COUNTY RED CROSS HOLDS ANNUAL MEET

Frank F. Taylor Is Presented With Certificate Of Appreciation

The annual meeting of the Iosco County Chapter, American Red Cross, was held Wednesday afternoon at the Youngberg of St. Louis, Missouri, addressed the gathering and was the principal speaker. She discussed the several phases of Red Cross work and emphasized the importance of the chapter in the community.

At Wednesday's meeting Frank F Taylor of Tawas City was awarded by the American Red Cross with a certificate of appreciation for dis-tinguished service. Mr. Taylor had been chairman of the local chapter since its organization in 1917, and during that time had been an enthusiastic worker, devoting a large amount of time and energy toward making it a success, Mr. Taylor resigned last year signed last year.

Mrs. W. C. Davidson, treasurer of the chapter, gave a financial report which included the results of the excellent roll call drive held last November. Mrs. John LeClair of Tawas City was chairman of the roll call committee. roll call committee.

The chapter hopes to send a repesentative to the State Water Safety school which will be held this year. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: W. A. Evans, chairman; Mrs. John LeClair, vice-chairman; Mrs. Harry Pelton, secretary, and Mrs. W. C. Davidson, reasurer.

Committees were appointed as follows: Executive—Mrs. Jos. Amley of Oscoda, Mrs. Deuell Pearsall of Hale, Mrs. Florence Curtis of Whittemore; County Disaster Preparedness—R. G. Schreck of Tawas City, Nada Mills of Oscoda, A. E. Greve of Hale. Miss Margaret E. Worden of Ta-

'Anglo-German Conversations Disappointing, Simon Reports; Hitler's Demands Include Return of Colonies, Air and Naval Parity, and Minimum Army of 500,000.

> By EDWARD W. PICKARD C, Western Newspaper Union.

turned to England from his historic talks with Chancellor Hitler, and reported to the cabinet that Germany have been described as "disappointing." Hitler made a bold play for Anglo-German understanding, declaring both nations should unite to defend western civilization against Communism and the colored races. Briefly, his demands

First-Germany must have an army with a minimum of 36 divisions-500, 000 men-as decreed.

Second-Germany wants parity in the air with Britain. Hitler admitted that Germany now possesses equality with Britain. Hitler stressed the danger to which Germany is exposed in the air. He declared that Russia is using Czechoslovakia as a European air base. He demanded return of certain Czechoslovak territory and repatriation of 3,500,000 German residents there.

Third-Hitler wants a navy equal to one-third of the British fleet, which is tantamount to 400,000 tons. The British admiralty is opposed to such a ratio and Germany has been invited to bilateral naval discussions in London.

Fourth-Germany wants return of her former colonies. Little encouragement was given Hitler on this score.

Fifth-Hitler refused to have anything to do with an eastern pact, though he is willing to enter nonaggression pacts with Germany's neighbors, as he did with Poland.

Sixth-Hitler is prepared to sign a pact of noninterference in the affairs of Austria, but only if it means noninterference by all powers.

In Berlin demonstrators howled their resentment at death sentences imposed by Lithuania on four Nazis, and only stout police resistance kept the mob from the Lithuanian delegation itself. The four were convicted when a Lithuanian military court trying 126 Nazis for an asserted plot to start an armed uprising in Memel, former German territory, found them guilty. Eighty-seven others were sent to prison.

As Capt. Anthony Eden, British arms expert, begins his conferences with Soviet officials, observers believe the bring sufficient pressure on Germany to induce her to accept the eastern secur-Ity pact. The official press continues to stress that the rearmament of Germany threatens Russia, and that the conflict growing out of any German attack would spread all over Europe and Asia. This is but a confirmation of Litvinoff's contention that "peace is indivisible." League of Nations circles predict that France, Russia and Czechoslovakia will conclude an eastern pact as an answer to Hitler's new conscript army. Whether any effort will be made to bring Great Britain into this, is not known.

CONSIDERABLY mutilated, the administration's $4,880,000,000 work relief bill finally got through the senate by a vote of 68 to 16, and was returned to the house later, to be adjusted in conference. The senators accepted an amendment by Senator Thomas of Oklahoma for a currency expansion of $375 .-000,000 through the issuance of silver certificates at the $1.29 an ounce monetary value of the treasury's silver stocks instead of present practice of using the purvalue of the sil-

Later the Thomas amendment was stricken out after congressional conferees had deadlocked for forty-eight hours. Members of the silver bloc asserted they would not stand in the measure's path, although Thomas had declared he would filibuster against Agriculture under Rexany attempts to strike out the amendment, Besides eliminating the silver inflation plan, the conference modified the Russell labor compromise amendment to provide that the President shall pre-determine the rate of wages on public buildings to be constructed, and this rate will be submitted to contractors for bids. An amendment providing that all officers and employees receiving more than $5,000 a year will have to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the senate was modified. It now provides that any new administrator or member of any central board will be appointed by the I'resident with the consent of the sen-

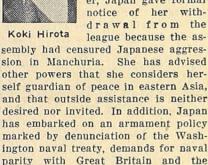

Among the senate changes approved were the allocation of the fund to eight general types of projects; continuation of the federal relief administration one year; extension of the Civilian Conservation corps two years from March 31; continuation of PWA two years from June 16; the George fore it can be operated effectively.

FOREIGN SECRETARY SIMON re- amendment to make funds available in minister the agricultural adjustment act; the Russell amendment to authorize farm loans to share croppers, tenant farmers and farm laborers for land purchase.

One day Harry L. Hopkins was reported lazing in the Florida sun and thinking up ways he would spend billions as administrator of the work relief fund. The next day, rumors were that Rexford G. Tugwell was to be nominated for the "biggest spender in history." Later reports from the national capital were that nobody but the President would be the big boss in the program. You can take your choice, but it seems likely that the latter is true. Senatorial discontent over the methods used by the two others mentioned will probably eliminate them from consideration. This strategy has been successful in the past. When a house group became too highly incensed at Public Works Administrator Harold Ickes, they were quieted with assurance that the President would have complete control of the work relief program, and the furore died out. Mr. Roosevelt will be the nominal head of the program, but he would not be expected to handle every detail. He must delegate authority, and it is highly probable that everyone will not be entirely satisfied.

In the official residence of Foreign Minister Koki Hirota in Tokyo the sale agreement and general protocol were signed and the bargain was clinched by the payment by Japan of 23,333,000 yen to the Soviet ambassador. The yen is currently quoted at about 27.8 cents. Japan's vigorous reply to British protests over the alleged Manchukuoan oil monopoly reflects development of the "Asia for Asiatics" plan announced some time ago. Japan denied that treaty provisions have been violated by the so-called monopoly. With the deal for the Soviet Russia interest in the Chinese Eastern railroad completed and Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations, Japanese penetration of Asia is expected to go forward under the strong leadership of Koki Hirota, foreign minister. Developments during the next few months will be highly important. The tense European situation will keep the western powers busy chasing peace and security in both the east and the west. Japan insists she will act alone, and rumors of a military alliance with Germany were scouted. The Japanese army, the note intimated, is ready to repel Soviet interference at any time.

FEDERAL expenditures are soaring faster than ever before in peace time history. The end of the first nine months of the fiscal year disclosed expenditures of more than $5,000,000,000. Revenue meanwhile has amounted to only $2,827,000,000, or a little more than half of what was spent. New Deal spending, statistical experts say, has been at an average of $13,000 for every minute, day or night, in the nine months since the fiscal year began, and total expenditures are expected to reach nearly $7,500,000,000 by the end of the year. Unemployment relief has required the $820,000,000 appropriated for this purpose and an additional $488,000,000 from the RFC, making a total thus far of $1,308,000,000. PWA is next in line with having poured out $$19,000,000 in nine months. Despite these terrific totals government credit has not been impaired. The treasury has been able to refund all bonds with approaching maturities, and when the fourth liberty loan is called for redemption, a move which is expected to be made on April 15, no federal bond will be outstanding with a call date earlier than 1940.

HERBERT HOOVER suddenly projected himself into the political picture, and set wagging the tongues of countless politicians and observers.

In a letter addressed to the California Republican assembly, meeting in Sacramento, the former President spoke his mind with utmost freedom concerning the doings of the Roosevelt administration whose theories, he asserted, "are no longer a propagandized milennium; they are self-exposed."

The Republican party, said Mr. Hoover, has today the greatest responsibility that has come to it since the days of Abraham Lincoln-to raise the standard in defense of fundamental American principles; and he called for a rejuvenated and vigorous Republican organization.

Here are some of the things Mr. Hoover said in arraigning the present administration: "The most solemn government obligations have been repudiated. "The nation is faced with the greatest debt ever known to our country. "The currency has been rendered un-

"The government has been centralized under an enormous bureaucracy . small business in Washington . men have been disabled and crushed. Class conflicts have been created and embittered.

"More people are dependent upon the government for relief than ever before. "Recovery is still delayed."

Leaders of the regular Republicans in Washington were quick to declare their approval of Mr. Hoover's attack on the New Deal. Most of them scouted the idea that he was tentatively looking toward another nomination, but the general impression was that he was in the way of becoming the leader of his party in fact as well as in name.

Pay of railroad union men has been restored to the 1931 level, with a return of the last 5 per cent of a 10 per cent cut in 1932. The increase amounts to approximately $80,000,000. The restoration is in line with an agreement reached a year ago when the unions negotiated for a gradual restoration of the old wage scale.

House leaders are rushing action the national defense program. Bills designed to strengthen the national defense are being rushed through the legislative hopper. Four navy bills were passed with little opposition and no record votes. These include authorization for expenditure of $38,000,000 in 1936-37 to build up the navy's shore stations on the Pacific coast, Hawaii and Canal Zone, and an increase of 1,000 in the navy's officer strength and provide a system of aviation cadets to take care of a shortage of naval fliers. Wins Wide Distinction as Collector of Violins

Milwaukee Man Is Expert on Rare Old Fiddles.

Milwaukee, Wis. - Stradivarius to Henry Stirn of this city is something that has not only served as an interesting hobby throughout many years, but has also earned for him the title of connoisseur of such rare old instruments. Not less than twenty-four examples of the famous Stradivarius have passed through Mr. Stirn's hands during the course of sixty years, which is really only a slight detail in the istory of his once grand collection.

Mr. Stirn, whose vocation is finance and accounting, has shown a zealous interest in the violins since he was seven years old. This interest, however, never for once entered the professional realm, nor was Mr. Stirn ever a dealer in violins. He played the violin, and played it well. Even now he is head of a string quartet which began way back in the '80s; but the members of this little group play strictly for their own pleasure.

Just an Amateur.

Yet, though but an amateur in all the dealings he has ever had with the violin, Mr. Stirn today is recognized throughout the world as an authority on the instrument. And because of his abundant knowledge in this field, owners of rare old violins often seek his advice, according to the Milwaukee Journal "It has been the supreme joy of my life that I have been able to make the acquaintance of some of the greatest violins of all time," said Mr.

At one time he had in his home close to $500,000 worth of violins, which included two genuine Stradivarii and many famous violins of other makes. All of these, however, were disposed of recently and the sole remainder of his once famous collection is a Gaspara de Salo, once owned by Ole Bull, eminent Norwegian violinist.

The Gaspara de Salo is the violin Mr. Stirn plays in the quartet. It was made about the time of Martin Luther's death, Mr. Stirn believes, and came into his possession through the widow of a friend named Rostav, who had acquired it from Ole Bull himself.

Had Big Collection.

Inside the Gaspara de Salo, when Mr. Stirn first acquired it, was the name Vuillaume, written in pencil, together with six or seven other signatures. In having it restringed a few years ago, the names were in some way rubbed out, an incident which he regrets, because Jean Baptiste Vuillaume is revered by violin lovers in much the same manner as they think of Stradi-

In addition to his private collection of noted instruments, Mr. Stirn has had under his roof more Stradivarius violins at one time than any other person or museum in the world. At various times collectors, dealers and amous violinists have left genuine Stradivarii in his home. Among these 'guest" instruments are the Emil Sauret and Lipinski Strads. He, himself, has owned the Hammer Stradivarius. one of the two Stradivarius violins that has never been cracked or tampered

Miss Thorn Will Study Beginnings of Eskimo Race.

Edmonton, Alta.-An intensive study of the origin of the Eskimo tribes in Canada's northern Arctic territories will be undertaken next summer by Miss Sue Thorn, graduate in anthropology of the University of California. Miss Thorn is at present in Edmonton laying plans for an extended stay in

The Eskimo language, anthropology, customs and folklore will be studied by the young California scientist with a view to proving or disproving the theory that the Eskimo race originally came from the Orient via the Bering straits. She plans to go north to Aklavik on the Mackenzie delta, early in the summer.

Although this is her first trip north, Miss Thorn has spent considerable time studying Eskimo life, language and customs, and is confident she will have little difficulty in facing the rigors of the Arctic.

After spending some time in Aklavik, "becoming acclimatized," she plans to journey east to Victoria island in Coronation gulf and possibly go on to Greenland if she can obtain permission from the Danish government.

After ending her Arctic researches, Miss Thorn will go to the Chicago university, where she studied before graduating from the University of California, and write a thesis on her find-

Pilot Completes First Million Miles of Flying

Chicago.-A million miles of flying in United Air Lines' service since he piloted the first mail plane between Chicago and the Southwest in 1926 was the record scored by Richard L. Dobie, when awarded his eighth service star, signifying completion of his eight thousandth hour of company flying. He is a pilot on the New York-Cleveland-Chicago division. Dobie is said to be the first pilot in the world to fly a million miles for a commercial air line.

Prior to joining United's staff, Dobie had 2,500 hours of flying time. This gives him a total of 10,500 hours and approximately 1,250,000 miles-equal to 50 trips around the world at the equator.

Dobie learned to fly in the army in 1917 and was later on army instructor. Nine years ago he made the inaugural air mail flight from Chicago to Kansas City.

All but one shot fired at the church fell to the ground. That shot struck and stuck. When Norfolk was rebuilt after the revolutionary war St. Paul's was repaired, but the tuckpointers carefully placed their mortar around the shot, to preserve it there as a reminder of what happened that fateful

"LITTLE GRAINS OF SAND-"

A UGUST 30, 1813. The morning sun was beating down on Fort Mims near Lake Tensaw in Alabama and its inhabitants knew they were in for another hot, sultry day. By and by a gentle breeze sprang up, but with the blazing sun overhead, it brought little relief to the 500-odd soldiers and settlers crowded together in the little

Outside, the vagrant breeze swirled around the palisaded walls, stirring up the sandy soil and drifting it gently back and forth. There was no one on guard at the eastern entrance, so nobody noticed that the sand was piling up little by little in front of the heavy log gate which had carelessly been left open.

Maj. Daniel Beasley, commander of the fort, standing at the door of his quarters as the drums began to beat the noonday mess call, may have noticed it. But if he did, it didn't seem important. A moment later he saw another sight which chilled his blood. Speeding across the sandy field outside the fort straight toward that open gate, came a mass of "Red Sticks"-Chief Red Eagle's fierce Creek warriors, at least a thousand of them!

Shouting "Indians! Indians!" at the top of his lungs, Major Beasley dashed toward the gate. As the howling savages swarmed down upon him, he thrust his shoulder against the rough timbers and pushed with the strength of despair. It started to swing shut, then stopped. The drifted sand was holding it back. The major bent his back and pushed-pushed. It was too late. In that moment a Creek warrior sprang through the opening and toma-

U. S. BECOMES "UNCLE SAM"

EARLY in the Nineteenth century Ebenezer and Samuel Wilson were large landowners and meat packers near Troy, N. Y. Well-liked by everybody, they were familarly known as "Uncle Eb" and "Uncle Sam."

Soon after the outbreak of the War of 1812 New York and New Jersey militia were camped near Albany. Elbert Anderson, Jr. of New Jersey, was given the contract for supplying them with rations, including "2,000 barrels of prime pork and 300 barrels of prime beef in full-bound barrels of white

Anderson appointed Samuel Wilson as an inspector to see that the meat was good and properly packed. On every barrel which he passed Wilson stamped the letters "U. S .- E. A." signifying that it was supplied to the United States government by Elbert

Anderson. One day a soldier asked an Irish employee of Wilson's the meaning of these letters. "Why, that means Elbert Anderson and Uncle Sam," he replied. "Uncle Sam who?" his questioner persisted. "Why, don't you know?" the Irishman said jokingly. "That means Uncle Sam Wilson. He owns all the land near here and he's feeding the army."

This remark was taken up and repeated by the soldiers and in a short time the use of the term became widespread. The Troy Post, in an editorial on September 7, 1813, referred to the hard luck which had "lighted on Uncle Sam's shoulders" and added a footnote, This cant term for our government has got almost as current as John Bull." Thus an Irishman's witty reply to a soldier's question thrust unexpected fame upon Samuel Wilson and resulted in a personification which cartoonists made familiar throughout the

HARNESSED WIND

A YOUNG man twenty-one years old happened to see a bad railroad accident. "If the brakes had only held," the engineer said before he died, "I could have stopped in time." The young man's name was George M. Westinghouse and it is one of the universal names now. He invented the air brake.

With the courage of his convictions, he talked his way into the office of one of the most important railroad men in tain of industry what he had made that would insure the safety of passengers on the trains. The magnate laughed. "Do you mean to say you can stop a train with wind?"

"Why, yes," said the young man, "if you want to put it that way." "I've got no time to waste on fools," was the railroad man's reply.

But soon afterwards, the official was present at a demonstration of the newfangled invention. He saw a train coming at full speed down a clear stretch of track. Would the air-brake work? Only George Westinghouse knew that it would. But he was not prepared for the successful climax to the demonstration. The brake was applied too suddenly and the train stopped so abruptly that it jumped the track! The air brake made high speed railroading possible. It is one of the most tremendous trifles of the machine age.

FINDS POULTRY HAS PAID WELL IN PAST

Average of Forty-Six Cents an Hour Noted.

Prepared by Extension Staff, Department of Agricultural Economics, New York State College.—WNU Service.

Poultry has paid relatively well on farms in the past, and probably will continue to pay except during particularly unfavorable years, according to New York state 1935 agricultural outlook.

"During the past 19 years, the poultry enterprise has returned an average of 46 cents an hour for the time spent on it by farmers who kept cost accounts in co-operation with the state college of agriculture. These farmers are better than the average.

"The poultry enterprise returned these farmers at least 30 cents for an hour of labor in all but four years of the past 19. The years when they did not reach this figure were in 1917, 1931, 1932, and 1933."

According to the outlook, farmers received for eggs in October, 1934, 4 per cent less than they received in October before the war, and feed prices in 1934 were 4 per cent higher than prewar prices. In other words, the report says, the purchasing power of eggs in October, in terms of feed, was only 92 per cent of the 1910-1914 average, which is about the same as the average for the first ten months of 1934. The feed situation is said to be even less favorable in the drouth areas of the Middle West.

Young Chicks May Be Fed

Oversupply of Minerals There is such a thing as overfeeding young chicks on minerals, and that is just as bad as underfeeding. The rather strange thing, however, is that an excessive supply of minerals manifests itself in much the same manner as when too little mineral matter is supplied. A mash containing the usual percentage of meat scraps or meat and bone meal and dry skim milk, according to tests at the Ohio experiment station, carries plenty of mineral matter for chicks until they are ten weeks old.

These tests are in accord with results obtained at other stations, and may therefore be considered as quite reliable. Meat scraps are very rich in calcium, carrying from 20 to 25 per cent of that element, which normally makes up three quarters of the minerals in the mash of chickens. Dry skim milk carries about 10 per cent of phosphorus and calcium in a very digestible form. When one substitutes part vegetable protein for meat scraps in the mash, it is highly desirable to feed additional minerals, as the vegetable proteins do not contain as much mineral matter as the animal proteins.

Broodiness Inherited

Broodiness is a very variable character, with no "average" time of occurthe natural periods of broodiness but artificial methods of rearing have made the desire to rear their young a matter of uncertain occurrence, according to an authority in the Rural New-Yorker. The tendency to broodiness is to a certain extent an inherited factor and some breeds are more inclined to frequent returns of that period than others. Individual birds in all breeds also exhibit great differences in this respect. Weeding out the frequent sitters is practiced by poultry men in order to avoid transmission of the trait.

Caring for Young Turkeys Equipment for caring for young turkeys upon range may be very simple and home-made. After the poults have left their brooders at about ten weeks of age and are upon clean meadow or other land, they need only the shelter of a simple roof at night, and this may be a one-pitch roof supported by posts and having beneath perches made from poles five or six feet from the ground. Perches should be high enough to protect from small, prowling animals but not so high as to be likely to cause injury if their occupants are crowded off and fall heavily to the ground.-Rural New-Yorker.

Poultry Notes The 1934 turkey crop was about 15 per cent above that for 1933. Started chicks are chicks which have been fed and watered and not more than thirty days old.

If succulent winter greens are not available, clover or alfalfa hay can be fed in wire racks made for that purpose. The hens will pick off the leaves and the stems can be used for litter or nesting material.

An egg is about 73 per cent water and the old hen herself more than half water, according to the United States Depa tment of Agriculture.

Changes in feed, management, severe weather changes or shocks of any kind such as fright will often stop production and cause the flock to molt.

Breeders of turkeys generally claim that the number of toms with hump backs are increasing, and that these hump-backs are as a rule sterile.

It was different from the splashes made by the young frogs, and the Big Pickerel knew the difference. He would have been very glad to get one of the young frogs. In fact, he could have told what had become of a good many young frogs which had disappeared very mysteriously. But he had paid no attention to the splashes of the young frogs when they had dived into the water at the warning of Redwig the Blackbird. Dental Hygiene

The Road to Health

By DR. R. ALLEN GRIFFITH

THE DENTIST

SUCCESSFUL dentist must be something of a surgeon, an artist, a sculptor and a mechanic. He should have the same understanding of the laws of physics, chemistry and biology that the physician should have. He should have the same delicate skill that is required of the successful surgeon. He must be a mechanic of the highest order and must be able to perform these mechanical operations upon living tissue through an opening in the face about two inches wide.

The dentist's education consists of a four-year course of 32 weeks and 6 days in each week. The dental student must study the same fundamental subjects as the physician, such as anatomy, physiology, pathology, materiamedica, bacteriology, histology, chemistry, etc. Besides he must study many special dental subjects.

After he graduates, if he expects to keep up with the rapid advances of his profession, he must keep on studying and taking special courses as long as he lives, for no individual can possitly master the dental art in the schools alone. This is equally true of medicine.

The dentist must have patients as well as patience. Few people go to him until they have to, consequently they expect to be hurt and are in anything but a cheerful frame of mind. The dentist must do all the smiling for both himself and patient. His efforts are seldom appreciated and he is often regarded as a disagreeable necessity.

All this is about to change. The day has passed when the dentist will be looked upon as a mere tooth carpenter. The public is beginning to learn the relation between teeth and health, and the dentist has already learned that his work has a far-reaching effect, not only upon the health, but upon the very life of his patient.

The day is coming when the public will begin to realize that to be well, they must have sound healthy teeth in clean healthy mouths. They will then associate the dentist with life and hope and health and youth, instead of pain.

When dentistry has accomplished its wonderful stage of present day evolution, the dentist will no longer be avoided as long as possible. He will be sought as one who brings health and comfort and freedom from pain. People will go to him, not because they have toothache, but in order that they may not have toothache. Dentistry will be looked upon as a pain and disease preventive and will be welcomed as among the most useful and popular professions.

DEVELOPMENT OF DENTISTRY

THE records of the practice of dentistry date back in the case of the Egyptians to somewhere about three thousand years before the Christian Even in this early period we have evidence that some methods were in vogue for the prevention of denta! disease. For instance, the Ebers papyri, probably compiled gradually from 3000 B. C. to 1500 B. C., contain the following prescription for strength-ening the teeth: "Powder of flint stone one part, green lead one part, honey one part-to be rubbed on the teeth."

Skulls from the tombs of the Egyptians have gold bands and fillings in the teeth, and also show the ravages of pyorrhea. In Chinese history there are many references made in regard to the care of the teeth and attempts to prevent their decay. Relics of the ancient times show that the Egyptians, Babylonians, Greeks, Romans, all had a system of dentistry. however crude it may have been. In 1839, the first college of dentistry was established in the United States at Baltimore, and American dentistry has led the world since that time. The progress of dentistry has been so rapid that today it is being recognized as second to no other science in its importance to good health and human welfare.

This is its modern development-far beyond that dreamed of in Egypt or Greece. The new theory is simple. The mouth, it says, is something over which there is sanitary control. It should be watched instead of being neglected. In the mouth are the teeth and the teeth have a direct relation to the general health. That prevention of decay of the sible to a great extent is the modern watchword of dental science. It is much better to prevent dental troubles than to have them to cure. The same measures which are nec-teeth and disease of the gums is pos-essary to prevent dental troubles will also prevent other troubles that affect the human system. The mouth is the gateway through which everything much pass that enters the body. On good, sound teeth and a clean healthy mouth depend mastication, digestion, nutrition, health, happiness and long life.

Oral hygiene is the latest offering of dental science to the world. It is the science of taking proper care of the teeth and mouth to promote good Simple mouth cleanliness will prevent and cure disease and prolong life. C. Western Newspaper Union.

Crocheted Rug in "Cubes and Stars"

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

This is another rug design that our readers will recognize as taken from the "Cubes and Stars" quilt design that is possibly a hundred years old. This rug measures thirty inches and requires about two pounds of material to crochet. It is made up of 12 diamonds and slip stitched together to form a star or blocks, depending on the way the color scheme is worked out. It is always an interesting rug to study (count the cubes) and well adapted for a child's room.

This is one of the twenty beautitiful crocheted rugs shown in colors with directions in rug book No. 24. If this rug interests you send 15c to our Rug Department and get the instructions for making this rug and nineteen others.

The oldest living city of South America is as medieval as ever in its narrow cobbled streets winding about between old Moorish-Spanish houses, in its Sixteenth century monasteries, old dungeons and moats, and the same grim fortresses which were attacked by Drake and Morgan and the buc-

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service. HE population of Ontong Java, tiny group of islands east of New Guinea, is dwindling so rapidly that it appears there will be few inhabitants on the islands in a decade or two. In 1907, there were about 5,000 natives. Today there are only about 750. Passing through many of the islands' villages, one notices cleared patches and ruined houses, witnesses of the tragedy of Ontong Java. The natives have fallen easy prey to malaria, tuberculosis, influenza and other diseases.

White men tried to root out the natives' old customs instead of allowing them to die gradually; and they were only partly successful. The old color and ritual have gone, leaving in their place monotony of life and a more or less sordid outlook.

To find what the old time was like, one has to go to the older men of the village-a procedure far less satisfactory to scientists than actual observa-

Fishing is the main occupation of the men. Before they can fish, however, they must have canoes, and before canoes are made there must be tools. Since there are no metallic ores, and the soft coral is unsuitable for stone implements, tools formerly were made from clamshells, which are heavy and capable of being polished. Many of these shells are more than 2 feet across. They were ground with pumice washed up by the tide.

Few Trees on Island.

Because there are so few trees on the island, not nearly enough to provide boats for a quarter of the present population, canoes usually are made from driftwood, especially plentiful after the northwest gales to which the group is liable from November to One sees logs that have possibly drifted half around the world before they come to rest on the beach.

The logs are towed to the workshop where all canoes on Leganina island are made. The village magician is then summoned to strike the first blow and thus charm away evil spirits, so that the wood can be shaped with impunity. Nowadays it takes two men, working about six hours a day, two months to make a canoe, or even longer if the canoe be a large one. Before steel tools were used, the work must have taken much longer.

The log is first shaped on the outside; next, the inside is roughly chipped out, and from then on the outside and the inside are chipped alternately until the shell of the hull is of desired thinness. A strake is lashed on with tough fiber and the space calked with coconut husks. The whole canoe is rubbed over with a coarse seaweed resembling lime; this not only seals up any cracks, but serves as a coating of white paint.

The outrigger booms are addedfrom three to nine, according to the size of the canoe-and to these is attached the outrigger float. Detachable peaks are made for the bows and the stern to deflect the waves. Then, after being charmed once more by the magician, the canoe is ready for the Three-cornered sails, formerly made from pandanus leaves, are cut now from light canvas or calico. The canoe is always sailed so that the wind strikes it on the side of the outrigger; otherwise it would capsize. It cannot sail against the wind. Though the canoes are not very seaworthy and are liable to be swamped, they have carried passengers on many long voy-

Almost all the men go out daily in the canoes to catch fish, and they come home laden. If it is too stormy to use the canoes, a crowd goes to the lee side of the island to fish on the reef. Each man carries two nets, tied to two sticks in such a way as to form triangular bags. After advancing in line along the reef for some distance, the men form a semicircle, with the shore as a diameter. They close in slowly, and, when they are all close together, rush forward with a shout to catch the surrounded fish.

Children Have Their Task.

The children wait on the shore with baskets, into which the hauls are thrown. Again and again the process is repeated, till each man thinks he has caught enough.

A shoal of fish offshore may be surrounded in much the same way, the fishermen going in canoes, each provided with a long net. The nets are joined together, the shoal is surrounded, and the fish are driven ashore, caught in hand nets, or speared. Some kinds of fish, such as the shark and the bonito, may be caught only by specialists. For the shark wooden hooks are used. The bonito falls vic- have a feast.

The other bowed slightly, but his eyes did not meet Elliott's.

"I'm glad you are so generous," he said and probably only Ben caught the mockery in the tone. "Am I too late for tea, Dawn?"

Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, watched this with grimly set lips. Dawn replied that Brandon was only just in time and Ben, picking up his cap and coat, prepared to go.

"You were talking of dances," he said to Dawn. "There's one on the cards for Saturday night, I'm told. Would you mind going with a mere

Her face lighted. "Mind! I'd love it!" she said and the honest enthusiasm in her voice caused Nicholas Brandon to look at her sharply.

"Saturday night, then. Good-day, Mr. Brandon," - with that challenging smile. He turned to the woman in the doorway. "Good-by. I guess I'll have to call you Aunt Em. That's the only name I know you by!"

As Ben passed out beneath the hemlocks and turned into the street, amazed at Brandon's manner, he brushed against a man who, he thought afterwards, must have been standing there. In the twilight he could not be certain but he believed that he had never seen that heavily bearded face before. He looked over his shoulder later to see the man, who had started on in the opposite direction, return and pass slowly before Dawn McManus' home again.

CHAPTER VIII

Nicholas Brandon was a man of forty-five. He was rich, he was powerful, he had achieved much of what he held to be desirable.

But his experience had been empty of things that most men crave above all else. He had not seen Dawn Mc-Manus in three years until she came back to Tincup that November. He had known her always. He had watched her grow from infant to child; from child to a wistful, shy girl, living under the cloud of her father's tracic disappearance; but the transition from girlhood to womanhood had been made during her longest absence from the town that had been her only home. And so when he saw her, after her arrival, instead of the young girl he remembered, toward whom he had always been gentle and kind while he sought to pilfer her heritage, he enwoman. She charmed him, stirred in his heart long neglected and now twisted and distorted wants which. given liberty in his youth, might have been fine and open and clean. He wanted Dawn McManus as he never had wanted anything before.

Slowly a clear understanding of that desire struggled through to his consciousness. In the beginning it was only an unidentified, disturbing urge but when the realization finally took shape he proceeded deliberately and methodically toward the formulation of a plan, as was his way in attaining any goal.

He saw Dawn frequently, dropping in to visit briefly in passing, taking her in his cutter on a drive to a camp once. casually asking her to do this or that with him. But he could not interest her despite his persistent efforts, and now another element was injected into the situation. When he encountered Ben Elliott that afternoon in friendly conversation with Dawn it required all his resourcefulness to retain a show of self-control. Inwardly he seethed with a hatred which now had the element of jealousy for an embittering alloy. He hated Ben Elliott with all his soul and mingled with his passion for Dawn McManus was a species of hate as well. He hated her for her cleanliness, for her sweetness, for her power to attract young men to her.

A double motive impelled him, thereafter, to plot and scheme and strive to possess the Hoot Owl. Without that timber and the tidy fortune it might some day represent Dawn would be without resources. And a girl without property, he believed, would be easy

But complications rose to stir his ire and chagrin. And so this nightit was very late-he sat in his office, with Lydia on the other side of his flat-topped desk. Lydia. Just that. She needed no other name for identification in Tincup. The women who, with her, occupied that short and bleak and isolated row of houses across the tracks-Section Thirty-Seven, it was called by the town-needed none but a given name. He had summoned her and she had come according to instructions, furtively and alone, long after the rest of

She sat, a bit tight lipped, her button eyes on Brandon's face, and lis-

sively. The man finished, calm and assured in his dictatorship and from his manner he might have been issuing an order to a subordinate which had to do with a commonplace detail of his business affairs. But after he had stopped the woman leaned just a bit

"It's a rotten deal!" she said in a quick, nervous manner. "Why, she's only a girl, Brandon; and the boy, he's as clean as a hound's tooth. It's rot-

Brandon shrugged and looked away. "I don't care to be mixed up in this," she went on. "I don't fancy playing any such game.'

Defiance was there, and it struck the man's temper. His dark eyes swung back to focus on her face and about his lips was the beginning of a malicious smile.

"You refuse?" "If I do, what?"

He leaned quickly against the desk

"One word to the immigration people and you go back to Canada. Do you think they forget . . . the Cana-

Lydia blinked rapidly and bit her

"You wouldn't turn me up!" she said sharply.

Brandon leaned back, laughing comfortably.

"Wouldn't L though! Wouldn't I? If you refuse . . . Try it, my friend, and then try Canada's memory. You've been safe from their law for three years. In twelve hours I could and would toss you to them and have the satisfaction of a duty done."

For a moment they sat in silence, Then Lydia spoke with a bitter shake of her head.

"I know when I'm licked," she said crisply. "It's rotten; a foul blow . . but I'll have to go through with it, it seems!" She rose, and her breath was somewhat quick. "But some day, Nick Brandon, you'll slip! For years, as I get it, you've had others carry your dirt for you. Remember, the time will come when this power you feel so sure about will crumble! The time will come when you'll have no one to turn to, no one to threaten into fighting your fights for you! I wonder . . . what'll you do

"That," he said easily, "is distinctly my own affair."

CHAPTER IX

It was Saturday night and Tincup was dancing. In the Odd Fellows hall a violin, a cornet and a piano made music for the scores who had paid their fee and danced in the glaring, barren room. ..nd among them, a cynosure for all eyes, went Ben Elliott and Dawn McManus.

It was the first time many of the townspeople had had a real good look at Dawn since her return; it was Ben Elliott's initial encounter with a social function in Tincup; it was their first appearance in public together. Curiosity prompted much of the neck craning because Dawn, the daughter of Denny McManus, always had been a conspicuous figure, but now her loveliness was heightened by a flush and both men and women forgot that she was known chiefly as the daughter of a murderer.

Ben, dressed in a decently fitting business suit instead of the woods clothing in which they had always seen him, looked even more youthful than

The two were apparently having the time of their lives. Ben talked. How he talked! He talked of this, that, the other thing constantly. He felt he must talk and keep talking of impersonal matters or he would find himself blurting words of love into Dawn's ear, there in a public dance hall. He felt that unless he kept talking of trivialthings he would find himself shouting:

"You are the most lovely thing that ever breathed and I love you, love you, love you!"

So he seized upon every subject that came into his head eagerly, almost des-Now he was telling her of the new bookkeeper he had hired the day be-

"Queer fellow, in a way. Seems to be capable of a much better job than keeping books for the Hoot Owl, I've guessed at booze, disastrous family experience and any number of things, was a little leary of letting him into the office and had him in the mill a couple of days but, gee, you can't let a man who's certainly a high grade office hand do work like that!

"I brought him in and told him needed a bookkeeper but had just had one experience with a man that made me a little jumpy. I had a boy out there who was a little light fingered, He didn't get away with anything, luck-

"But I told Martin-John Martin his name is-that I was going to put him on the books if he'd take the job with the understanding that I was going to suspect him of a lot of things for a ong time. He gave me one of the funniest looks I've ever seen and said he wasn't afraid to be suspected.

"So there he is. We're in the new office, now. He and I each have a little room just big enough for a bed and I like him a lot.'

The dance ended and they walked toward vacant chairs and were so occupied with one another that they did not notice the hush that had fallen over the place, nor the woman who had entered until she had crossed the floor and stopped before them.

Lydia stood peering through the ranks of onlookers that clustered about the doorway until the floorwas cleared. Then, with a short, imperative word, she shouldered her way through and nto the room.

She stopped just within the threshold and shook the light snow from her fur coat and that gesture was enough to cause words to die in the throats of those who saw. Lydia, here! Lydia, from Thirty-Seven, invading this place where decent people, where good men and women and little children, were assembled!

The woman did not besitate. Head up, intently, she crossed the floor straight toward Ben Elliott who, eyes fast on Dawn to miss no change in her mobile face, still talked with animation, unaware of the hush about

He did not stop talking until the woman's shadow fell upon him. Then he looked up, saw her and rose.

He rose because a woman was standing there, evidently waiting to speak to him. He did not know her; had never seen her before. He had no time to observe and judge. He would have risen, anyhow, because he was naturaly courteous to women. He did more than rise. He even bowed just a trifle when he saw that her eyes were so fast on him. He did not notice that Dawn started, that one hand lifted quickly to her cheek.

Lydia's voice sounded sharp and hard and rasping in the silence. "I should think you'd be ashamed of yourself!" she said. Ben had started to smile, but this changed to a frown of perplexity. "Ashamed, ma'am?" he asked. "Why,

"Yes; ashamed! There's that poor girl in my house, sick and crying for days! You brought her here, didn't you? You're the one who got her to come to Tincup. And now, when she needs you, you won't come near her!" Ben looked at Dawn, who was shrinking back in her chair; at other people whose faces reflected incredulity or but none seems to fit him. At first I | vicarious guilt or fright.

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott-from "Yonder"-arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. He defeats Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Nicholas Brandon, Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has bettered. The details of the river," and town bully, in a log-birling contest. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested and finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, whose father has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben worsts him in a fist fight and throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames, discovers the fire was started with gas ine. Elliott gets an offer of spot cash for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time limit is set. Ben meets Dawn McManus and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman. The railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass, and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract, is blown up. By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare. tened to him talk, crisply and inci- minutes to spare.

"Ma'am, I . . That is, I don't understand you," he stammered. His eyes were taking her in, now, from her costly fur coat to the emerald earrings, and the hardness of her eyes; and, as in a daze, he classified her, put her in the shameful niche which was hers. A great flush of bewilderment swept into his face.

"Don't understand!" Lydia laughed harshly, "I'll say you understand! Maybe you think you can abuse a girl like that and get away with it in this town, but not while she's in my house, you

A wave of humiliation overwhelmed Ben. What could a man do in a situation like this? What could be say? He was fouled, outmatched. Nothing in his experience stood him in stead to meet such an emergency as this one.

"Why . . . Why, this is an outrage," he began weakly. But his fighting spirit surged upward, steadied him. "I've never seen you in my life! I don't even know what you're talking about! This is either a mistake or-"

"Mistake!" the woman cried shrilly. "Don't try to get away with that! I suppose it does surprise you to have me find you here! But you've kept out of sight, dodged me and-"

"There's no stopping me now, Elliott! I've come to show you up-" "You've come to make trouble on a foundation of lies!" he said and stepped closer to her.

His face was drawn and pale, now, jaws set, and his eyes flared dangerously. "This is some outrageous plot," he said evenly, and so low that only those nearest him could hear. "This is done deliberately to give me a black eye before these people here! You're a party to a filthy scheme, whoever you are!" "Fine words, Elliott! Fine words! But this girl's tears and misery are on your head and if you won't help her, I will. She goes back where she came from tomorrow!"

With that she turned and, self-composed, almost proud in her bearing, crossed the floor. Ben watched her go until she had disappeared down the stairway. Then he faced about, wondering what he could say to Dawn Mc-Manus, but she was not there.

His face went blank in amazement, bewilderment.

"She ducked out," a man whispered and the sound carried through the Brandon, alone in his office, drank deeply from a whisky bottle. Then, on a telegraph pad scrawled an Ontario address. The message itself consisted of but two words: "Send Red."

Finds "Fascination" by Snakes Is Another Myth

Especially remarkable is the current belief that snakes have the power to "fascinate" or exert hypnotic influence over their victims. It is possible that absence of eyelids and consequent inability to close the eyes may be partly responsible for this fetish; the creature's sinuous movements and habit of probing the ground with its forked tongue may perhaps further encourage the common superstition.

That the snake has from early times exerted a very powerful psychological influence over the imaginative mind of man there can be no doubt whatever. One has but to recall the grotesque story of the hoop snake or the American Indian's belief that the rattlesnake adds a joint to its rattle every time it takes a human life.

The actual "fascinating" power of the snake over intended victims has been disproved by many carefully conducted experiments. Many years ago, when it was customary to feed the zoo's snakes in public on living rats, mice, etc., it was usual to see such small animals contentedly feeding or cleaning themselves within a few inches of the reptiles, says E. C. Boulenger in the London Observer.

Invented Original Telegraph

Samuel Morse, the American who in vented the original telegraph apparatus, obtained a patent in France; but this was afterwards appropriated by the French government without compensation to the inventor. Eventually he returned to America, and the first telegram was transmitted from Baltimore to Washington is 1844. The original Morse apparatus recorded the dots and dashes on a moving tape, bur when it was discovered that messages could be read by sound alone, the tape was abolished and a speeding up of transmission and reception was effected. Even an experienced Morse operator could only deal with 40 ~ 50 average-length telegrams an hour.

While the choice of diet is important throughout life, it is essential in childhood ('hildren must add inches each year to the structure of their bodies, and as the same time the formation of good bones and teeth are calcium and phosphorus, which insure not onl, the growth of the body but also its strength. Children need twice as much calcium each day as do adults. They also must have a proportionately large amount of phosphorus. To make calcium and phosphorus function properly, we must have a liberal amount of vitamin D. In an article by Victor K. La Mer, professor of chemistry at Columbia university. the statement is made that this proportion is very important and that we can supply our diets best with calcium and phosphorus through the inclusion of a liberal amount of milk and leafy vegetables. Whole grains also are valuable on this ac count. For vitamin D we depend upon sunshine, cod-liver oil, or foods which have been reinforced with vitamin b All of these work together in one interest.

COMPLETE LINES OF TRUCK TIRES FOR EVERY TRUCKING SERVICE LOWEST PRICES—GIVING LONG MILEAGE AND GREATEST ECONOMY

FIRESTONE pioneered the ship-by-truck movement in 1918, and ever since has consistently led in anticipating every requirement in the design and construction of truck and bus tires for every transportation condition. To accomplish this, Firestone has consistently followed the fundamental principle of its founder and active head, Harvey S. Firestone, "Always to find the way to build tires better than anyone else."

While there are many reasons why Firestone Tires are safer and more economical, there are two reasons that stand out above all others. One is Gum-Dipping; and the other is two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread.

By Gum-Dipping, every strand in every cord is soaked in liquid rubber, preventing friction-adding extra strength and long mileage. By having two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords placed between the tread and cord body, it is practical to use a tread with higher, more rugged shoulders and a deeper non-skid with flatter contour.

All this provides more rubber on the road, giving longer wear, greater traction and quicker stops. These two extra construction features are patented and used only in Firestone Tires. Take a forward step in maintaining schedules and reducing operating costs. Call on the Firestone Service Store or Firestone Service Dealer today.

MORE power! More speed! steel body, pioneered by Dodge more than 20 years ago...safe, hour! Yet more economical than ever. Actually costs less to run than smaller, lower-priced cars, owners say. They report 20-?2 — 24 miles to the gallon of gas ... savings of 30¢ to 40¢ on every dollar's worth of oil they buy!

That's real economy! And this new Dodge has dozens of other surprises besides its astonishing thrift of operation and upkeep. You'll experience an entirely new kind of motoring thrill with the "Airglide Ride" ... smooth, always level, free from sidesway even on curves.

With "Synchromatic Control", driving has been made twice as easy and effortless. Altogether, there are 95 basic advancements in the New-Value Dodge . . . plus the sturdy all-perfected, dual-cylinder hydraulic brakes, introduced by Dodge many years ago, and constantly improved ... patented Floating Power engine mountings...and otherfamous features exclusive with Dodge in its price field. Only the genius of a manufacturing organization such as Dodge - with such complete facilities, with 20 years of experience in building nearly three million fine vehicles-could create such outstanding dollarfor-dollar value!
