humorist, and Wiley Post, one of the best known fliers in the world, crashed to their death in a plane while flying from Fairbanks to Point Barrow, Alaska. The two men, close friends, had been enjoying an aerial vacation trip in the North, and Post intended later to fly to Asia. News of the fatal accident was sent to Seattle by Sergt. Stanley R. Morgan, signal corps operator at Point Barrow. He said he had recovered the bodies from the wreckage.

RIVALS in the matter of publicity, the house and senate committees on the activities of lobbyists got into a tangle that certainly didn't enhance

The elusive, chunky utilities magnate told the house committee about his various companies and related the saga of his travels while he was being sought. But he politely refused to answer questions concerning the sources and amount of his income. He testified that he "believed" the Associated Gas system had spent "eight or nine hundred thousand dollars" in opposition to the Wheeler-Rayburn utility control bill.

"That's just a small fraction of the $300,000,000 equity in our companies which would be destroyed if the bill becomes law and remains law," he de-

To one question by Cox of Georgia Hopson replied: "I resent that inquiry. No gentleman would have asked it." Whereupon Cox threatened to kick him out of the room unless he withdrew the answer, and Hopson mildly withdrew it.

O'Connor introduced in the house a resolution that severely slammed the senate, but it dropped when word came that Senator Black would wait to take Hopson after O'Connor's bunch was through with him. However, it gave opportunity for a ridiculous quarrel between the New Yorker and Rankin | Great Britain adhered to the policy at

GOV. MARTIN L. DAVEY of Ohio has "pulled a fast one" on the Republicans in behalf of the Democratic party. The G. O. P. leaders were demanding a state-wide by-election in Ohio to fill the vacancy created by the death of Representativeat-Large Charles V. Truax, believing the result would demonstrate, even more clearly than did the Rhode Island election, the waning strength of the administration. But Governor Davey went to Washington and consulted with President Roosevelt and then announced that he would not call and could not be compelled to call a special congressional election until next year. His declared reason was the cost, not fear of party defeat. Court action to force the calling of the election has been started but Davey says there is no restriction of his discretion in fixing the time of the election.

SURROUNDED by a group of notables and in the glare of photographers' flashlights, President Roosevelt put his signature on the social security act, of which he said: "If the senate and house of representatives in this long and arduous session had done nothing more than pass this bill the session would be regarded as historic for all time."

Among those who were present were Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York and Representative John Lewis of Maryland, who jointly drafted the bill; Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who had a hand in its making, and Senators Pat Harrison, William King and Edward P. Costigan.

In a talk intended for reproduction on the sound screens of the country, the President said:

"This social security measure gives at least some protection to 30,000,000 of our citizens who will reap direct benefits through unemployment compensation, through old age pensions and through increased services for the protection of children and the prevention of ill health.

"We can never insure 100 per cent

WILL ROGERS, famous actor and of the population against 100 per cent of the hazards and vicissitudes of life but we have tried to frame a law which will give some measure of protection to the average citizen and to his family against the loss of a job and against poverty-ridden old age. "This law, too, represents a corner stone in a structure which is being built but is by no means complete-a structure intended to lessen the force of possible future depressions, to act as a protection to future administrations of the government against the necessity of going deeply into debt to furnish relief to the needy-a law to flatten out the peaks and valleys of deflation and of inflation-in other words a law that will take care of human needs and at the same time provide for the United States an economic structure of vastly greater soundness."

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN of England, Premier Pierre Laval of France and Baron Pompei Aloisi of Italy met in Paris, as arranged, to see if they couldn't devise a way to avert the Italo-Ethiopian war, due to begin in September. Eden had a plan all prepared and after outlining it to Laval he laid it before Baron Aloisi. The latter, of course, had no power to assent but was compelled to submit the proposals to Premier Mussolini.

Baron Alois That Il Duce would accept it without change was considered unlikely, but it formed a basis for discussion. According to the best information, the Eden plan embraced these chief points:

1. Important economic concessions for Italy in Ethiopia.

2. A proposal that Italy be given the right to colonize and exploit rich, sparsely inhabited portions of the Ethiopian uplands probably under a League of Nations mandate as is provided for former German colonies in article XXII of the League of Na-

3. The offer of an outlet direct to the sea for Ethiopia, as a measure of compensation for its concessions.

NOBODY liked the new tax bill that congress was working on, and the senate finance committee had hard work making up its mind as to the mend. First it altered almost every provision of the bill passed by the house and changed it from a "soak the rich" measure to one which would soak practically every one. This was done by lowering personal income tax exemptions and starting the surtax increases at $3,000 instead of $50,000. The latter feature was proposed by Senator La Follette and was adopted to keep him in line. Also, the inheritance taxes which President Roosevelt had asked for were elimi-

Protests against increasing the taxes on little incomes came immediately, from senators, representatives and the country at large. Senators Borah of Idaho and Norris of Nebraska were among the "independents" who expressed their disapproval. Mr. Borah especially was vocal in opposition.

"Families with these small incomes are now paying more than their proportionate share of taxes and at the same time are facing higher prices for food, clothes, fuel and rents," he said. So the committee suddenly reversed

FIFTY commissioners representing the Methodist Episcopal church, the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and the Methodist Protestant church have been in session in Evanston, Ill., and have agreed upon a form of union that is to be submitted to the general conferences of the three churches and, if ratified by them, to all the annual conferences. The new organization, it was agreed, would be called the United Methodist church and would consist of six jurisdictional or regional conferences.

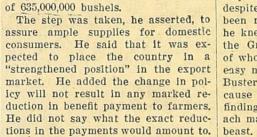

FARMERS who believe that their individual rights are being encroached upon by the administration's agricultural policies are offered a chance to get together by the organization and incorporation in Chicago of the Farmers' Independent Council of America. Dan D. Casement, a farmer of Manhattan, Kan., is president of the body. Stanley F. Morse, South Caroline farmer and consulting agriculturist, is executive vice president and Chris J. Abbott, Nebraska stockman and farmer, and Clyde O. Patterson, Illinois Jersey breeder, were incorporators. Dr. Charles W. Burkett, agricultural authority of New York and formerly director of the Kansas agricultural experiment station, and L. G. Tolles, farmer and past master of the Connecticut State Grange, are other vice presidents of the council, and Dr. E. V. Wilcox, representative of the Country Gentleman, District of Columbia, is secretary-treasurer; Fred Crawford, Michigan congressman and farm owner; E. E. Dorsett, farmer and past master Pennsylvania State Grange, and Kurt Greenwald, farm manager and agricultural engineer, New York, are directors. "To me there is but one issue, whether we are going to have a constitutional government or have a dictatorial regime," said Charles E. Co!lins, Colorado cattleman and president of the American National Live Stock association, regional vice president of the new organization.

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wallace has changed his mind about the reduction of wheat acreage for 1936. Instead of asking the farmers for a cut of 15 per cent, as was announced recently, the figure is now placed at 5 per cent.

Wallace told reporters that the change was decided upon after the government's August 1 survey of crop conditions indicated that total wheat production this year would amount to only 608,000,000 bushels as Sec'y Wallace compared with domestic requirements

AAA officials estimated that approximately 52,000,000 acres would be asserted that the government is given larger and more beautiful than those 'adequate powers" to deal with the situation if a bumper wheat harvest should result in 1936.

WHEN the President's social se-curity bill was finally enacted into law, the senate adopting the conference report already agreed to by the house, probably many thousands of men and women all over the country began figuring on the pensions they would receive under its terms. It is unlikely that one in a thousand has any clear idea of how the new program's pension system will work, so we reprint here a neat summary prepared by the Associated Press showing its operation as applied to "Bill Jones":

"Suppose young Bill is twenty when the law goes into effect and makes an average monthly salary of $100 until he is sixty-five. He will get a monthly pension, until his death, of $53.75.

"In detail, here is what will happen to him:

"In the calendar years 1937, 1938, and 1939 he will pay a salary tax of 1 per cent, or a total of $36 for the three years. In 1940, 1941, 1942 he will pay 11/2 per cent, or $54. In 1943, 1944, and 1945 the tax will be 2 per cent, or $72. In 1946, 1947, and 1948 the tax will be 21/2 per cent, or $90. From 1949 to 1981, inclusive, the tax will be 3 per cent, or a total of $1,188.

"Thus, in 45 years, Bill Jones will have paid in $1,440. All the time his employer will have been matching his tax payments, so the total paid to the federal treasury will be $2,880.

"At sixty-five Bill Jones can expect to live perhaps 10 years more. If he does, he will get back $6,450. "When Bill Jones dies this is what will happen: "His average annual salary will be multiplied by the number of years he paid taxes. In other words, if he dies after he has paid taxes for 45 years, $1,200 will be multiplied by 45-giving a total of $54,000. Arbitrarily, the bill stipulates that Bill Jones' estate shall be entitled to 31/2 per cent of that, or $1,890-less any amount he received in pensions before he died.

"If Jones dies before he gets back $1,890 in pensions, what he actually received is deducted from $1,890 and the remainder paid to his heirs. If he lives until he gets back all of the $1,890 and more, his heirs get nothing. "If Jones should die before he reaches sixty-five, his heirs would be

LIGHTFOOT THE DEER BECOMES UNEASY

THE Green Forest was very beauti-I ful. It was no longer green save where the pines and spruces and hemlocks grew. Everywhere else it was red and yellow and brown, for it was October and the leaves had turned. All day long and all the night, too, for that matter, there was a gentle rustling all through the Green Forest, for the leaves were falling.

Lightfoot the Deer was becoming uneasy. It was the rustling of the falling leaves that made him uneasy. You see those falling leaves had a message for Lightfoot, a message and warning. It was that the season of terrible danger for him, the hunting season, was close at hand.

All through the long summer Lightfoot had lived in peace and safety. In the early spring his wonderful antlers, which some folks call horns, but which are not true horns, had fallen. Very helpless had Lightfoot been then, but despite his helplessness there had been no fear in his heart. You see, he knew that there was no one in all consumers. he had lost. While these new antlers were growing he kept very much by himself. Now, they were fully grown and he wore them like a crown. He had polished and repolished the points of them by rubbing them against trees. You know, while they had been growing they had been covered by a sort of furry-looking skin, called velvet. They had been soft and tender then. Now that they were hard there was no further use for the velvety covering and this Lightfoot had rubbed off as he polished his antlers.

As long as the leaves had remained green everywhere through the Green Forest, Lightfoot had been happy and carefree, but now that the leaves had turned to beautiful colors and were dropping, dropping, dropping day and night, he grew more and more uneasy and fear crept into his heart.

Lightfoot had a good memory and he had not forgotten the dreadful things which had happened at the time

VACATION MEALS

DURING the summer weather is the time when everybody should take a few hours away from the grindstone. The house mother needs a vacation as much as any worker, but usually, a picnic is but an added burden unless everybody takes a hand in planning and preparing the food. Have everything simple, easy to prepare and then let the young folks do the work; it will be good experience and give mother a rest, if it is possible for her to give up the idea that no one but herself can pack a lunch. With the frying pan, take along some eggs and bacon. Scramble the eggs, add the crisp bacon which has been fried and kept hot, serve as a sandwich filling, on well buttered bread. Young, green onions or a simple salad, or a cucumber and radishes, go well with such sandwiches. For the youngsters, take milk, lemonade or cocoa, which may be carried in a thermos bottle. Coffee, too, may be prepared at home, but one of the pleasures of an outing meal is cooking it. Coffee never tastes better than when cooked in a tin pot or pail on a campfire.

French fried toast goes very nicely for a camp hot dish. This is easy to prepare by beating an egg, adding a little milk and a pinch of salt and sugar. Fry in a little hot bacon fat or the slices may be fried on the sheet-

HEN Hollywood had only 300 people and not even a "nickelodeon," pioneering actors rented an old barn there and be-gan to film "The Squaw Man." Armed cowboys, dashing through dusty streets to "fight" Indians, alarmed the village.

If the play called for a scene on a front porch, the actors simply got permission to use somebody's porch. No one, at first, built special "sets." Such colossal structures as Babylonian palaces 300 feet high, built later to film "Intolerance," were undreamed of.

Now studios that are walled cities within themselves house this stupendous industry, whose feats smack almost of witchcraft.

To make a "horror" picture, the illusion of prehistoric monsters invading a modern city was achieved with Texas armadillos. Shot at 20 times normal size, while waddling past the toy buildings of a miniature city, the final effect on the screen was realistically hideous.

One studio has a toy shop where boats, airplanes, cities, railroad trains, and automobiles are all made in miniature. In "The Invisible Man," a tiny automobile, loaded with gasoline-soaked cotton and a fuse, was run off a toy cliff, bursting into flames. In the same picture a railroad train (with cars 2 feet long) tumbled down a mountain side. Both "accidents" were strangely

Coral and marine plants for undersea views are cleverly counterfeited. "When we found ocean stuff wouldn't transplant," said a Universal director, "we dipped cactus and other desert growth in a plaster solution. Dried and painted, this 'bottom of the sea' fooled everybody."

Octopus tentacles and snakes may be merely a jointed tube, strung on piano wire, coated with sponge rubber, and painted.

Human Actors of All Kinds.

But it is human beings and their be havior, as much as tricks with cameras, that make Hollywood, which is only a part of Los Angeles, better known abroad than the big city itself. Since most of the world's movies are made hereabouts, the millions paid in salaries lure performers, real and would-be, from every other clime. Besides stars and plain five-dollar-a-day "extras," these actors range from real pygmies, as in "Tarzan," to acrobats and bona fide bareback riders in plays like "Polly of the Circus."

Casting offices for years have studied hordes of people for different roles. More than 17,000 are listed on cards for "bit" and "atmosphere" work. Every conceivable type is needed. As one official said, "We could not use the same crowd for an embassy reception as for a clandestine meeting of the Black Hand."

At the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, experts keep in mind the faces of some 7,000 semi-regulars, and use a filing system for thousands of extras.

Eighty per cent of the types needed fall meo such groups as dress men, bellhops, police, collegians, butlers, riders, tall, short, and fat men, stunt men, army and navy men, tough men, judges, etc.; dress women (meaning intelligent, society types who can wear smart clothes), pretty girls, homely girls, stenographers, tall, short, fat, and stunt women, maids, character women, riders, dancers, downgers, healthy children, peaked children, Hawaiians, Orientals, Latins, Nordic and Slavic types.

An emergency call for "one tough mechanic with a broken nose and two teeth missing" was quickly met.

Trained acrobats who can take rough falls and not get hurt; sailors with one eye; a distinguished-looking man with a continental-like "spade beard' who can work as a count or a diplomat -all these are in the cards!

Some of the Tricks.

"These bottles we break over each other's heads in barroom brawls couldn't hurt anybody," explains an actor made up like Jesse James. "They're not glass; they're made of candy." Some such trick candy costs $80 a pound. In the form of pills, it is used in shooting wintry scenes. The actor holds this pill in his mouth like a cough drop; as it melts, it gives off a vapor that is visible, like breath on a cold

Golden' Phantoms OF LOST MINES SW.N.U. By Editha L. Watson

SUNBURNED GOLD

STRANGE, dark ore from a hidden mine-copper gold!

The padres at San Diego mission were using it before the annexation of California. How much they knew about its sourse they did not reveal. But it is said that when the new dispensation began they caused the Indian to hide their mine and "forget" that it existed. And it stayed hidden and forgotten until the day when it was found by Pegleg Smith.

Pegleg was, as his name implies, a one-legged man-a roustabout, sometimes a prospector. What he was doing in the Colorado desert on that day in 1884 is unknown. But somewhere between Yuma and San Diego, Instead of going from one water hole to another as sensible people should, he decided to make a short cut, and as a result, he became lost.

There was a mountain close by, and Pegleg knew that the only thing to do was to reach its top and get his bearings from there. It must have been an unpleasant climb, with but one good leg to go on, but finally Smith stood on the sumhit and looked about him.

He also looked down-and there at his feet was ore-strange, dark ore. He was not certain that it had any value, but picked up a few chunks anyway, and resumed his delayed march to San Diego, reaching his destination without further adventures.

For several weeks the ore lay about unnoticed. Finally, just because it was curious-looking stuff, Pegleg showed it to his acquaintances. Some one recognized it as gold in spite of its odd appearance, and a new search was onsearch for the copper gold, the "sunburned" gold, of Pegleg's mine.

As such things will, this search proved profitless. Perhaps the desert added a few more skeletons to its collection of bleaching bones, but no one came back with any more of the gold. Finally the excitement died down.

But it had no more than done so when here came a soldier from Fort Yuma with more of that same unusual ore. He had a slightly more detailed location to give: there were three peaks, he said, instead of one. He was anxious to return, and lost little time in outfitting and choosing several companions. They set out with vast confidence that they would soon return with loads of gold. Then the desert swallowed them.

East of Warner's Pass all trace of them was lost. But many years later a Berlin street car, all painted with prospectors in the Cuyamaca mountains found the bones of men and analong under its own power. About a imals.

Later, an Indian woman appeared trated Cerman weeklies, a group of with some of the ore at a place where old German types recruited from Los workmen were laying tracks for the with some of the ore at a place where Angeles lodging houses talked in Ger- railroad. She had lost her way, she said, and like Pegleg, she had seen the Barely a stone's throw away, on an- mountain and had climbed it, to disother "set," a cowboy actor, the idol cover the ore. She claimed, also, that of small, boys the world over, was there were peaks, which substantiated struggling through Mexican border the soldier's story. From the mountain top she had seen the tracklayers, and she had headed for their camp.

The tracklayers took one startled inspection of her little load of ore, and then most of them immediately threw down their tools and "made tracks" in the direction from which she had come, without waiting to hear the end of her story. This was a fatal mistake, for she told the rest that she had circled They were found in Los Angeles around and approached their camp from an entirely different direction than that in which the mountain lay. The men who had so hastily rushed off were never seen again.

The Indian woman refused from the first to disclose the location of the gold. At last a prospector, Jim Denslow, beout. In order to match the old setting, came her friend, and after many years she told him of the three peaks, and that the mine was near a dry lake. Then he set out, as so many had done before him, seeking for the strange, dark ore. He found the three peaks at last, but between him and them stretched, not a dry lake, but a vast, shallow, wet one, with such dangerous quicksands around its margin that he could not cross it.

Denslow decided that the thing to do was to return to San Diego, re-outfit, and come back prepared to do some work. This he did, and succeeded in skirting the lake and climbing the peaks-only to find nothing but obsidian, volcanic glass.

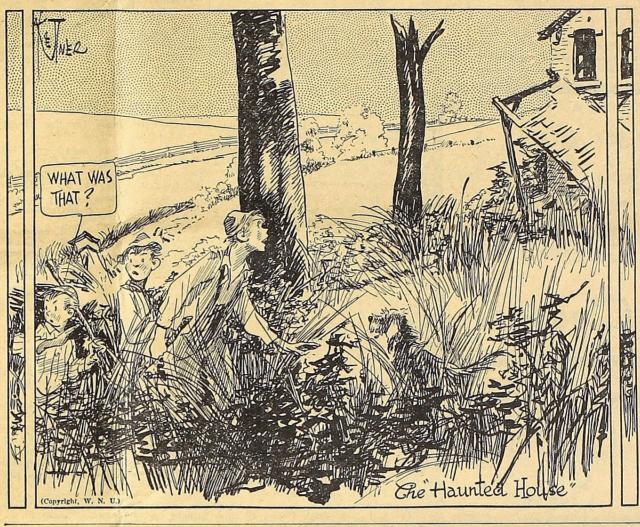

The next to locate the mire was a Mexican cowboy. He disappeared for several days from the ranch where he was employed, and on his return he showed some of the copper gold This he squandered on fine saddles and other such matters dear to the cowboy heart, and on gambling. When he was broke again, he disappeared as before, and returned with more gold. This he did several times, managing each time to elude all those who tried to trail him. Of course he would not tell the location, but the character of the ore revealed that it had been taken from the same place as that which Pegleg and the others had visited. At last the cowboy was killed in a knife duel, and his secret died with him.

A former sheriff of the county, however, had seen the Mexican riding in a certain direction. He decided to ride that way, too, and see what lay out there. He set out, but never returned.

Every old-time desert rat in the Southwest knows the approximate location of Pegleg's mine, yet none have succeeded in reaching it.

The Symbol of an Ideal

THE history of American industry affords no example of lasting success that came by chance. Instead, it shows that enduring institutions are products of an honest policy applied intelligently and faithfully over a period of years.

The vital place which the telephone occupies in modern life did not result from accident. It was won - and is held - by supplying the public with a service of genuine and steadily increasing value.

To better that value is the abiding principle of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company's policy. Even during the recent years of sharply reduced revenues, years in which all values were subjected to bitter tests, this company did not relax in its obligation to achieve further improvements in its service.

As a direct result of this policy, the people of Michigan are receiving a higher grade telephone service than ever before. This statement is not made lightly. The improvement is revealed by carefully compiled records of daily performance. They show a greater speed and accuracy in handling local calls; a continued decrease in "out-of-order" reports; more prompt repair service; and a greater proportion of out-of-town messages completed while the subscriber holds the line.

These records, though undramatic in themselves, are important as milestones of progress toward complete satisfaction for the users of this vital public service. The improvements they signify were not won by chance - they did not "just happen."

They were achieved by this company's rigid adherence to a policy having as its basic ideal the best possible service for the least possible cost that will maintain the present standards and assure the improvements of the future.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's criticism of his idle life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which he must reach, from New York. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. Other members of the party include an Other members of the party include an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middleaged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he distrusts Crack. He finds his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and makes a little progress with Barry. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal is directed to Barry's room, Instead of his own, and they exchange kisses. Next day he tells her he loves her. She answers that she mustn't love him, without giving any reason. Crack brutally insults Kerrigan. Hal forces him to apologize abjectly, and his feeling of enmity and disgust toward Crack is intensified. Barry promises Hal that intensified. Barry promises Hal that next day she will reveal the shadow of despair that hangs over her.

CHAPTER VI-Continued -14-

"One day," Barry went on, as if making sure it should all be as simple and clear for him as it was for her, "her father brought a man to live in their house-a pleasant, quiet sort of man, a good deal younger than her father but older than she. The man was away a good deal, but even when he was at home the girl hardly saw him except at breakfast and dinner; in the evening he used to read his paper while she and her father played cards and talked, as they always had.

"Then one day her father told her that the man had asked him his consent to their marriage-the girl's and the lodger's. Her father had given it. He treated it so much as an ordinary matter that, even without warning, the girl had no real feeling about it one way or the other. And her father wanted it. So they were married, quietly, right away, she being just under seventeen and her husband a little past thirty. For more than a year there was hardly any difference in her life: she give up her beaus, counted her husband's laundry and sewed on his buttons as she did for her father. It was like a sort of dream-not happy, not unhappy-that doesn't seem worth breaking down because you know it is a dream and that you'll wake up

"Then her father was taken illvery ill-so that the doctor told her she must think of his dying. She couldn't-not possibly-it filled her with such panic. It filled her so dreadfully, so desperately, that she never wondered what would happen between her and her-husband. One night her father called her to him; he asked her to promise that she would stick to her husband no matter what happened, do what he wanted her to do, no matter what it was, never leave him nor disobey him, for ten years. She promised; and then in his weakness and fever her father forgot about it and begged her to promise all over again. It was so terribly important to him-really terribly-terror mixed up in it. And while she staved watching him after she'd promised, her father

A dog barked in the still, hot town and the dark, sleeping silence of the plains lay out and away before them forever under the starless black of

"Later," said Barry quietly, "when she began to believe that it had happened, she told her husband she would try to love him, if he would wait-try to love him for the friendship and trust her father must have had for him, to make her promise that. Her husband laughed at her as if she were a fool; he said, 'He made you promise that because he wanted to keep his respectability in h-l with him, and I can have it back whenever I like.' He showed her a paper, a sort of receipt that was practically a confession of something her father had done before he'd come here, in another bank-an acknowledgment that her husband had covered it up for him.

"That was four years ago. Her contract still has six years to run, and what she'll be when it ends- Her husband's plans are definite enough-to make money for him, and power for him, in the ways he finds. The four years have been mostly a sort of schooling for that, with a few little-

She paused only an instant. "I'd like to help her, but there's no way, you see. Disillusion at nineteen doesn't seem to drown nineteen years of love and reverence, and a-a superstition about promises, about a sort of honor even in dishonor."

The black spread of darkness before them was oppressive, stealthy in oppression, and Hal tightened his arms to make sure she was still there against him. He had shut the mean-he shouldnt have let even the words come in-the deliberate, simple words that softly infected his unacknowledged fears. Now he must say what would slip the secreted leashes on their going-on together, over the near, elusive threshold of enchantment. Then Barry said steadily, "That's the story, Hal. What do you think?"

"It's improbable," said Hal at once, "and banal and wickedly irrelevant to what my heart and the whole world is full of. Barry-"

Within his arms, she turned quickly and stopped back his words with her smooth, urgent lips. He could feel her breast move with her breathing, close against his-almost feel her pulses join his to use one rhythm for what, in that transported moment, was a single surging of life. Then her lips evaded him, her cheek pressed hard against his, and he heard her whisper-

"You see, I'm not strong enough, brave enough to tell you you aren't the person with whom I want to spend the rest of my life, anyway, anyhowthat you won't always be the only person, no matter what can happen in this whole wide green world, or in heaven, or in hell. My own darling. I love you. That's all there is. To say I love you most or best or dearest makes the word cheap, and it can never be cheap again. I can never use it again-except for you. I love you, and I haven't been strong or honest or brave for you. O G-d," she said in a final cry, "perhaps I'm glad I haven't

With sudden, frantic strength, she tore herself out of his arms and was gone from him, into the waiting dark-

CHAPTER VII

Sunday

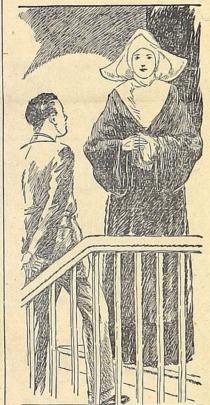

It was only quarter to six, but Sister Anastasia was waiting for Hal at the head of the stairs, the serenity of her cool, close-framed face concerned with sorrow as she watched

"She has told you," Hal said quiety when he came to her. Sister Anastasia bowed her head a little and whispered, "Yes." "And what do you think?"

The nun looked up at him as if Ha reminded her of some one only a little forgotten after a long time, "I cannot tell myself what I think," she said. "But I feel-feel very sawri."

Hal glanced down the stairs into the deserted lobby before he said: 'Sister, she must tell me where I can find this-husband, and I must see him. I can buy him, or-or I canbut I needn't tell you that. I can buy him. He is for sale."

"She will not tell you," said Sister Anastasia, saddened by her helplessness. "She would not tell me. All she will say is that he is not waiting for her in California."

"I shall find him." said Hai.

"She asked me to ask a favor of you," said the nun, as if she hadn't heard him, and Hal drew an uncomfortable breath. "I think you will do it for her. She did not sleep last

"I will do anything in the world for her," said Hal, "except one thing."

"It is not the one thing," said Sister Anastasia. "It is only that you will for today-for twenty-four hours-not speak of your love, not ask her to speak of hers. She must rest-inside she must rest, to find where she is, now that you are together. She is nearer to-to despair than-than she should be. She is beautiful in her spirit: she must not be driven closer

Hal gave her a quick, acute glance and saw that she believed what she had started to say. He looked down the stairs again, the sleeping quiet of the shabby hotel grown subtly perilous; then he returned his look to the nun's and said, "I promise."

She had known he would, and known that it would solve nothing below the surface of today. "Our bags are ready, if-if you like to take them down,' she said. "That is the room-there." And she moved to the stairs-not because of connivance in anything she shouldn't watch, but because she wholly trusted him to care for Barry.

Hal knocked, and Barry opened the door to him-her blue eyes deep and alone, but sure, almost hopeful in their brave quiet. He managed a free smile ings of the story out of his mind, but of greeting and said, "Morning, my- communities.

Dietrich. Bags: was told there were

She held out her hand, her arm straightened from the good, wide shoulder, her smile cheering her eyes with gratefulness. She took his hand in both of hers, brought it to her cheek, and turned her lips to it. Then she let it go as if it were something she were entrusting to him. "There are the bags," she said, pointing.

She stood by the door, her golden head high, the thick bush of half-curls touching her smooth, faintly dipped checks. He stopped before her, met her brief acknowledgment of intimacy with conscious sedateness.

"You see, don't you?" she said, as if she had been explaining it to him. "Los Angeles will be the end of everything. There's a little time of beauty left. We shouldn't waste it in making ourselves miserable over what we can't

His gray eyes stayed out of reach of her appeal. "Barry," he said steadily, "there's nothing we can't have."

Kerrigan kept them waiting a little this morning. Barry took her old place in the tonneau, and Hal played a stalking game with Crack round the car, in the sweetish pungency of the waked exhaust. Crack, he felt, was edging up to hint a desire to ride in the front seat; and Crack sitting beside him, drowsily seeming to follow his impossible groping for actuality in the fiction of Barry's marriage-the prospect of it made Hal flinch and shudder. Then, without chagrin, Crack surrendered to Hal's casual keeping the car between them, bounced his golf-ball once on the pavement, and climbed into the tonneau. Hal couldn't remember having seen him recover his silly plaything in the speak-easy that other night: perhaps he carried a supply. Hal wondered if new golf-balls gleaming in a box would now always remind him of Crack and his. . . . Then Kerrigan came.

"And how are you, colonel?" Hal asked as they started.

"Like the mouth of a factory chimney," said Kerrigan, scrubbing the red filigree of his tough cheeks and blinking cheerful appraisal of the morning. "'How's that, Mr. Kerrigan?' the young man asked, eager for a fresh token of his kindly old friend's wit. 'Why, bless you,' said dear Mr. Kerrigan, radiating goodwill toward all, 'top-hole is the answer: what else?' And with that gay quip and a gleam of benign mischief in his nice old eyes, he went off-lippity loppity-in the direction of Mr. MacGregor's carrot patch.'

There was dust up already on the long road, and the high haze gathered as the morning light lost its slant and its freshness. Occasionally cattle trucks, and the mule teams that still heid tractors' berths on the less frequent farms, gave no impression of being out unduly early; and the threshing equipment in one of the roadside fields looked as if it had been puffing chaff all through the hot night. Nebraska was under slow change for the farther West, the stark, dry railroad and its vertical fringe of pole line still leading the way to the eternal horizon.

It was somewhere east of Cheyenne They stayed far away there, still and lofty above the earth's haze; and Rasputin's prodigious charge against them over the driven song of steel and rubber became a small, peevish crawling in infinity.

"Mountains," said Crack quietly behind Hal's head, as if it were a warning, as if there were some necessity for new and subtle vigilance.

At the filling station where they stopped in Cheyenne, Kerrigan said: What I want to arrange some day is you're in a new town, or an old one you like, and say to you: 'Baby, you need a tonic; here you are in Cheyenne; I can't help that, but if you'll pick any day of its past that you'd like to see, I'll get you a ringside seat right in it."

"Know any archangels?" said Hal. What would you pick here?"

"Ever hear of the Gold Room?" "No. what was that?"

"Jim Allen's Place," said Kerrigan almost wistfully: "the big hidy-ho ing Suit in Russia." establishment out here in the days when you had to know your way around to support life. Think of the time all the gals and the guys must have had that day, Mr. Ireland; and think of the gals and guys they must have been that had the time.

"You've got something there," said Hal, watching the gusto which Kerrigan's eyes made authentic and infectious. "Gold Room itself's torn down by now, I s'pose."

A hollow click sounded on the pavement behind and Hal had to keep himself from turning too smartly. Crack stood there holding the little ball where he had caught it; his lips were in their slight smile, his eyes showed Hal their slight, drowsy mischief. "Everything's tight and smooth, 'ey?"

WILL ROGERS

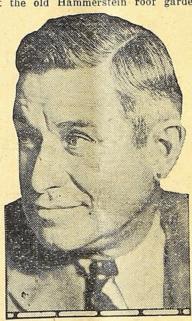

Greatly Loved American Born Nov. 4, 1879-Died Aug. 16, 1935

Will Rogers, Oklahoma cowboy whose homely philosophy endeared him to the hearts of millions, is dead. The wreckage of the plane in which he and Wiley Post, famous flier, were seeking new adventures was found where it had fallen about 15 miles south of Point Barrow, Alaska, northernmost white settlement in America.

Thus ended in tragedy the career of the ranch hand who had made millions laugh-probably the greatest and best known comedian of his day. His intense interest in aviation caused him to undertake the hazardous flight with Post over the wilds of the Far North. For many years he had traveled the skyways, and in his newspaper column had been one of commercial aviation's strongest supporters. That flying should have caused his death is one of fate's grim ironies.

Rogers' career reads almost like fiction. He was born at Ollogah in Indian territory, November 4, 1879. He attended the Willie Hassell school at Neosho, Mo., and also the Kemper Military academy at Boonville for a short time. From that humble beginning he rose to become the intimate companion of the great men of the in New York in 1905. At first his act was purely a routine of rope tricks, and he is still considered one of the world's rope experts. Finally he began to insert homely observations on current events into his act, and enthusiastic audiences begged for more.

Rogers began to receive national recognition when he was engaged by Ziegfeld for the Follies and the Night Frolics in 1914. The ever present chewing gum, his crooked grin, and the lock of hair which dangled in his eyes were known to everyone. Whether he talked to audiences of thousands, to Presidents and cabinet ministers, or that Hal felt a silent, unseen magic to a group of ranch hands he still had putting more momentous difference the manner of the Oklahoma cowboy under the sky; and accidentally he sitting on a corral fence and commentglanced up—above the haze of the hor-izon—and saw the source of it: dim, the nation.

sloped patches of white incredibly high It was through his writings, however. loved. His daily newspaper feature was read by millions, and his weekly column carried by the nation's largest dailies and also syndicated to weeklies by Western Newspaper Union carried his observations into the majority of American homes. No matter how busy he might be, or what affairs were pressing he always took time to prepare his column himself. A motion picture might be in the making, with expenses of hundreds of dollars each minute going on, but Rogers never failed this: a personal archangel who'll zoop his newspaper readers. Each day he down to you every so often when would retire to some corner of the set, and while directors fumed and producers wailed, he turned out his regu-

> Few people today realize the extent of Rogers' writings. Among the books he wrote were Rogerisms-The Cowbey Philosopher on Prohibition: Rogerisms-The Cowboy Philosopher on the Peace Conference, 1919; Rogerisms-What We Laugh At; Illiterate Digest; Letters of a Self-Made Diplomat to His President, and There's Not a Bath-

His writings were unique. Under their cloak of humor there was an underlying common-sense that came from a man raised close to the soil. He knew the people of America and his sage comments-often only a few lines -often carried more wisdom and more weight than pages by another. Although his fame was world-wide, and his income enormous he never lost the common touch. To the end he was Will Rogers, and his line "All I know is what I read in the newspapers" became almost a trademark. Just before he left on the fatal flight, he told correspondents that he was going to spend the winter with some of Alaska's old sourdoughsswapping stories, hearing their tales of adventures-and finding in their association the old pioneer humor of his boyhood days. And because he was Will Rogers he would have found it just as entertaining as though he had never found success beyond his wildest dreams.

America is better because of Will Rogers. He brought a viewpoint that is almost lost today-that of those sturdy people who forged their way into the West, their slow, dry humor and their hard headed attitude toward life. Millions will feel a personal loss when they pick up the paper and Rogers' comment is no longer there.

Radium, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde Among Metals

Capable of Curing Disease and of Causing It.

Washington .- Radium, most precious of metals, an ounce of which is worth nearly as much as a ton of gold, recently has been brought to the fore again through new advances in its use in the treatment of disease.

"This silvery-white substance, which few people ever have seen, is a sort of Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde among the metals," says the National Geo-graphic society. "While its principal use is in the treatment of dreaded cancer, in many cases of which it is a saver of life, radium also is capable of causing cancers and a fatal form of anemia when not properly handled.

"Recently the largest 'radium pack' for treating cancer ever used in the United States was put to work at Bellevue hospital, New York city," continues the bulletin. "It contains five grams of radium and is expected to be particularly useful in treating deepseated cancers.

"It is estimated that there are about 250 grams of radium in the United States at present, nearly half of the total of 600 grams or approximately one and one-quarter pounds that has been produced in the world.

Worth Million an Ounce.

"Radium first was produced from pitchblende ores of Bohemia after its discovery in 1898. Since then prospectors have found radium-bearing deposits in many parts of the world. The most recent important 'radium strike' was in the Great Bear lake district in the wilderness of northern Canada, farther north than the Yukon gold fields.

"So valuable is the ore that it is profitable to fly out loads of it by airplane to civilization for refining. Today the world's principal sources of radium are the Great Bear lake deposits and mines in the Belgian Congo, Africa. There also are radium deposits in the United States, in Colorado and Utah. They are not rich enough to be worth working at present prices.

"The value of radium is fabulous. It is worth about $1,000,000 per ounce at present prices. Gold is now valued at $35 per ounce in the United States, and platinum approximately the same. In small amounts radium may at times command a price of as much as $75 per milligram, the thousandth part of a gram. In past years its price has been much higher than now, reaching $125,000 per gram during the World war.

the chief use of radium is in luminous paint, used on watch and clock dials, for electric switches and keyholes, and in wartime, for gun sights and compass cards for use where lights would betray presence of troops.

Used in Treating Disease

"The radiations which make radium ooth useful in treating disease and dangerous when handled without protection, are caused by the explosion of atoms in the radium. Slowly radium is dissipating itself away by hese explosions, though it takes from 1,690 to 2,500 years for half of a piece of radium to dissipate itself.

"The exploding atoms send out three different kinds of radiations or raysalpha particles, positively charged, traveling up to 12,000 miles per second; beta rays, negatively charged electrons traveling with almost the speed of light; and gamma rays, electro-magnetic waves which also travel nearly as fast as light.

'In treating diseases, an emanation or by-product of radium usually is used or lost."

Find Many Mental Ills Among Workers

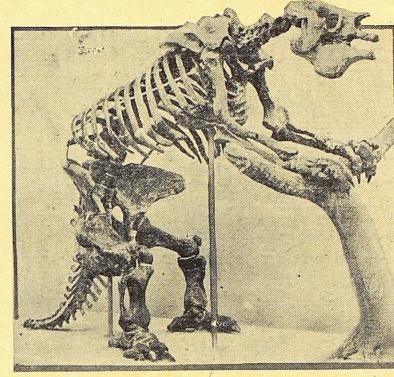

Dallas, Texas.-Fully 50 per cent of all persons employed in American in astries suffer form varying degrees of emotional or mental ill health, according to Dr. H. L. Pritchett, professor of sociology at Southern Methodist uni-

Many men and women who are highly successful in business and are entirely rational, nonetheless suffer from emotional maladjustment, Pritchett said.

Relatively few people are engaged in the type of work they really wish to follow, he said. Most people are engaged as they are because of compulsion or circum-

instead of the radium itself, because it is far more radioactive than radium. One of the most frequently used is radon, a gas which can be released from radium by heating or dissolving it. A very small quantity of radon is as radioactive as a large amount of radium. Radon can be produced without the original radium being scattered

Average Net Worth of Families Rising

Special Survey Shows Home Mortgages Reduced.

Minneapolis.-The average Insured family has 30 per cent more cash in the bank today than it had in 1933, and has reduced the mortgage on its home by 10 per cent in the same twoyear period, according to a survey of 10,000 policy holder families by the Northwestern National Life Insurance company of Minneapolis. An average reserve of $356 per family of cash on hand and in banks, was reported as of the spring of 1933 in response to the insurance company's questionnaire; this compares with $464 per family at the present time, an increase of $108, or 30 per cent.

A reduction in the size of the average mortgage from $3,464 in 1933 to $3,110 in 1935 was shown in the reports. Approximately 49 per cent of the policy holders investigated were home owners; the average home valuation was $5,301. Half of the homes owned were clear of encumbrance; the remaining 50 per cent were mortgaged.

The average amount of life insurance owned per family was $7,710 in 1933, and $8,199 in 1935, an increase of 6.3 per cent.

The average net worth of each family, including equity in home but exclusive of life insurance, was $2,953 in the spring of 1933, and had risen to $3,440 two years later, the survey

A special survey of urban housing conducted in 61 cities by the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce showed a reduction in the average mortgage on owner-occupied homes of 3.29 per cent from 1933 to 1934. The fact that the reduction for the two years from '33 to '35 totaled 10.22 per cent in the insurance company's survey would seem to indicate that the average family is paving off its obligations at an increasingly rapid rate, the report concludes.

Inscribed Terra Cotta

Cones Back Up Testament Washington .- New proof of the accuracy of the Old Testament as a historical record has been obtained by the Smithsonian Institution.

The findings-three inscribed terra cotta cones found in a temple wall at Ur of the Chaldees-were memorial tablets buried to perpetuate the name of the king, Libit-Ishtar, fifth ruler of the Isin dynasty who reigned about 2075

Included in the cuneiform inscriptions were references to several early cities, mentioned before in the Book of Genesis. The Smithsonian said their existence based on the Biblical reference was never considered conclusive,

The fourteenth chapter of Genesis gives Ur as the birthplace of Abraham, presumably in the reign of Rim-Sin or of Hammurabi, 2000 to 1900 B. C.

Until three years ago, he would "walk down to Nashville," a distance of nearly 12 miles, whenever he took "a notion." When the Civil war broke out, Bess volunteered, but because whooping cough and measles had settled in his lungs, he was ruled too frail.

New York .- Two scientists recently examined 400 house flies to determine curing flies from all sorts of places basketball and field hockey.

they found that the average number of bacteria carried per fly was more than 1,000,000, reports the American Institute of Sanitation. "Under the microscope the fly appears like an animated feather duster. The legs and body are covered with fine hairs which carry countless germs from place to place. Each of its six legs have two hairy pads in which a sticky fluid is secreted. By means of these adhesive pads on its feet a fly can perform the novel trick of wal upside down on a ceiling. But those pads, so useful to the fly in defying gravitation, pick up all sorts of bacteria as the scavenger walks along. "A single fly may alight on a dozen objects in a few minutes and leave an unseen trail of germs that would be appalling if made visible to the eye of a housewife. Yet it is easy to demonstrate scientifically that a housefly literally sheds germs with every step placed a marble memorial to the crat. honor of John Paul Jones, at the spot where in Paris his body rested from the time of his death in 1792 until his forgotten grave was found and the body brought to the United States in 1905, a period of more than a century of neglect by both countries. The French had not marked his grave nor given it honor and we ourselves were content to do him honor only in our school book histories and occasionally listen to some orator declare that he had "only just begun to fight" for something or other. It now rests in the naval cemetery at Annapolis, its monument a constant inspiration to thousands of cadets, who hope some day to place their names beside his on the scroll of national heroes.

John Paul, which was his right name, Jones being added after he came to America to live in Virginia in 1773, had a soul for adventure and daring. He fought under the flags of three nations, not as a mere soldier of fortune, but as an adventurous spirit eager to deliver blows where he thought economically in they should be given. Other men of adventurous impulse had under the British flag fought for plunder, as did the notorious Sir Francis Drake, knighted by Queen Elizabeth for the riches he brought to her from plundered Spanish ports and galleons. Jones took no plunder. He even failed to receive much of the regular naval portion of the prize money from captured ships.

France gave him a converted merchant ship for a flagship and then in surprise acclaimed him for defeating in his Bon Homme Richard, named for Benjamin Franklin, the much superior Serapis and capturing her while his own ship was sinking. She voted him a medal and the king bestowed upon him the sword and cross of the Order of Military Merit. Later he was voted a pension, which was never paid. history shows.

Russia, for whom he fought valiantly and successfully against the Turks, gave him nothing, so far as As for the United States, he was promised command of a new 74gun ship of the line, but he never set foot on her deck or any other fighting ship of the American navy during the last four years of the war. In 1787, five years before his death, Congress voted him a gold medal, and 118 years later we brought his body to this country for honored rest in the naval cemetery. France was in the throes of the great revolution when Jones died and was obscurely buried in Paris, but the United States was not, nor was there anything during that more than a century of neglect by which It could be justified. Experiments Give Promise, Director Vidal Says.

Detroit.-Eugene Vidal, federal director of air commerce, reviewed the progress made here to date in the nine most promising projects concerned with the development of a light and inexpensive airplane sufficiently safe for any automobile driver to fly.

Despite the apparent inability of the aircraft industry to believe in the possibility of turning out a $700 airplane as indicated by the machines on exhibit at this 1935 all-American aircraft show, Vidal asserted there is every hope that such a machine will be on the market within a short time. He said several builders whose experimental designs were ordered built by the bureau have turned out machines which seemingly meet all these demands.

"At least three of our projects are very promising indeed," he said. "The ships can be flown absolutely safely by novice pilots. They do not spin, they land themselves hands off or with the stick all the way back from 200 feet. They are, what we think, safe airplanes."

Ships Are Safe.

"Don't mistake me to say that these ships are unsafe," and he waved outthe window where several transport air liners were drawn up before the Detroit City Terminal building, dozens of smaller planes were "hopping passengers" and Vidal's own cabin monoplane he had flown down from Wash-

"Properly flown they are safe, but the planes we are building can be flown with only a couple hours' instruction almost by anyone at all." The plane nearest completion is the tailless Waterman high wing monoplane. The enclosed cabin seats two and has a 95 horse power motor turning a pusher propeller at the rear. The rudders are at the wing tips with ailerons and elevators in the trailing edge of the wing.

"We are ready to give this machine an approved type certificate (the ultimate stamp of Department of Commerce approval) and it is to be flown east this week by a novice pilot. It passed all its tests with flying colors. having a top speed slightly over 110 miles an hour, and can be landed with wheel brakes locked. We tried for two weeks to spin it, but couldn't."

Another machine is the Weick high wing monoplane with pusher motor. Its tail is at the rear, on the end of an outrigger boom. Fred Weick of the Langley, field, Va., N. A. C. A. laboratories was the original designer, but it now is being completed by Fair child. It has "flown beautifully," Vi-

Speed Over 110 Miles.

The "roadable autogiro" is entirely different sort of machine, Neely stated. When finally delivered to the bureau in October it is expected to be a sensation. Direct lift, meaning that no forward run will be necessary for it to get into the air perpendicular descent, cruising speed over 110 miles an hour on a 90 horse power motor, and gearing to allow it to be driven at 20 miles an hour over highways, the pilot's "garage" and a clear field, are the unusual characteristics.

There are three attempts under way to convert inexpensive production type automobile engines for airplane use. One is a Hudson Terraplane engine with a belt and pulley reduction gear, another is a Ford V8 engine, and the third is a Plymouth motor.

Dean Hamond, youthful designer of the Hammond Y safety plane which in its original version has failed to meet the speed requirements of the Department of Commerce contract un-der which it was built, appeared at the show and he said he is building a new machine which will incorporate all the safety features of the first one, but with top speeds considerably above the 110 minimum demand.

Indians to our own great national anthem the deeper emotions of a people have been expressed in music. Among the ear liest instruments we find the harp and horn. The evolution in the manu facture of musical instruments has been nothing less than marvelous. But we are interested not only in musical instruments but in the character of music itself. If the "basic element of music is rhythm," then the Spirituals of the negro race express a very deep and sincere religious emotion. The Spirituals sung in the play, "Green Pastures," will not likely be forgotten by those who were privileged to hear them. As sofas, love seats, and regulation the tom-tom called out the deep emotional element of the savage so we of the modern age respond to the fascinating and bewildering notes of an old violin.

In parts of the world, less civilized than our own, the music is strange and bizarre but nevertheless expresses the soul of that people. As the race advanced in culture, the music evolved with it. A return to the finer music in our own age is very encouraging. The age of jazz seems to be passing, at least we hear less of it today. We may hear the arias of the best operas sung by artists as we witness a play at the movies. The writer recently was present at a performance where five thousand persons assembled, not to see a poorly acted play, but to hear glorious music. Let us have more of it.

Many of the great movements in history were created under the spell of music. "The Reformation was born and nurtured in song." Some of our very important social problems hitherto unsolved may yield to a proper adjustment when all the people sing the way to their solution. Perhaps we could sing our way into international peace more rapidly than legislation seems able to accompish it. Music is a universal language. An aria or sentiment is the same the world over regardless of the language in which it may be sung. Music is an important element in our education. Like the Italians we should begin early. Every child should be taught in the grade schools to appreciate the spirit of music. Shakespeare says:

In summer time, above all other seasons, does the homemaker put away her extra pieces of silver and so save herself care. And if she closes the town house to take up residence at a summer resort, she further protects it and eases her mind about it, by putting it in a vault in her bank. This is a wise precaution, and costs very little. If there is much sterling silver, and this is the only kind that requires this looking after, it is seldom left in a home. It would be costly in dollars and cents to replace it, and many pieces would probably be impossible of replacement—such as family silver, that "republics are ungrateful." So and other articles of sentimental associations. If the quantity of sterling is little, it may be treasured all the more grateful, even though our demonbecause of its scarcity, plus its associations. So in both instances it deserves to be well looked out for.

Whether one puts the silver in the bank or not, and whether it is sterling or good plated ware, cases to put the flatware pieces in are needed. Silver scratches when one piece rubs against another. The finish is impaired. If laid in a cloth-lined silver drawer in a sideboard, each piece should be allowed room so that it does not come in contact with those next it. However, silver articles should be in cases, and some homemakers use cases in any

The phrase "pass the buck" is derived from the game of cards. In such games, the counter or other object is placed on the table before the dealer and passed by him to the next dealer to prevent mistakes as to the position of the deal. In poker, a marker is utility to the chairs, softening the light | put into a jack pot, another jack pot as well as shielding from the sun. It being in order when the deal passes permits a steady light to fall on a to him- who holds the buck.

Looking Over a Canadian Gold Mine

Stuyvesant Fish of New York, right, and Col. Charles McCrea, former minister of mines for Ontario, are seen examining a piece of gold-bearing ore at the Afton mine in the Temagami district. In the background are other members of Mr. Fish's party of financiers who were making an inspection four of mining properties in northern Ontario.

Cunningham greeted Lichenwald with a lusty triple and crossed the plate a moment later for the locals' final tally when Noel singled.

The contest was marred by accident which occurred in the last half of the second. Howard Fritze right arm was broken just above the wrist when he blocked O. Lixey while the latter was sliding into second base.

Tawas will have an opportunity to clinch the title next Sunday when it plays at Twining. A large number of local fans are planning to drive down for this game and the boy-hope to show their appreciation of the following by bringing home the
