ASA RODMAN RECALLS VIVID LUMBER DAYS

Silver Creek Mill Operator Engaged In Lumbering Here 50 Years

A very interesting story appeared in last Sunday's edition of the Bay City Times written from an interview with Asa Rodman of Wilber township. Mr. Rodman has been actively engaged in lumbering in Isosco county for the past 50 years and the mill on Silver Creek was constructed 49 years ago.

Mr. Rodman vividly recalled the past when towering pine covered northern Michigan and the whine of saws was music to men's ears. The following is an excerpt from the story:

The aged mill owner estimated that his mill has cut more than 5,000,000 feet of lumber during the half century that it has been in use. Although the mill has fallen in disrepair, and one water wheel lies idle, it could still turn out 20,000 shingles and 25,000 feet of lumber in a day's work if it was put in shape, Rodman asserted.

However, the timber has gone from Isosco county and where once towered the great pine forests are now only brush and plains lands, punctuated with farms and resort spots. But there the old mill stands, like a page ripped from the book of Michigan history, one of the few remaining landmarks of a once roaring industry. Contemptuous of the march of progress in the outside world, it still stands ready to go to work when the word is given.

Screened by high banks and heavy underbrush from a main traveled road, Rodman's mill is unseen by many who drive over the bridge which it helped to build. The bridge, less than 200 yards from the site of the mill, represents one of the last pieces of work turned out by Rodman in his mill.

The timbers for the bridge were ordered and cut during the fall of 1933. No lumber was cut at the mill during the past summer, but according to Rodman the mill is "always ready to run at any time."

But although time has treated harshly the stands of virgin pine that surrounded the mill in its infancy, it has been more kind to the man who built the mill. Asa Rodman forms a picturesque figure as he works around the saw mill in the summer, with a sparse gray beard covering the weatherbeaten lines of his face.

Rodman's agility is a source of wonder to strangers who learn his age.

"I'll be 83 the seventh of next August," he said. "I guess I'm getting rather old, at that. But when a man lives in the timber country all his life, like I have, the years don't set so heavy on his shoulders."

"I was head sawyer all over Michigan for nine years before coming here to build the mill—that is, running the band and circular saws. I've been sawing here for 49 years. We start the 50th season when the snow melts in the spring—that is, if we have any work to do."

Better Housing Notes

Arrangements have been made for banking facilities with the National Bank of Bay City to provide funds for those applying for loans under the Better Housing program. Arrangements are going on further for additional bank facilities, if necessary.

The various supply dealers and building tradesmen in the county are requested to immediately register with Eugene Bing of Tawas City, the chairman of the Building Industry committee in the Better Housing program. Registration may be either in person or by mail. The purpose of this registration is to give the Better Housing program committee a complete list of all building tradesmen and supply dealers in the county. This will enable the Better Housing program committee to cooperate with the building tradesmen and the supply dealers of this county in promoting the housing campaign. It is of great importance that the cooperation of the building tradesmen and supply dealers in the county be had with the Better Housing program committee. The communities of Oscoda, East Tawas, Tawas City and Whittemore and their vicinities are requested to cooperate in the Better Housing campaign in the county through their local community chairmen who are respectively: James W. Hull, Norman Merschel, Eugene Bing and Robert Dahne.

The semester examinations closed Tuesday, and the work of the second semester began Wednesday morning. Report cards, containing the marks obtained for the work of the first semester, will be given to the students Monday.

The State Association of Supervisors recently went on record asking that not less than $25,000,000 in addition to the primary school interest fund, be made available for distribution to the public schools.

The superintendent of public instruction reports that a total of 134 school districts in Michigan have already asked for funds which otherwise would not be received by them until next summer. L. H. Lamb, superintendent of the Flint schools, reports that it was necessary for its board of education to borrow $30,000 of local banks in order to have school through the entire month of January.

Third and Fourth Grades
The following people have been neither tardy nor absent during the first semester: Henry Brown, Lou Libka, Neil Libka, Harlan Fowler, Vernon Hill and Betty Nelson.

Several interesting reports were given in the fourth grade geography class about places of interest in our country.

We are glad to have the people who were sick back with us again. Billy Musolf is the only one on the sick list at present.

Miss Hoffa tested our eyes Tuesday afternoon.

Primary Room
We are glad that most of the first graders who were sick with colds last week are able to be at school again.

The following pupils deserve special mention for having been neither tardy nor absent during the first semester: Norma Jean Hill, Maurice Hayes, and Norman Koenke. Allen Brown has only one tardy mark to mar his record. Marion Bing has been absent only one half day during the semester.

EAST TAWAS CAGERS WIN TWO GAMES

West Branch, Oscoda Fall Before Indian Attack Last Week

Thirteen is a lucky number for the East Tawas Indians. They defeated West Branch, 13 to 4, and in their thirteenth game gained their third victory over Oscoda, while the second team score was 13 to 3 against Oscoda's seconds.

In the game at West Branch the Indians were in their finest form. The Branch team was allowed only one field goal, while the Tawas offense permitted eight points from the field.

The Tribe played an entirely different game against Oscoda. It was knock-em-down, tear-'em-apart basketball from the opening whistle to the end of the game. Twenty-four fouls were called during the game, of which some old fans say was the "best and the worst game ever played between the two towns."

In West Branch the crowd was silent and the team was entirely at ease on the floor. One man was put out of the game on fouls.

In Tawas the crowd was shouting, coaching, boing all through the game while both teams were ready to fight at the slightest provocation. Two men were put out on fouls, and one man left the game too disgusted with his teammates to continue playing.

The second team, in preliminaries to both games, tied two more knots in their victory string. Just managing to eke out a two point margin in West Branch, they had an easy time with Oscoda, winning by ten points. In the third quarter, Connell of Oscoda got the ball under his own basket, dribbled it the length of the floor, and not heeding the shouts of his teammates, scored two points for Tawas.

The East Tawas girls dropped another game to Alabaster Friday night. The score, 24 to 11, does not show the advantage shared by either team.

The Indians meet Sterling tonight (Friday) at the Community Building. The down-state school has developed a strong team and will give the Tribe a real battle.

Fire Destroys Residence Of Mayor W. A. Evans

The residence of Mayor W. A. Evans of East Tawas was destroyed by fire early last Saturday morning. The family was awakened at about two o'clock and had hardly time to get out of the burning building. The contents with the exception of two or three pieces of furniture were burned.

The fire alarm siren was frozen at the city hall, which delayed the arrival of the East Tawas fire department. The Tawas City fire department was called to the scene to help extinguish the flames and protect nearby buildings. The Methodist parsonage was in particular danger.

No Primary Election Will Be Held In Isosco County

1934 A Year Of High Fire Hazard On Huron

The sustained drought and low humidity encountered last year developed a condition of fire hazard perhaps not equalled since the creation of the Huron National Forest in 1909, according to Paul D. Kelleter, forest supervisor.

This year's total of 75 fires was the largest number occurring in any one year, but the burned over area was relatively small, amounting to only 946 acres.

The excellent record of corralling fires while still small was due in a large part to the alertness of the fire fighting organization and to the C.C.C. enrollees who furnished most of the labor for fire suppression.

As usual, smokers were responsible for almost half of the fires that occurred. A detailed study of fires on the Tawas district showed that most fires are started by smokers after leaving main roads and highways to travel through the woods. A large portion of fires originate near small creeks and rivers, indicating that fishermen will have to be more careful if they wish to preserve the trout streams for future use.

Two East Tawas Boys Build Novel Ice Sled

A large number of townfolk were attracted to the bay at the East Tawas State Park last Sunday afternoon to see the ice sled designed and constructed by Sandy Coggan and Harold Staudacher. The boys mounted a Chevrolet 4-90 motor on a rugged frame over the cross-beam, attached a seven foot propeller to the crankshaft, and completed the sled by building a streamlined cockpit over the main beam. On good ice it is expected the sled will be able to attain a speed of sixty miles per hour.

"Forsaking All Others" Is Grand Entertainment

The breath-taking combination of Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Robert Montgomery acting together in the same film for the first time makes "Forsaking All Others," new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer special which plays Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, February 3-4-5, at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, one of the hit productions of the year.

The triumvirate of Crawford-Gable-Montgomery is perfectly cast in the new comedy which has been adapted from the stage hit of the same name without loss of a single bright line of dialogue.

As a light comedienne, left standing at the altar one minute and pursued by two handsome men the next, Joan Crawford is at her best. This is the first time Joan has attempted new comedy and she turns in a brilliant job.

Gable and Montgomery are both well known as masters of light comedy and they vie to outdo one another with the many hilarious situations of the story.

The supporting cast includes Billie Burke, looking as beautiful as ever, Charles Butterworth is at his most awkward best as Gable's friend.

President's Four Billion Dollar Relief Program Jammed Through House After Bitter Fight—Hauptmann Takes Stand in Own Defense.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

ADMINISTRATION forces using steam roller tactics crushed all opposition to jam the President's $4,800,000,000 relief program through the house. Efforts to fight the grant of such unprecedented authority to the President were unavailing as the White House cracked the whip over revolting representatives. Final vote on the measure was 328 to 78.

The vote climaxed a furious eight-hour debate on the measure. Members attempted to attach amendments which would protect private industry from government projects which might be launched under the relief plan. When this failed they endeavored to allocate the money for specific purposes.

When the debate had reached its height, the President sent a message to the house declaring it would be impossible to segregate items for which the money would be expended, but that the huge outlay of sums would be devoted to public projects and that after the immediate crisis of unemployment had passed it was his hope that the country could set aside $500,000,000 a year for the "national plan."

The White House message was the signal for the Democratic majority to push the message across with little change from its original form. On the final vote 26 Republicans voted for the bill. Seven Progressives and three Farmer-Laborites also registered affirmative votes. Ten Democrats, five from Georgia, three from Virginia, and two from Indiana, voted with the opposition.

Because of the gag rule adopted by the house, only amendments offered by the appropriations committee could be considered in vital sections of the measure. Such minor amendments as were decided upon went through without serious opposition.

One of the amendments striking out a list of projects that might be included in spending the $4,000,000,000 and left the vast sum to be used for "federal or nonfederal projects" actually broadened the powers of the President. The $800,000,000 will be used at the President's discretion for relief purposes while the program is being put into effect.

Another amendment struck out a subsection which gave the President authority to postpone the end of any existing government agency. This was a move to satisfy certain Democrats who were opposed to Secretary Ickes, and his PWA program which expires in June. Another clause granting authority to the President to acquire personal property by the power of eminent domain was also removed, as was the section granting the Chief Executive the power to impose two years' imprisonment on any violator. The only other amendment which succeeded in passage was one which provided that an accounting be made for all moneys spent.

Minority Leader Snell attacked the bill declaring that the money involved amounted to one-eighth of the national income, and that the house was entitled to know what the money was for. Later in conceding the minority's defeat he said that if the opposition was free to speak its mind, the bill would be defeated two to one, but that under the executive lash, there was no chance of defeating it.

NEW DEALERS sighed with relief as the Supreme court recessed until February 4 without handing down its decision in the gold cases, thus giving the administration more time in which to prepare legislation designed to handle the situation in the event the court renders an adverse decision.

At the same time the court promised to decide a case presenting a clear-cut test of the constitutionality of the national recovery act, and which will probably have considerable effect upon the ultimate fate of the already bedraggled Blue Eagle.

LEGISLATION which would permit the small investor to buy government securities and which provides for radical changes in government financing has been introduced in the house by Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee.

The bill, prepared by the Treasury department, places the administration squarely against inflation. It provides authority to raise money necessary for the public works, social security and similar measures, meet federal deficits, and might even be used to provide funds for payment of the soldiers' bonus.

Under provisions of the measure there would be ten-year bonds in amounts as small as $25, and as explained by the Treasury department, would be sold below par. There would be no interest, but each six months the bonds would appreciate in value at the rate of 2 1/2 per cent, plus compounded earnings.

Huge sums are involved: first, the creation of a revolving bond authorization fund of $2,500,000,000; and second, the consolidation of the two present revolving funds of $10,000,000,000 each into a joint $20,000,000,000 fund for bills, certificates and notes.

A NEW lease of life for the Reconstruction Finance corporation was seen as a result of a favorable vote by the senate banking committee, after hearing Jesse Jones RFC chairman, and Commissioner Charles D. Mahaffie of the interstate commerce commission.

The proposed bill permits the RFC to buy railroad obligations in reorganization proceedings with the approval of the ICC; to buy stock in mortgage loan companies and similar financial institutions; to purchase the assets of closed banks under certain conditions; to increase authorized investments in preferred stock and capital notes of insurance companies, and to continue the Commodity Credit corporation and the Export-Import bank.

WHITE-FACED, under the glare of the courtroom lights, but apparently cool, Bruno Richard Hauptmann took the stand to begin his fight for life. The little Flemington (N. J.) courthouse was packed as the man accused of the murder of the first-born son of Charles A. Lindbergh began his testimony which he appears confident will save him from the electric chair.

Calmly, he told of his early life, of his war service, and admitted that he had once been convicted in Germany. His thick, guttural voice resounded through the room as he recounted how he had made three attempts to enter this country before he was successful.

Under the smooth questioning of Chief Defense Counsel Reilly he related the details of his life up until the time of the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, and then proposed the alibi upon which he is apparently relying for acquittal.

Hauptmann declared that on the night of April 2, 1932, when $50,000 was paid to a man in St. Raymond's cemetery, New York, he, his wife and a man named Kloppenberg had been at home until about eleven o'clock and that he did not leave his home at all that evening. He also denied that he had been absent from work on the day the kidnaping took place.

Two witnesses introduced by the defense to establish Hauptmann's alibi were not entirely satisfactory. Christian Frederickson, Bronx baker, said Hauptmann's wife had been employed in his store as a waitress and counter girl and that the accused had called for her on the night of March 1. Upon cross-examination, however, he stated that he was not sure, but that it must have been so because it was Hauptmann's custom to call for his wife whenever she worked late.

Mrs. Frederickson also stated that Mrs. Hauptmann worked late on the night of March 1, but was unable to say whether Hauptmann had been at the bakery. She stated, however, that she had seen Isador Fisch, furrier friend of Hauptmann who died in Germany, on the eve of his sailing for Germany in November, 1932. She said Fisch displayed a large sum of money, but she was unable to say whether it was in greenbacks or gold certificates.

Throughout Hauptmann's testimony Colonel Lindbergh continued to stare at him. During the court session, Lindbergh reiterated his belief that Hauptmann's voice was the same as that of the mysterious "John" who had hoaxed him out of the ransom money nearly three years ago.

WAR flamed again in Manchukuo as Japanese troops struck suddenly at three points in Chahar province in northern China. Three fortified cities were shelled, and there were indications that the drive had only begun.

The Japanese attack came as a surprise since it was reported that negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the dispute over Chahar province had been nearing a successful conclusion. Japan had asserted that Chinese troops in Chahar had invaded Jehol.

Military authorities declined to announce the real objective of the drive. The district which the Japanese troops occupied is about 150 miles long by 50 miles wide, and is said to contain valuable gold mines.

Japan's action is seen by Chinese leaders as a determined gesture to intimidate Mongolian princes of Inner Mongolia and to cut the overland route connecting Peiping with Urga, capital of Soviet controlled Outer Mongolia.

The situation is viewed with considerable apprehension by Soviet Russia. The drive will bring Japanese military operations into direct contact with the borders of Outer Mongolia, and practically all high officials of the territory who have been attending the Soviet anniversary celebrations in Moscow have hurried back to their provinces.

JAPAN'S foreign minister, Koki Hirota, warned Soviet Russia that she should stop fortifying the Siberian frontier north of Manchukuo if friendly relations are to be continued between the two countries. His remarks, made in an address before the imperial diet, had special significance in view of reports that Japanese troops are invading Chahar province to prevent Sovietization of that region.

Russian fortifications in the Far East, particularly of the strategic crossings of the Amur river, are becoming increasingly irksome to the Japanese army in Manchukuo. Other projects to which Japan is objecting are double-tracking of the Trans-Siberian railway to Vladivostok and remodeling of the strong fortifications of that Pacific port.

Government officials in Washington were said to be favorably impressed with part of Hirota's address which referred to Japan's desire to avoid further expansion of armament. It is hoped that negotiations will be resumed soon for another agreement to replace the renounced Washington treaty which established the 5-5-3 ratio for the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

RECOMMENDATIONS that America's air defense facilities be greatly increased will be made by President Roosevelt in a special message soon to be sent to congress, it has been indicated by those close to the administration. Construction of a series of air bases for the United States, the addition of 4,000 planes to the service, and building a huge dirigible will be among the projects which the President approves.

The proposed construction is in accord with a report just made by the special aviation commission. It is the purpose of the commission to lease the dirigible to a commercial firm as a sister ship to the Graf Zeppelin which will start regular transatlantic service within a few weeks.

The series of bases along the Pacific and Atlantic coasts will make America impregnable to air attack, the commission believes, while the addition of 4,000 planes to the army and navy service will bring it up to far more than the existing fighting strength.

The commission has also recommended creation of a special five-man aviation commission to regulate civil aeronautics.

THE death toll continued to mount as reports seeped in from northwest Mississippi and southwest Tennessee where the turbulent Coldwater river was a raging torrent, threatening the lives and property of thousands in its march to the Tallahatchie basin.

Freezing weather added to the suffering of thousands driven from their homes. Workers toiled to rescue as many as possible of those who had been marooned on roof tops and in trees. A number of communities have been evacuated because it is feared the waters will continue to spread. Appeals for additional help in caring for the homeless have been made by public officials, and Red Cross aid has been rushed to the stricken areas.

POSSIBILITY of a move by the Italian government to make a protectorate out of Ethiopia was seen by European statesmen. Exploitation of the announcement of the slaying of a French Somaliland administrator and 96 French Somaliland employees and Somalis was said to indicate that a movement was on for Italy to take over the mountainous African kingdom to restore order. The consent of France and Great Britain to the plan has been obtained.

It was reported. A number of recent developments point toward some action by the Italian government. Premier Mussolini recently took over the office of minister of colonies; Gen. Emilio de Bono, former minister of colonies, was named high commissioner of Italian East Africa; military roads have been constructed through Italian Somaliland to the Ethiopian frontier; and the Italians have recently taken over a bigger share in the operation of the Djibouti and Addis Ababa railway.

Recent history affords a number of precedents for the Italian government to follow. Japanese intervention in Manchuria was "to restore order and reduce Chinese banditry," and Italy might use the excuse of reducing Ethiopian banditry as a reason for invasion. The British action in Egypt and the Sudan, and the French subjugation of Tunis also offer parallel cases.

EUROPEAN statesmen anxiously watched developments in the cantons of Eupen and Malmedy on the Belgian frontier as gendarmes re-enforcements were rushed to arrest Nazi agitators who have been advocating annexation of that territory with the German reich. Loyalists report a campaign of terrorism has been carried on against those who have refused to join an organization directed by the Brown Shirts. The Belgian government is expected to lodge a complaint with the League of Nations.

The cantons which were taken from Germany under the Versailles treaty have considerable commercial importance. Formerly a part of Rhenish Prussia, they have an area of about 400 square miles and a population in excess of 60,000 people. Eupen boasts spinning mills and other establishments connected with the textile industry, iron foundries, machine shops and tanneries.

HORNS THAT ARE REALLY NOT HORNS

"IF YOU are so fond of the cold, I don't see what you leave the Far North at all for," said Peter Rabbit to Snowflake the Snow Bunting.

"Because, Peter," replied Snowflake, twittering merrily, "like everybody else I have to eat in order to live. When you see me down here you may know that the snow up North is so deep that it has covered all the seeds. I hope I will not have to go any farther south than this, but if some morning you wake up and find the snow so deep that all the weeds are buried, don't expect to find me."

"That's what I'd call good, 'sound common sense," said another voice, and a bird very near Snowflake's size, and who at first glance seemed to be dressed almost wholly in soft chocolate brown, alighted on the snow and began to run around in search of seeds. It was Wanderer the Horned Lark. Peter had known him ever since his first winter, yet did not feel really acquainted, for Wanderer seldom stayed long enough for a real acquaintance.

Now, as Wanderer reached up to pick seeds from a weed top, Peter had a good look at him. The first thing he noticed was what looked like two little horns above and behind the eyes. It is from these that Wanderer gets the name of Horned Lark. Of course, they are not really horns at all, but little tufts of black feathers. His forehead, a line over each eye, and his throat were yellow. There was a black mark from each corner of his bill curving downward and almost joining a black crescent shaped band across the breast. Beneath this he was solid white with dusty spots showing here and there. His back was brown in places, having almost a pinkish tinge.

MORE EMPHASIS ON FACE

BECAUSE he shared responsibility for the emperor's party taking a wrong turn in their trip through a city which received a royal visit, a police inspector in Japan attempted to commit suicide.

Death was preferable to the disgrace that would descend upon the unfortunate blunderer and his family and all his relatives. For by his mistake this man had "lost face." And in Japan to lose face is a far worse thing than to lose material possessions.

In China, too, it is a not uncommon occurrence for people to take their own lives for reasons of far less importance than causing the car of the emperor to take a wrong turn. However, they are mistakes which cause the person to lose face—that is the important thing. To lose face is to lose dignity and the respect of others. And what then, say these sons of an ancient culture, is there left?

"A good bank account," would be the rejoinder of some American politicians—"and everything that will buy, which includes about all one wants."

It seems to me that the onus there is not alone on the man or woman who exemplifies that philosophy—as for instance a well known New York mayor who with honor and reputation besmirched still has a very good time on the surviving bank account—that the onus is on the viewpoint of the vast numbers of people who make possible that good time. For no one can enjoy life who is ostracized by his fellows. And in China and Japan would like very much to help you, so after years of research work I find the best place to keep a fly, if you do not want it disturbed at all, is in a Scotchman's pocketbook.

The House Awakes!

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE house awakes with Dickie, whose bare feet Come pattering across the sunny hall, And then the other children's voices fall Across the quiet rooms; and on our street A dozen houses, filled with children, rise And dust the sleep out of their drowsy eyes.

When off to school the happy children go, The house sinks in a sleep as deep as Death, And does not wake till the returning breath Of children make its staring windows glow. And down our street a dozen houses shout, And wake to happiness when school is out!

Jersey and Lace

a man or woman who had lost reputation, honor, dignity, would be ostracized, regardless of how much of the world's goods remained with them.

The western slogan that "money is power," and the penchant for winking an eye where an offender has that power, is important not only in such matters as discredited officials and the absconding rich. It is significant all the way down the line to the daily actions of average people. There is that emphasis on getting what one wants, without too much thought on how one gets it. In social as well as business matters, women are guilty of little tricks to attain their ends, so they undoubtedly "lose face," but they seem indifferent to this as long as their end is attained.

I am not promoting the idea of suicide for lost dignity. But I believe our standards of life would be very much improved by placing more value on what in the East is called "face" and less on getting the things we want.

Steamships Since 1784

Steamships practically date from 1784, although Fulton is credited with the first recognized navigation in 1807, or 23 years later. The actual inventor of the steamboat was John Fitch, who put a boat on the Delaware river,

Individual Gold Mining Offers Poor Prospects

The rush to the abandoned gold mines and placer workings of the West has been one of the tragedies of the present unemployment situation and thousands of inexperienced individuals, lured on by rumored and exaggerated reports of wealth attained in gold mining, have gone into the hills seeking gold and finding only disappointment.

Experienced miners, thrown out of work in the non-precious metal mines, have in some instances gone to work on their own, but these individuals have sought abandoned mines or have gone into the hills with pick and shovel to prospect. These men know what they are about and have some chance of success. They work in abandoned mines with the consent of the owners on a royalty or share and share basis.

The bureau of mines, wishing to remove as much of the false hope of the prospective miner as possible, has issued bulletins giving information on the subject of placer mining and pointing out the difficulties to be encountered. Ways of making a living by a combination of skill and hard work are outlined but the hopes of an Eldorado are painted in their true colors.

Honey Ants

The Ants Clinging to the Ceiling Are Filled With Honey.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.
THOUSANDS of tourists visit the Garden of the Gods in Colorado each year. They stand in awe before fiery-red pinnacles etched against the blue sky. They marvel at those fantastic rock formations—the gods of mythology, with their human shapes, some of their hats, most of their spears, and a few of their cathedral spires, towering about them in red sandstone. They are unaware of an ancient, dramatic "civilization" living under their feet.

Yet here, in the sandstone ridges, dwell creatures who might themselves have stepped from living myths—creatures with yellow heads and large, inflated, translucent bodies, who are, perhaps, the most self-sacrificing beings known.

In fairy tales boys and girls are fattened by witches, so that they may later be eaten with gusto. In this race, dwelling in darkness in the Garden of the Gods, children are fed enormously, so that a few may become overcapacious and hang in underground cellars for months, for years, as living casks of honey. This would be terrifying were these creatures human. Instead, they are honey ants.

Honey ants are unhuman and unlike any other insects in their translation of themselves into honey-pots. They gather a honey not unlike that of bees and store it in round, thin casks that let the beautiful amber of honey shine through. But the casks possess living trunks, living heads, living legs. They hang by living claws to the cellar roof, and open a living spigot when an imbibitor comes to drink. For this, children are fed to enormous size and chambered in eternal darkness.

Here and there, across the tufts of grama grass and wild sunflower heads, gleam little mounds of red sandstone and bright-colored quartz—craters cut into rock. The red, loose stones roll out on all sides to a diameter of about thirty inches, with each mound rising to three or four inches, pierced by a large central entrance hole.

Outside, all looks simple; but inside, a descending shaft runs vertically for a while before carrying off sharply to a long gallery and other shafts, forming galleries under galleries, all running in the same direction. Then, seldom far from the surface, usually up or down a few steps from a main gallery, single or in suites, are the wine cellars, the honey chambers, the forever-homes of the swollen members of the race.

Wonderful Honey Chambers.

The honey chambers where they hang are virtually death chambers, except that life flows from them freely. The severed casks of honey in the burial grounds form a nightmare thing, cask rolled beside cask. But beauty exists in the ants' refusal to touch a honey cask after its owner has died. The little crammed honey-pots stand idle and untouched, once they are rolled into the cemeteries.

Be an Alice in Wonderland in such a home, if you will. Come down that wide central stair, having ducked into the rabbit hole, passed sentinels at the gate, and given the essential salute. All is dusky dim; only that glimmering round of daylight above. You turn left down a long, narrow passage, which leads into deeper and deeper darkness; but the floor glints up with a firm polish—the floor deliberately made smooth, not merely worn smooth by the passing of innumerable feet. And the walls are smooth and straight, a sort of guide in the dark.

Little feet rustle by—ants laden with earth, excavating a new room far at the end of the passage. All that mound above was formed by similar excavations; each pebble, each shining bit of quartz, was carried along galleries up the main stairs and out.

"Um-m-m!" An ant licks her mandibles, giving off a vague sweet scent. Honey! Somewhere near is a honey cellar. The ant has paused in working to take a good stiff drink. A shaft descends darkly to the left; cautiously down, down, to a great vaulted, globe-lighted room.

The vaulted roof is clustered with enormous hanging lamps. No, not lamps; pale amber spheres, hanging about midway into the room, occupying half the cellar space. The globes glow with the light that lives in honey; their pale-gold color is the richness of honey; that scent rising from them is the warm flavor of honey. Each globe is a living jewel, nothing more nor less than the distended body of a living ant, filled almost to bursting with limpid honey, clutched to the roof by its claws.

They crowd the arched ceiling; stir restlessly; twist their yellow heads, squirm their shoulders, but do not loosen hold. Below them the clean walls polished to the level floor, which is swept, polished, made smooth. But the roof is gritty, purposely left rough, for the claws to maintain perch.

The roof arches half again the height of the walls; a cellar made deliberately for honey casks, to allow free passage beneath, space for keeping the honey cakes clean and the cellar free from mold.

An Ant Takes a Drink.

There are little soft sounds, as the great globes stir, shift an arm or foot, sway a little nearer to a neighbor. "Careful! Don't dare lean. You might break me!" And one turns a pointed yellow head toward another's. The globes are not all clear amber. Queer dark planes streak them. Their translucent part is inner skin stretched to balloon proportions, pushing apart the dark planes of the outer body, forming islands on a globe map of strange world seas.

Suddenly an ant enters to drink. She looks like these hanging ants, yellow-headed, yellow-waisted, but she wears no inflated balloon. Her antennae lift inquisitively. Already the forestate of honey is in her mouth. She stands almost erect, climbs to the hanging ant, leans to its little close mouth. "Open, please." Obediently its mouth opens. Up comes a clear drop of honey, pushed up by some inner movement, to hang a moment, glistening, on the cask's lower mandible, before dropping into the waiting ant's mouth.

She takes one, two, even three, drops. "Thank you; you may close." She climbs down, and the little spigot mouth closes. Before the ant leaves she daintily wipes her mouth against the back of her hand, smooths down her back hair, then trots off, groomed, well fed.

Another ant enters; another, another. Each climbs to a chosen sphere; says, "Open, please," with that leaning of mouth to mouth and the mouth opens and up comes the honey drop.

But suppose they enter to deposit honey rather than receive it. What then? Painfully, slowly this time, because so laden they are almost honey casks themselves, the ants climb to the hanging casks, place mouth to mouth. "Open, please," and, with antennae held back out of the way, let drops of honey form on their mandibles to enter the obedient casks.

This new honey is almost white in its freshness. As long as drops are there to fall in, the little spigot mouth holds open. Then the emptied ant, relieved, turns away; and the globe, clinging to the roof, gleams larger, more bulbous still, with the added content. It scarcely dares draw a full breath, move an arm, or shift a leg for fear this new weight and fullness will make it burst or fall.

Developed Into Honey Casks.

Poor little doomed creatures! What determined such a fate? When young, they resembled other ants. They had the same two stomachs—one private, the other for communal use. Much that entered their mouths they never tasted, for it passed at once to the communal crop, to be fed later to the queen (whose duties are like those of the queen bee); to males (resembling drones in a hive); to workers, or to baby ants. But some showed an enormous capacity for food. How they begged, their pale mouths open all the time! Now these are honey casks.

Late dusk in the Garden of the Gods. The sandstone gods are cold and dark. They have had their play of light all day, while the red mounds of the ants stayed quiet, with gates closed. Seemingly all inside were asleep; yet few ants slept, being busy, most of them, with underground tasks.

Now ants push out of that round tubular hold so fast they cover the mound. If this were daylight, no red rock would shine. Yellow ants are everywhere, by hundreds, by thousands. A ring of sentinels begins pacing the outer edges of the mound. Others guard the gate, their heads thrusting up, like soldiers with bayonets. Still others move about the narrow platform surrounding the gate, while one ant, then twenty, then a whole column of ants, move off over the ridge, preparing for a march. In the vales between the ridges, far, far away, low scrub oaks in the light of the moon, thrust up their dark thick leaves. The ants know these dwarf oaks.

Summit City projected to be the original site of Akron, Ohio, was hoped to be made by ambitious men the Lowell of the west in view of its water power. Even such an influential man as Horace Greeley sought to make this dream come true but it was all in vain. Its site is now within the present boundaries of Akron.

The Way of Providence
From an ancient book of sermons we glean that among the many proofs of the wisdom and benevolence of Providence is the fact that the world was not created in the midst of winter, when Adam and Eve could have found nothing to eat, but in harvest time, when there was fruit on every tree.

Currency Inflation
Currency inflation is disproportionate and relatively sharp and sudden increase in the quantity of money or credit or both, relative to the amount of exchange business, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News. Such increase may come as a result of unexpected addition to the supply of precious metals, or in times of business activity by expansion of credit through the banks. It may come in times of financial difficulty by government issues of paper money without adequate metallic reserve and without provision for conversion into standard metallic money on demand.

Revival of Railroad Purchases is Necessary to National Recovery

The railroads are not only sellers of transportation; they are billion-dollar buyers of equipment and supplies. In 1929, their purchases meant jobs for 2,000,000 workers.

Today the railroads are not buying. Their revenues have been so curtailed by unfair, unregulated competition that their buying power is sharply restricted.

The railroads want to buy. They will buy when and if their purchasing power is restored.

To increase railway purchases railway earnings must be increased.

Legislative fair play for the railways will mean railway recovery.

Railway recovery will mean increased railway buying and jobs, again, for millions.

Our State Legislature and National Congress, now convened, should eliminate the unfairness in the competition between the railways and other agencies of transportation.

The Man From Yonder

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the little lumbering town of Tincup accompanied by Don Stuart, old, very slick man, whom he has befriended. He signals his coming by defeating Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Nicholas Brandon the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence. He tries to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested.

"Are you guilty or not?" Able repeated and Ben Elliott who had stood at ease before him, slouch had in his great brown hands, now gave his head a grave twist.

"Well, if pitching a man off the sidewalk into the mud is called assault and battery in Tincup, then I'm about a hundred per cent guilty," he said.

A stir in the room followed that and Able frowned, a convincingly judicial frown.

"Guilty, eh?" He cleared his throat at length. "Now how about this disruption of the peace, anyhow?"

The sheriff spoke: "You see, Able, 'twas this way, Mr.—"

"Now just a minute, Art. This accused has pleaded guilty, as I understand it. I don't see any need of anybody else saying anything. He's thrown himself on the mercy of this court, you might say, and it's regular and proper and according to the spirit of the statute that I question him before passing sentence. Besides," he added, with a twinkle at Brandon, "I'm a little curious."

The sheriff sniffed and subsided. Clearly, there was little friendship between him and the justice.

"Now, Mr. . . . Able glanced at the complaint again. "Mr. Ben Elliott, how come that you go about the country tossing reputable citizens into the mud?"

"Why, he was trying to make a friend of mine do something he didn't want to do. That's all. I butted in, I guess; he got hard and so,"—shrug—"I lost my head for a minute and put him in his place."

"In the mud, you mean?" "Yeah. In the mud."

"Well, go on; go on. Go back to the beginning. I want to know all about this affair."

Elliott drew a long breath. "I started for Tincup several days ago. I was a long ways off, over in Minnesota. This morning I got down to the junction west of here and while I waited for my train got talking to this old timer, Don Stuart, who was in the station. Maybe you know him, Judge. Other folks here do." Able blinked twice; hard. "The old fellow is about all in, I'd say. He's got it into his head that he's about to die and probably his guess isn't such a bad one. Seems this used to be his stamping ground, that he's been away a long time and that he'd started back to finish his days here where he could see some old friends. He went broke on the way and was just sitting there this morning waiting for something to happen. I happened. I wasn't any too well healed myself, but I had enough for his ticket so I brought him along.

"As luck would have it, I got a chance to pick up a few dollars of Tincup money as soon as we got in and I had to have it, with the old timer on my hands. While I was busy getting this cash this man Brandon evidently saw my buddy and started rushing him back to the depot to take the next train back to where he came from. I didn't like that so well. I tried to talk him out of it but Mr. Brandon isn't a great talker. That's all. . . . Here I am!"

"Guilty as charged, eh?" Able fumbled with the papers. "What brought you such a long ways into Tincup, anyhow?"

"Because I'd heard Tincup was a tough nut to crack."

A stir in the crowd, then a sharp look from Brandon to Elliott.

"Oh. . . . Fond of nuts, are you?"

Able asked and the look in his eyes was much less severe. "So you'd heard about Tincup and started for it from a long ways off and . . . Now this matter of nuts: You like all kinds?"

"Not all nuts; no." The steel-gray eyes were a bit narrowed, now, as Elliott tried to plumb the old man's mood.

"Well, for instance: like peanuts?" "No. Can't stand 'em."

"Not at all? Almonds, then?" A twinkle was surely coming to life in the court's eyes but, seeing it, the defendant only frowned.

"Can't vote very strong for almonds."

"Or English walnuts or pecans?" "Never did hold them to be what you'd call irresistible, either."

"Hum-m. . . . How about black walnuts?"

"Now," declared Elliott with a nod, "now, you're getting into real classy nuts!"

Men in the crowd looked at one another, not knowing what to make of this.

"Well, if you like black walnuts, would you say they were your favorite?"

The other considered this question with great, if not wholly genuine, seriousness.

"No, not exactly. I'd put black walnuts high up in the list, all right, your honor, but since you're interested about my preferences in nuts, I'd say that the best nut that ever hung outdoors or offered itself for the cracking was a good old hickory nut."

"Real tough ones, eh?" "Real tough ones, yes."

Able wiped his face with a palm and wet his lips. The two looked long at one another and that spark passed which will jump from man to man, carried sometimes by a deed, often by a word, frequently by only a glance; that message which says as plainly as though inscribed in black characters against white background: "I like you; I am your friend!" It went from the old man to the young and back again from young to old. Nicholas Brandon understood and the lightnings in his dark eyes played more briskly, more ominously.

"And so you'd figure Tincup as a sort of hickory nut?"

"I had. Tincup has a reputation all through the Lake states. Wherever you go you'll hear it talked about as a hard camp. I'd heard so many times that a good man with ideas of his own, with independence and, maybe, with ambition had better keep away from here that I found myself hankering to get a look at the place."

"What's your line of work?" "I follow the timber. . . . Anything."

"Well, just what, for instance? What are some of the jobs you've held?" Elliott smiled a bit.

"Good many. I was a chore boy once; another time I was a road monkey. I've teamed and sawed, worked as millwright and on rivers. Once or twice I've run a camp or two."

"But your avocation, I take it, is looking for hard nuts?"

Brandon spoke now: "Your honor!" His voice was well modulated and yet in its quality was something which suggested iron covered with velvet. "As complaining witness in this case, may I suggest that we are beginning to waste time? This young man has pleaded guilty. Of course, I do not want to be put in the light of one who attempts to dictate to a court of law, but I have pressing matters to attend to and if we can get on. . . ."

Outwardly this was only a suggestion, a plea; really, though, it was one way of demanding, of giving an order.

"Yes, you're a busy man, Nick," Able said and nodded. "I'd sort of figured being busy here today, myself. Sort of wondered if somebody wouldn't bring in Bull Duval on a charge of assault and battery. He trimmed my man Harrington so badly that he's gone and my operation's without a boss today. I sort of thought, being interested as you are in law and order, that Duval might be brought in."

"That is something I know nothing about," Brandon said severely.

"Likely not. You can't be expected to keep as close track of the men who work for you as I do of mine. That is, it isn't reasonable to think a man of your caliber would."

He spoke drily and Elliott, watching the two, could see that his words stung Brandon. The justice straightened in his chair, however.

"But maybe we are delaying things. Now, Mr. Elliott, don't you think it a little out of the way to come into a town, a total stranger, and upset all that town's precedents? If you, instead of one of Mr. Brandon's hired men, had cleaned up on my man Harrington, for instance, it might not have been such a grave offense. But here you come and pick out the one man in Tincup who hasn't been struck or even threatened in longer than I can recall—a man who is regarded here about like most folks would regard a baron of the Middle Ages—and toss him out into the mud! Why, Elliott, that's not ever happened before!"

"Probably it didn't hurt Nick much, but there are his feelings to consider. Aren't you ashamed of giving people a chance to jeer at Mr. Brandon?"

Elliott looked at Brandon, then, deliberately, carefully, inspected him from his glossy black hair to his muddied breeches.

"It wasn't a very smart thing to do, I guess," he admitted. "It's not likely now, that I'll even get a chance to see how hard a nut this town really is."

"And no worse than you deserve!" Able said sharply. "You know better than to carry on that way, Elliott. I've got to give you a fine commensurate with your offense. I'll fine you a dollar and seventy-five cents for costs or send you to jail for a day."

In the rear a sacrilegious titter or two. From the sheriff, a grunt; from Nicholas Brandon a breath of offended dignity and a look that scorched. But on Ben Elliott's face only appeared a foolish smile.

"That's reasonable enough," he said, "but the joker is this: I haven't even got the dollar!"

"Well, our jail's real comfortable, I'm told. A day there'll let you think over the advisability of going around the country muddying up the pants of respected citizens!"

Elliott, though, faced even so short a jail sentence with anything but relish. "I can get the money easy enough," he said. "That is if you, your honor, or somebody else'll send a wire for me."

"That might be arranged. Where to?"

"Here—" He reached for a sheet of paper and pencil lying on the table. Swiftly he wrote the words: "Badger Forest Products company, Beech Ridge, Wisconsin." He handed it to Able. "Will you wire them for twenty-five dollars and sign my name? Send the message collect."

"That's a big outfit," the judge said. "You figure they'll do as you ask?"

"Well, they never have turned me down for anything I've asked. Of course, there's always the first time. If you'll do that . . ."

"Until that gets back, Sheriff, I suppose it's me for the brig. . . . Is that right, Judge?"

Able was studying the address and when he looked up and grunted an affirmative reply his gaze was far away. Far, far away.

For a considerable interval after his court room had emptied, Able Armitage sat motionless in his chair. His eye still held that far-away look, staring into space, and now and again he picked up the scrap of paper bearing the address young Elliott had written and scanned it closely.

"By cracky!" he said, an hour after being left alone. "By cracky—by jing! It might be, you know. . . . It may be, possibly, perhaps might be!"

Thereupon he rose, went to a wall telephone and put in a call for Nathan Bridger, general manager of the Badger Forest Products company, of Beech Ridge, Wisconsin.

After this he stood for a time in the front window, peering out into the street. A man came along the sidewalk, a man of about Able's years, bearing a limp and rusty bag which stamped him as a physician. He waved a hand to Able and then, as on sudden impulse, changed his course and approached the entry.

"Big day, Able,"—as the justice opened the door.

"Yeah. Big."

"Old Don's back."

"So I heard."

"Bad shape, too."

"I heard that. Real bad, Emory?"

Emory Sweet nodded gravely.

"Heart's like a sponge. He can't last long. . . . Nick was all for sending him back to Hemlock but I told him it would be murder to move him now."

"Oh, Nick showed up, did he?"

"Came right from here. Said he'd been providing for Don for these last years and wanted him with somebody or other in Hemlock who'd see he didn't get hold of hooch again. Was quite provoked when I opposed moving him."

"Nicholas doesn't like the notion of Don's being in this vicinity."

"It's about as popular with him as smallpox. When I'd prevailed on him to let Don alone I told him the truth: that he can't last more than a few weeks and Nick looked like a man who . . . well, like one who's heard good news."

Able nodded. "Safer for Brandon to have him in his grave. But when old Don goes, seems like the last chance of ever clearing the thing up's gone too."

"Looks that way. Unless he'll talk before he dies."

"Even so, it wouldn't amount to much. He's an old hum; he was a known drunkard at the time. It happened so long ago, and with the courts controlled by who they are . . ."

"All but yours."

"And mine without any jurisdiction in sure-enough trouble."

The doctor started out but halted in the doorway.

"Hear Harrington's gone."

"Yes. The Bull ran him out of town."

"Brandon?"

"Don't be simple, Emory. Who else?"

"He certainly can't forget the Hoot

Owl, can he? What are you going to do now, Able?"

The other shook his head gravely. "I wish I could give you an answer . . . or myself an answer. All forenoon I've had a feeling in that palm,"—extending his creased right hand, "as if the end of a rope were slipping through it."

"Tough," muttered the doctor as he went out.

An hour later Able Armitage left his office. He moved with great alacrity for one of his years and stopped only once and that was to draw Bird-Eye Blaine from the throng of onlookers that lined the sidewalk.

"Got your car in town, Bird-Eye?" he asked. "Have? Will it still run?"

"Run!"—as though insulted. "Say, Able, that car may not be so foxy lookin' as some, but she's got a heart av gold 'nd—"

"All right. Run her around by the jail, will you? Might need you; again,

"Well, our jail's real comfortable, I'm told. A day there'll let you think over the advisability of going around the country muddying up the pants of respected citizens!"

Where Sun Never Sets
Great Britain, France, and Holland are the only nations on whose dominions the sun never sets, writes G. R. Turner in the Kansas City Times. The British possessions are by far the greatest in total area and are so scattered in the two hemispheres that while the sun is setting in one it is rising in another. France, which ranks second, likewise possesses dominions so scattered that the sun is always above the horizon of some of them. Holland, third colonial empire of importance in the world, similarly keeps always untroubled in the sunlight the flag of the Netherlands.

Flow of Electrons
The national bureau of standards says that the electrons flow in the opposite direction to the so-called direction of the flow of current. The convention as to the direction of the flow of current was established many years ago and it is unlikely that it will ever be changed.

Reflected Sunlight
Reflected sunlight is light from the sun reflected by other bodies, as, for instance, the light of the moon and of the planets. The law of reflection was expressed as early as the Second century by Hero of Alexandria. Euclid is said to have deduced it.

Clock's Period of Fault
Big Ben, the famous English clock, is wrong twice in every hour. At a quarter past the hour, it is five seconds fast; at a quarter to the hour, it is five seconds slow. This is because the minute hand is so heavy that even the intricate machinery can not stop the slight gain and loss at the points where the weight is most felt.

Water Must Be Distilled
No natural water is sufficiently pure for the use of boilers on modern ocean liners. Although many of the larger vessels such as the Europa, Olympic, Conte de Savoia and Majestic use upwards of 500 tons of water every 24 hours, every drop of it must be distilled.

Valparaiso
Valparaiso is Spanish for Vale of Paradise. This chief seaport of Chile dates back to 1535. Immediately behind the shore the hills begin to rise, reaching a height of 1,000 feet. The city, containing a quarter of a million people, is built on these hillsides. On clear days, Mt. Aconcagua, the highest point on this hemisphere, can be seen, towering above its Andean brothers.

The Word "Scamp"
The word scamp originally signified a traveler, but three hundred years ago when a man traveled he generally had a good excuse for doing so, for few left home save when compelled, and to be a traveler was practically equivalent to being a rogue.

Blend Chimney Color
Frequently, a chimney seems to cut a house in parts. It is important, in painting a small dwelling in an attractive color scheme, to make the chimney an integral part of the picture. It may be painted with either stucco or concrete paint.

Largest National Park
Jasper National park, on the western fringe of the province of Alberta, has the distinction of being the largest national park in the world. Its borders inclose 4,400 square miles of territory, all of it situated in the heart of the Canadian Rocky mountains.

The Dardanelles
The country around the Dardanelles straits belongs to the Turkish republic. But by the terms of the Lausanne treaty the straits are thrown open to the merchantmen, and warships of all nations.

Discovered Coast Resort Site
Dinard the fashionable coast resort of France was first discovered by an American named Cupfinger in 1860, while in search of good fishing.

Classify Blood of Mummies
The blood in Egyptian mummies 5,000 years old can be classified by the same blood tests used in living persons.

try, single, ambitious and a good man. He was better situated than his predecessors in that he had a pony to ride. It is remembered, however, that he did walk his circuit one Sunday for several of the boys of the village had borrowed his means of transportation without letting him know of it.

About this time an M. E. Sunday School was organized and Mr. Beardslee was the superintendent. He had a very good Sunday School. The school has been continuous since that time.

A resident by the name of Dan Stuart who had some talent as a public speaker used to hold services in the absence of the regular preachers in these early years.

1886-1887—The first time Whittemore appears on the Conference records is in the minutes of 1885. It reads, "Whittemore to be supplied." Rev. Lemuel Wigle was selected to fill the new appointment. He made no report to the Conference of 1886 but in 1887 he reported nine probationers, 25 members, and a Sunday School of 85. He also reported that the church had given $3 to Missions and paid him a salary of $166.

1888—The Methodist group was now so large it was deemed necessary that a house of worship be built. The Methodist Episcopal church was the first church built in Whittemore. Rev. Wigle pushed the project and cut the first timbers for it himself in 1888.

Sid Price and Jennie Chippis went into the lumber camps and gathered $400 for a start but this money was stolen from the home of the church treasurer.

1889—Undaunted, however, the work proceeded. Many people helped to make the project a success. Jess Chase swamped out the timbers for the foundation and sills from the land where Gillespies now live. He used a matched team of red oxen and hurt his leg so severely one day that he had to be carried home.

1890—The church was finally completed in 1890 at a cost of $2,000 and free of debt. According to records there were 19 members at that time and the Sunday School numbered 70.

1891—Lemuel Wigle was 33 years of age when he came to Whittemore. After gathering together and shepherding the Methodist flock here for five years and leaving a house of worship for them to meet in and carry on the work of God, he left for newer fields. He died at Vanderbilt, Michigan, in 1901 at the age of 49 years.

1892—The next man to serve the Methodists was Rev. Geo. A. Fee. He was a very diligent and zealous preacher. By his faithful labors the circuit was greatly strengthened.

He had a very polite horse for it would shake hands.

1893—Rev. D. F. Ellsworth preached in Whittemore one year, from 1893 to 1894.

1894—The Rev. Geo. Sanderson, son of Rev. Gabriel Sanderson, was the next minister here. He was young and an excellent musician. He organized a young people's choir and by so doing almost was starved to death. Some of the older members who had sung (and paid well) ceased to attend church. That choir turned out to be a bad financial move for young Rev. Sanderson. Later on some of the older members heard laughing in his room. This topped the climax. They wouldn't even give their children money now to support him. So the poor fellow finally went home to Dad, but that was a bad move again, for his Dad promptly sent him right back.

The young people of the church then gave a party and raised about $10, which they gave to him. But the older members found it out and deducted the $10 from his salary at the end of the year. He stuck it out for his full time and at the end of the year left many young friends, some of whom have attended church to this day.

1895—Rev. D. W. Hammond, the next minister, was saddened while here by the death of his daughter.

1896—Rev. Sheldon held this appointment the following year.

1897—In 1897 Rev. E. G. Johnson came here. He was a new man, Whittemore being his first appointment. He was single when he came here and boarded a while with Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Williams. He had a sweet heart in Canada whose parents objected to her marrying him. However, he went to Canada for his bride. They met at a secret pre-arranged place, eloped, were married, came back and with the help of the Williams started housekeeping. Rev. Johnson is now at St. Charles, Michigan.

1898-1899—In 1899 Rev. J. W. Osborn served the people here. He was liked by everyone.

1900—Rev. Henry R. Beatty preached for the next two years. He was a good speaker and drew large crowds. His talent as a lecturer was used by several organizations, Orangemen, Foresters, etc. Later he came back and held revivals here.

1902—While Rev. M. W. Weaver was here the Schroyers came to settle. Mrs. Schroyer invited a dozen or more ladies to her place (where the creamery now is) to reorganize the Ladies Aid. It seems as though Mrs. Sperle had been very active in social activities and it was said by many that Mrs. Schroyer was sent to take her place. Mrs. Sperle was sick at this time and died soon after. Mrs. Schroyer was from that time, and for many years, president of the Ladies Aid. The Ladies Aid's first official act was to buy an organ from Mr. King, the furniture man of Tawas, in 1903. Mrs. Schroyer played the organ for 17 or 18 years for church services. The organ is now owned by Mrs. S. A. Ross. She also played for the W. C. T. U. meetings which were held every two weeks at different places about the township.

Mrs. Frank Horton was superintendent of the social work. There were many other noble women who fought the drink condition at this time under the leadership of their president, Mrs. Dutton.

Rev. G. A. Pegram, the next preacher, is remembered for his oddities. He had a very good understanding by virtue of his big feet.

Rev. Nathaniel Dickie filled the pulpit during 1904.

The next man, Rev. Geo. W. Tuckey, was married while serving here.

Rev. Geo. W. Gilroy married Mr. and Mrs. John O'Farrell and also Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Schuster.

The next four preachers were Rev. S. F. Morell, Rev. C. M. Smith, Rev. W. Snyder and Rev. Chas. Rhodes.

Rev. Chas. W. McKenzie was a long term man. He served for four years. He was the first minister to own a car. While he was here the church was greatly re-strengthened. During his ministrations Mrs. Will Sperle donated gas lights to the church in memory of her husband and son.

In more recent years from 1919 to the present time we have been served by the following ministers: Rev. C. W. Scott, Rev. E. E. McMichael, Rev. Samuel Evans, Rev. David Shugg, Rev. E. T. McCurry, Rev. Geo. Bedell, Rev. Geo. Smith, Dr. Howard Musser, and Rev. H. E. Davis, our present pastor.

Bees Raid Sugar Refinery

Millions of bees recently raided the sirup vats of the sugar refining works in a suburb of Auckland, New Zealand. Workmen, attired in light clothing because of the great heat, attempted to rout them, and were seriously stung. Thousands of bees were drowned in the sirup and refining had to be stopped until the dead of battle were removed.
