AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS FATAL TO TWO

E. W. Thornton and Ralph Ford Are Killed When Hit By Cars

Two deaths resulted from automobile accidents during the past week end in Iosco county. Edgar W. Thornton was killed Saturday evening near his home at Hale when hit by a car driven by James Simmons of Hill township, Ogemaw county. Ralph Ford of Glennie, the second victim, was killed early Sunday morning about three miles from Fayerweathers' Rollway Camp. He was hit by a car driven by Kenneth Clouse of Glennie.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ford and Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Ford had been celebrating their wedding anniversary at a dance at the Rollway Camp. When returning home they were accompanied by Charles Mert of Glennie whose car had stalled earlier in the evening while on the way to the dance. After reaching the stalled car they found it could not be started. Mr. Ford turned his car around and pushed the Mert car off the road. Seeing the lights of a rapidly approaching car, Mr. Mert jumped into his car. Mr. Ford, who had been standing between the cars, attempted to get into his, but he was brushed off the running board by the car which sped by on the wrong side of the road. This car was driven by Kenneth Clouse who had also been at the dance. Clouse drove his car about 70 rods beyond the scene of the accident before stopping. Mr. Ford died shortly after he was taken to his home. He was 37 years old.

After an inquest in the death of Ralph Ford held Wednesday morning, Clouse was arraigned before Justice H. Read Smith charged with negligent homicide. He demanded an examination. It will be held May 16.

In the accident Saturday evening at Hale, Mr. Thornton was hit while returning from town to his home. He was walking on the side of the road. Both legs were broken and his skull fractured. He did not regain consciousness.

Accompanying James Simmons in the car which hit Mr. Thornton were William Green and Misses Cecilia Simmons and Helen Green. They were on their way to a dance at Hale.

Edgar W. Thornton had been a resident of Plainfield township for the past 31 years. He was born July 22, 1857, at Whiteford Center, Monroe county. He is survived by three sons and two daughters, Percy N. Thornton of Tawas City, Clarence and Bertram Thornton of Hale, Mrs. Edna Stark of Flint and Mrs. Amy Farrand of Detroit, and three grandsons.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the Hale Methodist Episcopal church. Rev. Herbert E. Davis officiated. Interment was in the Evergreen cemetery.

Senate Committee Defies President and Richberg on NRA Extension—Roosevelt Lists "Must" Bills and Business Opposes Them.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

DISREGARDING the wishes of President Roosevelt, the finance committee of the senate adopted and reported for passage a simple resolution continuing the national recovery act until April 1, 1936, and at the same time making these provisions:

1. No price fixing shall be permitted or sanctioned in codes, except in those relating to mineral or natural resources which now have price fixing provisions.

2. No trade engaged in intrastate commerce shall be eligible for a code.

3. The President is given specified time in which to review present codes to carry out the conditions laid down in the first two exceptions to the resolution.

Both President Roosevelt and Donald Richberg, head of the NRA, had urged the passage of a new two year NRA bill which would set up a stricter dictatorship over business and industry. The senate finance committee, however, would not consent to this and instead passed the resolution, which was drawn up by Senator Clark of Missouri and approved by Chairman Pat Harrison. Twelve senators first called at the White House and the President seemed willing to accept the continuing resolution until Mr. Richberg came in and protested urgently; whereupon Mr. Roosevelt turned it down. The committee then took the action noted by a vote of 16 to 3, defying both the President and Richberg.

Senator Harrison said he had no doubt the senate would adopt the resolution with little debate.

HIGH optimism marked the "fireside chat" which President Roosevelt delivered over the radio to the people of America, which people, he said, are, as a whole, "feeling a lot better—a lot more cheerful than for many years." He asserted they are already on the unmistakable march toward recovery, and told how he means to promote the return to normal conditions with his works relief program.

He promised to put to work three and a half million persons now on the relief rolls, and to press for enactment of legislation he considers necessary for carrying on the New Deal.

Only once did Mr. Roosevelt allude to such critics of his administration as Senator Long, Father Coughlin and Governor Talmadge. He said:

"The overwhelming majority of people in this country know how to sift the wheat from the chaff in what they hear and what they read. They know that the process of the constructive rebuilding of America cannot be done in a day or a year, but that it is being done in spite of a few who seek to confuse them and to profit by their confusion."

These six "fundamental principles," said the President, must guide the work relief program: Projects must be useful, most of the money must go for labor, "a considerable proportion of the costs" must be returned to the treasury, only those projects which can employ persons on relief will be approved, and projects will be approved in a given area in proportion to the unemployed in that area.

LEGISLATION which the President said, in his radio talk, should be enacted by congress immediately included the old age and unemployment insurance bill, the NRA extension bill, the public utility holding company bill, the transportation control bill, and the banking bill.

Here he comes into conflict again with the views of business leaders of the country. The National Association of Manufacturers has just issued its economic analysis of conditions, which says recovery is "within our grasp" and that the nation is closer to breaking the back of the depression than at any time for years, but asks that, in order to stimulate business, the administration and congress temporarily shelve as "disturbing" such legislation as unemployment insurance, the omnibus banking bill, the utility holding company bill, the 30-hour work week, the Wagner labor disputes bill, the Gurfey bituminous coal measure and proposed changes in railroad laws.

Of tied-up capital, the analysis said this:

"Surveys indicate that close to $20,000,000,000 in expenditures, which would give employment to 4,000,000 men for two years, is pent up in the field of factory expansion, renovation and rehabilitation alone.

"The release of this flow of private capital by removing political uncertainties would dwarf the billions appropriated by congress for relief and make unnecessary the expenditure of much of the taxpayers' money."

This document was given out as the members of the United States Chamber of Commerce were gathering in Washington for their twenty-third annual convention, and naturally their speakers endorsed it and attacked much of the proposed legislation mentioned as unwarranted intrusion of the government into business.

Before it adjourned the chamber adopted resolutions condemning abolition of utility holding companies, opposing the banking bill, asking for relaxation and extension of the NRA instead of the administration bill, and postponing "for further study" the question of social security.

Henry I. Harriman, who has been president of the organization for three years, retired from that office in favor of Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y.

HOW the New Dealers propose to redistribute wealth by double taxation of large estates is revealed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in a letter to Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the senate finance committee. Mr. Morgenthau outlines a plan of imposing inheritance taxes and also retaining the existing estate taxes, asserting this is in line with "our fundamental objectives." That this would result in the dissolution of large properties, the secretary recognizes, for he says:

"To prevent the necessity of hasty liquidation of large properties in order to pay the tax, it might be provided that inheritance taxes be payable in a convenient number of installments."

The plan as outlined by Mr. Morgenthau is to impose graduated inheritance taxes on estates, with rates following those of the present income tax rates, which approximate 60 per cent on incomes of a million dollars or more. The present estate taxes have a maximum of 60 per cent over ten million dollars.

Thus there would first be a tax of 60 per cent upon the estate or gift, and then another tax of 60 per cent to be paid by those inheriting or receiving it. This would amount to a combined rate of 85 per cent on an estate of one hundred million dollars.

If all this money were handed out to the poorer people, even Huey Long might be satisfied.

SECRETARY ICKES' Department of the Interior has now been elevated to the level of the State, Treasury and Agriculture departments, for congress has granted one of Harold's dearest wishes and given him an undersecretary, whose salary is to be $10,000 a year. This was a senate amendment to the Interior department appropriation bill, and was accepted by the house, 243 to 92, only after considerable pressure had been applied by the administration. Many of the house Democrats have asserted that Mr. Ickes snubbed them, and they would have liked nothing better than to administer a rebuke to him by defeating the amendment, but the party leaders drove them into line.

ARIZONA'S victory over the government in the Parker dam case ruled on by the Supreme court alarmed the New Dealers for the safety of some of their other big projects of the same nature. The court decided that Secretary Ickes, as public works administrator, was without authority to dam navigable rivers unless specifically ordered by congress and that the law creating the PWA had not listed any such specific projects as the Parker dam. The same applies to many huge reclamation projects that have received PWA funds, and it is not unlikely that suits will be brought to stop some of them. Mr. Ickes said congress would be asked to authorize specifically the construction of the Parker dam.

FEDERAL Judges Woodward, Wilkerson and Lindley of Chicago are not going to be impeached, for the house subcommittee investigating equity and bankruptcy receiverships and practices reported the evidence taken did not warrant such action. The report said that in several instances "conduct prejudicial to the dignity of the federal judiciary" was disclosed, but that substantial improvements had been made both in the rules of the court and in the law applicable to the administrator of receiverships and bankruptcy litigation.

CHAIRMAN JOHN J. M'SWAIN of the house military affairs committee sent to the President a letter of apology for disclosure of defense plans outlined in executive sessions of the committee, and assumed full responsibility for "the unfortunate incident."

McSwain was rebuked by letter from the President for the publication in a house document of possible defense plans against Canada and British and French islands in the Atlantic and the Caribbean in the event of war. Brig. Gen. F. M. Andrews and Charles E. Kilbourne had outlined the program before a secret meeting of the committee.

FOREIGN MINISTER PIERRE LAVAL of France and Ambassador Potemkin of Russia finally fixed up the mutual assistance pact between the two countries in a way acceptable to both and it was signed in Paris. M. Laval then prepared to leave for Moscow, planning to stop in Warsaw en route.

It would seem that Laval had his way with the treaty, for it subordinates military action of the two powers to the procedure of the League of Nations, to provisions of the Locarno pact and also to the Franco-Polish alliance. All of that probably would keep France out of war even if Russia were attacked. In Paris it was taken for granted that a secret military convention, supplementing the pact, would soon be signed, fixing the methods of mutual assistance.

SETTING a new transcontinental record for transport ships, a TWA test plane flew from Burbank, Calif., to New York in 11 hours and 5 minutes. What is more important, for all but about one hundred miles it was controlled by a robot pilot. D. W. Tomlinson, the pilot, was accompanied by Harold Snead, an expert on radio beam flying, and Peter Redpath, navigation engineer. Tomlinson had the controls for only three brief intervals—over the San Bernardino range, at Durango, Colo., where a snowstorm was encountered, and at the landing at Floyd Bennett field. The plane reached its greatest cruising speed of 262 miles an hour over the Allegheny mountains.

TEXANS are going to have the opportunity of deciding whether their state shall remain dry or fall into line with most other states and repeal the prohibition law. The legislature has voted to submit the question to popular action.

Under the resolution adopted the vote would be held next August 24. Regulation would be left to the legislature and at the general election in 1936, a vote would be taken on a mandatory state monopoly over sales of hard liquor. Local option would be preserved under both straight repeal and the monopoly under the straight repeal plan, which also would bar the return of the open saloon.

GERMANY'S latest breach of the treaty of Versailles, the building of submarines, is stirring up a lot of angry talk in Great Britain, France and Italy. The English are especially disturbed, for they remember only too vividly how near the Germans came to starving them during the war by the destruction of shipping by the undersea boats. Anglo-German conversations on naval restriction were to have been held in London the second week in May, and these may now be called off or at least postponed.

The French are less vexed because they think the development may force a showdown on the whole status of the German navy and Hitler's demand for at least 35 per cent of the British tonnage and approximate parity with that of France. Naval experts in Paris said the disclosure might "well prove of inestimable benefit for military France in awakening naval Britain to the dangers of Hitler's armaments policy."

Information obtained by the powers was that Germany already had under construction a number of 250-ton submarines and planned a large fleet of them. Spokesmen for the German government denied that any were being built yet, but at the same time admitted that submarines were being "considered" in connection with plans for rebuilding the navy.

HAVING listened to Senator Long of Louisiana and other orators who do not like the administration and its New Deal and also have little love for the G. O. P., the National Farmers' Holiday association, in session at Des Moines, Iowa, decided that a third national political party should be formed.

Milo Reno, national president of the association, had a lively encounter with a group of alleged Communists during a business session. They sought adoption of a resolution calling for legislation for "relief without debts," "production credit without strings," and immediate repeal of the AAA. Reno denounced them as Wall Street racketeers and henchmen of Soviet Russia.

"You can't talk. You can't argue. Don't try to get the floor. I'm running this meeting," Reno said. "Sit down and shut up. Get out before we get really mad."

REPUBLICANS of nine midwestern states who met at Excelsior Springs, Mo., decided that the "grass roots" conference of leaders of the party should be held in Springfield, Ill., the date to be fixed later, though it probably will be early in June. The purpose of this gathering will be the rejuvenation of the party and the launching of a campaign to restore popular government.

POLICE of Havana apparently are well on the way to solution of the mystery of the fire which destroyed the Ward liner Morro Castle and other recent marine disasters. They have arrested three men, all natives of Catalan province in Spain, and say that they found on their persons letters of instruction concerning the destruction of the steamship Magallanes of the Spanish line, which was soon due in Havana. The documents, according to the authorities, ordered the accused to "take necessary action to precipitate a disaster similar to that of the Morro Castle." The police say the prisoners are well-known anarchists.

Even the Farmer Gets Air Conditioning

SOMEBODY is always giving the farmer a tractor with more comfort, more power, more traction. Low pressure tires started it all. Now come these Hula brothers of Medford, Okla., and steal the show at the national equipment displays at Wichita, Kan., with this "tractor of the future." It is air-conditioned, and is sound-proof to give good reception for its radio. Even a cigar lighter is included on the instrument panel.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

DANNY HAS THE SHAKES

Of all the chills of which you hear There's no chill like the chill of fear.

DANNY MEADOW MOUSE sighed with thankfulness and relief as he reached the other side of the Laughing Brook by way of the old log which had fallen across it, thus making a bridge. To be sure he was a long, long way from his snug little home, where Nanny Meadow Mouse was anxiously waiting for him, but at least he was on the right side of the Smiling Pool and the Laughing Brook. He no longer needed to think of the Big Pickler or of Snapper the Turtle. He had left Billy Mink and Reddy Fox way back by the Smiling Pool, so he felt quite safe from them.

Crept to the Entrance and Peeped Out.

Of course when he should reach the edge of the Green Meadows and start across to his snug little home he would have to watch for Reddy or Old Granny Fox, but just now he felt quite safe and it was a very good feeling indeed.

Being at last on the right side of the Laughing Brook, Danny felt that he had earned a rest, but having the wisdom of long experience he first looked for a place where he could rest in safety. Just a few feet from the end of the log on which he crossed the Laughing Brook was another old log. At once Danny scampered over to it for he long ago learned that old logs are quite likely to be hollow and when they are they make the very finest retreats in all the Great World for timid little people who wish to keep out of sight.

Just as he hoped, this old log was hollow and the only entrance was through an old knot hole barely big enough for Danny to squeeze through. Making sure that no one else was there, Danny squeezed in and promptly forgot all his recent troubles and was happy, which fortunately is the way of the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows.

In two minutes Danny was fast asleep.

Do YOU Know—

That the month of January was named after Janus, an early Roman divinity. It was added to the Roman calendar by Numa, 713 B. C., who made it the first month because Janus presided over the beginning of all business. In 1752 the legal year in England was ordered to begin on January 1 instead of on March 25.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have an uncle who swears from morning till night. I never heard such language as he uses. Where in the world do you think he learned to swear like that?

Sincerely,
HELEN DAMM.

Answer: My dear Miss Damm, if your uncle does what you claim for him I assure you he could not have learned it any place, it must have been a gift.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

A tablespoon of vinegar added to tough meat or chicken will soften the fiber and make it less tough. Use it in the water when cooking.

To make mint extract fill a bottle with the fresh mint and pack it in well; cover with alcohol and let stand for two weeks, then drain off and the extract is ready for flavoring and mint drinks. Use pure alcohol and it will be perfectly all right.

When steel ornaments, buckles and buttons of cut steel become tarnished rub them with unslaked lime and leave them in it for a short time, when they will be beautifully cleaned.

Suede shoes will be improved by rubbing them with fine emery paper.

Corn meal well moistened with gasoline will clean velvet hats, collars, and felt hats so that they will look fresh and new. Renew the corn meal after cleaning and go over the article to be sure it has been well done.

Save the bacon fat, pour water over it and allow it to settle. The fat will come to the top, the burnt particles sink into the water. Skim off the fat and use it for all sorts of cooking. Nice for french fried potatoes, hash browned, or it may take the place of butter in gingerbreads and spice cakes.

An ink remover—Pour a tablespoon or two of turpentine into a saucer, add some powdered soap, stir until dissolved, then bottle and keep for any such emergency as grease spots, or ink on carpet or rugs. If applied at once before the ink dries, the spots will come out. Rinse with warm water and rub dry.

SAM

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SAM is an officer walking our beat. No one could live on a quieter street. If there were a riot, our Sammy would quiet. The riot, and never disturb our repose. Each child on our street when he goes to sleep, knows He's under a special policeman's good care! Sammy is there!

And many a child on our street when he prays Says: "Please God, bless Sam, 'cause he has to sleep days!" While children are sleeping, his watch he is keeping, And sleeping is better because we have Sam. The children sleep on if they hear a door slam, He takes all the grief that they might have to bear! Sammy is there!

Sometimes the dear children drift off into dreams, And thinking of God, and of Sammy, it seems That some one who's thinking of others, unthinking, And thinking not once of himself, is so fine He must have a lot in his heart that's divine. So the children sleep tight, and the whole night is fair! Sammy is there!

Around the County

By CLARK KERR
Bill Rogers said it the other day when reviewing the speeches made by President Roosevelt and Mussolini. Mussolini stated that there were lean years ahead and that his people must sacrifice and bear it. If he brings any benefits to his people they are tickled to death. But the people of this country are always hollering if they don't receive every benefit. We had ought to feel good about spending the four and a half billion dollars and look well pleased when we help take the red off the government ledger.
Here is a striking instance of what happens under the "New Deal." I would cite the case of the Reynolds Tobacco Company. Higher prices and shorter hours under the N. R. A. codes, and processing tax on tobacco, imposed by A. A. A. increased the company's cost $10,000,000. Thereupon the company raised wholesale prices $60,000,000. Then the President of the United States put the seal of his approval upon this transaction by appointing Clay Williams, president of Reynolds Tobacco Company, as chairman of the N. R. A. board.
Located on the high banks of the historic AuSable river in the Huron National Forest we find the Fayerweathers' Rollway Camp. Surrounding a modern rustic dancing hall are numerous over-night cabins. Mr. and Mrs. Fayerweather have opened the dancing season at their resort. They are to be complimented on the fine way in which they conduct their dancing parties. It is no easy matter to conduct a party of this type when beer is being sold in the building, but due to their courteous and tactful manner everything went along like clock work.

NIGHT and DAY
you're safe on CONCRETE
At night the superiority of concrete becomes most apparent because of its visibility. Its light gray surface with sharply defined edges reflects light but is not glossy.
Concrete conforms precisely to the formula for the ideal pavement set up by the International Illumination Congress of 1928 and by the Illuminating Engineering Society in 1934. The importance of this is emphasized by the fact that the rate of death per accident is 43% higher during hours of darkness. Concrete, smooth but non-skid, insures a quick, certain stop even in the rain. Blow-outs, spring breakage, steering gear failures, accidents of all kinds are less apt to happen on concrete.
Yet concrete is not only safe—it is more comfortable—it saves in driving costs—it costs less for upkeep—and cost of construction is less than that of any other pavement of equal load-carrying capacity.

"Dad, I passed my last exam today!"
ACROSS plains and mountain ranges, hurdling rivers and towns, a human voice speeds along a wire. And so incredibly swift is its flight that even while the words are still sounding in a far-distant room, the voice is flowing into a Michigan home, a welcome guest—and a familiar one.
From a miracle, long-distance communication by telephone has developed into an integral part of every-day American life.
It is the quickest way to relieve anxiety; it is an unequalled means of sending congratulations or condolences; it can reunite scattered members of a family; it can bring together friends who have been parted by the intervening miles.
There is no way of estimating the human value of this modern necessity; for there is no way of measuring the joy and reassurance and satisfaction which—by the mere lifting of a receiver—can be derived from the sound of a well-remembered voice.
It is a tribute to modern telephone service that such long-distance communication by word of mouth is no longer considered something at which to marvel. In a few short years the miracle has become a commonplace. It is now accepted as a matter of course even by those whose memories go back to a day in which long-distance conversation was utterly unknown.
One of the functions of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company is to supply this modern necessity to the people of Michigan; and to supply it at the lowest rates that will adequately provide for the maintenance and improvement of the service.

THIS WAY LIES DISASTER

Excessive Federal restrictions, unregulated competition, the depression, have had their way with America's railroads.

Today the public views the plight of the lines with awakening understanding and broadening concern, and there is growing alarm that close by may be stalking the ominous specter of government ownership.

Disastrous as would be federal usurpation of rail control, might it not be the signal for that final economic calamity--the socialization of all industries?

Under present policies and conditions could government have done better with the railroads than has private management? Could government, in the future, do as well?

Memories of America's War-Era rail management are too fresh, too painful; the strangely similar results of like policies in other countries are too current, too repugnant to blind the thinking to government ownership's deficiencies and undesirabilities.

Simple sanity in transportation policies will solve the railroads' problems, while their seizure will only breach the walls which guard private industrial initiative against all-engulfing socialization.

Michigan's delegation in Congress should so be advised.

"Coming!" he shouted thickly and seized a hammer and attacked the trunk lock. Ammunition must be in there.

The crowd milled, now, trampling the new snow, completely out of hand at this delay. Two or three aided Tim in his plea for at least temporary moderation but others rebelled and fought to get the post which would batter down the stair door. These weaved to and fro there in the packed throng, a quarrel within a quarrel.

And then came a hush, a quick, spreading hush which swept the crowd like a shadow; like a swiftly speeding shadow, wiping out sound as a shadow wipes out sunlight, breaking sentences in half. And then rose a quick popping of excited voices.

"Elliott!" "Here he is!" "Look!" "He's hurt!"

Bundled to the ears in a great overcoat, cap drawn low, supported on the one side by John Martin and on the other by Able Armitage, he came slowly, painfully out of the side street. He scarcely seemed to be aware of that throng; did not look either to the right or the left. All his energy was bent on moving forward.

He gained the middle of the street in an impressive hush. Then he murmured a word to Able and he halted. He looked about at his men and smiled a trifle weakly, but in his look was a quality which clearly indicated that love which strong men have for their kind.

"It's all right, boys," he said and only those in the first ranks could hear, his voice was that light. "They didn't get me . . . badly. I appreciate this . . . but want you to . . . get back to . . . camp."

He panted for breath and lifted his face to the broken windows above. Far back in that room he caught a glimpse of a face watching him—cocked as though striving to hear.

"It's my fight," he went on. "Not yours. . . I don't want any . . . of you hurt. Go back. . . Will you go . . . back?"

The crowd stirred. "You bet we will, Ben!" a man called. "Now that you're located if you ask it, we will!"

Tim Jeffers worked his way to Ben's side and put a hand on his shoulder, listening to what Able told him.

"Go home, boys!" Tim Jeffers called. "They knifed Ben last night but he's well took care of. You teamsters, get out your horses; we've found what we come for. To camp, every last Hoot Owl hand!"

Men relaxed. The post that was to have battered in Brandon's door was dropped. The mob was satisfied.

Slowly Ben Elliott made his way back to Dawn's home.

As Tim Jeffers took his place beside the sick man, Able Armitage drew into the post office entry to watch the mob disperse. Emory Sweet was standing there.

"The king is dead!" Able muttered solemnly, staring at those broken windows.

"Long live the king!" said Emory. Pause. "Dead men tell no tales."

"No, but sometimes a corpse will kick back!"

CHAPTER XIII

Furiously, Nicholas Brandon saw as the days passed the wreckage of his power pile up on a flood of public resentment, of loosened expressions of distrust and contempt and hatred which had grown and festered unobserved for years.

The man who had replaced the glass in his office windows that Sunday afternoon worked slowly and silently where, in other days, he had done odd jobs with swift efforts so that his labor might give his employer satisfaction, and had taken every opportunity to make talk with the town's great man.

On Monday as Brandon walked along the street he saw faces leering at him from windows, and men he passed averted their glances in a gleeful sort of embarrassment, or looked at him with surly, defiant glares.

In yard and mill he was conscious that his employees were thinking only of his fall. He discharged one man for loafing and the fellow only laughed at him. . . . Laughed!

"There's plenty room at Hoot Owl for good hands," he said and laughed again.

That mob yesterday had not wrecked the town as they had threatened but the ruin they left was of far more consequence. Their coming had stripped Brandon of everything but his material possessions and now these only mocked him in survival.

Back in the office he paced the place like a caged animal.

Mail arrived. He took the packet of letters and drank deeply from his bottle again.

He thumbed the letters absently, until the script on one caught his eye. The envelope contained a single sheet of note paper and he unfolded it with trembling fingers. On the sheet was written:

"I never want to see you again. I know now what the whole country has known and been afraid to admit for years. I have thought you were my friend but now I know you are my worst enemy, as you are the sworn enemy of those I love most.

"DAWN." He stood for a time staring at the paragraph; then read it again and drained his whisky bottle. Such a note, now, was to have been expected by an ordered mind, of course, but his fevered brain had not foreseen any necessity for abandoning this, the most precious of his hopes. He trembled a bit and made a strange sound in his throat.

A meticulous office man was Nicholas Brandon, and though he had suffered the severest blow of his experience just now he mechanically went about his habitual procedure. He had received and read a letter. It required no reply. The next step in orderly procedure was to file it.

In the outer office were ranks and rows of letter files. But this letter did not belong there.

In the great safe to which only he had combination and keys reposed two files side by side. He took both out and placed them on the desk. He opened one and a cruel smile twitched his lips. It contained letters on paper of varying size, color and quality. He rifled through these, stopping now and again to read a phrase, a sentence, a paragraph. . . . Pleas, these were; a writing begging for help . . . and he smiled again.

In the other file were more letters, some yellowed by age and these older ones had been written in the unformed script of a child. . . . "Dear Uncle Nick," they all began. Always that, though the handwriting grew formed and mature until it was identical with that on the single sheet he had just read. These were Dawn McManus' letters to him, saved since her childhood.

He ran through them almost idly, his senses dulled by whisky and the calamity which had befallen him. A narrow slip of tablet paper fell out. He looked at the penciled note on one side.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

Happier memories, that brought; of the time Dawn had brought girls home with her from school for Thanksgiving and had taken them to the hunting camp for a week-end.

Brandon had gone with the party and it was there that he had first remarked Dawn's emerging womanhood, that the desire for her had been kindled in his blood; there in the camp where her father, as the whole country knew, had been with Sam Faxon on the night when Faxon fled to his death. But Dawn had never known that. She had laughed and been happy at Antler Lodge.

"Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

He read it again. It bore no date, it was unsealed; it betrayed no indication of the time that had passed since its inscription. The note had been left on his desk for him three years before. . . . He leaned forward sharply and his eyes narrowed. . . . After a moment he straightened and smiled oddly. A look like relief, almost like happiness spread over his face.

Fine strength of body healed Ben Elliott's wound rapidly. By mid-week he was dressed and sitting before the fire with Dawn, talking of his return to Hoot Owl on the morrow.

"It's been so good, even under the circumstances, to spend time with you," he said gravely.

The girl flushed but made no reply. "And all the time I've been wondering, Dawn, why you wouldn't let me come. . . . You've been so kind, so generous, so . . . so friendly. And yet, only a few days ago, you told me I must never come again. Why was it, Dawn? Why, when I love you so?"

"Don't!" she begged in a light whisper. "Please!"

"But it's beyond any power I have to keep still. I love you, Dawn, better than life. Can you believe that, when I've seen so little of you? Look at me!"—fiercely. "Don't you like it, Dawn, being loved?"

"Ah . . . Like it? It's wonderful, Ben. . . . It's too wonderful!" She averted her face.

"And loved by me?"

"Yes, yes! It's all wonderful. It's too wonderful, Ben. Things like it just can't be!"

"Why not? It's wonderful, you say, and yet . . . Can't you explain?"

She was fighting for self-control, now, and wrested her hands from his, backing away, white and shaken.

"You can't understand, perhaps. Sometimes I can't understand myself. Always I've wanted to be loved by . . . by you, Ben Elliott! It's given me the only true happiness I've ever had."

"And then I had to remember what I am. Can't you see that a girl who is known as the daughter of a murderer can't let any man love her?"

"That's foolish! . . . It's terrible, I know, for you to bear. But let me help, dear girl; let me stand by your side and help!"

"No, no! I can't bear it! I couldn't take a cloud to you and to your children. . . . And it's all a mistake, all a lie! My father was no killer!" Her voice rose in sharp conviction on that. "He was kind and gentle; he never would hurt another. All these years I've known it and others know it, but just being sure in our own minds isn't enough. The whole world must know! Something tells me my father is alive somewhere, waiting, watching, suffering. . . . But until we can prove that or something else comes up to banish this cloud. . . . No, don't kiss me again! I can't stand it, I tell you! I can't stand it, Ben!"

Sobbing, she fled the room. "Well, that ought not to be impossible!" Elliott said to himself after a long, thoughtful interval. "Nothing much is. . . ."

He made no further moves toward love making after that but far into the night he talked with Dawn of her father. She had not heard all of the story, he realized. She did not know, for instance, that the tragedy which preceded McManus' disappearance took place in Antler Lodge; she did not know how far her father had gone in his attempts to drown sorrow of his wife's death by drinking. But she did know that Faxon was dead, that her father was blamed and that a dusty warrant for his arrest on a charge of homicide still reposed in the county records.

Next day he declared that he felt fit to drive back to camp and for an hour argued with Dawn, trying to win her promise that he might come again, but she begged him to stay away for a time, at least.

Elliott did not go at once to the stable where his team awaited him. He entered the court house and went over the meager records of the case, but little that was new rewarded his search. The net yield of that search was only to impress him with the proportions of the new task he had set for himself and as he drove out of town his heart was heavier than it had been in years.

Putting the Hoot Owl on its feet had been a lark; shearing Brandon of his power had been hazardous but, after all, simple. . . . But this other was something else again.

That night Bird-Eye Blaine sat with Elliott for long and went over the circumstances leading up to Faxon's death. Men in Tincup commenced to whisper that Elliott was delving into the McManus case and the gossip reached Brandon who was locked in his office much of the time, now, soaked with whisky. He did not drink for many hours after the news reached him. He kept his head clear and planned.

Able told Dawn of Ben's activity, watching her face narrowly because he understood the obstacle that was between these two. He saw hope come, followed by misgiving and trouble.

It was on Friday that Dawn left Tincup, striking across country far from the road toward Hoot Owl.

She was going to see Ben Elliott and tell him that she must see him now, that her heart could have no peace without him; that he must come to her and let her stand beside him while he tried into the past and attempted to make it give up truth.

At noon, on the edge of a swamp, she sought shelter from the fitful wind, built a small fire and ate the lunch she carried. Then she went on, sighting her mill far away from the top of the next ridge.

Martin was alone in the office when she entered and started up so sharply at sight of her that the girl, in turn, was startled.

"I'm sorry!" she exclaimed at bit mystified. "Did I frighten you?"

"No. Not frightened. . . . My thoughts were . . . far from here."

"Is Ben about?"

"Haven't seen him since dinner. Don't know where he went."

Tim Jeffers, just down from camp, entered then.

"Where's Ben at?" he asked Martin. "I don't know. Miss McManus, here, was just asking."

Martin moved to the old table Ben used for a desk. "Sometimes he leaves a note for me when he's going away." He bent over the table, looking at the litter of papers on it. "No, he left no word. . . . Hum. . . . What's this?"

He picked up a slip of paper, read the single line inscribed on it and looked at Dawn.

"I didn't mean to pry. . . . Probably he's gone to meet you, though. This is a note from you."

"A note! Why, I . . ." Frowning, she took the paper and read: "Meet us at Antler Lodge this afternoon.—Dawn."

"Why!" she cried. "I didn't . . . I must have!"—looking from one to the other. "That's my writing."

"Oh!" She let the paper flutter to the floor.

"I wrote that! I wrote that years ago!" she cried, struggling to speak distinctly. "I wrote that note for Mr. Brandon. . . . Years ago. . . . How did it get here? Who is calling Ben to the lodge?"

"What's this?" Tim Jeffers asked roughly. "Brandon? . . . Callin' Ben off alone?"

"Don't you see?" Martin cried and his voice was thick. "Dawn wrote it, all right. But he's sent it to Ben. . . . It's a decoy! Tim, the lad's on his way to the lodge alone and Brandon's planned it!"

No need for more words, then! On went Martin's jacket. From a corner he snatched snowshoes and a pair for Tim.

"We'll go," he said to Dawn. "You tell Buller—"

"But I'm going, too!" the girl cried sharply. "I'm going. Oh, hurry, Tim! We may be too late, now!"

They crossed the railroad tracks at a run, put on their snowshoes and with Jeffers breaking trail, entered the timber. Another had gone that way today, a man whose heart burned and sang. Dawn had sent for him; Dawn wanted him!

Entering the office while Martin was in the mill his eyes had encountered Dawn's note. No thought of how it came to be there presented itself. The quick conclusion at which he arrived was that Dawn and others had gone to Antler Lodge; that was where the shot had been fired which sent Sam Faxon to his death. Perhaps Able had taken Dawn there. Hastily, he took his snowshoes and departed.

The distance was a good five miles, however, and part of the going was in soft footing. So it was nearly two hours after his start that he came in sight of the building on the high bank of the Mad Woman.

As he went down the slope he saw snowshoe tracks outside the place. "Hello!" he cried, mounting a drift and stopping. "Hello, in there!"

No answer. He twisted his feet hastily out of their straps, wondering a bit. For once his alertness was gone, for once he was wholly off guard.

"Dawn!" he called again as he shoved open the door. "Hello, who's here—"

He had crossed the threshold, peering into the gloom, a sudden and cold misgiving sweeping him. "Turn back; withdraw!" a small voice warned but before he could gather himself a blow struck him and he went down under a heavy, living weight.

But as Elliott went down, with his assault on top, he drew his knees upward, bowed his back and with a trick of rough-and-tumble fighting used the very impact which had felled him to toss the man on beyond.

He heard him curse, saw the other turn as he pitched across the floor and scramble to his feet.

"Brandon!" he cried hoarsely as a savage joy swept him.

At last he was face to face with the man who had struck so many times from the darkness and from behind!

Brandon did not speak. He rushed with head lowered. Great arms wrapped Ben's body, a head drove into the pit of his stomach, driving the breath from his body.

Use of Helium Gas

Air with helium gas content is not poisonous to the body, says Pathfinder Magazine. One of its important uses is to reduce the nitrogen content (about four-fifths of all air) in artificial atmospheres for use in deep sea diving and other work conducted under heavy atmospheric pressure. Experiments conducted by the bureau of mines show that such an atmosphere enables workers to labor for longer periods under higher pressures in safety and comfort than in an ordinary atmosphere.

Carving of Human Bones

Only some fundamental instinct can account for parallel customs among primitive peoples who never met or even heard of one another's existence. For example, one of the most common practices of prehistoric man was the carving of human bones. These carvings have been found in ancient graves in almost every part of the world—Collier's Weekly.

Travelers View Christ Church, Oxford.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

TRAVELING as a vagabond in the British Isles is somewhat different from traveling as a tourist. Here's how one American saw the country on a job hunt which extended from England through Wales and Scotland to Edinburgh.

In London a member of the Guards asked him, "If you hadn't a lot of money, how could you take a trip like this?"

"Oh, that's easy," he replied. "Worked my way across. I expect to walk up to Scotland and back, earning my expenses."

"Great; but how are you going to get work with jobs so scarce?"

"Trust to luck," he said nonchalantly.

His equipment was simple. Over a navy-blue slip-on sweater he put on a roomy khaki shirt, leaving the collar open; got into rough, brown tweed trousers, and pulled on an old brown snap-brim hat. Into a small haversack went a change of underwear, a couple of pairs of socks, a few handkerchiefs, and some toilet articles. Then he packed all of his other belongings and left them in the care of a storage company.

The walker arrived in Oxford at commencement time, remained there for two days, then set out for Stratford-on-Avon. There he sought out the place in Henley street which most people believe to be the Bard's birthplace. At the rear of the half-timbered, gable-roofed house, with its quaint mullioned windows was a spacious garden. A high stone wall surrounded this idyllic spot, but screened none of the beauty. Due to his unusual height, he could look right over and enjoy the scene to his heart's content without having to pay for the privilege.

In nearby Shotton, with his finances reduced to only eight shillings, he suddenly abandoned holiday-making and sought work. He was offered a job in a cow barn, but finding that the purchase of suitable clothing would eat up all his profit, he declined the job and struck out for Worcester, a much larger town with probably better opportunities. Here he obtained a position as laborer to help reconstruct a store.

Lost in the Hills of Wales.

On the road again, the American wanderer took a long tramp through the wilds of Wales. Leaving the foothills behind, he came to the real hills, some brown with heather, soon to blossom out with tiny red flowers that would transform them into huge mounds of ruddy color. Once, after a storm, he became lost in the hills. Around him, as far as the eye could see was nothing but grassy, almost treeless hills and valleys. There was no sign of life except for a few sheep nibbling at tufts of grass nearby. Almost in despair, he walked along mile after mile without coming to a road or within sight of a farmhouse, and it wasn't long before he realized he had been misdirected and was as near lost as anyone could be.

Groping in darkness made deeper by the heavy clouds, he made his way, cautiously testing each step until he thought he had passed the marshes. He saw at length a little river in the valley, and beyond it a faintly glimmering light. Throwing caution to the winds, he struck out in that direction.

Not far from the bank of the river, he ran into some tall grass and, before he realized where his feet were falling, he felt an odd sensation, as if by some sinister means he was being engulfed by an unseen power. He wriggled loose, only to slip again at the next step into the clutches of the bog.

Was he suddenly to be snatched away by this monster and leave no trace? Frantic, he clutched at his oozing strength and fought like a madman, digging his nails into the slime, seeking a support. Somehow in the blackness he found one—and drew himself to safety.

Liverpool to Scotland.

Finally he reached Liverpool, the second seaport in Britain, where he was determined to make his next try for a job. He obtained one shifting furniture in the warehouse of a department store. On the second day there he was offered permanent work at nearly double the salary. Relieved, he thanked his employer, but explained that he was over to see some of the Old World and didn't want to settle down until he had done so. After two weeks of working, and exploring Liverpool, he set off for Scotland.

At Ormskirk he saw an architectural monstrosity—a church with a tower and a spire, built side by side. An architect he chanced to meet told him something of the story of the queer edifice. Two maiden sisters, of the name of Orme, desiring to donate funds for a superstructure, could not agree on the kind. After long argument, one built a tower and the other a spire.

In Kendal, he sat down on the bank of the River Kent under a gigantic elm and ate some sandwiches purchased at a store nearby. The little money he had brought from Liverpool had dwindled to a few shillings.

One night, just as twilight was beginning to form, he entered Edinburgh and passed down Princes street. Along one side, a wide expanse of well-kept gardens extended to the bold, rocky hill on which stands Edinburgh's ancient fortress, its proud castle.

After paying his week's rent in advance, he had five shillings left, barely enough to provide food for two days. That meant he should have to use quick action. He began with the department stores, but was not so fortunate in finding a job this time. For two days he made the rounds, calling everywhere he thought there was a chance. Being so tall, he drew the spotlight, and quips from the inquisitive Scots.

Selling Papers in Edinburgh.

When his resources had dwindled to a shilling, he realized something had to be done immediately, but what? Hungry as a bear, he pondered on what he could buy that would supply the most nourishment at the least cost! Chocolate won! In a sweets shop, he bought three penny bars for breakfast and, munching away, crossed the North bridge. He came to the fine old building housing the Scotsman and the Evening Dispatch, two of the most important papers in Scotland. Perhaps here was a chance; at least it was worth making a stab at! Inside he inquired how much could be made by selling papers.

The man in charge was astonished. "You're foolish," he said; "all the corners worth having are held by dealers already."

"Is the North bridge taken?"

"No," spoke up some one near him, and he learned that it was the windiest place in the city, and that the news dealers considered it the most undesirable. People had to clutch their hats and keep out of the way of whirling dust, and usually lost no time in getting to the other side; and, anyway, why should they stop to buy a paper when they could get one at either end? The prospects certainly weren't bright. But undaunted, he took his stand near the center of the windy bridge, pulled down his hat, and began calling "Dispatch!"

"Selling papers!" one woman exclaimed, "And for a wager, I suppose. Well, I'll encourage no such foolishness! It's not even today's, is it?"

"Yes, ma'am, it's today's and the latest, and I'm not selling them for a wager."

Their attention attracted by his unusual height, pedestrians stared at him, many eyeing him with skepticism. But when they saw he was really in earnest, the papers quickly disappeared, and he had to restock frequently. By seven o'clock he found he had made more than five shillings.

The next day he was one of the star vendors. On the following day his photograph and a detailed article about him appeared in the press. From then on the papers sold like hot cakes.

That night he was a bit of a celebrity. Every few feet he was stopped and given the glad hand. He received so many whacks on the back that his shoulders felt sore the next day, and for the rest of his stay, he had practically no time to himself. Auto-graph hunters asked him to sign his name in books and on the papers he sold, or to inscribe verses in diaries. During his last day on the bridge, he was showered with invitations to spend the week-end.

"I Can't Stand It, Ben!"

Unique "Primrose" Rug to Crochet

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

This rag rug measures 42 inches and requires about three pounds of material to finish. It appears to be made of six squares each of a different size, with the horizontal positions alternating. Work is started with the center square about 5 inches in diameter. Triangles are then crocheted on the four sides of inner square forming the second square. Continue same way for third, fourth and fifth squares. The sixth square is the same size as fifth square and therefore requires smaller triangles on sides than the others. Colors should be so arranged that center is in light shades of yellow, while outer triangles represent the petals of flowers, and may be shaded in color desired. This can be made into a very attractive and unique rug, depending very much on the color scheme used.

This is one of the twenty-six crocheted and braided rugs illustrated with instructions in Grandmother Clark's rug book No. 25. Detailed instructions are given in this book for the "Primrose" rug, and if you are interested, send 15c to our Rug Department and we will send it to you by mail.

Printing Blocks Made in China Centuries Ago

The oldest printing blocks in existence are on exhibition in a collection of bamboo, root and wood carvings from China at Chicago's Field Museum of Natural History.

The blocks are engraved with floral designs and must have been made before the year 1108 A. D. They were found in the ancient city of Chu-li, in the southern part of the province of Chi-li. This city, excavated by archeologists in recent years, was submerged by a flood in 1108.

The Chinese are the inventors of block-printing, and, in fact, of all the essentials for printing—paper, writing brush, ink and ink-pallet or inkstone. They invented and perfected these entirely from their own resources, unaided by any other nation. Paper was invented and manufactured in China as early as 105 A. D.

Rash Disfigured Face

Disappeared After Using Cuticura

"A rash broke out on my face from some external irritation and spread very rapidly. The skin was red, and the rash burned and itched so that I scratched night and day. Then it developed into large spots or eruptions and disfigured my face. I tried different kinds of soaps, but had no success. I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided to send for a free sample. The result was so good that I bought more, and after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment the rash disappeared." (Signed) Herbert B. Skyles, R. D. 1, Vintondale, Pa.

Great Liner to Be Sent to Graveyard

S. S. Mauretania Will Be Wrecked for Scrap.

London.—The Mauretania, speed queen of the Atlantic from her launching in 1907 until 1929 and the most famous of British ships, will soon make her last trip—to the scrap heap. At least she will be spared the indignity of a tow to her grave.

Under her own power she will sail from Southampton, England, for Rosyth, tiny town at the head of the Scottish Firth of Forth. Arrived off Rosyth the once mighty queen of the Atlantic will drive head on to the beach with her four steam turbines, marvel of their day, going "full ahead."

Beached in the shallow waters of the Firth, wreckers will tear the heart out of her for the value of the metal in her hull.

Foreigners Sought Ship.

Foreign interests, particularly Italian and Japanese, have tried to buy the Mauretania with a view to recommissioning her and putting her back in passenger service.

Whether from sentiment, or because of pressure from the high command of the English navy, the officials of the Cunard-White line refused to sell the ship to other than English hands. She went to the Metal Industries, Ltd., of Glasgow, Scotland, for a reported price of £80,000—approximately $384,000 at the present exchange. The cost of building her was £3,000,000, or roughly $14,400,000.

The Mauretania, sister ship of the torpedoed Lusitania, established the record for crossing the Atlantic at 5 days 10 hours and 45 minutes back in 1907. Despite the desperate efforts of her owners to recondition her in such a way that she might regain the record she held for 22 years, the German Bremer and Europa and the Italian Rex have been too fast for her since 1929.

Her Last Attempt.

In her last vain try for her former place as the fastest of the Atlantic ships she made the crossing from Cherbourg to the Ambrose channel lightship in 4 days 21 hours and 44 minutes, arriving in New York August 8, 1929.

The present record for the crossing is 4 days 13 hours and 58 minutes, set by the Rex of the Italian line in August of 1933 and closely approached by many others of the modern luxury liners. The greater speed of the new ships, embodying all the modern improvements and the latest developments in streamlining, as well as greater stability and more comforts, combined to start the Mauretania on the down hill path to her grave.

More fortunate than her mate, the Lusitania, the Mauretania went through the war unscathed. Used in troop transport to the Dardanelles in the early days of the war, she was later recommissioned as a hospital ship. Before the war ended the English government handed the great ship back to her owners. She was then refitted and placed in the passenger service.

Lighting Trick

If the newly painted walls of a room do not appear the desired color when artificial light is turned on, try substituting blue bulbs in your lighting fixtures for the usual white-frosted ones. "Daylight" bulbs have quite an effect on the wall colors of the room in which they are used.

Statue of Liberty Gains in Popularity

Washington.—A register for visitors, hidden in a nook of the Statue of Liberty for nearly 40 years, has been discovered.

The book contains 1,500 pages, each page having 54 signatures. The signatures are those of persons who visited the famous monument in New York harbor between 1890 and 1906.

Comparing data found in the old book with that shown in last year's register, George A. Palmer, acting superintendent of the statue, was amazed by the immense increase revealed in the number and range of visitors.

Forty years ago, it was revealed, only 11 states were represented by 69 visitors who registered on August 8, while on August 8, 1934, 1,262 actually visited the monument and 579 registered. Thirty-six states were represented in the latter group.

UNFINISHED SYMPHONIES

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

More than a century ago a young man began a great symphony when he was only about twenty-one years of age and his name was Franz Schubert. While taxing his strength to interpret a divinely inspired message he died at the age of thirty-one before completing the composition. The work is greatly treasured and it has come to be known in the musical circles as the

"Unfinished Symphony."

Our lives are like symphonies. Tragedy and pathos, sorrow and joy, success and failure, sunshine and rain, light and darkness. In music the major chords express joy, the minor chords strains of sorrow. Every life is a symphony in which not only are expressed these major and minor chords but also a great theme—the

An Evening Ensemble

A midsummer night's dream by Mainbocher of multicolored flowered taffeta on a white ground has a white chiffon bodice. The hem cut up in front to show the feet is an important style note. purpose and meaning of life itself. Try however hard we may, no great life purpose is ever completely fulfilled. However high and praiseworthy may be our ambition, we know from experience that these ambitions will never be ultimately realized. Ideals are not meant to be achieved. They are goals which urge us, as it were, "On stepping stones to higher things." It is this eternal "urge," to express in whatever may be our life's work, our highest and best self that makes the symphony. Even though we may never complete it, we have known something of the exalted joy of self-expression.

Life will always be an unfinished symphony—perhaps this was why Robert Browning wrote, "A man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for," or as in the "Faultless Painter," he wrote, "I do what many dream of all their lives. Dream? Strive to do, and agonize to do, and fall in doing." Perhaps this same idea gave rise to the rather crude custom of the early Indians to bury in the grave of their departed a gun and a dog, so that they might continue in their work in the Happy Hunting Ground. Surely the old philosopher was right when he suggested that a human life was not built as a child would build a house of blocks, just for the thrill of seeing it tumble down. No—there is an eternal meaning and purpose in life itself and though we never reach the ideal and much of our work must necessarily remain unfinished:

Yet we trust that somehow good Shall be the final goal of ill, That not one life shall be destroyed Or, cast as rubbish to the void When God has made the pile complete.

The Household

The Richly Toned Patterned Paper, Applied to the Back of the Closet Shelves, Lent Distinction to Them.

CLOSET backgrounds are becoming increasingly attractive as they gain in decorative attention. No longer is it considered quite right for them to be left with the white plaster finish if the interior is conspicuously visible when the door is thrown open, although in the case of clothes closets the white may remain if it lightens the interior. In many instances these closet side walls are bright with color. For dining room and kitchenette closets these finishes may properly be considered the last word in decoration.

Dining room cupboards on the Dutch and Colonial types are in high favor, and these are objects of especial attention in the vogue of fancy backgrounds. Wall paper is a favorite medium of decoration, the kind of paper which is gay with birds and blossoms, landscapes and pictorial designs. The background of the paper generally is rich in tone, bright blues, intense reds, deep yellows being esteemed. Against such colors the beauty of other bright hues in corresponding color values carry out the designs in a strikingly effective manner.

The papers must have strength as well as beauty. No merely pretty or dainty paper is pleasing for this purpose. The colors must harmonize well with the color scheme of a room or match it in the main. Also the contents of the closet shelves have to be considered. For instance for peasant wares red would be in keeping, while if the china was decorated in pink the color would kill the beauty of the ware. Pewter and brass are congenial to these decorative paper backgrounds. With certain papers, silver and glass show to advantage, although there is a peasant aspect to these walls which accords better metals of lesser value than silver.

Painted walls make good side wall finishes for dining room and kitchen closets. The colors used are not tints but stronger tones, not dark but gay.

Green and yellow are two colors against which most decorated china whatever its hues, can be seen advantageously. Blue is very pleasing with some old fashioned wares, and Chinese red is just the thing with some decorations and some chinaware.

Any homemaker can paint the walls as there is not apt to be much wall space. Shelves are white, cream, or natural wood. The paper used is costly but since very little is needed the actual outlay would not be great. In the average closet, matching paper would not be necessary which simplifies the work for the home decorator.
