C. R. JACKSON DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Dean Of State Journalists; Prominent In Politics Of Michigan

Charles R. Jackson, owner of the Iosco County Gazette and dean of Michigan newspapermen, died early Tuesday morning at his residence in East Tawas after an illness of several months.

Charles Rowe Jackson was born in Shiawassee county, Michigan, on December 11, 1853. When he was nine years old his father enlisted in the army and while in Chattanooga, Tennessee, enroute to join his regiment, he died of bronchial pneumonia. His mother, being left with four small children, became the first public school teacher in Shiawassee county. When he was eleven years old he was taken from school and made an apprentice in the office of the Shiawassee Tribune. Under the direction of its owner, John N. Ingersoll, Mr. Jackson became a master printer. At the age of 16 he was made foreman of the job printing department, supervising men many years his senior.

He went to Norwich, N. Y., and became identified with the Chenango Telegraph, later returning to Michigan and working for a time on the Detroit Tribune. In January, 1877, he came to Tawas City and worked with H. E. Hoard. Four years later he purchased the paper and moved it to East Tawas where it has been published continuously under the name of "The Iosco County Gazette."

Mr. Jackson was twice supervisor of census for the Tenth Congressional District, first in 1900 and then in 1910, being commissioned by President William McKinley and then by President William Howard Taft. He was very proud of the fact that he first introduced the name of General R. A. Alger of Detroit for governor of Michigan. Mr. Jackson was actively engaged in the printing business until the fall of 1932. Since that time he has been confined to his home, declining gradually until his death April 22.

In November, 1877, Mr. Jackson married Mary Ellen Fisher of Hemlock Lake, New York, who lived until August, 1931. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1927 with all their seven children present. They are all still living; namely Evelyn J. Ramsay, Angola, Indiana; Arthur G. Jackson, master mechanic D. & M. Railway, East Tawas; Charles R. Jackson, Jr., Birmingham, an official in the Service Department, Pontiac Division, General Motors Corporation; Chester A. Jackson and Nella J. Bonney, East Tawas; and Kate J. Rust and Hazel Adel Jackson, both teachers in the Detroit public schools. He is also survived by a sister, Miss Adell Jackson, member of the State Normal College faculty at Ypsilanti, thirteen grandchildren, three great grandchildren and a nephew, Howard Sargent of Detroit.

Funeral services were held from the home Thursday afternoon. Rev. W. A. Gregory officiated. Interment was in the East Tawas cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. George Siglin of Detroit spent the week end in the Tawas with relatives.

Mrs. E. B. Van Horn

Mrs. E. B. Van Horn, age 75 years, passed away at her home on Sunday, April 21, after several months of illness.

Sarah Jane Green was born at New Market, Ontario, on October 24, 1859, and was married to E. B. Van Horn at Bay City on July 9th, 1884. They moved to Alabaster the next year and in 1897 they moved to Tawas City where they have since made their home.

She leaves her husband, E. B. Van Horn; three sons, Edwin of Gladstone, Chas. M. of Tawas City and Lloyd of Lansing; two daughters, Miss Lottie at home and Mrs. Fred Kohn of McVoy; seven grandchildren; two brothers, Leo Green of Traverse City and John Green of Lansing, and a sister, Mrs. Mary Sovey of Pontiac.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Horn celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last summer with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sovey of Pontiac at their home in this city.

The funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon from the home, with Rev. W. A. Gregory of the M. E. church officiating. Burial was in the Tawas City cemetery.

Mrs. Van Horn will be sadly missed by her family and a large number of friends and neighbors.

Trout Festival To Be Held At West Branch May 3-4-5

Plans for West Branch's fourth annual trout festival are going forward rapidly and indications point to another successful show in celebration of the opening of Michigan's trout season.

Favored in former years with a week end on which to hold its festival, the committeemen in charge were confronted with the problem of whether they would stage the event on the actual opening or the week end following. The latter was selected, automatically setting the dates for this year's show at May 3-4-5.

Herded as the official opener of the trout season, the West Branch celebration will offer a varied program, the activity of which will center largely around the streams of the region, though much interest is being shown in the unique West Branch scenic trails, routed and charted for visitors' recreation throughout the year.

A festival queen will be the center of the entertainment which includes boxing bouts, parades, dances, casting events and other numbers of festival interest.

May Ball To Be Held At Camp Silver Creek

The C. C. C. boys are holding a big dance at Camp Silver Creek on Friday evening, May 3rd. All the young ladies from the neighboring communities are cordially invited to be guests and help the boys enjoy this event. Transportation to and from Camp will be furnished from East Tawas and Tawas City. Several matrons of the community will be present to act as chaperons. Gentlemen are invited if accompanied by partners. Admission for gentlemen will be 25c; ladies free. A good orchestra has been secured and a fine time should be had by all.

In Appreciation

We wish to take this opportunity to express our appreciation to the people of this community for their patronage while we were in the restaurant business.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Laidlaw.

Clean-Up Week

The week beginning April 29 has been designated as Clean-Up Week. Rubbish put in barrels or boxes and conveniently placed at the curb will be taken care of by the city.

BEAL NURSERY HAS 28,000,000 TREE CAPACITY

Spring Sowing Season Brings Increased Activity

With the signing of the relief bill by President Roosevelt work began in earnest at the Beal Nursery maintained by the United States Forest Service in East Tawas. This nursery, enlarged and revamped last fall for the production of Norway, white and jack pine trees to be used for reforestation on the Huron National Forest, now has an area of 18 acres and a capacity of 28,000,000 a year.

With the frost barely from the ground, tractors and teams began plowing, disking and dragging to prepare the soil. The whole area is dotted with groups of men seemingly working independently but in reality are all coordinated like the gearing of a precision machine. The spring sowing season, in fact, closely parallels an assembly line in an automobile factory.

First a crew drives in stakes and puts in seedbed boards. They are immediately followed by the levelers who smooth off the beds with a land leveler. Next come the seeders who with the new pine seeder drill sow seed at the rate of 50,000 a minute.

The beds are rolled by another group who in turn are followed by the acid crew. These men apply sulphuric acid to the beds at the rate of three ounces to the square foot in order to kill certain parasites. Incidentally both the pine seeder and the acid applying machine were invented and perfected by Harry C. Turner, the nursery superintendent. A final crew covers the beds with screens to protect them from birds and mice.

About May 10 the young trees appear. They are watered by means of an overhead sprinkler system until September and October when they are ready for planting in the forest.

In addition to spring sowing other crews are transplanting seedlings, erecting windbreaks, weeding certain trees which remain in the nursery for two seasons, and engaged in general maintenance which is necessary in so extensive a plant.

The ordinary nursery crew ranges from 15 to 50 men depending upon seasonal activity. In keeping with its policy to relieve unemployment the nursery hires practically all its labor locally. Many men return annually and thus an organization has been formed that would take years of training to replace.

The nursery is always open for inspection and visitors are cordially invited. Various forest schools send classes here every year to supplement their studies. Annually several hundred of tourists stop in to become acquainted with the initial step in reforestation.

McCullen-Anderson

Miss Evelyn McMullen of Wilber became the bride of Oscar Anderson of Baldwin in a pretty ring ceremony at the Swedish Lutheran church in East Tawas on Saturday evening. Rev. P. Gustave Wahlstrom performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Hazel McMullen and Mrs. Edwin Zaharias, and the groom by Ed. Anderson and Floyd Schaaf. Mrs. Mary Anderson of East Tawas played the wedding march.

The bride was attractively gowned in pale blue taffeta with a floor length white veil and carried talisman roses. The bridesmaid wore white flat crepe and the matron of honor light blue flat crepe. The bride's attendants wore corsages of sweet peas.

Immediately following the ceremony a supper was served at the home of the groom's parents. Thirty guests were served at two tables decorated in pink and white and lighted by candles.

After the supper all went to the Wilber hall where a dance, given by the bride and groom as a farewell to their friends, was in progress.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will reside in Detroit, where the former is employed.

S.E.R.A. Clubs Are Reorganizing For Outdoor Recreation

The recreation directors of Iosco county report a change in the program for spring and summer. Both boys and girls and adults will be included in the programs which will be mostly outdoor activities.

During the winter months physical recreation programs and general fun-nights were enjoyed by a large number throughout the county. They certainly helped pass the long cold months from December to April.

Softball teams and hiking clubs and other programs are being organized. The interest is increasing as warm weather really approaches. Already one group of "hikers" led by Chas. Robinson found the sparkling waters of the AuGres river almost too great a temptation. Two boys were found to be missing from the group and, of course, the remainder of the team kept their eyes keenly on every spot where they were likely to be located. Finally they were sighted down the river, high up on the opposite bank preparing for the first spring plunge. A few yells from the group warned them that they had been discovered and they dashed off for a thick clump of bushes. Shortly they appeared from their dressing room of cedars, fully clad but determined to take a bathing suit along next time.

Although these hikes are taken for the pleasure of the group, yet it is hoped that something may be learned and that the beauties of nature will be appreciated more as a result of these activities.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Germany Enraged by Her Condemnation by League Council—Work Relief Program Going Forward—Compromise Bonus Measure.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © Western Newspaper Union.

GERMANY was thoroughly enraged by the action of the League of Nations council in adopting the tri-power resolution condemning the Reich for violating the treaty of Versailles by rearmament, and it was expected Reichsfuehrer Hitler would make a defiant retort. As a first step he sent from his Bavarian retreat instructions to Secretary of State Von Buelow to protest "England's defection at Stresa and Geneva." This Von Buelow did, delivering the message to Ambassador Sir Eric Phipps for transmission to London. The German press was loud in denunciation of the league action and Litvinov, the Soviet delegate, came in for most of the abuse because he delivered the chief speech in support of the resolution at the council session. Just recently Germany granted to Russia credits amounting to $80,000,000. Poland also was assailed for "abandoning" Germany, but in Warsaw it was said by officials that Poland was still the friend of the Reich. One newspaper there said quite truly that the complaint against Germany was "a formal matter because the discussion could not result in any actual solution of the problem, but only bring something like emotional relief."

Strange as it may seem, the Jews in Germany are warmly supporting Hitler in this controversy. The following message was sent to him: "The League of National German Jews stands unshaken in its loyalty to the Fatherland, and hopes the government's defense policy will not be changed on account of the Geneva proceedings." German resentment against Great Britain is especially warm because she feels she was deceived in the recent negotiations. Consequently she thinks Britain's prestige as a mediator in continental affairs is destroyed. During the council's discussion Tewfik Arras, the Turkish member, arose and stated flatly that if any changes in the existing treaties were made or tolerated, his country would claim the right to fortify the Dardanelles in violation of the treaty of Lausanne. He even hinted that the Turks might follow Hitler's example and not wait for permission. Sir John Simon's immediate and sharp reply was:

"I feel sure my honorable colleague will not expect me to say any more at this stage than that I must naturally make all reservations regarding it."

Laval of France and Baron Aloisi of Italy supported Simon in his rebuke of the Turkish revisionism. Laval carried back to Paris a draft of the mutual assistance pact with Russia for submission to the French cabinet. Litvinov was still insistent that the two countries should enter into a real military alliance, and it may be that he will carry his point. In the opinion of many observers such a treaty would be declared invalid by the League of Nations.

WHEN the administration's great work relief program gets under way one of the most important parts of it, the purchase of material supplies, will have to be started at once, and it is expected that this will absorb about $1,700,000,000 of the total sum. According to authoritative sources in Washington, this part of the program will be supervised by Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, now procurement officer in the treasury. Peoples entered the navy supply corps in 1900 as assistant paymaster and later developed the navy's present purchasing system. When Franklin D. Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy he and Peoples became close friends.

The admiral presumably will have full charge of drafting the regulations for material purchases but it is understood the actual buying of supplies for work relief projects will in most instances be handled by the states and other co-operating agencies. However, certain commodities, like cement, that will be needed in immense quantities, probably will be purchased centrally.

JUST as soon as the President says the word, the federal bureau of public roads and the various state highway departments are ready to jump into the work of grade crossing elimination, the building of arterial highways and similar projects. The work relief act earmarks $800,000,000 for such undertakings, and the sum may be increased by the President to a billion. The roads bureau already has $100,000,000 of grade crossing eliminations and other projects contracted for under authority granted by congress last year, officials revealed, and these contracts are to be met with work-relief money.

Arthur W. Brandt, president of the American Association of State Highway Officials, advised a congressional committee recently that states were prepared to wipe out 4,058 dangerous crossings if as much as $461,881,500 was made available.

SEVEN agencies of the government are organizing to combat the damage done by the constantly recurring dust storms. They are the AAA, farm credit administration, emergency relief administration, soil erosion service, bureau of plant industry and bureau of agricultural engineering. The efforts, officials said, will include shipping feed, food and water into the stricken areas of Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Kansas and Colorado, starting work relief projects on roads, private lands and the public domain, planting of fast-growing and hardy crops as ground cover in areas where moisture conditions permit, and "listing" operations. This latter work is an attempt to prevent soil blowing away, by making alternate ridges and furrows.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT called Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi to the White House for a conference concerning the veterans' bonus bill, which already has passed the house. Harrison is chairman of the senate finance committee and the administration looked to him to devise a way to spike the measure which is so objectionable to the President in its present "green-back" form. Other majority leaders in congress also were busy with the problem, and the result was the introduction in congress of a compromise bill which it was believed the President would accept if it were passed. This measure would make bonus certificates mature in 1938, instead of 1945. They could be converted immediately into 3 per cent bonds. Veterans who wanted cash right away could sell the bonds, losing only the interest they otherwise could obtain until 1938. Harrison said this would cost $500,000,000 more than the present bonus law, but far less than the Patman bill, passed by the house, to pay the bonus with $2,500,000,000 in new money.

Milo Warner, vice commander of the American Legion, said this bill was "absolutely not acceptable" to that organization. Heads of veterans' organizations and various others were invited to testify at committee hearings on the bill.

SENATOR HUEY LONG called together his complainant legislature in Baton Rouge and ordered it to pass some new laws that would give him complete control of city finances, elections and expenditures of federal relief funds. Secretary Ickes went right up in the air and announced that if the laws were enacted Louisiana would get none of the public works money; whereupon the Kingfish told him he could go to the nether regions, since the PWA money had already been deposited to the account of the New Orleans sewer and water board.

"The state court very properly recognizes our men as that board now, so how is Ickes going to get his money back?" Long asked. "When he starts that, we'll show him what a smart man he ain't. If Ickes and the balance of the brain trust cabinet hold their breaths until we send for them, there'll be several corpses and the country will be better off."

OVER in Turkey the women, until recently, were forced to lead lives of seclusion in the harem and to go veiled when in public. But all that is changed. The other day the twelfth congress of the International Alliance of Women for Suffrage and Equal Citizenship opened in Istanbul with about thirty nations represented and Mrs. Corbett Ashby of England in the chair, and the women of Turkey, unveiled and in modish European garb, were the proud hostesses of the hundreds of delegates. Among the questions discussed were: The situation and rights of women; the position of women in the liberal professions; the political and civil rights of women; the means women can use to prevent war.

Under Kemal's rule the women of the republic of Turkey have been granted parliamentary and city votes and have entered enthusiastically into all branches of life, civic, professional, industrial and sporting.

WITHOUT any effort to break speed records, Capt. Edward A. Musick and five companions landed the big Pan-American Airway clipper ship Pioneer in Hawaii 18 hours and 31 minutes after they took off from Alameda, Calif. This was the first exploratory flight for a service that will soon be extended clear across the Pacific to Canton, the proposed intermediate stops being Hawaii, Midway Islands, Wake Islands, Guam and the Philippines. The operating bases are now in process of construction.

KING BORIS of Bulgaria has foiled another attempt to force him from his precarious throne. Upon discovery of an alleged Fascist plot, he ordered that three prominent political leaders be arrested and held in jail. Their friends sought to free them by storming the jail but were repulsed. Those seized are Alexander Zhanoff, leader of the Democratic entente; Kozma Georgieff, head of the Macedonian party, and M. Natcheff, former police president of Sofia.

JOHN R. McCARL, the able, efficient and independent comptroller general of the United States, has annoyed the New Dealers on several occasions.

Now he threatens to block the plans of the AAA for lifting the restrictions on spring wheat planting and at the same time continuing to pay the farmers for crop reductions that would not be called for. Declaring they wished to avoid shortages due to the dust storms, the officials of the AAA said the farmers would be paid for the abandoned reductions in acreage if they would promise to curtail their plantings next year. Mr. McCarl asked for further information on this matter and indicated he could not approve of the plan, though AAA men declared he had not ruled definitely against it. Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, might not be content to abide by such a ruling if it were made, and the administration might refuse to accept it.

Mr. McCarl, a Republican, holds his office under a law which specifies that the comptroller general shall be appointed to a 15-year term and can be removed only by death or impeachment. Nevertheless Attorney General Cummings, it is understood, gave it as his opinion that, like any other Presidential appointee, he could be removed at the pleasure of the President. He based this opinion on a ruling of the Supreme court in the case of a postmaster who was ousted by President Coolidge, the court holding that the President was within his rights under Article 2 of the Constitution. So it may be the New Dealers will seek to have Mr. McCarl ousted before his term expires in 1936.

It is interesting to read that the Nebraska Progressive league, made up of liberal Republicans, is planning the organization of "McCarl for President" clubs in that state and afterward in all others. George W. Kline, its chairman, says he was asked to support McCarl for President in 1936 by friends of Senator George W. Norris. The comptroller general is a graduate of the University of Nebraska law school and for years was Mr. Norris' secretary.

ALLEGED teaching of Communism in some of our universities and the adoption of that cult by a large number of half-baked young men and women in those institutions has long been debated and denounced by patriotic citizens. Student strikes and small riots have been frequent, and there have been many demands for the suppression of these reds and pinks. The latest big institution of learning to be brought into the limelight in this matter is the University of Chicago, whose faculty contains several decidedly radical instructors and its student body many youthful followers of Marx and Lenin. Because of charges made by a prominent drug store magnate the Illinois senate has just adopted a resolution calling for a "thorough and complete investigation" by a senatorial committee of five to determine whether any foundation exists for charges that "subversive Communist teachings" are going on in "wholly or partly tax-exempt colleges and universities of this state."

SIR OSWALD MOSLEY, chief of the British Fascists, has committed his organization to a policy of anti-semitism fully as severe as that of the Hitler Nazis. At a riotous meeting of his Black Shirts in Leicester, Mosley said: "For the first time I openly and publicly challenge Jewish interests in this country. Commanding commerce, commanding the press, commanding the cinema, dominating the city of London, they are killing industry with their sweatshops. These great interests are not intimidating and will not intimidate the Fascist movement of the modern age."

Leaders of more than 200 of Chicago's 300 Jewish organizations assembled to indorse the campaign of the American Jewish congress for consolidation of all organized Jewish action: The chief speaker was the famous Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, national president and founder of the congress. In the course of his address he said:

"I want the day to come when no Jew shall live in Germany—not one. I want the day to come—although I shall not live to see it—when the Jew will be a regretted memory in Germany, just as their presence was a blessing and an ennoblement in every sense."

ROBERT GORDON SWITZ of New Jersey and his wife, who had been in jail in France for about 16 months on charges of espionage, were finally tried and found guilty, but were set free by the court because they had turned state evidence and helped in the apprehension of their accomplices. Twenty-two others were convicted and given prison terms of varying length.

Germany Prepares for the 1936 Olympic Games

MORE than half a million spectators can sit comfortably in this enormous sports arena, the greatest concentration of stadia, gymnasias, fields and halls ever constructed in one single unit. Nine-tenths of all the activities of the next Olympic games will be centered here. But it will not take more than thirty minutes to fill or empty the great space, with the new transportation facilities created especially for the purpose. The center bowl is the Olympic stadium. On its opposite side, looking in the picture like an open double-winged door, is the swimming stadium. The large space to the left of the Olympic stadium is the assembly field, serving also as polo grounds. It covers more than twenty-four acres and accommodates 400,000 participants and spectators. On its left side rises the "Fuhrerturm" (Leader's tower) from which the Olympic bell will ring in the games. The oval near the lower left-hand corner, above the railroad cut, is the equestrian stadium. Opposite, in the midst of the wooded section in the upper left-hand corner, is the Dietrich Eckart open-air stage. To the right of it, the small round space, is the dancing arena. At the distant right, there is a group of gymnasias, pools and training buildings, with the "House of German Sports" and an auditorium for 1,500. On the extreme right, straight over from the big center bowl, are parking spaces for ten thousand automobiles. Just beyond is the hockey stadium. In the lower right-hand corner is the railroad station "Reichsportfeld." An underground railway station, also called "Reichsportfeld," is opposite the hockey stadium. There also are basketball fields, recreation halls and many other parts.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

DANNY USES HIS WITS

Who hesitates because of fear May lose the thing he holds most dear.

IT HAPPENS over and over again among human folks as well as among the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. Perhaps it was because he had seen it happen more than once that Danny Meadow Mouse acted as quickly as he did. If he had stopped to think about it fear might have prevented him from doing as he did and things might have turned out quite differently and not at all so fortunate. But Danny's wits are sharp and there is nothing like danger to sharpen one's wits and Danny, as you know, is in danger a great part of the time. As he sat there peeping out of the little hole in the bank of the Smiling Pool where he had sought safety he was surrounded by danger and he knew it. It wasn't safe to leave and it wasn't safe to remain. Could anyone possibly be in worse fix?

He was doing his best to think of some way out of his troubles when he saw the Big Pickerel which had been hiding under some lily pads, swim out to the middle of the Smiling Pool and there stop close to the surface as if to enjoy the sun. Not two minutes later there was a sharp swishing sound in the air. Danny looked up to see a dark form shooting out of the sky. It was Plunger the Osprey, often called Fish Hawk. His great claws were spread to seize some one and that some one was the Big Pickerel.

With a great splash Plunger struck the water and disappeared right where the Big Pickerel had been a second before. Grandfather Frog dived from his big green lily pad with a startled "Chug-arum!" Snapper the Turtle sank from sight. Billy Mink disappeared. Reddy Fox stood up on his hind legs the better to see.

With a quick glance up to see that Redtail the Hawk was not watching, Danny darted out of his hiding place and scurried along the bank of the Smiling Pool towards the Laughing Brook. He knew that for a few minutes the attention of everybody would be fixed on Plunger. He hoped that no one would notice a scared little Meadow Mouse. He heard the water falling from Plunger and the beating of his great wings as he rose in the air, but he didn't even glance to see if Plunger had caught the Big Pickerel. He simply made those four little legs of his go as fast as they possibly could until he reached a tangle of matted grass, under which he crept, his heart going pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat, pit-a-pat. Not till then did he look back.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

ITALIAN GOOD THINGS

IN ITALY a little child may prepare the meal for a workman's table. But for those with more means much elaboration is used. In recipes using grated cheese the correct mixture is one-third Gruyere and two-thirds Parmesan.

Risotto a la Milanaise.

This is a very thick soup which, with the poor, is put on the bread, thus making a substantial meal. For use at a dinner it should be considerably diluted. Cut up half of a large onion in fine pieces, add butter the size of an egg and fry to a bright brown, add one pound of washed and soaked rice and one quart of bouillon. Cook until the grains are soft but not crushed. Set the dish aside to keep hot, add one-fourth pound of grated cheese and two ounces of butter. Season with white pepper, salt if needed, and a bit of nutmeg.

Potage au Chou.

Boil one-half pound of rice and the heart of firm cabbage in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and chop the cabbage in large rough pieces. Put back into the soup pan with three ounces of butter, three onions minced, and lightly fried in the butter, add one quart of good soup stock, salt and mixed spice. Boil up for half an hour.

Set aside and add grated cheese to flavor the soup before serving.

Herring or Mackerel a l'italienne.

Split and trim, removing the heads and tails of the fish. Let the fish soak four hours in seasoned oil and vinegar. Use salt, pepper, sliced onion, and chopped parsley. Drain and dust them with flour and fry them in oil. Serve crisp and hot.

TO HELEN

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE fabric of your friendship never wears, Nor does it gather dust and pull apart, It falls with tenderness upon the cares That press, when evening comes, upon my heart. It is a shawl to keep my shoulders warm When all the world is cold, and chill winds blow. It is protection from the winter storm, And shade in summer from the hot sun's glow.

The fabric of your friendship, woven fine With all the beauty of your lovely thought, Embroidered in an Infinite design By wisdom that your garnered years have taught, Is to my life the same as the blue sky To the tired earth—a background that is sure. When all these lovely years have drifted by, The fabric of your friendship will endure.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: I read in the newspapers that the Statue of Liberty's right hand measures 11½ inches. Is that true and if so why did they make it just 11½ inches?

Yours truly,

HUGH GOTTA SHOWME.

Answer: Her hand was made 11½ inches long because the sculptor knew that if he made her hand 12 inches long it would have been a foot.

Dear Mr. Wynn: For years I have watched kettles on a stove just to see the steam come out. It has always fascinated me and yet, I must admit, I cannot understand what makes it come out. Please explain to me why the steam comes out of the kettle.

Yours truly,

I. B. DARNED.

Answer: The reason steam comes out of a kettle is simply so a wife can open her husband's letters without the husband knowing it.

Transportation

Blowing Up Skins Which Buoy a Yellow River Raft.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

STREAMLINE trains and giant airliners recently have been in the spotlight in America; Italy is still applauding an air-minded son who sped through the air more than 400 miles an hour a short time ago; and Great Britain is just quieting down after celebrating the victory of her flyers who won the London-Melbourne air race. In Germany stream-line trains are linking additional cities as quickly as the new type transportation equipment can be manufactured.

Modern transportation, this. But one can still find types of transportation facilities, even in the world's largest cities and their rural neighborhoods, that were in use decades and even centuries ago.

There is not a sizable town in the United States in which one cannot hail a taxi, and in many of them charter a plane; yet the top-hatted cabbie, whose pompous figure held sway over traffic on boulevards in the gay nineties, has not been entirely shelved. These "taximen" of another era have jealously watched as new traffic lights have been installed, traffic lanes have been painted to keep modern motorists from crushing bumpers and fenders, and streets have been widened and trees sacrificed to make room for more of their rivals; yet they still constitute something of a traffic problem.

Ox-Drawn Vehicles.

Within sight of concrete, 40-mile-an-hour highways, and less than a hundred miles from Washington, D. C., and Annapolis, Md., ox-drawn vehicles still lumber along; while in the isolated mountain regions of the West, sure-footed burros and pack mules continue to be the only companions of many rugged prospectors.

Millions of visitors arrive at Atlantic City by automobile, airplane and train, yet to see the "sights" along the Boardwalk, they hire three-wheeled rolling chairs. Others arrive at Bermuda aboard palatial steamships but take to bicycles and horse-drawn carriages to tour the island.

On the corners of modern, wide thoroughfares of Shanghai, Hongkong and Canton, China, the traveler hails a ricksha and weaves perilously through a maze of motor and pedestrian traffic. In the alley-like back streets of the native towns, however, he may prefer a sedan chair to avoid jostling men and women and stumbling over children to whom these mere byways are playgrounds.

What traveler leaves Durban, Natal, without employing a Zulu rikshaman? The dark-hued tribesman in gay-feathered headdress and scant clothing, is one of the colorful features of the South African city. In remote Szechwan province, China, wheelbarrows, which are the local transports, have worn ruts in flagstone pavements; in Sumatra, if one goes native, he must travel in a buffalo-drawn cart whose thatched top is shaped like a sway-backed horse, and is pointed at each end. In Palermo, Sicily, the purely Sicilian way to get about is by native cart, a two-wheeled vehicle on whose side panels are gayly depicted Bible scenes and Sicilian panoramas; and in Ireland, the Irish jaunting car on which passengers sit back to back and face outward lends atmosphere to a tour of the Emerald Isle.

Liams still carry loads in the Andes, and elephants still are favored among the tiger hunters of India. In spite of progress in Belgium, the morning milk is still delivered by dogcart at many a doorstep, and dog sleds are yet the most dependable transportation in the icy wastes of the Arctic and Antarctic. The tired explorer enjoys comfortable travel in a hammocklike chair borne by native porters in central Africa; the mountaineers of northern India and western China employ the yak as their beast of burden; the camel still plods the caravan routes of north Africa, Arabia and central Asia; and the carabao (water buffalo) is the dependable draft-animal of the East Indian islands.

"Floating Population."

Land transportation is of no interest whatever to millions of Chinese. Children are born, grow up, marry, carry on their lives, and work aboard the sampans of China's floating cities.

Most of the great river cities of southern and central China have such a "floating population," but the boat-dwellers of Shanghai and Canton form large communities in themselves. A traveler of sufficient energy could laboriously progress for miles by jumping from the deck of one sampan to another.

Like the Dutch canal boat dwellers, these river folk are a race unto themselves, apart from the common run of their fellow men. In many cases their mode of life has been handed down from father to son for generations. When China's teeming acres became overcrowded and expensive, and a growing commerce demanded river transportation in even larger volume, many ingenious Chinese combined business with economy and took to living aboard their tiny craft.

Although business might call far and wide along the numerous rivers and canals it was the large commercial centers at the mouths of mighty streams that offered the most lively carrying trade. Hence these cities early became headquarters for the water dwellers.

The riverman often made long voyages up country, but he always came home to roost. Hence the dirty, evil-smelling stretches of river and backwash surrounding such centers as Canton and Shanghai, and even around Hongkong and Singapore, became the native heath of an army of sampan dwelling Chinese, who from childhood have known no other life.

The visible means of support of these communities is the carrying trade from wharf to wharf, and from bund to steamer or junk, across river and up canals.

Barnyard Afloat.

Some sampans house petty merchants and peddlers who carry on a small trade in the necessities of life from boat to boat within the water colony itself. Occasionally a craft is filled to overflowing with huge white ducks which fatten in the daytime on the tidal mud flats or harvested fields, and at night walk a gangplank back to their floating barnyard. They proceed, one by one, in a quacking and pushing single file, each hurrying not to be the last duck aboard. The return home in the evenings is sometimes hastened, it is said, by giving the last duck a sharp crack with a switch. The awkward procession soon learns the trick and a comic tumult arises not to be the unfortunate tail of the procession.

Chinese sampans are marvelously easy to handle, being the product of generations of adaptation to environment. They dart like water spiders here and there amidst the harbor traffic, clustering like barnacles around the great steamers anchored offshore. With lightning swiftness, they flee in droves before an approaching storm, each knowing as if by instinct his own place in the quiet reaches of sheltered water. There is no mistake, no confusion, each bit falls unerringly into place like a gigantic picture puzzle. When the high wind arrives each craft is in place, with not a sampan left over, or a vacant square of water big enough to hold one.

In spite of the shifting needs of commerce, family life aboard proceeds about its daily routine as usual, albeit in rather more cramped quarters. Clothes, vegetables, and babies are washed side by side in the stream and the cooking is done above a diminutive brazierlike stove. Growing children help with the handling of the boat and cargo, and grandmothers in blue cotton-ragged garments smoke long-stemmed pipes. At night all draw together and neighborly chatter from boat to boat sounds like that of a newly arrived flock of blackbirds. The river folk are poor but extremely cheerful, especially over the evening meal.

Lights from great modern liners, shine across the harbor and music from an occasional gaily decked pleasure barge floats from the mid-stream channel. In few other places lurks so strongly the spell of the East.

Raft Transports.

On the shallow, shifting Hwang Ho, or Yellow river of China rafts are the principal means of transport, especially for freight cargoes. There are two types of raft: one using as buoys inflated sheepskins, and the other, large ox-hides which are stuffed with wool and then tied up to keep them water-tight. The sheepskin rafts vary in size, according to the use for which they are intended, ranging from as few as 12 to 15 skins on the small one-man rafts. For the large rafts some 120 ox-hides are used.

The ox-hides are carefully treated on the inside with salt and oil. This treatment not only preserves and waterproofs them but also keeps them flexible. There is no extraordinary technique required in the construction of a raft. Poles are lashed together, forming a framework to which the hides or sheepskins are fastened.

Moslem Chinese who form a considerable percentage of the population of Kansu province, are the raft men on the Yellow river. A sturdy people, they stand well the hardships of river life. It is far from an easy life with all the contrasts of heat and cold and the strenuous labor involved in handling the clumsy transports through the rapids; or freeing them, once they have stranded on a sand bar. The men, however, are happy and friendly,

TREMENDOUS TRIFLES

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

GEORGE WASHINGTON, ASSASSIN

"G EORGE WASHINGTON, an assassin . . . impossible!" you exclaim. But it's true, if we can believe a document that Washington himself signed.

On May 28, 1754, his Virginia militia made a surprise attack on a party of Frenchmen at Great Meadows in western Pennsylvania. They killed ten, including the leader, Coulon de Jumonville, and took twenty-one prisoners who claimed that Jumonville was an envoy sent to warn the English off the French lands. Since England and France were not at war, they said the attack was a violation of international law. Papers found at the time proved that they were also scouts for a French force sent to drive the English out of that country.

Five weeks later, that force, commanded by Jumonville's brother, Coulon de Villiers, besieged Washington's little army at Fort Mifflin. Rejecting two demands for a surrender, Washington held out until they put into writing the articles of capitulation.

It was a soggy, rainy day and the French note was "written in a bad hand on wet and blotted paper." In it Villiers twice stated that the French were not attacking the English, with whom they were at peace, but were only punishing "L'assassinat du Sieur de Jumonville." This was read to Washington by the light of a candle, which was blown out again and again by the rainy gale. The man who read it was Jacob Van Braam, a Dutchman, whose knowledge of French was meager. The word "l'assassinat" he translated simply as "death or loss." So Washington signed the articles, not realizing that he was thus confessing to an "assassination."

It was a trifling error of interpretation but the French, who welcomed an excuse for war with "perfidious Albion," seized upon the young colonial officer's "confession." It played no small part in bringing on the conflict which raged in both Europe and America for seven years and resulted in France's losing all of her territory in North America to England.

POLKA DOT

DO YOU like to wear polka dot dresses, or, if you're a man, is a polka dot scarf your favorite necktie? If so, you can thank two men. One of them was a Hungarian dancing master and the other was the first "dark horse" in American political history.

In 1830 that dancing master—history has not preserved his name—was on a walking tour in Poland. In a small village he saw a peasant girl doing a folk dance which pleased him. He brought the new steps back to Prague, where it immediately won great popularity, and gave it the name "Polka" for the land of its origin.

Fourteen years later over in America, the Democratic party was trying to nominate a candidate for President at Baltimore. There was a deadlock.

Suddenly 44 votes were announced for James Knox Polk of Tennessee, who had served as speaker of the house of representatives but otherwise had a colorless political career.

This started a stampede which resulted in the first selection of a "dark horse" in convention history. When the news of his nomination was flashed from Baltimore to Washington over that new-fangled instrument, the telegraph, amazed citizens in the Capital exclaimed, "Who is Polk?"

As it turned out, he was the next President. For he defeated Henry Clay, the Whig nominee. During the campaign, the Hungarian dancing master's new dance came into this country. Because of the similarity of its name to that of the Democratic nominee, it became the official campaign amusement. Articles of various kinds were named for it and for him . . . and that's why we wear polka dot designs today.

A CIGARETTE

LOOK over a cigarette the next time you smoke one. It's not so very long, nor very thick. Probably the fraction of a cent that it costs you will never be missed. But such a trifle as a smouldering cigarette costs the United States three billion dollars in fire losses every year! Experts estimate that the average smoker throws away at least a third of the cigarette, and if the little trifle is not put out . . .

In 1629 the Puritans tried to pass a law against the darting of tobacco. This decree was the forerunner of the whole code of prohibitive laws. It was a losing fight, however. So Massachusetts set a tax on its use.

"Any persons or person who shall be found smoking tobacco on the Lord's day, going to or coming from the meetings, or within two miles of the meeting house, shall pay 12 pence for every such default." As almost the whole community lived within the two miles limit, this caught them all.

Even today there are still some states in the Union that forbid the sale of tobacco on Sunday. Well, it all depends on what you like. And if you like to smoke, remember the three billion dollars and put out your stubs.

HOUSE FROCK ON TAILORED LINES

PATTERN 2089

Quite a "sweeping success," isn't it, this well-tailored house frock with its slenderizing lines and nicely detailed bodice? The skirt is fronted by a long slimming seam which breaks into a perky little kick pleat just below the knee; the bodice is gathered onto the yoke to provide ample fullness. And don't you like that vestee-like effect of the front yoke which does so much to break the width of the figure above the waistline? Buttons emphasize the trim belt, the pointed sleeve cuffs and the nice diagonal closing. Make it of any pretty cotton material, figured or plain, and you'll have a house frock to be proud of!

Pattern 2089 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3 3/4 yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventh Street, New York City.

In the Line of Duty

On a December evening, in a telephone exchange in Northern Michigan, an operator sat at the switchboard. Calls were few. It was the low ebb of the day's work. There was nothing to suggest that soon this quiet office was to be the scene of danger—and resolute devotion to duty.

It began with that dread forerunner of disaster—the smell of smoke. Then, from an adjoining building, came the crackling of flames. Personal safety now obviously lay in abandoning the switchboard. And under the circumstances no one could be justly censured for putting self-preservation first.

The operator stuck to her post. And the alarm, spreading rapidly through the town, reached three other operators who were off duty at the time. Immediately—volunteers in the face of danger—they hurried to the exchange.

While engines clanged, while firemen fought flames close by, while an adjacent wall collapsed in the heat of the town's most costly and disastrous fire in ten years, these four operators remained steadfastly at the switchboard to handle all the great rush of calls that must attend and combat any public emergency.

This example of calm courage, taken from recent records, does not stand alone. Again and again, in crises large and small, Michigan Bell Telephone employees have proved their high sense of loyalty to public service. Courteous and efficient in the routine work which day by day maintains the high standards of telephone service, they have repeatedly faced emergencies with genuine courage and an unselfish devotion to duty.

It is because of this spirit of service, no less than because of great engineering achievements, that Michigan today enjoys a telephone service unsurpassed in any quarter of the globe.

A sight of all sights! The other night I made a trip through the forest reserve east of Sand Lake and there just at dusk I saw sixteen deer. They seemed so tame and unafraid while grazing along the trail. I was on my way to the show but it lost all its glamour after seeing such a sight.

The trailing arbutus are finding a hard time to survive the dry weather this spring. This is the second season in which they have had to fight to blossom on account of no warm spring rains.

Concerning politics, from Washington in a recent speech Senator Vandenberg showed how many lending agencies the government had for the benefit of the farmer; all separate, all with different rates, all supposed to benefit him in keeping his farm for mortgage. Here are some of the ones listed: Federal Land Bank, Land Bank Commissioners, Production Credit Association, Farm Credit Administration, Commodity Credit Association, Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation, Subsistence Homestead, and the Cooperative Farming Institution. It is being proposed to add one more. Interesting, isn't it, loan our government is anxious to and then take such little interest in showing and helping him pay it all back.

VOL. VIII APRIL 26, 1935 NUMBER 38

A dinner guest in a Virginia home was telling his host how to prepare ham that would be even better than the famous Virginia ham.

Guest: Place the ham in a deep pan and the first day soak it in a bottle of rye whiskey and let it cook a while. The second day add a bottle of Jamaica rum and the third day a bottle of port wine and the fourth day a bottle of Bourbon.

Host (turning to the colored cook): What do you think of that?

Negro Cook: Ah don't know 'bout de ham, but it sho' sounds like mighty fine gravy.

Dad: Well, Willie, what did you learn at school today?

Willie: Not to sass Willie McNutt.

We have ensilage corn, both Red Cob and Leming. Now is the time to buy before our stock gets low.

Seeds: June clover, Grimm alfalfa, timothy, sweet clover and alsike.

Fertilizers: Garden, 5-10-5, in 100 and 125 lb. sacks; grain, 2-12-2; bean, 2-12-6; corn, 2-14-4; potato, 4-8-6.

We have a quantity of Mammoth clover seed.

WATCH YOUR KIDNEYS!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering impurities from the blood stream. But kidneys get functionally disturbed—lag in their work—fail to remove the poisonous body wastes.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains; feel "all worn out."

Don't delay! For the quicker you get rid of these poisons, the better your chances of good health.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They tend to promote normal functioning of the kidneys; should help them pass off the irritating poisons. Doan's are recommended by users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

Determine Sources of Night Sky Light

Chicago and Texas College Professors Make Study.

Chicago.—Although the huge 82-inch telescope of the McDonald observatory, joint project of the University of Texas and the University of Chicago, on Mt. Locke, Texas, is not yet completed, an investigation already is under way near the new observatory to determine the sources of light in the night sky.

Using an old 12-inch refracting telescope which was presented some years ago to the Yerkes observatory of the University of Chicago by Dr. G. E. Hale, assistant Professor C. T. Elvey of the Yerkes staff and Dr. F. E. Roach of the McDonald observatory have been recording the light of the night sky with a recording photo-electric photometer designed by Doctor Elvey.

The light of the night sky is made up of direct starlight; starlight which is scattered both by the earth's atmosphere and the matter in interstellar space; zodiacal light which is concentrated in the ecliptic but which may extend over the entire sky; and of the light originating within the atmosphere of the earth; the permanent aurora. This aurora is not the polar aurora, or northern lights, although it is related to it.

Many Study Problem. Many investigators have studied the problem of the composition of the light, and a general investigation by the Dutch astronomer, Van Rhijn has shown the following percentage composition: Direct starlight, 18 per cent; starlight scattered by the earth's atmosphere, 5 per cent; zodiacal light, 43 per cent; aurora, 15 per cent, and scattered earthlight, 19 per cent.

It is well known to astronomers that there are large fluctuations in some of the sources of light, particularly of the zodiacal light and the aurora. Lord Rayleigh found that the light of the night sky undergoes large variations, with a range of eight-fold between the smallest and largest.

The variations are sometimes fairly rapid, Doctor Elvey having found in his work at Yerkes as much as a 25 per cent change in brightness of the sky within a period of two hours. There also are daily variations in the intensity of the auroral light in the night sky, which in some parts of the world reaches a maximum about 2 a. m., and in other parts is at its maximum just after twilight has ended.

These large variations have made detailed analysis of the light difficult, because during the several hours required to cover the sky, there are many changes in the light.

To make possible observations in a brief space of time Doctor Elvey devised the recording photo-electric photometer. It consists of a very sensitive galvanometer which measures the output of the amplifier. The recording is achieved by shining a lamp on the galvanometer mirror, which reflects the light to a slit behind which is a moving sheet of bromide paper.

Deflections Recorded.

The deflections of the galvanometer are then recorded on the bromide paper, which is directly connected to the photometer so that it moves past the slit as the instrument is rotated around the vertical axis. With this instrument a complete record of the brightness of the sky on a circle parallel with the horizon can be made in approximately five minutes, and the entire sky can be observed in about an hour. A check of the variations in light during this time can be made by observing a given region of the sky several times.

Doctor Roach already has obtained over a hundred tracings with the instrument, from which he and Professor Elvey have determined the axis of the zodiacal light, the cone of light that can be seen rising from the horizon after sunset and before sunrise.

Contrary to general belief, the axis does not coincide with the plane of the orbit of the earth—the ecliptic. Observations show the morning zodiacal light is displaced to the north of the ecliptic by as much as five degrees. A series of evening observations indicate that in part of the ecliptic the zodiacal light was near the ecliptic, apparently crossing it.

The astronomers expect that a detailed analysis of the tracings will give the relative amount and the distribution of the light from various sources contributing to the total light from the night sky.

Let Your Light Shine

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

The world is like a mirror because it reflects our moods. That "things are very much as you look at them" is a true aphorism. Two persons facing the same condition and living in exactly the same neighborhood may receive contradictory reactions from the same environment. The one whose philosophy of life is that of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch will see hidden resources of light and beauty in surroundings which many persons would consider barren of any such possibilities. As the marble responds to the genius of the sculptor, so our environment reflects the thought and intents of the heart. We can see no beauty in a glorious sunset unless there is a sense of beauty already within us. The man who described the Grand canyon as a great big dump would probably be unable to see in the thundering Niagara anything more

Helen May Try Comeback

Helen Wills Moody, former American women's tennis champion, who was forced to retire from the game a year ago because of back trouble, is practicing in California and may attempt a comeback.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

THE satisfaction of having attractive housework frocks reaches farther than the woman who wears them. The effect of suitable attire, plus its becomingness, is more far-reaching. It has its influence on everyone who is of the household, and such other persons as may happen in during the morning or the working hours. It is not so far back that it is beyond the remembrance of the older generation of homemakers, when discarded afternoon or even old party dresses were made to serve more than their original purpose by being worn earlier in the day as housework frocks. This was thought to be an economy measure.

But the utter unsuitability of garment to tasks, finally won the battle between the desire to have the right working togs, and the mistaken notion of thriftiness.

Slender women, especially those who are youthful can wear smock frocks well. The stout person should avoid them. Apart from the convenience of the loose fitting one-piece smock, there is a suggestion of artistry connected with smocks and studios, that appeals. But unless the garment is becoming it does not fill its requirements. On large women the smock becomes something of a glorified Mother Hubbard, too loose, and therefore gives the impression of greater weight.

Some Good Features. A housework dress should be sufficiently ample to permit the wearer to stoop low without straining the seams. There should be one or two pockets, preferably set-in pockets as these do not catch on knobs, etc. The sleeves should be short or elbow length, unless the wearer needs the warmth of long sleeves. So many times the long sleeves must be rolled back, that the shorter ones are preferable. Flowing sleeves are inappropriate or those wide at ends.

A figured material will not accent every slightest mark as occurs with flat colors. Wash goods should be used. Some times a summer dress that is out of style can be made over into a house frock, and sometimes the style of the dress as it is, requires very slight changes to make it appropriately serve its more mundane purpose. Whatever the requirements of a house frock may be it should have the added feature of being becoming in cut and color.

To Look Attractive. The woman who wants to look attractive and who doesn't, has one sure means at her command. It would be used more if it could be obtained at a beauty parlor, and be paid for in dollars and cents. But this is something beyond price, yet it can be had without spending a penny. It is having a pleasant expression. This never fails to attract attention. It is the one sure way to the hearts of others. It has warmth and beauty in it. Homely features react to it. Fine features without it cannot have the same pull of attraction. The pleasant expression is a magnet. It has drawing power of attraction.

When you ride in a trolley or subway, take a look at the faces in it. How many have pleasant expressions? I have ridden in these conveyances many a times when not a single face wore a pleasant expression. Some were definitely unpleasant. Some were sad, some heavy, some tired, some bold, some furtive, some curious, some indignant, but few if any that radiated sweetness or the beauty of a pleasant mind.

than wasted horse power. A person who would have friends must show himself friendly. The light that shines from your personality makes your world. If you radiate sunshine and joy you will discover the same in other people. If you are selfish and mean you will find the same reflected back to you. We always see in the other person the fault that lies deepest in our own personality.

This law, which seems like a paradox, also affects the lives of other people. Emerson said, "A great institution is but the lengthened shadow of a single man." True—not only of institutions but of individuals. Henry Ward Beecher bought a newspaper from a poorly clad boy on a day in midwinter. He remarked, "Poor little fellow, aren't you cold?" The boy replied with a smile, "I was, sir, before you passed." It is said that Phillips Brooks could change the mood of a passing crowd on a rainy day in Boston because of his contagious and fascinating smile. We are told that "it takes sixty-four muscles of the face to frown and only fourteen to smile." Even nature has made it easier for us to have joy in our faces rather than hatred or anger. Browning makes Pippa say, "Wherefore repine—with thee to lead me—O day of mine."

Two of 5,000 Claimants of Big Estate

From far and near, from all parts of the United States, and some parts of Europe, some 5,000 claimants, or their representatives, have come to Philadelphia to contest for the estate of the late Walter Barrett, wealthy snuff manufacturer, who died in 1895. His widow died in 1930, and it is maintained that she did not follow the provisions of her husband's will in disposing of the estate, and so the issue is being fought out in court at Philadelphia. Two of the claimants are pictured: Left, Mrs. Clinton Schaffer and daughter of Parker Ford, Pa., and Mrs. Lawrence Kidd and daughter of Baltimore, Md.

Hard for Japanese to Master Own Language

The hardest job of the Japanese student is to learn his own language. Added to its own difficulties are the difficulties of Chinese; for modern Japanese contains a sprinkling of more than 50,000 Chinese characters.

The primary student toils over his own language seven hours a week in class, seven hours a week at home, a total of fourteen hours a week for six years. At the end of that time he has mastered only about 3,000 of the Chinese ideographs (each having five or six different meanings). He can read a newspaper. But he is still baffled by a magazine or book, unless written in the most colloquial speech.

Even university students have a very uncertain knowledge of the literary language. It is supposed to be used in the composition of letters, articles, books. A young friend of mine in Tokio Imperial university, principal institution of learning in Japan, confesses that his uncle rarely hears from him—because any letter to him must be written in the old literary form, and its composition is a long and fatiguing task.

Even the greatest scholars cannot write without a good dictionary at hand. Educated men find it easier to read Japanese classics in an English translation than in the original.—Willard Prince, in Asia Magazine.

"When a man loves a girl, that girl can't let herself love him, can she, when she's under a cloud herself? She can't bring a man's children into the world and have them whispered about as the grandchildren of a murderer?"

"Dawn! Dawn, girl, don't think that! Why, it's—"

"But it's so, Able! I don't want to talk about it. All I can do for Ben now is to let him know how weak I was to doubt him and to use my influence I may have to protect him from this terrible danger. I will do that; I must do that because it is duty. But I must stop there. It can't go on, you see. Not while I have nothing more than just my faith in my father's good name."

Able, the wise man that he was, did not force the argument. He brought his team to a halt before the Hoot Owl office, gave the reins to Dawn and stepped out.

Martin, the bookkeeper, was the only occupant of the place.

"Where's Ben?" he asked.

The bearded man looked over his shoulder, recognized Able and then his gaze went past the man to the waiting cutter where Dawn sat.

"He's . . ." It seemed as though Martin's voice failed after that word. He half started from his chair and the pen, dropped from flexed fingers, rolled across the ledger sheet. He made a faint sound and in his eyes appeared an expression that startled Able.

"What's wrong, Martin?" he asked in alarm, stepping quickly into the room. "Sick?"

"No . . . all right, now," the other said, as if with great effort. "Ben? In the mill, I think."

He picked up his pen, then, and bent over his work.

Able crossed the mill-yard looking for Ben and as he went Martin rose cautiously from his chair, moved quietly to be in line with the window and stared for a long interval at the girl huddled in the robes. His hands worked and his breath was uneven.

"Dawn is here to see you," Able said simply as he encountered Ben. "She had me bring her out so she could talk to you. She's waiting over by the office."

Elliott stood hesitant for an instant; then turned and walked swiftly along the pond. Able watched him go but did not follow. What was to be said by the girl was not for his ears, he knew.

Ben gave no sign of recognition as he approached the cutter; made no salutation as he came near the girl who sat watching him so steadily. He only spoke her name, when he was at her side. She gave him a small, glowed hand and smiled wanly.

"I have come to say many things, Ben," she began in a strange, strained voice. "To beg forgiveness, to beg other things . . . perhaps to explain a little."

"A week ago tonight,"—struggling, now, to hold her voice steady—"I ran out of the dance hall and on home, thinking that that woman was honest. The time since then, until noon today, has been a nightmare."

"Lydia came to my house at noon. She explained everything. Aunt Em brought her. Aunt Em went to her house and convinced her that she had done a terrible thing to you and that an explanation to me was the only way to right the wrong. Lydia told me everything. . . . It was Mr. Brandon who thought out the plan and forced her to do it under threats of some sort. She didn't tell us what the threats were but left our house for the train and is gone from Tincup forever. . . . And I've come to tell you how miserable I feel to think that I was weak enough to act as Mr. Brandon seemed to be sure I would act. . . ."

Relief was shining through Elliott; relief and a great joy, lifting him above rage for Brandon.

"Oh, I'm glad!" he said earnestly. "I've . . . Why, it completely knocked me off my pins! Dawn, it's been terrible for you but . . . but this makes me so happy!"

"I'm happy because you are happy," she said, but something in her tone and expression dampened his enthusiasm, checked his soaring spirits. She was so calm, so steady, so restrained; her mood was not at all that of one who comes joyously to wipe out heartbreaking misunderstanding. "And I'll never forgive myself for . . . for falling into the trap that was set for me, Ben!"

"Why shouldn't you? Any girl would have felt as you did. . . . But it's explained, now. Let's forget it and begin where we left off and find peace and—"

The sharp shake of her head and the quick withdrawal of her hand cut him off.

"There are sterner things to think of, first; quite different things, Ben. That is why I came out here, to talk to you about Bart Delaney. Able has told me what happened yesterday. You don't take it seriously enough. Keep safe until you're certain that the danger is past."

"Hide and skulk while other men protect me? A man can't do that, Dawn! I'll be on my guard, of course. But I can't run away from anybody who is trying to strike from behind. What would these boys here on the job think of me if I did? This man Delaney may be a hobgoblin for the rest of the country, but I can't let him be for me. If I do the safe thing and think of my own skin, some of our workers will tumble to the fact that I've no more courage than most of them, less than plenty. I can't let them down, you see, and still keep my standing in their eyes."

"It isn't worth it, Ben! It's my job, my property you're taking these risks for. It isn't fair to me!"

"I can argue that. I'm not anxious to be put out of the picture yet a while. I'll keep my eyes open. I've already made the move that should stop Delaney from trying me again. Able and the others have gotten you all in a flutter, Dawn. Don't worry. I'm coming to Tincup tonight and I'm going to appear to be thinking about nothing but the errands I have to do. Every second, I'll be on the watch for a crooked move from anybody. I promise you that. And when I've shown myself to people I'll come to see you and talk you into the same way of looking at this situation."

"Don't," she begged.

"But I can't keep away from you, now that this other mess has been explained!"

She shook her head.

"I'm asking two things of you. The first is to stay here; the other is not to come to see me. . . . Please!"

She put a hand on his with that plea, and he frowned.

"I can understand your being a little timid about having me around town but I can convince you that I'm right. It's Brandon or me, now, you see. If I run, he wins. . . . But this other: Dawn, don't you want me to see you?"

The girl's lips worked.

"No," she said, ever so faintly.

"No. . . . Oh, please don't argue with me, Ben! Please don't come to see me. You don't understand. You may never understand. . . . But I'm begging you from the bottom of my heart not to come and see me again!"

"No, I don't understand. It's . . . Why, it's . . ." He laughed aloud at his own bewilderment and Able, in the near distance, mistook that laugh born of distress for one of relief and came toward them.

"Well, have you two got matters cleared up?" he asked.

Dawn nodded silently.

"Some things are cleared up," Elliott said.

"No. . . . Oh, please don't argue with me, Ben! Please don't come to see me. You don't understand. You may never understand. . . . But I'm begging you from the bottom of my heart not to come and see me again!"

notice that the girl followed him, waited outside while he bargained for a month's supply for camp in a butcher shop, and trailed along behind when he emerged.

From place to place he went, Dawn behind him in the flying snow and when she had been following so for half an hour, her eyes alert for others who might be watching Elliott, another fell into the train ahead of her. She saw this man step from a store entrance and follow Ben. She hastened to be close and not until she was abreast of him did she recognize John Martin, whom she had seen but once before. He did not turn his head and she dropped back. She had no doubts of his loyalty from what Ben had told her of his bookkeeper.

When Elliott went into the drug store she stood out of the light from the building and noted that also Martin loitered near. When Ben reappeared, Martin followed. . . .

For the better part of an hour this double stalking continued while the snow fell thicker and then Elliott turned into a side street and made the next turn into the alley where he had left his team.

Two figures followed him, hastening a bit as he disappeared into the gloom. Martin followed Ben, as Dawn trailed both.

And then, as Elliott drew close and spoke gruffly to his horses, another shadowy figure appeared; it was only a blur in the shadows, crouched and stealthy. The figure swept forward; an arm drew back and upward; it struck and with a muffled grunt Ben Elliott turned, falling sideways and backward under the impact of a blow.

Another voice lifted then in a sharp cry as John Martin ran forward and the indistinct figure which was poised over Elliott, about to strike again, turned, hesitated, whirled and fled.

"What is it, son?" Martin cried as he dropped to his knees beside Ben. Before a reply could come Dawn was there, moaning his name over and over.

"Knife!" Ben gasped. "In the neck . . . here . . ."

John Martin unbuttoned Elliott's thick jacket, ripped open the shirt and his fingers encountered a warm, sticky gush as he thrust them across the back.

"Knifed you! . . . Ah, son!" Dawn peered close into the bearded man's face as though fearful of what he might say next.

"We've got to get him somewhere right away," Martin muttered. "Got to. . . . It's bad."

"My house is just around the corner!" she cried. "Bring him there. . . . Oh, hurry!"

Together they lifted Ben to his feet. His teeth ground shut to keep back the moans. He was sick and weak with pain. He could feel blood smearing over his side and back. He sagged against Martin as the man supported him.

"Tough, Dawn . . . to get you mixed up . . . in a mess. . . ."

"Hurry!" she said. "He's so weak!" He was weak, indeed. With their arms about his body for support, they moved through the snow. Elliott felt Dawn close to him and closed his eyes almost happily. He struggled to help himself so he would not burden her, but he stumbled and nearly fell and another gush of blood bathed his body. After ages of effort and pain a glare seemed to be all about, warm breath fanned his face . . . and Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, was saying sharply:

"In here. . . . Your room, Dawn. . . . I'll phone the doctor."

Emory Sweet worked rapidly, once there. "Deep!" he muttered. "Gad, what a blow. Missed the jugular by a hair."

The wound was only a slender slit in the skin but the blade had been driven deep, indeed, and the blood that flowed from it had drawn the bronze from Elliott's face, the strength from the splendid muscles that lay relaxed now beneath clear skin.

"Now!" said the physician when Ben finally lay back on Dawn's pillow, breathing shallowly, eyes closed. "I guess he'll be all right in a few days. . . . But what an escape!" He shrugged.

Sweet looked at John Martin, then. The doctor's brows drew a bit. He seemed to lean forward and blinked slowly, incredulously. Then Martin moved and the other relaxed. Still, his expression was one of startled speculation.

"Yes, a close shave," Martin muttered under his breath. "But now . . . He's in the best possible place in the world."

The doctor began gathering his instruments. Martin stood staring at Ben in deep thought. Then his right hand went to the lobe of his left ear and tugged slowly in that characteristic gesture. He did not observe Emma Coburn standing in the doorway. He

POULTRY

INCUBATION PERIOD UP TO AGE OF EGGS

High-Hatching Stock Should Be Obtained.

By E. W. Henderson, Poultry Husbandry Expert, Iowa State College, WNU Service.

Eggs laid in the afternoon may hatch better than those laid in the morning. This was one of the phenomena revealed in various agricultural experiment station tests to discover factors causing poor chick hatches.

Another unusual fact observed was that the time required for incubation is directly related to the age of the egg set. Those from 14 to 21 days old required 14 to 18 hours longer for incubation than did those held less than eight days.

Chicks slow in hatching were low in vitality, it was revealed. Only 8.7 per cent of the first 90 per cent to hatch died in the first eight weeks. On the other hand, 24 per cent of the last 10 per cent to hatch died during the same length of time.

High summer temperatures decreased the hatch materially. Sudden and sharp drops in temperature caused poor hatches four and five weeks following. Eggs laid during the week of "cold waves" were not affected.

Because the expense of getting information to determine the cause of a poor hatch is usually too great, it is advisable for incubator operators to obtain stock from high-hatching families and follow good feeding and management practices.

Hatching eggs should be stored where the temperature is below 65 degrees and above freezing. For best results they should not be kept more than eight days.

Other experimental findings revealed that high egg production during the winter and spring months did not harm hatchability. Eggs from high-producing hens hatched better than those from low producers.

Cross breeding improved hatchability. Turning eggs held from one to seven days before setting did not significantly influence hatching results.

One station found that pullet eggs hatched better than hen eggs.

"A Lifetime of Quality"

HUNDREDS of housewives today are using the same Perfection Stoves they bought more than twenty years ago. This is a significant testimony to the fact that QUALITY must be numbered among the Seven High Points of "High-Power." Quality, in Perfection stoves, means best results . . . always. It means a stove that is built to last a lifetime. It also means that the Seven High Points of "High-Power" . . . Speed, Control, Convenience, Cleanliness, Economy, Appearance and Quality are merged to create a lasting product called Perfection. But come in and see one . . . and you'll understand our enthusiasm.
