After holding down second position in the league standings for a week, the locals are again nestling in the top berth following the outcome of last Sunday's games. Tawas resumed its winning ways at Standish, coming out on the long end of a 7-2 count, while the Twining boys were jerked back into second place as the result of a 3-2 defeat handed them by AuGres.

With Boulder turning in a six-hit pitching performance and limiting the Standish team to two runs, it remained for the local sluggers to turn on a little power at bat. This they did and a total of 15 safeties were collected off the offerings of Bootz, Standish hurler, and converted into seven runs.

Tawas took the lead in the second inning with a three-run rally. Noel and Laidlaw singled and a base on balls to Mark filled the sacks. Davis grounded to the mound and Noel was forced at home. Laidlaw scored on a wild pitch. After Moeller popped to second, Boulder singled to score Mark and Davis. Quick grounded out to first to retire the side.

A four-run spurt in the fourth frame concluded the locals' scoring for the game. In that inning Mark and Davis singled after Laidlaw struck out. Tempin took Moeller's pop fly at first for the second out. Quick doubled to left, scoring Mark and sending Davis to third. Quick then cleaned the sacks with a home run into center field.

Standish scored its two runs in the sixth on a base on balls to Tempin and singles by St. James and O'Keefe.

Laidlaw led the local pack in hitting with three safeties in four times up. Quick, Cunningham, Noel and Boulder each connected safely twice. Courneya, with two hits, was the only Standish man to solve Boulder for more than one bingle.

Glavin comes to the local diamond next Sunday, July 21, to engage the Tawas boys. The Glavin aggregation is well up in the league standings and provides stiff opposition for any team in the circuit. The Tawas-Glavin mix-up should be an interesting contest. Come out.

The protest made by the locals on the Twining-Tawas game will be decided upon at a meeting of the league directors to be held at Standish on Monday evening, July 22.

Blueberry Pickers Asked To Cooperate In Reducing Number Of Forest Fires

Now that the berry season is with us again, the Huron National Forest is conducting a campaign to reduce the number of man-caused fires, fires directly traceable to carelessness.

Although the vegetation appears green and safe from fires, blueberry pickers should use extreme care. Close to the ground is a layer of very dry material which requires only a spark as from a carelessly thrown cigarette or match to start a serious forest fire. Only last week near Luzerne a fire started which rapidly covered 20 acres, at one time crowning in the tree tops and jumping a 40-foot road. Last week in the Tawas District of the Huron National Forest three fires were caused by smokers in blueberry areas.

Indications point to a record berry crop this year. Forest Supervisor Murphy hopes that all people traveling in the forests will use extreme caution with tobacco and matches so that he, too, can have a record berry season with no fires caused by carelessness.

EMIL E. KUNZE DEAD AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Veteran Merchant Opened East Tawas Store In 1888

Emil E. Kunze, veteran East Tawas merchant and lumberman, passed away July 14th after a brief illness.

Born in Chemnitz, Germany, June 3, 1864, Mr. Kunze came to America while still a boy, settling in Sanilac county. Coming to AuSable in the early eighties, he became identified with the lumbering interests in this section. In 1888 he, with John Applin, established a retail grocery at East Tawas, known as Kunze & Applin, and was active in this field until 1926.

For the past nine years, since retiring from the grocery business, Mr. Kunze has taken an active interest in forest and game conservation, and in promoting the Huron Hunting Club located at the head of Tawas Lake.

Always a public-spirited citizen, Mr. Kunze was elected township treasurer in 1890, later was a member of the village council, and, in more recent years, served several terms on the board of education, being the last surviving member of the board which was responsible for the construction of the present public school building. His fraternal connections included the Masonic Order, I. O. O. F., and the Independent Order of Foresters.

Mr. Kunze leaves surviving him three daughters and two sons, Mrs. B. G. Little of Owosso, Mrs. S. J. Fox of East Tawas, Mrs. W. C. Dudgeon of Detroit, E. L. Kunze of Detroit, and F. E. Kunze of East Tawas.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday at 2:00 p. m. at the residence by the Rev. W. A. Gregory. The following acted as pall bearers: Fred Adams, J. W. Applin, J. G. Dimmick and Norman Salsbery, all of East Tawas, John Sweitzer of Bay City and O. W. Bromley of Detroit.

James Teare, retired Detroit & Mackinac railroad employe and highly esteemed citizen of East Tawas, died suddenly Wednesday, July 10. He had been in apparent good health. The deceased was 76 years of age and had been a resident of East Tawas for 46 years.

James Teare was born May 28, 1859, at Port Austin. He was married there to Miss Anna McKinnon October 26, 1884. They moved to East Tawas in 1889 where he was employed in the lumber industry. Later he became an employe of the railroad and continued in its employ until his retirement four years ago.

He is survived by the widow, one son, William J. Teare of Bay City, two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Reid of St. Charles and Mrs. Victor Marzinski of East Tawas, two brothers, Daniel Teare of Kinde and John Teare of Port Austin, and five grandchildren.

Funeral services were held from the home Friday afternoon. Rev. C. E. Edinger officiated. Burial was in the East Tawas cemetery.

American Legion Auxiliary To Present Musical Comedy

The Ladies Auxiliary of the American Legion of East Tawas will present the sparkling musical comedy, "Listen To Me," in the Community Building on July 31 and August 1. The production, with its two hours of comedy, songs, and dances, is expected to prove one of the most entertaining ever offered in this locality.

"Listen To Me," since its first appearance over eighteen months ago, has won for itself the reputation of being one of the best plays on the amateur stage today. One critic says of it, "The best amateur play that has come to my attention during the past ten years." Another calls it a "highly professional show suited to amateur capabilities."

The play deals with the highly humorous attempts of two young

Crawford, Montgomery Score In Gay Drama

"No More Ladies," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new Joan Crawford picture co-starring Robert Montgomery coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 21-22-23, is one of the finest pictures these two popular stars have ever made.

An uproarious comedy with strong underlying drama of the tactics used by a modern woman to hold the husband she loves, it was cleverly adapted from the Broadway stage hit by A. E. Thomas.

The featured cast is exceptionally brilliant, including Charlie Ruggles, Franchot Tone, Edna May Oliver, Gail Patrick, and Reginald Denny. It would be a hair-splitting procedure to determine which turns in the most convincing characterization.

Adrian again has designed a wardrobe for the star so dazzling as to make one forget the procession of beautiful gowns she has worn before. "No More Ladies" is definitely one of the best pictures of the year.

Lobbying and Virgin Islands Investigations Develop Lively Scraps—House "Rebels" Are Tame Concerning TVA Amendments.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © Western Newspaper Union.

FIFTY thousand dollars was appropriated by the house for investigation by the rules committee of lobbying for and against bills affecting utilities interests. Representative Rankin of Mississippi declared that Representative O'Connor of New York, chairman of the committee, was unfit to conduct the inquiry because he was antagonistic to the administration. O'Connor, rising to reply, was given an ovation by the house, and promised the investigation would be thorough and impartial.

Already the committee had begun its work, the first witness being Representative Brewster of Maine, who declared Thomas G. Corcoran, New Deal lawyer, had tried to force him to vote for the "death sentence" provision in the utilities bill by threats of stopping work on the Passamaquoddy project. Corcoran was then put on the stand and denied the main features of Brewster's story, whereupon the Maine congressman shouted, "You're a liar." Corcoran explained with facility his activities in behalf of the utilities measure. He said he was assigned to help with the original drafting of the bill "through a direct request from the President." Senators Wheeler and Rayburn, he said, asked him to help bring about passage of the bill.

The senate committee on audit and controls reported favorably on a resolution calling for a $50,000 appropriation to investigate lobbying in connection with all legislation at this session, and the resolution was adopted by the senate.

PERHAPS it was the summer heat in Washington; perhaps there was a lot of pressure from the direction of the White House. Anyhow, the backbones of the house Democrats, recently so stiff against "dictation" by the administration, weakened most noticeably when the house took up the re-drafting of the Tennessee Valley authority act. Nearly all the recent "rebels" among the Democrats fell into line and the bill was shorn of every major provision that was objectionable to the President. These amendments were approved:

To delete a clause saying the TVA must sell power or chemicals at not less than cost after July 1, 1937.

To let the TVA operate without absolute control by the comptroller general over its expenditures.

To delete a section preventing the agency from constructing power lines paralleling existing private ones.

To let the authority decide whether private interests may build dams or appurtenant works on the Tennessee river or tributaries.

This victory greatly heartened the administration forces, and they pressed forward to try for another in the conference on the utilities bill. Also in the senate they carried on a determined fight for the amendments broadening the powers of the AAA. Senators Borah and Byrd were the chief opponents of the New Dealers in this latter battle.

ONE of the hottest scraps of the year developed between Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Senator Tydings of Maryland over the inquiry into the administration of Gov. Paul M. Pearson in the Virgin Islands. The secretary accused the senator of "white-washing" a witness before the Tydings committee; and the senator retorted by advising the secretary to "confine yourself to the duties for which you have been appointed." Both of them were thoroughly angry and Tydings in a letter accused Ickes of seeking "cheap publicity."

Federal Judge T. Webber Wilson of the Virgin Islands had given testimony that exasperated Ickes and the secretary demanded that the judge be removed from office for "official misconduct." Then Ickes wrote to Tydings a letter carrying his charge of "white-washing" and saying of the judge's testimony: "There was no cross-examination to test his truthfulness, and if any statement ever needed such a test, it was his."

Judge Wilson had told the committee that there had been "administrative interference" with his court and that Morris Ernst, counsel for the Civil Liberties union, while a guest of Governor Pearson, had threatened to put him "on the spot" in the press unless he granted a rehearing to a government employee accused of theft. Tydings accused Secretary Ickes of "gross deceit upon the American people" by stating in an Interior department press release that Paul C. Yates, administrative assistant of Pearson, had been discharged, when "you know and I know that Mr. Yates had resigned five days before your press release was issued."

TO PROVIDE quick employment and end the dole, the entire four-billion-dollar works-relief fund must be expended within the next twelve months. Such was the flat statement of President Roosevelt to the state PWA directors, who were gathered in Washington for a two day conference. After discussing the old PWA program, the President said: "You are now an important part of an even greater effort—one to be made during the next year which will provide quick employment, so that we can attain, if possible, the goal we have set within this year 1935. Before the year is ended we will end the dole we have been paying to employable persons during the last two years. In other words, we must give useful work to three and one-half million people and I believe we are going to do it."

"In order to do it, of course, we are faced by a problem of arithmetic which is comparatively simple. We have four billion dollars and three and one-half million people to put to work with it. That means we have to average things up. It means that we have on the average about $1,140 per man year."

"That has to include the cost of the material, so that the four billion dollars includes not only the amount we pay the men but also the cost of the material. It is a perfectly simple arithmetical problem—we have to work out an average that will come within the sum of money divided by the number of people we have to put to work."

"You know, of course, that we have spent a great deal of money during the last two years, but we find now not only that there are additional funds at our disposal but also that the need of permanent work all over the United States is not yet ended. We find that the deeper we go into it the more opportunities we have to do constructive work in almost every community in the country."

STANDING atop a cannon, Benito Mussolini told 15,000 Black Shirt volunteers and the world as well that in the matter of Ethiopia "We have decided upon a struggle in which we as a government and a people will not turn back. The decision is irrevocable."

Unless Emperor Haile Selassie gets right down on his knees to Il Duce, the war in his dominion will begin in September when the rainy season ends. No one expects the "king of kings" to submit tamely, so other nations are advising their nationals in Ethiopia to get out of the country. William Perry George, the American charge d'affaires at Addis Ababa, was authorized by the State department to advise American citizens to leave, or take whatever other steps he deemed necessary to protect their safety.

Mr. George transmitted to the emperor the rather curt reply of the American government to his majesty's appeal for aid in stopping Italy. Secretary of State Hull, writing by authority of the President, told the emperor the United States was "loath to believe" the two countries actually will engage in warfare as they are both signatories of the Kellogg pact. The note also pointed out that the arbitration proceedings might arrive at a satisfactory decision.

The chances that war might be averted by the arbitrators seemed slight. Those gentlemen met again at Scheveningen and their session was disrupted by the Italian representatives when a spokesman for Ethiopia set forth the fact that Ualual, scene of the bloody clash last December, is well within the Ethiopian border.

Emperor Haile Selassie made another attempt to get international action by calling for a meeting of the League of Nations council to thresh out the dispute with Italy. At the same time the emperor appealed to the world for fair play and protested to five European powers against their refusal to permit the shipment of arms and munitions to Ethiopia. It was said in Geneva the league council probably would be called into session within a few weeks. The protest about arms shipments was not likely to do Ethiopia any good. Indeed, it was said Great Britain had provisionally joined the nations banning such transactions.

NIKOLA TESLA, famed scientist, celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday in New York city by giving out the news of three astonishing developments in the sciences. They are: A new method and apparatus for transmitting mechanical energy over any terrestrial distance. Passage of an induction current with a varying flux one way only through a circuit without use of a commutator. Proof, after observation of cosmic rays, that many of the propositions of relativity are false.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL MCARDL doesn't care where the chips fall when he starts hewing. He has just given an opinion that ruins the President's plan to require bidders on government contracts to bind themselves to abide by any future legislation providing for minimum wages and maximum hours of labor in employment on such contracts. A proviso to this effect was being exacted of bidders.

Mr. McCardl holds that the proviso may be viewed as a "request" only and a bid could not be rejected because the person making it refused to subscribe to this principle.

The plan was advanced from the procurement division of the treasury, which proposed that the government replace the requirement for code compliance on all government bidders, knocked out when the recovery act was voided by the Supreme court.

THOUGH the naval treaties of Washington and London have been abrogated by Japan, the American government still keeps its eye on the maximum permitted for our navy by 1942 and is making a determined effort to reach it, much to the delight of the "big navy" men and to citizens generally who believe in adequate preparedness.

Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson has announced that a ship construction program has been decided upon which calls for the construction of 12 destroyers and six submarines. These are in addition to the 15 destroyers and six submarines for which bids have been advertised and will be opened next month.

The airplane building program calls for 555 new planes during the current fiscal year. Of these, 282 will be replacement planes for those now in service and 273 will be new craft. Two airplane carriers and six cruisers now under construction and scheduled for completion in 1937 are to house some of the new planes.

FLOODS in several eastern states, following torrential rains, took about three score lives and did vast property damage. The Finger lakes and Catskill mountain regions in New York suffered most severely. The deaths there numbered forty, and thousands were rendered homeless. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman announced an immediate allocation of $300,000 for use in rehabilitation.

NOBODY who knew Ray Long well was surprised to hear that formerly famous magazine editor had committed suicide at his California home. In late years he had not been very successful in business, his most recent ventures being in the field of scenario writing. He was not one to put up with adversity very long, and it was characteristic of him to take the easy way out of suicide.

CRITICS of the President's program have made up their minds that he is deliberately building up a "crisis" which will provide excuse for a demand for constitutional amendments in the campaign of 1936. Their conviction was strengthened by Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Congressman Samuel B. Hill, chairman of the interstate commerce subcommittee, urging the passage of the Guffey coal bill regardless of doubts as to its constitutionality.

President Roosevelt followed the suggestion of Attorney General Cummings that the legislation should be put through congress because "the situation is so urgent," and that the question of constitutionality should be left up to the courts.

The President, admitting that coal mining is in itself an intrastate transaction, nevertheless wrote that the final test of the validity of the Guffey bill would depend upon whether production conditions directly affect, promote, or obstruct interstate commerce. The Supreme court, in the Schechter NRA case, quoted a previous opinion that mining, manufacturing, and other forms of production were as local in their character as the production of crops, and hence beyond the reach of congress.

THE secretary of the treasury appeared before the house ways and means committee which was trying to formulate the new tax bill wanted by the administration, and declared that, depending on the rates of taxation adopted, the measure might bring in as much as $1,000,000,000 a year or as little as $118,000,000 annually. As the representative of the administration, the young secretary declined to advise as to the rates, though the Republican members of the committee tried to pin him down to details. The legislation outlined by the President includes taxation of inheritances and gifts, higher surtaxes on million dollar incomes and graduated income taxes on corporations.

Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader, predicted that congress either would recess and reconvene in the fall or would put off enactment of the tax bill until the session beginning January 3 next.

OUR army lost an able and distinguished officer in the death of Maj. Gen. Stuart Heintzelman at the army and navy hospital in Hot Springs, Ark. The grandson and son of army officers, General Heintzelman was graduated from West Point in 1899. After service in the Philippines and China he was sent to France as an observer, and when America entered the war he held high staff assignments. He won the D. S. M. and was decorated by France and Italy. From the inception of the CCC General Heintzelman was in charge of federal reclamation projects in Missouri until last February, when he was given command of the Seventh corps area.

House That Breathes to Keep Itself Cool

THIS model of a house that breathes through its walls to keep cool won first prize in the better housing display at the San Diego exposition. With it is the inventor, R. J. Neutra, Los Angeles architect. The house is of steel with exposed portions coated with aluminum. Air channels run through the walls, and when the heat of the sun warms them it starts a cooling draft.

A QUEER GAME OF HIDE AND SEEK

OVER in the Green Forest where the moonlight sifted down through the tops of the silver beech trees, began a queer game of hide and seek. Buster Bear was "it." Danny Meadow Mouse was hiding. Buster Bear was "it" for his stomach's sake. Danny Meadow Mouse was hiding for his life. Buster Bear was rather enjoying that game of hide and seek. Danny wasn't enjoying it at all.

By the time Buster Bear had whirled around after Danny had surprised and startled him by running out from under his very paw as he started to rake over a little pile of leaves in search of beechnuts, Danny had, as you know, disappeared. He had darted behind the trunk of a big tree. For a couple of minutes Buster stood perfectly still. He was listening. He was listening for the rustle of a leaf to tell him in which direction Danny had gone. But not a leaf rustled. Buster couldn't hear the faintest sound to tell him that there was another living thing anywhere about.

"Now, where can that scamp have gone to?" muttered Buster. "He certainly hasn't gone far. He must be right around here somewhere. Probably he is hiding under some of these leaves. I'll pull over a few of them and find out."

So Buster began to rake over the leaves all about with his great claws just as he had been doing when Danny Meadow Mouse first saw him, only he did it in a much more hurried way. You see, he was looking for a fat Meadow Mouse now and not for sweet around a tree trunk as fast as a little Meadow Mouse can. He soon found that out. Danny always managed to keep the trunk of that tree between them. Finally Buster Bear gave up running around that tree and sat up to think. On the other side of that tree crouched the most frightened Meadow Mouse in all the Great World, wondering what would happen next, and trembling so that he shook all over. Danny had played many games of hide and seek in his life, but never one in which he had felt so wholly helpless as he did now.

QUESTION BOX by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: What is meant by the expression, "He came down with flying colors"? Truly yours, U. R. SOHSMART.

Answer: That expression is used when a painter falls off of a high building with a pot of paint in his hand.

Dear Mr. Wynn: You are so smart and claim you know so much. Here's one for you. Answer this: Did you ever see a dog without eyes, without ears, without hair, without a nose, without a mouth and without feet?

Yours truly, VETTER N. ARIAN.

Answer: Yes, I saw a dog like that—a "hot dog."

Dear Mr. Wynn: Last night I had an argument with my brother about different kinds of weather. My brother said that "cold" travels faster than "heat," while I insisted that "heat" travels the fastest. Who is right?

Truly yours, I. SICKLE.

Answer: You are right, "Heat" travels fastest because you can't catch it, while it is very easy to catch "cold."

Dear Mr. Wynn: In this morning's mail I received a circular from a plumber who claims he is selling a new kind of stove which will save half the coal I use in the stove I have now. Do you advise me to buy one of his new stoves?

Truly yours, I. M. KURIOUS.

Answer: If your plumber is telling the truth when he says his new stove saves one-half of your coal, why don't you buy two of his stoves and save all your coal?

Dear Mr. Wynn: I have just bought a little house in the country. It is a new house, but it is terribly damp, due, I guess, to poor construction. What I want to know is,

PICNIC GOOD THINGS

THE following are a few suggestions which may be helpful in packing the picnic hamper, or, if served in the garden or on the porch, one may elaborate on the menu:

Chicken Rouleaus.

These are a most tasty substitute for the ordinary sandwich. Prepare a light biscuit dough such as would be used for hot biscuit or shortcake. Roll out the dough one-quarter-inch thick in a sheet four inches wide and as long as convenient. Brush over with melted butter and spread with minced chicken which has been well seasoned and lightly moistened with cream. Roll up and cut into finger lengths and pinch the ends together. Place on a greased baking sheet with the flap down and bake ten to fifteen minutes in a hot oven. Minced ham may be used if preferred.

Cheese Sandwich.

A good cheese sandwich is made by using whole wheat bread well buttered and a slice of good rich cheese placed between two slices. Spread a little mustard over the cheese, if liked.

Pepper Salad.

Remove the seeds and membrane from two sweet red peppers and three green peppers; chop all fine and mix with one cupful of celery, also chopped fine. Moisten with good salad dressing. Pack the salad into glass jars or paraffined paper cups with covers.

Raisin Drop Cakes.

Cream together one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of brown sugar, add one cupful of molasses, one-half cupful

Because You Came to Our Street

BECAUSE you came to our street, The trees wore greener dress, And every yard in our street Was drenched with loveliness. The birds sang sweeter songs this year, And every child was gay. There was a joyous atmosphere Because you blessed our day.

But when you go from our street, The leaves will flutter down, The sun will set on our street; The blossoms all turn brown. The autumn rains will fall . . . The storm Will tear the nests apart, And only memory will warm Your seal upon each heart.

Gold Hunters Work to Map Mineral Deposits

Canada Sends Out Surveying Parties Into Virgin Areas.

Ottawa, Ont.—Canada's newest and probably the strangest "gold rush" in its history is on.

The vanguard of an army of nearly 1,500 professional and amateur prospectors, who will search the whole of Canada and its possessions in the far north to find where the dominion's vast untouched mineral riches lie, has left for the Yukon, scene of many famous gold strikes.

One hundred and eighty to 200 other parties of gold seekers, made up of geological students and laborers, and supervised by experienced geologists, will start out for the far corners of the country, often through virgin territory, seldom before trod by white men, to find and map mineral deposits at the expense of the federal government.

The hunt will last a year and will cost $1,000,000. It is unique in that the prospectors will do very little actual prospecting and will be unable to stake claims. It will be more of a geological survey.

No Claims to Be Staked.

The men will work directly for the Canadian department of mines, and since the department is not allowed to stake claims, the gold hunters merely will note the location of their discoveries and move on to other fields. Ultimately the deposits will be "rediscovered" by independent prospectors, or developed by mining companies.

The party just sent to the Yukon comprised eight members. Later, when all the parties begin their work, about 50 fields scattered between Nova Scotia on the east coast and the Yukon on the west will be under survey.

Particular care is being taken in the selection of the surveying personnel. Young men imbued with the pioneering instinct will be favored and the survey will be considered as a challenge to their courage and enthusiasm.

While the work will take in the whole range of economically valuable minerals, their activities will be concentrated particularly in areas favorable to gold deposits.

Government officials look at the scheme as an excellent means of speeding development of Canada's gold fields. Canada is the world's second largest gold producer and it is the opinion of geologists that its production of more than $100,000,000 annually could be greatly expanded.

Geological Mapping.

"It is not so much a gold hunt as geological mapping," Dr. Charles Cammell, deputy minister of mines, said in discussing the scheme. "For example, the largest number of parties will go to southern Saskatchewan to bore for underground water in the dried-out areas. The occurrence of minerals will be a secondary search.

"There will be no prospecting. What will be sought are the indications of gold or other deposits. When these are found and mapped, private industry will carry on the prospecting and development.

"The personnel of the parties will vary from two to seven or eight members. With each will be a scientific man.

"While called a 'gold hunt' and, in a way, partaking of that nature, the plan really is a return on broad lines to our gold geological mapping expeditions, modified, for economic reasons, in recent years. We expect, however, that it will be the basis of a great stimulus to Canadian mining industry."

Has Wild Car Ride

Down Mountainside

Missoula, Mont. — Bruised and dazed by his experience, G. F. Wilkinson, a railroad conductor, returned to his home here to tell of a wild ride for 29 miles down a mountainside on a runaway flat car loaded with steel rails with a dead man for his only companion.

Wilkinson was on the car when it got out of control on Evaro hill, near Arlee, Mont., and hurtled downhill at 90 miles an hour. Careening around curves through cuts and over bridges, it struck two motorcar speeders, killing F. A. Lombardi and Alfred Morkert.

Morkert's body was hurled aboard the flat car. Wilkinson finally got it under control in a sag in the grade near McDonald, Mont.

out contamination by germ life of any kind.

The importance of this work lies in the fact that it permits a study of any single germ on a living organism, until now considered impossible. For more than 60 years this problem has puzzled scientists who hitherto have contended that life in an animal body was impossible without bacteria.

The presence of many forms of germ life has interfered seriously with the isolation in the past of germs that cause many of the most current human ailments. Consequently no serums or other effective preventatives for some of the ailments have yet been developed.

Science Works at Agricultural Problems

More Things Done for Farmer Than Ever Before.

Wilmington, Del.—Contributions science is making to agriculture are reviewed in a statement issued here from the office of the Du Pont Agricultural News Letter.

"A survey of the efforts of scientists shows that more things are now being done by science for the farmer than ever before," it is stated. "Better and more economical fertilizers have become available by the development of synthetic processes for producing urea in adequate quantities. Chemicals never before used in fertilizers are being added to meet deficiencies of plant foods in soils of various types.

"Entirely new and different insecticides are being produced from fatty alcohols, and research in the field of organic chemicals is expected to provide insecticides which, although deadly to insects, will be safe in all respects to man. Improvements in the application of sprays and extension of the time limit of effectiveness of insecticides have been achieved through the development of new sticking, spreading and wetting agents.

a booming mining camp. The depression of 1892 and the demonization of silver started a decline.

But higher silver prices are expected to cause a revival of mining operations and the town may resume some of its former activity.

And, as has been said, that would disrupt the political situation.

You see, under the peculiar political situation Mayor Joe Martino and ex-Mayor Joe Kipp each control the same number of votes. So they've reached an agreement. Last year Kipp held the office as mayor, this year it was Martino's turn, and the next year Kipp is supposed to take over again, etc.

New voters would upset this balance of power. Mayor Martino and ex-Mayor Kipp are the only residents.

Bees Win Court Case Over Their Neighbors

Marion, Ohio.—"Is the bee to be or not to be?" That is the question. It baffles city fathers here.

Several Marion residents have bee hives in their backyards. Neighbors complain that the honey bees carry pollen on their feet and dust it over their freshly laundered clothes hanging on washlines.

Mayor Clarence A. Bolin thinks little can be done about it. "You might as well try to keep the birds from flying over the city," he said. "You can hardly legislate against bees."

Indians of New Mexico Select Own Officials

Washington.—Tribal customs of centuries of the Zuni Indians of New Mexico have been overthrown in favor of the American form of government, the Indian bureau revealed.

The Zunis have held their first popular election, naming a governor and village officers. As a token of office the new governor will carry a cane presented to the then governor of the tribe by President Lincoln soon after his election to office.

For centuries the Zuni governor has been chosen by the board of priests, composed of five of the oldest men of the village. The election was held after a campaign of a year by younger members of the tribe for the popular vote.

Town's Political Balance Hinges on Silver Price

Castle, Mont.—Residents of this once populous mining town are watching current maneuvers in world silver markets with keen interest.

Rising prices are likely to bring the city to life again, and that would totally disrupt the present political setup.

SUCH IS LIFE—Curious

Sweden's Riksdag Is 500 Years Old

Fetes, Ceremonies and Pageants Mark Birthday.

Washington.—Sweden's parliament has just celebrated its five hundredth birthday. Pageants, fetes, and ceremonies were held throughout the nation, especially in Stockholm, and in the little village of Arboga, a few hours distant, at the western end of Lake Malaren.

"The first riksdag (parliament) was convened in 1435 by Engelbrekt Engelbrektsson, leader of the national movement against union with Denmark and Norway," says the National Geographic society. "A new monument to this great Swedish patriot was unveiled at Arboga on the first day of the celebrations."

Greater Than King.

"The modern riksdag, whose power is greater than that of the king, now meets in the low, square house of parliament, set on one of the many islands that make up Stockholm, a city that offers a beautiful background for pageantry, and where the greatest celebration took place."

"The oldest part of Stockholm is on the island of Staden, where Birger Jarl, traditional founder of Stockholm, built his fortress in 1255. Here are narrow, winding streets, high gabled houses, an ancient church, and the great square block of the royal palace. Nearby rises the slender spire of Riddarholm church, burial place of Sweden's kings and heroes."

"Every citizen in Stockholm points with pride to the new town hall, completed only 12 years ago. The copper roof was financed by popular subscription, and on each six dollar plate is engraved the name of a separate donor. Built of red brick, in a style at once medieval and modern, the straight, severe walls and tall, square tower are mirrored in the waters of Lake Malaren.

"All Stockholm is waterfront. Not dingy, crowded wharfs, but endless miles of clean, granite quays, where hundreds of boats dock daily—great ocean liners, fleets of little steamers and ferries bringing commuters from green, island suburbs; trim private yachts and motor boats, and little white sailboats loaded with cargoes of birch logs for city fireplaces."

Harbor Always Open.

"In summer, when the long northern twilight has faded, myriad lights are reflected in the dark waters of the lake. Even in winter the harbor is kept open by icebreakers, though it is in the same latitude as southern Greenland."

"Swedish food is world famous, and Stockholm cooks live up to their reputation. The city is rich in restaurants—gay sidewalk cafes; smart, scintillating establishments, and queer, Bohemian cellars. The most distinctive feature of a Swedish repast is the smorgas-bord, or table of hors d'oeuvres. There are salads, cold meats, cheeses, pickled herrings, caviar, anchovies, sausages, baked mushrooms, dark breads, and the grayish-brown, unleavened cracker called knackbröd. Heap your plate high with these, drink generously of good Danish beer, and forget that a full course dinner is yet to follow."

Lindbergh Watchdog Balks His Landing

North Haven, Maine.—The German shepherd dog that watches over two-year-old Jon Lindbergh wouldn't let Col. Charles A. Lindbergh land his airplane here recently. Colonel Lindbergh, flying here to be with his son and members of the Morrow family, circled the island several times and then dropped toward the private landing field near the Morrow residence. Little Jon's pet and constant companion was loose and didn't like the aerial intrusion. He raced onto the field, yelping, and the flyer had to zoom upward again to avoid killing the dog. A caretaker had to lure the dog away and tie him before Colonel Lindbergh could glide to a landing.

THE ABUSE OF TRUST

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

It is an exceptional morning newspaper which does not record one or more violations of trust. An official of a bank has been found guilty of misappropriating funds, a city official is found short in his accounts, an auditing committee discovers discrepancies in ledger entries of trust companies. This abuse of trust may assume another form, not in misuse of funds but in misuse of power or betrayal of confidence. The manager of a concern proves unfaithful to his board of directors, an executive in a high place of responsibility double crosses his friends, an employee violates the trust his employer places in him. Most of the wrong doing in the world is attributable to the abuse of trust.

Undoubtedly there are circumstances which present grave temptations to prostitute one's power to a dishonest end, but in the long run it never pays. Many times the exercise of this imposed trust conflicts sharply with one's personal desires and responsibilities, but he who refuses to sacrifice honor for what appears to be a shining prize is bound to win out. This idea is splendidly illustrated in the book, "Oil for the Lamps of China." Success came at last to the hero of the story who steadfastly refused to abuse the trust placed in him.

Perhaps the struggle through which many persons are passing these days is a call back to the integrity and simplicity of life of our forefathers, who considered the honor of one's name greater possession than mere material wealth. It would be very interesting to call the roll of the men and women of the past who refused to sell their honor for a mess of pottage.

In the career of the late Jane Addams we have the finest possible illustration of fidelity to trust. J. G. Holland in his little book, "Katherine," writes, "Highest art is highest ministry to human need and no man has the right to prostitute his art to a selfish end." That was the spirit of Jane Addams. Daughter of a wealthy family, possessing the culture of both university training and extensive travel, she shared these privileges with the exploited classes. The institution known as Hull House in Chicago will remain a perpetual memorial to the ideal that no one has the right to misappropriate power, be that power control of money, the possession of talent, influence or opportunity. "Trust" in the final analysis demands fidelity to duty in scorn of consequences.

Book Covers Like New

Taking a cue from the public library's practice of varnishing the backs of new books, some booklovers are doing the same thing with their own volumes. A light, clear varnish, applied in a thin coat with a good varnish brush, will preserve the original freshness of cloth covers.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

BLANKETS for summertime should be light in weight. Heavy blankets are for wintry nights. Whether for summer or winter use, wool is the finest material for blanket weaving. A mixture of cotton and wool is next in the scale of excellence. Silk and wool, and rayon and wool are sometimes combined, especially in fancy blankets. All-cotton blankets which are less expensive than wool ones, or cotton and wool, are often chosen for summer use. They can now be made in the soft and fluffy weave similar to all-wool, but they have to be heavier in weight for equal warmth. Wool is somewhat akin to down in that it provides a maximum of warmth for a minimum of weight. Cotton blankets have gained in popularity with the improvements in their texture.

Because light-weight blankets are preferable to heavy ones for summer bedding, old blankets are favorites. These may be quite thin and prove just the things for nights when a sheet alone is scarcely sufficient covering. A pair of these comparatively thin blankets outfits a bed with warm coverings. One extra coverlet, either a blanket, quilt, or afghan in pastel tones, laid across the foot of the bed is advisable. It can be used in the daytime as a cover during a siesta.

Seasonal Blankets.

The competent homemaker has her two sets of blankets, the heavy ones mentioned, and the lighter ones described, each set for its special weather. It is a seasonable time now to make such divisions, which will prove a saving if planned rightly. The heavy blankets will be moth-proof if they are laundered either at home in lukewarm soapy water and rinsed in water of the same temperature, still having a little soap in it if blankets are pure wool. As soon as thoroughly dry, bone dry as is sometimes said, wrap in newspaper and put well-marked bundles in a summer storage closet. Or they are more easily put away if the homemaker has a cedar chest.

Mend the old lightweight blankets, if they need it. Patch them with the good parts of old blankets too worn for other use. Darn with woolen yarn, fine, and matching in color, when darning will suffice. Cut down the blankets when side edges are torn or worn through and make them to fit single beds or cots. Bind all edges for uniformity. Or, if the ends are not worn and can be left as is, hem or bind side edges. These reconstructed blankets will wear several years during their special season. They are recommended for summer camp and cottage use.

A new type of summer blanket is made of homespun textile. It may be machine or hand woven. Some of the colors are as beautiful in tints as the flowers in the garden, or the blue of the sky through a mist, or the first delicate shoots of trees in the spring.

These blankets are light weight and warm as benefits summer nights.

Slip Cover Styles.

The vogue for slip covers has reached a high water mark. It has been a score of years or more since they held the attention of decorators as they do today. The old idea was to protect the furniture upholstery from summer wear and tear and to introduce a cool element into the furnishings. Today the former remains one of the features and the latter should also, but decoration pushes this somewhat into the background. The slip covers of today stress decoration above all else. Perhaps we should call them ornaments plus, and let the last word stand for protection and coolness.

The material for slip covers us to be linen, chiefly because linen is the coolest of textiles that are durable. They were frequently white since this is the coolest tone to the eye. Couple this with the coolness to the touch and it is an ideal combination in a hot weather textile.

Today the textiles may be linen, cotton, silk, rayon, etc., and the color is seldom plain white. As a matter of fact colors are apt to be gay and consequently warm in tone. When solid tones are chosen, they retain color as a pronounced feature, the hue being black, seal brown, rich yellow, Chinese red, etc., more often than light tints. If the color is subdued vivid bindings are used for seams and edges, thus promoting color schemes and retaining notes of brilliance.

Little Lights on LIVING

WITHOUT WAX

WE WERE talking of antiques, when the Florentine gentleman of high birth said: "Come, let me show you my marble table in the garden." I followed him through the dark hall, stone paved, out into a beautiful sunlit Florentine inner court garden with great dark cypresses waving their tips in the breeze. Around the roots of these dignified old trees, centuries old, were little flower beds of bright posies confined by stone edges between which, in formal fashion, were inviting little paths.

It was a surprise garden in the rear of an uninviting looking stone residence set uncomplainingly on a none too wide side street in the city of Florence. Florence, Italy, is a surprise city anyhow, with its wealth of history, its tragedies, its bloody climb to light, its sacrifices in the name of power and religion, its wealth, its art and literature. What a panorama of human achievements and failures, Florence presents to a sympathetic heart, as one recalls the de Medicis, Savonarola, Fra Angelico, the Brownings and the host of others too numerous to name. When I am in Florence I never really know in what century I am living, for these old memories press persistently into my heart.

We have wandered far from our sunlit garden into which I had followed my host to see his marble table. "Is it an antique?" I inquired as I noticed great cracks across the beautiful marble slab. "No, it is not," my friend responded. "Listen to this story!"

"The marble cutters of Florence are wily old fellows," he continued, "often when their chisels slipped too far they cracked the marble slabs. Into these cracks they poured soft wax. After the wax had hardened the slabs were polished and the tables sold for solid marble." The Florentines soon realized the deception and began asking when buying tables for those "sine cera?"—(without wax).

Interesting it is to note that our word sincerity comes from the little phrase "sine cera," without wax, which is precisely what it means—for to be sincere is to be genuine, whether it be a table or an individual.

"To be without pretext or show. Exactly what men think I am."

If this be a good-working rule for Florentine tables, to be genuinely sincere tables of solid marble, isn't it also a silver rule for you and me to follow in daily life, to be found always "sine cera"?

THE ABILITY FAMILY

THE best neighbors I ever had were the Ability family. There were eight in the present family, one child died young. The father's name was Reliability, the mother's Responsibility. They were each well named. The father had the respect and confidence of all he met in business—people, even strangers, felt him to be trustworthy. The mother played her part, too; after visiting her household, one could be assured that she carried her part of the home making for her husband and their six children, adding more duties each day to her already full program. Her name was Responsibility and she lived up to it. One would naturally expect a strong family of children from such parents, and such was the case.

Their first child, who grew to be strong and stalwart, they named Respectability. He was an upright chap. He thought well of himself and justly so, for he lived persistently at his best.

The second child was named Stability, for at an early age he evidenced decided firmness of character. He was sure footed and steady as a rock. His opinions were always real convictions to him.

After a few years passed another child was born to this interesting family, not as strong in health as the first two children, but patient unto long endurance, with never a word of complaint. This child was calm and often silent with an inner reserve and strength that won from his friends great admiration and love. His parents called him Durability.

The fourth child was a joy to its mother. Nothing ever seemed to go wrong when this little fellow was about. Everyone loved him as he grew up, because he was thinking constantly of others. He would change his plans to accommodate others if need be. Unselfishness was his watchword. His name was Adaptability.

One child died young. Peevish and ill-tempered, he grew quite apart from the family traits. His name was Irritability. He was too unhappy to live long.

After the death of Irritability the Ability family was again augmented by two, when the twins came. Happy, good natured, lovable pair of youngsters they were. They brought sunshine and joy wherever they went. Everybody agreed that they should be called Affability and Compatibility!

So this is the Ability family. How many of them have you met in your circle of friends? Do you wonder the name of this family was ABILITY?

RELIGIOUS RATIOS

If the population of the world, approximately 2,000,000,000 people, were reduced proportionately, according to religious faith, to 100 persons, the Columbus University Press has estimated, there would be 38 Christians, 19 Confucianists and Taoists, 12 Hindus, 11 Mohammedans, 10 Animists, 8 Buddhists, 1 Shintoist, and 1 Jew.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's bitter criticism of his idle life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Treland, only son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which city he must reach, from New York, within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. With five other members of the party, an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack, he starts his journey. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he is unable to shake off a feeling of uneasiness. He distrusts Crack, although finding his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and he makes a little progress with Barry. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal is directed to Barry's room, instead of his own.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

Alarm—of a curiously profound and quiet kind—deepened the clarity of her look as she got up, turning one hand against her breast to hide her crumpled handkerchief. Her golden hair was as Hal had hoped: the burnished vigor of it flowed through full, deliberate waves to end in a rich thicket of half-curled, their rioting simply disciplined at the edges of her smoothly modeled cheeks. There was new, mature loveliness in her straight young body—under deep-green satin, fitted to her firm waist, spreading to a full skirt, and tapered above to her straight shoulders.

The splendor of what he saw, without moving his look from the deep alarm of her eyes, seemed to check the running of his blood in that silent moment—like the shadow of shock. And he heard himself say, very gravely: "I—I'm sorry. She told me this was your room. She must have thought . . ." It wasn't important enough to finish in the expectant silence between them, round them, full in the room.

"It's all right," said Barry, her low voice coming with reluctance. "Something made him say, quietly, respectfully, 'I'm sorry you've been crying.'"

The alarm stayed in her eyes—not a replenished thing, more like a solemn moment of it fixed there over the later business of her erect head. She might not have heard him, except that her voice said hurriedly, "That's all right, too."

They stood looking at each other, and new rounds of silence crept close into the room. She was waiting for him to go. Hal knew he must turn and walk out at the door; and he must do this before the slow, strong force gathering somewhere deep in him showed itself in his enchanted eyes, before it unlocked his resolution, loosed the warm words that already stirred at his tongue. It was a race between his lagging command to still limbs, that they move, and a hot, headless authority careering forward to take charge of blood and flesh and hurl mind away, like a dried rag, toward the morning.

He made his legs move him. And, slowly, they moved him to her, her awed watching of his eyes unchanged, the carriage of her glistening head fearless. His arms slipped round her, under her own, and as he drew her firm, satin warmth toward him, her hands went up to his shoulders and over them. She made a small sound of weariness; her eyes closed; her lovely head turned so that her lips—warm and soft and sure of grandeur—came under his.

It was probably a long time they stood there close together, without speaking, resting almost as part of each other in the silence that had grown enormous around them in the room. Once Barry took her generous lips slowly away and pressed her golden head to his shoulder; but when he moved his mouth along the faintly fragrant smoothness of her hair, she turned her lips up again—confident, grateful, credulous. Only her eyes, before they closed, were neither confident nor credulous—still held in awe, they were, still near in the fringes of alarm.

In the pregnant hugeness that blotted away the four walls, Hal felt an excitement of silent rushing—not so much that they were being flung upward alone, as that the whole silence that marooned them there was being rushed on through surely gathered speeds toward some explosive, brilliant revelation. And as his will to lose himself in this enormous and imminent beauty flooded toward whole possession of his senses, one stubborn, small agent of reason tried more frantically to make him do what he had to do. Get out, get out, get out: it came around across his attention again and again, fainter and fainter, until suddenly it took ridiculous command and his hands went to Barry's straight, firm shoulders.

She looked up at once, and the alarm was conquered in her courageous eyes. Quietly and as if to herself, she said, "You're pretending. And I am. I'm not in love with you. I'm not falling in love with you."

She took a step backward, and his hands dropped down to hold hers. He knew that command of his reason was for a moment only; the sudden calm on him now was not to be trusted, not to be found again if he let his tongue, his blood, his whole spirit run out in their hot impertinities.

Their hands slipped apart. He saw the reluctance of that in her solemn eyes, and saw that she watched it in his, too. The sound of his voice was as if he hadn't used it for a long while when, with a short, hampered turning of his head, he said, "Good G—d, this is no place to talk about anything." He moved to the door, as if he must leave the best part of himself behind, with her. He was leaving something, surely; something sank down out of him with a slow, mocking glitter, like a silver plate dropped in a pool. If this was a decent thing he did, there was no bravery in it, since he did it like a fool. The only conscious bravery he could effect now, with the bolt shot back and his hand on the doorknob, was to look at her again. Doctor Calligari jumped his forepaws up on Hal's leg; Hal put his hand on the terrier's woolly head and turned.

She stood there with her chin raised a little, as if she had just shaken back the full, glistening richness of her hair—her hands behind her back, one knee bent so that there was a suggestion of her straight leg in the sheen of the satin. The courage of her eyes, watching him, was solemn, deep, and darkly clear; but that very courage added to her air of loneliness. The unshielded light was merciless upon the ill-chosen, worn furnishings around her in the room. And she stood there—straight, beyond common loveliness—and watched him leaving her as if she were sending him away.

"Good night," he said, and it sounded utterly casual. Her frank lips, which already he couldn't believe had been under his, moved over a "Good night" which he didn't hear. He swung the door open and went out, down into the dark house, past hope of sleep for the confusion into which his thoughts and feelings and desires had been so abruptly tumbled.

CHAPTER V

Friday

Sleep trapped him as that confusion had—without warning. And he woke with a start that nearly slid him off the horsehair sofa. Fresh sunlight blazed into his face through the fern-hung bow-window, and he wasn't sure where he was at all, only that he was wide awake and filled with a fine, sourceless joy for the day and for something that had happened. He lay happily for a moment while the circumstances of his being here found themselves in his head.

First remembering the transport of Barry's sheer loveliness in his arms, he stretched himself luxuriously, a bath of rich content tingling through his body. He snapped off his stretching suddenly to look at his watch, but his wide smile remained. Think of feeling so well at quarter past five.

But what the dickens had been all the trouble last night? All that momentous entanglement with chivalry and speechlessness, just because the break had come before he had expected it? He had done a very sound thing; he had saved himself from a premature enthusiasm that would have mixed up the rest of the trip a good deal; but there was nothing so very momentous about it. It was enough for one evening to see her defenses go down; her trust of him, taken slowly, would be more certain. Five more days coming, at least: it would have been very disappointing to forget the job of chastisement he had to do—go off the deep end at the first drop of the hat that way. Yet there he'd been so off his guard as to make emotional difficulties about leaving her room, as barely to hold himself from charging in against that remark of hers about not loving him. And outside her room, even, the sudden, restive creaking of an old house in the dark had . . .

He got to his feet and breathed deeply, as if the contained, dusty air of the room were that of a mountain pasture in spring. Somewhere in the upper regions an alarm clock went off into its persistent rattle, and there was distant, occasional bumping to stir the slumber of the house. When he came back to the hall he found Kerrigan fumbling at the chains and bolts of the great front door.

"Well, sir—of all people," said Kerrigan, his ruddy, well-scrubbed face held by quiet concern. "A good morning to you. Thought you were lost—probably been locked out."

"I got in late," said Hal, feeling his blandness penetrated by that brown, scholarly look. "She showed me the wrong room; so I slept in there."

"You slept in there?" Kerrigan said curiously.

"Yes," said Hal quickly. "Why?"

"Then that can't be the room the trains run through," said Kerrigan, gratified. "Must be the kitchen. Didn't you hear 'em?"

"No," said Hal, laughing.

"Let me tell you if every train charged through here was hauling pay load, stocks are a buy at any price. Gad, sir, they were on five-minute headway all night and on their way somewhere. Only trouble, they wasted a lot of steam whistling for the pantry door. If I slept here once more, I could get a dispatcher's job on the division. I only missed the number on one train: that was because I was scared his backwash was going to suck the bedclothes off me. And you slept." A twinkle grew behind the false moroseness of the brown eyes. "Whose room did she try to stick you in?"

"I don't know," said Hal. "Didn't wait to find out."

Kerrigan watched him an extra instant, then dismissed the last of his concern. "How's your body?" he said.

"Fine," said Hal. "Gosh—well, fine, as I said, how's yours?"

Kerrigan's look was amused and curious. "Like the bottom of a stove."

"And that's how?"

"Grate," said Kerrigan. "Come on, let's go out and have a snort of the ay am."

Hal was up on the widow's walk stowing luggage when Barry came out the door—refreshed, immaculate, fully awake. He watched her look into the new morning, draw a breath of it, then turn and say something smiling and quiet to Sister Anastasia, the rich slick of gold under her hat-brim gleaming. She didn't look for him nor show any trace of consciousness that he might be there, and Hal smiled to himself as he drew an end of the lashing round the rail.

He stayed on the roof purposely until she should get in. She came toward the car without looking up; and when she was close under him at the door, he said, "Hello there," in low pleasure. She glanced at him then, as if she had to see him before she knew who had spoken. "Hello," she said pleasantly, echoed nothing but the same pleasant hello. Then she got in.

Even as his smile widened, Hal's memory hurried back to last night to make certain there was nothing he'd overlooked. It was she who'd made it so serious, her eyes held in alarm, her head carried as if there were something to be brave about. Well, said Hal to himself, ignoring a certain inconclusion about it: I can pretend nothing's happened, too; but you can't make it a fact by pretending, my beauty.

He was about to vault down from the roof when something drew his eyes to the high stoop. Crack stood there, drowsing in his amiable half-dream of something satisfactory and private as he hoped for Hal's look. The golf ball gave a short leap from his idle hand and fell back into it.

"Morning," said Hal, and swung himself to the ground.

"Mornin'," said Crack quietly. "Sleep good?"

"Fine, thanks," said Hal. "You?"

"Fine, thanks," said Crack.

Listen, d—n it, Hal charged himself; there's no special meaning in that tone of his; it's just his way of saying things. "Good," he said aloud, without looking at Crack. If the man did know already by his own devices that Hal hadn't slept in a bed, what was there in it to amuse him so shyly?

The river beside the road was flat and leisurely; leisure in the slow little veins and eddies that slid under the overhanging weeds of the bank and leisure in the tall trees that stood still above their own unfocused reflections. They had run along some twenty smooth miles when Barry's voice came low, slow, sure, and Hal listened to the measures of it without especially heeding the words. She said, "That sign said ten miles to Logansport; that might be the very place for breakfast."

Hal thought of her as he had left her last night, head up, hands behind her back, one satin leg a little bent; and he remembered suddenly that she had been crying when he came in. The memory pricked him—like the quick recollection of a promised kindness which it is too late to perform. He pressed the accelerator nearer the floor—possessed by a tentative hurry to see if her expression was clear of the remembered loneliness, to make sure she had nothing to do with the uncertainly hushed sense of something ill that had seemed to travel with them.

They drew up before the shingling white-tile luncheon room toward which Mrs. Pulsipher had thrown a yelp of hungry approval, and Hal slid out to stand by the door. Barry leaned forward to get up, and Doctor Calligari, held in the crook of her arm, was brought closer to Crack for a moment than he seemed to like; he bared his teeth over an ugly, rising growl. "Doc!" she said in quick censure. Hal took the dog from her. And when he met her eyes, they had in them the hurried end of last night's solemn alarm.

D—n it, I don't want her to take back what she said, Hal told himself inside his closed mouth: I don't want her to be in love with me. All I want is . . .

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES
By Edith L. Watson

HIDDEN "STONES OF THE SKY"

THE late Charles F. Lummis, famous roamer and chronicler of the Southwest, relates in one of his articles that the Indians knew how to hide springs of water so well that they were found only by accident. He bolstered this statement with an account of the experience of the Hon. Amado Chavez of San Mateo, New Mexico, who found that a small space of ground near some ancient ruins seemed springing under his horse's tread. He had this strange spot dug into, and excavations revealed a layer of cedar bark at some distance beneath the surface. Below this were pine logs laid close together, then more bark, and these layers were repeated for a depth of several feet. When the last of this material had been removed, a little spring was found which bubbled with clear water, as fresh and limpid as it had flowed centuries ago.

With such success in concealing a spring, it is only natural that a mine shaft could be hidden equally as well by the wily natives of the country. So, somewhere in New Mexico, there is said to be a turquoise mine which was hidden by its primitive workers, and would never have been found in the ordinary run of matters. The "Stones of the Sky" were precious to the aborigines—so precious that they tried to conceal their source.

However, fate decreed that a cave which was conveniently located should be enlarged as a storage place for ranch supplies. The cave was not deep enough in its natural state, but a charge of dynamite would attend to that without much trouble. So it was planned, and so it was accomplished, but when the rancher looked in to see the results of the shot, he was surprised to find that a tunnel extended back into the darkness. Nothing of the sort had been suspected before, but evidently the mouth of the tunnel had been filled up to form the back of the cave, and afterward all traces of human work had been neatly obliterated.

The tunnel led into the ancient turquoise working. There were smoky marks on the walls where torches had leaned. Stone tools had been left lying about, and a shaft led up to the top of the hill, although no trace of it could be found from the outside. It proved to have been covered in much the same way as Amado Chavez' spring—with fallen trees and earth, and the growth of centuries had covered the spot equally with the rest of the hill-top.

One of the most famous turquoise mines in the United States is the Mount Chalchihuitl (Aztec for turquoise), which also is located in New Mexico. It was worked by the Indians for themselves long ages ago, and later under the harsh Spanish rule after the Conquest. At one time twenty of the tribesmen were killed in a cave-in, and this is said to be one of the many events which led up to the rebellion of 1680, in which all the Spaniards were driven back to Mexico.

After the reconquest by de Vargas in 1692, an effort was made to reopen this mine, but the Indians refused to enter the old workings. It was not until 1855, when other such mines had been found and the hostile Indians who kept white men from their locations driven away, that Mount Chalchihuitl was again allowed to produce its stones of the sky.

In Arizona, George Simmons, riding through the Crescent mountains in the Mohave desert, saw a small artificial mound. It was too large for a grave, and its peculiar location made it seem like something worth examining. So Simmons got off his horse, went over to the strange mound, and began to dig in its center.

He dug into what proved to be a fortune for himself. The mound marked the hidden shaft of a turquoise mine, worked long ago by the Indians and then concealed from the encroaching white men.

Since Simmons could not afford to patent the ground at the time, he kept his find a secret for years. He built a stockade around the place, and kept an armed guard on duty day and night. Many persons attempted to follow him to the source of the gems, but they soon found that this was dangerous business. Simmons went on the old principle of "finders keepers."

It is said that he used to come to Denver with a traveling bag full of fine turquoise. That they were valuable is shown by the fact that he sold one 32-carat stone in New York for $1,000.

It seemed impossible for Simmons to get money enough in the United States to patent and develop his mine, so at last he went to London. He put a value of $700,000 on the property, although it was easily worth three times as much, and floated it with English funds.

Without doubt, the mine that Simmons found was one of those which were worked by the Indians in pre-discovery days, and often later were taken over by the Spaniards. Some of these mines were worked up to the end of Mexican independence, but all of them had been abandoned before the American occupation.

OLD DAYS COME BACK TO RIVER

What long-silent echoes the Franklin D. Roosevelt must have stirred to life among the blue hills crowding the Missouri river as its deep-throated blasts heralded its arrival at Kansas City recently.

Gone are the scores of vessels that contributed to the making of this city on the Missouri's elbow. Their wooden carcasses slowly are petrifying below the turbid tide of the stream or they slowly are rotting at wharfs far from the scenes of their original activity. They served their day. They made possible the opening of a great and fertile area to the later railroads, then bowed to that new form of transportation.

They left only memories tinged with romance. Still living in the hills along the Missouri are persons who, in the prosperous river days, could identify by the tone of its whistle, long before it could be seen, any of the regular steamboats plying past Kansas City.

There must have been something missing for them as they listened to the Roosevelt. The sound of its whistle does not duplicate that of the old steamboat. It is not a steamboat and no effort has been made to play to the traditions of the steamboat. It represents a new era in river transportation from its whistle to its propellers.

It has no bulging and picturesque sidewheels. It is not a stern-wheeler. It does not have steam boilers nor sweating stokers. Its twin screws, propellers in miniature of those which drive ocean liners, are driven by powerful Diesel motors. They are supplied from oil tanks, not coal bunkers. Yet the Roosevelt develops many times the power of the primitive river boats, is more tractable and requires even less channel depth than most of them did. Yet it is a river boat, inaugurating a new river transportation, and its voice, recalling the more romantic voices of the past, must find a response in the hills themselves as well as among those whose lives have spanned the gap in river navigation.—Kansas City Times.

AVOID THE DANGER OF BLOWOUTS

Firestone removes the danger of blowouts by preventing their main cause—internal friction and heat. This is accomplished by Gum-Dipping.

THERE ARE THREE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THAT WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM OF WHAT TIRES TO BUY:

1 "Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

1 University tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.

2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.

3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes.

For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death.

2 "Are they blowout-proof?"

—Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Not one of the 33 drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles, averaging 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind.

3 "Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

—Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile. In fact, unequalled mileage records of thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

Equip your car with a set of Firestone Gum-Dipped Non-Skid Tires, the safest tires ever built and avoid the dangers of skidding and blowouts.

The final leg was a beat to windward in which the 'Sauk' showed her windward qualities by finishing two minutes and 15 seconds ahead of the 'Gamble'. The 'Sauk' gives the 'Gamble' two minutes on the course. Her corrected time enabled her to win the race by 15 seconds. The 'E' and the 'Gamble' finished together and the judges were unable to state which had pushed her staysails across the finish line first. The 'E' also gives two minutes time allowance to the 'Gamble'.

The 'Dale' finished fourth and the 'Sero' fifth. They were followed by the 'Arab'.
