CLOSE DOWN ON RELIEF CHISELERS

Isosco County Conforming To New Program With Fine Spirit

A thorough check of those on relief is being made by the Emergency Relief Administration of Isosco County. This is being made that the work may conform with the new program which is now in effect.

The following is a communication from the office at Tawas City:

"Isosco county relief workers are rallying to the new program with a fine spirit. Out of a hundred persons seeking additional aid, ninety, after consulting with the ones in charge, decided they were as well off as the average. Several told of their own sales of cream, stock and produce, and declared they could get along.

"Relief chiselers who have been receiving welfare aid while drawing pay from various employment or cash from various sales may face the charge of receiving relief funds under false pretense. It is absolutely necessary that each client honestly inform the relief office of all sources and amounts of income. Failing to do this while asking for relief is unfair to those in real need. In some counties it may develop that clients who have been concealing sources of additional income will be asked to make restitution through court action.

"A complete list of persons on work relief is now being checked with the various employers in the county.

"One interesting case is reported of an aged couple keeping their taxes and all bills paid by the sale of produce and by drawing on their life savings. This couple works with the philosophy that most everyone could manage some way by making over clothing, by canning or frying down chickens, pork, veal, or beef, or by preserving all fruits and utilizing all vegetables.

"While there are those who may think someone may be getting more relief help than they, the county has many cases like this aged couple—determined to stay off relief."

Famed Romance, "Mme. Du Barry," Booked For Family

"Madame Du Barry," heralded as one of the great pictures of the screen, is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, December 9-10-11, with Dolores Del Rio heading an all-star cast.

Edward Chodorov, the author, throws an entirely new light on the famous beauty and favorite of King Louis XV, whose many love affairs and madcap pranks were the scandal of the Continent. Chodorov has concerned himself with Du Barry's intimate life and loves, rather than with her political intrigues, although there are many clashes between herself and the jealous court ladies and courtiers who sought to destroy her influence over the king.

Novel and beautiful dances were created for the picture by Albertina Rasch, in which her beautiful coryphées romp before the king and his court in fluffy nothings.

There is a large and talented cast which includes Reginald Owen, Victor Jory, Osgood Perkins, Verree Teasdale, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Dorothy Tree, Anita Louise, and many others.

Indications of a Hard, Long Winter

Streeter-LaBerge

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Streeter of Long Lake announce the marriage of their daughter, Olive, to Enos LaBerge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis LaBerge, also of Long Lake.

The young couple spoke their vows November 29th at the Whittemore Methodist church in the presence of Miss Margaret LaBerge of Long Lake and Morris Streeter of Hale. The Rev. H. Davis officiated.

A reception dinner, carrying out the bride's chosen colors of blue and silver, was served later to the immediate families at the home of the bride. Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. E. LaBerge and children, Ardath and James, of East Tawas; Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Streeter and daughter, Shirley, Mr. and Mrs. Glenwood Streeter and daughter, Dorothy, of Hale; and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Carter and son, Richard, of Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. LaBerge left Sunday for their new home in Grayling, where Mr. LaBerge is employed as auditor for the Emergency Relief Administration.

School Notes

High School

Ivan Ivanich Dragon Shiraef spoke to the pupils of the fifth grade and above Wednesday morning. He spoke concerning the land, customs, manners, etc., of the people of Russia with particular reference to conditions since the revolution during the World War.

The ninth grade, with a percentage of attendance of 99.1, led the high school in regularity for the past month. The percentage of attendance of the whole school for the present school year is 96.7.

The most important proposition for those interested in education in Michigan at the present time is to secure legislation to provide the schools of Michigan with at least $25,000,000 state aid in addition to the primary school interest fund. This amount is necessary if the schools are to continue functioning with a fair degree of efficiency. The amount of $25,000,000 was reached by three separate and independent surveys. The first was by the Michigan Education Association. The other was by the "Committee of Seventeen." This committee is composed entirely of school board members. The third survey was by the Michigan Educational Planning Commission. This committee consists of lay representatives from tax-paying groups; that is the State Federation of Labor, the State Manufacturers' Association, the Board of Commerce, the Farm Bureau, the Grange, boards of education, and the Federations of Women's Clubs. Other interested organizations such as the Association of University Women, the State Congress of Parents and Teachers, the Michigan Education Association, the State Federation of Teachers' Clubs, and the Michigan Council on Education are also represented. This committee, as may be noted, is made largely of laymen whose attitudes are those of the general citizenry. All three of these independent surveys came to the same final conclusion in regard to the amount of money absolutely necessary for the public schools of the state.

Let us not forget the Christmas Seal Sale which is being conducted by the pupils of the school. At the present writing, the third grade is leading the fourth grade, and the fifth-sixth grade room is leading the seventh-eighth grade room in the number of sales made.

Will Form Building Committee Tuesday

A meeting will be held in the city hall at East Tawas at 8:00 o'clock next Tuesday evening, December 11, for the purpose of organizing the Building Industry Committee. All supply dealers in the county and all contractors, carpenters, plumbers, electricians and others working in building industry are asked to attend this meeting.

START ORGANIZATION FOR BETTER HOUSING

At meetings held on Monday and Tuesday nights in the office of T. George Sternberg, at East Tawas, chairman of the Isosco County Better Housing Committee, formation of the Building Industry Committee was started. These meetings were attended by supply dealers and contractors and other workers directly involved in the building industry in this county. Further meetings of this group are planned for next week. Notice of these meetings is given elsewhere in this issue of this newspaper.

Chairman Sternberg stated, "I know the people of Isosco county will get behind this campaign and back it to the limit. It is a real opportunity for us to improve local business conditions, to relieve distress, and to increase property values and beautify our communities.

"We will urge no property owner to undertake repairs or improvements unless the improvements are needed or desirable. We will urge, however, every property owner who is financially able to go ahead immediately. There are many reasons why property owners should make improvements now. Prices of building materials and labor are at fair levels. If anything, they are likely to increase as business turns upward. This means that improvements made now will increase in value."

Sternberg stated further, "As far as the home owner is concerned, I am sure he will agree with me that no expenditure he can make will return greater dividends in satisfaction than money spent on his home. Owners have wanted to take care of their property but they have not been able to because of curtailed income or lack of credit. The National Housing Act has provided the means by which they can go ahead. It will be the purpose of our Better Housing campaign to inform them how they may secure the money to do this work."

It is further planned to organize the other committees which will participate in the campaign for Better Housing. The last of this month will be taken up in the formation of these committees. It is sincerely hoped by the Housing Administration that all who will benefit directly be active in the work of the committees and as many others as possible who may benefit indirectly, but who are desirous of seeing the community benefit from such a campaign, likewise give of their time and effort to promote the campaign for Better Housing. This is a non-partisan effort to improve business conditions. The enthusiastic support of all is vitally necessary to make this campaign successful. Elsewhere in the columns of this newspaper there appears a schedule of meetings for the formation of more committees.

Adam Doerr

Adam Doerr, age 69 years, three months and 19 days, died at his home in Burchell township on Monday, November 26. He had been in poor health for several years, but was confined to his bed just two weeks previous to his death.

He was affiliated with the Loyal Orange Lodge, becoming a member on May 15, 1902. He was made Worthy Master of the lodge on February 1, 1905, and served in that office for two years. Mr. Doerr had resided for 37 years on the farm where he died.

He is survived by his wife; five daughters, Florence of Silverwood, Dora of Hastings, and Julia, Katharine and Dorothy of Whittemore; and one brother, Lewis Doerr, of Saginaw.

Relatives from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ellsworth and family of Silverwood, Mr. and Mrs. P. Arnold of Hastings, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Doerr of Saginaw.

So lately opened wide, And see the dear one's happiness Upon the other side, Perhaps our grief would lighter flow, Our hearts more satisfied."

Twentieth Century Club

The Twentieth Century Club met in the city hall Saturday, December 1. Among other items of interest was the report on the Red Cross drive. We were glad to note an increase over last year.

The program was exceptionally interesting. Michigan, My Michigan was sung by the members. For roll call Mrs. Pringle suggested that each give the city or township and county of her birth. To the surprise of many we had members from Australia, London, England, several from Canada, two born in Tawas City, and others in various parts of Michigan present.

Michigan History Day and explanation of historical collection by Mrs. Pringle was very well given. Any one who has heard Mrs. Pringle knows what a treat the members present enjoyed.

An instrumental selection, "Rheumatiz," by Bradley Stone, a Michigan composer, was rendered by Mrs. Braddock.

A paper, Michigan Composers, by Mrs. Lydia Bing, completed the program.

The next meeting will be the Christmas meeting at Mrs. McLean's. Each member is to bring a ten cent present. Let's have a good attendance December 15.

DANCE—RED HALL, WILBER Saturday, Dec. 8th. Music by Paul Bunyan and his woodchoppers. Dance 9:00 'till 2:00. Two bits. adv

WHITTEMORE GIRL INJURED IN GUN ACCIDENT

Velda Mills Wounded While Hunting Near National City Sunday

Velda Mills, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Mills of Whittemore, was the victim of a hunting accident which occurred about 4:00 o'clock Sunday afternoon, December 2, near National City, when she was struck in the left leg by a charge from a shotgun in the hands of Herbert Booth, Whittemore.

According to Booth's statement, he and Miss Mills were hunting together at the time, another girl, the third member of their party, being some distance away. Seeing a rabbit partially hidden by the underbrush, Booth crouched down to get a better view. As he did so, the shotgun was discharged, and Miss Mills, who had stepped into the line of fire, received the shot in her left knee.

Booth's gun, a 410 gauge bolt-action shotgun, was equipped with a safety lock. He believes that this lock was only partially set, and that when he stooped down it was released, allowing the gun to go off.

Booth, with the help of Miss Lucille Slavinski, the other member of the party, carried Miss Mills to the highway. A passing motorist, Charles Eadslee of Tawas City, rushed the girl to Whittemore to the office of Dr. E. A. Hasty. X-ray pictures were taken to determine the extent of her injury. She was afterward taken to Samaritan hospital, Bay City. She is in a satisfactory condition at present, although suffering from a shattered knee cap and severe lacerations of the side of the knee joint.

Trudeau Sanatorium Is Pictured On 1934 Tuberculosis Seal

The picture upon the 1934 Christmas seal is that of "The Little Red," the first tuberculosis sanatorium in the United States.

Dr. Edward Livingston Trudeau, a brilliant young physician of New York, discovered in the early seventies that his left lung was actively tuberculous. At that time the dreaded disease was considered fatal. Dr. Trudeau thought that if he had but a short time to live, he would like to spend it in the "peace of the great wilderness," and so he went with his family to Saranac Lake village in 1876 in the Adirondacks. The village then consisted only of a sawmill, a small hotel for guides and lumbermen, a schoolhouse, and perhaps a dozen guides' houses.

After a short time in the mountains, Dr. Trudeau was amazed to find that he was improving in health. Dr. Alfred Loomis, who examined the patient from time to time, was also much struck with his improvement. The result was that the two physicians came to the original conclusion that rest and recreation were important factors in combating the disease.

Dr. Trudeau then conceived a plan to build a few cottages at Saranac Lake where patients of moderate means could stay and so enable him to try out the sanatorium method of treating tuberculosis. The first cottage, completed in 1885, has always been known as "The Little Red." It consisted of one room 14 by 18 feet, and a little porch so small that only one patient could sit out at a time. It cost about $400.00. The first patients were two factory girls sent there by Dr. Loomis. From this small beginning, it has now become a large institution.

Although Dr. Trudeau died in 1915, the Trudeau Sanatorium at Saranac Lake is his living symbol. The Trudeau spirit is yet alive there and will live as long as the personality of this man is remembered. It is a "Glorious Hope" for all who need help and comfort in their fight against tuberculosis.

An organized fight is being made against tuberculosis in this state by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association with headquarters at Lansing. All of the money secured by this organization comes from the sale of the Christmas seal, containing the picture of "The Little Red." These seals are now being sold by the public school pupils in Tawas City.

Actress Sisters Perform Together For First Time

Film fans who have speculated on the resemblance between Loretta Young and her sister, Polly Ann, will have their first opportunity soon to see both actresses performing together on the screen.

In "The White Parade," the Jesse L. Lasky-Fox Film, coming to the Tawas Theatre, Oscoda, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, December 9-10-11, Loretta plays the feminine lead opposite John Boles, and Polly Ann plays an important supporting role. It is the first time the two sisters, who have appeared separately in many films, have been cast in the same picture.

Moreover, in one of the climactic scenes in "The White Parade," they are shown together, both as student-nurses, and in identical costumes. "The White Parade" was directed by Irving Cummings, and the cast includes Dorothy Wilson, Muriel Kirkland, Astrid Allwyn, Joyce Compton, Frank Conroy, Jane Darwell, Sara Haden, Frank Melton and Walter Johnson.

In Memoriam

Just one year ago today
Since our Harold went away
Left our home and hearts so sad and lone
But he's gone to Heaven above
To the Saviors that he found
And his smile will surely come
When we come,
Sadly missed by
Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Hicks, his brother and sisters.

Robinson Says President Plans No New Taxes—Franco-German Agreement Concerning the Saar Reported—Vinson's Warning to Japan.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

JOE ROBINSON of Arkansas, senate floor leader, spent four hours in conference with President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, and emerged with the welcome assurance that the New Deal program to be presented to congress in January does not contemplate the imposition of new taxes or the substantial increase of existing taxes. He added that he believed expenditures for normal government purposes would be kept well within the national income. Of course, this does not mean a balanced budget, for this cannot be had while enormous sums are being spent for relief and re-employment, but the senator would not admit that the cost of these would go above the ten-billion-dollar mark.

"Unemployment relief is to be preferred to the dole," he said. "A reasonably conservative program should be adopted with a view to tapering off the deficit."

Senator Robinson said that the bonus was discussed at some length but no conclusion was reached. Intimates of the White House have expressed the fear that a bonus program calling for expenditure of more than two billion dollars may be passed over a veto. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, chairman of the senate finance committee, who was also present at the conference, left for Washington to begin a study of unemployment insurance.

Next day the President's chief caller was Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, and he told Mr. Roosevelt that business would move rapidly on the road to recovery if only it were assured of a safe and sane federal program of expenditures. To correspondents Mr. Roper said he was greatly cheered by Senator Robinson's statement. He felt that the left wing demand for vast sums of money for relief of the unemployed must be checked and that there must be a further shifting of relief control to communities.

TROUBLE over the Saar plebiscite may be averted after all the alarm, for it is reported unofficially that Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of France have reached an accord providing that Germany will pay for French mining properties in the Saar if France abandons the effort to keep the region under the jurisdiction of the League of Nations.

Substance was given this report when Reichsfuehrer Hitler instructed all the Nazi propaganda forces in the Saar to cease their activities. He ordered that disturbances must be avoided and that the Nazis must rely largely on the press to keep the swastika flying in the disputed territory after the plebiscite. This would seem to insure an impartial vote on January 13.

JAPAN, having given unofficial notice that she will withdraw from the Washington naval treaty, still seems to have hope that the United States and Great Britain will agree to give her naval parity. But just in case, she has now invited France and Italy to join her in denouncing the pact. Those nations may consent, but the two great Anglo-Saxon nations are as one in demanding that the 5-5-3 ratio be maintained.

Representative Carl Vinson of Georgia, who is chairman of the house committee on naval affairs, has made plain the policy he will insist upon.

"I sincerely hope it will not be necessary to scrap the treaty," he said, "but it seems now we cannot hope very strongly for anything else. We cannot grant naval equality to Japan at any price. If the Tokyo government does insist upon wrecking the treaty I will insist that the house naval affairs committee and congress make enough money available to build five ships for each three laid down by Japan."

Japan, he said, had once agreed to be satisfied with three warships for each five built by the United States or Great Britain. "Officially and formally it said that was all it needed," Vinson said, "yet now it wants more."

AGAIN it may be said that if or when another European war breaks out, it will start among the southern nations. The blaze lighted by the assassinations of King Alexander and Louis Barthou in Marseilles is still smoldering. Yugoslavia's delegates in the League of Nations formally charged Hungary with complicity in the murder of the king, asserting she had harbored Balkan terrorists. Hungary demanded immediate action by the league's council on this accusation, declaring "the peace of the world" might be affected. The Hungarian note asked that the matter be placed on the agenda of the council's session called to meet on December 3 to discuss the forthcoming plebiscite in the Saar, so that Hungary might "defend its honor against proceedings which have no other purpose than to compromise the good name of the whole Hungarian nation."

The document then pointed out that the council, under Article IV of the covenant of the league, may deal with any question affecting the peace of the world.

It is, therefore, the duty of the council to face this question as soon as possible, it asserted, "and thus guard against the grave danger which might arise from the situation that Hungary is still bound to bring to the attention of the council."

The Yugoslavian charges were supported by the other two states of the little entente, Czechoslovakia and Rumania.

Italy, which has stood by Hungary, was expected to refuse to grant extradition to France of Dr. Ante Pavelich, alleged leader of the gang that planned and carried out the assassination of King Alexander. The court of appeals at Turin denied the application of France, and it was believed the minister of justice would confirm this ruling.

LEON ARCHIMBAUD, French reporter of the budget, declared before the chamber of deputies that it was undeniable that an understanding exists between France and Russia, and that the Soviet government had offered armed aid to France in case of a conflict with Germany.

This caused great excitement and the French office contented itself with a denial that there was any military accord. The Russian offer was generally believed to have been made by Maxim Litvinov, Russian foreign commissar, last spring to the late Louis Barthou and again to his successor, Pierre Laval. Col. Jean Fabry, former French minister of war, gave support to Archimbaud's statement by asserting that France's knowledge of German rearmament, the details of German troops and information concerning the secret manufacture of arms and airplanes in the reich was supplied by Russia. The two men were arguing for a large war budget, and Archimbaud pictured Russia's huge military machine working with France as the only means of preserving peace in Europe.

DISPATCHES from Germany tell of serious unrest in the reich, and though the government calls them "malicious lies," it is a fact that the army and police forces are being held under emergency orders.

A long smoldering feud between the reichswehr (regular army) and the schutzstaffel (black shirt picked Nazi guards) was believed responsible for the Christmas furloughs for soldiers and military police.

Drilling of Nazi storm troops has increased, reports said, while all marriages of army men and police set for the Christmas holidays, popular wedding period for Germany's military men, have been postponed.

Baron Werner von Fritsch, chief of the reichswehr, in a memorandum to Hitler, said plainly in discussing Nazi suppressive methods that, unless a more liberal spirit prevailed, the government would face opposition from all sides in case of war. He told Hitler something must be done about the bad blood between the schutzstaffel and the reichswehr.

BOLIVIA'S troops in the Chaco were being soundly whipped by the Paraguayans and President Daniel Salamanca was blamed. He visited the war front and was arrested by Gen. Enrique Penaranda and forced to resign. Meantime Vice President Jose Sorzano had taken over the presidential powers by decree and installed a new cabinet. Penaranda appeared to be the virtual dictator and it seemed likely he would take steps to bring about peace with Paraguay.

GEN. LAZARO CARDENAS, who though only thirty-nine years old is a veteran of the Mexican revolution, was installed as president of Mexico on November 30. He is of Spanish and Tarascan Indian stock, a fine soldier and statesman and has held office under the revolutionary government for five years.

IN A trial lasting only a few minutes, Lord Ashley won a divorce from his wife, the former Sylvia Hawke, actress, and the costs, estimated at $10,000, were ordered paid by Douglas Fairbanks, who was named as co-respondent. Neither Lady Ashley nor the American film star made any defense, and there were but two witnesses, Lord Ashley and George Edwards, Fairbanks' secretary. A decree nisi was granted by Justice Sir Boyd Merriam, and it may be made final in six months.

INSPECTOR SAMUEL P. COWLEY and Agent Herman E. Hollis of the bureau of investigation, Department of Justice, engaged in a gun battle with Lester Gillis, better known as George ("Baby Face") Nelson, Public Enemy No. 1, and a companion, near Barrington, Ill., and both the federal men were shot to death by machine guns in the hands of the bandits. The killers, accompanied by a woman, escaped for the time being in the agents' car, their own being disabled.

Next day Nelson's body was found miles away, in Niles Center, at the entrance to a cemetery. He had died of nine bullet wounds from the guns of the federal agents he killed and evidently his body had been left at the roadside after his companions had failed to save his life. In the same region were found Nelson's clothing and the car the bandits had fled in after the battle.

Cowley was the man who killed John Dillinger, chief of the gang to which Nelson belonged, and he also was in command of the posse that ran down and killed "Pretty Boy" Floyd in an Indiana cornfield not long ago.

THANKSGIVING day in America was wedding day in London for the duke of Kent, fourth son of the king and queen of England, and Princess Marina of Greece. The metropolis swarmed with royalty and nobility from many lands, and vast throngs of ordinary persons watched the parade to Westminster Abbey, where the marriage ceremony was performed. The ancient church was filled with the fortunate ones who had been invited and the scene was glittering. The only Americans present were United States Ambassador and Mrs. Robert W. Bingham.

The ceremony in the abbey was celebrated at 11 o'clock in the morning, and it was followed immediately by another, the Greek Orthodox. The latter took place in the private chapel of Buckingham palace and was celebrated by Archbishop Germanos, archbishop of the Greek church in London. Only a select company of royal witnesses was present.

REPORTS of various business groups indicate that "luxury spending" is becoming more noticeable and is aiding industry considerably. This includes everything from the baby's doll to the palatial yacht—and some place in between is fine furs—and all trade organizations report an increase. Reports to Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper by business leaders indicated that sales in some gift lines this year would be 40 per cent greater than a year ago. Charity is not forgotten in this revival of spending. Community chests and councils reported that contributions to community chest drives this year already are within 10 per cent of the 1929 total, and national income has dropped about 50 per cent in that time.

TAKE it from the Department of Agriculture that American farmers have these reasons to be thankful this year:

Cash farm income from sales of crops and live stock, AAA benefit payments, and emergency drought sales of cattle to the government totaled $738,000,000 in October, compared with $659,000,000 in September and $620,000,000 in October, 1933.

Total farm cash income for ten months this year was $5,045,000,000 compared to $4,099,000,000 for the corresponding period last year, of which $4,614,000,000 was derived from marketing and $433,000,000 from benefit payments and emergency cattle sales, compared to $3,967,000,000 and $132,000,000, respectively, in 1933.

SAMUEL INSULL and his sixteen co-defendants in the great mail fraud trial in Chicago were acquitted by the jury, despite the long work of the government officials in preparing and presenting the case at an estimated cost of $100,000.

The verdict was reached on the third ballot, and the attorneys for the prosecution could say only that they had done their best. It was apparent that the jurors were not convinced that Insull and his aides had an intent to defraud. There are other charges standing against Insull, but whether or not there will be further prosecution is undecided.

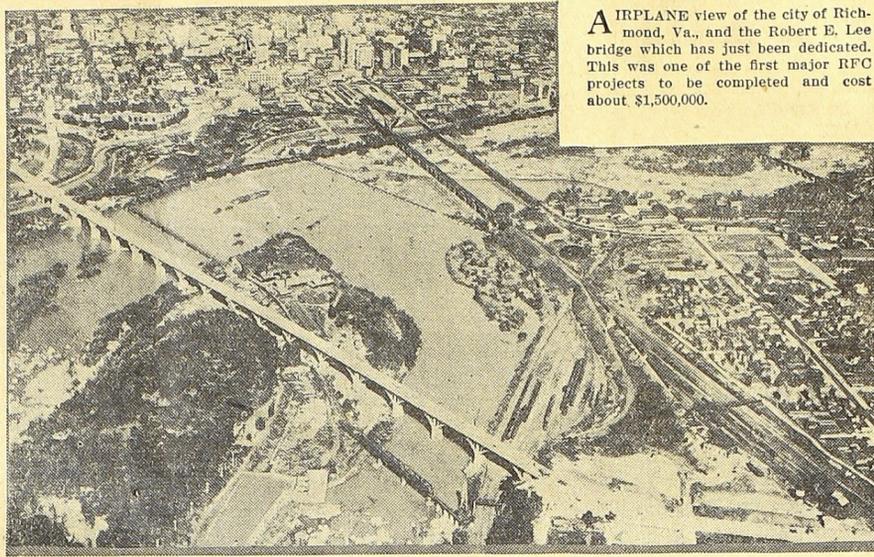

There were rumors that the former magnate, if cleared of all charges, planned to re-enter La Salle street and the utilities field.

THERE is bound to be another hot fight in the senate over the revamped St. Lawrence waterway treaty, but it looks now as if President Roosevelt were justified in his expectation that the treaty will be ratified. Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, leader of the opposition that defeated the pact in the last session, said in Washington that he had heard rumors that some major provisions involved in the controversy had been eliminated in a new treaty with Canada that is being negotiated. The omitted provisions, he understood, have to do with the American share of the cost of the seaway and limitations on the diversion of water from Lake Michigan for the Chicago drainage canal. He added rumor also had it that the new pact would acknowledge complete American sovereignty over Lake Michigan.

The St. Lawrence treaty was one of the live topics discussed in the annual convention of the Mississippi Valley association in St. Louis.

The association voted to continue its opposition to the treaty unless its objectionable features are removed.

Bedtime Story for Children

PETER GOSSIPS WITH HONKER

PETER RABBIT could hardly wait for the coming of the Black Shadows, and just as soon as they had crept out over the Green Meadows he started for the Big River. He knew just where to go. He knew that Honker and his friends would remain out in the middle of the Big River until the Black Shadows had made it quite safe for them to swim in. He reached the bank of the Big River just as sweet Mistress Moon was beginning to throw her silvery light over the Great World. At this point there was a sandy bar in the Big River and right where this sandy bar started out from the bank, Peter squatted.

"Hello, Peter," said he. "It is good to have an old friend greet me."

It seemed to him that he had sat there half the night, but really it was only a short time, before he heard a low signal out in the Black Shadows which covered the middle of the Big River. It was the voice of Honker. Then Peter saw little silvery lines mov-

COOL WEATHER IDEAS

NOW that chill winds blow and children's parties must be given, especially on birthdays, a candy pull will be a delightful thing to give if there is enough room for the children to move about and enjoy it. Here is one of the good candies that may be pulled:

Velvet Molasses Candy.

Put one cupful of molasses, three cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of boiling water and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar in a saucepan over the heat. As soon as the boiling point is reached, add one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Boil until when tried in cold water the mixture will become brittle. Stir constantly during the last of the cooking. When nearly done, add one-half cupful of melted butter and one-fourth teaspoonful of soda, pour out, and when cold, pull. Flavor to taste.

Party Cheese Salad.

Take two packages of cream cheese, roll into small balls, making twelve. Toast—or tint any color desired. Arrange in nests of lettuce and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Apple Sauce Pudding.

Season one cupful of apple sauce with cinnamon or nutmeg, divide it among six dessert glasses. Prepare a junket tablet with a pint of lukewarm milk, three tablespoonfuls of sugar (dissolve the tablet in a tablespoonful of water), flavoring the junket mixture with a few drops of almond. Pour over the apple sauce and let stand to become firm in a warm room. Chill and serve.

Buttercups.

Those of us who have crunched the creamy buttercup will never forget their deliciousness. Shall we make a few at home?

Boil two cupfuls of molasses with one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of boiling water, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-third of a teaspoonful of

PATTY'S CURLS

By ANNE CAMPBELL

WE CANNOT bear to cut her curls. And every week or two the loveliest of little girls is photographed anew. "So we'll remember," we all say, "The curls she used to wear." And then we set another day To cut our Patty's hair.

But Patty's ringlets still adorn Her pretty little head, And still we plan to have them shorn, Postponing it instead. And I am sure the coming years Can joyously be faced, As long as little Pat appears With ringlets to her waist!

For Evening Wear

An amusing green, fuchsia and gold plaid taffeta with a strip of black velvet in it makes this very young evening gown. A suggestion of a bow forms the high front décolletage. The back is cut to the waist.

Tangier and Gibraltar

The Grape Market of Tangier.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

FEW cases of bubonic plague, which has seldom appeared in late years west of Suez, recently were found in Tangier, the international settlement on the south side of the Strait of Gibraltar in Africa. Modern medicine has stepped in to thwart this once-dread disease, and the entire population must be vaccinated.

Although Tangier has nurtured its old traditions for centuries, modern resort builders have, from time to time, during recent years, brought it forward as a prospective playground for European vacationists. In the shadow of venerable mosques and minarets and keyhole-like Moorish archways, they would build modern hotels, bath houses and casinos that would rival the Riviera and vie with Monte Carlo. Tangier is but a few hours' ferry ride from the Rock of Gibraltar. For many centuries it has occupied a reserved seat on the Strait of Gibraltar, in full view of the parade of commerce to and from Mediterranean ports, but today its unimproved harbor does not permit docking of the larger ocean-going vessels.

From the anchorage, Tangier resembles a white sheet spread from the seashore up the African slopes. The spotless white walls, glistening in the sunlight, suggest that "clean-up, paint-up week" is perpetually observed there and that the city fathers will allow nothing but white paint or whitewash to be used. As one nears the shore, however, dashes of yellow, green and red mark the encroachment of modern buildings.

Once inside the city walls the traveler is bewildered by the maze of lanes which the Tangierians call their streets. So narrow are they that wheeled vehicles have never rumbled over the cobbles and pedestrians are compelled to jump into doorways to avoid being side-swiped or trampled upon by huge, moth-eaten camels and donkeys, whose bulging loads spread nearly from wall to wall.

Coffee Houses and Beggars.

In the business section coffee houses offer the principal Tangier recreation. Patrons sit in groups on the floor, playing with odd-marked cards, or lean against the walls sipping a beverage, smoking their pipes, and sometimes singing to the tune of a native orchestra. Next door an unkempt shopkeeper, seemingly more interested in keeping his long-stemmed pipe lighted than in making a sale, presides over a cupboard-like shop displaying pottery, brassware and trinkets.

Beggars are more importunate. They beg for alms and often follow a "prospect" until he yields a coin. Shouts of camel men and street vendors and chatter of pedestrians make a monotonous din, broken occasionally by the weird strains of a "holy" orchestra composed of derelicts who parade about the streets with Muslim banners, begging contributions for the mosque.

An American's description of a Tangier residential district would be "more narrow winding lanes hemmed in by high white walls." The walls are blank except for doorways leading into courts.

Most travelers agree that a visit to the large market, lying just outside of the city wall, is well worth a trip to Tangier. There city folk mingle with the rural folk from the fertile regions in the vicinity. Men, women and children, camels, horses, donkeys, dogs and fowl, all are huddled together in the dust amid piles of oranges, baskets of eggs, casks of olives and improvised stands for nuts, dates, candies, kitchen utensils and homemade shoes. The country women wear broad-brimmed straw hats. The Moslems wear kerchiefs, half covering their faces.

Around the edge of the market place letter writers and fortune tellers ply their professions; black, portly Sudanese negroes in tatters dance to the tune of metal cymbals and discs dangling about their bodies, and the fire-eater and snake-charmer amaze throngs with their clever tricks.

Of all the side shows the snake charmer, perhaps, is strangest. As his assistant beats a doleful tom-tom, he draws a hissing reptile from a sack, allows it to bite his tongue and wipes away the blood with a handful of shavings. After convincing his audience that he is really wounded, he rolls the wet shavings into a pellet which he places in dry shavings. Then he blows on the mass until it smokes and later bursts into flames. Your native guide will say "he is a very holy man."

"Dog of a Town," Say Arabs.

Once a powerful Phoenician city and later a Carthaginian stronghold, Tangier has been despoiled by many an invading army or bombarding fleet. The Romans, Vandals, Arabs, Portuguese, Spaniards and English each have played a dramatic part in the life of this city.

Tangier is situated not only at the crossroads of the sea, but of the air and land as well. Swift bus lines radiate from it in a network which covers Morocco. There is daily air service to Casablanca and Spain. A railroad runs to inland Fez and Atlantic ports.

While Tangier has a distinct oriental atmosphere, European contact is bringing it up-to-date. Maybe that is why the Arabs call the city a "dog of a town." Telephones are everywhere; the French have built a modern hospital; the British have built the finest in Africa, and there is a European residential district. Tangier's country club has a nine-hole golf course, but ragged little Arab boys, descendants of the corsairs of old, are caddies. Nevertheless, Tangier has not outgrown the East's special taxi—the single passenger donkey—and perhaps never will, for automobiles and busses cannot navigate its narrow streets.

Across the Strait, looms the lofty Rock of Gibraltar, the northern pillar of the famed Pillars of Hercules that guarded the western entrance to the Mediterranean. The rock's highest point is more than twice the height of the Washington monument or about 100 feet higher than the world's tallest building. Since the Moors first occupied Gibraltar centuries ago, its face has frequently undergone "treatment." A fortified castle dating back to Moorish occupation still stands in one of its recesses, sharply contrasting with the more modern British ramparts. Tunnels have been bored, paths dynamited and in places its rough "countenance" has been given an application of cement upon which rain water is caught and drained into reservoirs. In natural caves in the rock live the famous Gibraltar monkeys, probably the only monkeys in Europe that were not brought there by men in modern times. The animals are protected by law and are fed by the British army.

Gibraltar City Very British.

Gibraltar, the rock, is known to every school child. Gibraltar, the city at its feet, is known to but few.

Gibraltar city is extremely British if the traveler confines his observations to British soldiers who are everywhere, British "Bobbies" who appear as if they had just emerged from a London police station, British flags that top the masts of municipal and government buildings, and British warships and commercial vessels that outnumber all others anchored in the harbor.

But a glance at its street crowds and its buildings reveals a strange mixture. Most Gibraltar buildings are Spanish in design. Its narrow streets are crowded with busy throngs from many parts of the world. Scotchmen in kilts brush past turbaned Moors from the other side of the Strait; Spaniards from Madrid, Malaga and Cadiz, mingle with sturdy Greeks; ruddy-skinned Hindus and Egyptians jostle Levantine Jews in gaberlines; and swarthy Senegal negroes rub elbows with Chinese from Canton. And weaving in and out of the human mass are hundreds of foreign seamen from boats that come to Gibraltar for fuel, trade and repairs. The mixture of races has become even more noticeable in recent years since Gibraltar has increased in popularity as a pleasure resort for European and American vacationists.

The town begins at the shore of the broad bay and rises 250 feet up the north side of the rock. Long flights of steps lead to the upper portion of the town, making wheeled traffic impossible on many streets. The Mediterranean, or south side of the rock, is almost a sheer cliff. Fishermen have built, however, small villages in the few recesses which are reached by narrow paths.

Between Spain and the British territory is a narrow strip of land called the neutral zone where travelers get the best land view of the rock.

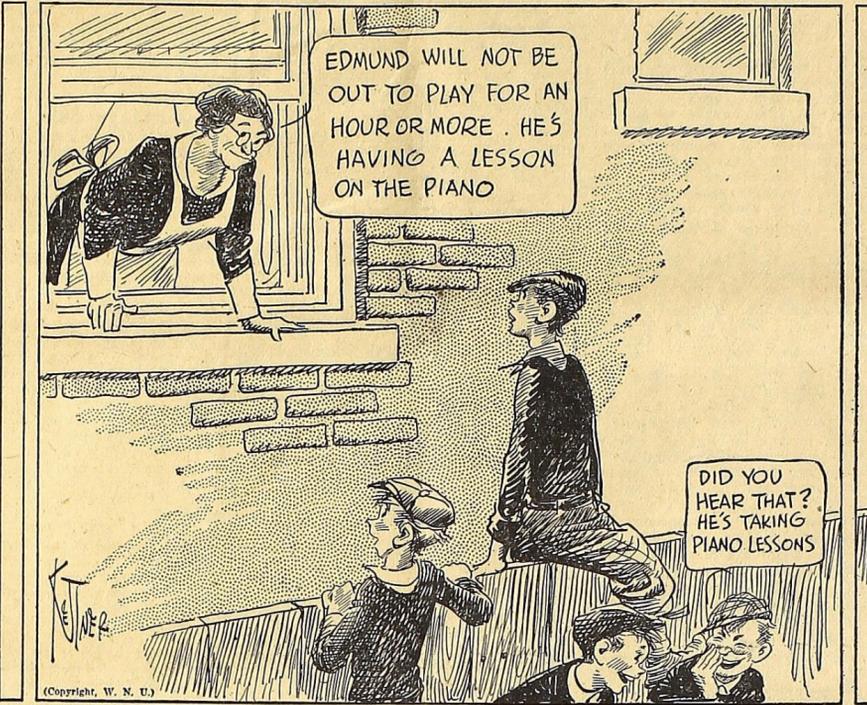

The city took its name from the rock which was called Mount Abyla or Apes hill in ancient times. It was once owned by the Phoenicians and fell, in turn, to the Carthaginians, Romans and Visigoths.

In the eighth century the Moorish chief, Tarik-Ibn-Zeyad, landed on the rock and called it Gibel-Tarik or Mountain of Tarik of which "Gibraltar" is a corruption.

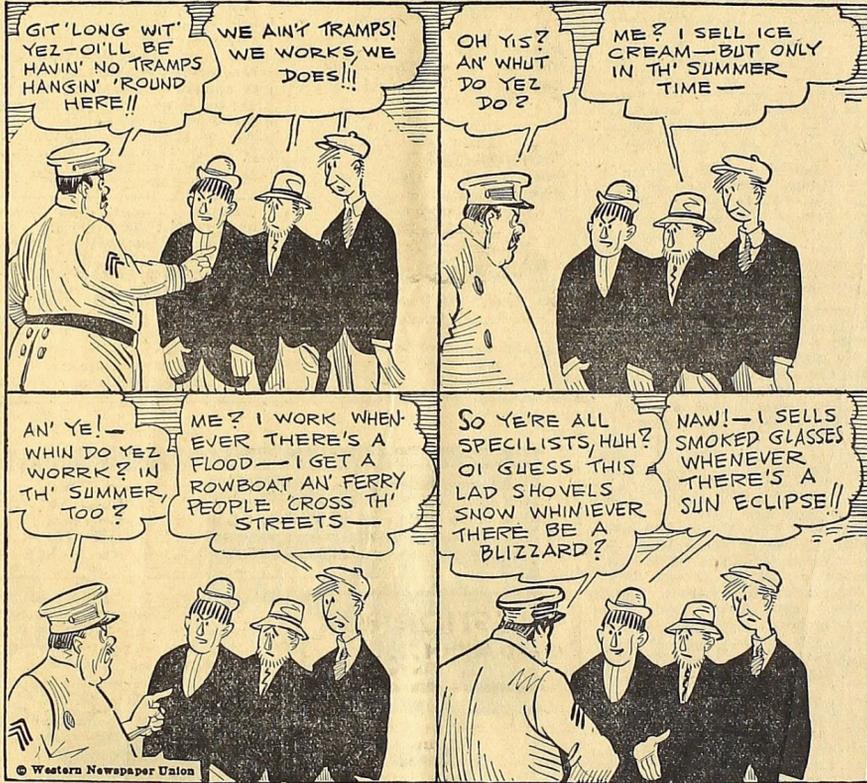

The Moors had held Gibraltar for six centuries when in 1309 the Spanish seized it, but twenty-four years later the Moslems regained possession. It became Spanish territory again in 1462. The British have held the rock since 1704 when they defeated a combined Spanish and French fleet. Since, the British have had frequent wars over Gibraltar's possession. One Spanish siege lasted four years (1779-1783).

PATTERN 1897

You will like this slip when you make it, when you wear it—and when you tub and iron it. What more could you ask of any bit of lingerie? It is a wrap-around model that crosses in the back and is both shadow-proof and adjustable. Our figures do change a bit from time to time, and with all this talk of "streamline silhouettes" and what not, it is a nice thing to know that one's slip will fit exactly right, come what may. It takes next to no time to make, as you will find to

We have yet due us from the state approximately $12,000 Horton money and $19,500 Holbeck-McNitt money, or a total of $25,500. The latter amount plus $8600, balance on hand at present, or a total of $34,100, is all that we will have coming in before next April 15, even if the money comes in on time, which has not been the case the last two years.

This sum must take care of the following obligations:
Covert bonds, due Jan. 1, 1935 $ 7000.00
Interest, due Jan. 1, 1935 700.00
Interest, due Jan. 1, 1935 400.00
Oscoda township bonds and interest 11850.30
Work now under way, to finish 5000.00
Ateco scraper, Jan. 1, 1935 1575.00

Total $26525.30
This does not leave very much for the operation of the road business until next April 15th.

In planning for our program next year we are not anticipating any reduction in the gas tax. A reduction of one cent and passed on to the counties proportionally would put road improvement at a standstill and leave an opening for gradual deterioration of our gravel roads unless bond payments are taken care of from property tax.

Next year, as it is now divided, we have $12,000 to pay on township bonds and $8,000 plus interest on Covert bonds, or something over $20,000 total to pay in 1935.

Assuming no reduction in the gas tax, the next year's plans, as in the past, will be in rebuilding culverts and bridges and doing what grading and graveling we can with the hope that later as the bonds become paid off more funds will be available for entering our limestone and gravel pits and providing good roads for those farmers whose roads are not passable the year round.

Iosco County Road Commission, W. J. Grant, Chairman, J. G. Dimmick, Member, Ernest Orego, Member.
Moved by Brown, supported by Tanner, that report of Iosco County Road Commission be accepted and adopted. Motion prevailed.

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Iosco County
Gentlemen:
Due to delays and irregularity in getting our money from the State our work is greatly hampered and it is very difficult to place and budget our work in a business like way since we know the approximate amount of money that is to come to us but seldom know when we believe it is in the interest of efficiency and economy that your permission be given us to borrow at any time a sum equal the amount due us from the State at the time.

Iosco County Road Commission, W. J. Grant, Chairman, J. G. Dimmick, and Ernest Orego.
Moved by Evans, supported by Tanner, that the County Road Commission be given permission to borrow money as requested. Carried. Yes: Anderson, Black, Brown, Callahan, Schriber, Evans, Herriman, Kraus, Loffman, Louks, MacGillivray, Mark, Nunn, Pelton, Schmalz, Schneider, Tanner—17. No: Myles—1. Total, 18.

Moved by Evans, supported by Tanner, that the matter of buying stone crushing plant located in Burleigh Township be turned over to the committee on roads and bridges. Motion prevailed.

Your committee on drains and ditches beg leave to submit the following:
October 6th we met with the County Drain Commissioner, Mr. Arn, and looked over all work done and found same in good condition; also viewed some drains of recent construction, which are all in good condition. We have no recommendation to make.

Respectfully submitted: Frank Schneider, Alva Callahan, Victor Herriman.
Moved by Schneider, supported by Herriman, that report of committee on drains and ditches be received and accepted. Motion prevailed.

Report of Committee on Roads and Bridges
Court House, Oct. 8, 1934
Iosco County Board of Supervisors
Gentlemen:
Your committee on roads and bridges made a four-day inspection of your County Road Commission's construction of roads and bridges for the year, to date, and here submit its findings, together with a general summary of its appraisal of the merit of the work done by your commission, the merit of equipment in service, and the merit of selection and continuity of the work accomplished and now in progress:

Our survey took us—
Sept. 25, 1934, from East Tawas to Alabaster first, covering all roads in Alabaster township. One small steel support bridge on the road near Benson's in need of repair but not dangerous. Gravel roads in good shape. Those not graveled in fair shape.

Next all roads in Tawas township were gone over and found in good shape, excepting a few pieces that could not well be fixed with grade. Because of sand. Two bridges on the section line between sections 34 and 35, T. 22 N., R. 7 E., in bad shape and should be rebuilt next year. The Commission built two new bridges (both of reinforced concrete) in this township this season—one on the 1/4 line section 15 and the other on the line between sections 23 and 24, T. 22 N., R. 7 E. Both are excellent structures designed for permanence.

Next the roads of Baldwin township were inspected and both the gravel and dirt roads were found in good condition. The new gravel road built by the Federal Government, through the National Forest to Silver Creek, is very attractive and a great improvement over the old road. One new concrete bridge built on North T. line.

Wilber township roads were next inspected. All roads that could be maintained with a blade or grader were in fair shape. An excellent new concrete bridge was built the past summer across Silver Creek near Brooks' corner. The structure is 25 ft. span and 19 ft. roadway, and should be a permanent structure. We found one bridge of about 25 foot span, across Silver Creek between sections 29 and 32, T. 23 N., R. 8 E., that will soon have to be rebuilt.

September 26, 1934—
We drove over the Silver Creek road and M-65 to Plainfield and proceeded to inspect the roads in that township. A heavy rain the night before left many of the clay roads slippery and somewhat cut up, but apparently proper maintenance had not been neglected. One abutment of the bridge across Smith creek between sections 11 and 12, T. 22 N., R. 5 E., was found in need of repairing but not dangerous.

From Plainfield we proceeded to Reno township. Apparently all roads in this township had been well maintained. One and one-half miles of new road has been built on the Oregan county line. The job of grading on this particular job is worthy of note, and a credit to the Road Commission.

Next a part of the roads in Grant township were inspected and found in good shape. We found that the bridge across East Branch sec. 21 has one abutment that needs repairing. This is also the case with the bridge across the same stream between sections 20 and 29. This is not dangerous.

October 1, 1934—
On this day we covered all roads in Oscoda and AuSable townships. Found all in fair shape. A great improvement has been made on the road to Cook Dam. One mile was graded and graveled this year and the balance of the road improved and graveled in places.

October 2, 1934—
On this day we inspected the roads in Burleigh, Sherman, and the balance of Grant townships. The roads were found in an unusually good condition. A 40 foot span bridge was being rebuilt in Burleigh and one in Sherman 20 ft. in span; both with new concrete abutments and the steel superstructure painted and new creosoted floors.

The main items of construction for 1934 are shown below by townships:
Alabaster
Grade and gravel 1/2 mile of road on the Shore, sec. 23, T. 21 N., R. 7 E. Now on the program to put some gravel on the present grade on the south half of this same mile if finances permit.

AuSable
Program now under way to grave a piece south from U. S. 23 to rail way crossing. A stretch of new grade is to be graveled between sections 10 and 15 if funds permit.

Baldwin
About 900 feet of gravel surface was placed on the Tawas Beach road. One new concrete bridge was built on the town line between Baldwin and Wilber. This is a ten foot span structure.

Grant
Program has not yet been started. Plan to do some grading as soon as equipment gets to that locality.

Burleigh
Bridge, 40 foot span. New concrete abutments, steel scrap and painted and new floor. This is on the 1/4 line, sec. 20.

Bridge, 20 foot span. New creosote wooden bridge on the road to the county stone pit.
Gravel, one-quarter mile now being placed on the Keystone road.
Grade, one-half mile to start next week on the 1/4 line, section 15.

Oscoda
Grade, one mile on the Cook Dam road.
Gravel, one mile on the Cook Dam road in addition to improving the balance of the grade and adding considerable gravel, and putting up a large stock pile.
Gravel, now placing two miles on the Van Ertan Lake road.

Plainfield
Bridge of 10 ft. span and 27 ft. roadway extended to 50 ft. roadway with concrete abutments (12 in height).
Grade, four miles extending west from the corner 5 miles north of Hale. Federal government paid the labor and county furnished the machinery.

Sherman
Grade, one mile extending west from a point 3 miles north of Hale.
Grade, one-half mile of Ora Lake road (10,000 yds. exactly).
Grade, 1/2 mile between sections 27 and 28, T. 23 N., R. 5 E.
Grade, 1/2 mile extending east from gravel on Esmond (to be started soon).

Bridge, new creosote wooden bridge, across Smith creek, between sections 12 and 13, T. 23 N., R. 5 E.
Sherman
Grade, one mile between sections 16 and 21.
Bridge, starting now to rebuild one of concrete, 8 ft. span, on above mile.
Bridge, across Elm Creek drain, between sections 22 and 27, 20 ft. span, concrete abutments, new wood floor and steel scrap and painted.

not include several thousand dollars worth of culvert pipe placed in the county during the season. There are also several bridges that have been repaired and other items listed as maintenance that are not included.

The county now has 345 miles of roads taken over under the township relief act, in addition to approximately 130 miles of original county gravel roads. Next spring an additional 109 miles will be taken over and will embrace practically all roads of much importance within the county.

This committee, acting without urge or inducement of any kind from your Road Commission, feels that it is its duty to commend to your board the work done in this and previous years by said commission. We consider that the separate improvements made were determined with good judgment; that each improvement was made in the order to which it was entitled to precedence over other pending projects, and that all improvements have been conducted with no more than reasonable expense.

In the equipment furnished your Road Commission, this committee particularly commends the efficiency of the Fresno dirt scoop and the modern graders pulled by the modern tractor.

This committee begs leave to prefer to this board, informally, its opinion that all the work covered by its survey indicated that the work of your Road Commission in recent and the present year has been near 100 per cent in efficiency.

Respectfully submitted—Harry Pelton, James MacGillivray, Ferdinand Schmalz, chairman—Committee on Roads and Bridges.
Moved by Schmalz, supported by Pelton, that the report of committee on roads and bridges be accepted. Motion prevailed.

Why spend three to four arm-aching hours over an ironing board when you can do the same work in one-third the time . . . comfortably seated with no physical exertion . . . and turn out a nicer job of ironing besides.

Sounds unbelievable perhaps. But women shook their heads the same way at the electric washer when it was introduced 15 to 20 years ago. Now one rarely sees a washboard.

GUSSIE'S eyes roved over the dining room, appraising her fellow diners discontentedly. She hardly heard the harangue of her dinner partner.

"I'm getting fed up, see?" he snarled at her. "Y' can't even pick 'em any more."

"No?" she sneered, listlessly. "No!" he sneered back. "Look at th' last twice. A shoe salesman without a dime, and then that tough cattle man who sez 'Go ahead and shoot!'"

"Can you beat that?" she exclaimed, nudging him excitedly. His gaze followed hers to a clean-cut young man, with a calm, detached air, then entering the room.

The new arrival coolly ignored the hat-check girl's arresting greeting, and left the waiter standing open-mouthed, as he deliberately wended his way among the tables and sat down at one near the orchestra.

"Oh, boy!" Gussie giggled, appreciatively. "Wish you had that kid's guts!"

An obsequious waiter was bending over the young man's table. His lips moved, but he straightened up with a hurt expression. The guest, his undivided attention on the menu-card, read off several items incisively, then turned his attention to a letter.

Gussie laughed aloud. "That's a bird I'd love to get. Class, all over! Used to good things; servants don't scare him any."

"Aw, catfish!" jeered Joe. "Cut th' moonin', and get down t' bizness. Yeh couldn't even intrust a swell like him with a fan dance."

"Stick around, Joe," she advised, "we're going badger huntin' tonight."

Timing her exit with the stranger's, she followed him later into the lobby. Pausing before the locked door of the public stenographer's office, he glanced irritably at a small card on the door.

"Back at 8:30. Leave name and room number on this pad." In a flash, Gussie was at his side, and with a possessive grip on the door-knob, turned to face him brightly.

"Had to come back for something," she lied, glibly. "Did you want me?"

"Ah, the stenographer! He stared at her fixedly. "Are you permitted to come to guests' rooms? I have some letters..."

"Oh, yes," she assured him, with a quick nod. A brilliant thought flashed on her, and she reached for the pad. "Leave your name and room number, I—I have to check it."

"Oh, boy!" she gloated to Joe a minute later, gleefully exhibiting a stenographer's pad and pencil. "Now, we're all set. Gimme twenty minutes' start!"

"Are you nuts?" hissed Joe. "You're no—"

"Dumb cluck, you mean?" She smiled at him derisively. "Correct!"

The door to SOS was ajar, but Gussie rapped, demurely. The guest, John Burns, crossing the room with some collars, saw her in the doorway.

"Come in!" he invited, politely. "You are very prompt."

He waved her to a low easy chair. "Sit down here. You'll find it very comfortable." Leisurely, he drew up a larger arm-chair, between her and the door, facing her. Taking a sheaf of papers from his pocket, he said, matter-of-factly, "Take a letter!"

He paid little attention to her as he droned ahead. Better so. The meaningless curlicues on her pad might have given him quite a shock. As he finished, and turned his attention to a file at his elbow, Gussie rose, stretched herself sensuously, and with pad in hand, perched on the arm of his chair.

He glanced up with some surprise as one slender, silk-clad leg dangled un-comfortably close to him, and with elaborate carelessness, her arm stole over the back of his chair.

"So-o?" came a snarling voice at his back, "that's the way you double-cross me, hey?" Joe, with gun leveled, entered the room, closing the door carefully behind him. "Well, you big mutt, talk up. Whatcha doin' in here, with my wife?"

Burns was fumbling with his file, and Gussie, leaning closer, threw both arms around him convulsively, meanwhile eyeing the newcomer with convincing terror. Quite slowly and deliberately, and showing pained surprise, he disentangled himself from her embrace, wriggled out of his chair, and his gaze met that of the "outraged husband."

"What are you doing in here?" he demanded, ominously. "Get out!"

"Well, I'll be d-d!" screeched Joe, hysterically, and flourishing his gun threateningly. "It's gonna cost you plenty, see? And I ain't goin' until—"

Burns, with one rapid leap, brought his open hand to the rat's face with a resounding slap, sending him reeling. Following up the slap, he grabbed the gun, thrust it into his own pocket, and, then, grasping Joe firmly by the scruff of his neck, dragged him to the door, and hurled him into the hall. Dusting his hands contemptuously, he closed the door and turned to face the now truly terrified girl.

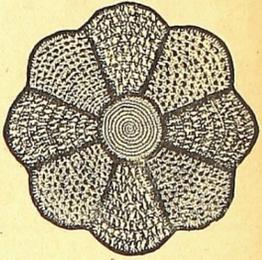

"Sorry you had to witness that," he told her, apologetically. "But I certainly owe you a debt of gratitude." She stared at him. "Sure was game of you, throwing your arms around me to protect me from that hold-up man. But, then, I wasn't afraid of him."

"And—and you're not sore at me?" gasped Gussie, eyeing him half in admiration, half in stark disbelief. "You—you're not gonna turn me in?" She trembled, violently.

"How much do I owe you?" he asked, seemingly ignoring her questions good-naturedly. "Here," he fumbled with her writing pad, "write it down here. You see," he smiled wistfully, "I'm totally deaf."

"DRESDEN PLATE" CROCHETED RUG

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

In Colonial days patchwork quilts and rug rugs were very popular. During the past 3 or 4 years patchwork quilts have been the leading item of interest for home art needleworkers. In 1933, when the crocheted rag rug in quilt design appeared, women all over the country took great interest in this new and beautiful way of making rag rugs. The old rugs were either round or oval, crocheted row after row until desired size was obtained. Changing of colors was the only variation. In quilt design rugs many beautiful combinations are possible and the work is really interesting.

Illustration above shows the "Dresden Plate" rug, named after the Dresden Plate or Friendship quilt, a pattern that every woman knows. This rug is another popular pattern, measures 34 inches and can be made from 40 oz. of Grandmother Clark's rag rug strips or 32 oz. of "Linkraft," the new woven material for rag rugs.

Egypt's Attractions

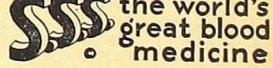

The tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen is now visited by nearly all Mediterranean cruisers, as are the temple of Karnak and the other great relics of ancient Egypt. The huge columns and still mighty ruins of the temple are subtly pleasing to feminists. One of Egypt's strong queens, Hatshepsut, played a leading part in directing the building of this temple.

When her brother succeeded her he jealously had all her inscriptions chiseled away and covered her great obelisks with a wall of masonry. With the centuries the masonry has crumbled away and Hatshepsut's obelisk was disclosed, unchanged despite the vindictiveness of kings.

Seek to Stamp Out Rule of Marihuana

Authorities Start Fight on Pernicious Drug.

New York.—Narcotic authorities throughout the country have started a grim, intensive drive against the use of marihuana, one of the most insidious and pernicious dope evils of the Twentieth century. The campaign will be prosecuted with an intensity that no similar past crusade has known. And it probably will fail. Almost inevitably it must do so.

But that is not deterring United States officials from bending every effort to stamping out widespread use of marihuana. If anything, their determination was whetted by the recent discovery here of the raw material for 1,000,000 "reefers." This is the slang term, used by addicts, to describe the innocent-looking cigarettes made from the lethal Mexican plant.

A Drop in the Bucket.

But—statistics startlingly show—this seizure, while imposing on paper, perhaps—was a mere drop in the huge bucket of marihuana dissemination. To root out the menace it would be necessary to include marihuana in the list of drugs forbidden by the Harrison act.

This measure fixed a heavy penalty for the sale or possession of opium, heroin, cocaine and similarly deadly narcotics. But on the topic of marihuana it is silent, although desperate efforts are made yearly to have the latter included in the ban.

The outstanding reason why the latest and most savage thrust against marihuana may fail is easily explained. This is the facility with which the addict can provide himself with it locally. If you craved cocaine or heroin, the only way you could get it would be to buy it surreptitiously from a peddler.

But marihuana can be easily and cheaply be made by almost anyone. "Mary Warner," as it is known along the waterfronts, will grow in window boxes, backyards, any patch of earth. There lies the grimness of the situation. And the ironic corollary to this is the fact that in at least half the states of the Union it may be sold quite openly, without fear of arrest.

Terrible in Effects.

What is this sinister marihuana? It is scientifically designated as cannahis Americana (American hemp). From its plant hashish is made—a mixture of the dried seeds of the hemp, a little opium and aromatic spices.

American addicts, however, usually smoke the ungarlished leaf, known as "reefers" or "muggles."

After the first few puffs the novice experiences a sense of wild hilarity. Then he falls into a profound slumber. The second time, however, the real effects begin to tell. Space and time become vastly distorted so that a second seems like hours, and a kiss will last forever. Sensuous images become magnified and last indefinitely. A hand-clap sounds like a thunderbolt and the addict can literally hear a pin drop.

The craving for it becomes greater, unconquerable. After five years of taking it periods of temporary insanity result.

Golf Ball Is Moon in Calendar Clock

Fort Worth, Texas.—A clock that tells the time of day, the day of the week and month and phases of the moon has been constructed by Price Kiker, whose occupation is piano tuner.

The clock works with such accuracy, Kiker said, that it is calculated it will not vary more than one day in 48 years.

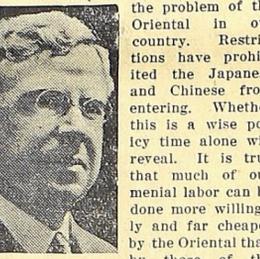

A golf ball, painted black on one side and aluminum on the other, represents the moon. It is connected with the regular clock movements by delicate gears and makes a complete turn in 29½ days, just as the moon does.

Kiker spent five years in figuring out the plan, he said but actually spent only five days constructing the clock.

Our Neighbor—the Oriental

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

So far as numbers are concerned the late immigration laws have endeavored to solve the problem of the Oriental in our country. Restrictions have prohibited the Japanese and Chinese from entering. Whether this is a wise policy time alone will reveal. It is true that much of our menial labor can be done more willingly and far cheaper by the Oriental than by those of the white race. It is also true that merchandise made in Japan has been offered for sale in this country at a price cheaper than it can be manufactured in our shops. It is also true that the Oriental may not be the most congenial neighbor. He comes to us with the background of a different culture and insists on expressing his hereditary tendency. For this reason we find the Chinese, in particular, developing colonies of their own where they have their own temples, shops and social privileges. Every large city has its Chinatown. This is only one side of the picture. We should not forget that in our universities many Oriental students have won first rank in the field of scholarship. Many are preparing for a professional career in their native land. All of the Orientals in this country are not of what might be called the artisan class.

When we seriously ask ourselves, what are the obligations we owe these neighbors, we face a dilemma. One thing certain: we cannot press assimilation to the extent of intermarriage if we want to preserve the white race. The latter invariably loses its identity in the offspring of all intermarriages. On the other hand, the best judgment of the Oriental mind is equally opposed to intermarriage. Nor can we assimilate them into citizenship, for the reason of their tendency to colonize. It would be just as impossible for us to become Chinese or Japanese.

Perhaps our obligation is best expressed in the exercise of Christian courtesy and neighborly spirit, endeavoring to instill into them the spirit of American democracy, and leave it to work from within outward. Whatever assimilation is possible, must arise within the personality of the Oriental himself, and cannot be forced upon him from the outside.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

IN THESE days when economies are sought it is well to remember that fuel can be saved in many little ways of well-planned cooking. Frequently the saving proves one of time as well as coins. Modern stoves and methods require different management from the one-time kitchen stove burning coal and which was always kept going. This is seldom found. There were certain advantages in it, for the constant heat made it possible to cook, slowly at least, without adding to the fuel bill. But on the other hand, the very fact that the fire was constant increased costs. It is because the heat can be regulated at will today, that it is so important to have the fire going as little as is compatible with the culinary work.

Cooking on top of a gas, oil or electric stove requires less fuel than oven cooking. So whenever possible, use top burners. When stoves are equipped with oil burners, top and oven are heated at the same time, but it still should be borne in mind that more oil is used when the oven is made hot, than when the top of the stove only is needed without high temperature. With an oil burning range the planning of cookery to save fuel is much the same as with the ordinary, if less used, range. That is when the fire is high, do oven baking as well as top cooking, and then let the fire burn low, or even cut off the flow of oil and let the fire go out.

For Thrifty Cooking. When using the regulation oil stove, or the gas or electric stove, confine cooking to top burners as much as can be managed with results satisfactory. For example, try that delicious pudding, baked apple tapioca, made from cored, peeled, and sliced apples and pearl tapioca, water, sugar, a dash of salt, and cinnamon, if liked. Make it in a double boiler on top of the stove. The tapioca will steam in the boiler much quicker and the apples soften in much less time than in the oven. Serve in sherbet cups, and top each glass with whipped cream or marshmallow whip. Macaroni with cheese can be made in the double boiler, and if dished up and top covered with buttered crumbs browned under the flame, the effect is practically identical with baked macaroni.

When having a roast use the oven to cook other things which require a hot oven, when that is needed, or which take long rather slow cooking if a lower temperature is right. It is amazing the reduction of time of keeping current on that can be managed in this way. Carelessness in turning burners down, when a lower temperature is all that is needed, will bring up bills a bit. And not to turn off the current immediately it is not needed, is actual loss.

A Place for Everything. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure is certainly true when it pertains to putting away things so that they are easy to find. One's patience is not taxed nor her temper excited when she can go to a place and find, not part of what is wanted, but every piece needed. Few things are more trying than to find one cuff of a collar and cuff set lacking, when one is in a hurry, and all three pieces should be together. There are some aids which may prove helpful in guarding against such an inconvenience.

If a set is to be put away for some time, a good way to insure having all parts together is to take a stitch or two through them just enough to tack the articles together. See that these stitches are taken through the portions which turn under in each piece and so will not show even the tiny stitch holes when put on to wear. Pins can be used, but they are likely to leave rust marks wherever the pins rest, as well as in the pinholes, so the stitches are better. Another way is to spread the collar out on cardboard and lay both cuffs on it too, over the collar. Wrap the whole set in tissue paper, and lay in a box. Many sets can be put in one box which should be wide though not necessarily deep.

SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes to Prosperity Farm to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, his health broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, a neighbor. There is at once a mutual attraction, but Prudence suspects man since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife, Len Calloway tries to buy Prue's timber, but she contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. David comes to the farm. Prue accompanies Rod and Jean, Rod's thirteen-year-old niece, to a circus. Chicot, an old clown, is accidentally killed. He was the grandfather of Milly Gooch, one of the circus riders. Rod became friendly with Milly when she lived on Prosperity Farm. Calloway intimidates laborers so that they cannot be hired to cut the timber for Rodney Gerard. Milly Gooch broke her engagement to Calloway; he believes Rod was the cause and has since been his enemy. After Chicot's death Rod calls on Milly to see if he can be of any help. Prue sees in a newspaper a flashlight picture of a worker's arrival from Calloway. Prudence enters her timber tract with him on the pretense of bargaining on the lumbering. He confines her in a cabin.

"Hold on! Why the rush? You've been fooling me, haven't you? Been trying to make me believe that I was to cut your timber, while all the time you had your tongue in your cheek. What's the game? I was ready to play fair. I've no quarrel with you, I'm a just man. But you've tricked me. Now you'll pay for it. I'll keep you here till you sign a contract for me to cut for you."

His cool, restrained ferocity stopped Prue's heart for an instant. She seated herself in the one chair, carefully spread her skirts to the blaze, and looked up at him.

"You think you will keep me here, you mean. Wake up! You are in the Twentieth century. You have forgotten that three persons already know with whom I came into the woods. I'll tell you my game, as you call it. Rodney Gerard is bringing in a crew. I preferred that you shouldn't see them arrive. And you didn't. Easy, wasn't it?"

He seized her shoulders. With all her strength she shook off his hands and retreated to the fireplace.

"Don't touch me again! Don't dare!"

The words shivered into a whisper. The icy cold of the brook was stealing through her bones. Calloway folded his arms and scowled.

"He is a little mad," she thought, as she had thought once before.

"Dare! That's a joke. Who can stop me? Your foxy partner is busy with his gang, isn't he? I take off my hat to you, you put your fake friendliness across. I believed you. I asked you to marry me! You've been laughing at me! Now it's my turn. You're here and here you stay. You needn't shiver. You are safe enough. I'm no bum. I'm not a lady-snatcher like Rod Gerard. I'm a just man. I'm entitled to be boss of this county and no one's going to block me. Get that. I won't stand for interference."

Prudence regarded Calloway incredulously. The man was molding his life to an obsession.

"Why are you staring at me? Don't you understand? You'll spend the night here, and then I guess—"

"Say, listen! You've got another guess comin', Buddy."

A man swayed in the entrance. His hunted eyes, set in dark rings, glared from his cadaverous face, as vicious a face as ever scowled behind bars. From clawlike fingers a revolver dangled.

Prudence pressed her hand hard against her lips to keep back a cry. The convict? Perhaps he had taken the emerald and diamonds last night. Perhaps she had been horribly unjust to Walter Gerard. Calloway sprang for him. He leveled the gun. It clicked.

"Hands up! Lay off! Get me? If either you or the jape yip, I'll put a bullet through each of you, an' I wouldn't stoop to choose which first, either. I ain't like you, you big noise. I am a bum."

He watched Calloway's retreat through half-closed lids. The glint between them was murderous. Prudence said as flippantly as if her heart were not shaking her body with its clamor.

"This is getting to be one of those parties, isn't it?"

"Say, you're a cool one, sister. I guess you can have the cabin after all, Buddy. There'll be folks here after this skirt you kidnaped."

"I haven't kid—"

"Keep your mouth shut! Sit down!"

Calloway sat with a suddenness which rocked the chair. The man in possession of the revolver scowled at Prudence.

"Here you! Scatter that fire! Quick! Think I want the whole pack after you following that smoke? That'll do.

Drop the stick! Stand up by the chimney! Gimme those pearls!"

One instant of paralyzing fright, and then an inner strength sprang to Prue's rescue.

"Pearls!" Her laugh was a masterpiece of its kind. "Pearls! I didn't realize that my wax beads could fool anybody."

The man edged nearer. His revolver covered Calloway, whose eyes looked like those of a trapped fox.

"Wax beads! Oh yeah? Think I don't know the real thing when I see it? What do you s'pose I was doin' a stretch— Get going, sister. Take 'em off, quick, or I'll do it, an' I won't be too easy, neither. Lissen, get a move on!"

Was this nightmare, Prudence wondered, as her unsteady hand fumbled with the diamond and platinum clasp at the back of her neck. It must be. What had seemed an amusing plan to divert Len Calloway couldn't develop into a possible tragedy, could it?

The man grabbed the pearls from her fingers, weighed them in his left hand. His leer was horrible.

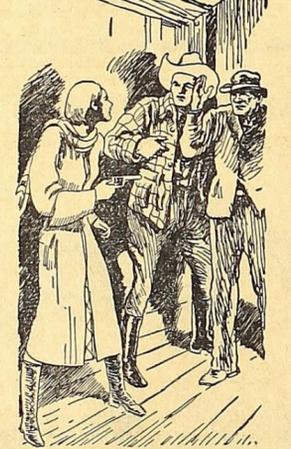

"Wax beads! Oh, yeah! I guess they'll get me three squares a day for a year of two."

"Was that a faint call? Prudence caught her throat to stifle an exclamation. The man with the revolver stiffened. He thrust the pearls into his dirty shirt. His eyes went dead.

"Lissen, you two. Someone's comin'. I'm gettin' out. I'll keep this gat trained on you. If either of you tip off I've been here, I'll shoot you on the trail. I'll know."

He backed to the door. With a quick swoop, Prudence flung brush on the coals. Smoke would give a clue to the rescuers. It caught fire and roared up chimney.

"Why you—" Dazed by her daring, the fugitive hesitated. In that instant Calloway sprang and caught him about the shoulders. The revolver clattered to the floor. Prue seized it.

"Hands Up! Both of You!"

"Don't waste your strength, Calloway." Why couldn't she keep her voice steady? "I've got him covered. I'm not a crack shot, but I think I can drop him at this distance."

Calloway turned and took a step forward.

"Stay where you are! Hands up! Both of you! If you move, the next s-scene in this screen thriller will be cut by the censor."

Gun in one hand, one hand clutching the back of the chair, Prudence covered the two men. She disciplined a wild impulse to shout with laughter. Calloway's face! His mouth hung open as if surprise had permanently dislocated his jaw. The other—she shivered—never had she seen such eyes. Trapped, Desperate, Murderous. She had not known that anything human could look like that. David had known, though. Dave! Where was he? If only—

The cabin door! Opening! Slowly! Soundlessly! Something sinister in its caution. Had the escaped convict a pal? Her blood chilled. Who had come?

"Give me that gun!" Rodney Gerard had the revolver in his hand before Prudence realized who had dashed into the cabin. With a relieved sigh Calloway dropped his hands.

"Put 'em up again!"

"Don't be a darn fool, Gerard. I—"

"Put 'em up! There's blood on your forehead, Prue. Who hurt you?"

Prue's brain felt curiously light. Her voice seemed to trickle from a great empty space behind her eyes.

"Hurt me! No one. Believe it or not, I was about to add a colorful fact to the state of Maine war against crime, when you crashed in. They're an intriguing pair, aren't they? Reading from left to right, you have first a pearl thief, then a—just man—such a just man!"

"Steady, Prue. Don't shiver like that. I'll get your pearls."

"While you're getting those, you might make that man return the jewels he stole from my safe last night."

"Lissen, what does the jape mean,

Jewels? Do you think if I had anything I could turn into money I'd be hangin' round here? Say, she's crazy."

Was the man acting amazement, or hadn't he taken the emerald?

"Crazy or not, you'll come along with us. Get going!" Gerard gave the revolver a suggestive hitch. "Follow him, Calloway. Keep your hands up, both of you. Prue, come on."

She nodded. Len Calloway looked as if he were burning up, his face had a purplish tinge. He spoke between clenched teeth.

"I'll get going all right. But watch out, Gerard. I'm not through with you. Miss Schuyler's all for you, isn't she? Have you told her that you've been paying Milly Gooch's bills? Have you—Hi—there—you!"

He lunged for the man in front. Caught him about the waist. Fumbling for holds, the two strained and panted. The fugitive was smaller, but fear of a return to prison gave him superhuman strength. He twisted and twined about Calloway's legs until both went down with a crash. With the agility of a cat and the cry of an enraged animal, the victor was on his feet, whirled, and grabbed the gun from Gerard's hand. Crouching, he backed toward the fireplace. His eyes were flames. He aimed the revolver steadily.

"Beat it, you two guys—and beat it quick! I'll keep the pearls—and the girl!"

Prudence retreated to the wood pile. She had thought her mind geared to surprises, but this quick turn stopped her heart. She couldn't back away further; the wood pile was like a wall behind her. Hadn't David said that nine times out of ten when one was backed against an insurmountable wall, a gate would open behind if you put up the fight of your life? Perhaps there was a gate in this wall—perhaps. A gate! Cautiously, breathlessly, she groped behind her.

The convict's clawlike fingers tightened on the revolver. He scowled hideously at Gerard. "Hey, you! Cut out that cig. stuff! Beat it, or I'll fire and—"

With all her force Prudence brought the dull side of the ax down on his arm. His sentence shattered into profanity. His gun clattered to the floor. Gerard seized it, thrust it against his back as he whirled on Prue.

"Hey! Cut that out!"

"Beat it, or I'll fire!" Gerard's words, if not his voice, were a perfect imitation as he prodded the cursing, shambling man toward the door.

Calloway thundered "You're not letting him get away, Rod? Don't you know he's the escaped prisoner they're hunting?"

"He won't make his get-away with you at his heels. It's your job to deliver him to the sheriff after you've frisked Miss Schuyler's pearls off him. Get busy, Len."

How could Rodney be so cool, so smiling, Prudence wondered frantically. "He don't need get busy. Here they are." The captive pulled the lovely, lustrous string from under his ragged, dirty shirt. Prudence snatched it from the floor and clutched it tight against her breast.

"Come across with those jewels!" Gerard poked a reminder.

"Lissen, don't get fresh with the gat. I've coughed up the pearls, ain't I—an' I don't know nothin' about no jewels."

"Let him go! Let him go! I don't care about the jewels. Please let him go." The break in Prue's voice maddened her.

The muscles of Gerard's jaw tightened.

"On your way!" He held out the revolver. "Take it, Len. Don't let this bird stop till you have him safe behind bars."

Calloway gripped the gun. He said through clenched teeth:

"You're taking chances. How do you know I won't shoot you?"

Rodney Gerard regarded him through narrowed lids and smiled.

"Because you're such a just man, Len. Drop that ax, Prue, you won't need it again."

"Get going!" Calloway's fury was partially expended in the jab he gave the man at the other end of the revolver.

The door swung on its hinges. Through the opening came the crackling of twigs under stumbling, heavy feet, rough voices. The sounds dwindled into forest silence.

"Is it s-safe to go now?" With unsteady fingers Prue tried to clasp the pearls about her throat.

"In just a minute. Let me do that. Bend your head, Gorgeous."

The hush in Gerard's voice, his fingers against the back of her neck set Prue shivering again.

"What's the matter?" He looked down at her skirt. "Your clothes are soaked. Your lips are blue. How did you get so wet? That's a mean bruise. What happened?"

"Lost my way. Fell into the b-brook."

He pulled off his coat. "Put your arms in. Don't argue. Do as you're told. It's not a perfect thirty-six, but it will help keep you warm."

"How did you know where I was?"

"Jean got anxious about you,

Turned back and met us. That child has a brain. She knew you shouldn't have gone with Calloway. Why, why did you do it?"

"Jim wished he could be out of the way when the g-gang arrived. I tried to help, and now you c-crab—"

"I'm not crabbing. Don't you know that I almost lost my mind when Jean told me where you'd gone? Don't you know that I went through h—l getting to you? Don't you know that it's torture for me to see you shiver and have my hands tied by that infernal promise I made? If I were to touch you—"

The caressing break in his voice, the faint tremor of his lips sent the blood burning to Prue's hair.

"Oh, come on! Let's get out of here!" He pulled a flashlight from his coat pocket.

"Let's hurry! Hurry! I'm frozen!"

"Go on."

He followed as she entered the trail. Every swish of her wet skirts about her knees sent a million little icy shivers coasting along her veins. Gerard faced her down the trail. The hand that touched her was like ice. Constriction swept her.

"You're freezing! Take your coat. I don't need it, r-really I don't."

"Stop talking. Go on! If you don't, I will carry you, and you are not a fairy, girl."

He was cold, but of course he wouldn't acknowledge it. Had he heard what Calloway had said about Milly and money—Och, how cold her legs and feet were—like sticks of ice! There! She had put the right one forward. Now the left—right—left—right—Had Rodney paid the circus girl's bills? Left—right—"Keep on feet!"—left—right—march time—the words were like a merry-go-round. She couldn't stop them. The clearing at last. Copper-red light on the trees. A fire? No, the sunset! A sky of rainbow splendor. The color warmed her, all except her feet. Right—left—they had frozen—

Someone caught her as she stumbled. Someone picked her up in his arms.

"How warm—how heavenly—Left—right—Please—please—Jim—Jim—stop those words going round and round—"

Someone smothered something between his teeth. Someone pulled off the coat, bundled her into something woolly and soft, something that smelled of tobacco, lifted her into a car. She was warmer. Those horrid words had stopped whirling. Why should she have thought for an instant that she was with Jim Armstrong? She looked at the man at the wheel.

"Thank goodness, you have put on your coat! It would be you—the man-of-the-moment," she said unsteadily.

He looked straight down into her eyes. Straight and deep.

"But all the time you thought I was Jim."

Prudence closed her lids tight. That pesky, "Left!" "Right!" started in her head again. She had better keep them open. Rodney Gerard needn't growl at her. Suppose she were to remind him of Milly Gooch and—lucky she had found that out in time!

Gerard drew the robe closer about her.

"Warmer Gorgeous?"

Submerged Coral Reefs Make Lightning Changes

To watch a submerged coral reef is to witness miracles, says the National Geographic society. At one moment the whole reef is alive with pulsating, expanding, waving sea creatures of delicate pastel colors. A touch, a splash, or even the shadow from a boat overhead, causes a spasm of alarm. In a twinkling every living thing on the reef has changed. Frail anemones contract and withdraw into themselves. Jeweled fish dart into holes. The banded rockfish has changed its markings and the spotted flounder that rippled over the sand is now invisible, having changed color to resemble sand. For a minute the reef remains barren and dull. Then, one by one, fish and anemones take courage and furtively emerge.

The reason for these lightning changes is obvious when one realizes the greedy cannibalism of a coral reef. Though resembling the most retiring, sensitive flowers, anemones use their tentacles to seize and paralyze fish. The sargassumfish are such cannibals that they swallow each other. In this constant warfare, being continually preyed upon, many fish have developed unusual means of protection. The surgeon fish carries near its tail a sharp-edged spine capable of slashing its enemies. The puffer fish, under threat of being swallowed, inflates itself into an inedible, prickly ball.

Mackinac Island

The Indians named Mackinac Island Michillimackinac, meaning "Great Turtle." They reckoned it the abiding place of spirits and left many a peace offering there in the calcareous rock caves. It was here that Schoolcraft wrote his legend of Hiawatha, afterward made into a poem by Longfellow.

By Martha B. Thomas

CADDY lighted the fire in the fireplace. She switched on the Christmas lights for the tree. She pulled down the shades, and pushed an easy chair towards the fire. Halsy would be home any time now, cold and weary from his round of calls on sick people. This was their first Christmas eve together since they had been married.

Halsy had started out on his rounds at noon. At three he had telephoned to say he was obliged to abandon his car. The snow was too deep. He had borrowed a pair of snowshoes and a fur cap, and with bag in hand, was about to walk a road leading through the woods to a small shack where a sick woman lay waiting his ministrations. At Caddy's worried inquiries, he said it would take him a couple of hours. Then he had a three-mile walk further on the main turnpike, to a child suffering with a quincy sore throat. After that, he would retrace his steps, get his car, and drive home.

Caddy gazed into the flames. This country practice covered miles and miles. Halsy was conscientious. He never failed to reach his patients somehow, but he was tired and worn out. And Caddy herself was often lonely. Her plans for fun, for little parties at home, usually ended in trying to get someone to fill Halsy's place. She knew it would be like this. Halsy had warned her. She was sensible and patient. Yet tonight . . . Christmas eve, and Halsy's birthday. She sighed . . . she simply couldn't bear to have anything go wrong.

The telephone rang. "That you, Caddy? I'm stuck again. The drifts are so deep I can't walk through. I'm out of the wood road all safe, and within two miles of that sick child. But none of the farmers near here has a team of horses. I really need oxen to pull me through. It's tough going."

"Oh," breathed Caddy, trying not to sound dismal.

"Caddy, I wonder," he hesitated. She could tell he was tired by the drag in his voice. "If you could possibly get Lem Salter's team of oxen and drive here for me! I simply can't ask him to do it himself. He has his daughter home for the holidays and her family. It's Christmas."

Caddy could not speak. She knew what this meant. Hours of being out in the storm. Heaven alone knew when they would get home. She glanced about the friendly, inviting room.

"Won't you, darling . . . to help me out?"

Then she remembered something her father had said to her on her wedding day:

"You will never be allowed to forget you are the wife of a country doctor. But I think he's worth it . . . if you are!"

So now over the telephone she said, "All right. Stay where you are. Get warm and rested, and I'll be there by Shanghai Express!"

The tedious drive behind the oxen seemed endless. The snow sifted down inside her collar. It blinded her. She was not actually suffering, but she was pretty uncomfortable. On . . . and on . . . and on. The whirling curtains swept before her. The snow drifted across the broad backs of the patient beasts. They took their own way in their own plodding time. Caddy sat on a box wrapped round with a bear rug.

On and on . . . and on. Creak . . . creak . . . the swaying of the beasts was like some grotesque, nightmarish rhythm. She almost fell asleep.

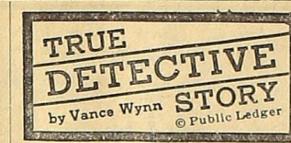

Then out of the whiteness ahead she heard a shout. "Hey . . . bless your heart, darling!" And Halsy jumped aboard.

The child was very sick. The throat had to be lanced. Caddy forgot her injured feelings. She helped capably. The mother, worn and harassed, thanked them both with tears in her eyes. And together they drank coffee beside a humble kitchen stove, and ate huge slices of thick, buttered bread. Not what Caddy had planned for Christmas eve, yet, curiously enough, it seemed better than the other. It had . . . she tried to think it out—more strength and sinew to it.

She smiled at Halsy. "This is positively the best Christmas eve I ever spent in my life!" she whispered.

Behind a large buttered slice of bread he kissed her. "You are the perfect pattern for a country doctor's wife!" he whispered back.

The Gentleman From Paris

IT ALL came about from engaging a caretaker without looking into his antecedents.

Dr. and Mrs. Jerome Depinni—the last named being an Italian countess—had a winter home in Minneapolis.

They were in the habit of going south for winter, and left the Western home in charge of a venerable servant.

One year when they returned to Minneapolis they discovered that the servant had disappeared, and with him many of the precious possessions of the family.

These included a rare watch that had once been the property of Cardinal Richelieu, and a grape cluster design in pearls, diamonds and platinum, the work of the peerless artist, Benvenuto Cellini.

It was felt instinctively that the stolen goods had been taken to New York, so Doctor Depinni called upon George B. Dougherty, a clever detective of that city, who had made a reputation by solving more than one perplexing case.

His first inquiry concerned the venerable caretaker.

The victims were sure that he was all right; they feared, in fact, that he might have met with foul play.

As a proof of the man's good name, they exhibited a sheaf of letters of recommendation he had brought with him when he applied for the job. Dougherty investigated and found that all the letters had been forged.

This satisfied him that the man was a crook, and, from the character of the robbery, he was convinced that the caretaker worked with confederates.

His first move was to make a tour of the pawnshops of New York.

After that he visited many of the dealers in antiques.

On the second day of the search he was fortunate enough to come across the famous Richelieu watch in a shop on Sixth avenue.

The dealer pretended to be very much shocked when he was told that he had purchased stolen goods, and, in reparation, said he was willing to do all in his power to bring the thief to justice.

He stated that the man had told him his name was "Mr. Coates," and that he had picked up this antique and others in the Rue Madame, that street of famous antique shops in the French capital.

It had been "picked up" truly enough, but not in the manner nor in the place suggested by the clever crook.

The dealer was able to give a very good description of the man who had sold him the watch.

He said that he was of medium build, smooth shaven, of an olive complexion and with dark eyes.

The rogues' gallery was consulted and the detective found several men by the name of Coates, but none of them answered the description of the gentleman who seemed to be so familiar with the Rue Madame.

Dougherty now turned his attention to the second-hand stores, and, by great good luck, he located a dealer who had purchased the grape cluster design made by Benvenuto Cellini.

This man was able to give him a clue regarding the whereabouts of the elusive "Mr. Coates."

He said he had gone West, and thought he was living in Wisconsin.

It did not take Dougherty long to get to Milwaukee, and there, with the aid of the police, he located the man for whom he had been searching so long.

He was existing in a hall bedroom, and, having spent all of his money, was on the lookout for a fresh job.

The detective, in short, had struck him at the psychological moment.

Dougherty played his part cautiously. He might have arrested him on suspicion, but he did not propose to do anything like that.

What he wanted was real evidence. At their second meeting he began to talk about antiques and said that he had a customer who was anxious to get some rare Seventeenth century works of art, that he was willing to pay a big price for the right kind of articles.

The so-called "Mr. Coates" swallowed the bait line, hook and sinker and offered to take the detective to a place in New York where he could get the watch once owned by the great French cardinal.

The rest of it was detail. It was proved that the fellow was the confederate of the caretaker who had robbed the Western home of Doctor Depinni, and after the usual formalities, he was placed on trial and promptly convicted.

He was given a long sentence, during which it is to be presumed that he had ample opportunity for improving his knowledge of the French language and French antiques.

Use of Title "Junior"

According to Emily Post's Etiquette, "Junior" always means the son or grandson of a man of the same name and "Second" means the nephew or cousin of a man of the same name. The son of a "Junior" of the same name is called "Third." It is improper for a man to continue adding "Junior" to his name after the death of his senior, or to call a boy "Third" if either the "Senior" or "Junior" has died.

Currency Inflation Currency inflation is disproportionate and relatively sharp and sudden increase in the quantity of money or credit or both, relative to the amount of exchange business, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News. Such increase may come as a result of unexpected addition to the supply of precious metals, or in times of business activity by expansion of credit through the banks. It may come in times of financial difficulty by government issues of paper money without adequate metallic reserve and without provision for conversion into standard metallic money on demand.

Mosque of St. Sophia

The Mosque of St. Sophia is built at Constantinople as a Christian cathedral by the Roman Emperor Justinian, 531-528 A. D., in the form of a Greek cross, 295 by 143 feet with a flattened dome 180 feet high, set in a cluster of cupolas and minarets. The brick walls are lined on the inside with marble plundered from Greek temples. The Sultan of Turkey, Mohammed II, turned the cathedral into a mosque in 1453 A. D.

Meaning of "Junket"

The word junket as often applied to congress was originally applied to a banquet, or a picnic or excursion with feasting but it has come to mean a trip at public expense by government officials to some distant post, territory or public works for the purpose, they claim, of investigating conduct or for inspection. Congressmen, especially, have been noted in the past for their junkets to distant regions flying the American flag.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Selling Securities To sell short is to sell securities with the expectation that they will be able to purchase them at a lower price; in other words, to sell a writer in the Detroit News. It is to sell securities to speculate for a profit in prices. The word "short" in this sense means "lacking" or "not being in possession of the securities that are being sold." The stocks are borrowed for the transaction; if in the interval between selling and buying the stocks have declined the trade is profitable and if there has been an advance it is unprofitable. If the seller actually owns the stock he is not selling short.

Tomato Considered Vegetable
