you suppose Mr. Jim will like me? I wonder—I wonder if he will fall in love with Miss Prue—too."

Gerard felt his face warm with color.

"That last wisecrack has shown me that you are back to normal, K. K., quite back to normal. Now listen, one more like that and you'll spend the winter in the bosom of your family—in New York city."

After dinner Jean sat on a low stool beside the fire. Elbow on her knee, chin in one hand, her eyes were on Jim Armstrong, spectacled, sinewy, with an out-of-door bigness.

"It's corking to have you here, Jim. You haven't changed, unless you've grown heavier," Gerard commented.

"It's grand to be here, Rod. I won't say that you haven't changed in the last two years though. Where's that lazy drawl which drew the female of the species after you in squads?"

"I chuckled that when I decided to become a lumber king. I'm in business now, as I wrote you. At least I'm making a stab at it. At present I've struck a snag. There's a guy here named Len Calloway, also in the lumber business, who threatens to boycott any man who works for me."

"What has stirred this Calloway up?"

"I beat him to it in persuading Miss Schuyler to engage me to cut the timber in a tract she owns."

"Who is Miss Schuyler? She doesn't belong by any chance to that family?"

Gerard glanced at Jean whose ears were fairly standing out in eagerness to hear.

"She is a sister of David Schuyler. Know him? He was a New York lawyer."

"I've heard of him. Poor—"

"Miss Schuyler inherited a tract of woodland, along with a house and other land. She came here to farm—her brother's health had broken down. Immediately the aforementioned Calloway—"

"Hate him pretty much, don't you, Rod?"

"It isn't a chuckling matter, Jim. SI Puffer, who worked for the new owner's uncle and is a sort of handy man for her, told her not to let Len cut for her. I decided that I would cut for her and myself—that's when I sent for you. Calloway was furious as well, we've had trouble over another matter."

"Is Miss Schuyler—young?" Armstrong quizzed, as he lit his pipe.

"Yes, and so pretty," Jean chirped eagerly. "Mother Puffer says that her eyes are like brown pansies and that her voice would coax the birds off the bushes. When she laughs her eyes are all gold spangles."

"K. K., you've been so quiet I had forgotten you were here. It's time you went upstairs. Toodle along now like a good girl."

"All right, Uncle Rod." She kissed him, and with a little curtsy said good-night to Armstrong. The two men rose and waited until she had left the room. Then the forester dropped a question.

"Has this man Calloway by any chance a sentimental interest in your neighbor?"

"He'd better not have."

"Why the growl?"

Rodney Gerard rose impetuously and stood back to the fire. "Here are my cards face up on the table. I'm mad about Prudence Schuyler. I will marry her if I have to move the world to do it. Get that straight?"

"I'll say I get it straight. I can read a 'No Trespassing' sign when I see one, believe me. Does the lady with the spangled eyes realize that she is posted, Rod?"

"It's no joke to me, Jim. I guess the old song's right. 'Love has a meaning all its own'—to different people. Mine is the one-woman brand. The first time I met Prue—I can't explain it to you, you will think I've gone goofy—I felt as if—as if the universe had been made over and I was reborn—with an ambition to grab the world by the tail and a determination to make the girl love me."

"Raring to go off the deep end, aren't you? Um. Pretty serious jam you're in, Roddy."

"It darn well is."

Armstrong laid his hand on Gerard's shoulder. His eyes were warm with affection.

"Buck up! I don't know how any girl could resist you. You generally get what you want. To return to our muttons. Contracts made to sell your lumber?"

"Not a contract. I have been so, what SI Puffer calls het up, with this fight with Calloway that I hadn't thought where I would dispose of it."

"You'd better get busy on that end. I'll give you a list of going concerns; then you'd better hustle after business. Do we start our investigation of the timber tracts tomorrow?"

"Yes," Gerard glanced at the clock.

"You'll excuse me, Jim, if I break away? Something important I've got to take care of tonight. SI Puffer is engaging men to go along with us tomorrow to cut."

Puffer appeared in the doorway.

"Here he is now! Come in, Si. This is my old friend Jim Armstrong who has come to tell us what trees to take out."

"Pleased to make your acquaintance, Jim. Gorry-me, Rod, I'm plumb discouraged. Don't know's we're going to need a forester."

"Why not? What has happened?"

"Now don't fly off the handle like that just because I hint we're in for trouble. Whatta mean is, I've been all over the village tryin' to hire men to cut for us tomorrow. They all had some fool excuse. I cornered one of 'em an' jest squeezed it out of him that Len Calloway had let it be known that none of them would get more work from him—ever—if they hired out to you. He's got 'em scared. He pointed out that you might start out big, Rod, but you wouldn't stick; that this was just a fad of yours, an' where would they be when you quit?"

"I! Quit!" Gerard's blue eyes were black. "Go back and tell those men that there isn't room in this town for Len Calloway and me and that I am staying."

CHAPTER VI

His challenge to Calloway had been good theater, but could he back it up, Gerard asked himself, as a few moments later his car shot into the highway between the two great iron gates set in stone posts at High Ledges. He wanted to reach the show grounds before Milly went on for her act. Perhaps he couldn't help her, but if he didn't, she might turn to someone not so disinterested as he.

His thoughts turned back to the first time he had seen Milly Gooch. Her father and mother had hired the old, out-of-repair red brick house for almost nothing and had lived there one summer while out of a circus job. He, at High Ledges from prep school for vacation, had spent every available hour with the family listening to their stories of the Big Top.

After the Gooch family left the red brick house for the circus, Milly had come each year to visit the Puffers to get "fed up" and some red blood into her. Mother Puffer had told him. He had seen her rarely, but, as she had grown into a stunning looking girl, her long, narrow eyes and her expert use of them had caught Len Calloway. Had it been just an exciting game with her? She had become engaged to him. Next he heard of her he had received a wire:

"ROD, MUST SEE YOU STOP SHOW IN YONKERS SATURDAY STOP DON'T FAIL ME"

"MILLY GOOCH"

He could recall even his amazement at the summons. Why had she sent for him? In that far away summer Walter had been more of a friend than he; he had been fascinated by her mother. Of course he would go.

He remembered the defiance in her big dark eyes, the whiteness of her face under its make-up, as she had whispered:

"I—I've walked out on Len, Rod."

He recalled that he had laughed at her—it was unbelievable that Calloway would release anything he once had held. She had retorted:

"Yeah, it isn't a joke. I—well, your brother Walter's been my friend. I just burn him up. I'm sick of riding, riding whether I'm feeling bum or not,

THE STORY FROM THE BEGINNING

Prudence Schuyler comes to Prosperity Farm, inherited from her uncle, to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, his health broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, a neighbor. There is at once a mutual attraction, but Prudence decides to maintain a cool attitude toward him. She suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway tries to buy Prue's timber, but she dislikes him and contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. Prue is visited by Mrs. Walter Gerard and her thirteen-year-old daughter, Jean. They are hateful, curious persons and leave Prue rankled. David comes to the farm. A clown appears, advertising a circus in a nearby town. Prue accompanies Rod and Jean to the show. While they are watching the parade, Chicot, an old clown, is accidentally killed

Following the Civil war quilt making was very popular. Grandma had

In her collection a quilt she was saving for her grandchild's wedding. Jane's fiance, who had been wounded in the battle of Antietam in 1862, spent many years in the hospital, but finally returned home and the wedding was planned. "Grandma," said Jane, "we will not have our wedding rings until later." Grandma, however, solved the problem. "My child, I'll furnish the rings. You shall have my favorite quilt and we will call it the Double Wedding Ring."

In those days making of quilts depended on materials that could be

VOLCANOES IN ACTION

The volcanoes which erupted recently in the state of Vera Cruz, Mex., and in Alaska, are in that belt of volcanic activity which encircles intermittently the huge basin of the Pacific ocean. This ring of volcanoes may be traced, on this side of the Pacific, from Cape Horn to Alaska, while on the other sides the cones are found in Japan, the East Indies, New Zealand, and other islands.

In South America, the Andes are studded with volcanoes, some of which are among the loftiest in the world. In April, 1932, a number of volcanoes roared into activity, terrifying inhabitants for 400 miles and sending dust as far away as New Zealand, 6,000 miles distant. Descazabado, Chiclo and Planchon in the Andes erupted again in July, and last January Llaima, in southern Chile, poured smoke six miles in the air.

Open Letter to the People of Iosco County

We who are privileged to live and enjoy the wonderful things Iosco county has for us seldom, if ever, stop and think whether our neighbor is a Democrat, Republican or Prohibitionist, and it is a good thing that we do not. It makes no difference in fact, it does not matter whether our local township, city or county government be one party or another as we are all striving for our common good. May it always remain so. Party politics should never enter into local governments such as cities, towns or schools—yes, even county offices. Who is it that would say that because a man was a Democrat he would not make a good county officer or because he was a Republican he would not make just as good an officer? May it always be that way. In these small northern counties we all know one another and should decide the qualifications of the candidates without party labels.

It so happens that I am a candidate for County Clerk and that my name will appear under the head of the Democratic ticket, but I give you my word of honor that should I be elected to that office partyism will have nothing to do with the service I shall give you.

My time and my pocketbook will not warrant a big campaign, or a lot of "ballyhoo," so I am using this method of appealing to your fair judgment. Let us have a clean, honest and fair administration of the office without politics.

I was born in Tawas City, have lived in the county all of my life, and have been a property owner for 25 years.

School Notes

High School

The following people are on the honor roll for the month of October for having received not less than a "B" average: America Bell, Vernon Davis, Isabelle Dease, Philip Giroux, Leonard Hosbach, Norma Kasichke, Myrton Leslie, Robert Mark, Marguerite McLean, Nelda Mueller, Harvey Rempert, Robert Roach, Emma Sawyer, Frieda Witzke, Richard Ziehl.

Much to the regret of the English IV students, the first copies of the orations have been handed in.

Dr. Eugene R. Elliott, director of Public Instruction, will speak over W.J.R. Sunday, November 4, at 1:30. He will explain the Thatcher-Sins Act. His talk on this topic should be of interest to all.

A meeting of the faculty was held Wednesday after school.

Report cards were given out Wednesday.

Music Notes

The violin classes which were organized a few weeks ago are continuing their weekly lessons. As soon as the students are sufficiently advanced, the group will be used as the nucleus in forming a new high school orchestra. There are nine high school students taking lessons at present. In the grades, there are fourteen beginning students who will later form their own grade orchestra. The value of this organization will be shown later when the grade group can be used as a "feeder" into the high school orchestra as the students advance in grade and music ability.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

Ethel Rempert, Norma Burtzloff, Phyllis Hinman and Kenneth Miller visited our room recently.

The following have had not below a "B" average for the month of October: Seventh grade—Kathleen Davis; eighth grade—June Brown, Ruth Clark and Norma Musolf.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

Irene Cannon, Janet McLean, Marion Musolf, Marjorie Musolf, Mary Sims, Nelson Thomson, Harold Wegner, Betty Rapp, Leona Ziehl, Richard Prescott, and Roy DePotty were on the honor roll for the month of October.

Elma Herman brought a hornet's nest for our room.

Third and Fourth Grades

The following people were on the October honor roll: Evelyn Colby, Maxine DePotty, Rosalie Groff, Lou Libka, Neil Libka, Willard Musolf, Hugo Wegner, Wayne White, Betty Jane Ferguson, Ruth Giddings, Lyle Hughes, Phil Mark, and Betty Nelson.

Norma Lou Westcott entered the third grade Wednesday.

Betty Nelson won our spelling contest Tuesday afternoon.

We enjoyed a Halloween party Wednesday afternoon.

Primary Room

Verna Jean Humphrey of Hale visited in our room Monday afternoon.

We had a Halloween party Wednesday afternoon.

Ruth Westcott was absent Tuesday and Wednesday.

favor he has battled both his own party and the opposition for the things his district needed and which he thought were right.

The party candidate for governor, Frank Fitzgerald, through twenty-two years of intensive training is the best posted man on state affairs either party can offer the voters of Michigan.

The balance of the state ticket are men with clean records in their respective communities and will serve the state well if elected.

Our county ticket needs no introduction—it is composed of friends and neighbors from various parts of the county nominated by the people of the Republican party in the recent primary.

The present administration has been one of costly experiments. No nation or people can borrow and spend itself out of debt. These experiments will have to be paid for and this can only come through some form of taxation.

Michigan needs a change in its administration and we need the services of Vandenberg and Woodruff back in Washington.

When you go to the polls next Tuesday vote a straight Republican ticket.

George A. Prescott, Jr.

teen convictions, nine were acquitted, twelve discharged on examination and two settled in court at time of trial. These figures are shown in the reports of the Attorney General of the state of Michigan. We have been to the Supreme Court in criminal cases on different occasions and have always won so far, which should indicate that we have used good judgment in bringing our cases into court. We have refused to use our office as a means of settling a grudge or spite and that sometimes incurs the hostility of certain individuals, but any reasonable person can easily see that that could not be done. In conclusion I will say that I've practiced law for twenty-six years and have been a taxpayer for many years in this county, and if again elected I will perform the duties of the office fairly and impartially to all and with due regard to the taxpayers of the county.
