stroying numerous houses. "A battle is at this moment taking place in the province of Agame.

"These events, occurring on Ethiopian territory, constitute a violation of the empire's frontier, and a breach of the covenant of the league, through Italian aggression."

A Reuters dispatch from Addis Ababa said the Italian force advancing on Agame had been defeated, but this report probably was false.

The Italians, moving south from the Asmara region, crossed the Mareb river frontier at widely separated points and converged in heavy columns toward Aduwa, the scene of the terrific Italian defeat 39 years ago. Government authorities in Rome at first denied that Adua and Adigrat had been bombed, but this action was reported by American correspondents with the Italian army. Haile Selassie's order for general mobilization was carried throughout the empire by the ominous beating of the war drums, and his eager warriors responded by the hundred thousand. The emperor's first war order was to his chieftain, Ras Kabada, and three other generals, to take 50,000 men to Mt. Mussa Ali. The defense in the North was entrusted to the Negradas of Wollacho. It was estimated at Addis Ababa that the emperor could count on the services of about 1,250,-000 fighting men, and the women also are ready for active work in the conflict.

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the opening of hostilities in Ethiopia, Mussolini gave the signal for tremendous mass gatherings of all Fascists in Italy. Millions of Black Shirts in all the cities dropped everything and assembled to cheer for the Duce and his African adventure. From the balcony of the Venezia palace in Rome the premier shouted the words that com-

President Roosevelt. He took office immediately, succeeding Gen. Douglas MacArthur who is on his way to > the Philippines to be 100 military adviser to the new island commonwealth. Craig is advanced to full generalship.

Born in St. Joseph, Mo., in 1875, Craig was Gen. Malin graduated from West Craig Point in 1898.

Immediately afterward he saw servce in Cuba during the Spanish-American war, and in June, 1900, participated in the China relief expedition made necessary by the Boxer outbreak. After service in various army posts in this country, Craig, upon American entrance into the World war in 1917, was assigned as chief of staff of the Fortyfirst division and sailed with that outfit for France. Later he became chief of staff of the First army corps, serving in that position until the armistice was signed.

For his fine work in the World war he received the Distinguished Service medal, and he also was given the Legion of Honor and Croix De Guerre of France, Order of the Bath of England, Order of the Crown of Belgium, and Order of the Crown of Italy.

REASURY report for three months L ending September 30 showed a firstquarter deficit of $832,000,000. This was 34 per cent greater than for the corresponding period a year ago which at that time was a record deficit. Expenditures for the quarter amounted to $1,830,000,000. This was an average of about $20,000,000 a day. The deficit occurred in spite of in creased taxes and other revenues incident to improved business. Total revenues for the three months were $998,000,000 compared with $954,000,-000 in the corresponding period of the preceding fiscal year. A substantial amount of the increase in expenditures was due to AAA payments to farmers. Increased spending, as well as larger allocations to veterans' adjusted service certificate fund, public debt sinking fund, and civil service retirement fund, contributed to the increase in regular expenditures.

TRAVELING rapidly to the Pacific coast for some fishing, President Roosevelt delivered several important addresses. The first was at Fremont, Neb., where he spoke to about 15,000 farmers and was enthusiastically received. Mr. Roosevelt set forth the Statechief accomplishments of his administration to date, and challenged his opponents to do better. He defended the legality of the New Deal doings and made it plain that he President would continue to car-Roosevelt ry on experiments for the welfare of the people. Defining his idea of constitutional government, he said its true function is "to promote the general welfare, not by interfering unduly with individual liberties, but by bringing to the aid of the individual those powers of government which are essential to assure the continuance of the inalienable rights which the Constitution is intended to guarantee. It is democracy in the good old American sense of the word." Coming to the AAA, in which his hearers might be supposed to be most vitally interested, the President asserted that "agricultural adjustment is an expression in concrete form of the human rights those farmer patriots sought to win when they stood at the bridge at Concord, when they proclaimed the Declaration of Independence, and when they perpetuated these ideals by the adoption of the Constitution." No matter what attempts may be made to tear it down, "the principle of farm equality expressed by agricultural adjustment will not die," the President told the crowd.

The AAA has made "honorable history," the President declared, and as a result, smoke is pouring from chimneys again and workers without regular jobs are obtaining employment. He served notice that it is the purpose of his administration to "use every square mile of the United States for the purpose to which it is best adapted." Nature must be harnessed instead of despoiled, he asserted. At Boulder Dam the President assisted in the dedication of the great project and delivered an address in which he announced that government spending for employment purposes was nearing its end and that now private industry must take up the burden of decreasing the army of the unemployed. He defended the administration against the charges of "boondoggling" and said its efforts "meet with the approval of the people of the nation." He touched only lightly on the power question. Secretary Ickes, who also spoke, said Boulder Dam should be re-named Johnson Dam, in honor of Senator Hiram Johnson. Again at Los Angeles in the Hollywood Bowl and at San Diego the Chief Executive delivered adddesses, and then he went to catch some fish. COL. FRANK KNOX, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, is now an accredited candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, for he has received the indorsement of the Republican state central committee of Illinois. LIGHTFOOT'S CLEVER TRICK

IGHTFOOT the Deer is smart. Yes, sir, Lightfoot the Deer is smart. He has to be, especially in the hunting season, to save his life. If he were not smart he would have been killed long ago. He never makes the foolish mistake of thinking that other people are not smart. He knew that that hunter who had started out to follow him early that morning was not one to be easily discouraged or to be fooled by simple tricks. He had a very great respect for the smartness of that hunter. He knew that he couldn't afford to be careless for one little minute.

The certainty of danger sometimes is easier to bear than the uncertainty of not knowing whether or not there really is any danger. Lightfoot felt that if he could know just where the hunter was, he himself would know better what to do. The hunter might

After a while he saw what he was looking for, a pile of branches which wood choppers had left when they had trimmed the trees they had cut down. This was near the top of a little hill. Lightfoot went up the hill and stopped behind a pile of brush. For a few moments he stood there, perfectly still, looking and listening. Then, with a little sigh of relief he lay down, where, without being in any danger of being seen himself, he could watch his old trail through mitted his nation to a policy that may mean either victory or ruin. He reiterated his determination to seize territory from Ethiopia but declared he would do everything possible to prevent the campaign from bringing on a European war. But he warned the League of Nations and all nations to keep their hands off, saying:

"To sanctions of an economic character we reply with our discipline, our sobriety, and our spirit of sacrifice. To sanctions of a military character we will reply with measures of military character. To acts of war we will reply with acts of war."

Summoned hastily to a meeting of the league council in Geneva, the statesmen of Europe found themselves confronted by the fact that an undeclared war was being waged by a league member against a league member. Article XVI of the league covenant provides for severe penalties for such a war when the aggressor has been determined. The sanctions range through an economic and financial boycott to final military penalties. Before going to Geneva, Anthony Eden of Great Britain conferred with Premier Laval of France in Paris. He had instructions to throw the full support of his movement behind league efforts to isolate or halt the conflict in Africa. French officials believed that if sanctions were applied by the league, they would be only economic, which would shut off loans and raw materials from Italy. The mobilization of the British navy in the Mediterranean and the Red sea continued with accelerated speed.

 $F_{\rm States}^{\rm IRM}$ assurance that the United States would not be drawn into a foreign war was given by President Roosevelt in his address at San Diego. He said:

"We not only earnestly desire peace but we are moved by a stern determination to avoid those perils that will endanger our peace with the world. As President of the United States I say to you most earnestly once more that the people of America and the government of those people intend and expect to remain at peace with all the world."

In Washington Secretary of State Hull made a strong plea for peace, declaring that economic recovery is beuncertainty. He warned that world than those covered by the contract. earthquake in Italy.

The prospectors said that they were Leadville men. They had some very caravan trailed in. nice looking nuggets of gold, and these, they said, came from Mount Pisgau, and set out. Partly because they were in a hurry and partly because they did not know any easier way to reach Mount Pisgah, they started straight across the country, and the snow fell and turned to slush and fell again, and hills reared in their way, and mountain streams tried to stop them, but they waded and climbed and slid on. A golden phantom danced before them and pointed to Mount Pisgah, and they floundered after her.

At last they reached the place, but to their disgust they found other men ahead of them. Still, there was room for everyone, so they began to make camp and ask questions. The first one, of course, was "where are the diggings?" They proved to be a small prospect hole some ten or fifteen feet deep, in which no gold could be seen. But perhaps, reasoned the three newcomers, if the Leadville men had taken their nuggets from this place there must be more somewhere near. So they began to dig at random. One man finally found a vein of quartz, and this, he was sure, would bring him a fortune. He dug faithfully, and his little dump grew and began to look as a mine dump should. The others, inspired by the sight of this pile of ore, began offering to buy it, and although someone finally agreed to give $250 for the dump, its owner refused to sell. At last he found a piece of quartz that he liked, and he and his friends gave it a rough assay, feverishly watching for the gold that they had longed for. To their disappointment, not even a trace of the yellow metal showed, and they realized that they had been fooled.

By this time the camp at Mount Pisgah numbered some 2,000 men. They had all been lured by the idea of finding gold, and now they all were sleuthing about to discover who had been guilty of hoaxing them. It was learned that the two men who dug

On an April Sunday morning we rolled into the village, tired, thirsty and fed up with travel. Val Norris had written ahead for accommodations.

The place was still as death and apparently deserted. We lay around for 20 minutes, too weary and dispirited to do more than grumble. At last Val reappeared coming toward us with that brisk stride of his which just then seemed peculiarly offensive. "Everything's fine," he chirruped:

"they're all in church, but we found the priest's sister. They've fixed up three of their best houses for us. Come on and have a look."

The domiciles weren't bad, everything considered. Neither was the comely young senora who showed us around, delighting shyly in her careful English. But best of all was Conchita.

Large eyed and silent and vastly attentive, she held her mother's skirt and smiled with elfin gravity on those of us who spoke to her in Spanish. Then Leona Brett picked her up, saying: "Hello there! Do you like movie pictures?" and an instant friendship was

"That's enough; let's call it a day." I suddenly felt a touch of regret for knew it was the end. Tomorrow we would pack up and begin the long jaunt back to California. As I started to leave the mission Val took my arm,

The Unseen Factor

AMERICA's world supremacy in telephone service is an achievement of the Bell System. And no factor contributed more to the winning of that leadership than the unseen factor of policy.

The fundamental policy of the Bell System is to supply the best possible telephone service at the least possible cost; and the status of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company as a part of that System has a definite, practical meaning for the people of this State.

It means that the telephones and other equipment used in Michigan are of the finest modern make, produced for us - more economically than they can be bought elsewhere - by the Western Electric Company, manufacturing division of the Bell System.

It means that this Company gets the benefit of the work constantly going forward in the famous Bell Laboratories, where more than 4000 scientists devote their entire time to the improvement of the service.

A Solo and a solo and a solo

Saran Ana in Day of Way

It means that we receive assistance in financing; the use of thousands of important patents; advisory counsel on methods of operation. In short, it means that we can utilize the many benefits that have grown out of a halfcentury's progress in telephonic communication-a progress which has brought to the modern telephone, despite the vast and intricate physical equipment involved, such efficient simplicity that its use presents no difficulty even to a child.

That progress could not have been achieved under a dollar-chasing policy, but only under a policy honestly dedicated to genuine public service. And that policy, though invisible, is as real and as important as the poles and wires and cables which link the Michigan subscriber with thirty million telephones distributed throughout the world.

AUTHOR BENNET EXAMINES LOCALE OF HIS NEW YARN

"Caught in the Wild" Appears Serially in This Newspaper.

Robert Ames Bennet believes in gathering authentic information about the country in which he lays the plots for his stories. He is shown below exploring ice formations in the far north, which forms the background for his latest adventure story, "Caught in the Wild," which appears serially in this newspaper.

Bennet was born in Denver in 1870, when that city's population numbered only 5,000. With his family he traveled much of the West and before he was seven had seen two gold camp shootings. Although he attended public schools for a short time he is largely a self-educated man. After two years of law school he began the practice of law with his father and end. Since 1907 he has devoted all of his day. time to writing, having become a popular figure with lovers of good books and readers of magazines throughout the country because of the vibrant, exciting quality of his 30 or more novels. "Caught in the Wild," hailed by many critics as his best, is the story of a prospector and three tenderfeet, two of them dangerous crooks and one a spoiled young woman, trapped in the north woods when their plane crashed. You'll find it one of the most exciting stories in years, if you follow it serially in the columns of this newspaper.

Australian Aborigines Are Rapidly Dying Out

The aborigines of Australia, probably the most primitive of the surviving races, are rapidly dying out, it is revealed by the report of the commonwealth statistician, notes a Sydney correspondent in the Los Angeles Times. The number fell by 10 per cent last year. The figure of 54,800 is 5,200 below that which was returned in 1933 and is tragically lower than the population before the arrival of the first white settler. Though this was little more than a century ago, the blacks then numbered more than 250,000.

In their native surroundings the aborigines are self-reliant and quick; under white influence they lose stability. White man's diseases have played their part in the decimation of the last century. Whole tribes have been extinguished by smallpox and tuberculosis. European vices appeal readily to them and they fail under the strain more quickly, perhaps, than any other native race. As far back as 1840 one Australian newspaper foresaw extinction of the aborigines if nothing was done to check contacts between the two races inhabiting the southern continent. Yet the future of the natives receives little attention.

Washington. - What the United States does not consider military secrets was illustrated a few days since with the release of five Japanese tourists arrested by police in New Jersey when seen making photographs in the Holland tunnel. They were released promptly on their explanation they were there making records of a recreational tour. In most countries strangers taking photographs are under suspicion as possible spies. This applies not merely to fortifications, but to structures or localities which have no direct military significance.

Tunnels, bridges, highways and everything connected with transportation are deemed of more or less strategic importance in the event of war, as they are necessary to rapid mobilization. An invading army, for in stance, would cut off the water supply of a city; the making of photographs of an aqueduct therefore might be regarded by some nations as an act of espionage.

pected to do so. Some unsurmountable obstacle, not of our own making, and for which we are not responsible, obstructs our pathway. We falter and, as Theodore Roosevelt used to say, "get our second wind"; then go on. But try as we will, we just do not attain the goal. Perhaps it was not intended that we should reach it. It may be a question whether our ideals were ever intended to be realized. Browning wrote, "A man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for." Perhaps we were in error in setting up possible outlay. Bazaars and fairs often cost so much to get up, that the net proceeds are by no means commensurate with the amount of work involved, and the actual money expended in preparations. With a bundle tea the outlay is trifling. Nothing is sold at it except perhaps the afternoon tea and this is often free. The only thing required is that each person attending the tea brings a bundle and leaves it for a bundles is entirely a matter for the person who concide. It may be that she has oddments in the house that she cares very little for, yet which she realizes are actually worth-while things. She may be willing to let them represent her contribution to the good cause for which the tea is given. The bundles may contain shoes, frocks, hats, scarfs, trinkets, pictures, ornaments, etc. Whatever one has to give, the tea offers the chance to dispose of, and whatever the articles sell for are exactly the same as a contribution of cash to the cause. If she wishes the woman can have new things in her bundle.

Bundle Tea.

A bundle tea may be given by some person who is greatly interested in the charity for which the money is to be raised, and the cost of the tea be defrayed by her as well as the house or the lawn being open for the occasion. In summer bundle teas are frequently on the grounds of some estate. The person who throws open the house or grounds for the tea generally supplies the tea and refreshments as her contibution to the worthy cause. Or sometimes there are several who supply the food while one opens her home and supplies the service. When a group of women decide to hold a bundle tea, it can be arranged to have no one be at actual expense. These women may finance it by buying the foods and the tea for which they get repaid, for costs only, from the proceeds of the contents of the bundles, the remainder going to the charity. Bundle teas have been given as society events because women who have beautiful estates have thrown them open for the events. The fashion is set, and has been proven excellent, with good financial returns for the modest outlays.

The Household BUNDLE teas are the latest idea for ience of expression, it is termed a color. Consequently I shall consider it to have such a significance, and also that shades of white such as cream. oyster white, etc., come under the one general term of white. This color has long been the one above all others for woodwork in rooms, a tint being added to accord with that of the wall paper. White is seldom lacking, totally, from a decorative scheme, and occasionally becomes the dominant one, so that white rooms are spoken of, as are red rooms, blue rooms, etc. This designating of rooms by their major color feature was once the vogue, and today there is the tendency to return to the > style. White, in comparatively recent years, has been featured more in bathrooms and kitchens than in any other rooms of a house. But it became monotonous as carried out to the extreme, and, since this period, both these rooms have become glowing exponents of vivid hues. Now they are garish rather than of pristine pureness, making a return to the simplicity of former years seem a welcome change. However, white rooms as developed today permit of gay notes of color, and this compromise adds beauty to decoration. In the modern white rooms, this addition interrupts monotony, and brings the type of decoration from the more mundane rooms to main rooms, especially to an abstract ideal in place of a definite and burning purpose as the motivating incentive of our lives. If the expression of a great and commanding purpose be our supreme ideal, what higher purpose could there be than "to do our best" under all circumstances and conditions regardless of consequences.

That man who does his best need never fear failure, remorse or defeat He will never know, "The discontent of power unused."

A man today holds a responsible position in the government because of the thoroughness with which he did his work. He rose to this position not through influence or "pull" but because he always did his best. Early in life he was taught "to do his best even though the task seemed menial and unimportant.

Doing our best means that under all circumstances, as far as we are able, we should live in the environment of the best. Hear the best music and see the best art. Choose the best companions and read the best literature. Think the best thoughts. Give to the world your best, live in the environment of the best, and life to you will never lose its meaning but will bring to you deserved contentment, joy and true success.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct. Remember this: Genuine Bayer

"But at least I may take you to the station-see you on the train." He touched her arm to turn her toward the car, and she got in.

"Sister," said Hal, after he had start ed Rasputin into the traffic, "I have been a very great fool, and I have been near to being even a greater one. Now I see things clearly. Sister, I know who her husband is: I know he is evil. It doesn't matter how much I hate him nor how much I am ready to do to get her away from him. What matters is that whatever I do, I should be stronger and happier-for her, sister, and for myself-if you could tell me, as her friend and, I so much hope, mine too, that you also feel I must get her from him.- It cannot be wicked to take evil from her life, no matter how it is done, can it? Even if she will not love me now, for the fool I've been and the wrong I've done, I know about that evil and, loving her, I cannot leave her with it, can I?" Her eyes were on his-full of a frightened seriousness, a deeply fearful solicitude for what he had told her.

"Long ago," she said, "when I was a girl as young as she-'

The sound of her own voice, saying that, seemed gently to enforce her silence. Looking at him-her eyes large, inarticulate in hopefulness, touched too with some longing sorrow -she barely nodded, once, and then bravely said, "You should do something.'

. Hal burst into the room without knocking, hot for Kerrigan's word that Barry was at her hotel, that he could go straight to her now and humble himself irrevocably, before he went on to whatever else must be done in final swiftness. Kerrigan looked at him as If he didn't believe what he saw.

"She went by train," Hal told him quickly. "You called Barry. She's all right. I can-" he wondered why it was said so sig-"I can't get her," Kerrigan said, nificantly. Then most terribly he saw; "but she's been here. That envelopehis shoulders fell away from resistshe left it. I've been trying to think ance and all his breath went out in I ought to open it."

Hal snatched the envelope and tore it open, and fresh fear ran at his heart as his eyes began to follow the decisive lines.

"I shouldn't write, my darling, but I've got to. Being with you, loving you as I shall forever, has shown me my way out and given me strength to take it. When you get back from Santa Barbara, it will be done and there'll be no good in trying to stop me. You mustn't try. I shall be all right. I'm so tired of trying to decide what's good, what's best. I can't have you, but I can have myself-free of badness, to remember you and beauty. I can't let you go away thinking I don't love you.

"He will find out soon that you are Frederick Ireland's son. But there will be nothing left to show any connection between you and him. So when you see tomorrow's papers, you must keep quiet.

"I love you. I didn't know it would be so much. Darling, forgive me for "Very glad of the chance to help," said Spears, as though he was. "And what about your father? Shall I tell him anything-except that you're coming along well and will drop him a line any day now?"

"Oh, yes," said Hal, and tried to think plainly about that too, "Tell him the guy who telegraphed him about me was a nut, that he had nothing on me, that the whole thing's put to bed. Tell him I'm writing him everything and there's absolutely nothing to worry about. Remind him that I never said that before."

Then Spears was gone, and the nurse came in to see that Hal was comfortable. He told her he was. Am too, he said to himself, except for shock, slight concussion, compound fracture of arm, cut head, contusions of hip, d-d smell of ether, and-Dear God, what were they to the bitter, steady, excruciating, and just punishment of his soul? What more hurts to the neck, appeared on the other wouldn't he take to his body to keep the incredible events of his anguish unreal.

The events of his anguish had occurred: they seemed sometimes unreal because his fancy couldn't compass a scene of vicious melodrama between the figure of beauty he knew and loved and the figure of evil he knew and hated. In the black, burning chaos of his delirium he had seen Barry standing in a room like the one in Saint George; a black automatic pistol, level in her hand, jogged to its own sharp spitting; and Crack stood before her with his bemused smile, nodding sly approval as each invisible bullet punched into him but never even made sharply. "Listen to me." Then, slowly him drop his indolent golf ball. That was unreal, fantastic even in delirium. And yet now, with the delirium behind-marking off his new loneliness from his old folly-Hal knew something like that had happened.

If his old, dread folly had created nothing but unending loneliness for himself, the pain of penalty would be a clean thing. His father had told him he needed to learn about life. He had learned something: he had learned that if you were a vain fool, life in one gesture could give you its lesson and snatch away your most happy chance to apply it, could mutilate you for good in teaching you to avoid mutilation. Did his father know that? Did Sister Anastasia know that? Had Kerrigan known that? Had Kerrigan-Chill fingers slipped newly about Hal's heart and he reached for his bell, holding down the button hard and long as he tried to hold down this refreshed agony of fear. When the nurse came, he told her: "Telephone Mr. Spears at the Bank of California Trust and tell him-tell him I say he may find out something-something we want to know at the morgue."

O G-d, if Kerrigan were dead! The only hope that the next slow suicide. You'll know that if I couldn't break my bargain for you, I couldn't at all. I'm going to end it." Starting for the door, Hal yelled at Kerrigan: "She's going to kill him. Almighty G-d, Kerrigan! She's killing him now !"

In his terror, Hal still had time to be thankful for Kerrigan's agility in pursuit: Kerrigan was behind him, struggling into his coat as they hurried down the hall.

Hal's mind was frantic with: Smug, criminal ass, to think I could do this to her, that she'd wait for my rotten apology. Oh G-d, if you're there and you're good, stop her, stop her, stop her.

"Battle of Blenheim! drive like a white man," Kerrigan was saying, as second speed began to scream under them. "Get pinched or piled up and you're useless to her-useless."

"Kerrigan, if she's not there, you find Crack and stick to him like a thousand leeches," Hal said gently. "I'll find her if- G-d!"

A man, unheeding, darted from among the parked cars at the right. Hal jumped on Rasputin's loyal brakes and felt them drag gallantly at the speed, in a desperate squeal of rubber. Then there was a crumpling slam of impact behind, and Rasputin lunged forward slewing, drunkenly careened by savage force at the rear. As the rigid sedan tipped past the point of recovery, tearing and splintering at the body of a parked car alongside, Hal flung himself upon Kerrigan and fought to make him duck. Then Rasputin's solid side smashed upon solid pavement with an abrupt explosion of showering glass. And that was all, except for a small, single tinkling, like a distant key-ring, that diminished in whirls of darkness.

CHAPTER X

Midweek Hal was heavily sick-lying in a bed and heavily sad. His mouth was dry as cloth, and his lips stuck.

There was an impression of having dreamed lots of things, crowded close around him and very tiring because The best of the detectives is to go aftof their constant demand for effort. a broken cry of anguish and despair. On a swift shadow of hope he said: "But Kerrigan-where's Kerrigan? The man who was with me in the car.

Please, you've got to find out. You will find out-quickly, quickly, and let me know. And another thing." What was the other thing? Good G-d, he had to hold on till he thought of it-something terrible. Yes! "Another thing," he said, exhaustion consuming the breath he needed to talk with: "a newspaper-one of the morning after my accident. I've got to see it. I'll go crazy-raving-unless I know." "Yes, all right," said the interne.

After a word to the nurse at the door, he was gone and Hal rolled his head miserably, but in a minute, a white jacket came between him and the wall, and a newspaper rustled. They held it over him while he searched the mess of the front page: headlines about Japan, divorce revelations, the picture of a woman in black in court: and beside that a single-column head reading, "Man Slain in S. M'ca Blvd. Hotel Room-Seek Woman Companion of Martin Crack, Promoter-Clutched Golf Ball Clew?"-Wheels of light spinning against blackness closed over the page, and their soft buzzing faded behind thick, deaf cushions at his ears.

Spears, a vice president of the Old Man's correspondent bank in Los Angeles, gave Hal attention and incurious understanding. He came on unsolicited orders from New York, when Hal was finished with the delirious phantoms of routed hope.

"You must make sure the agency has no connection with the police," Hal told him. "If it's necessary you can drop a hint that rewards from us will be bigger than any the police offer. er the Trafford girl, the other after hours brought was that the morgue had yielded nothing. In the early evening, Spears came again to show him the "Personal" advertisement he had running, and to tell him that Sister Anastasia had no news.

Then there was another long, haunted night maturing its crop of torment to roll Hal's head on the hot pillow, and snatch him from fitful sleep. And finally another morning came, with a new solidity of hopeless conclusion.

The one slim sliver of recurrent hope, sharp and so very fragile, was still that Kerrigan might be with Barry. And yet if Kerrigan was well and free, he would have come here to Hal, or written, or something.

Later Hal was dozing when he heard the nurse saying something that sounded like, "It's your sister to see you." And the name Anastasia leaped into his mind like a cool jet of water. He turned his head so quickly that pain ran deep in his arm. "Show her in right away."

"She's waiting downstairs," said the nurse. "She'll be up in a moment." She knew something about Barry. Hal fought that hope for his fear of disappointment. Probably it was only that her brother could be left for a while and she-bless her dear, cool goodness-had come to comfort him. The door opened softly, and there was an instant's whispering behind the screen before it closed again. Then, tense for the first look of Anastasia's white-framed face, Hal felt his blood's business stop, time stop, the day stop over the world outside. Even as he whispered her name in the hush of the room, he knew it couldn't be Barry. Yet the clear, blue-clad vision moved toward him, the clear eyes authentic in their solemn questioning of his look of awe. She came nearer, looked down at his mouth and into his eyes again, a hopeful tenderress waking in her solemnity. Then Le caught her wrist. She bent swiftly down to him. His other wretched, useless arm wouldn't stir, but the good one was strong enough to bring her against him, his hand moving on rough, real cloth over the firmness of her back. If it were a dream, the pain he felt going through his tight-strapped arm must wake him. And it didn't. She stayed there, her skin smooth and cool, her breathing against him slow and grateful, as if in fearless sleep after long weariness (TO BE CONTINUED)

These exchange days have proved successful and there seems to be a demand for this type of service. On this occasion sheepmen in all parts of the county are invited

In general this program is meeting with the approval of the state's sheep breeders as it gives them a source of purchase of high quality nspected rams and ones which are fully guaranteed. Rams purchased off the truck in the past have given good satisfaction and close to 1200 have been distributed throughout the state since this program was inaugurated.

The type of ram that is in great est demand is the one which is blocky in form, wide, and thick in body, close to the ground and one carry ing a dense fleece of good length fiber. Rams of this kind show their influence on their offspring and will sire more uniform lambs than is possible when grade or scrub rams are used. The lambs sired by grade or scrub rams are usually long legged and are of poor market type. A ram ufluences the offspring from all of the ewes, so it is essential that if a smaller than for several years. Most person wishes to build up his flock he can make faster progress by using
