LOCALS DROP DOWN NOTCH IN STANDINGS

Tawas Miscues Pave Way For 6 to 5 Twining Victory

Tawas was turned back in its effort to eliminate Twining from the race for first place last Sunday, the local boys dropping a 6-5 decision to the Arenac county team. The defeat, which pulled the Tawas club down to second place in the standings, can be attributed to too many errors, seven being committed by the locals during the afternoon.

The local squad opened the scoring in the third when M. Lixey's double, Quick's single, an infield out and Cunningham's single gave Tawas a 2-0 lead. The Twining boys came back in their half of the same frame, however, with a five-run rally which changed the looks of things. In that inning the local infielders "blew up" and before they were through with their wild throwing tactics five runs had crossed the plate with only three hits, two of them "flukes," being made. Twining's other tally came in the fifth when Reid singled, advanced to second on an infield out and scored on Newton's single.

Tawas hacked a run off Twining's lead in the fifth when Mark tripled and scored on H. Lixey's single, another in the sixth on singles by Noel and O. Lixey and an infield out, and again one counter in the ninth on singles by M. Lixey, Mark and H. Lixey, but their total fell short one run of tying the score before the final out of the game was made.

A victory for Tawas Sunday seemed not to be in the books. The locals' powerhouse was clicking nicely, 14 good hits being made off Rolak, Twining's ace hurler, although the boys were able to score only five runs. The errors, of course, played a big part in their defeat. The "breaks" of the game were not with the boys and the result was that they had to be content with the short end of the score. In one instance, occurring in the seventh inning, three successive singles by M. Lixey.

Prescott Defeated By Hemlock Sunday, 8-7

Hemlock defeated Prescott, Isocogemaw league champions, at Tawasville last Sunday by a score of 8 to 7. Hemlock compiled 13 hits off the two pitchers used by their opponents while Prescott was limited to 11 by the three hurlers who saw service on the mound for the victors. Errors were plentiful on both sides.

Henderson, with four hits in four times at bat, was the big gun in the Hemlock attack. He was followed closely by Long and Schneider, each of whom had three out of four. Only one Prescott man, D. Christie, with two out of three, was able to get more than one hit off Hemlock pitching.

Following is the box score:

Saves Injured Husband From Overturned Speed Boat In Lake Huron

Cool headedness saved Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Rice and Kenneth Wildes of Midland from tragedy last Saturday evening. The party were cruising in a small speed boat about a mile off Isoco beach when the boat hit a wave and was overturned.

In the accident Dr. Rice was knocked unconscious and suffered a dislocated shoulder. While Wildes held Dr. Rice to the overturned boat, which was rapidly drifting out into Lake Huron, Mrs. Rice swam toward shore for help. This was secured and the two men were brought ashore. First aid was applied to Dr. Rice's shoulder and he suffered no ill effects from the accident.

Youth Employment Assistance Available

The National Youth Administration hopes to be of assistance to persons between the ages of 16 and 25 who are not regularly engaged in remunerative employment. Youth relief employment may be opened to young members of relief families. Student aid may be provided persons desirous of pursuing their high school and college education who, otherwise, would be financially unable to do so. This program contemplates the offering of aid in the form of part-time employment. The present allotment of funds limits the amount of money that may be given to any one student to an average of $5.00 per month for high school and $15.00 per month for college. A somewhat larger stipend may be available to post-graduate students. It is expected that each student receiving such help will render an equivalent in some useful service.

High school aid plans assistance for boys and girls who are unable to attend high school for want of money for care, lunch, and incidentals. Such attendance may be at public or non-profit schools of high school grade and is to be authorized for youths of 16 years of age or over who belong to families eligible to receive any form of welfare relief. Application may be made through the high school principal, or by writing directly to the National Youth Administration, 601 City National Building, Lansing, Michigan.

College aid, as given under the F.E.R.A. plans of 1934-35, may be available to both graduate and undergraduate students who are unable to continue at college unless they are given the opportunity to earn some money through part-time employment. All applications for such aid must be made directly to the institution which the student desires to attend.

A moderate east wind provided the test for the first win for the Mallon constructed craft, Yucatan, on the triangular course of the Tawas Bay Yachting Association.

Eight sloops were led across the starting line by John MacNaughton's E. She was followed by the Gamble, Sauk, Yucatan, and Sero. The Arab and the Dale were hindered to some extent by fouling each other. The E and the Sauk, followed by the Yucatan, passed the Gamble, while the Sero and Arab rounded the buoy at the beach a short distance ahead.

The Sauk and E engaged in a luffing match that took them off their course and Mallon piloted the Yucatan into the lead on the balloon run to the can. The Gamble passed the Arab, as did the Dale.

Crews jibed balloons at the can and set their course for the Tawas City buoy. The E and the Sauk again had a luffing match and the Yucatan increased her lead. Other positions were maintained.

The leg from Tawas City to the finish line was a beat to windward with the graceful Yucatan having no difficulty in maintaining her established lead. She was trailed by the Poultiers E and Sauk. The Sero was fourth, the Gamble fifth, the Arab sixth and the Dale seventh. The Dale finished in fifth position but her corrected time placed her last. The Aurora did not race.

Sunday's Race

The black hulled E continued her consistent performance of the summer in winning the ninth point race of the season on Tawas Bay. The Yucatan proved that she was a good sea boat by placing second. In third place was the Aurora, followed by the Sauk.

A heavy south wind accompanied by a rolling sea and threatening squalls made several skippers think of their boats and not the race. The Dale, Sero and Gamble did not race.

The E was first over the line. She was closely pressed by the Sauk, Aurora, Yucatan and Arab. The run to the beach made possible a start of sheet. The E was leading as they rounded the beach buoy and started the beat dead to windward to the can. MacNaughton maintained his lead on the beat and the Yucatan passed the Sauk and Aurora. The Arab became fouled on the fish nets and did not round the can buoy, thereby eliminating herself from the race.

The last two legs were ballooners with the wind flattening it and it was with some difficulty that headway was maintained to the finish line.

President's Program Driven Through Congress Before Adjournment—Mussolini Refuses to Abandon His Projected Conquest of Ethiopia.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

LEGISLATIVE action in both house and senate was fast and furious during the closing days of the session. White House pressure was freely used; filibusters were started and stopped; senators and representatives, hot and bothered, were inclined to be quarrelsome. But congress had its orders and it wanted to go home, so the administration program in general was pushed through.

Senator Guffey

One of the most controversial measures on that program, the Guffey coal bill, had been driven through the house by orders from above and threats of a strike, and when it was taken up by the senate every effort to kill it, by eliminating the tax feature, was defeated. During the debate Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, Democrat, created a sensation by denouncing the bill in these words:

"Outside of political circles, it is questionable whether there are five reputable lawyers in the United States who would declare this measure constitutional. However, that is not the worst feature of the bill. The worst feature is the defect and infirmity in the legislative program that we are developing. This nation cannot remain free and happy, if we are to legislate for groups, and beyond all of that, if groups are to legislate for themselves the end of things is not very far distant."

"That is the situation we have confronting us. And to this kind of program the Democratic party is willing to commit itself!"

Senator George was assailing the proposal to set up district boards in the coal industry, which would make their own laws as to trade practices and regulate wages and hours, allocate tonnages and fix prices, with regard only for their own interests.

"This is the type of absolutism from which we revolted to establish this Republic," he declared.

The house gave up the fight against the "death sentence" in the utilities bill and instructed conferees to accept a "compromise" that was pretty much one-sided. This means that all holding companies beyond the second degree are to be sentenced to death by the SEC promptly after January 1, 1938. Even a holding company in the second degree would not escape unless its operations were confined to a single integrated system within a state or within contiguous states.

Both senate and house adopted a resolution making mandatory the embargo on munitions shipments to both belligerents in case of war. This was what the administration did not want, claiming it would tie the hands of the executive so that he could exert no influence toward averting war.

Senate and house accepted the conferees' report on the bill increasing the powers of TVA and legalizing that body's past actions and it was sent to the White House. The senate passed without a record vote the railway bankruptcy amendments recommended by Co-ordinator Joseph E. Eastman, which are designed to prohibit minorities from blocking reorganization plans.

MUSSOLINI is determined to conquer Ethiopia, and all Europe is trembling. It duce evidently feels that his personal prestige is at stake, and to him that means the continuation of the Fascist regime. Anthony Eden and Pierre Laval offered Italy what would amount to a mandate over Halle Selassie's realm, but that was not enough, so the tri-power conference in Paris was declared adjourned. The friendship between France and Italy must be ruptured. Great Britain will insist on action by the League of Nations council when it meets September 4. There is no reason to believe that the council will do more than it did in the case of Japan's seizure of Manchuria, but it seemingly will be forced to denounce Italy's action, and that would be enough to induce Mussolini to withdraw his country from the league. If and when Italy defies the league, that pretentious body, previously defied successfully by Japan and Germany, will amount to little.

After Baron Poppel Alois had submitted the Anglo-French proposition to Mussolini and had received the duke's reply, he told Eden and Laval that his master would be satisfied with nothing less than "annexation of Ethiopia in whole or in part." Laval was furious and directly accused Mussolini of breaking a personal promise made to him when he visited Rome. Eden abruptly brought the conference to a close.

Hurrying back to London, Captain Eden took part in conferences held by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and the members of his cabinet, together with various former ministers, opposition leaders and public men not in office. The situation was admittedly tense and the advice of such men as Lloyd George, Lord Cecil and Winston Churchill was sought by the government. Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, also called in representatives of all the self-governing dominions. It was understood the British government would be prepared fully to honor its obligations under the League of Nations covenant, these including the denouncing of a nation that attacks another member of the league. Of course the air in London was full of rumors of war, but officials gave assurance that Great Britain would move with the greatest caution.

Paris heard unconfirmed reports that Mussolini was trying to negotiate a secret military alliance with Hitler. If such a pact is signed it will greatly increase the chances of another general European war.

SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL, Democratic representative from Indiana, aroused the house to wild cheering by a downright attack on Tom Corcoran, the White House lobbyist who has been charged with trying to intimidate congressmen. Pettengill challenged the house lobby committee to summon Corcoran again and question him about his reported dealing in utility issues on the New York Stock exchange market at the same time he labored for legislation against utilities at Washington.

T. G. Corcoran

The Indiana representative thus brought out into the open the rumors, whispered about the Capitol, that administration lobbyists were profiting secretly by stock market deals in securities affected by legislation for which they were exerting tremendous efforts.

Corcoran once admitted to a committee that he had been a stock market plunger and had made and lost a small fortune.

"In view of this admission," Pettengill told the house, "the rules committee, investigating lobbying, should summon Corcoran and question him as to whether he is now in the market with reference to utility stock."

GRADUALLY the President is bringing all the alphabetical units of the New Deal directly under his control by bringing them under the budget and accounting act. Thirteen of them already have been treated thus by executive order, and more will follow soon. They are required to submit to the budget bureau estimates covering expenditures and to go on a month to month spending basis. At first the heads of these various administrations resented this and blamed Secretary Morgenthau, but when they learned that the President was strong for the plan they quietly gave in.

MORE than 30,000 troops of all branches of the armed service got well started in the great war maneuvers in northern New York which were organized and directed by Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan. The regular army men of the first area and the National Guardsmen of New England, New York and New Jersey participated, and in muddy fields, tangled pine forests, backwoods roads, they had a series of "engagements," troops opposing troops under conditions closely simulating real warfare. An interesting feature was the use of a big fleet of taxicabs from New York city. Pine camp, just south of the Thousand Islands region, was the center of operations. Ranking high officers of the army and military attaches of foreign nations observed the maneuvers.

During the opening days the Twenty-seventh New York division commanded by Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell was pitted in the eastern portion of the 100 square mile maneuver area against the Forty-third New England division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Morris B. Payne. In the western portion of the changing terrain the Forty-fourth New Jersey and New York division, commanded by Maj. Gen. John J. Toffey, opposed the Twenty-sixth Massachusetts division.

JAPAN has been offended by our navy on various occasions, especially by the staging of fleet maneuvers at Hawaii and the Alaskan coast. Now the sensitive islanders should be pleased, for Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt has announced that the fleet maneuvers of 1936 will be held at the Panama canal and on the western coast of Central America. Mr. Roosevelt and the navy high command asserted, not very convincingly, that the shift was not made in response to unofficial Japanese criticism.

WHEN Charles S. Risk, the Rhode Island lawyer who defeated the New Deal candidate for congress recently, entered the house on the arm of Representative Bertrand H. Snell, Republican leader, and was escorted to the speaker's rostrum to take the oath, he was vociferously greeted by the Republicans as a hero whose victory they thought presaged great things for the party next year. Mr. Risk took his seat on his thirty-eighth birthday.

LOYD B. OLSON, governor of Minnesota, on his way to Washington, stopped in Chicago long enough to tell reporters that he intended to be a candidate for the United States senate in 1936. This was interpreted as meaning that he would contest the re-election of Thomas D. Schall, the blind Republican. Governor Olson is a Farmer-Laborite.

IN ONE of those sudden governmental upsets frequent in Latin America, President Jose M. Velasco Ibarra of Ecuador was thrown out of office and Antonio Pons, former premier, was put in his place. It all came about because Ibarra tried to make himself a dictator and imprisoned the leaders of the opposition. The senate objected and Ibarra closed congress. Then the army got into action. Ibarra was arrested by Col. Nicanor Solis, inspector general; the political prisoners were released, and Pons was installed as president.

WILL ROGERS and Wiley Post, crushed to death in Alaska when their plane fell not far from Point Barrow, were brought back to the states for burial by Joe Crosson, their intimate friend, in an airplane. And all their countrymen stood figuratively with bared and bowed heads as the broken bodies were laid to rest. None was too great and none too lowly to pay tribute in words and action to those two fine Americans, one a beloved comedian, humorist and philosopher; the other a leader among the world's aviators. They died as they had lived, adventuring gallantly, and the world is the poorer for their passing.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S cotton textile committee submitted to him certain recommendations to better the industry, and he passed them on to congress for future action. Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper heads the committee and the other members are Secretary of Labor Perkins, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Secretary of State Hull. The report proposed that a friendly agreement be sought with Japan to limit the export of textiles to this country. The committee found that, although the Japanese imports have been small, the American market has been disturbed, with a resultant depression in the industry here.

Secretary Roper

A continuance of the labor standards provided under the NRA code was suggested. To this end it was recommended that the government supplement such voluntary efforts as are being made by administrative and legislative measures which may be feasible to aid workers.

The committee recommended against discontinuance of the cotton processing tax "during the existing economic emergency as reflected by existing price disparities." It held that the tax increases the purchasing power of farmers and thus benefits workers in the cotton textile industry.

The government's cotton loan policy was found to be primarily important to the textile industry through its possible stabilizing effect. Various technical recommendations were made by the report, but the proposition of representatives of the industry that the government virtually subsidize cotton textile exports by an allowance of 7 cents per pound was disapproved.

MINORITY members of the senate and house committees that are investigating the doing of lobbyists started out the week with the determination to find out why Marvin H. MacIntyre, secretary to the President; Lawrence W. Robert, Jr., assistant secretary of the treasury, and Amon G. Carter of Fort Worth, publisher and friend of the Roosevelt family, were all found in the apartment at the Shoreham hotel of Bernard B. Robinson of Chicago, chief lobbyist of the Associated Gas and Electric company. Mr. Robinson himself also was there, and it was said when the door was opened at the knock of the sergeant at arms of the senate a "scene of revelry" was disclosed. For a day or two the news of this affair was not sent out from Washington by the news associations, reportedly because of the efforts of Mr. Carter to have it suppressed entirely. This, too, some of the investigators want explained.

Republican members of the house committee also said they would insist on the interrogation of Undersecretary of the Interior Charles West and Emil Hurja, executive director of the Democratic national committee. West is reputedly the President's lobbyist and Hurja acts in a similar capacity for Postmaster General Farley, and both of them were involved with Tom Corcoran in the utilities "death sentence" lobbying that started the whole inquiry.

When Charles S. Risk, the Rhode Island lawyer who defeated the New Deal candidate for congress recently, entered the house on the arm of Representative Bertrand H. Snell, Republican leader, and was escorted to the speaker's rostrum to take the oath, he was vociferously greeted by the Republicans as a hero whose victory they thought presaged great things for the party next year. Mr. Risk took his seat on his thirty-eighth birthday.

LOYD B. OLSON, governor of Minnesota, on his way to Washington, stopped in Chicago long enough to tell reporters that he intended to be a candidate for the United States senate in 1936. This was interpreted as meaning that he would contest the re-election of Thomas D. Schall, the blind Republican. Governor Olson is a Farmer-Laborite.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT WATCHES AND WAITS

THERE had been a great change in Lightfoot the Deer. Peter Rabbit had noticed it. Sammy Jay had noticed it. So had Blacky the Crow. All three of them understood it. They understood it perfectly. They knew that Lightfoot was watching and waiting for the day which would bring into the Green Forest the hunters with terrible guns seeking to kill him.

As long as the leaves had remained green Lightfoot had wandered about where he pleased, careless of who saw him. He had even visited Farmer coming of the hunters with terrible guns. Sometimes he wished they would come. It would be easier to know what to do. Nothing, you know, is harder than watching and waiting as Lightfoot was doing. He lost his appetite. He could no longer sleep peacefully, but continually awoke with fright. Each day he became more anxious. No sooner was one day ended than he would begin to dread the coming of another day. It was very beautiful in the Green Forest, but Lightfoot saw none of the beauty. Fear destroyed all beauty for Lightfoot.

Peter Rabbit Had Noticed It.

Brown's garden in broad daylight. He had joined Farmer Brown's cows in the Old Pasture and grazed with them contentedly. He had been free of fear.

But now, Lightfoot was like another creature. He didn't seem at all the same animal. It was rarely that he moved about much until after the Black Shadows had crept out from the Purple Hills. It was then that he fed and visited his favorite drinking place at the Laughing Brook. But from the time the first Jolly Little Sunbeam came creeping through the Green Forest at the beginning of day until the Black Shadows chased them out at the beginning of night, Lightfoot remained hidden in thickets or behind tangles of fallen trees in the depths of the Green Forest.

Sometimes he would lie for hours in his hiding place. Sometimes he would stand motionless for the longest time, his big ears cocked forward to catch every little sound, his great, soft eyes watching for the least little movement among the trees, his delicate nose testing every Merry Little Breeze that came his way for the dreaded scent of man.

When he moved about he took the greatest care to move silently. Every few steps he stopped to look, listen and test the air. The snapping of a twig would set him to trembling with fear and suspicion.

Lightfoot was watching and waiting for the coming of the most dreadful thing that can come into the lives of the people of the Green Forest, the

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I am a boy ten years old. I have a rich uncle, but he is very stingy with his money. My birthday is next December, and I asked him to get me a bicycle for a birthday present, and he said it would cost too much money. Then I asked him to buy me a tricycle and he said that would cost too much, too; then he said I should leave the present to him. What do you think he will get me?

Yours truly,
G. HEESTIE.

Answer: In-as-much as he says a bicycle or a tricycle will cost too much, I guess he intends waiting till December and get you an icicle.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I live ten miles away from the near-

DESSERTS AND THINGS

A DESSERT does not need to be either elaborate in its preparation or expensive in cost to be appetizing. Many of the simplest of desserts are the most popular.

This delightful dessert serves fifteen, so it may be cut into half for the ordinary family. Cook six table-spoonfuls of tapioca in boiling water until clear, cool, add a little salt, one cupful of sugar, the juice from a can of pineapple, the juice of two oranges and two lemons. Cook until thick. Cool, then add the pineapple, one cupful of finely broken nuts and a pint of whipping cream beaten stiff.

Two-Two Dessert.
Take the juice of two lemons, the finely mashed pulp of two bananas and two cupfuls of sugar. Add a quart of thin cream, a pinch of salt and freeze.

Dainty Dessert.
Cut, with scissors dipped into cold water, one pound of marshmallows, add one cupful of cut pecan meats, or almonds if preferred; add enough whipped cream to make a mixture to stand up well. ## THE FAMILY REUNION

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THE family reunion will be held again this year. Once more we will renew the mellow friendships, tried and dear. Almost a hundred years ago, this homestead was a dream. A plan told in the candleglow that made young glances gleam.

If these brick walls could speak, they'd tell a tale of love grown old; A cycle of warm hearts that blessed its hospitable fold. A hundred years, a hundred souls that gather once again To testify to far-flung goals, and happy wives and men.

The family reunion! Heaven throws blue skies above! The day is touched with gold that is so wound about with love. And for each guest assembled here, there are too many more That are so far and yet so near, upon a trackless shore.

God bless the family! Make strong its deep, abiding ties, Love that is tended keeps the warmth and beauty that we prize; And even sunset skies are red with cheer in winter weather, When good friends gather, comforted, around a fire together!

asked him what he would like for a birthday present. He asked for a Bible and I gave him one. Since that time he has pestered me with one question till I'm nearly frantic. He keeps asking me to show him what a miracle is. What can I do to demonstrate fully, to him, just what a miracle is?

Truly yours,

G. RUSELEM.

Answer: As he is so annoying with his persistency the best thing to do is this: The next time he asks you what a miracle is, ask him to turn around. The minute he does, give him a swift kick, then ask him if he felt the kick. When he says yes, say to him: "Well if you hadn't, that would be a miracle."

ANNA SHCHETININA has the distinction of being the only woman in all the world who is a full-fledged commander of a steamer. Although she is only twenty-seven years of age, she is an old sea wolf, maritimately speaking, as she has been navigating the seas for 10 years.

Architects Search World for Good Building Stone

Marble Highly Valued From Earliest Times.

Washington.—One of the most strikingly beautiful buildings in Washington is the new United States Supreme court building. Its exterior is fabricated from white marble, while its interior is enhanced with columns and panels of the same stone but richly colored.

"Among the most ornamental of all building stones, marble has been valued by architects from earliest times," says the National Geographic society. "White drums of marble from Mt. Pentelicus reared toward the clear blue sky of Athens, the graceful temples on the Acropolis. Domed Byzantine structures and Roman buildings were floored with mosaics of vari-colored marbles, veined and mottled. Visitors to the Pantheon may tread on a marble floor polished by the pincings of august Romans over 1,800 years ago.

Favored by Sculptors.
"Not only has marble been a popular building stone, but it is the favorite among sculptors. From it Phidias, Praxiteles, Canova, and many other artists carved their masterpieces. Carrara, in northwestern Italy, which supplied Michelangelo with marble for his famous statue of David, still supplies modern sculptors with some of their finest working material. In Carrara, a city of quarries and marble cutting factories, even the humblest of the homes have white marble lintels and steps.

"The most beautiful foreign marbles come from Italy, the French Pyrenees, and Belgium. In the United States, marbles underlie most of the eastern mountains from Vermont to Georgia, and part of the Rocky mountains. Vermont supplies 60 per cent of the amount quarried in this country.

"Marble is merely an altered form of limestone, transformed by heat and strong pressure. Limestone is much softer than marble.

"Limestone is found in many colors ranging from pink and red, through yellow to green and blue. From quarries in Indiana and Kentucky comes the variety best known in the United States.

"Although limestone is durable, it deteriorates under acids in the air and rain, especially under the sulphuric acid contaminating the air of cities. How waters containing chemicals affect the stone is dramatically shown in Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, where subterranean streams have eaten away the beds of limestone, hollowing out vast underground caverns.

Granite is Valuable.
"Granite, igneous rock that has cooled, is a building stone valued for its hardness, strength, and durability. Unlike limestone, it is little affected by chemicals in the air and rain, but abrupt changes in temperature frequently cause it to crack. In regions where the temperature drops 80 degrees in a day, granite has been known to shatter into boulders, gravel, and sand.

"Because it is so hard, the cost of cutting and polishing granite once prohibited its use except in a roughly dressed state. But now that less expensive methods have been discovered, it is one of the most popular building stones.

"Porphyry, another igneous rock, usually a beautiful red in color, was prized by the Romans, but is little employed by modern architects, because of the difficulty and expense in cutting and polishing it.

"New York city's famous 'brown-stone fronts' are made of sandstone, a popular building stone composed of grains of sand held together by a cementing material.

"The new air-conditioned home of the National Geographic society contains stones from many states and foreign countries. Its front steps are of pink and gray North Carolina granite. Limestone blocks and columns of the facade came from Bedford, Ind.,

Pilgrims Take New Highway to Mecca

Jerusalem.—The opening of a new direct route between Iraq and the Hijaz is causing considerable worry in Syria.

The protest is from the merchants of Damascus and outposts on the old Syrian route. On the new route, agreements have been reached with the governments of Iraq and Hijaz for establishment of a sanitary post and a passport office at Idha.

To date 2,000 foreign pilgrims have journeyed over the new highway. Pilgrims from Mecca will not be allowed to carry cameras. The reason for the ban is to prevent photographing of the rites and scenes sacred to the Moslem religion.

and green marble spandrels from the French Alps.

"In the foyer gleam reddish-brown pillars and pilasters of polished Rojo Alicante marble from Spain. Walls are of lustrous Italian Botticino marble, a rich cream color, above a base of Belgian black marble. Brown Sienna and gray Roman travertine form a large eight-pointed star in the floor."

Justus Smith of Beulah, Mich., is telling Miss Lucille Provencher of the Traverse City, Mich., chamber of commerce, how he caught the all-time record Mackinaw trout in Grand Traverse bay. The previous record Mackinaw weighed 39 pounds.

Fence Posts Show Return of Prosperity

Demand Unfailing Barometer to Woodsmen.

Escanaba, Mich.—Woodsmen in the upper peninsula of Michigan do not have to read the agricultural journals in order to get an idea how the farmers in the corn belt and other sections of the country are faring. There is an unfailing barometer of the changing weight of the farmer's pocketbook, and that is the insignificant-looking fence post.

When the farmer is hard pressed, as he has been during the last few depression years, he allows his fences to fall into a state of disrepair. But when money starts to jingle in his jeans again he takes the usual pride in them and becomes a heavy buyer of posts.

The peninsula division of the Chicago & North Western railway is reporting unusually heavy shipments of posts this summer. A large percentage will be used for replacements, but the trend toward diversification of agriculture is also a factor. Western grazing lands, for instance, are being converted into small farms, necessitating the construction of enclosures.

There is a noticeable increase in the summer volume of pulpwood traffic. Railroad officials attribute this upswing to the manufacture of many new paper products, such as table covers, curtains, bakery supplies and wrapping paper.

With the increasing demand for paper products, the lowly jackpine has taken place beside the spruce and balsam pulpwood. This heretofore useless wood is now the important element in producing paper of fine texture such as that used for waxed papers. The United States forest service has worked out plans for considerable reforestation of jackpine and other pulpwood to meet the demands of the paper industries in Michigan and Wisconsin in the future years.

Texas Boy, 15, Harvests

Crop "Raised by Moon"

Mykwa, Texas.—Elmer Alford Fowler, fifteen years old, who farms 15 acres "by the moon" and his weather almanac, is the envy of Texas 4-H club boys.

Elmer, barefoot and in the fifth grade at school, waits for the "full of the moon" to plant and harvest because a "full moon yields a full harvest."

He expects to make 65 bushels of corn per acre. He has harvested 75 bushels of peas from an acre and a half and expects to pick as many more. Elmer farms while his fifty-year-old father, J. A. Fowler, "works out."

"Corn husks are thick, so you can look for a hard winter with lots of rain and cold," he says. He knows all the signs of the zodiac and plans according to "indications."

Elmer's father said he foresaw the depression and traded his $2,000 city home for his farm. Since 1926 value of the property has mounted to $15,000.

Elmer likes to farm because of the freedom. "You can work when you want to and quit when you want to,"

Potatoes and Tomatoes

Growing on Same Vine

Lufkin, Texas.—J. C. Burt, farmer, living near Alto, believes he is well on his way toward raising potato-tomato vines.

In 1933 Burt planted a field of tomatoes. Last year he planted the same field of potatoes. This year he planted tomatoes again, and was surprised to find that some of the vines bore a strange fruit. The vines had potatoes on the roots and tomatoes on the stems.

In a modern electric lamp factory two main classes of lamps are made. The vacuum lamp, so called because every trace of air has been extracted and the lamp hermetically sealed; and the gas-filled lamp, where the air having been similarly exhausted, its place is taken by an inert gas, such as argon or nitrogen—dry and pure—to given pressure. The vacuum is obtained by the use of a mechanical pump, and by its means a vacuum of 400,000th of an atmosphere can be produced.—The Bits Magazine.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's criticism of his idle life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which he must reach, from New York. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. Other members of the party include an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he distrusts Crack. He finds his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and makes a little progress with Barry. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal is directed to Barry's room, instead of his own, and they exchange kisses. Next day he tells her he loves her. She answers that she mustn't love him, without giving any reason. Crack brutally insults Kerrigan. Hal forces him to apologize abjectly, and his feelings of enmity and disgust toward Crack intensify. Barry promises Hal that next day she will reveal the shadow of despair that hangs over her. She tells him that, at her father's urging, she had married a man many years older than she, and had promised her father, on his deathbed, to stick to her husband, "no matter what happened," for ten years. That was four years ago, and despite her knowledge of her husband's unworthiness, she is adamant in her determination to keep her promise, though acknowledging her love for Hal.

"Hadden't really planned to get stuck anywhere," said Hal.
Crack flushed a very little, but his lazy eyes still smiled as he bounced the ball again. Then the others came, and Hal tried to rout the discomfort under his skin by a look at Barry's fresh, unconscious bravery of carriage. She was there, and real: the slick of gold under her hat, the color touched to her smooth cheeks, the clear, young texture of her throat in the white-framed opening. It was impossible to conceive of her—of that man; yet under the habitual perceptions and responses that still commanded Hal's behavior, it was impossible not to try to conceive of him.

They were in Rawlins for a late lunch, with a sort of awed fatigue upon them all at the thought of having covered three hundred and fifty miles since getting up. Mrs. Pulsipher's one contribution before sustenance arrived surprised Hal a good deal: she looked at him severely, almost unfriendly, and said, "You're a fine driver, Mr. Ireland."
Then there was food, and Mrs. Pulsipher was very busy.

"When do you think we might come to Los Angeles?" Sister Anastasia asked Hal; she looked down shyly, sorry to have put so bothersome a question. "Perhaps you cannot say. But there is some one waiting for me in Santa Barbara; and if you could perhaps tell me when we would possibly be there, it would not be bad to telegraph from here—even if we did not come there in time."

Hal borrowed Kerrigan's pocket map and took out his pencil to measure.
"Look," he said, showing her—"if you don't mind traveling hard"—her limpid, gentle eyes deplored the implication that she was the only one to be considered—"we can be in Evanston—there—tonight. Salt Lake City is perhaps a little far. Then tomorrow night we can be in Las Vegas, and the distance from there to Los Angeles is less than what we have done this morning. So day after tomorrow, I should think, the bon Dieu willing." Day after tomorrow; and Barry had said, Los Angeles will end everything. It wasn't true; there was no end.
"Do you think I should telegraph?" she said, and under her modest acquiescence, Hal could see the unpleading trouble.

With a grace that would not have come if he had calculated it, he put his hand over hers on the table. "Sister, telegraph that," he said, smiling tender assurance, "and we will get there."

Her eyes thanked him again, and wished they could show him something that would help him too.

After lunch she went to telegraph. Kerrigan with her, and the Pulsiphers disappeared in search of souvenirs and popcorn. Crack sat on the running-board of the car, his narrow body basking in the sunlight as his eyes did in their own pleasant thoughts. When Barry came from seeing Dr. Caligari's lunch, Hal went to her and said, "Ride with me this afternoon."
"I think I'd better not," she said thoughtfully.
"I'll be good—I swear I'll be good," said Hal.

She looked at him in quick remorse. "Darling, I didn't mean that. It's Sister Anastasia. She's worried now, poor dear thing. She dreamt about her brother. Sometimes she held my hand this morning. If that helps, I'd like to be with her."

He tried not to look disappointed—smiled and leaned over to push his fist against Doctor Caligari's muzzle, wet and cool from a drink, but already panting again. "Right," he said. "I know. I hope to God we get there before her brother dies."

"Hal," she said, and he straightened up. "I've got to cheat, once." She looked down wonderingly at his mouth, then back at his eyes, and her quick whisper said, "I love you."

She went toward the door of the car, and Crack lounged up to open it. "Don't like the sunlight?" he said, but she got in without appearing to have heard him, her attention all for Doc's mistrust of Crack's courtesy. Crack shut the door and sat down again, speculating drowsily on Hal. "Like the sunlight," he said. "Like the way it bites on your skin, through your clothes."

Barry's whisper repeated itself, quickly, softly, over and over in Hal's running blood. Think of nothing but that, you fool—nothing but that and the power, the omnipotence that rushes in it: there's nothing will stand against you—nothing will dare haunt you. Then he heard the echo of Crack's slow words and focused his look. "Mm," he said in absent flatness, "so do I."

"Moonlight," said Crack, his shy smile spreading a little, "doesn't bite on your skin, but it's nice." He kept looking at Hal as if he expected him to say something. "There'd ought to be a good moon tonight."

"Ought?" said Hal. He leaned over to unclip the hood and look at the oil gauge, the private waiting of Crack's blue eyes out of his vision, but only partly dismissed.

For more than an hour, Hal and Kerrigan didn't speak beyond monosyllables; yet it was as if the deepening of their sympathy had become tangible within the huge encompassment of this country—vast sweeps of sun-baked space under the sky, gigantic features definitely cleft from the petrified rafters of the world itself, sharp aspects balanced in unbreathing clearness—so very gradually shifted by the mortal hurry of the car. When Kerrigan grunted, or Hal murmured some single exclamation to himself, it was acknowledgment of what they not only watched, but felt, interpreted together. Somehow the awe of profligate natural grandeur and the tonic of single human understanding were akin for Hal—not in their silent speech, but in their teaching to his unflinching spirit, his once disdainful, once indifferent, unflinching spirit.

One low, baking town commemorated the Overland Stage route with an old coach, weathered and brittle but still holding the grace of its curved underbody, the quaintness of its little windows. Beyond, there was an emergency landing field—red-and-white striped hut, beacon, and boundaries, arbitrarily fresh and trim in the middle of infinite emptiness. And a littered roadside stand or two offered incongruous memorial to another brave tradition in the name, "Pony Express Bar-B-Q."

Somewhere beyond the bare, dry, sage-tufted basin of the Divide, they came on road construction, the surface leaving no doubt that it was necessary. For five miles they bumped slowly on into harder going—so slowly at last that the magpies at a dead coyote, limply huddled against some white thistle poppies beside the road, didn't start up until the car bounced out of a hole abreast of them. "D—n, this is awful," said Hal. Kerrigan said, "Stop at that car up there, and I'll ask the fella what they've got that's better."

The fella said there were eight more miles of this, and after that a good deal more, but there was a sideroad half a mile west there, and if you turned south on that and kept bearing west you couldn't lose the way and you'd come into the route again after the worst was over. So they turned off in half a mile, lumbered across a rocky ditch that scraped Raspustin's undersides: but there was the dusty tracks of other cars ahead and the going was much better. Then Hal drove smartly around a twist onto an outcrop of jagged rock in the middle of the road: there was a bump, a crack, and a ripping sound underneath, and with a lifeless sigh Raspustin rolled to a sedate, silent stop.

"Waterloo! Waterloo! Waterloo! Morne plaine!" said Kerrigan. "Here's a situation."

"What's the matter?" Pulsipher asked, leaning forward.

"I think there may be something wrong with the car," said Kerrigan. "Oh," said John.

As Hal got out, he said to Kerrigan, "How far do you make it we've come from the highway?"

"Bout five miles," said Kerrigan.

THE AZORES

Modern Wheels Sing a Discordant Note in Rural Azores.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

LITTLE more than 1,000 statute miles from European mainland and about 1,300 miles from Newfoundland, in latitude a little north of Lisbon, a little south of New York, lies the most westerly of the nine Azorian islands.

Fast steamers from New York reach Ponta Delgada, metropolises of the Azores, in five and a half days. Sea-planes have flown across from Newfoundland between dawn and dusk. Three hospitable harbors in this friendly archipelago await the coming of commercial seaplanes, which will form another link between the New world and the Old.

Closely allied as they are with Portugal, of which they form an integral part politically, these fertile green islands, with their lush pastures and mist-wreathed mountains, long ago turned their faces toward the West, sending their frugal, industrial sons to the United States, where, before 1929, there was probably one Azorian to every two left at home. Most of them are found in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and California.

More than once on the streets of Azorian towns, a traveler is approached by a stranger who doffs his hat and politely inquires: "You are an American?"

When you assent, your new acquaintance informs you he voted in New England or California, but was born in the Azores; was "back home to see the old folks," or "here until times are better in the States."

From a rounded hilltop back of a rainbow-tinted town, one looks past oblong fields bordered by high stone walls of dark-gray lava to tile-roofed, many-windowed buildings stretching between gardens and parks along the curving coast. All about is the trilling, piping, and fluting of birds. In the fields barefoot men sing as they toil.

Portugal's "Islands Adjacent."

In the Fifteenth century, the valliant ocean-mapping Portuguese colonized these islands and, save for 60 years of Spanish rule, have governed them ever since.

The islands, of volcanic origin, stretch for about 375 miles from northwest to southeast, in three severed groups with clear channels between. Corvo, smallest and by far the most primitive, lies farthest north; Flores, beautiful and well watered, farthest west.

To the southeast, across a tempestuous stretch of sea, is the central group; Fayal, seat of the ocean conical mountain; Sao Jorge, with its rich pastures, exporting excellent cheese; Graciosa, with "more wine than water"; Terceira, most interesting historically, preserver of old customs.

Another wide channel and the traveler reaches Sao Miguel, which the British and Americans call St. Michael's, largest and most important of the group, with Ponta Delgada, chief city of the archipelago; and, again to the south, Santa Maria, first to be discovered and colonized.

"Islands adjacent" is Portugal's official designation of Madeira and the Azores, the last named, as one wit has remarked, being adjacent only to one another. In Portuguese the name is Acores, which signifies "hawks."

The wide expanse of ocean on every side and the force of the encompassing winds tend to give the newcomer a feeling of isolation. This lessens as the weeks pass, in spite of the provoking sight of many big ocean liners, which steam past the Azorian capital with only the blast of the siren as a nod of recognition.

Portuguese mail boats, leaving Lisbon twice each month, come by way of Funchal, Madeira, and reach Ponta Delgada in four days. One of these ships goes only as far north as Fayal; the other goes beyond Fayal to Flores, touching six times a year at lonely, storm-harassed little Corvo. The round trip from Ponta Delgada to the northern islands can be made in one week.

Motorboats and sailing vessels also ply, when weather permits, between insular ports.

Independent of the World.

There is a fruit and passenger line of small ships, with semimonthly service between Ponta Delgada, London, and Hamburg. Italian, French, and Greek transatlantic liners stop at the Azorian capital. Ponta Delgada and Horta, with their adequate artificial breakwaters, are havens for ships in need of fuel, provisions, or repairs. Cruising ships crossing the North Atlantic now and then include the Azores on their itinerary.

To the quarter of a million Azorians their temperate, agriculturally productive archipelago is a complete little world in itself. For their food supply these islanders are practically independent of lands beyond. They produce their own cereals, vegetables, fruits, meat, milk, butter, cheese, and eggs. They make sugar from the beet, spirits from the sweet potato, press their own grapes into wine, "roll their own" tobacco, "curl their own" tea. Their seas abound in fish.

Their buildings are constructed from the volcanic basalt of the islands. Furniture is made from native woods. They manufacture linen from home-grown flax and woolen garments from sheep's wool. Luxuries are imported, chiefly from the Portuguese mainland; but, should every ship sailing these seas fail to call at the "Western Islands," the Azorians could survive.

Ponta Delgada's religious festival in honor of Santo Cristo dos Milagres (Our Lord of the Miracles), is one of the Azores most striking feasts to tourists. The devout worship an image called locally "Sant' Crist'." This image, revered for nearly 400 years, is remarkable for the number of precious stones with which it is adorned. When a native of Sao Miguel prospers in the New world, a portion of his first savings is usually sent to his beloved Sant' Crist'.

The festival begins on a Thursday with the arrival in town of farmers bringing 50 head of cattle to be slaughtered as meat for the poor. Banners wave; rockets shoot skyward in broad daylight; a band plays.

Worship With Skyrockets.

On the following day the meat, with bread, is blessed and distributed. On Saturday the sacred image is conveyed with ceremony from its home in an old convent to the Church of Esperanca (hope), next door. That night thousands kneel before it. Not only from the rural district of Sao Miguel, but from the neighboring island of Santa Maria, worshippers flock to the capital. The facade of the church glows with electric lights, adjacent buildings on the public square are illuminated, and a line of flaming arches stretches across the streets. There is a band concert, with fireworks and skyrockets, the latter being closely associated with religious ceremonies in all Portuguese lands.

On Sunday afternoon comes the procession, when the image, accompanied by the clergy and hundreds of laymen, is conveyed through the city and back to the convent. Men and women of distinction, of the middle class, of the peasantry, all participate. Embroidered hangings drape the balconies. The streets are strewn with incense (Pittosporum) leaves, aromatic fennel, and fresh blossoms. All kneel as the image, under its canopy of native-made feather flowers, is born past.

One is disappointed that so few old native costumes are to be seen on the streets during these festival days, but glad that one, at least, still survives. It is the capote e capello, distinctly Azorian, the woman's long, dark-blue cloth cape, circular in shape, with a large hood of the same material, resembling a coal scuttle. It is amusing to see two capotes stopping for a friendly gossip. The scuttlers meet and only gesticulating hands are visible.

The shrouding of the woman's head and shoulders is a relic of centuries of Moorish rule on the Iberian peninsula. This particular garment may be of Flemish origin, brought by early colonists from Flanders. Some Azorians believe it owes its being to the period when these islands were ruled by Spain.

The hood is not always the same, being larger on the islands of Santa Maria and Sao Jorge, more stiffened with buckram and whalebones in Fayal. The young moderns scorn it; but, conservative, convenient, protective, and long-lived, it is still worn by some of the older women, especially for early mass. If the wearer happens to see somebody on the street whom she wishes to avoid, presto! the hood is pulled farther forward and she is within her own fortress.

Currents in Heart After Death

Researches carried on at the University of Konigsburg show that electrical current may be detected in the heart as long as half an hour after breathing has ceased in cases of poisoning from carbon monoxide and illuminating gas. Artificial respiration alone is useless in cases where respiration and heart action apparently has ceased unless it is accompanied by massage of the heart by thumping and agitating the heart region 70 times a minute by rhythmic elastic blows that give rise to action currents in the heart.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES
By Editha L. Watson

THE CHERRY COW GHOST

DID you ever hear of a haunted mine?

If all abandoned mines are not haunted, they ought to be. The fallen buildings, the caved-in tunnels, and the general atmosphere of desolation and decay fairly demand a ghost or two to complete the picture.

The old Cherry Cow mine, in eastern Arizona, had a ghost. It once had been a pretty fair gold mine—and Mike Church, its discoverer, made enough out of it to buy a nice little house and an orchard, where he tried to settle down and spend his days in comfort. But Mike, like the rest of the breed known as prospectors, could not be happy in such a setting. He would wander away without a word and disappear for weeks and months, only to return again, weary but happy. He had been off prospecting—hunting for another Cherry Cow.

During his absences, a young man named Bill Richards, who lived nearby, would take care of Mike's place. He did this just as a gesture of friendliness, because he liked the old fellow, and when Mike was at home he would regale Bill with tales of wonderful mines and their equally wonderful treasures.

He had many good words to say for the old Cherry Cow, as well, and he enjoyed telling about the days when he had several men working there, taking out "some mighty good-lookin' ore—yes, sir!" But the ore had run out, and so had Mike's interest in the mine.

One fall morning, seeing no smoke rising from the little house in the orchard, Bill went over to investigate. As he had suspected, Mike was not there, but a letter lay on the kitchen table, and this was unusual. Picking it up, Bill saw that it was addressed to him. He opened it and read the misspelled scrawl within:

"Dere Bill—I'm off on a trip a long, long one this time. If I don't come back in a yr you take the place and everything I got its all yures this is my will. Mike."

Bill was touched. He knew the old man meant it, but he hoped that little weather would find him in his little house again, telling about his new adventures. So he kept up his visits, saw to the fruit, and looked every day, as time passed by, for Mike's return. Winter came, and spring. Then the rumors of a ghost began to spread about. Someone had gone up to the abandoned Cherry Cow shaft, and had seen a shadow that flitted out of sight and could not be found again. A miner who passed that way after dark reported a strange light that seemed to shoot straight out of the shaft. A cowboy who rode by said that his horse had snorted and shied as he passed, though nothing was to be seen or heard.

Aroused to suspicion by these stories, Bill Richards went up to the Cherry Cow to investigate. He found nothing but the shaft from which Mike's modest stake had come, with the rotting boards that had once been a shaft-house leaning above it. He called, wondering if his eccentric old friend could possibly be about, but a scolding blue-jay gave him the only answer he heard.

The year went by, and no one knew what had become of Mike Church. At last, urged by his friends, Bill produced the letter, and while it was not a legal will, since no other claimants to the estate were found it became Bill's property.

By now the Cherry Cow was avoided by everyone who had business up that way. No one wanted to be frightened by a ghost, and even the strong-minded who claimed that there were no such things as ghosts saw no reason for going near the mine. At last an easterner came to town, hunting for a mine, and wandered up to the Cherry Cow.

He liked the place. Although Mike had always contended that his ore had been a stray pocket, the newcomer said he believed that he could find a vein. He became so enthusiastic that the stories of the ghost merely amused him. "I'll lay that ghost," he promised, "I'll take the spell right off the Cherry Cow."

And so he bought the mine from Bill Richards. He hired a small crew of men to clean out the shaft and unwater the sump.

But before long one of his men came to him. "The water's down a foot," he told the easterner. "There's something down there—the Mexicans won't go on mucking out—they're afraid to touch it."

"I'll go down myself and see. It's that fool ghost, I suppose, that's got them worried. Well, I don't want any ghosts around here." And he hurried to the shaft.

... They knew that it was what remained of Mike because they found his old-fashioned watch. The burial was informal and hasty, for there were only bones and shoes and a few shreds of clothing left. The Mexicans quit, of course, and it was some days before an American crew could be hired.

Bill Richards went up alone and said a little prayer for Mike at the grave. An the ghost never haunted the Cherry Cow again. But Mike was right—the easterner never found his vein, either.

Disinfect Your Drains

You can easily disinfect your drains and prevent odors in your bathroom. At regular intervals, as often as you think necessary, use the following solution: Dissolve two ounces of chloride of lime in one gallon of water. Pour this down the drains, allow it to remain for a couple of minutes, and then flush.

Deep Wells

Paris is boasting that it has now the deepest well in the world. This new source of supply for the north-eastern corner of the city is sunk 2,850 feet and will yield 1,600,000 gallons a day. The well is fed from a sheet of subterranean water that extends at a variable depth under the French capital. A writer in the London Spectator says that the water has its source in the Ardennes mountains. The existence of this reservoir has long been known; a hundred years ago several localities availed themselves of it.

Smuggling Guns to Ethiopia New Game

Rumrunning Adventurers Now Turn to Arms.

Paris, France.—Europe's gangsters and international adventurers, who have found time on their hands since bootlegging booze into America became a dead industry, have discovered a new racket in gunrunning into Ethiopia.

While the chancelleries are busy trying to find a solution to the quarrel between Benito Mussolini and the emperor of Ethiopia, Haile Selassie I, gunrunning racketeers are busy rustling into East Africa the munitions which will perhaps blaze when talking ceases.

With some 500,000 men to resist the might of Italy, and the need for airplanes, tanks and motorized artillery, the ruler of Ethiopia has sent emissaries to munition plants of Europe to try to obtain the equipment necessary to carry on war against the white invader of the kingdom founded, according to legend, by Solomon and the queen of Sheba.

Secret Orders Placed.

Owing to the ban on export of arms, the Ethiopians have not been able to buy enough war stocks, although the emissaries have offered gold from their fabled mines. Some secret orders have been passed and ships, under sealed instructions, have sailed mysteriously from several ports in Europe down through the Suez canal and the Red sea.

Normally, they carry trinkets and western goods for the emperor's people, but in reality they have been loaded to the Pilsnoll line with powder and arms.

The gunrunning racketeers are supplementing this traffic. Mostly Greeks, Germans, Armenians and other individuals of no defined nationality, they have spread their activity from the capitals of Europe to the shores of the Red sea and the inland frontiers of the emperor's kingdom.

Their agents throughout the western capitals are charged with the mission of buying all available rifles, shotguns and revolvers and, if possible, machine guns. These are then shipped to the nearest port, where bartering goes on with the captains of vessels bound east of Suez.

Racketeers Charter Ships.

The smugglers' agents offer big rewards to sea captains who are willing to use up available space in loading guns for the East African war. As, however, the number of vessels available on the regular routes is limited, the racketeers have been chartering vessels of their own, idle tramp steamers, private yachts and even sailing craft.

Crammed full to the decks with grenades and rifles and machine guns, they steer for the Red sea, unload their cargoes and rush them over the caravan routes by camel and mule pack to the frontiers of Ethiopia.

Here the Ethiopians, hungry for the guns which they need to defend their soil, are ready with precious gold-dust tied in cloth, which they pay to the gun traders.

Throughout the vast desert wastes of Arabia and the Yemen, where Lawrence roused the tribes against the Turks in the World war, the gun traders today are searching the land for guns which they can ship across the stretch of water which separates the Arabian state from Africa.

Vexed by Germany

Archer Kills Snake With Bow and Arrow

Fresno, Calif.—Spinners of fanciful rattlesnake yarns often wander further from the truth than fishermen, but Arthur H. Shipley, deputy county superintendent of schools, vouches for this one:

Shipley spied a 3-foot snake along the roadside one day. Anxious to get a set of rattles, he searched for something with which to kill the reptile. Clods of dirt served only to enrage the snake.

Finally he thought of the bow and arrow in the back of his car.

With only three shots Shipley pinned the rattler to the ground in three different places. A fourth arrow pierced the head and killed the snake.

Shipley has a set of rattles as evidence.

HUMOR By LEONARD A. BARRETT

"Humor is the clear blue sky of the soul." The biographers of Abraham Lincoln tell us about his frequent use of humor. Some members of his cabinet could not understand the reason for his resort to the relaxation of a good laugh. In many grave situations facing the government he would be found reading a funny story or telling a joke. It was Lincoln's saving grace. It is doubtful if he could have lived through some of those trying times had he not been able to see the humorous side of things.

As every cloud has a silver lining, so many a vexing problem has its funny side, if we can only see it. Perhaps this explains why some persons are able to endure great hardships with a sort of indifferent attitude and frequently with a smile. "Fool's luck," some call it—not so, for humor dispels the mists and enables us to see our problems in a clearer light. The per-problems in a clearer light. The person who is too seriously minded many times studies a problem from a one-sided point of view and his judgment becomes distorted.

Have you ever noticed the effect of humor at a lecture? The audience has been held at a tension for some time, a joke is related, the audience relaxes and is now ready for another argument. That audience is not unlike our daily experiences. We are keyed up to a high tension, nerves are taut and our thinking likely to be clouded. The grace of humor breaks the tension, we relax and with renewed vitality are ready to begin again.

Some persons say that humor cannot be cultivated. That is not true. A person can develop the sense of humor just like any other mental attitude, some with more success than others but all with some degree of progress.

Study persons until you discover the humorous eccentricities of their natures.

Our troubles never seem so serious to others as they do to ourselves. Read books which portray humor. Nothing is more contagious than a good laugh. When an audience begins to laugh, though you may not know the reason, instinctively you smile and may even join the crowd. Humor is many times more convincing than argument. Presentation of the ludicrous side of a situation has won many a debate. Wit demands imagination; but humor, the opposite of pathos, demands reason and reality. A sense of humor may help you to win your battle and solve your problem; for:

"Good humor is the clear blue sky of the soul."

The Household By Lydia Le Baron Walker

THE woman who does her own laundry work can save herself effort in many little ways which are sometimes overlooked. If at a summer camp, or by the sea, or in the country, the bed linen can be used rough-dried. The term scarcely applies to the neatly folded and well-smoothed linens when they are done with the idea of no ironing. We might well call them smooth-dried, rather than rough-dried. In order to give them the smooth finish, the following methods should be followed:

Shake the sheets, pillow cases, and towels well after wringing them, as this immediately lessens the creases. Hang them on the line so that the wind direction is against the surface, not striking the pieces from the side, which makes the material blow in folds and not out straight.

Put sheets over the line so that half falls each side of it, bringing the crease straight along the middle, which would be the very place it would come if the sheet were ironed. An imperative necessity is to keep the sheet stretched its full width or length, according to how it is doubled over the line. This does not mean that it should be pulled taut across the line, but that it falls without folds over the line for the breeze and the sun to dry the material unwrinkled.

Pillow Cases and Towels

Hang pillow cases hems down, and with the other end straight along the clothes line. Then the wind will blow them smooth, or the sun will cause the evaporation of the water from uncreased surfaces. Hang towels straight with one edge along the clothes line, so they will dry evenly.

When it is time to take the clothes down, let no wrinkles or folds get into them except in the folds desired. Fold the sheets as they are taken down. If two do this it is easier, but one can do it successfully by folding the sheet in half again while it is on the line, and then throwing it over the line and folding it in half again that way. The rest of the folding is easy. Keep the wide hem on the outside. When the clothes are in the house, lay each sheet flat and folded, on the table, and smooth it with the palms outspread. Lay away, flat and smooth, and no ironing, which is hot work, will be required.

Fold towels and pillow cases as you take them from the line and smooth them as described before laying them on the shelves. It takes a few moments to take in the wash as described and only a few moments more to palm-press them. I have done it many times at my summer place and know whereof I speak.

When you go on your vacation be careful not to let the weather just prior to your starting off influence you in your choice of a wardrobe. Be prepared with proper clothes for different weather. There is sure to be a change, and you want to look well and suitably dressed all the time.

There are many styles of rainy day togs that are light in weight, inexpensive in price, and becoming. There are rain coats and capes, and even rubber skirts to drape over frocks, and capes to go with them for complete protection.

Be sure to pack one warm frock.

Not only is it uncomfortable to be chilly, but a person looks far from the best when too thinly clad. Cold shows in the countenance. There is a pinched look that betrays that chilly feeling, and everyone will be commiserating you either vocally or silently. And who wants that? Look warm and cheerful, and you will instill an element of pleasure by your very appearance, and thus add a note of popularity to yourself.

Take along sheer costumes for hot weather, and look as cool as you can. It is pleasant to see some one who looks crisp and cool when weather is sweltering. Even at seashore and mountain resorts, there are occasional such days. Be ready for them.

The detachable cape, lined with dark brown french jersey, lends a military air to this smart three-piece suit. Brown and rust rabbit hair and french spun yarn are woven into the wide herring-bone pattern. Winged effect turban of brown nora.

Varnishing Precaution

The formation of blisters on a varnished surface may be due to underlying spots of grease, sap or moisture, to excessive heat or to direct exposure to the sun during the process of drying. To avoid the possibility of such a mishap be sure the surfaces to be varnished are clean, grease-free and absolutely dry—also that there is no direct sunlight and that the temperature is well below the gay "nineties."

Preparation for Painting

Jane Stewart Davis in Better Homes and Gardens advises the home craftsman to be sure that porch or garden furniture is thoroughly clean before beginning to paint. Soap and water can be used if all the soap is removed—any soap left on the furniture damages the finish. Water containing a little ammonia is very easily rinsed. Grease can be removed with gasoline or turpentine without difficulty.

Different Ways of Making Rugs

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The making of rag rugs has interested needleworkers for hundreds of years. One very good reason for this is that rugs are practical and wanted in every home. The larger the rug the harder the work; the weight increases as the work progresses. Making a rug of motifs and then assembling takes the hard labor out of rug making and the work becomes interesting. Work these motifs in spare time at home or elsewhere and, when all are finished, assemble.

Folder No. 532 contains a lot of information about making the hexagon motif in various sizes in hexagon shaped rugs and in various color combinations. Hexagon motifs are crocheted in any size and color scheme according to your own idea. Amount of material and all the stitches are given and other hints of value to rug makers. A new kind of chart for selecting your colors gives you an opportunity to see what your rug looks like before you get ahead with the work. You can get some wonderful ideas from this folder on "Different Ways to Make Rugs." It will be mailed to you upon receipt of 10 cents.

When to Stand and When to Sit

To know when to stand and when to sit down is something that enters into the amenities of social life. There is an etiquette about it which extends farther, and becomes a matter of patriotic expression, and of the courtesies of concert halls. The correct practice of these seeming trifles is an evidence of good breeding, and so becomes important. There are times when boys and girls, and men and women all follow the same customs in these observances. Also there are times when boys and men follow one set of rules, while adult women follow another.

In school children are taught to stand when the flag is saluted, and this practice continues throughout life. They are also taught to stand when the national anthem is sung and when they hear it sung. These are patriotic observances. The pupils would be reprimanded if careless about these rules. When traveling in foreign countries the same rule holds. Each country expects its citizens to show this respect to the emblem and the voice of the native land as thus expressed.

One of the immediate evidences of good breeding is standing of men in the presence of women. They remain standing until all the women in the room are seated. Boys are instructed either at home or the best boys' schools that immediately a woman enters, whether young or old, to spring to their feet. When they are older they continue to rise, but by that time they have acquired an easy and accustomed manner, rising and seating themselves unobtrusively, so that if a lady remains standing rather long, they do not appear too formal.

Since boys and men remain standing as mentioned, women should be very careful to seat themselves without unnecessary delay. I have seen young women, occasionally, stand chatting so long with one or another of the men, or women that it was very awkward for the other men in the group to remain standing gracefully. The women should never be unmindful of their rules any more than should the men.

A man always rises, when a woman is introduced to him, whether he is out of doors or in, or seated at a table, as sometimes happens in restaurants when one group greets another. The men should rise as soon as party halts by the table, if there are ladies in the group. Women rise for introductions to other women, but not necessarily when men are presented. It is no breach of etiquette either way, except to remain seated when an elderly woman is presented. By the way, if the man is one of distinction, the woman, especially if young, is presented to him, which is a reversal of the custom.

In concert halls when the leader of a symphony enters it is correct form for the audience, both men and women, to rise.

U. S. Had Biggest Schooner

Most of the modern American schooners date from the war, when bottoms were so precious that they would pay for themselves in a single voyage, as in the California gold rush days. A few are pre-war. They are wooden-hulled, carry three, four or five masts. The United States could claim the only seven-masted schooner ever built anywhere, the Thomas W. Lawson, which capsized off the Scilly Isles in 1907. There have been several six-masted since then, all of which are now gone or laid up.

Deafened Author Describes Joy of Hearing with Acousticon

Ernest Elmo Calkins, author of "Louder Pleas" and other works, in a foreword to fellow sufferers advises reading the booklet, "Defeating Deafness," by Isabelle Beglan.

"You who read this and I who write it have one thing in common. We both know what it means to be hard of hearing. I have been deafened practically all my life and have now become worse. Whatever you may feel at this present moment about your affliction, be sure I have known that stage of it, for I have been through them all."

"With a lifetime experience with this exasperating handicap, I can say to you with the utmost confidence there is no thrill like that of being able to hear again after years of baffling and embarrassing disappointment. The whole world takes on a new radiance as though another window had been opened."

"Therefore, I urge you to read this little book ('Defeating Deafness') earnestly and thoughtfully. Take it to heart and qualify to cope with your problem. It may prove to be the turning point of your life. The first step is the hardest, to admit one is deafened, admit it to oneself and to the world; but the compensations outweigh the penalties, as you will find."

The booklet referred to by Mr. Calkins is available to the hard of hearing without cost. You may simply write to (postcard will do) ACOUSTICON, Dept. 1171, 580 Fifth Ave., New York, for your free copy and learn how deafening may be successfully defeated. There is no obligation whatsoever.

White Pine Blister Rust Found At Van Ettan Lake

Another infected white pine blister rust location was found recently in Isosco county, according to advice from the state department of agriculture at Lansing today.

The discovery was made on Loud's Island, center of Van Ettan Lake, on Wednesday, August 14, by Robert I. Thompson, scouting for the blister rust control campaign. Mr. Thompson, is the Federal agent in charge of operations in the Lower Peninsula.

Van Ettan Lake is located in the extreme northeast corner of Isosco county, just north of the village of Oscoda, and outside of the boundaries of the Huron National Forest and the Isosco State Game Refuge.

This location, the first new one reported in 1935, for the Lower Peninsula, is approximately twenty miles north of the closest white pine infection which had been discovered previously in Isosco county. This county is one of the few in the Lower Peninsula in which the disease is to be found.

The infection is confined to one tree, and that tree apparently developed the disease in 1930. Failure of the disease to spread is attributable to the fact that all Ribes have been removed from the island, which is 44 acres in extent.

White pine blister rust, which destroys pines it attacks within five years, cannot spread without the aid of Ribes bushes which act as host plants. Those particularly favorable to carrying the disease are cultivated black currants and wild gooseberries and currants of every variety. It is by the eradication of these bushes that the disease is controlled.

The Canada Goose

The Canada goose is the best known and most highly valued of the several species of wild geese that breed each summer in the far reaches of the Northwest territory. Nests of the Canada goose have been found as far north as Great Bear lake through which the Arctic circle passes.

Ears of Corn on Stalk

The number of ears of corn may be anywhere from one to one-half dozen or more on the same plant, while the number of kernels to the ear may vary between 500 and 1,000 or more. The golden bantam types of sweet corn for example, have smaller ears with fewer kernels than most other types and 500 would be an average for this type.

Coal Tar Products

The discovery of maueverine by Perkins in 1856 was the beginning of a most remarkable era in which materials never known to man and not found anywhere in nature were produced in rapid succession by the chemist from coal tar.

Missionary Work in Africa

Missionary efforts in Africa began more than 100 years ago when six American missionaries and their wives went to Transvaal and Natal.

Quick and Mark loaded the bases with no outs. H. Lixey, next up, leaned on one of Rolak's pitches but the line drive went straight at Whitehouse who had an easy time then to double Mark off first. Cunningham was purposely passed and Noel grounded out to end what started out like a big rally. Had H. Lixey's drive gone a little to either side of Whitehouse it would undoubtedly have cleaned the sacks.

Quick's fine throw home to cut a run off at the plate in the third inning was the outstanding fielding play of the contest.

M. Lixey pitched nice ball for the Tawas team but his mates could not give him the support necessary to win. In addition to doing a good job on the mound, Mervyn took a big hand in the locals' attack, clouting out a double and two singles in four trips to the plate and scoring two runs. Mark was a close second with a triple and two singles in five times up. Although Rolak was found for 14 safeties he fared better than his opponent, getting out of several tight spots without damage. Lixey struck out eight men and Rolak whiffed five. Each allowed two bases on balls.

Next Sunday the locals will play their final game of the schedule, meeting Gladwin on its diamond in a postponed game. In the event Tawas wins this contest it will place the home boys into a tie for first place position and a play-off will then be necessary to determine the title winner.

Ohio's First Settlement

Ohio was settled soon after the Revolutionary war, which made "the West" a part of the new republic. The first permanent settlement was established at Marietta by a land company. This was called the Ohio company, and was formed in 1787 in New England by Revolutionary officers, with a view to opening up the West. The government sold the company 1,500,000 acres, and the company recruited settlers and resold to them. In the winter of 1787-88 the first party set out from the east and arrived April 7, 1788, at the spot chosen for a town, at the junction of the Muskingum and Ohio rivers.

Marks "D" and "C" on Silver Some New York silversmiths of the late Eighteenth and early Nineteenth century marked their pieces with the letter "d" or "c," presumably meaning dollar or coin. Early in the Nineteenth century the word "coin" was sometimes stamped on plate. As the use of this word was open to some question, certain states passed laws requiring plate so marked to be 900 parts fine, and that the word "sterling" should indicate silver of 925 parts fine, the English standard. Sterling as a mark of quality appears on American plate from about 1865.

Many in India Illiterate

India's population, equal to all of Europe, exclusive of Russia, is still 90 per cent illiterate.

Important Changes in Graduation Requirements

The Board of Education, at its regular meeting in June, made some important changes in the graduation requirements. These requirements are now the same as the entrance requirements for the literary college requirements of the University of Michigan. Two major and two minor sequences, making ten subjects in all, are required. The other six subjects, to complete the sixteen necessary to graduate, may be selected from any that is offered by the high school. A major sequence is composed of three subjects in the same department, and a minor sequence consists of two subjects from the same department. The four sequences may be selected from the following five: Mathematics, history, language, science, and English. A major in English is required of all. Physics may count either in the science or the mathematics sequence.

The subjects in the five sequences, from which a selection of four must be made, in the local high school are as follows:

- Science—Botany (tenth grade), chemistry (11 or 12 grade), physics (11 or 12 grade).
- Mathematics—Algebra (9 grade), geometry (10 grade), physics (11 or 12 grade), algebra (11 or 12 grade).
- History—European history (10 grade), American history (11 grade), economics-civics (12 grade).
- English—English I (9 grade), English II (10 grade), English III (11 or 12 grade), English IV (11 or 12 grade).
- Latin—Latin I (10 grade), Latin II (11 grade).

Because of the difficulty in making the adjustment in some cases, the graduation requirements of the past few years, or those which were recently made, it is recommended that all members of this class who possibly can do so should meet the new requirements, as the meeting of these requirements is apt to be of more benefit to them than the meeting of the older requirements.

Change in Text Books

The text in fourth and sixth grade geography has been changed from Smith's to the Atwood-Thomas. The members of the fifth and seventh grades will use the Smith text, as the most of the pupils in these two grades already have this book. The ninth grade citizenship class will use a revised edition of the text which has been used in this class for several years. The text has been so completely changed by the revision that it will be impossible to use the old edition.

Shamrock, Ancient Plant

The shamrock, being a form of clover, is one of the most ancient plants in Ireland and was the "seam rog" in Gaelic. It is one among many trifoliate. The kind best known has white blossoms, but it is cherished most for its leaves. Each figure in holy tradition.

Africa Has Ancient Tower

Mombasa has a high tower which dates back to 400 B. C. It is one of the wonders of mid-Africa.

Life of Mink
Normally minks live to be about nine years old, but they will live longer in captivity where they are treated and given all the water and the different foods required by them.

Increase in Mental Cases
The number of patients in hospitals for mental diseases has been increasing three times as fast as the general population, with a 100 per cent increase in such cases during the last 25 years.
