SET PRICE OF FAIR GROUNDS AT $3,000.00

Sale Awaits Approval Of United States Forestry Department

At the January session of the Board of Supervisors, which closed Saturday, a price of $3,000.00 was placed on the Isosco county fair grounds, with buildings. The grounds were offered at $2,000.00 without buildings. These prices were made in answer to a proposal made by Paul D. Kelleter, supervisor of the Huron National forest, that Isosco county sell the grounds to the government for use in enlarging the Beal Nursery at East Tawas.

In voting on the report of the committee which recommended the sale of the grounds, there was one dissenting vote, Supervisor Alva Callahan of Wilber township. A committee was appointed to conduct further negotiations if the price quoted was approved by the government.

Thought of selling the fair grounds has come as a shock to many people throughout the county who have been interested in the welfare of the Isosco County Agricultural Society and had helped to finance the construction of the race track and buildings many years before it was turned over to the county.

The following is a communication from A. W. Colby, secretary of the Isosco County Agricultural Society:

"Since the last issue of the Tawas Herald has been circulated throughout the county with an article telling of the proposed sale of the fair grounds by the Board of Supervisors, I have heard considerable criticism in regard to the proposal, especially by farmers. Being secretary of the Agricultural Society, I feel it my duty to respond so that the people of the county may have a chance to voice their opinions.

"In the first place, when the fair grounds were deeded to the county there was a clause entered therein that states that the Isosco County Agricultural Society reserves the right to hold annual fairs on the grounds. Because of the depression activities were temporarily suspended. That does not mean that the county shall not hold another fair. The last fair was held in 1931 instead of 1930, and the rodeo, which was a private enterprise and not sponsored by the fair board, in 1932.

"If the people of the county do not want another fair and are willing that the supervisors should sell the property for about one-half of what the buildings alone are worth, the fair board is perfectly willing to concede to their wishes.

"I would suggest that the matter be put up to the voters of the county at the spring election and at the same time decide whether or not the county should make up the small deficit which is bound to occur during future fairs if a reasonable amount of free acts and horse racing is sponsored."

Iva Mae Carroll

Iva Carroll, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carroll of Tawas City, passed away suddenly on Saturday evening, January 5. Heart failure was the cause of her death.

Iva Mae Carroll was born at Hale on August 8, 1911, bringing her age at the time of death to 23 years, four months and 27 days. After residing at Hale and National City until 1930, she moved to Tawas City with her parents and since that time has made her home here. She was a graduate of the Tawas City high school in the class of 1931 and of the Isosco County Normal at East Tawas in 1932. At the time of her death she was taking post-graduate work at the local high school.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her parents and two sisters, Beatrice and Violet, besides other relatives and a large number of friends.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon of this week at the Tawas City Baptist church, with Rev. Frank Metcalf officiating. Burial was made in the Evergreen cemetery at Hale.

County Trucks Unable To Keep Roads Open Promptly

The County Road Commission has been very much handicapped this winter in attempting to keep all roads passable from snow. The commission has three plows. During the past week one plow has been out of service awaiting repair parts. All available equipment has been running both night and day whenever any roads were blocked with snow. However, with 645 miles of dirt roads and 150 miles of gravel roads to cover it will be readily understood that it is impossible to give very prompt service. So if your road happens to be blocked please remember we are doing the best we can with the equipment we have.

LOST—In Wilber township last Sunday, a black and tan female hound. Reward for information leading to recovery. Notify Ed. Martin, Isosco Hotel.

The Man from Yonder

A New Serial by HAROLD TITUS

No one knew anything about Ben Elliott when he arrived in Tincep, but it wasn't long before his name was on every tongue, for hadn't he given "Bull" Duval, Nick Brandon's hired thug, a beating he would never forget; hadn't he taken over the impossible job of running the Hoot Owl outfit for many an older and more experienced man had failed; and hadn't he had the courage to defy Brandon himself, the man who held Tincep in the hollow of his hand?

The old-timers stood by and scratched their heads—here was a youngster doing things that couldn't be done and doing them well, in spite of fire and dynamite and many another hazard. And Ben carried on, unconscious of the magnitude of his job, carried on for the sake of a little girl whom he had never seen—until one day he discovered that she was a little girl no longer, but a lovely young woman—and the one person in all the world that Nick Brandon really cared for.

Here, indeed, were complications, but Ben Elliott thrived on complications though he had to admit that the winning of Dawn McManus was the toughest job he had ever tackled.

Harold Titus tells this thrilling tale of romance and adventure in his latest North Woods story, "The Man From Yonder." Readers of this paper who are familiar with the clean, vigorous stories that Titus writes will be glad to know that we have obtained the publication rights to "The Man From Yonder." All of our readers, who are sure, will enjoy reading it as it appears serially in these columns.

High Lights Of Supervisors' Meeting

Prosecuting Attorney John A. Stewart and Sheriff John Moran were asked to enforce the law which prohibits slot machines. Throughout the state there has been very little attempt made to enforce this law.

Repairs and several improvements were authorized for the county jail. The principal improvement will be the installation of a bathroom in the sheriff's apartments. Previously a bathroom had been furnished for the prisoners but none for the sheriff and his family.

The board considered the advisability of obtaining a full-time agricultural agent. Many members of the board were of the opinion that such a measure at this time would be profitable and that a full-time agent could be secured at a very small increase in cost to the county. During the past year the county has been using the services of County Agricultural Agent C. Blumer jointly with Alcona county.

The services of N. C. Harting were secured to correct the descriptions in the various assessment rolls of the county.

YACHT CLUB TO HOLD BRIDGE TOURNAMENT

Play Will Be Started On Monday, Jan. 21

An auction bridge tournament, of ten weeks duration, will be sponsored by the executive committee of the Tawas Bay Yachting Association. The tournament will be held in the main dining room of the Holland Hotel. Playing will start on Monday, January 21, and be continued each Monday night for ten weeks.

George Prescott, Jr., Hugo Keiser, Robert McKay, and Mrs. A. Barkman will act as a consulting committee throughout the tournament. Registration may be made at the Holland Hotel and Keiser's Drug Store. A fee of twenty-five cents per person a night will be charged.

The proceeds will be used to pay for expenses incurred during the last boating season.

Twentieth Century Club

The Twentieth Century Club met in the city hall on Saturday, January 5. After the business session the following program was presented:

Violin solo—Edward Martin, accompanied at the piano by his sister, Miss Elizabeth; Roll Call—Current Events; History of Taxation—Mrs. Lucile Stevens; Development of Budgets: Government—Mrs. Bright, School Budgets—Miss Worden.

We learned why we are taxed, how the government finds out how much to ask for, and how the school districts must try to get along on their small share. It isn't what they get, it's the amount they don't receive (or delinquent) that causes the troubles school districts are having today.

The next meeting will be Gentlemen's Night, Friday, January 18th. Watch this paper next week for the hour and place.

Notice

Hereafter my office will be closed on Wednesday afternoons of each week instead of Thursday afternoons. Dr. John D. LeClair, Dentist.

Celebrate 60th Wedding Anniversary on Christmas

Mr. and Mrs. James Sheppard, pioneers of Reno township, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary on Christmas at the Moerish ranch, Whittemore.

Mr. Sheppard was born July 9, 1852, in Kent county, Ontario, and Mrs. Sheppard was born August 6, 1856, at Lakeport, Michigan. They were united in marriage Christmas day, 1874, at Ubyly, Michigan. They resided 20 years at Ubyly, later taking up their abode near Whittemore.

Ten children were born to this union. They have 34 grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren. The outstanding events of their lives were the great fires of 1871 and 1881, and they have witnessed many hardships, panics and depressions. Through it all they are hale and hearty and in good health.

Enjoying with them this great event of their lives, which few ever attain, were: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fuerst and family and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Barr and family of Whittemore, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Sheppard and family of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Mrs. R. Moerish of Flint.

Youth Steals New 1935 Ford To Return To C.C.C.

John Holton, 18 years old, of Detroit, admitted Monday to the theft of a new 1935 Ford which he drove from that city to Silver Creek. It was stolen on December 31 from the Robert W. Ford Auto Sales at Dearborn.

The car was recovered by Sheriff John Moran and the young man was taken to Detroit by state troopers, where he was turned over to city police Wednesday.

Holton was a member of the Silver Creek C. C. C. camp.

East Tawas School News

The Animal Husbandry class recently visited the Carl Krueger farm to study farm buildings. The remodeled dairy barn with iron sash windows and pens, its cement floor and feeding troughs, and sanitary milk room was found very useful for study. Then the large modern poultry house with its plastered walls, large window area and excellent ventilation system was also observed. The class time was short but the boys had a little time to look over Mr. Krueger's fine stock and poultry. We extend our appreciation to Mr. Krueger for his time in showing and explaining to the class his splendid improvements.

On Thursday, January 10th, some of the agricultural boys journey to Pinconning to take part in a crops judging contest put on by the Future Farmers of America Chapter of the Pinconning high school.

On Thursday the debate team drove to Gladwin to debate their negative team. Marion Haglund, Marjorie Tribe and Joe Hennigar represented East Tawas with the affirmative team.

PROF. MADDY WILL LECTURE AT EAST TAWAS

Noted Music Instructor At Community House Next Thursday Evening

Professor Joseph E. Maddy of the University of Michigan will speak next Thursday evening at the Community Building, East Tawas. A music lecture will be given illustrated with motion pictures. It includes a demonstration in which volunteer students are taught to play a tune on band instruments which Prof. Maddy carries with him.

Prof. Maddy has been carrying on university extension work in which classes in music are taught by radio. He is founder and director of the national high school band and orchestra gatherings at Interlochen. He was here four years ago.

The various schools of the county will assist in the preliminaries at East Tawas by rendering several musical numbers and members of glee clubs will take part in one large chorus directed by Prof. Maddy.

The program is free to the public and is sponsored by the East Tawas P. T. A. The P. T. A. organizations of the county are requested to have their members attend. The program will begin at 7:45 o'clock.

Irene Rebekah Lodge Installs New Officers

Cond.—Ella Woods. Chaplain—Edith Cowan. P. N. G.—Maude Klump. T. G.—Edna Hughes. O. G.—Grace Hatton. Pianist—Mary Anderson. Lunch was served after the installation ceremonies to about fifty members.

Rep. F. C. Holbeck Placed On Important Committees

In the organization of the House of Representatives this week our representative was made a member of five important committees; namely General Taxation, Conservation, Agriculture, Michigan State College and Kalamazoo State Hospital.

The people of this district will be very much interested in any legislation that will be handled by the first three of these committees; namely, General Taxation, Conservation and Agriculture.

It is very seldom that a House member is given membership on more than two major committees. Undoubtedly Representative Holbeck's long service in the legislature and the fact that he is generally on the job had a good deal to do with these appointments.

Seven Freshman College Students Make B Average

Seven students of the Freshman College, East Tawas, made a B average or better in three or more subjects during the term ending January 4th. The students were: Viola Burtzloff, Arlene Leslie and Arnold McLean of Tawas City, Stanley Daley, Hettie Jean McKay and Merrill Pollard of East Tawas, and Henry Oates of Alabaster. Thirty-four students finished the term in one or more subjects.

Sensational Stage-Screen Actress Of Europe Here

From Vienna, traditionally associated with glamour and romance, comes the latest colorful personality to dawn upon the American screen, in the person of Mady Christians, famous Continental star, who makes her screen debut in this country in "A Wicked Woman," coming next Wednesday and Thursday, January 16-17, to the Family Theatre, East Tawas.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest find has scored sensational triumphs on the screen in three countries. Speaking six languages perfectly, she has appeared as a glamorous stage star all over the world.

In her first American picture, directed by Charles Brabin, Miss Christians plays a modern American woman in a compelling drama that is a literal cross-section of a woman's soul and runs the entire gamut of human emotion. A notable cast includes Jean Parker, Charles Bickford, Betty Furness, William Henry, Jackie Searle and Sterling Holloway.

President Roosevelt Tells Congress of his Great Work Relief Plan—Designed to Supplant the Downright Dole.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in his message to congress, delivered in person at a joint session, offered the law-makers a "new and greatly enlarged plan" of work relief. He did not estimate its cost, but asserted that the system of outright doles should be dropped and the government should undertake projects of slum clearance, grade crossing elimination and other public works that would give employment to about 3,500,000 persons now without jobs. The figures to be proposed for this were reserved for his budget message, but he assured congress that they would be "within the sound credit of the government."

Mr. Roosevelt declared the gains made in the year 1934 were greater than the losses and expressed "a strong hope in the coming year." He reasserted his belief in the "profit motive" but uttered a warning against "which, through excessive profits, creates undue private power over public affairs as well." This, naturally, was taken as applying especially to the public service interests, which have been so apprehensive of the administration's intentions.

As for a legislative program, the President made no attempt to outline one, but he did promise that definite legislation soon would be proposed covering old age and unemployment insurance, benefits for children and mothers, and other features of his social security plans.

He declared the nation was making headway toward the "new order," but under the framework of the Constitution, and he spoke of the increased industrial activity, benefits to agriculture and profits to merchants that have been realized. Then came this stern warning:

"Let him who, for speculative profit or partisan purpose, without just warrant would seek to disturb or dispel this assurance, take heed before he assumes responsibility for any act which slows our onward steps."

The President reported an unsettled condition in the foreign field, with the resurrection of old jealousies and passions and new strivings for armament and power in more than one land, adding:

"There is no ground for apprehension that our relations with any nation will be otherwise than peaceful."

Discussing the matters that will be brought before congress for action, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Among the subjects that lie immediately before us are the consolidation of federal regulatory administration over all forms of transportation, the renewal and clarification of the general purposes of the national industrial recovery act, the strengthening of our facilities for the prevention, detection and treatment of crime and criminals, the restoration of sound conditions in the public utilities field through abolition of the evil features of holding companies, the gradual tapering off of the emergency credit activities of government, and improvement in our taxation forms and methods."

"We have already begun to feel the bracing effect upon our economic system of a restored agriculture."

"The hundreds of millions of additional income that farmers are receiving is finding its way into the channels of trade."

"The farmers' share of the national income is slowly rising. The economic facts justify the widespread opinion of those engaged in agriculture that our provision for maintaining a balanced production gave at this time the most adequate remedy for an old and vexing problem."

"For the present and especially in view of abnormal world conditions, agricultural adjustment with certain necessary improvements in methods should continue."

THE Seventy-fourth congress, elected on the sole issue of support of the New Deal, began its first session on the dot and devoted its first day to the organization of the two houses and the swearing in of new members. The lawmakers assembled in the Capitol were a serious looking lot, and with reason, for they have on their hands a big job, that of making the New Deal permanent; and in the doing of it they must solve some of the most perplexing problems that our national legislators ever have faced. It would seem that the Democrats will have no trouble in passing any legislation they wish, for they have an overpowering majority. In the senate are 69 Democrats and only 25 Republicans, plus one Progressive—Robert M. LaFollette—and one

Speaker Byrns

Farmer-Laborite—Henrik Shipstead. The house is comprised of 322 Democrats, 102 Republicans, seven Progressives and three Farmer-Laborites. The administration Democrats do not anticipate any trouble from the Republicans; it is from the radical members of their own party that their woes are likely to come, and the help of the Republicans may be necessary to curb those left wingers. The majority leaders in both houses can be counted on to hold the radicals under a tight rein if that is possible.

In the speaker's chair sits Joseph T. Byrns, chosen unanimously by his fellow Democrats. He is too much of a compromiser to suit many of them, but is now tied to the administration, which declined to oppose his election. John H. Bankhead of Alabama, like Byrns one of the old school, won the leadership of the house after a brief struggle. Senator Joseph Robinson of Arkansas was re-elected majority leader of the senate, and Senator Lewis of Illinois continues as whip.

In their pre-session caucus the Democrats voted to reduce materially the Republican representation on house committees, and decided to abrogate the 145 rule for discharging a committee and bringing a bill to vote within a week. The number now required for this action is 218. This latter action will provide another restriction on the radicals.

TWO thousand eight hundred bills were introduced and referred to committees on the first day of the new congress. Number 1, handed in by Representative Wright Patman of Texas, provides for the payment of the adjusted service certificates of veterans immediately in cash, through the issuance of greenbacks. Patman and other supporters of this plan call it "controlled inflation."

Lemke of North Dakota, Republican, introduced a measure for the liquidation and re-financing of agricultural indebtedness. The liquidation would be carried out at a reduced rate of interest, according to the bill, by establishing an efficient credit system, through the use of the federal farm loan and federal reserve banking systems. Lemke also provided for the creation of a board of agriculture to supervise the program.

Continuance of the HOLC was proposed by several congressmen. The bond issue of this agency would be increased anywhere from one billion to four and a half billion dollars in the various bills introduced on the subject.

A 100 per cent payoff for depositors whose funds are tied up in trust companies was sought in two bills written by Representative Clarence J. McLeod of Michigan.

Many bills were introduced providing unemployment and old age insurance.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT did not wait for the opening of congress to start his fight against immediate payment of the veterans' bonus. The commander of a Legion post in Texas wrote him for information on the matter and Mr. Roosevelt replied at length, detailing his reasons for opposing the payment. He argued that the obligation is not immediately due; that of 3,500,000 certificates outstanding, 3,038,500 veterans have borrowed $1,630,000,000, or "more than the present worth of their bonus certificates," and that when the veterans borrowed 50 per cent of the face value of the certificates in 1931 they used the funds to discharge their debts.

This last point, according to National Commander Belgrano of the American Legion, is one of the strongest arguments for immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates. "The foundation of good business is good credit," said Commander Belgrano. "The money due veterans would be used to satisfy bills at the corner grocery, would help pay rents that are long past due and would go to hard pressed merchants to discharge the accounts of harder pressed veterans."

Speaker Byrns admitted that the cash bonus bill would pass the house "because there is no opposition to it there," but he added that if the measure is finally enacted the administration will insist on some additional taxation to meet the estimated $2,000,000,000 expenditure. It is believed the senate also will pass the bill, but leaders doubt its passage by congress over the Presidential veto.

LOUISIANA wants any more public works money from the administration, it must "clarify" some of the new laws which its legislature has passed at the behest of Senator Huey P. Long. This is the gist of a letter sent to Gov. O. K. Allen by President Roosevelt, and the "kingfish" is not pleased by it. He told the reporters he would make his reply on the floor of the senate at the first opportunity. The President's warning applied especially to the Louisiana moratorium law passed in November. Since its enactment the PWA has held up payments on about 60 Louisiana projects,

SENATOR VANDENBERG of Michigan, liberal Republican, says he will introduce in the senate a bill designed to take the Post Office department out of politics. The measure he has drafted would put all postmasters and postal officials, except the postmaster general, under the civil service, and in the giving out of jobs the post office employees would have the preference. Senator Vandenberg has been persistently demanding that Postmaster General Farley either resign from the cabinet or give up his chairmanship of the Democratic national committee. In line with this his bill would prohibit the postmaster general from holding any political office.

Senator Vandenberg

By taking politics out of the department and establishing a career service, Vandenberg said, "the pavement-pounding letter carriers may look forward to ultimate graduation to the high post of first assistant postmaster general."

"Under this bill," he added, "politics and postal affairs at last are separated as far as is possible in a democracy. All local postmasters are put squarely under civil service with emphatic and effective priorities given to the 'postal grays' themselves. Existing postmasters are permitted to serve out their present commissions. Thereupon the vacancies are filled by promotion from the service ranks. Only in the event that no such person is available—and we anticipate that this contingency would not arise other than in some of the smallest offices—can the vacancy be filled otherwise than by promotion."

ONE of the most serious issues that will confront congress is the battle between business and industry on one side and organized labor on the other, especially over the thirty-hour work week. The American Federation of Labor is committed to this proposition, and to the retention of the collective bargaining provisions of the NRA act. Big business, as represented by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the National Manufacturers' association, is opposed to the thirty-hour week, and now has the support from the Brookings Institution. It also seeks the separation of labor bargaining and practice codes in the reorganization of the NRA. The opening shot in this battle is the introduction by Senator Hugo L. Black of Alabama of his thirty-hour work week bill, which at present has not the support of the administration.

DEMOCRATS of Rhode Island surprised themselves and everyone else by gaining control of both houses of the state general assembly when a senate committee recounted the ballots from Portsmouth and South Kingston and declared two Democrats had been elected to the senate instead of the two Republicans who had been certified as winners by the state returning board. The Democratic legislators immediately organized the assembly, ousted the supreme court members, abolished the state appointed board of public safety and passed a reorganization bill to consolidate more than 80 agencies into 11 state departments.

FOREIGN MINISTER PIERRE LAVAL is carrying out successfully the work begun by his murdered predecessor, Barthou, to bring France and Italy into friendly accord for the settlement of all the conflicts that have arisen between those nations since the World war. The agreement, it is believed, will also insure peace in the Balkans. After a week of lively negotiations it was announced that M. Laval would go to Rome "to have important conversations with Premier Mussolini on questions which interest the two countries and on international politics and to conclude conversations which have been going on between the two countries."

WITH remarkable celerity the jury in the Hauptmann trial was selected, consisting of eight men and four women, and Attorney General Wilentz set forth the state's case against the Bronx carpenter who is accused of kidnaping and murdering the baby son of Colonel Lindbergh. The colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh were present, and they and Betty Gow, the child's nurse, were among the early witnesses. On behalf of the state the attorney general demanded the penalty of first degree murder.

IN 1933 the James E. Sullivan memorial trophy, awarded to the athlete contributing the most to the cause of amateur athletics during the year, was missed by Bill Bonthron of Princeton by just one vote and was given to Glenn Cunningham. Now it is in Bill's possession as the result of his great foot-racing campaign during 1934, in the course of which he established a world record for 1,500 meters and beat Cunningham in three out of five races.

In the nationwide ballot, conducted by A. A. U., Bonthron led in the preliminary voting and then piled up 1,072 votes in the final test after the field had been cut to seven. Benjamin B. Eastman, former Stanford track star, ran second with 929 and then came Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette university's negro sprinter, with 413, and Glen Hardin, Louisiana State university, with 285.

Three swimmers trailed the trackmen. Lenore Kight of Homestead, Pa., received 262 votes; Jack Medina of Seattle, 169, and Katherine Rawls, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 154.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER FINDS DOTTY THE TREE SPARROW

HAVING been reminded of Dotty the Tree Sparrow, Peter Rabbit was eager to find him and learn how he had fared through the summer. He was at a loss just where to look for Dotty until he remembered a certain weedy field, along one edge of which the bushes had been left growing.

So Peter hurried over to the weedy field and there, sure enough, he found Dotty and a lot of his friends. They were very busy getting their breakfast. Some were clinging to the weed stalks picking the seeds out of the tops, while others were picking up seeds from the ground. It was cold; Rough Brother North Wind was doing his best to blow up a snow storm. It wasn't at all the kind of a day when anybody would expect to find anyone in high spirits, but Dotty was. He was even singing as Peter came up, and all about Dotty's friends and relatives were twittering as merrily as if it were the beginning of spring instead of winter.

Dotty was very nearly the size of "Speaking of Nests, Do You Build in a Tree?" Inquired Peter.

Little Friend the Song Sparrow, and looked somewhat like him save that his breast was clear ashy-gray, all but a little dark spot in the middle, the little dot from which he has been named. He wore a chestnut cap, almost exactly like that of Chippy the Chipping Sparrow. It reminded Peter that Dotty is often called the Winter Chippy.

"Welcome back," cried Peter. "It does my heart good to see you!" "Thank you, Peter," twittered Dotty happily. "In a way, it is good to be back. Certainly it is good to know an old friend is glad to see me."

"Well, it IS good," declared Peter very emphatically. "At best there are few enough folks about in winter, and I don't know of anyone I enjoy having for a neighbor more than I do you."

"Thank you again," cried Dotty, "and please let me return the compliment."

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

A young man invited me to the Metropolitan opera house where they were singing the opera "Aida." I went with him, but the minute we got in the theater he started talking to me and never stopped the entire evening. I couldn't tell you what the opera was about, as he talked so much I only heard him. He has invited me again to go next week to the opera "Il Trovatore." Shall I accept?

Sincerely,
I LOVEJOY.

Answer: By all means accept and go with him, especially if you have never heard HIM in "Il Trovatore."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have 17 children and I am the father of these 17 children and I want to take my 17 children to the circus to look at the animals, but I cannot afford to buy 17 tickets for my 17 children to look at the animals. What shall I do?

Yours truly,

THE BURDEN OF TOMORROW

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE future may be dark with certain sorrow,
But I will walk a valiant way.
I will not take the burden of tomorrow
Upon my heart today.

I will not lift a sack of phantom troubles
From a remembered year,
And bear their bogus weight. Like silver bubbles
They soon would disappear.

I am content today! Why should I borrow
From Fate I cannot stay?
I will not take the burden of tomorrow

COLORFUL DISHES

THIS is the time of the year when entertaining is done for the young folks, when colorful and interesting dishes are more appreciated.

Chrysanthemum Salad.

Take bright thin-skinned oranges, wash, cut the skins from the blossom end to the stem end, but not quite through, leaving a small portion to hold the petals in shape. Cut into points to resemble a flower. Carefully remove the pulp, not to break the flower. Cut the pulp into small pieces, draining off the juices to add to the dressing. To eight oranges take one apple finely diced, two tablespoonsful of lemon juice poured over it to keep it from discoloring, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of diced celery and one-half cupful of broken nuts. Arrange the cups on lettuce, fill with the salad mixture, adding mayonnaise and seasoning to taste, using the orange juice instead of cream to add to the mayonnaise.

Cranberry Orange Salad.

Prepare molds of cranberry sauce. Arrange in the center of a nest of lettuce and place thin slices of orange around the mold. Top the cranberry with a rose of mayonnaise and place a candied cranberry on each slice of orange.

Roast Turkey.

Cut strips of fat salt pork and cover the breast of a firm, plump turkey or other fowl. After stuffing place in roaster and brown. During the baking baste every fifteen minutes with orange juice and lemon juice. Add two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice to a cupful of orange juice while basting. Use the liquid in the pan also for basting. The fruit juice enhances the flavor, making it more tender.

Prepare and bake a plain sponge cake in a square tin. When cool cut into rounds with a cookie cutter and cover with any creamy frosting. Roll in tinted coconut. Decorate with halves of nuts, sliced dates arranged in design or with bits of maraschino cherries or candied fruit.

SUCH IS LIFE—

POULTRY FACTS

GOOD MALES BRING HIGH-LAYING HENS

Use Progeny Testing Plan to Pick Best Sires.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

A good male is ten times as important as a good hen in building up a flock of poultry. For this reason progeny testing, a method which enables a poultry breeder to identify the superior males in his flock, is a necessity to progress in poultry breeding, says Dr. M. A. Jull, in charge of poultry investigations for the United States Department of Agriculture.

Too much significance has been attached to phenomenal records in egg-laying contests, according to Doctor Jull, who bases his statement on the results of a recent experiment with White Leghorns and Rhode Island Reds at the Beltsville research center of the department, at Beltsville, Md. High-production records in the ancestry of hens used in breeding flock are, of course, desirable but the experiment shows that such records on only one side of the ancestry are not sufficient assurance of high-producing pullets. On the other hand, three generations of good egg-production records do give some assurance of good records of the pullets.

A hen that produces good laying pullets by one sire may produce pullets with much lower averages when mated to another sire the next year. This indicates that a hen's value as a breeder is not always shown by the average egg production of her daughters but depends also on the mating involved. The ability to select superior breeding males is of great importance because a sire's influence on a flock is at least ten times as great as that of a hen, as one sire is usually mated to ten or more hens. The index of greatest value in determining a sire's breeding worth was found to be the average egg production of all of his daughters.

Italy Believed Home of Original Leghorn Fowls

The history of poultry reveals that "Italy was, undoubtedly, the home of the original Leghorn fowls," says the Montreal Herald. Early literature shows that poultry of several kinds was bred at least 3,000 years ago, and fowls were used in Rome for food 2,000 years ago.

Indications resulting from careful and widespread investigations, are that "The Leghorn fowls as they existed in Italy prior to 1815 were a mongrel lot," descended from promiscuous matings, without any attention being paid to color, body formation or productivity. The greatest development in the breed has taken place in England, the United States and Canada and it is significant that the high state of development attained in these countries has led breeders in the native home of the Leghorn to import specimens for the sole purpose of improving size, stamina, conformation and productivity—not to say profit.

Poultry Rations

Many poultry feed experts think it is a wise practice to build all poultry rations around yellow corn, believing that under normal conditions it may make up one-half to two-thirds of the grain mixture, depending on the season of the year, possibly more being required in the winter season than in summer. Wheat is well liked by fowls and may form a part of every ration. In feeding value it is said to be approximately equal to corn, pound for pound. When it is low in price it may be fed up to one-half the total grain allowance and when relatively expensive, it may be reduced to a fifth or even less, according to the Illinois Experimental station.

Poultry Gleanings

Lancashire, England, has more hens than people.

Pound for pound, a pullet needs four times more oxygen than a cow.

Pale yolks are produced on such feeds as white corn, wheat, oats, and barley.

One hundred pullets should eat about 25 pounds of feed daily. The proportion of grain to mash will vary.

In the case of a fresh egg, the shell is dull and often has a sort of "bloom" on it; shells of stale eggs are glossy and smooth.

When a bird is dry-plucked, it will lose about one-tenth of its weight when the blood and feathers are removed. In other words, a 15-pound turkey will lose about one and a half pounds in dressing.

Systematic and continuous culling of poultry brings results quicker than almost any other piece of work on the farm.

Hens that are fed a small amount of cod-liver oil, about 2 per cent of their ration, produce eggs containing more copper and iron.

An inexpensive piece of galvanized sheet iron has been found to be a satisfactory covering for henhouse dropping boards. It is vermin-proof and easily cleaned.

PRETTY FOR THE SMALL DAUGHTER

9826

Mothers who like to dress their small daughters after the simple smart English manner will love this design. At first glance, nice as it looks, there seems to be very little to it. But look again—Isn't that double yoke attractive, ending in two demure little scallops that button down in the front? And the side pleats, which make it such a pleasant frock in which to romp are also decorative in a charmingly discreet manner. The sleeves may be long or short, and a hidden charm is a pair of more than ordinarily well-cut bloomers. Make it of cotton or sheer wool.

Pattern 9826 may be ordered only in sizes 1, 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 4 requires 2 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighth Street, New York, N. Y.

To Mark 300th Year of Boston Common

Pageant Next Summer to Depict Historic Events.

Boston.—Saved from modern road builders and street widenings only by the high-powered indignation of the Boston Common society, the tercentenary of fifty acres of cowpaths, lawns and shrubbery, uncrossed by rapid transit line or highway, will be celebrated next summer.

Of course, thousands of persons are inconvenienced each day because of the disinclination of Boston antiquarians to let go another foot of land from the Common for needed street widenings or permit the building of roads across it, but other thousands revere it for its place in American history and the breathing space it affords in the heart of downtown Boston.

For this reason, a committee is now raising a fund, tentatively placed at $300,000, to reconstruct the scenes and homes of vanished days, the duels, ducking stools and hangings, during the 1935 celebration of its three hundredth anniversary.

As It Was 300 Years Ago.

With the help of the Emergency Relief administration, the committee, headed by Everett B. Mero, hopes to draw from the past a representation of three hundred years of history—to show the plot as it was when Quakers

When his father died, he inherited the mill, and then proceeded to build modern mills at strategic points throughout the country, and in that way amassed his fortune.

The World's Greatest Need

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Questionnaires seeking information on every conceivable subject frequently come to one's desk. They are sent by students pursuing advance courses of study, by business concerns and professional institutions, and in some cases are sent as advertising propaganda. Of the many received, we cannot remember one which seriously asked the important question, "What is the world's greatest need?"

The financier would doubtless file an answer something like this: "The world's greatest need is a return to economic prosperity." The college president would doubtless reply that education is our greatest need. Social workers engaged in labors to reinforce humanity with high moral purposes would acclaim character as the world's most desperate need. All very good. The trouble is that none of these questions go to the root of the matter. The world may need all of these things but the greatest need is the power to bring about these results. It is not difficult for a physician to write a prescription after he has made the diagnosis. Were we to make a diagnosis of the world's moral and economic condition today, we would soon discover that the greatest need is not for "things" but for "spirit"—an attitude of mind and heart.

The spirit of good will is basic to all economic, social and moral recovery. Our racial problem is solved when the spirit of good will removes our prejudice against those not of our blood. The economic problem is solved when the spirit of good will removes the danger of that doctrine that only the fittest have a right to survive. The spirit of international good will solves for us the problem of universal peace. We have tried peace pacts, courts of justice, and gentlemen's agreements. We fought a war to end war. We failed miserably. Why not try the method of the Prince of Peace, the "spirit of good will"?

Butter Yellow for Walls

Butter color is a new shade of yellow for walls, taken up by a prominent interior decorator and rapidly becoming a vogue. It is especially effective in a room where a pleasant, sunny air is needed—as a breakfast room or dining nook. One or two pieces of furniture may be painted the same, with upholstery and pillows to match. Contrast is obtained by window curtains and solid-hued rugs or carpet in raspberry color.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

HOME ironing can be the finest sort, or it can be just the opposite. It all depends on how it is done. This concerns not only the right handling of the iron and its varying degrees of heat, but how the material or garments are positioned on the board, whether they are ironed on the right or wrong side, whether they have an ironing cloth between the goods and the iron, whether they are pressed across the goods or lengthwise of it, or on the straight of the goods which means with the weave, etc. While there are many details to pay attention to, they soon become second nature to the one to whom it is the duty. Since at one time or another every woman irons or presses garments, or goods, or both, it is well to acquire early the correct knack.

Cotton and linen can be ironed either on right or wrong side. Damask linen, such as tablecloths, napkins, etc., should be actually damp, pressed on right and wrong sides with a hot iron, and have a polishing pressing on the right side. It will then have a high gloss, like new damask, and a body to the texture obtainable in no other way. Silk damask is treated like silk, not linen, and is ironed with a slightly dampened cloth over it and with an iron of moderate heat. Avoid a hot iron when pressing silk. It is detrimental. If a damp ironing cloth is not used, they may be dabbed with a damp cloth and then pressed again.

Effect of Ironing on Colors

Should the color of the silk change by this, it will be necessary to press it with a damp cloth over it to make the color uniform. Wait until the material is cold before doing this, however, as some colors change under heat but resume their original color when cold. This is especially true of purple in all its tints such as orchid, lavender, etc. in other textiles as well as silk. Such a curious changing and restoring of color through pressing and cooling is to be expected.

Pongee must be evenly damp all over or else dry when ironed or it will be spotted where there was moisture. These spots and streaks will come out as soon as the material is dipped in water and then pressed either while damp or after the material is dry.

"Now what have I done?" she demanded in mock terror, as they entered the enclosed porch gay with wicker and cretonnes and plants and colored lights.

"This is what you've done, Prue,—we'll get down to facts at once. You are the finest, the best sport of any girl I know—"

"Thanks for them kind words, but don't try to soften the blow. What have I done that makes you sit there looking as grim as an executioner and— and twice as handsome?"

He refused to be diverted by her gaiety. "All right, laugh, but do you realize that you have made me appear to double-cross my best friend? Why did you tell Rod that you were engaged to me?"

"Did he tell you that?"

"Hold on now, sit back in the seat and listen. Something went wrong between him and me the afternoon you and your brother dropped in on us at High Ledges. I felt it but I couldn't get hold of anything. Then things got in such a mess that I put Rod's crabbedness down to worry over the lumbering. Remember when you collapsed the night of the fire?"

"Remember! Of course I remember. I never fainted but once before in my life, and when I think that I crashed when I might have helped more, mortification sends my blood pressure down, down, down."

"Don't worry about that. The ambulance surgeon says you may have a job with him any time you are ready for it. When you went to pieces that night, Rod nearly blew my head off because I left you. Your brother and the doctor were with you; I was needed somewhere else. I stayed, though."

"Martyr," Prudence jeered softly. "Not that she felt like being flippant, but to assure herself that her stiff lips would move."

"That night—or morning rather—when we got back from the fire the whole thing came out. You had told Rod that you were engaged to me, and he accused me of underhand methods, because the day I arrived at High Ledges he warned me that he intended to marry you."

"He did!"

"He did. Your eyes look as if they saw the coming of the Lord! Why did you tell him we were engaged? Did not answer. Tell Rod." He cleared his voice. "Promise you will explain to Rodney Gerard; you owe that to me."

"Sorry to interrupt this twosome, Jim, but Prue's brother is looking for her," announced Rodney Gerard behind him.

Armstrong rose. "Great Scott, I had forgotten! This is my dance with the village beauty. Take Prue in, will you, Rod?"

Prudence made a vain effort to clutch his coat. At the door of the living room Gerard put his arm about her.

"Easier to dance through this bunch. Do you mind?"

She shook her head. His touch set little pulses in her throat hammering, the blood in her veins leaping, her body tingling with a fiery quality of life she never before had felt. He had told Jim that he intended to marry her! She looked up.

"I told you that I was engaged to Jim Armstrong. I wasn't. I don't love him a bit." Was that her voice, so pure, warm, and throbbing, or was another girl speaking?

For an instant his eyes flamed with amazement; then he crushed her to him savagely.

"Is that true? What a place to tell me! I can't— He bent his head.

"Rod! Rod! Not here! Not—"

Color rushed back to his face.

"Think I was going to kiss you? Didn't I promise I wouldn't until—"

A hand fell on his arm. A prosperous young farmer asked diffidently: "Dance with me, Miss Schuyler?"

With a look which set Prue's heart clamoring, Gerard relinquished her.

With the breathless sense that she was walking over a not too slumbering volcano, Prudence laughed and chatted with her partner when the music stopped. Mrs. Walter Gerard, in the latest in platinum metallic hairdressing and a smart black frock, bore down upon her.

"Dear Miss Schuyler, you are ravishing in that frosted green. It brings out your high color marvelously. You're been so kind to my darling daughter. She has a fascinating uncle, hasn't she?"

To Prue's indignant fancy the last sentence seemed to ring through the room as if magnificently amplified. Her response, she could not have told what it was, shook with anger. Almost she sympathized with Walter Gerard. How could a man live with a winking woman? She turned on her heel almost into the arms of Armstrong.

"What dastardly deed are you contemplating?" he demanded, as gaily as if the conversation in the sun room never had taken place. "Your eyes are splitting sparks, you look mad as a hatter."

"This is some party. Rod is doing himself proud. He and Jean are distributing gifts. He sent me to look after you. Come on, let's eat."

The middle of the long refectory table was banked with red roses; the supper was as varied and delectable as a noted caterer knew how to serve it. The guests' eyes were wide with admiration, their cheeks pink with repletion. Perched on one of the wide window sills, Prudence pretended to eat.

"How is the lumbering coming, Jim?"

"It's a cinch. The two men who deserted to Calloway slunk back and asked for a job. We took one, but the crew rode Kusciko out of town."

"Why?"

"He dumped the truck of liquor."

"I suppose he was doing the dirty work of someone higher up."

"Of course—but he tried to knife Rod. That gets you, doesn't it? Here, drink this punch. It will bring your color back. Don't care much for old Rod, do you?"

"Who are you to try to probe the secrets of a maiden's heart?" Her eyes lost their laughter. "How is Calloway?"

"Better. He has made public confession that he was solely responsible for dumping that load of liquor in front of the cattle barn and that he will pay the bills. He did it to get even with Rod. When he found out that he was wrong—"

"He is such a just man," Prudence interpolated crisply.

"He is doing his darndest to be one now. He diverted the girder which would have finished Rod. I had turned away and didn't see it coming."

Prudence shivered. "That's the worst of the horrors of that lurid night. Oh, let's not think of it. I must find the Puffers. They probably want to go home."

As Prudence came down the broad stairs in her green velvet wrap with its broad black collar, Rodney Gerard was waiting.

"Going? My party has been a knock-out, hasn't it?" The blue of his eyes was black, a hint of passion underlay the laughter in his voice.

"I don't like to talk about myself, but," Prue flouted gaily. "If only her heart would stop thumping, she wished wildly. 'You have immortalized yourself. Good-night.'"

She could feel the throb of his finger-tips as he held the hand she offered.

"Are you sure Si is waiting? Then I will leave you and speed my other guests."

"He didn't say good-night!" Prudence told herself over and over, as she squeezed in beside Mrs. Puffer on the back seat of the automobile.

"Foolish for your brother to drive home alone," Si protested, as she started the car. "Whatta mean is, he might have come along with us. But perhaps there wouldn't be room. I'm always forgettin', Mother, that you're not so slim as you were in the days when you and I went to the circus."

"The circus! That reminds me, what happened to Milly Gooch?" Prudence inquired.

Mrs. Si drew a long, troubled breath. "She went to pieces the night of the fire, dearie. She had hysterics hanging on to Roddy Gerard—guess if folks hadn't been scared to death thinking where those flames might go there would have been some whispering."

"'Twouldn't have lasted, Mother. Len Calloway's confession brought out the whole story of how Roddy'd helped her. Walter Gerard had better not set his foot in the village or he'll be tarred and feathered."

"Here we are at your door, Miss Prudence."

Prudence lingered outside the red brick house. Moonlight silvered the dormers. How low the stars seemed! They were like gold dust spangling indigo velvet.

David was standing before the fire, an arm on the evergreen-banked mantel, when she entered the living room. He smiled as he met her eyes. Thank heaven, he could smile.

"I'll call this a day," he said. "It is so long since I have stepped out on an evening festivity that I am tired."

"Oh, I thought we would talk it over before the fire, David. That's half the fun of a party." She slipped her hand under his arm and laid her cheek against his sleeve. "Of course you are tired, dear. Go to bed. I will lock up."

"I want to be full of pep tomorrow. Gerard is having a big tree for the crew at the bank-house, sort of a house warming." His arm tightened about her shoulders. "No matter how dark and problem-logged the path, Prue, you bring life and gaiety and courage in your train."

"Why, Dave! Dave!"

Prudence hid her quivering lips against his shoulder. His praise brought her heart to her throat. He laid his hand tenderly on her ruddy hair.

"Didn't expect your staid old brother to go sentimental, did you?" He laughed. "Well, that's my story and I stick to it. You're stunning in that frock, Prue. Good-night, beloved."

"Good-night, good-night, beloved," she hummed in a husky undertone as she watched him cross the room.

She started to bank the fire, threw on a log instead. She was wide awake, she couldn't sleep if she went to bed. She curled up in the wing chair. Why hadn't Rodney said good-night? Perhaps just as she had discovered that she adored him, he didn't like her any more. Why should he? She had been bitter and hateful. Now that love for him had slipped into her heart, and taken absolute possession, it had given life a new value, given her a new insight into her own needs and shortcomings.

A vine outside tapped icy fingers against a window. A shutter rattled eerily. The fire purred. Her thoughts raced on and on. The banjo clock wheezed and ponderously struck the hour.

Prudence counted. Midnight. How still the world was! What would old Santa say if he caught her sitting up for him? Silly, what a kid she was! Perhaps that was the reason Rodney didn't like her any more—Some-one was watching her! Who had come in? She glanced furtively at the long mirror. Her heart stopped. Rodney!

He didn't move. Was he real? Her fascinated eyes clung to his in the mirror. How he had changed since the day she had plunged into his arms in the barn! Determination and the will to grapple obstacles had remodeled his mouth; where it had been sensitive and mobile, it now set in a grim line. She had thought it too boyish. Now its sternness was like a knife in her heart; she didn't want life to hurt him, she couldn't bear it. Was she partly responsible? What would his mother think of the change if she knew? He moved, and the spell was broken.

"Merry Christmas, Prue of Prosperity farm!"

She stood up and caught at the back of the wing chair. The guarded ardor of his eyes took her breath; his mouth was no longer stern, it was young again.

"Merry Christmas, Rodney."

"Don't look at the clock. This isn't late for the night before Christmas. Had to get the collar for the kitten. I've left him in a basket in the hall. Planned to put him in Jean's stocking in the morning. Dave okayed my coming."

Was that why her brother had been too tired to stay downstairs? The light in the eyes watching her seemed to get in the way of her breath. She proposed eagerly:

"Come into the shop. The collar is ready. I—I—thought perhaps you had forgotten it."

"Oh, yes?" he responded enigmatically, and followed her with the rustling basket in his hand. Prudence picked up the collar from the bench.

"Take the kitten out and hold him tight while I put it on. There! Do you like it?"

"It's great!" With the squirming kitten clutched in one arm, Rodney seized her hand and held it against his lips.

"Darling, did you think I would go through this night without a show-down with you? I kept away after that dance. I didn't dare trust myself. Why did you tell me you were engaged to Jim Armstrong? Why—"

The kitten squirmed and clawed and jumped. He sprang to the back of a chair. Contracted to a black ball. With a bound landed on the high top of the bookcase. His green eyes turned ruby red as he peered over the edge. The man and girl stared back at him.

"Darn! Stop laughing, Rodney Gerard, you'll waken Dave and bring Jane Mack down on the double-quick for another burglar," Prudence warned in a hoarse whisper.

"Get that came in the corner and poke the kitten down. The black imp! Perhaps you can reach him if you stand on something."

Gerard balanced precariously on the arm of a chair and poked vigorously. At each thrust the quarry retreated. At the imminent risk of breaking his neck—if not the kitten's—Gerard lunged with the cane.

"What the dickens is going on here?" David Schuyler demanded from the threshold, as he knotted the cord of his broadcled dressing gown. Jane Mack, still in her glittering black frock, peered over his shoulder. Gerard jumped to the floor.

"That snooty kitten walked out on us."

"Oh, was that it? Macky and I thought you had corralled her burglar at last."

Jane Mack twisted garbled hands. "I was the real burglar, Prue," said Rodney. "I had asked Miss Mack to get the emerald and diamonds for me because—"

Jane Mack eagerly interrupted him. "Mr. Rodney didn't want you to know he had them. I sneaked 'em from the safe that morning you caught us three coming out of this room. Mr. David knew about it. Every time you took out those packages I nearly lost my mind for fear you would miss the emerald. Finally I couldn't stand the strain any longer, so I just worked up that yell and burglar story, to account for them not being there."

David Schuyler slipped his hand under Jane Mack's arm. "Come on, they don't need us, Macky. Gerard is the only one who can explain." He looked back and smiled as he crossed the threshold. Prudence waited till the voices on the stairs were still, before she asked:

"Why did you want those stones?"

Rodney Gerard held out his hand. On the palm glittered a ring.

"Grandmother's emerald! Set in my design! What marvelous baguettes! Why did you do it?"

"Is it splashy enough? You said you wanted the stones set, didn't you, —Gorgeous? I would like all my life to give you what you want. You know I love you, don't you? You know that I've been mad about you from the moment I held you in my arms in the barn. Why did you tell me you were engaged to Jim?"

He dropped the ring to the bench and caught her shoulders. "Don't turn away. We'll fight it out if I stay here all night. Answer my question."

"I didn't want to love you."

"Why—because of Milly Gooch? Calloway told me that he had poisoned your mind against me. There was not a shred of truth—"

"Please—please don't tell me that. I know it. In my heart I have always known it."

The whiteness of his face frightened her. His ardent eyes confused her. She touched the ring.

"Now that the emerald is set, what are you going to do with it?"

Color rushed back into his face, youth and gaiety and laughter to his lips.

"Watch me, Gorgeous, just watch me while I make my wish come true!"

He caught her left hand and slipped the ring on the third finger.

"All right with you? This means marriage, you know—for always."

"For always," she whispered.

He looked at her without speaking. His eyes seemed to draw her heart from her breast. She pressed her cheek against the gardenia on his coat, and challenged with unsteady gaiety: "Something tells me that you are letting that silly promise—"

He crushed her so close in his arms that she had barely breath left to add: "Don't you usually kiss a lady when you ask her to marry you? Perhaps, though, it isn't being done—perhaps—Rod!"

The quickly smothered cry, half laugh, half sob, roused the dozing kitten. He peered over the top of the bookcase. Yawned, sneezed, mewed ingratiatingly. As neither girl nor man looked up, he jumped to the high back of a chair. Always with watchful green eyes on the two humans by the bench, the amber pendant on the silver collar glowing, he proceeded to remove the dust from his sleek black paws.

[THE END.]

First Butter-Makers
Butter is one of the boons bestowed by accident upon the world. The story goes that, long ago, Arabs used to carry sour milk in leather bags with them on their journeyings across the desert. They traveled by camel, and the movement of this beast is worse than that of many ships. The result was that the milk was converted into butter, which was first used as a lotion for the skin. When the demand grew, the bags of milk were tied to swift horses which were made to gallop about for some hours. Finally came the first churn, and butter-making became an industry.—THE BITS Magazine.

The Word "Itasca"
Itasca is a coined word, invented from the two Latin words veritas and caput. The inventor took the last four letters of veritas and the first two of caput, making Itasca. Veritas caput means true head. Lake Itasca was considered the true head or source of the Mississippi river.

Tale of the Poisoned Dagger

THIRTY years ago a number of men and women were murdered in the suburbs near Shanghai.

It was discovered that most of the victims had been killed by means of a poisoned dagger.

At the same time chapels and churches belonging to the foreign missionary societies were destroyed.

Demands for satisfaction came from state departments in all parts of the world, and as a consequence the Chinese government endeavored to ascertain the culprits and to punish them.

The official placed in charge of the investigation was Foo Wang, who at the time enjoyed the reputation of being the Sherlock Holmes of China.

He was patient, he was resourceful, and he never went after "his man" without getting him.

One of the things he found near the scene of the crimes was a bit of calico stamped with a number of Chinese characters.

He knew that it was a certificate of membership in a famous secret society known as the Ko Lao Hui.

This society was originally formed to battle with Chinese officials who practiced extortion upon the natives—and they were as numerous as the autumn leaves in Vallambrosia—but later its objects became anti-foreign and anti-missionary.

Foo Wang went to his home and got out his great pipe and sat down and thought.

And he finally came to the conclusion that the particular bit of calico that he had picked up belonged to Chen-kin-Lung, who was one of the most conspicuous of the Ko Lao Hui leaders.

China is a pretty big place, but Foo Wang had plenty of assistants to rely upon, and he sent them to the four corners of the Celestial empire with instructions to locate the supposed leader.

Eventually he discovered that the man he wanted was at an inn near Peking, and that with him were about twenty of his followers.

Foo Wang decided that it was about time for a round-up and that gathered his men together for that purpose.

He found the leader in one of the rooms of the place giving an entertainment to his supporters.

The Chinese detective was nothing if not original.

He posted himself upon the veranda of the inn and then sent one of his men in to tell Chen-kin-Lung that he was wanted outside on important business.

The unsuspecting leader excused himself to his friends with true celestial gravity and stepped out on the veranda.

As he did so a great bag was thrown over his head, two men seized him and he was carried, kicking and gesticulating, to a nearby wharf and placed on a vessel.

There, bound and gagged, he was taken in the direction of Shanghai.

Just before the boat reached its destination the detectives brought the suspect into the cabin and put him through the third degree—which means something in China.

But while Chen-kin-Lung might have been down he was far from being out. He smiled his inscrutable smile—and said nothing.

They literally put the screws upon him but failed to elicit the slightest information.

His clothing and effects were now brought to the detective and given a careful examination.

In the flowing sleeves of one of his kimonos was found a dagger with a poisoned blade.

It had the appearance of being the weapon with which the Shanghai murders had been committed.

Also the investigators found a number of letters and communications addressed to the prisoner.

In each of them he was addressed as the "Eighth Great Prince."

This was proof positive that he was at the head of the secret society and that he undoubtedly aimed at securing the control of the country.

Among the other things found were a number of the calico certificates indicating membership in the Ko Lao Hui.

Koo Wang now had more than enough evidence to send his distinguished prisoner to the block.

But he wanted to get the names of others and be besought the prisoner to make a clean breast of the whole conspiracy.

But Chen-kin-Lung was a wise Chinaman and he knew that he was sure to be beheaded.

So he remained silent. He was returned to the hold of the vessel and the next morning to make a complete revelation of his mysterious society.

But the next morning he was gone—mysteriously—and nothing was ever heard of him afterward.

A Lady Short

WNU Service.

THEY both behaved splendidly. Nobody in the room could guess that the introduction was not that of two strangers.

He wondered as he drank his soup what could have brought her to this house; what she could possibly have in common with fat, vulgar Mrs. Bowman, their hostess. He eyed her askance, and thought of the first time they had been sent in to dinner together, fifteen months before. Then she had been friendly; now she scorned him. Well, he would scorn her too. He would show her how little he cared.

"I heard someone say this morning that you were engaged," he said, turning to her. "May I congratulate you?"

She shot him a hostile glance. "It is not true. Once is enough—" She broke off; then continued frigidly. "My fortunate escape from what would undoubtedly have been an unhappy marriage naturally prejudices me against matrimony."

There was a silence. Finally he said reproachfully: "You haven't asked after Aunt Laura."

"How is Miss Glendon?"

"Very well, thank you. She's never had another attack since that one. Strange, isn't it? If she hadn't been ill we wouldn't have quarreled, and we'd have been married by now. . . ."

Aunt Laura lived alone on her beautiful place in Maine in close proximity to some splendid trout fishing and a good golf course. When she heard of the engagement she wrote and asked them down for a visit. They jumped at it. They meant to fish in the morning, play golf in the afternoon, and take long moonlight rides in the evening. But nothing happened as they had expected. It was raining when they arrived, and Aunt Laura, complaining of a chill, went to bed.

But the rain, the confinement, and the prolonged tete-a-tete got on their nerves. What led to the explosion neither could say now, but the engagement terminated at precisely thirty-three. Shortly afterward he had been sent abroad by his firm, had now just returned, and had never seen nor heard of her till Mrs. Bowman introduced them before dinner.

"Perhaps," she said presently, "I ought to congratulate you."

"It would be premature," he confessed. "Though I must admit an announcement is not far off."

"How nice!"

The conversation lapsed again. He studied her.

Their eyes met. He said hastily. "Have you dined here before?"

"No."

"How did Mrs. Bowman manage to rope you in?"

A faint blush dyed her cheeks. "If it comes to that, how did Mr. Bowman rope you in?"

"He's one of our best clients. But I had no idea"—his voice dropped to a whisper—"I would meet a gang like this. I repeat—how did Mrs. Bowman ever get you to come?"

"I happened to, have no other engagement."

"Well, of course, it's none of my business. Let's change the subject. How's your austere guardian, Mr. Hopkins?"

She flushed. "He is abroad," she said, turning slightly away from him.

For a moment neither of them spoke. Then,

"Do you know," he said suddenly, "that your Mr. Hopkins had a lot to do with our engagement on the rocks?"

She was genuinely surprised. "How could he?"

"You remember I saw him the day before we went to Aunt Laura's? Well, he implied that I was after your money. That was really what started it. I began the visit in a bad temper. . . ."

But she had risen. He watched her go out with the other woman—a swan among a brood of waddling geese. And again he wondered what she could be doing in that house. He moved toward Mr. Bowman.

"Mr. Bowman," he began, "the girl I took in—Miss Dodd—"

"Say, I'm sorry about that," Mr. Bowman interrupted. "It's the wife's fault. She got you mixed up with Mr. Goetz and gave him your lady, Miss Miller. Then we were a lady short, so she called in Miss Dodd, our governess."

"Governess! Miss Dodd? Why I used to know Miss Dodd very well. An heiress—"

"Not any more. From what I heard her guardian gambled most of her money away, then skipped to Europe. Left her without a dime."

In the living room she was sitting apart. He went straight up to her.

"I've heard," he added. "I mean about Hopkins. Why didn't you tell me?"

She looked up in surprise. "You didn't know. . . .? But I see now you didn't—" She stopped, her lips quivering. Gently, he led her out on the terrace.

"Don't pity me!" she cried suddenly, sharply. "I don't want your pity. I wish I hadn't come out here. Why did you bring me?"

"I wanted to apologize for my attitude," he told her. "I was lying at dinner when I pretended I didn't care. And, of course, it's all nonsense about Miss Tobin. I want you to give me another chance, Ellen."

For an instant she stood still, while he searched her eyes for an ancient sign. He found it. Then he took her in his arms.

More About Origin of "O. K."

Ohio Writer Admits That His Great State Has Been Wrongly Credited With Giving Birth to This Most Popular Americanism.

Sad but true, out tumbles the bottom from one of the most romantic stories in our whole Ohioana.

For contrary to state-wide belief, the Whig rally in Urbana in the campaign of 1840 was not the occasion for the origin of O. K., probably our most popular Americanism. And as a result of evidence disproving this version, its origin is as definitely unknown and as open to speculation as ever, H. J. Carr writes, in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A unique expression, employed by every one from college presidents to illiterates (President Wilson used it on official documents) and understood the world over as denoting agreement or approval of something, O. K. has been traced back by authorities to various sources.

While the New Standard dictionary says it is the result of the misreading of O. R., "ordered recorded," Webster's New International tells us it probably comes from the Choctaw okeh. "It is so and not otherwise."

According to another version, it is a hangover from Gen. Andrew Jackson's use of these letters to indorse official papers as correct (Orl Correct)—which, as a stab at his illiteracy, was employed as a party cry in the campaign of 1832.

Moreover, while some attribute it to Josh Billings and fellow humorists, others contend that Jacob Astor voiced it to indicate the standing of traders about whom he was questioned. Another speculation attributes its origin to Old Keokuk, an Indian chief who is said to have signed treaties with the initials O. K.

In Colonial days the best tobacco and rum were imported from Aux Cayes, and from this fact Aux Cayes (pronounced O K), became a popular expression for excellence. Etc-era, etcetera—in fact, this expression that you say every day has been traced back to almost everything except as an incident in the fall of the Roman empire.

But the most popularly accepted version, because of its probability, has been the Urbana Whig rally of September 15, 1840, in which Ohio's Gen. W. H. Harrison was making a bid for the Presidency. The success of a political meeting in those days was judged by the attendance, the number of wagons drawn by the most horses, the number and bigness of banners and the catchy slogans painted on them.

For this tumultuous gathering, at which General Harrison spoke for two hours, twelve tables were set, each 200 feet long, from which the thousands and thousands of persons were stuffed with barbecued oxen, sheep, deer and other mammalia, and of course honest-to-goodness hard cider, which was as necessary then as nickel cigars are now.

One enthusiastic Whig farmer, to make an ostentatious impression in the parade, rigged up a large wagon drawn by many horses with a platform to accommodate his neighbors. On a banner suspended over the platform was crudely painted the inscription: The People Is Oil Korrekt.

Seizing upon the misspelling, Democratic papers exhibited it as evidence of the ignorance of the supporters of Harrison. Orators carried around handbills bearing the slogan and threw them out to the shouting hearers. Samuel Medary, famous for his zeal in attacking the Whigs in his paper, the Statesman, enjoyed himself devoting his columns to the farmer's illiteracy, which was supposed to be typical of everyone favoring Harrison.

This mounting ridicule, getting under their skin, continued to baffle all faithful Whigs—that is, all except one. He was Daniel Leffel, a typical tavern proprietor of the time, who thought it best to ward off the derision by making the most of the mistake. So he painted O K in large capital letters over the front door of his tavern in Springfield to convey the impression that his tavern was "Oil Korrekt."

The "O. K." inn, as it was on the national highway, which led to the great West, was visited by numerous travelers; and this strange combination of letters lingered in their memory, especially since the hospitality, food and spirits were as "Oil Korrekt" as advertised. And so these travelers began to jocularly recommend things as O. K.

Leffel's tavern was spared until 1901, when it was torn down to make room for the Ohio State Masonic home, into whose ownership the property had passed. The originally inscribed O K remained above the door for about 60 years until the bricks upon which it was painted were removed and scattered by the wrecking crew.

That the farmer of Champaign county displayed a banner bearing Oil Korrekt and that these letters were painted on this wayside inn in Springfield are unquestionable facts.

But that the expression had its origin in this meeting is untrue, for the reason that Samuel Medary, who was supposed to have started the ball rolling in print, had used the expression in his paper several days before the rally took place.

Gentle Correction

Whistler, the famous artist, was noted for his bluntness of speech. At an exhibition a critic once said to him: "Your picture is not up to the mark; it is not good this time."
 "You should not say it isn't good," quietly replied Whistler; "you should say you don't like it; and then, you know, you're perfectly safe."

Almost No Limit to Entre Dishes

Many Substantial Enough to Be Served as Chief on Menu Bill.

The French word entre has become almost Americanized from its constant use on formal menus, and on hotel bills of fare. It signifies side dishes that belong to a hearty group. They are not main dishes, such as roasts, joints, etc., but comprise such dishes as chicken a la king, broiled mushrooms, croquettes, scalloped sweetbreads and other escalloped dishes of meat, fish, fowl, vegetables, etc. In fact, many entrees are substantial enough for main dishes, although they would not be listed as such on menus. However, at hotels, clubs, etc., they are served on a la carte orders at patrons' wishes, instead of the heavier meats, fish, fowl, and bird orders. In the United States entrees include an amazing assortment of foods, even broiled lamb chops, and veal cutlets.

However, it is the preparation of the foods which relegates them to the entre class, almost as much as the foods themselves. Sauces are of great importance, and fancy preparations of dishes. An unusual and yet a simple entre is sauted flet of fish with cabbage tartare.

Sole, flounder, or any filets, or even slices of fish such as halibut, salmon or cod, are lightly fried in a little butter or bacon fat. These are arranged around the outside of the platter or serving dish, which has in the center the cabbage tartare.

This is made by scooping out the heart of a young cabbage, chopping the heart fine, mixing it with tartare sauce and returning the cabbage preparation to the cabbage shell. This container is cut even around the top, making it closely resemble a delicate green bowl.

The foundation for tartare sauce is mayonnaise. To 1 cupful is added 2 tablespoonfuls each of chopped olives and gherkins, 1 tablespoonful chopped sweet pepper, 1/4 teaspoonful chopped onion, 1 tablespoonful capers and 1 tablespoonful minced parsley.

A more delicate cabbage tartare is made by using 1/4 chopped celery to 3/4 chopped cabbage, and the other ingredients as given. Should the homemaker not have all the other ingredients, some may be omitted. For instance, olives, sweet pepper, or gherkins, any one of which can be left out, but there must be diversity enough to change the mayonnaise into a tartare. Zest is necessary. Lemon slices should dress the fish about the platter, and it is attractive to have radishes interspersed.

Spare the Spinach!

The main value of spinach lies in its good content of iron, its alkali-forming mineral, and its vitamins A, B, and C content. All these elements, however, are present in other vegetables. Naturally no two green vegetables are exactly alike in composition, but there is an advantage in this fact in that it provides release from monotony. Try serving some of the other green vegetables to your children and find out what they like; then you can gauge the amounts of these to provide exactly the same things for which you are using spinach.—Dr. Walter H. Eddy in Good Housekeeping.

"Wise" and "Smart"

Wise is defined as discerning and judging soundly concerning which is true or false, proper or improper; discreet; opposed to foolish. The word smart is more or less colloquially used to indicate cleverness or mental alertness, quickness in learning, shrewdness.

School Notes

High School
The following pupils have been placed on the honor roll for the month of December: Evelyn Bigelow, Vernon Davis, Isabelle Dease, Lucille DePotty, Floyd Frisch, Philip Giroux, Albertine Herman, Leonard Hoshack, Lela Howitson, Myrton Leslie, Marguerite McLean, Nelda Mueller, Mildred Quick, Ernest Ross, Emma Sawyer, Frieda Witzke, and Richard Ziehl.

The following pupils have neither been absent nor tardy during the first four months of school: Evelyn Bigelow, Patricia Braddock, Madeline Brugger, Wray Cox, Lucille DePotty, Laurie Frank, William Koepke, Evelyn Latham, Annie Metcalf, Robert Murray, Gordon Myles, Effie Prescott, Jean Robinson, Emma Sawyer, Ervin Shover, Harold Shover, Kenneth Smith, George Tuttle, Walter Wegner, Frieda Witzke, Richard Ziehl, and Walter Zollweg.

The eleventh grade led in percentage of attendance in the high school during the past month. It averaged 98.9%. The average percentage of attendance for the whole school for the month of December was 95.8.

Report cards were given to the pupils Friday of last week. If the card is not presented promptly to the parent for his signature, inquiry should be made.

The twelfth grade economics class is studying a supplement to its text which the author recently published. The supplement deals with the recent economic trends in the United States, and so discusses some of the most important economic phases ever existing in this country.

Mention was made last week that the Regents of the University of Michigan had recently made decided changes in regard to the entrance requirements of that institution. We note now also that the State Board of Education has made similar changes in the entrance requirements of the four state normal colleges of Michigan.

The total cash income each year to the public schools of Michigan for the past five years has been as follows: 1930-1931, $109,000,000; 1931-1932, $94,000,000; 1932-1933, $80,000,000; 1933-1934, $60,000,000; 1934-1935, $56,000,000. The table shows that the estimated income for the present year is about fifty-two per cent of that of the school year 1930-1931.

G. W. Brown and sons spent Thursday in Bay City.
Mr. and Mrs. R. Gingerich and children spent the week in Ohio.
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Grossmeyer and children, who have been visiting in Detroit over the holidays, returned home.

Music Notes
Piano classes are being organized this week. All students in the fourth grade and above are eligible for class enrollment. At present, there are twenty-six people who have signed up for the lessons.
The violin classes formed three months ago have the total enrollment of twenty-two students. It is hoped that early in the second semester they will be far enough advanced to form the nucleus of both a high school and grade orchestra.
The seventh and eighth grades have a new addition to the collection in their music books on which they have worked all year. It is an original song called "The Jolly Cowboy," with the words written by Myrtle Bowen and Allan Miller. We hope to collect enough songs written by members of this room to make a separate book.

Designating Labor Day
On June 28, 1934, President Cleveland approved a bill designating the first Monday of September in each year, the day celebrated and known as labor's holiday, a legal public holiday to all intents and purposes as Christmas, the first day of January, the 22nd day of February, the 30th day of May and the Fourth of July are now made by law public holidays."

Naming Wall Street
Wall street owes its name to Peter Stuyvesant, who in 1652 as governor of the little Dutch settlement of New Amsterdam ordered a parade built on the site to protect the town from invasion of the English. The last of the wall was removed in 1890 and both sides of the street were quickly built up.

STOP USING DRUGS FOR CONSTIPATION. EAT HONEY KRUSHED WHEAT BREAD

Doctors Warn Against the Use of Irritating Drugs. New Honey Krushed Wheat Bread Relieves Bowel Troubles in Nature's Own Way!

Your family doctor will tell you that the use of drugs, purges and strong cathartics often does serious harm instead of correcting constipation and bowel disorders. Most of them irritate the delicate membrane lining of the stomach and intestines and compel you to take more and more.

The new Honey Krushed Wheat Bread baked by Berdan Bread Co. relieves constipation in a natural way by supplying the diet with just the required amount of roughage to prevent clogged intestines. It also contains a liberal supply of pure honey which has a stimulating, gentle action upon the intestines.

Hundreds of local people have ended their bowel worries by eating the delicious new Honey Krushed

WILBER
The home of M. D. Harness, Hamlet, Ind., was the scene of a happy gathering when the children came to celebrate the 86th birthday of their father. Places were laid for eighteen. The table was centered with a large birthday cake. A delicious dinner was enjoyed by all. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Awall, Mr. and Mrs. Orval Harness of Waukegan, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Harness, Miss Esther Krumm of Bay City, Miss Minnie Grabow and George Grabow of East Tawas, Mr. and Mrs. Ora Harness and family of Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Tarnow, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Tarvis of Laporte, Ind. A number of friends and neighbors called in the afternoon to wish Mr. Harness many happy returns of the day.

LONG LAKE

Right of "Eminent Domain"
The "right of eminent domain" means that a state has the right to land for purposes necessary to the common welfare, a right exercised in such instances as when land is taken for a public road right-of-way, under conditions putting the interest of all the people above the interest of one landowner. The state cannot take, however, without paying. The right may also be extended to utilities and the private interests deemed to serve the common good.

When Idol Is Harmless
"I respect an idol as the temple door," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "who being never called upon to hear, see or speak, may at least be depended on to do no wrong. It is only when overthrown that he is likely to be found in the way."—Washington Star.

A Way to Happiness
A healthy body and a contented mind, combined with a clean record and a consciousness of having done justice to others, as well as oneself, go far to make up the sum of true happiness.—Kansas City Star.

EVERY time the fire gong rings, it not only announces a fire somewhere but it sounds a warning to those who have been so fortunate as to escape the devastation fire can cause. If you are wise, you will heed the warning and make sure that your fire insurance is safe, sound, and sufficient.
