Chancellor Hitler's Defiance of Treaty Provisions Alarms Europe; Drouth Threat Causes Wallace to Lift Restrictions on Spring Wheat Planting.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

sessed of a military air force in violation of the Treaty of Versailles, still more boldly declares men in the army will be determined by a law to be enacted

This was Chancellor Hitler's reply to the action of France's chamber of deputies in accepting Premier Flandin's plan to increase the term of conscript service in the French army to 18 months and subsequently to two years. Germany considered that France was "dealing the last blow to disarmament," and Hitler, rushing to Berlin from Berchtesgaden, directed the action of the cabinet and issued to the German nation a rousing appeal for full support. He declared that the failure of other nations to reduce armament as called for in the Versailles treaty had released Germany from all treaty obligations, and that while the reich had only peaceful intentions, it must re-arm to protect its territorial integrity and maintain the respect of the world as a coguarantor of European peace.

France is in no mood to take Hitler's defiance "lying down." An appeal was sent to the League of Nations to convoke an extraordinary council to deal with Germany's violation of the Versailles pact. The note hinted at the possibilities of economic sanctions (penalties) against Germany which might result in a boycott. An attempt is being made to force Britain into an alliance with France, and the mission of Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, to bring Germany back into the comity of European nations is regarded as seriously compromised. France and Italy insist that Simon go to Berlin as spokesman of the three powers, and not as the representative of Britain alone. Premier Mussolini is said to be backing France, and is alleged to be the prime power in a scheme to revive the pre-war policy of encircling Germany with a ring of steel.

President Roosevelt expressed his hope that his "good neighbor" policy might be extended to Europe as a basis for peaceful settlement of the tense situation. Just how the President expects to prevail upon those traditional enemies to become "good neighbors" was not fully explained. He declined to say whether this government will send a note to Germany protesting abrogation of military provisions of the separate treaty with this country. Although the United States is not a signatory to the Versailles pact, the separate peace treaty negotiated with Germany includes the military phases of the Versailles treaty. Many people in this country feel that United States intervention in the European dispute is neither necessary nor advisable.

GOV. MARTIN L. DAVEY of Ohio, charged by Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins with "corruption" in Ohio relief, went before the state senate and demanded a thorough investigation. He defied Hopkins to come to Ohio for trial on a warrant he had secured charging Hopkins with criminal libel. Hopkins had alleged in a letter that he has proof of "corruption" of relief administration in Ohio including soliciting of funds for campaign purposes from firms that sold relief materials. Hopkins, through C. C. Stillman, FERA regional officer, has taken over administration of Ohio relief. Department of Justice attorneys in Washington declare they stand ready to defend Hopkins, but there was no indication that Hopkins would go to Ohio, although he may change his mind. The spectacular blowup is said to have had its inception in the 1934 political campaign. Davey made campaign speeches charging that Ohio relief was mismanaged, and particularly aimed his barbs at Cleveland. This irked Cleveland leaders since relief there had been administered through a non-political group, which later became the official Cuyahoga county relief administration. Hopkins often took note of the fact that Cleveland's relief committee was "one of the best in the country." Later Davey pledged himself not to touch the Cleveland organization, but is said to have ousted several members, and repeated old charges. Cleveland leaders took the

> CLARENCE DARROW, foe of NRA, and author of the famous report which attacked NRA more than a year ago, assailed the administration's economic theories, including the national recovery act, in his testimony before the senate finance committee. The famous lawyer whose sharp speech and fiery courtroom tactics have made him famous, denounced NRA as playing into the hands of big business to the destruction of the "little fellow." He argued that NRA attacked the problem from the wrong angle and that the real trouble lay in faulty distribution, thus assailing the theory of scarcity. Darrow swept aside statements that NRA had helped organized labor, reduced unemployment and abolished child labor, with an assertion that it would have happened anyway. "The panic put an end to child labor," he said. "There wasn't any room for it while fathers and mothers were out of work.'

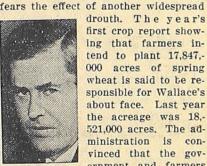

> "There is no question that small business has suffered under the NRA," Darrow continued. "It has suffered more than it would have suffered otherwise."

The suffering due to continued concentration of wealth would have gone on anyhow, he said, but added that NRA accelerated it. "I am not an optimist," he added.

"I may be an idiot, but not a cheerful idiot.' R ESTRICTIONS on planting spring wheat have been removed by Sec-first crop report showing that farmers intend to plant 17.847. 000 acres of spring wheat is said to be responsible for Wallace's about face. Last year the acreage was 18,-521,000 acres. The administration is convinced that the government and farmers have a duty to protect consumers against a wheat shortage, he said. Farmers will plan an additional 900,000 to 2,300,000 acres as a result of the new order, and will harvest between ten and thirty million bushels more, Wallace estimates. Spring wheat normally constitutes about one-fourth of the nation's crop. He denied that the European situation pointing to a possibility of increased sales had anything to do with the new decision. Farmers under contract who plant their full spring wheat acreage will receive full benefit payments, but in return will be required to agree to reduce production in 1936 by the amount asked in next year's contract plus the amount they would have reduced this year. There is no indication that the corn acreage control program for 1935 will be altered.

PLANS to reduce American money to a single class—possibly federal reserve notes-are being considered by the administration, thus simplifying the nation's monetary structure and making it easier to control. Before this could be established it is necessary to make widespread changes in existing laws, and this will undoubtedly be undertaken when more imme diate stages of the recovery drive are completed. According to a high gov ernment official, one class of money must be established in order that the government may effectively control issuance of money. Under this plan treasury notes and United States notes would be retired. The silver certificates backed by bullion now held in the treasury might be withdrawn from circulation and transferred to the federal reserve banks as was done with the gold certificates. Since the reserve banks would be sole holder of gold and silver certificates, a definite ratio of silver certificates could thus be established.

D ONALD R. RICHBERG was named by the President to head a reorganized NRA board, taking the place of S. Clay Williams, resigned. At the same time the President increased the group governing the Blue Eagle agency from five to seven. A White House statement emphasized the change was made to accelerate the drive to push extension of the NRA through congress.

S PRING arrived in the West with a stifling dust storm which shrouded the country from eastern New Mexico to the Great Lakes. Powdered soil whipped up from the drouthscourged prairies hid the sun, and beat relentlessly upon the senses. A dozen deaths were reported, due to suffocations, dust-induced pneumonia and traffic accidents. Freight trains were rolled to sidings, and passenger trains crept along on slow orders. Schools were closed in a number of communities in western states. Wheat prices jumped from 2 to 31/4 cents a bushel as winds cut into the dry Southwest, and Governor Landon of Kansas appealed to President Roosevelt for aid.

HE government is ready to sell gold to foreign nations that can offer an attractive proposition, Secretary Morgenthau announces. Recent sales to the Bank of Mexico and to Guatemala, Morgenthau points out, have cleared the way to similar negotiations with other countries, although he emphasized that no other transactions are being considered at this No conditions were attached to the transactions already consum mated. In the dealings with Mexico virtually all her silver sales have been made to this country.

"We've got all the gold we can possibly use," Morgenthau added, indicating that the government would make no further undue efforts to accumulate the metal.

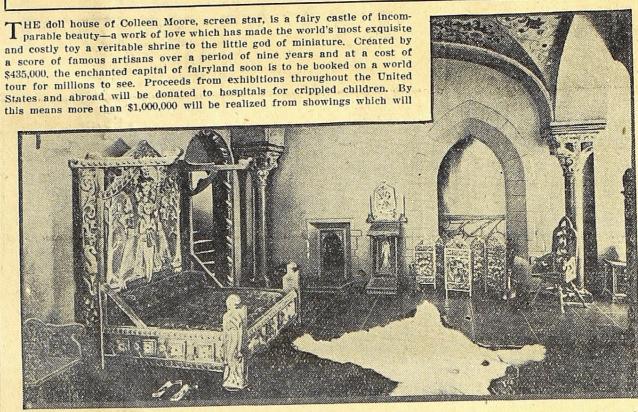

COMPROMISE and White House pressure brought about the defeat of the McCarran "prevailing wage" amendment to the work relief bill in the senate, and administration leaders were confident that the measure would be laid before the President for signature within a few days. The deadlock over the amendment was broken when Senator Richard B. Russell, Jr., of Georgia proposed a substitute which leaves the President free to pay "security wages," officially estimated at $50 a month, provided they do not adversely affect the wage scale in private industry; and providing that the prevailing wage must be paid on all permanent lederal building projects. This way out, which had been approved by the White House, was accepted by the senate by a vote of 83 to 2, after the McCarran amendment had been defeated, 50 to 38. The two votes against the compromise were cast by Metcalfe of Rhode Island and Hale of Maine, both Republicans. Before the vote on the McCarran amendment was taken Senator Glass announced he was authorized to say that if it prevailed President Roosevelt would veto the measure.

Senate action finally developed into a race to pass the measure before Huey Long returned from Louisiana. Administration forces defeated three attempts to slash the bill, and overrode protests of old line Democrats the bill imperils the nation's credit. Senator Glass, chairman of the appropriations committee in charge of the bill, solemnly asserted:

"I stand on my prediction that this tremendous appropriation will impair the credit of the United States." Senator Tydings of Maryland described the bill as the "grandest pork barrel ever to come before congress."

Screen Star Builds Miniature Doll House

require a three-year schedule of bookings in every city in the United States and all foreign capitals. Constructed of aluminum and copper with fantastic angles and sky-sweeping turrets and steeples, no semblance of architectural convention is found in this giant abode of little people. Resting on the summit of a rugged precipice, the castle, which is nine feet wide and nine feet long, rises fourteen feet into the air and weighs approximately 6,000 pounds. The house, excepting rivets, contains more than 200,000 pieces, being a mechanical marvel of unprecedented intricacy, yet practicability. Equipped throughout with mechanical wonders in miniature, the house boasts of a solid golden cathedral organ standing nearly fifteen inches high, which plays through an elaborate electrical system via remote control. Miss Moore's famous doll house also has the world's smallest electric light bulbs, each being the size of a grain of wheat and imbedded in sockets with the circumference of pinheads, in a golden chandelier, strung with glittering, pear-shaped diamonds. The doll house, wired with an electrical system requiring months of labor and experimentation, is controlled with a series of transformers and switches for each room. All lighting, with the exception of flood-lighting in the gardens, is indirect, with more than 400 small-watt bulbs being utilized in the system. Water tanks on turrets and in the dungeons of the castle feed live fountains in the kitchen, garden and bathrooms. The tanks, on emptying, play beautiful chimes in the steeples every ten minutes automatically. Operated by electricity, a magic feathered nightingale perches on a lavender glass tree in the Garden of Aladdin and sings full-throated, joyful tunes. The doll's house contains eleven rooms, Aladdin's Magic garden and Noah's entrance hall. The furnishings throughout the house represent years of effort in collecting in every part of the world. They are in scale an inch to the foot and are probably the most priceless in existence. Photograph shows the prince's bedroom in Colleen Moore's doll house.

WHAT DANNY MEADOW MOUSE DID

TO GRANDFATHER FROG, watch-I ing from the safety of the Smiling Pool, it seemed that Danny Meadow House hadn't the least chance in the world. There he was on the bank of the Smiling Pool with water in front of him and Reddy Fox creeping up right behind him. To try to run back would be to run right into Reddy's mouth. There wasn't a place for Danny to hide.

"I told Danny he was foolish to come over here," muttered Grandfa-

Grandfather Frog saw Reddy start to spring on Danny Meadow Mouse and closed his big, goggly eyes so that he would not see the dreadful end of Danny. He expected to hear Danny's last despairing squeak, but instead he heard a splash. Grandfather Frog's big, goggly eyes flew open, and then he gave a grunt of surprise. On the bank where Danny had been a second before was Reddy Fox, and if ever there was an angry and disappointed Fox, that one was Reddy, And there in the Smiling Pool itself was

Growth of Fishes

The growth of fishes probably decelerates with age, but under favorable circumstances it never stops. If fish growth were shown on a graph, the weight curve would show a steady upward line, but the length curve would ascend rapidly at first, then almost straighten out. That is because as the fish grows large, the corresponding increase in girth tends to make the weight increase rather constant.-Detroit Free Press.

This is a test that tells you whether the system needs a cathartic change.
If you have constant sluggish spells or bilious attacks, and laxatives seem to make things worse, it would be wise to try this:

Stop all use of any laxative that does not encourage variation from a "fixed dose" (which may be entirely too large a dose for your individual need). Use instead, a liquid laxative that you can measure and regulate as to dose. As necessary to repeat, take smaller doses, less and less often, until the bowels are moving without

Doctors use liquid laxatives, and a properly prepared liquid laxative, containing natural laxative agents like senna and cascara is a joy and a comfort; a real help in establishing regularity. DAH-GONE DAWG

NOW that wash gloves are so well-liked for everyday use, and are ting them on for the first time after often in styles suited to dress wear, it is part of a woman's province to know the best way to launder them. Wash kid and fabric gloves are the regulation types to home-launder. There are also certain glace kids that are washable, and many suede gloves. It is such a thrifty convenience to be able to have clean gloves at one's disposal just for the washing. Fabric gloves will dry very quickly if hung over a radiator or by a heater. Wash kid of any sort should be dried more slowly. Do not use a harsh, but a mild white soap or white soap flakes.

The matter of special importance when washing kid gloves is not to rinse every bit of soap out of them. It is well to rinse out the wash water, and then rinse in slightly soapy water that is pure and clean. The reason for letting some of the soap remain, is that there is a certain amount of oil in skin, and the kid will look its best only when some remains in it. This is true of wool. So when washing woolen gloves remember to rinse them also, in slightly soapy

Woolen Handwear.

The important point to remember then washing woolen mittens or gloves is to keep the wash water and the rinse water of approximately the same temperature. Avoid rinsing in cold water after washing in hot. This shrinks gloves. A medium temperature at all times is advisable, except when gloves are too large and should be shrunk. Allow time to dry woolen handwear and have a good circulation of air about the gloves, if possible.

Cotton gloves can be washed in either hot or cold water and be dried slowly or rapidly to suit the convenience of the wearer. Silk can be treated with similar freedom. It is advisable not to dry silk in the sun. The rays are apt to yellow silk.

After Laundering.

It is not necessary to iron fabric gloves. Pull fingers straight and smooth, and smooth out back, front, and wrists. When on the hand the gloves will smooth completely unless they have been creased in wringing, and these marks have been allowed to remain. The best result with kid gloves is obtained when they are very carefully put on before becoming absolutely dry. Put them on just as carefully as the glove fitter in a store would when trying them on. The Gold Clause Decision LEONARD A. BARRETT

Never since the Dred Scott case were the findings of the Supreme court more time business was buoyant with hope. Securities advanced, and we seemed destined to advance more speedily toward recovery.

All of a sudden something happened. The security markets slipped back into their old rut, most of the advance gained before the decision and immediately afterwards was lost, and business assumed its normal pace again. What really happened was that the public mind suddenly awakened to the fact that the decision in favor of the government left things much as they were before. Had the decision been against the government, something serious would doubtless have happened, like bankruptcy of the railroads, etc.

In brief, what was the intent of the decision? Just this-that a gold clause in a business agreement "deprives congress of its Constitutional rights to regulate the value of money." The government on the other hand, which itself placed the gold clause in federal bonds. must regard them as valid. The paramount question before the court was whether congress had the power to alter the established value of the dollar. Whether the action of congress had been wise or for the best was not the question. It was wholly a question of right or power. If congress should exercise its power in devaluating the dollar to the point of making any scrap of paper legal tender, the results would undoubtedly be worse than serious. So far no one has suffered because of the deflated dollar; not even the person who carried the suit to the Supreme court. The real question is, how far can we trust congress not to misuse its power?

Immigration Into U.S. At Standstill

Deportations Nearly Equal Admissions in 1933.

Paris.—The tide of emigration of Euopean workers to the United States has definitely been halted, statistics on file with the American consulate service in Paris revealed, as legislation was being presented in Washington for further restriction on immigration, says William Parker in the Chicago Herald-Examiner. Only 422 permits of a total of 3,086 available under the quota for French citizens were granted in 1934. The figures indicated 1934 would, for comparison, have to be placed alongside the year of 1821 when only 22, 633 foreign-born persons entered America to make it their future home.

Since high tide in immigration was reached in 1907, under stimulus of the first Russian revolution when 285,349 foreigners entered the United States as permanent residents, there has been a gradual decline.

Quotas Not Filled.

In 1933 due to deportations, almost as many aliens were debarred or deported as were admitted. Of late years, due to the American immigration act of March 2, 1929, the quotas of France, Belgium and Switzerland have not been filled. In 1930, Belgium had a quota of 1,304, yet 1,178 of this total was unused; France had a quota of 3,086 and only 280 French decided America would be a better place in which to live.

The years of the depression in America saw thousands of foreigners go back to their land of nativity, in an ebb-tide comparable with the early years of the World war when patriotism sent back a great number of Europeans who had gone to the United States to live. Those who have come back since the depression have found themselves facing terms in the army.

Military Service Forced.

France, Italy, Poland and some of the Balkan states do not recognize naturalizatian of their subjects abroad, and if they return to their native land must serve the requisite military Incidentally, France is possibly the most difficult of all countries in which for a foreigner to become naturalized. Creates New Instrument to Produce Rustic Music Clear Lake, Wis .- A three-tined pitchfork, a milk can and a piece of wire combined with chance recently in the hands of George Himes to create a new instrument for producing rustic melody.

Himes, while mending farm machinery, tightened a piece of wire over a milk can with a three-tined oitchfork. He happened to touch the wire and was pleased with the musical sound it made.

Experiments resulted in the followng arrangement, on which he has applied for a patent: One end of a wire is attached to the fork handle, the other end to the middle tine. The fork handle is inserted in a slot in the bottom of the can to keep it from sliding. Himes then fastens one tine in a loop attached to his chest. He draws a violin bow across the wire with one hand while sliding a cigar box up and down it with the other to vary the tone.

In A Class By Itself

THERE is no way to compare the Ford V-8 with any other car because there is no other car like it.

The Ford enables you to step up into the fine-car class in performance, beauty, comfort and safety. But there is no stepping up in price. That is kept down by Ford low-profit policies and unique manufacturing methods. These are as different as the car itself.

It takes eight cylinders to give the modern performance you need these days. The Ford is powered by a V-8 - the finest type of eight-cylinder engine. You have to pay more than $2000 for that in any other car.

But it is not only in emergencies that the work of safeguarding the service is carried on. It is a year-round job. Millions of dollars are spent annually for new and improved equipment. Day by day rigid inspection and maintenance go forward.

Outdoors, patrolmen examine every foot of Michigan's aerial cable once a year. All long distance cable is tested regularly with the galvanometer, an instrument which can instantly detect a flaw and, even on a cable miles in length, locate that flaw almost to the foot.

Indoors, constant tests are made of all the intricate machinery of the modern central office. And the search for improvement moves steadily on, an endless search for equipment that shall be still more sturdy, still more efficient.

Neither trouble nor expense can be considered in the task of keeping open Michigan's copper lanes of speech; for today, as in the past, the guiding principle is the tradition which demands - fair or stormy, day or night - that the message must go through.

Elliott had her wide open, now, and the loads, on that grade, ran easily despite the binding cold in their journals. The rock and pitch of the engine were beyond belief. It seemed as though its weight must carry the light steel from its spikes as the careening threw tons of strain first one way and then the other. The curve at the trestle's approach rushed up the valley toward him and through Elliott's mind swam all manner of misgivings. It seemed at the moment that if by any freak chance the wheels should stay on the rails, then those rails must surely give before the strain that the train's flight would exert as it took that curve. He threw one quick glance backward to see Tim Jeffers crouched on his high perch as a circus rider might stand on his boldly galloping steed. The old man chewed briskly and, as he caught a flash of Ben's face, spat and made one impressive gesture with a mittened hand, bidding the younger man get out-

Ben had done all that he could do in the cab. Nothing within his power would be of avail if they left the track and, inside, he would have no chance at all should the wild run come to its end in the smoking waters of the river.

And so he backed into the gangway between tank and engine and slid down to the step, clinging to the hand rails, staring ahead, sady to let go if the worst, and the nighly probable, hap-

The curve was there, a train's length beyond. It was there, the length of their locomotive ahead. . . . The trucks took it with a screech and a bounce and a grind. She turned sharply and Ben thought he felt her tipping, tilting, the step beneath his feet rising as the force that strove them off at a tangent asserted itself. . . . He swung far out, to give her that much more balance, and they were straightening out with the loads thundering and clanking and leaping behind and he breathed deeply, realizing that for the interval his lungs had not functioned.

Elliott looked back again. Tim's knees were bent still lower. He was leaning far to the right and he nodded sharply as if in triumph,

And now they charged at the bridge, at that rough, new crossing of Hoot Owl. The engine bounced and quivered and seemed to stumble as she took the newly laid track. But she slammed back to balance and her tires chewed the frost, and they were over and charging the rise beyond! Ben clambered back into the cab and tugged at the throttle, cursing because it would not open wider. He strained as though by his very posture to help the machinery meet that demand upon it. Nobly, the little locomotive breasted the rise; bravely she lunged into that hill with the exhaust roaring fit to beat the rusted, burned stack from her. She spat cinders and smoke high into the air and the steam clouds from leaking gaskets enveloped Elliott, curling about him, shutting off his view. They were slowing, now. The roaring drum of the exhaust had dropped now to a sharp panting.

They were half-way up before he touched the reserve lever. He let it down slowly, a notch at a time, using every last inch of the momentum he had gained. Up, now, three-quarters of the way. Ben could see the rails on the bit of level going at the top. Up another train's length, slowing with each foot gained. Afar off, across the snow-blanketed country, a plume of white vapor trailed a break in the forests. That was the local, crossing the river, swinging in toward his sid-

"Go it, girl! Go it, girl!" he yelled at the engine, swinging one fist.

She shoved her nose over the crest, seeming to weave it from side as in distress. Her drivers slipped and spun a half turn; caught on sand, held. She began a stuttering, dying puff. The sound wavered. She seemed to stop. . and cleared her cylinders with a short belch. . .

She was on top. Her last breath had turned the trick.

"Hold to it, old timer! Hold to it!" Ben croaked.

The first car gained the crest. The locomotive was on the down grade, now; the second car coming across the peak. The third car rumbled over the top and Tim Jeffers, dropping his peavey, wormed along the logs and flopped down to the brake wheel as Ben shut her off, set the brakes and with a boyish swing of one arm yanked on the whistle cord to set her voice screaming. Back on the last car Tim clubbed brake wheels. Out on the first, Ben Elliott drove the shoe home. The ancient locomotive dug her heels in and settled back. Down and down they went on the frost slick steel, gathering speed that was as alarming as the slowing of their pace had been a moment before. But with every train length traveled Tim Jeffers was set ting more brakes against the humming wheels.

In a Minnesota lumber town a bearded man sat near the stove in a small hotel and heard the story of what was happening in distant Tincup.

"Know him?" another listener asked the narrator.

"Not the kid. I know Brandon, 'nd know Tim Jeffers. Top loaded for him three winters. If Tim's back there's a hot scrap on and . . . gosh! but I like scraps.'

"Mean you're pulling for Tincup?" "I'll say I am!"

The bearded man cleared his throat. "You think, then, that the lad's got a chance of making it against Brandon?" he asked.

"It sure looks as if he had a chance. With old Tincup shanty boys hitting back for their stamping grounds his chances are getting better. Ever been in Tincup, Martin?"

"You say nice tnings, Ben Elliott!" "How can anyone help saying nice things to nice people?"

She made a playful mouth at him and Ben, watching her as she advanced to Able's desk, thought again that he never had supposed women grew to such loveliness. Her errand with the old justice was brief. She and Ben went out together, Dawn on her way home, Ben to finish his errands in town.

At the corner where their ways parted they stopped and Dawn hesitated in what she had been saying. Then, looking into his face, she asked.

"Does Mr. Ben Elliott ever take tea with a young woman? You know, I am beginning to think that I like to talk to you!"

"Then the risk of having it reported that I'm a lounge lizard is as nothing." The house where Dawn lived was the house in which she had been born, a sprawling white frame structure beneath whispering hemlocks. She led Ben into a long, low room, with wide, low windows, where a fire burned on an open hearth.

The fine odor of baking bread permeated the place and as they entered Dawn lifted her voice in a light hail:

"Oh-ho, Aunt Em!" Sounds came from the rear; a door opened and closed, and then another door opened which gave into the room where they stood, and an ample woman in a checked apron, her face flushed as by stove heat, entered hastily.

"Yes, dearie- Well!"-stopping in surprise.

"Aunt Em, this is Mr. Ellfott." "How d'y do!" Her voice was full and deep, like a man's. "I've seen you, young man, and if I was a hand to say what most folks say I'd tell you that I feel like we're old friends." She shook hands vigorously. "You're a big young feller, Ben Elliott!"-eyeing him up and down.

Dawn laughed again as she drew off her coat.

"Don't you tell a soul, Aunt Em, but we are going to have tea! If his shanty boys ever heard about it they might think he was too much civilized for them."

"Pshaw! As if what other folks think counts!" She looked narrowly at Dawn and Ben saw the girl's face change. "It's what I've told Dawn ever since she was little, Ben, that it's what you think about your own self that matters; not what anybody else thinks. Well! You two set and I'll get tea."

She hurried out and Ben drew up a comfortable chair before the fire. In the balf hour that elapsed before the older woman returned Ben learned much about Dawn McMapus. This was her house, her home. SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott-from "Yonder"-arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. He defeats Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested and finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage. The judge hires him to run the one luming the act, the product of the control of the latest product the product of the control of the latest product the product of the control of the latest product the product of the control of the latest product of the latest per camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, whose father has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him n a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames, discovers the fire was started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer of spot cash for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time limit is set. Ben meets Dawn McManus and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman. The railrows bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract, is blown up. Ey superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight.

Ben rose to go and, as he did so, the door opened and Dawn McManus stepped in out of the lightly falling

"Oh!" she cried in surprise. It was the first time she had seen Ben since that morning a month ago when he took the veneer logs on their mad ride to save the Hoot Owl operation from immediate insolvency. "Am I interrupting?"

"Of course." "Naturally, you would."

They talked, after that, of personal tastes, of the glories of big country, of the limited recreations offered by little

Friendly Potato Is Not Appreciated, Expert Says

One of the very best foods, the potato, is not fully appreciated, asserts an agricultural expert. For the human body to function properly, starches and sugars are required to produce energy or fuel; proteins to develop tissue; minerals and other dietary essentials, such as vitamins. Potatoes meet the ideal requirements for the body by producing a large amount of energy, some protein, a fair amount of minerals and an adequate assortment of essential vitamins, as well as supplying bulk. The potato is probably our best staple food and one which should fill a much larger place in our diet.

Many persons avoid potatoes because of their supposed fattening properties. This popular prejudice has little foundation in scientific fact. The potato. like any other food stuff is fattening only when eaten in a quantity more than sufficient to meet the body needs. The notato is no more fattening than the same amount of bread or any other cereal. History as well as geography shows that those people whose diet contains a large proportion of potatoes enjoy good health. In Ireland and Germany, where potatoes are widely and largely used, the health and stamina of the people is good and the death general and local diseases of which we rate low. have knowledge are thus produced.

Simple Motif in Bedspread Design

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Some needleworkers hesitate when It comes to crocheting a bedspread, because too much work and time is required to finish it. The design shown above is about the simplest pattern known and works up fast. This model is worked in cream, rose and yellow carpet warp and measures 41/4 inches for each square. Find the size spread you want to make and then figure how many squares it will take. You will be surprised how fast the work progresses if you spend only spare time on making the squares, and the little material required to take with you when not working at home. When the squares are finished slip-stitch together and finish with a simple edging. The squares may be set together point to point, thereby producing a pointed edge instead of straight.

This is one of the thirty motifs you postpaid upon receipt of 15c.

The use of these motifs is not limited to spreads. By using different useful articles can be crocheted. Address - HOME CRAFT CO .- from High and Low Normandy.
