Garbo Greater Than Ever

In "The Painted Veil"

Two experts in the art of screen romance make their first appearance together in Garbo's latest starring vehicle, "The Painted Veil," filmization of the gripping Somerset Maugham novel, which is coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, January 5, 7 and 8.

One, of course, is the incomparable Garbo. The other is the brilliant English actor, Herbert Marshall, who is being demanded these days by all of the greater stars for their leading man.

George Brent gives a masterful characterization as Townsend, the "other man," and others deserving of praise in the cast are Jean Hersholt, as Garbo's father, Beulah Bondi, as her mother, Cecilia Parker, as her sister, Olga; Warner Oland, as the Chinese General Yu; Katherine Alexander, as Mrs. Townsend; Soo Yong, as Garbo's native maid, and Porter Harker, as Waddington, the jovial, alcoholic commissioner.

See this—the screen event of 1934.

The main floor has a stable with compartments for eight horses and a box stall, a wagon and threshing floor, and a compartment with stanchions for 20 head of cows. The mows are ample for two or three hundred tons of hay. In addition there is room for a large number of cattle and sheep.

Mr. Robinson is one of Reno township's pioneer farmers and has developed one of the real farms of the county. It is well equipped and has just recently been newly fenced. Many people have visited the farm to see this new barn.

HAROLD TITUS Author of THE MAN FROM YONDER

WHEN HAROLD TITUS writes an outdoor story with a lumber camp setting he puts into it not alone the ability of a master literary craftsman but an intimate knowledge of the subject gained through personal experience. When he writes of the North Woods, of lumber jacks and their ways, he knows what he is talking about, for he was born and spent his boyhood days among the lumber camps that then dotted northern Michigan.

After graduating from the University of Michigan, Titus secured a position as reporter on the Detroit News. When the World War came he enlisted in the American army and served throughout the conflict as a sergeant in the ordnance service. With the close of the war he went back to his home county to write and to raise fruit on his farm.

Supreme in the field that he has chosen to make his own—the American woods—Harold Titus has written many stirring tales that have won wide popularity—among them, "Be-low Zero," "Code of the North," "Conquered," "The Last Straw" and "Timber." Now you may read his latest story, "The Man From Yonder," as it appears serially in this paper.

O. E. S. and F. and A. M. At Hale Hold Joint Installation

An occasion unique in the history of the F. & A. M. and Eastern Star orders in Hale was their joint installation held on Thursday evening, December 27, St. John's Night. The regular December meeting of Hale Chapter falling on this evening this year and the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Harry Westcott were the newly-elected Worshipful Master and Worthy Matron led to this interesting arrangement.

The evening's festivities began at 6:30, when dinner was served to over 100 persons. After both orders had opened their meetings, the families of members of the two orders who were invited guests were invited to enter and witness the installation ceremonies.

Mrs. Sara J. Brown acted as installing officer for Hale Chapter No. 482, assisted by Mrs. George Leslie of Tawas City as Marshal, Mrs. Edith Dorsey, the retiring Worthy Matron, as Chaplain, and Mrs. Common of Whittemore as pianist. Following the ceremonies four little girls presented baskets of flowers to the incoming and outgoing Matrons, singing Mrs. Catherine Streeter presented the Past Matron's pin to the retiring Matron. Gifts were also presented to the installing officers by the chapter. Mrs. McLean of Whittemore sang a solo and encore.

The new officers of Hale Chapter follow: W. M.—Mrs. Isabella Westcott; W. P.—George Wilson; A. M.—Mrs. Agnes Harsch; A. P.—Charles Harsch; Sec.—Mrs. Sarah Johnson Treas.—Mrs. Mary Bernard; Cond.—Mrs. Olive Pearsall; Assoc. Cond.—Mrs. Sara Brown; Chaplain—Mrs. Muriel Greve; Marshal—Miss Iva Bielby; Organist—Mrs. Nellie Jennings; Adah—Mrs. Pearl Streeter; Ruth—Mrs. Beatrice Wilson; Esther—Mrs. Olive Holzheimer; Martha—Mrs. Alice Bernard; Electa—Mrs. Catherine Streeter; Warden—Mrs. Ethel Greve; Sentinel—R. D. Brown.

R. D. Brown acted as installing officer for Hale Lodge No. 518, F. & A. M., assisted by Duell Pearsall retiring Master, as Marshal, and John H. Johnson, a Past Master, as Chaplain. The following officers were installed: W. M.—Harry Westcott; S. W.—Ivor Berry; J. W.—Glenn Healey; Sec.—R. D. Brown; Treas.—Elmer Streeter; S. D.—James McKeen; J. D.—Lewis Byce; Tyler—Charles Harsch. A male quartette, consisting of Orvis, Cecil and Gordon McGirr and Stanley Humphrey rendered two numbers and responded to encores. In fact, they could hardly get away from the platform. The installing officers were presented with gifts and a number of visitors gave short talks.

The evening was an enjoyable one. About twenty members of the orders in Whittemore were among the guests.

Belligerent Turkey

In Los Angeles, Calif., W. E. Proudweine, knife in hand, set out after a large turkey. The bird, angered, kicked the knife into Proudweine's arm, severing an artery. Then it leaped up on the bleeding man, and viciously tore his shirt to shreds.

Have No State Universities

The office of education says that certain states in the Union have very large private institutions of higher education and adopted the policy early in their history not to establish state universities. Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island have no state universities.

Representative Tinkham's Scathing Attack on Secretary Perkins—Senator Lewis Warns Against Any More Disarmament Treaties.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

GEORGE H. TINKHAM, the hearded and sharp-tongued representative from Massachusetts, has revived the controversy over the League of Nations with the United States.

Secretary Perkins

Nations with the United States is being slipped into the league through the back door. He says the joint resolution adopted in the last few days of the Seventy-third congress, making the United States a member of the international labor organization was the first of a contemplated series of moves designed to put the United States openly into the league, contrary to the wishes of the people and of congress, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins was the especial object of his attack. Using such harsh words as "fraud" and "intrigue," Mr. Tinkham accused Secretary Perkins of employing "contemptible trickery" in advocating the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Tinkham quoted the labor secretary as saying that the international labor organization, "is not even now an integral part of the League of Nations, and membership in the organization does not imply affiliation with the league." He continued:

"This statement is the grossest perversion of the truth. It is squarely contrary to the facts—facts established by an indelible record, the treaty of Versailles. The statement contained in the letter of the secretary of labor was intended to deceive. The secretary knew that the congress of the United States was opposed to entry into the League of Nations and would not vote for entry knowingly. Entry was therefore made surreptitiously and fraudulently.

"Article 392 of the treaty of Versailles states:
"The international labor office shall be established at the seat of the League of Nations as part of the organization of the league."

"This audacious intrigue to have the United States enter the League of Nations by way of one of the organs of the league is to be followed by an attempt to have the United States enter another of its organs, the Permanent Court of International Justice of the League of Nations, this subsequently to be followed by a proposal of full membership in the League of Nations. Thus, the independence of the United States will be destroyed, the will of the American people thwarted, and the United States inevitably involved in the next European conflict."

SENATOR JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS, chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations and a veteran in international conferences, has set forth a view concerning treaties for disarmament or reduction of armaments that will meet with the approval of many of his fellow citizens, though they are sharply at variance with those of the administration. He evidently is glad the Washington naval pact is dying, owing of the world, America must stand isolated.

SPEAKING of war, it is interesting to learn that the senate mission to the Philippines has discovered that those islands "possess the most important source of war material under the American flag." Senator Tydings of Maryland sent the word from Manila that there are in Zambales province deposits of chromite so large that they have attracted the attention of other nations. John W. Haussermann, dean of the islands' gold mining industry, told the senators these deposits may soon take their place as one of the most important ore bodies in the world, and he added significantly that chromium is the one war material which the United States does not have in ample quantities within its borders. These deposits in the Philippines were discovered after the Tydings-McDuffie independence act was drafted. It is easy to see that this news will be of immense interest to Japan, which, in its plans for territorial expansion, is ever on the lookout for war material sources.

POPE PIUS XI is not optimistic concerning world peace. In his Christmas eve address, delivered according to custom to the cardinals resident in Rome, the Holy Father said that "the clamor of war spreads ever farther," and he urged the world to pray and work for peace. "We see a constant increase in warlike arms," the pope continued.

"This is a distracting element in which the spirit seems to have no part. We are on the eve of a day when the heavens resound with the hymns of angels calling for peace on earth. Never has the chant had more reason for being than today."

King George, in a radio address to all parts of the British empire, was a little more cheerful. He adjured his "peoples beyond the seas" to remember that they all belonged to one great family.

"My desire and hope is that the same spirit of brotherhood may become ever stronger in its hold and wider in its range," the king said. "The world is still restless and troubled. The clouds are lifting, but we have still our own anxieties to meet. I am convinced that if we meet them in the spirit of one family we shall overcome them, for then private and party interests will be controlled by care for the whole community."

He made a special effort to reach the restless multitudes in India, whose fate now is in the hands of parliament, by assuring them of his "constant care of them."

President Roosevelt's brief Christmas talk was addressed especially to the citizens of America, calling for "courage and unity," for greater happiness and the improvement of human welfare.

PROSECUTION and defense attorneys completed their preparations for the trial of Bruno Hauptmann on the charge of murdering the Lindbergh baby, and the little town of Flemington, N. J., was a busy place. The names of 48 veniremen were drawn for examination as jurors, and the sensation over the trial of the Lindbergh case to 150 prospective jurors died down. C. Lloyd Fisher, defense counsel, said he would not ask for a new panel.

Betty Gow, the nurse who put the Lindbergh baby to bed the night he was kidnapped and killed, arrived from Scotland on the liner Aquitania and went at once to the Morrow home in Englewood, N. J., to await her call as one of the state's star witnesses. She declined to talk to reporters, but posed for cameramen. There was a report that Miss Gow might remain in this country and take up her former job in the Lindbergh household. She had acted as nurse for Jon, second son born to the Lindberghs, until she returned to her home in Scotland several months ago.

Hauptmann seemed calm as the time for his ordeal approached, and he ate a hearty Christmas dinner. Mrs. Hauptmann, who moved from the Bronx to Flemington to be near her husband, made a radio appeal "to the people of the country to wait until they hear every side of the story before they condemn him."

She reiterated her belief that Hauptmann had nothing to do with the kidnapping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. She repeated her story that Hauptmann had waited for her at a Bronx bakery where she worked the night of the kidnapping and that he had taken her home.

As for the ransom money found in the Hauptmann home and garage, she insisted on the truth of her husband's story that he got the money from Isidor Fish, who is dead. Mrs. Hauptmann told parts of her story amid sobs.

ONE of the worst American railway wrecks of the year occurred at Dundas, Ont., when a Christmas excursion train bound from London, Ont., to Toronto was telescoped by the Detroit-to-Toronto express on the Canadian National railway line as it stood on a siding. Apparently the express ran through the open switch. Two wooden coaches were demolished, and about fifteen persons were killed. More than a score of others were injured. A third coach was thrown on end close to the edge of a 150-foot cliff.

The alertness and quick thinking of Engineer B. Burrell of the speeding train from Detroit, was credited by railway officials with having averted an even greater tragedy. Seeing no hope of preventing the locomotive from piling into the rear of the special train, Burrell ordered it cut loose from the coaches behind and prevented them from telescoping.

SOLDIERS from Great Britain, Italy, Sweden and Holland, to the number of 3,300, under the command of Maj. J. E. S. Brind, a British veteran of several wars, marched into the Saar from north and south with flying colors, and were stationed at strategic points throughout the area, prepared to maintain order until after the plebiscite of January 13 which will determine whether the Saar shall again become a part of Germany or remain under control of the League of Nations. The arrival of the troops was watched by the league authorities with considerable anxiety for there had been fears that Nazi enthusiasts there might cause trouble. But the inhabitants of the basin remained quiet, none of them showing either enmity or enthusiasm for the league's armed forces.

Under the terms of the treaty of Versailles any person living in the Saar at the time of the signing of the treaty is eligible to vote in the plebiscite, and the Nazis of Germany made great efforts to gather as many of their adherents as possible from other lands to which they had migrated. From the United States 352 Saar Germans traveled back to their old home aboard the liner Bremen, and were welcomed with feasts, as was another large contingent from South America. The German government denied that it was paying the expenses of these voters from abroad, asserting they were financed by private donations.

PEACE in central Europe was promoted by two events. The Yugoslavian cabinet resigned and a new cabinet was formed with Bogoljub Yevitch as premier. As foreign minister he had conducted the case of his country against Hungary before the League of Nations and accepted the compromise decision, and he is a close friend of Prince Paul, head of the regency, who is inclined to a moderate course. The Austrian government refused the extradition to France of Colonel Percevic, Croat exile, who was accused, along with Dr. Ante Pavelich, of instigating the assassination of King Alexander in Marseilles. Italy had previously refused the extradition of Pavelich. It is said in informed quarters that further examination of these two men would have revealed facts that would have endangered peace in Europe.

COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH, by his flights across Arctic regions in 1933, has enabled the Department of Agriculture to demonstrate conclusively that the spores of plant disease can be borne on remote air currents. With a spore trap of his own devising, which he called "the skyhook," Colonel Lindbergh obtained specimens which confirmed the previous theories of government experts that plant diseases may be carried even across continents by air currents.

That was announced by Fred C. Meier, the department expert who interested Colonel Lindbergh in the work. Colonel Lindbergh devised his "the skyhook," a light, strong contrivance, easy to operate and well adapted to protecting sterile glass slides from contamination except for the time they were exposed. Mr. Meier prepared the slides and has examined and photographed them. He credits Colonel Lindbergh with careful work.

AFTER winning the handicap prize in the England-to-Melbourne air race, the giant American-built plane Uiver, pride of the Royal Dutch Air Lines, started on a speed flight from Amsterdam to Batavia, Java, with seven persons aboard. During a thunderstorm it crashed in the desert ten miles from Rutba Wells, Iraq, and burned to cinders, all its occupants perishing.

MARTIN J. INSULL, brother of Samuel, was given a Christmas present by a Chicago jury in the form of a verdict of not guilty of embezzlement from the Middle West Utilities company. The money, $344,720, was used, according to the prosecution, in a desperate effort to recoup Insull's personal losses in the stock market.

FOR the first time the RFC has undertaken the management of a railroad. John W. Barriger, chief examiner for the Interstate commerce commission, announced that nominees of the RFC would be placed in charge of operation of the Denver & Salt Lake railway, which has received large loans from the government agency. The railway is a short road which has leased for 50 years the railroad bore of the Moffat tunnel from the Moffat Tunnel Improvement district.

They Grew Them in Alaskan Waters

WHEN the United States coast guard cutter Northland returned the other day to Oakland, Calif., after seven months in Alaskan waters, the wives, sisters and sweethearts of members of the crew had some difficulty in recognizing their men, for all of them wore luxurious beards. The cutter was on its annual medical cruise among the Eskimos and seemingly carried no razors, though nearly every kind of surgical instrument was in its equipment. It gave medical and dental aid to 2,000 Eskimos in various ports, and also put ashore a force to help in the rehabilitation of Nome after the big fire.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER LEARNS SOMETHING ABOUT SEEP SEEP

"HELLO! There's Seep Seep! I haven't seen him since we were together up north, where his home was not far from mine," exclaimed Yank Yank the Nuthatch.

As he spoke a little brown bird alighted at the foot of the very next tree. He was just a trifle bigger than Jenny Wren but not at all like Jenny, for while Jenny's tail usually is cocked up in the sauciest way, Seep Seep's tail is never cocked up at all. In fact, it bends down, for Seep Seep uses his tail in climbing just as the members of the Woodpecker family use theirs. He was dressed in grayish-brown above and grayish-white beneath. Across each wing was a little band of buffy-white and his bill was curved down just a little.

When he alighted at the foot of that tree, Seep Seep didn't stop an instant but started up, going round and round it as he climbed and picking out things to eat under the bark. His way of climbing that tree was very like creeping and Peter thought that Seep Seep was well named the Brown Creeper. He would have liked to gossip with Seep Seep, but he knew that Seep Seep would waste no time that way.

"Hello! There's Seep Seep."

Round and round up the trunk of that tree went Seep Seep and, when he reached the top, at once flew down to the bottom of the next tree and without a pause, started up that. He wasted no time exploring the branches, but kept to the trunk. Once in a while he would cry in a thin little wily voice, "Seep! Seep!" but never paused to rest or look around. If he had felt that on him alone depended the job of getting all the insect eggs and grubs on those trees, he could not have been more industrious.

"Does he build his nest in a hole in a tree?" asked Peter of Yank Yank the Nuthatch.

Yank Yank shook his head. "No," he replied. "He hunts for a tree or an old stub with a piece of loose bark hanging to it. In behind this he tucks his nest made of twigs, strips of bark and moss. He's a funny little fellow and I don't know of anyone in all the Great World who more strictly attends to his own business than does Seep Seep the Brown Creeper. He's little but he is mighty useful. Farmer Brown ought to be glad every time he sees him. By the way, Peter, have you seen anything of Dotty the Tree Sparrow?"

"Not yet," replied Peter, "but I think he must be here. I'm glad you reminded me of him. I'll go look for him."

WINTRY SUGGESTIONS

NOW is the season, while citrus fruits are plentiful, to prepare marmalades. As tastes differ as to bitterness in the marmalade, one has to be guided as to the amount of the rind used in the mixture. For those who like a mild and still flavorful marmalade use one each of lemon, orange and grapefruit.

Apple Salad.

One of the most satisfactory salads for winter is the one of apples—small-sized Baldwins, or any good apple; peel carefully after coring and use apples of uniform size. Cook in sugar sirup with a small handful of the little cinnamon candies, which add flavor as well as color. When cool serve on lettuce stuffed with cream or cottage cheese and garnish the top with a sprig of parsley.

Grapefruit and Almond Salad.

Cut the pulp of two grapefruit into dice, add two ounces of blanched and chopped almonds to the drained pulp.

MY BOY COMES HOME

By ANNE CAMPBELL

I THINK I know what heaven is like now—
A little yard where grass is growing green;
A robin chirping on an apple bough,
As from the fence the crimson roses lean.

It is late afternoon, and suddenly I hear the gate click . . . the familiar sound
Of youthful footsteps coming close to me.
A shadow throws its length across the ground.

I think I know what heaven is—the strong
Young arms that I have waited for in vain;
An eager voice that I have missed too long,
And heaven breaks! My boy is home again!

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN . . .
The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I went into a very fine cafe and ordered a cup of coffee, but I refused to drink it. It looked just like "mud." Can you tell me how or why a reputable cafe could serve coffee that looked like "mud"?

Truly yours,
VIC SALVE.

Answer: In all good eating places you will find the coffee looks like "mud" for the simple reason that the coffee is always GROUND right before it is cooked.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I have been in ten drug stores but have been unable to get any bunion plasters. The druggists all say they wouldn't have them in the place. Can you tell me why?

Sincerely,
I. M. A. HEEL.
Answer: The reason the drug stores haven't, any bunion plasters in their places is because the druggists are afraid of the law. There is a law against harboring FOOT-PADS.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
Can you tell me the worst penalty imposed on a bigamist? In other words, what would be the severe penalty for a man marrying three women?

Truly yours,
UNO AWL.
Answer: His penalty is having three mothers-in-law.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
Where does the goods go when you get a hole in your stocking?

Yours truly,
ANA POLOGY.
Answer: The same place your fist goes to when you open your hand.

Trees With 10-Foot Diameters

Possession of more than 17,000 trees with a diameter of ten feet measured six feet above ground is California's boast. By far the larger part of these stand in Sequoia National park.

Our Big Trees

Among the Big Trees in Sequoia National Park.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THINK of an ant crawling on the ground through a vast cornfield, looking up at the tall stalks. To the ant the cornstalks are as high as the California Big Trees are to a man gazing at their distant tops.

But it is their astounding age, as well as their size and beauty, which fills the soul of puny man with awe and reverence for the Creator.

Big Trees, stout and healthy today, were centuries old when Christ was born. Men call them "the oldest living things." So nearly indestructible are they that some naked, fire-scorched trunks still stand, though dead before America was discovered; others, which fell centuries ago, remain sound and solid inside. Such vitality has the Sequoia that when felled its branches do not wither for years. One giant crashed in 1926. In 1931 its foliage was still fresh and green.

They link us with the past. Their Sequoia forebears grew here when the world was younger, when reptiles grew to enormous size. Such mammoths as the dinosaur, unable to adjust themselves to climatic and other changes, faded from the earth; but the Sequoia family endured and saw the rise of the mammals. Yet today, when you walk beneath these towering tree giants, you feel that the deer and the squirrel hardly fit into a scene set for the brontosaurus and the pterodactyl.

Time was when the Sequoia genus was spread over four continents. At least twelve fossil species are known, scattered from Greenland and across Europe to Asia.

Big Trees and Redwoods Differ.

Some people confuse California's Redwoods with its so-called "Big Trees." Both are "big" and both are of the genus Sequoia; both have pink or red wood and both are trees of the largest size. But they are two species, distinct in habitat, in bark, foliage, and in reproduction.

The Coast Redwood, or Sequoia sempervirens, is found only near the coast or within the belt of sea fogs, and extends from southern Oregon down to Monterey county, in California.

The larger species, the California Big Tree, or Sequoia gigantea, is confined to the western slopes of the Sierra Nevada, between 4,000 and 8,500 feet elevation, from Placer county, in the north, to Tulare county, in the south, and is much more abundant in the south than in the north.

The Coast Redwood forms an almost continuous forest in which it is the dominant stand; the Big Trees grow in scattered groves, 71 in all, interspersed among the heavier stands of white fir, sugar pine, and other trees.

Though smaller in diameter and bulk, the Coast Redwood is taller than its cousin, the Big Tree. The former attains a maximum height of 363 feet and a maximum base diameter of about 35 feet.

When the Coast Redwood is cut down, it "stump-sprouts," as foresters say. A ring of young trees springs up around the stump of the slaughtered sempervirens; hence its Latin name, the "Ever-living Sequoia."

But the Big Tree reproduces only from seed; and, since its seeds require specially favorable conditions to root, there was real danger of the extinction of the species until national and state parks were created.

The foliage of the Coast Redwood somewhat resembles that of the fir or hemlock, but the slender, prickly foliage of the Big Tree has no counterpart in America. The only tree which at first glance might be confused with the Big Tree is the cryptomeria of Japan.

Survived Ice and Fire.

Ages before man came to chop these trees for his use, ice and fire were their fierce foes. Again and again moving glaciers mowed them down—glaciers whose icy fingers stretched down mountain canyons to freeze all animal and plant life. Whether in warm and sheltered spots a few trees remained, or whether only seeds survived, can probably never be known; but slowly the cold hands relaxed and the forests returned. The fact that the Big Trees are more abundant and larger in the southern part of their range indicates that there the effects of the glacier were less severe.

With the passing of the Age of Ice, the struggles of the sequoias had only begun. Fires followed the ordeal of ice. The abundant rains ceased, and long, dry summers rendered the forests tinderlike, ready to be ignited by lightning or by brands tossed by Indians to drive out game or clear land for forage.

There is scarcely a mature sequoia that does not show the effects of at least one fire. Every 20 or 30 years flames swept through the forest, sometimes licking hungrily, but with little effect, at the thick, asbestos-like bark; again, where a litter of boughs and fallen logs was piled up against a Big Tree, the fire burned fiercely enough to penetrate the outer cover and into the heart. That is why the great black caverns in the living sequoias are almost always found on the upper side of those standing on a slope.

Careful inspection of a Big Tree, even one with an unbroken front of new bark, usually shows unmistakable signs of past fires. Often an arrow-shaped scar runs from the base a hundred feet or more toward the crown. Such blemishes, covered by new bark, were caused by fires long before the discovery of America. For centuries the tree grew new bark, at the rate of half an inch or less a year, until finally the wound was healed.

Tree torches burning in the Sierra Nevada might have signaled every event in recorded human history, from the building of the Pyramids to our own Civil war.

White Men Slow to Find Them.

No doubt the Coast Redwoods were seen by the first Europeans to visit our Pacific coast. Yet for more than two centuries after the visit of Sir Francis Drake, in 1579, white men roamed up and down California apparently without climbing far enough up the high Sierras to find the Big Trees.

The Indians knew them, of course. In summer they camped among them and left potholes in granite rocks where they ground acorn meal.

Even now the identity of the first white men to gaze on the Big Trees of the Sierras is in doubt. It may have been some member of the Joseph R. Walker expedition of 1833. One Zenas Leonard, clerk of the Walker party, recorded:

"In the last two days' traveling we have found some trees of the Redwood species incredibly large, some of them which would measure from 16 to 18 fatombs (96 to 108 feet) around the trunk at the height of a large man's head from the ground."

That group of Big Trees, now known as the Calaveras North Grove, was, however, the first of these sequoias to become well known.

John Bidwell, a member of the first immigrant party to enter California by the overland route, stated that he saw the Calaveras Big Trees in 1841; but Dowd is popularly given credit as the discoverer of the Sequoia gigantea. It was the Calaveras Grove which inspired Bret Harte to write his poem, "On a Cone of the Big Trees."

In 1857 Galen Clark discovered the Mariposa, or Wawona, Grove in what is now the Yosemite National park. The following year Hale D. Tharp, a pioneer of Three Rivers, in Tulare county, was led up the Middle Fork of the Kaweah river by Yokut Indians, and on up the grassy slopes beneath Moro Rock to the plateau where grows the noblest forest of the Sequoia gigantea, the Giant Forest, in what is now Sequoia National park.

"General Sherman" the Biggest.

Here, in Sequoia National park, stands that hoary veteran of all Big Trees, the "General Sherman," found and named by James Wolverton in 1879. Many other trees, including Redwoods, Douglas firs, and the Australian eucalyptus, are taller; but no other, so far as one knows, has its bulk. Its greatest base diameter is 36.5 feet and its trunk contains 600,120 board feet of lumber.

You can imagine its size when told that a train of 30 railway cars would be required to haul its trunk alone. One limb, 130 feet above the ground, is nearly seven feet thick. Sawed into boards, the tree would build about 40 five-room houses!

To save some of these trees, the Sequoia National park was created in 1890, and for years patrolled each summer by United States cavalry.

Private individuals, however, still owned the finest parts of the sequoia forests and had, of course, a perfect right to cut them down for lumber. To avoid this, the late Stephen T. Mather, as director of the National Park service, asked congress for funds with which to buy and save more of the Big Trees. An appropriation was made, but it was insufficient.

Then aid was asked of the National Geographic society. Immediately, from its own funds and with voluntary contributions from individual members, it subscribed sufficient money to purchase the lands and Big Trees desired.

In all, the society bought and gave to the United States a total of 1,919 acres at a cost of $96,330.

All on Account of a Bunch of Keys

WHEN the list of the victims of the Lake Shore railroad wreck, near Ashtabula, Ohio, on December 31, 1876, was published the name of John Weyler was near the head of the list.

Many of the bodies were so charred and mutilated that it was impossible to recognize them, and the identification was made through articles of clothing and jewelry found near the dead men and women.

Weyler was an old soldier who had been unable to work for some time because of physical infirmities.

His family was poor and the fact that he was unable to help them depressed him very much.

He mourned over the fact that he was a hindrance rather than a help and more than once expressed the wish that his wife and children might be rid of such a burden.

It was known that he intended going on this particular train, although his family were unaware of his destination.

A reputable Rochester physician testified that he had met Weyler on the train that morning.

In addition to this a bunch of keys belonging to the man was found at the scene of the wreck. Mrs. Weyler identified them as having belonged to her husband.

If further proof were needed it was furnished when it was found that one of the keys fitted the front door of his house, another opened a chest in his room and the third one proved to be the key with which he was in the habit of winding the kitchen clock every night.

Naturally a suit for damages was instituted against the railroad.

The funds to do this were furnished by kind friends of the family who felt that the poor woman deserved damages of some kind.

Naturally, also, there was some question regarding the identification of the body.

This, however, gave promise of being a long-drawn-out controversy, and officials of the corporation offered to settle the claim of the widow for $4,000.

Her lawyers advised her to stick out for $5,000 on the ground that the amount was small enough for the loss of a husband.

She followed their advice and this caused the railroad officials to make a second and more thorough investigation.

There was nothing new to be gleaned from the scene of the wreck, so the detectives who were put on the case began to interview anyone who might have been acquainted with Mr. Weyler.

One of these was General Martindale, under whom the old soldier had served during the war.

The officer said that he had not seen Weyler for more than a year, but that the last time he met him the old man had expressed a wish to go into a soldiers' home, where he would no longer be a care upon the members of his family, who were having a hard struggle to exist.

Thereupon General Martindale had given him a letter authorizing his admission into a soldiers' home in Wisconsin.

There was no time limit to the order.

With this as a clew the investigators went to Wisconsin.

They located the home and found therein an old man who answered the description of John Weyler.

He was in a sort of dazed condition, but it was found from the records that he had arrived there on the last day of the year—the very day of the train wreck—and had been admitted into the institution.

When questioned he said he had a wife and children in Rochester.

The man was John Weyler.

The mystery of the keys that fitted the front door, the chest and the clock, were easily explained.

Weyler said he had lost his keys in the street only a few days before, and they must have been picked up by the man who was killed on the train.

He said that he had boarded the train himself, but had left it at Buffalo, and had made the rest of his journey the best he knew how.

Thus was a great mystery cleared up, and in its clearing it was brought out that the wife and the other witnesses had testified in the best of good faith.

They honestly believed that he had been killed in the wreck, and the truth might never have been disclosed if it had not been for the interview with General Martindale and his recollection of the fact that he had given the letter to John Weyler.

Arts and Sciences

According to Jevons, a science teaches us to know and an art to do. Astronomy, for instance, is the foundation of the art of navigation; chemistry is the basis of many useful arts. The arts are distinguished as fine arts and useful arts, the former including painting, sculpture, music, poetry, architecture; the latter (useful arts) including the trades. The sciences have been variously classified. The principal ones are physics, chemistry, astronomy, meteorology, mathematics, geography, geology, ethnology, anthropology, archeology, biology and medicine.

World Has Long Known Dates as Staple Food

"Americans who eat dates chiefly as sweets, dessert, or as components of puddings and cakes, seldom realize that dates have been raised and prized from antiquity as one of the most nourishing, satisfying foods in the world," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Over 4,000 years ago, dates were raised on the banks of the Euphrates. Inhabitants of China, Spain, and Greece, supplement their diet with dates. Persians, Arabians, and North Africans eat them as we eat potatoes. They are the chief source of wealth and the staple article of food in Arabia. Give a desert nomad a few boiled beans, a little olive oil, milk, and some dates, and he considers it a Thanksgiving dinner. In the dry parts of North Africa, dates constitute not only the main meal of the inhabitants, but are consumed by dogs, horses and camels."

Healed by Cuticura

"My little girl's face was so inflamed that her eyes were swollen almost shut. The trouble was diagnosed as psoriasis. She scratched night and day and was not able to obtain rest. The scratching aggravated the trouble and each finger tip was red and swollen with infection. She became so emaciated that she was very pathetic looking.

Currency Inflation
Currency inflation is disproportionate and relatively sudden increase in the quantity of money or credit or both, relative to the amount of exchange business, as a writer in the Indianapolis News. Such increase may come as a result of unexpected addition to the supply of precious metals, or in times of business activity by expansion of credit through the banks. It may come in times of financial difficulty by government issues of paper money without adequate metallic reserve and without provision for conversion into standard metallic money on demand.

Beware of So-called Coal Bargains

IF YOU ARE TEMPTED BY PRICE, CONSIDER THESE FACTS:

There's a mighty difference in coal. Where it is mined... how it is prepared... and the method of getting it to your coal bin... all have a direct bearing on the satisfaction you'll receive from it. If you are tempted by price to purchase coal that is hauled to your door by trucks direct from the mine, consider carefully these facts.

This so-called bargain coal may prove to be the most expensive coal you ever bought. Because much trucked coal is of doubtful origin and is usually inferior in quality, you must buy it blindfolded... you take chances, and, if it does not turn out as expected, you have no redress, because the trucker has gone, in most cases, never to return.

But, when you buy from an established coal dealer in a community, you can order your coal by name and you'll get just exactly what you order—clean, rich coal, with all impurities removed and properly sized, full weight with every ton.

Furthermore, the established coal dealer gives you an iron-clad guarantee and he is right on the job to back it up with many helpful, money-saving services. Don't gamble with your comfort and the health of your family! In sub-zero weather you need the best fuel possible.

THE NEW FORD V-8 FOR 1935

NOW ON DISPLAY

A New Ford V-8 That Brings New Beauty, New Safety, and a New Kind of Riding Comfort Within Reach of Millions of People

The New Ford V-8 for 1935 is the biggest and roomiest Ford car ever built. It is a strikingly handsome car, with modern lines and new, luxurious appointments.

But most important of all it is especially designed to give you smooth, easy riding over all kinds of roads—"a front-seat ride for back-seat riders."

This ease of riding is achieved by the use of three basic principles never before combined in a low-price car.

1. Correct distribution of car weight by moving engine and body forward eight and a half inches.
2. New location of seats by which the rear seat is moved forward, toward the center of the car—away from the rear axle and away from the bumps.
3. New spring suspension which permits the use of longer, more flexible springs and increases the springbase to 123 inches.

The result is Center-Poise—which not only gives you a new riding comfort but adds to the stability of the car and its ease of handling. You can take curves with greater safety.

There are many new features in the Ford V-8 for 1935 which make the car still easier to drive. New brakes give more power for stopping quickly with far less foot pressure on the pedal.

A new type of easy-pressure clutch employs centrifugal force to increase efficiency at higher speeds. New steering mechanism makes the car still easier to handle. New, wider, roomier seats.

The New Ford V-8 for 1935 retains the V-8 engine which has demonstrated its dependability and economy in the service of more than a million owners. There are refinements, but no change in basic design. You buy premium performance when you buy this Ford V-8—full 85 horsepower and capable of 80 miles an hour. All Ford V-8 cars for 1935 come equipped with Safety Glass throughout at no additional cost.

We invite you to see this New Ford V-8 for 1935 at the showrooms of Ford dealers. You will want to ride in it—to drive it yourself. You will find it a new experience in motoring.

"Another girl friend! Listen, you're the original great lover, aren't you?" She was mad to taunt him. Couldn't see that he was working toward freedom? Prudence looked at the bolts on the door behind her. Suppose Calloway turned the tables and kept Milly and herself prisoners here? That was a thought. It sent icy prickles soling up her spine.

"Let me go, Len! Make it snappy!" Milly's voice was strained.

"And suppose I don't?"

"You will. You are such a just man," Prudence, emerging from her hiding place, reminded sweetly.

Calloway wheeled and scowled at her backed against the double door. Milly shrugged, pulled a vanity case from her pocket and applied a lipstick.

"Took you a long time to put on your act, didn't it. I saw you stealing away from the red brick house. I went there to ask if I might see the rooms; I lived there once. You sneaked across the road. I knew—I knew Roddy liked you. So I followed to see what you were up to. Don't kid yourself. I found out. You came to meet that rotten Walt Gerard!"

Had the roof collapsed on her? She, Prudence Schuyler, was being accused of a rendezvous with that sneaky man!

"Don't be foolish!" She tried to keep her voice condescendingly amused; she succeeded only in producing words which shook with anger. "If you are interested to know, I came because Calloway and Walter Gerard are conspiring to hurt Rodney."

Milly caught the arm of the man who stood scowling from one girl to the other.

"Have you hurt Roddy, Len? If you have—"

Her small pointed white teeth set in her under lip like those of an angry cat.

The veins in Calloway's temples stood out like cords. "Didn't I tell you when you threw me down for him, Milly, that I would run Rodney Gerard off the earth? Well, I'm doing it, off this part of the earth. He'll think twice before he cuts in on my girl or my business again."

Milly shook him. "You great sap! You—you flat tire!" Her voice rose in shrill invective. "Rodney Gerard had nothing to do with my throwing you over. It was Walt! Your present pal! Walt!"

"Walt! Don't try to be funny. Did Walt have your picture with 'From Calico and Calloway to liberty and love,' written on the back of it? Did he keep it in the room Rod uses for his office at High Ledges? Walt! Try another alibi, Milly, try another."

She shook him again with as much effect as a mouse attempting to pull down a stone lion.

"Have you gone haywire? I never sent a photo to Roddy—the one you saw belonged to Walt. I suppose he could use a desk at High Ledges, couldn't he? You make me sick with your suspicions of Roddy. What have you two—racketeers done to him?"

Calloway's face was as colorless as white chalk. "Say that again about Walt Gerard having that picture, Milly."

"I'll say it again. Shall I tell all? It isn't a bedtime story. It might have been more snappy if it hadn't been for Rodney Gerard. I was dead sick of working and one-night stands and shabby clothes and Grandpop sick and out of a job most of the time. Walt came along and offered to make life's walk easy—for a consideration. And can he hand out a line, I'm telling you!" Her eyes and voice tormented.

"Before I closed with his offer, Rodney found it out and—made it easy for no consideration. Get that, Len?"

"Is that right?"

"Sure, a hundred per cent right. I'm telling the truth. Rodney Gerard doesn't know I'm on earth—except when it's time to send me a check or bring me one. I've kept on taking the money so I would see him sometimes."

He glared at her unseeing. "So-o I've been hunting the wrong man, have I? Walt was back of your break with rod Rod Gerard has been shielding his no-account brother. And I thought I was such a just man! I—"

His face worked horribly. Prudence felt as if a stripped soul had been laid bare.

A wall like the warning of a giant baushee swelled to a deafening screech, dwindled, rose again to ear-splitting proportions, died down.

"What's that?"

"Shut up, Milly! Listen! Count!" Calloway's voice was hoarse.

Prudence clenched her hands. The fire siren! Suppose it were the red brick house. Would Macky think to rescue the Paul Lamerie kettle?

Calloway pulled Milly away from the door. She gripped his arm.

"What is it, Len?"

"Fire! Gerard place! I—I—did it! I didn't mean that—I only wanted to keep the men from work!"

He jammed back the bolt and plunged into the snow. Prudence dashed after him. The fire must be near. The cattle barn! Walter Gerard and Calloway! "The cart's backed up." Had that "cart" been loaded with explosives?

The headlights of a car flashed. Calloway's! A tail-light swept away like a meteor pursued by furies. Prudence stumbled and slid and ran along the road made smooth and treacherous by the passing of many trucks. She couldn't go back for her skis.

"Wait! Wait! What's burning?" Milly Gooch shrieked.

Prudence stopped long enough to call over her shoulder:

"The barn—where—the crew—is living—I think!"

Shouts ahead. Crashes. Timbers falling? A curious sky. Red. Sullen. Shot with flame. The light had put out the stars. She coughed and tried to get her breath. Ahead the cattle barn loomed darkly against the sinister glow. Black figures like huge panicky ants dashed in and out of the glow. Men were dragging a hose from the fire engine to the pond. Some one shouted:

"Soak those pines! If the woods start to burn—"

That was the reason of the frightful tension. Even with snow on the ground the whole forest might go up like tinder.

Runabouts, gigs, automobiles of all descriptions crowded the spaces under the trees. Men worked, ran, hauled. No mistaking Calloway's massive figure. Reckless of self and safety he fought the blaze. There was David steadying a groaning man. He was safe, thank God!

Clang! Clang! Clang! The emergency gong of an ambulance! It must have come from the hospital in the next town.

Tree by tree Prudence crept forward. The heat was scorching. Not hotter for her than for those men working near that red inferno. She put her arm across her face to protect it from sparks and hot cinders.

Rodney in that inferno. Prudence shut her eyes tight to get her grip. Then she looked. The cry of horror she swallowed nauseated her. "Don't dare go back on me!" she threatened her dizzy brain.

Milly Gooch here! How had she come? Milly, her short black hair blowing in the breeze which was fanning the fire, was clinging to Rodney's sleeve. He was trying to shake her off. He had succeeded. Why, why did he go toward that burning shell again? Jim was pulling him back. He couldn't stop the fire. He—

Roars of warning. A crash! The roof! A red-hot girder shot into the air. A woman screamed. It spiraled down! Down where Rodney Gerard and Jim were standing!

Terror paralyzed Prudence. Rodney hurt? She couldn't bear it! Hurt before she could tell him she was sorry. Men were crowding round something. What? Why was she standing here when—

She ran forward and caromed into someone running, with a force which swept her from her feet. An arm caught her.

"Prue! Prue! You shouldn't be here!"

She brushed her hand across dazed eyes. Was this really Jim Armstrong? He was safe! Was Rodney lying there hurt—perhaps?

"Is it really—you? I saw you and Rodney—I thought the girder hit—"

She seized the lapels of his coat to steady herself. "Is—is—he—"

Armstrong gently but firmly loosened her tense fingers. His lips were white as he assured with exaggerated cheerfulness:

"Rod is safe, Prue. Listen! Don't stare like that! He's all right. It's Calloway who is hurt. He rushed in and took the girder which would have wiped Rod out."

She felt herself going, flung an arm around Jim's neck. She must hold tight to something. Was that Rodney looking at her from behind Jim? His eyes were terrible. Curious, the world was so black, the sky was—so red—

When she came out of the smothering gloom, she was sitting on a coat against a tree. Who was shrieking and sobbing? It couldn't be herself having hysterics, could it? She would die of shame if it were. David was rubbing her hands. A man in a white jacket was holding something to her mouth. Jim Armstrong was looking down at her. How queer his eyes were! Where was Rodney Gerard?

She said unsteadily:

"Don't tell me I—fainted when I might have been—of use."

The ambulance surgeon's grin slashed his sooty face. "Use! You did your good deed for the day, all right. For the love of Mike, why doesn't someone stop that circus rider's yelling! I guess if anyone was entitled to pass out cold you were. Drink this like a good girl."

CHAPTER XII

Bent over her work bench, the sleeves of her green linen smock rolled above her elbows, Prudence was intent on soldering the last link in the collar for Jean's kitten.

Finished. And a piece of work which made her artistic self purr when she looked at it. This was the last piece of Christmas work. Tomorrow would be Christmas.

Christmas! Two weeks since the fire! She had not seen Rodney Gerard. Every moment she could spare from work outside had been spent at her bench, and he had not come to the red brick house. David rarely mentioned him. Why should he come? What modern man would be interested in a girl who "passed out cold" in an emergency?

Her face burned. Why, why had she collapsed—for the second time in her life—like a mid-Victorian heroine in a crisis, when she might have gone on helping! Even the fact that she had forgotten to eat before she started on her man hunt, that her heart had stopped when the girder fell, as she supposed on Rodney, was no excuse.

She extinguished the lamp under the crucible and glanced at the bay window. Time enough to set the stones before she dressed for the party.

The party! She opened a white packet and poked the cat's-eyes on the tissue paper into the order in which she would use them. How they glowed! They were like eyes. Inscrutable eyes. Like Rodney's when they had met hers over Jim Armstrong's shoulder. What had he thought when he saw her clinging to his friend? Only one thing he could think after she had told him that she was engaged to Jim. She had lied to set an insurmountable wall between them, and then she had found that no barrier was needed because, rich or poor, she knew that she loved him, that he would be true and fine all his life. She hadn't been sure of it, though, until Milly Gooch had flung the truth at Calloway that night in the smithy. She had wanted love without risk of heartbreak; it looked as if she would get heartbreak without love.

The morning after the cattle barn had burned to the ground, every able-bodied man in the village had dropped his own work to help rebuild. Each man of the scorched, chastened crew, who had been able to use his hands, had tried to do the work of three in the woods. They had been billeted in barns. They ought to work their arms off—hadn't their rioting caused the damage? That wasn't quite fair; the truck which Len Calloway and Walter Gerard had dumped at their door had been the real cause.

The new building had gone up as quickly as if a Radio City engineer had waved a magic wand. In appreciation of the neighborly spirit, Rodney Gerard was giving a Christmas eve party to the townspeople. Milly Gooch would not be among those present. She had left the Puffers' the day after the fire.

Although David spent most of each day where the crew was working, he never mentioned Rodney Gerard. They were shutting her out. She would have loved to help in the preparations—she adored getting ready for parties—but:

"I couldn't crash in and offer my invaluable assistance, could I?" she interrogated the emery wheel, but the wheel merely threw off a spiteful little shower of pumice in answer.

Her thoughts kept pace with her foot on the treadle. Would Rodney Gerard come for the collar? Perhaps he had forgotten it. What would she do with it? She would hate like the dickens to remind him. It had proved expensive. If they were friends as they had been that day he had ordered it—

Why live over that? It only made her heart ache as if something were squeezing it unbearably. Why had she been so obsessed with the idea that a man of wealth couldn't remain true to the marriage covenant? The fact that her brother's wife and her sister's husband had been philanderers was no excuse for misjudging Rodney.

"You shouldn't be working without a light, Miss Prue."

Prudence looked up with a start. "When did you steal in, Macky?"

"I didn't steal in. I don't like that word steal, Miss Prue." The shade of the lamp rattled as Jane Mack removed it.

"My mistake. Bring the light to the bench, will you?" She held up the collar.

"This is the best thing I've done yet. It's a triumph. I'm not pleased with myself, am I? It is a collar for Jean's kitten. See the little Micky Mouses?"

Jane Mack sniffed. "You do so much for other people, Miss Prue, it's a shame you should have—have lost that emerald and the diamonds."

"Forget it. This is Christmas. I have a feeling that those stones will come back some day. I suspect—"

"Who, Miss Prue?"

"Macky! Has the mere memory of that hold-up man turned you white? Hurry up and make us both a cup of tea. Everything ready for dinner tomorrow?"

"Yes, Miss Prue. I've had my tea. Saw a procession in the cup. Can't tell whether it's going to be a wedding or a party or a funeral."

Hours later, Prudence, squeezed into the back seat beside Mrs. Si in the Puffer car, looked up at High Ledges. "This is the party in your cup, Macky," she said gaily.

The windows were alight with candles. Evergreens gay with colored bulbs bordered the drive. An all-white Christmas tree, dripping with silver tinsel, glittering with artificial snow, glimmering with white bulbs, loomed on the lawn in a flood of light. The atmosphere throbbed with gayety and good cheer and Christmas spirit.

Prudence regarded herself in the long mirror in the dressing room. For the first time since she had left the city and festivities behind her, she was wearing an evening gown. The color was Christmasy. Should she have worn a frock so backless to a party like this? Why not? It was her best, and the best was none too good for this festivity.

Her brother joined her in the hall. "I've been looking for you, Prue. Sorry not to wait and come with you, but Gerard wanted me here early."

"He's always wanting you, David. I don't know where we would have tucked you into the Puffer car had you waited. Isn't that music heavenly! I've never seen a more glorious Christmas tree! Looking pretty snappy, aren't you?" she approved gaily, to camouflage the surge of thanksgiving which shook her as she looked at him, apparently so strong, so well. "You are not terribly hard to look at yourself. Miss Mack is doing her bit for the honor of the family. She is stiff with black glitter, and she is smiling. Shall we go down?"

From the stairs Prudence saw Jean and Rodney Gerard greeting the arriving guests. Rodney looked up. The color mounted to his forehead as his eyes met Prue's. Her heart grew wings. He must have forgiven her, he must want to be friends again, or he wouldn't look at her like that. He crossed the hall and met her as she reached the lowest step.

"K. K. and I began to think you had passed up our party." He dropped the hand he had seized. "Help make people feel at home, will you?" he asked stiffly. "You'll find Jim in the next room," he flung over his shoulder as he turned away.

His voice had the effect of a shower of ice water. Anger burned away the chill. Was he afraid that she might expect him to devote himself to her if he showed even decent civility? He needn't worry. With chin up she entered the room in which dancers were swinging and humming to the rhythm of the music.

"Come out to the sun porch, Prue. I want to talk to you."

The grimness of Armstrong's voice generated prickles in her veins. Had he found out what she had told Rodney? Was he furiously angry? Perhaps he would sue her for saying that she was engaged to him. That was a cheerful thought for this merry Christmas.

Hiking 150 Years Old

Hiking is not modern, according to information revealed in London. It was called "pedestrianism" over a century ago, but the pastime was the same, according to a description in the Sporting Magazine, published in 1792. The opening paragraph of the article on pedestrianism declares that it is "an exercise which... has lately risen into much notice." It relates that Foster Powell, of Leeds, for a hundred-guinea wager, walked from London to York and back in five days, in the middle of November. He afterward accomplished several similar feats, and in his fifty-seventh year was still taking on bets. In 1765, according to the magazine, "a young woman went from Blencogo in Scotland to within two miles of Newcastle in one day, which is about 72 miles."

"Dis was work was created in seven days," said Uncle Eben, "but it is takin' millions of years for us humans to decide what to do wit it."

POULTRY

USE COLOR SCHEME TO SELECT LAYERS

Red-White-and-Blue Method Is Recommended.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

A simple plan of selecting the best layers in a farm flock is described by H. L. Shrader, of the United States Department of Agriculture, as the red-white-and-blue method. It calls for the use of three colors of leg bands for marking three desirable characteristics of hens in the breeding flock.

The first culling date provides a check on all pullets that have begun to lay. These are the early-maturing pullets and are marked with red leg bands. It is easy to determine an early layer, as she has a deep-red comb and wattles and a moist vent. If the bird belongs to one of the yellow-skinned varieties she will show distinct bleaching around the vent and on the beak.

The next culling period affords an opportunity to check the rate at which the pullets have laid during the winter. Those that have laid steadily will have lost, through the egg yolks, most of the yellow coloring matter assimilated from yellow and green feed. But birds that have taken a vacation during the winter have some of this pigment, readily observable, in the beaks and shanks. All pullets with bleached beaks and shanks are marked with a white leg band.

The last period for culling comes after the hot weather has arrived. This is the time to detect the birds that take their vacation before they have finished their laying year. The molt is a good indication of the time these pullets have been out of laying. The bird with ragged, worn feathers may not look like a blue-ribbon winner compared with her sister that has clean, bright feathers. But the bird with the worn feathers deserves the blue leg band because she is a persistent layer and has kept up her production into the hot weather instead of molting a new crop of feathers. Leg bands are removed from birds that go broody.

The red-white-and-blue layers should be mated the next spring to males from flocks with trap-nest records that show heavy winter production of good-sized eggs of the proper color for the breed.

Heat for Poultry Houses Where Winter Is Severe

Heating poultry houses seems to be necessary, in very cold parts, if hens are to lay well in winter, says the Montreal Herald. The danger of fire makes great care essential. Attention to a few elementary principles will assure a maximum of safety and prevent very heavy losses.

First, the floor of the house and the stove should be level. This not only makes for less danger of oil leakage and better stove functioning, but also makes for keeping the litter level instead of piled up in the low spot which may be under the stove. Be sure the thermostat or wafers is in good shape and actually regulating the stove.

Place asbestos or sand, or both, under the stove. Be sure the sand is as deep or deeper than the litter, and scrape out any litter that works under the hover. Making sure that the sand is deep enough, and that the peat, crushed cobs or straw are not under the stove, should be a daily checking job.

The brooder house should always be placed far enough from the other buildings so that if the worst comes, it won't involve other farm buildings.

Lack of Mineral in Feed

Lameness in chickens may be the result of a lack of calcium in their food, which can be offset by feeding oyster shell, placing it before the birds in self-feeding hoppers; or, add about 5 per cent bone meal to their mash ration. Lameness may also be caused by intestinal parasites. The only way to relieve intestinal parasites in hens is to give them worm capsules and follow this up in about six to eight hours with a dose of Epsom salts. It may be necessary to repeat the dose in about ten to twelve weeks' time.—Montreal Herald.

His Family Tree

"That man talks a great deal of his family tree," said the heifer. "Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "He impressed me from the first as a man who was on the lookout for a good market for timber."

An Alert Girl

Mistress—I see a spider web in the corner, Mary! To what do you attribute that?

Maid—To a spider, ma'am.—Exchange.

Let's Go

"Do you feel like moving pictures?"

"You bet I do."

"Fine! You can help move these up in the attic."

Archaic Word

Teacher—Junior, construct a sentence using the word "Archaic."

Junior—We can't have an archaic and eat it too.

Fattening Cockerels

The size of pen necessary to fatten 20 cockerels would be about 10 by 12 feet, providing the cockerels are from four to five pounds each. It is hard to tell how much it will cost to fatten the birds. Very much depends on one's ability as a feeder and the constitution and vigor of the cockerels. The pen should be light; there is no object in having it dark. The birds will do better where they can have considerable sunlight, providing they are in confinement and the pen ventilated.

Sanitary Poultry Houses

Sanitation means a lot to some poultrymen and not so much to others. We should use our common sense, declares a poultry expert at the North Carolina State college. Manure should not be allowed to accumulate on the dropping boards; litter should not become soggy and sour; drinking fountains should be cleaned once a day and sterilized once a week; clean nests should be the rule and the mash hoppers should be scraped out occasionally, especially in damp weather.

SOLE SUPPORT

A shiftless specimen of humanity came along the street one morning, and joining a group at the corner announced that he was going to leave town—said he could not live in it any longer.

Some one asked him what was the matter.

"Well," he said, "the town is all right; but it's the hardest place in the world for a woman to get work in!"—Buen Humor.

Too Many Cooks

Ole Svenson, a son of the silent North, lived by himself for 30 years and did all his own housekeeping—and then he got married. But Mrs. Svenson deserted her husband after about two months.

"Ole, are you sorry she went?" a friend asked the husband.

"No," replied Ole.

"Why not?"

"Well," was the reply, "she was always getting in the way when I was cooking."—Grit.

Valuation

"How much is a dollar worth at present?" asked the interviewer.

"One dollar isn't worth so much," answered Cactus Joe. "Forty or fifty thousand of 'em may be worth your life if a bandit takes a fancy to 'em."

Demand for Novelty

"What we need," said the emphatic citizen, "is some new laws."

"Maybe you're right," answered Senator Sorghum. "Even a law can grow old and convey the impression that it has outlasted its usefulness."

All Right With Him

Bride—You must not expect me to give up my girlhood ways all at once.

Husband—That's all right, little girl; go on taking an allowance from your father just as if nothing had happened.

NOTHING OF MOMENT

"Then you think you won't no permanent place in her heart?"

"I'm just a notch on her pet golf club, that's all."

The Old School

"What does a statesman of the old school feel like these days?"

"Speaking for myself," answered Senator Sorghum, "when balancing the budget is mentioned he feels as if he were being liable to dismissal for not knowing his mathematics."

Only to Make Him Stop

Woman—Why do you want your husband to go to the hospital? He is not seriously hurt.

Friend—Well, he won't whine in front of the nurse.

Copy-Cat

"I hear that Mrs. Highbridge is much disappointed in her husband."

"Dreadfully. She understood he was a home-loving man and now he wants to tag along with her everywhere she goes."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CLUB ETHICS

"Are you going to your afternoon card club tomorrow?"

"No, it's my turn to stay away and be talked about."

Better Than Nothing

Precautions Called for With Perishable Food

Study of human reactions to tin have been exhaustively investigated by the bureau of soils in Washington. These studies show that no toxic action need be feared from the use of tin containers. For that reason it has been widely stated that food-stuffs need not be removed from the can after opening because of any danger from tin poisoning.

It must be apparent, on the other hand, that products like milk or canned fruits, vegetables, and meats are perishable substances. Once the can is open, they are subject to contamination from the bacteria of the air just like any fresh product. For that reason it is certainly not desirable for perishable foods to be allowed to stand in open containers any appreciable length of time unless they are kept very cold. Furthermore, though cold delays the growth of these bacteria, it does not entirely prevent their growth. Hence foods cannot be kept in refrigerators in open containers indefinitely. — Dr. Walter H. Eddy, Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau.

Government Agency Answers Questions

Information Service Called On by Many for Aid.

Washington.—Established by the national emergency council in March to assist Washington visitors to thread the maze of federal agencies and emergency units, the United States information service now answers questions from far and near. Whereas previously, inquirers resorted to the trial and error method, addressing queries to a particular department, they now have at hand an information "central" in close touch with every department, bureau, commission or other federal agency, says the New York Times.

Directed by Miss Harriet M. Root, a graduate of Wellesley, a dozen expert research workers, all women, answer the queries which come in by personal call, by telephone and by letter. Not infrequently one day's mail will bring in 400 letters—each carrying one or more questions. On a busy day, as many as 200 persons have called at Miss Root's office seeking general information, or assistance in contacting some federal agency.

Cover Wide Range.

The queries cover an encyclopedic range. A New Jersey woman, for example, having what she believed to be ambergris in her possession, asked where she could find out whether it was genuine. Her question was referred to the bureau of fisheries. Requests for information on diving rods and buried treasures go to the bureau of mines. A lawyer in New York asked for a list of all federal corporations since the establishment of the United States government—a request that necessitated considerable research. Another letter called for "anything you can find on capital and labor." In due course, a reply furnished references to government publications on the subject.

"Does a bullet from a high-powered rifle actually change its course when entering water? If it does, why? And in what direction?" inquired another correspondent. Here, obviously, was an opportunity for government ballistic experts, to whom the query was forwarded. From a small town came a request for a check on the source of certain statements carried in an article in a local newspaper. And a woman with potatoes to sell sought the help of the service in finding the best market for them.

Many Personal Questions.

Personal questions are numerous. The widow of a naval man who was lost when a ship went down in the war wanted guidance in preparing a claim for compensation from the government. Another inquirer sought directions on how to obtain a medal for a child who had saved a playmate from drowning. A father asked how he should go about finding for his son a billet in the merchant marine. And whenever former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker comes to town, the information service invariably receives one or more calls for his Washington address.

Requests for information on federal activities reflect the increased interest in public affairs, particularly in the work of the New Deal agencies. The national emergency council publishes a daily manual, covering changes in the federal setup, and also charts showing graphically the present federal organization. Both the manual and the charts are in great demand. Universities and schools and faculty members send many requests. A California college plans to use the NEC manual as a textbook; a professor in a midwestern university ordered 300 copies of the chart of the federal government.

A RIFT IN THE CLOUDS

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

That the depression brought to countless numbers of persons severe losses, no one can intelligently deny. We have seen too much genuine sorrow not to realize that an unmeasurable debt has and must still be paid for the debacle of the last war. Without any effort to minimize the seriousness of this strain, a part of which almost every person had to bear, there are certain blessings which have come to us, both as a nation and individuals, which might profitably challenge our thought and call forth our gratitude.

A most remarkable testimony to the reserve strength and moral poise of this country has been the absence of a revolution. Some economists affirm that we are in the midst of an economic revolution. If that is true, it has the merit of being bloodless in character. Whatever we may think of the readjustments occurring in our social and economic order, we are persuaded that efforts affecting these readjustments are operating in the absence of bitter hatred or green-eyed jealousy. The pronounced attitude in favor of international peace, especially by the youth movement in America is indicative of the dawn of a better day. Our young people are appealing to reason rather than the spirit of mob psychology in settling their moral and intellectual problems. The day is gone when a mere wave of sentiment, call it by whatever name you will, is sufficient to persuade a young man to offer his life as a sacrifice to the god of war. Our educational system has not broken down. It has been curtailed in certain localities, but most of our schools are still open, and many of our young people are entering colleges in large numbers, indicative of the fact that in this country education is a permanent and indestructible asset in our national life.

Unlike other countries we have maintained, our inherent right of religious liberty. Our churches are still open. The work may be financially curtailed but the spiritual appeal has not been checked. In many localities it is more real than ever before. Let us take courage. These are some of the rays of light penetrating through the darkness of the storm.

New Window Shades for Old

Old window shades that have become faded and worn may be renewed with two coats of paint. A flat wall paint well-thinned with oil and applied quickly will effect the transformation.

Use of Brushes

A poor job will result if a paint brush is used for varnishing, regardless of how thoroughly it is cleaned. A varnish brush, however, may later be used for painting.

A Handsome Corner Treatment in Antiques. The French Chair Has No Central Back Support and Should Be Handled as Described for Hepplewhite Chairs.

FURNITURE has to be treated with a certain respect for its infirmities. These may be due to the fact that it is old and has not had proper care, or because it is not of fine craftsmanship, whatever its age, old or new. In every home, not entirely furnished with new pieces, there are certain articles which require kindly care. When it is possible, the pieces should be restored as nearly as they can be to their original state. However, it may be that the cost of doing over the article may be more than can be afforded at the time, or that, even after being put in excellent repair the piece may be rather fragile because of its delicate shape or slender construction.

Genuine antiques frequently must have the consideration due after many years of active service.

Positioning Furniture.

Two of the most important factors in this kindly treatment are the placing of pieces where they will not get the brunt of hard and continual usage, and where they will not need constant shifting. A chair, for example, should be so positioned that it will not be the first to be sat on and where it will be in more continual use, probably, than in any other position. Also it is likely to be pushed back and forth more often than if it were in a less prominent place. This wracks the joints of furniture unless it is moved with special caution.

When a chair is heavy as an arm chair is apt to be, it is hard on it to be shifted about. It is not easy to move and it seems actually to balk. But its difficulty of easy manipulation is its protection. So place the chair in some pleasant corner where it will escape frequent moving, and will be enjoyed by those who have time to rest in its kindly embrace.

Chairs With Delicate Backs.

Hepplewhite chairs are exquisite in shape, but since the heart-shaped backs seldom have central support they should not be lifted entirely by them.

One hand should be about or under the seat. Nor should these backs be suddenly leaned against. Hepplewhite chairs are cherished for their exquisite beauty rather than their durability. This is true of other choice chairs, especially in French furniture.

Tables should not be expected to bear more weight than their size and build invite. Drop-leaf tables should be shut only after their supports have been properly positioned. The hinges will give without this precaution. Then the leaves will not fit closely when the table is open and they will have a tendency to sag when down.
