FIFTY ATTEND CHURCH SCHOOL INSTITUTE HERE

Very Successful Meeting Is Held Tuesday At Baptist Church

Fifty delegates from eight different Sunday schools of Iosco county enjoyed an all-day "Institute for Parents and Workers with Children" at the Tawas City Baptist church on Tuesday of this week.

Mrs. Frank Dease acted as chairman of the morning session and led in the devotion. Mrs. W. A. Evans gave a fine talk on "The Responsibility of the Home for the Religious Training of the Child," stressing the fact that every child is entitled to the inheritance of a sound body and a sound mind, and the environment of a happy home. "Take your child to church and Sunday school with you, never send him while you remain at home," Mrs. Evans urged.

Speaking of a Sunday school teacher's responsibility, Mrs. Nellie Jennings stated "that in a large majority of cases the only knowledge of Christ and His Word that the child receives is obtained from the Sunday school teacher." Two Scripture passages especially applicable to Sunday school teachers were quoted, "Ye were called in one hope of your calling" and "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God." Mrs. Jennings closed her talk with these words: "O, Sunday school teachers, your responsibilities are so great, your influence so far-reaching, that you may never know the result here on earth, possibly not until you reach the Master in the closing day of your school here below."

Mrs. Rita Petters, pastor of the Hale Baptist church, brought a timely message regarding the minister's responsibility to the Sunday school. She believes the teaching ministry of the church to be of more value than its preaching ministry. Moses and Elijah, Ezra, Nehemiah, the prophets and priests of old, were primarily teachers. Jesus himself used the teaching method largely. "Teach us to pray," said His disciples.

In the animated discussion which followed these talks, it was brought out that the home is the first institution established by God, following which He founded the tabernacle church. Our country faces a criminal crisis with the average criminal age today being 19 years. Of encouragement to Christian workers is the fact that of 5,000 criminals who recently appeared in a certain court, only 16 were Sunday school boys. "The school educates the head, but it asks the help of the church in educating the heart," said Rev. Metcalf.

Mrs. Jas. Chambers spoke very ably on "The Council Work," stressing Vacation Bible schools, as well as county-wide meetings of various types. Mrs. Chambers having been an ardent supporter of the council for many years, her words of commendation and encouragement carried the weight of consecration and experience.

Mrs. Norman Brown of Alabaster was chairman of the afternoon session. The devotional service was led by Wm. L. Lattin of Reno. Mr. Lattin always brings a message of deep spirituality and evangelism. He used the Ten Commandments as a basis for his talk, and concluded the devotional period with a fine testimony. (Turn to No. 1, Back Page)

School Notes

High School

The Freshman English class has begun the study of Scott's "The Lady of the Lake."

The members of the English II class have memorized their declamations and now will spend Mondays and Fridays improving their delivery.

We neglected to place the name of Wray Cox last week among the high school graduates who are now attending school elsewhere. Wray, a member of the class of 1935, is a student at the Bay City Business College.

Charles Hamilton of the Bay City Business College called Monday and gave a short talk to the members of the Senior class. Mr. Hamilton gave the commencement address last June.

A small sized audience was present Monday evening to hear Dr. Park discuss conditions and customs in eastern Asia. Those present, however, heard a well versed speaker with a pleasing method. Two of Dr. Park's books, "An Oriental View of American Civilization" and "Making a New China," have been added to the high school library. The first book is written in an especially interesting and humorous style and the latter contains much information concerning the Chinese nation.

The third annual trap shoot of the Tawas Gun Club, held last Sunday afternoon at Tawasville, drew a large number of shooters and spectators. ARENAC-IOSCO-ALCONA STAR MEETS AT HALE

150 Attend Semi-Annual Gathering Last Friday

The A. I. A. association, comprising eight chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star in the counties of Arenac, Iosco and Alcona, met Friday afternoon and evening with Hale Chapter. About 150 people were in attendance.

The chapter room was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Stars and wreaths of balsam with yellow chrysanthemum centers adorned the walls, baskets of autumn leaves outlined the stations, and in the East the foliage and white, starlike flowers of a large "Star of Bethlehem" plant banked the pedestal of the presiding officer.

Distinguished guests introduced after the opening of the meeting by Miss Mable Stone of Omer, president of the association, assisted by Mrs. Edna Boomer of Tawas City, marshal were Mrs. Flora Sutherland of Benton Harbor, Worthy Grand Matron; Winfield Gardner of Mancelona, Worthy Grand Patron; three other officers of the Grand Chapter, Grand Adah, Grand Esther and Grand Electa, and James Mark of Tawas City, Past Worthy Grand Patron. Others introduced and welcomed were six past presidents of the A. I. A. association and the Worthy Matrons and Worthy Patrons of the different chapters.

The president, in her address, reviewed briefly the organization's ten years of activity. She stressed the fact that the status of the O. E. S. in community life depends on the exemplification of its teachings by the members.

Mrs. Isabel Westcott of Hale Chapter and Mrs. McCready of Violet Chapter, Standish, were escorted to the east by the association marshal, Mrs. Westcott extended to all the sincere welcome of her chapter. Mrs. McCready responded on behalf of the visitors.

Mrs. Florence Curtis of Whittemore sang two beautiful vocal solos and Miss Edna Greve of Hale gave a piano solo. Miss Dora Mark of Tawas City was accompanist for Mrs. Curtis.

In the evening degree work was exemplified by officers selected from the different chapters. A school of instruction was conducted by the Worthy Grand Matron.

An invitation was extended and accepted to meet next May with Pine Tree Chapter, Oscoda. Mention must be made of the dinner served at six o'clock in the Dorcas rooms by the members of that society. Chicken and many other good things to eat were on the menu. The committee on courtesies, in their report, thanked the Dorcas for the excellent dinner and Hale Chapter for the gracious hospitality.

The following gave prizes for the event: Moeller Bros., A. & P., J. A. Brugger, Jas. H. Hepburn Has Outstanding Role In "Alice Adams"

Katharine Hepburn again proves her right to consideration as one of the foremost screen stars by her characterization of the title role in "Alice Adams," coming to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, October 27, 28 and 29.

Even better than her interpretation of the stage-struck girl in "Morning Glory," which won her the Academy Award in 1933, is her portrayal of the poverty-ridden, ambitious heroine of the Booth Tarkington romance.

The story gives a vivid picture of the petty jealousies, snobbery and bitter social warfare waged between the rich and poor in a small mid-western town and is a screen version of the Booth Tarkington novel of the same name which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1922.

Included in the supporting cast are Fred MacMurray, Fred Stone, Ann Shoemaker, Evelyn Venable, Charles Grawwin and a score of other capable artists.

Laval in Uncomfortable Position as Anglo-Italian Relations Grow Worse—Senator Vandenberg "Not a Candidate."

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

PIERRE LAVAL, premier of France, found himself in a tight place because of his efforts to retain the friendship of both Great Britain and Italy and to keep his government from being upset by its foes at home. In the process of trying to find a way to bring about a peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war, Laval proposed that Britain withdraw its big home fleet from the Mediterranean to mollify Mussolini. This suggestion was laid before the British cabinet and turned down flatly.

Pierre Laval

The cabinet gave hearty approval to the policy at Geneva of Capt. Anthony Eden and Samuel Hoare, secretary for foreign affairs. Its stand was reported to be substantially this: Mussolini will respect nothing but force. He would interpret any withdrawal of Britain's Mediterranean forces as a sign of weakening. If Mussolini wants to clear the way for Italo-Ethiopian peace talks, let him halt his armies in Ethiopia and accept league terms as basis for negotiation as Ethiopia already has done.

Furthermore, the British government called on Laval for a definite reply to its question whether France would cooperate with the British fleet if there were an open break with Italy. The French answers to this query had been too wobbly to suit Downing street. Particularly the English wanted to know if their fleet would be permitted to use the French naval dockyards. It was believed that if Laval could not satisfy the British, the latter would withdraw from active leadership in the League of Nations and refuse to renew the Locarno commitments on which France relies for protection against Germany.

DISPATCHES from the African war front are subjected to so severe a censorship that they are not only unsatisfactory but often quite unreliable. All kinds of sensational stories are circulated and some of them may be true. One such is the report from Djibouti, French Somaliland, that Italians killed a number of British Somaliland subjects near the Ethiopian frontier, some of the victims being members of the camel corps that is a part of the colonial army. British Vice Consul Lowe heard, also, that Italians had gassed and shot a lot of cattle and goats in British Somaliland.

Certainly relations between Italy and Great Britain were growing worse daily and there were many predictions that the two nations would be at each other's throats before long. The British have been in a deadly cold humor ever since they found out that Mussolini's friends had been trying to stir up an anti-British revolt in Egypt. Now the border between Egypt and Italian Libya is the scene of swift concentration of troops on both sides.

ETHIOPIA'S representatives in Geneva were told by delegates of several nations that Mussolini was ready to end the warfare if he were given considerable cessions of territory and certain large economic advantages. This tentative offer was transmitted to Addis Ababa, and the reply of Emperor Haile Selassie was a determined "No." The Italians want virtual control over the entire country, and the emperor is not willing to give up a yard of territory.

The Italians in northern Ethiopia were jubilant over the desertion of Degiac Haile Selassie Gugsu and several thousand warriors. This Gugsu is a son-in-law of the emperor and a descendant of King John who reigned in the last century. The traitor was installed as ras or chieftain of the occupied territory.

Seemingly reliable reports from medical missionaries in the southern sector, the Ogaden zone, said the Italians were making free use of chlorine gas and of dum-dum bullets which for many years have been outlawed in all "civilized" warfare.

SENATOR ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG of Michigan, who has been mentioned frequently as a possible Republican nominee for the Presidency, came back from a summer tour of Europe and declared flatly he is "not a candidate for anything on earth." He did not attempt to predict who would be named by the Republicans, but did say he felt the G. O. P. would win in 1936.

"I think President Roosevelt wrote his obituary in his first speech in congress in March, 1933," he said, "and historians will show it, when he said 'most liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policies and we must take care to avoid that.'"

Liberal spending by the New Deal was defended by Senator Fletcher of Florida, chairman of the senate banking committee. In an interview he said that "government activities and expenditures have restored about $10,000,000,000 of bank credit lost in the $21,000,000,000 deflation of 1930-33."

"Business is going to get the benefit of that. The money the government is putting out is going to people who are putting it in the banks. It is increasing purchasing power and likewise expanding the credit facilities of the banks."

The senator expressed the belief business was "reviving," declared relief and other emergency expenditures would drop as continued improvement was shown, and predicted many work projects would be of lasting benefit.

IT DOESN'T take much these days to cause the Republicans to rejoice. The latest event hailed by them as a harbinger of victory next year was merely a by-election in Massachusetts to fill a vacancy in the state senate. The district normally is Republican and this time as usual a Republican was elected. The reason for the G. O. P. shouts was found in the decreased vote polled by the Democrats, and the fact that Salem, a mill town and former Democratic stronghold, was captured by the Republicans.

Democratic leaders said that the issues in the election were purely local and that the reverse at most was a rebuff for the administration of Democratic Gov. James Curley. The Republican leaders asserted that the New Deal no less than Curley was involved.

VICE PRESIDENT JOHN GARNER and a large number of senators and representatives sailed from Seattle for Manila to represent the United States at the formal establishment of the Philippines commonwealth and the inauguration of President Manuel Quezon on November 19.

For the first time in history both the President and the Vice President were outside United States territory at the same time. Secretary of State Hull was the ranking official left in Washington and consequently was the temporary head of the government. However, Mr. Roosevelt was in close and continual communication with the capital by wireless throughout his cruise.

IN SOME quarters Col. Theodore Roosevelt is credited with considerable influence among the Republicans of the eastern states, and often he is mentioned as a possible Presidential candidate. Another potential candidate, strong in the West, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, recently wrote to Colonel Roosevelt proposing that the 1936 Republican campaign be based on a "trust-busting" issue. The colonel turned down the plan. He replied that, while he was in sympathy with the senator's attitude on monopolies, he felt there are many other issues as great or greater. Among these he named "scandalous waste of the people's money, government extravagance, multitudinous taxes, and attempts to subvert our type of government."

"I entirely agree," Colonel Roosevelt wrote, "that monopolies are evil, for I am a firm believer in the established American principle of competition. I have stated this over and over again during the last eighteen months."

"I do not agree, however, that this will be the major issue of the campaign."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT turned his back on the Pacific and began his return voyage on the cruiser Houston. The vessel was started through the Panama canal while the President went to Fort Clayton and other posts to inspect the garrisons, and to the new Madden dam on the Chagres river. He boarded the cruiser at Pedro Miguel locks and, with President Arias of Panama and Mrs. Arias as guests, proceeded to the Atlantic.

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM L. SIBERT, one of the three men who really built the Panama canal and last surviving member of the canal commission, died at the age of seventy-five at his country home near Bowling Green, Ky. He was buried in Arlington National cemetery with full military honors.

General Sibert's career as engineer and soldier was distinguished. He was made brigadier general by special act of congress for his services in connection with the building of the Panama canal. During the World war he commanded the First division of the A. E. F.

He retired in 1920 to engage in private engineering work and subsequently served as chairman of the Alabama state docks commission in construction of the state docks at Mobile. From 1928 to 1932 he was chairman of the Boulder dam commission, and in 1929 and 1930 was president of the American Association of Port Authorities.

JOHN L. LEWIS, president of the United Mine Workers, and his industrial union bloc lost a hot battle when the American Federation of Labor, in convention in Atlantic City, voted to continue the policy adopted last year in San Francisco. This policy was to organize workers in mass production industries, such as automobile and steel, along industrial lines with due protection of the rights of craft unions.

Lewis and his followers proposed that the mass production industries be organized, one union for each industry, with the craft unions kept out altogether.

PARLIAMENTARY elections in Canada resulted in the defeat of Premier Richard B. Bennett and the Conservatives who have been in control since 1930. The next premier will be Mackenzie King, leader of the Liberals who won 158 out of 245 seats in the house of commons. The new deal policies of the Bennett government were repudiated by the electors.

In the program outlined by King, in case he won, the great emphasis was laid on relieving unemployment and lowering tariffs back to 1930 levels. A reciprocal trade agreement with the United States was one of his strong arguments. Nationalization of the Bank of Canada, to control credit inflation and deflation was another plank.

One immediate result of the Liberal victory was the resignation of W. B. Hurdidge as Canadian minister to the United States, effective when the new administration takes hold. Hurdidge is a brother-in-law of Premier Bennett and his appointment to the Washington post was severely criticized by King during the campaign.

CAROL, king of Rumania, celebrated his forty-second birthday at his summer palace in Sinaia, and as the family gathered for the occasion Mme. Magda Lupescu, the king's intimate friend, arrived unexpectedly from Paris. The Peasant party had intended to make the day notable by "anti-Lupescu" demonstrations, hoping this would help to keep her in exile, but her return confounded the leaders.

"Save Your Old Inner Tubes," Says Miami

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT VISITS PADDY THE BEAVER

DEEP in the Green Forest is the pond where lives Paddy the Beaver. It is Paddy's own pond, for he made it himself. He made it by building a dam across the Laughing Brook. When Lightfoot the Deer bounded away through the Green Forest after watching the hunter pass through the hollow below him, he remembered Paddy's pond. "That's where I'll go," thought Lightfoot. "It is such a lonely part of the Green Forest that I do not believe that hunter will come there. I'll just run over and make Paddy a friendly call."

So Lightfoot bounded along deeper and deeper into the Green Forest. Presently through the trees he caught the gleam of water. It was Paddy's pond. Lightfoot approached it cautiously. He felt sure he was rid of the hunter who had followed him so far that morning, but he knew that there might be other hunters in the Green Forest. He knew that he couldn't afford to be careless for even one little minute. Lightfoot had lived long enough to know that most of the sad things and dreadful things that happen in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows are due to carelessness, often only a moment's carelessness. No one who is hunted, be he big or little, can afford ever to be careless.

Now Lightfoot had known of hunters hiding near water, hoping to shoot him when he came to drink. That always seemed to Lightfoot a dreadful thing, an unfair thing. But hunters had done it before and they might do it again. So Lightfoot was careful to approach Paddy's pond up wind. That is, he approached the side of the pond from which the Merry Little Breezes were blowing towards him, and all the time he kept his nose working. He knew that if any hunters were hidden there, the Merry Little Breezes would bring him their scent and thus warn him.

He had almost reached the edge of Paddy's pond when from the farther shore there came a sudden crash. It startled Lightfoot terribly for just an instant. Then he guessed what it meant. That crash was the falling of a tree. There had been no sound of axes, so he knew it could not have been chopped down by men. It must be that Paddy the Beaver had cut it, and if Paddy was working by daylight it was certain that no one had been around that pond for a long time.

So Lightfoot hurried forward eagerly, but still cautiously. When he reached the bank he looked across towards where the sound of that falling tree had come from. A branch of a tree was moving along in the water and half hidden by it was a brown head. It was Paddy the Beaver taking the branch to his woodpile.

THE DAY OF LEFTOVERS

IN EVERY well-regulated home there will be nice food which should not be slighted because it is left over. One housekeeper cleverly gets everything eaten by serving a tray with small dishes, nicely warmed and seasoned and each member of the family may have a choice. The food never goes begging.

In these days of vegetable plates one may have a hot vegetable plate with a few spoons of peas, beans, toma-

One large grapefruit when carefully peeled and the sections (minus their covering) placed on tender lettuce with a sprinkling of shredded almonds and a good dressing, makes the best of salad.

By the way, our beauty dietitians tell us that a dozen almonds a day with an apple, banana or a glass of fruit juice is one of the best lunches for beautifying the complexion. The almonds must be carefully masticated.

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I met a young chap from Atlantic City. He told me that in his home there is something that runs all over the floor of his basement yet it hasn't any legs. As you know everything, what can that be?

Sincerely,

C. SAULT.

Answer: Water.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Is it true the best way to make a vegetable speak is to cut out the inside of a melon and make it hollow? (holler).

Yours truly,

DOWN St. Clair County way, the summer lingers. The Dawn comes leading Day with rosy fingers. There is no hint of autumn rain. The wildwood is green and fragrant as the lane to childhood.

The bees are humming still. Midsummer gladness Brings to the silver rill no hint of sadness.

The winter snows will fall, but in the glowing Red sunshine, green and tall the corn is growing.

Fierce Mohmands Stir Up Excitement in India

Afghan Tribesmen Again Raid Northwest Frontier.

Washington.—Snipers' rifles are popping and British Tommies are marching again along India's northwest frontier, for the Mohmands are on another rampage.

"To the outside world this news means little, for few people ever heard of the Mohmands, but to England it means one more chapter in a pacification campaign that has lasted for nearly 100 years," says the National Geographic society.

Chief Trouble-Makers.

"The Mohmands, a tribe of the Afghan border hill men, have been among the chief trouble-makers for England in the region ever since the British conquest of India.

"In this rugged mountain country, where the northern tip of India thrusts up toward Russia between primitive Afghanistan and mysterious Tibet, British and native Indian forces have carried on periodical campaigns against the Mohmands and other troublesome tribesmen since the middle of the last century.

"It was from these little border campaigns that Rudyard Kipling gathered much of the material for his poems about life among the British soldiers in India; and today they are waged in much the same setting as when Kipling wrote.

"The Mohmands are part of the Pathan or Afghan people, living in the hill country along the frontier between India and Afghanistan. In this region also live the Afridis, Waziris, Orakzais, Sivatis, and Bajouris. Part of their territory is ruled by the king of Afghanistan, but most of it is attached, loosely, at least, to British jurisdiction.

"The Mohmand territory covers about 1,200 square miles of hilly country northwest of Peshawar, capital and chief city of the Northwest Frontier Province of India. The region is hot and almost treeless, with the hills covered by a low scrub growth of stunted palms and coarse grass.

Near the Khyber Pass.

"When the rains fall in the Mohmand territory the crops fall also, and many of the persistent raids of the tribesmen upon British territory have been due to poverty as much as to natural love of fighting. There is now little income from the passage of caravans, for the former trade routes through the Mohmand country have been less used since the opening of the Khyber Pass, world-famous highway of commerce between India and Afghanistan.

"The Mohmands are inferior in physique to their native neighbors, the Afridis and Shimaris, because of the heat and the unhealthfulness of the river lowlands of their country; but they are known for their bravery and can muster several thousand fighting men.

"Like most of the Afghan border tribes the Mohmands are Mohammedans, and have fought at least one jihad, or 'holy war' against the British. The population of the Northwest Frontier Province of India is 92 per cent Moslem, a larger proportion than in any other Indian province.

"Peshawar, main base of the British forces operating against the Mohmands is roughly about the size of Trenton, N. J. It is on the direct route that leads through the Khyber Pass to Kabul, capital of Afghanistan, 200 miles away. Surrounded by a brick and mud wall, Peshawar teems with all the tribes and races of northern India, who flock into its huge markets to trade everything from rich Bokhara carpets to fruit and grain. Army Has New Machine Gun of .22 Caliber

Will Cut Cost of Ammunition for Training.

New York.—Browning machine guns, of .22-caliber, which fire 500 shots a minute accurately up to 400 yards, are being issued to army machine gun companies. The new guns, which were developed and built at the Springfield armory, are intended to save thousands of dollars a year in the cost of ammunition and at the same time provide greater facilities for marksmanship training.

Six guns, which were made from the .30-caliber guns, have already been issued to the First battalion of the Eighteenth Infantry at Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, and machine gunners under Capt. Thomas R. Gibson have tested them. Captain Gibson, who commanded the Eighteenth Infantry's regimental machine gun company in the World war, believes they have all the advantages of the larger guns for practice.

Since the war the Browning .30-caliber water-cooled gun has been standard in the army. The new gun is the same gun, modified to fire .22-caliber long rifle ammunition. The differences are in the barrel, feed-way and bolt, and the tension has been eased on the springs. The various cams, lugs and springs actuate the feeding, firing, extraction and ejection of cartridges in the large gun. It weighs slightly more than the .30-caliber gun, is the same size and fitted to the same mount.

Army appropriations are such that a machine gunner who has qualified as an expert is not permitted to shoot again during the same enlistment, the price of ammunition being $30.68 a thousand. Gunners who have qualified as marksmen are permitted to fire 500 rounds a year, but 300 rounds must be fired in record fire, leaving only 200 rounds for practice. An unqualified gunner is allowed to shoot 750 rounds a year.

Compared with the price of .30-caliber cartridges .22-caliber ammunition is cheap. The present cost is $6.74 a thousand.

Old Title of "Hansa City" to Be Used by Cologne

Cologne, Germany.—The prefix of "Hansa City," which Cologne acquired more than five centuries ago, again will be conferred upon the city by its municipal parliament in memory of the city's membership in the historic Hanseatic league, which in its heyday was comprised of a string of ninety cities extending from Reval to Amsterdam.

Cologne joined soon after the league's creation in the Thirteenth century, but the fortunes of peace and war soon took the city out of the league's orbit. With the league's gradual disintegration, Cologne's Hanseatic tradition soon was forgotten. It will now be revived and henceforth the Rhineland metropolis will be "Hansa City Cologne."

Austria Leather Shorts Offered as Nudism Cure

Salzburg, Austria.—Austria has a cure for the nudism that has broken out in the United States.

"If American men would wear 'lederhosen,' the leather shorts of the Tyrolean peasant," explains one of Austria's leading designers, "there would be no danger of these recurring returns to the habit—or lack of habit—of our first parents.

"wear such heavy clothing that when they finally revolt against it, they swing to the other extreme and become nudists."

Increasing numbers of Americans who come here for the Salzburg Music festival adopt lederhosen, shorts made of flexible kid or chamois leather with buttons carved out of deer horn. Handmade stockings of white or light gray are worn with them, and the knees are left bare.

The costume is admirably suited to walking, mountain climbing and hunting. In addition it is light and comfortable, yet so durable that it is handed down for generations and young peasants proudly wear the lederhosen their grandfathers wore.

A number of Austrian designers are considering marketing the costume in other countries.

Owned by Those it Serves

THE ownership of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, as a part of the Bell System, is shared among 850,000 people in all sections of the country. More than half the stockholders are women. Of these, 210,000 are housewives. There are 115,000 employees of the Bell System who own shares. The other owners include thousands of clerks, salesmen, mechanics, doctors, teachers, farmers, laborers—people in all walks of life.

The average holding per person is only 28 shares. And nobody owns as much as one per cent of the stock.

Thus, the tremendously valuable equipment behind your telephone was built by the savings of many thousands of small investors. That money was invested because people believed in the telephone as a necessity vital to modern business and social life. Such public confidence is a tribute to the policies of the management; it made possible the development and expansion of the service through a half-century of unhalting progress.

Without that money, without that confidence, telephone service could not exist as we know it today in this State and Nation. It could not have attained the degree of perfection which makes it indisputably the finest, most efficient telephone service in the world.

Such wide-spread ownership is a measure of public confidence in the telephone in this State and Nation.

It is a gauge of the people's estimate of the solid, enduring worth of the service.

Forgotten Hospital,

Complete, Is Found

Forgotten for half a century, a hospital has been found on the seacoast of Denmark, and government officials are considering what to do with it. It was built in 1879 for cholera patients, there having been a cholera epidemic in Europe and a recurrence was expected. Soon after the opening a sailor believed to have had the dread disease, was admitted. He proved to have nothing worse than measles. No other patients came, and the place was closed and forgotten.

A young journalist found the hospital, with everything complete, from beds ready to use, to medicines and salt cellars containing salt put there 54 years ago. The discoverer has suggested that it be converted into a vacation resort for poor children of Copenhagen.—Montreal Herald.

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be in liquid form. A liquid dose can be regulated to the drop.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried.

CHAPTER I

The Chechahcos.

Garth knelt upon the planks of the small floating wharf to fasten a pitch-smeared patch on the bottom of his upturned birchbark canoe. In the midst of his work he paused to listen. A faraway drone was just audible above the ting and hum of insects. He turned to peer at the southerly sky above the vast flood of the Mackenzie. The drone became more distinct.

A plane was coming downriver towards the emergency refueling station at the old abandoned trading post. Yet the regular schedule of the line did not call for the northbound Belanca for several days. In all probability, the Commercial Airways had sent out its emergency plane from Fort McMurray, Alberta.

Though his thoughts lingered on the approaching plane, his eyes and hands returned to the patching of the canoe. The craft must be made ready for the weeks of upriver paddling. There would be none too much time for the thousand-mile trip out before the winter freeze-up.

As he finished the patch the loud drone of the motor swelled into a staccato roar. He turned to watch the white monoplane swoop down and take the water like a squattering duck.

The pilot started to taxi shoreward. Garth again set about patching the small leak. A sudden silence told that the motor had been stilled. Across the hush came a curt order:

"Ho, Jack, fend off and snub her." Garth leisurely twisted around to eye the incoming craft. She was a beautiful medium-sized plane with a cabin behind the semi-enclosed cockpit. Between her headway and the river current, she was driving towards the upstream side of the wharf at a speed that promised to smash the pontoons.

Yet neither of the two helmeted persons in the cockpit made a move to climb down in readiness to ward off the shock. Nor did either work the controls to veer the craft clear. Both were hastily putting on headsets and gloves to protect themselves from the outblowing swarms of mosquitoes and bulldog flies. They seemed to take for granted that the worker on the wharf would rush to give them service.

In the North allebodied men are supposed to wait upon themselves. More, the pilot's tone had been that of a master commanding an inferior. Garth stayed motionless, waiting for the crackup with cool curiosity.

At that the smaller person cried out in a sharp, almost shrill voice: "Quick, you gawping dummy!"

The fact that one of the pair was a woman made a vast difference. Garth caught the end of the mooring line flung by the pilot, and snatched up a long pipepole. Its outthrust point met the tip of the nearer pontoon.

Bent low, Garth put all of his weight and strength into his angling shove with the pole. The momentum of the ingling plane forced him back one step after another. Then his moccasins found a holding grip against the upturned edge of a plank.

Instead of driving in against the wharf at the blunt angle with which it had approached, the head of the plane began to swing off. With another out-thrust of strength, Garth swung it parallel with the upstream side of the wharf.

Aided by a slight swerve in the current, he was able to walk the plane to the outer end of the wharf before the nearer pontoon could hit the float logs. As the aircraft glided clear, he made the line fast to a ringbolt and returned to his canoe.

"What the devil!" snapped the pilot. "Come back, you fool. Take in the slack—moor us."

Garth swung his canoe into the water and stepped aboard to test the last patch. The airplane, having drifted downstream to the end of the line, swung around and lay nosing the current. Neither the man or the woman made a movement until Garth drove his canoe ashore and lifted it atop the stony bank.

As he climbed to the front of the old post store, above the base of the wharf, he saw the pilot at last swing down to haul on the line. Inside the big log cabin he crossed to one of the rear rooms and put a light hand on the forehead of the snoring man in the nearest bunk.

"Turn out, Tobin. Visitors." The grizzle-bearded station tender roused up to blink and peer. "Visitors? You're not stringin' me, Mr. Garth?"

"No. Rover plane." Tobin slipped on his moccasins and hobbled out into the storehouse. The pilot had moored his plane head and tail to the lower side of the landing stage. He was handing his woman companion down from the cockpit. Both had replaced their leather flying helmets with hats and mosquito nets.

They went in under the overhanging wing to the screened door of the cabin. It opened to the outthrust of a portly man in city clothes. Assisted by the pilot, he managed to get down upon the wharf by means of steps lowered from inside the cabin. After hurriedly putting on a headset and gloves, he started inshore between his two companions. He limped as if slightly crippled. But the lameness might have been due to cramp from long sitting.

Garth spoke to the supply tender: "I'm only a stray prospector, Tobin. Understand?"

"Aye, sir," grunted Tobin. Without a word of greeting, he hobbled back a few steps as the pilot and his passengers stepped in over the rough threshold.

The portly man opened a gold-mounted cigar case. The young woman produced a long amber-stemmed cigarette holder. This was promptly flung by the pilot, who paused only to slap a mosquito on his clean-shaven cheek before striking a match.

Out went Garth's hand in a swift clutch that caught the flaming match in his calloused palm. The pilot, who was as tall as Garth and heavier built, turned to stare down at him with cold anger.

"You insolent roughneck! Clear out of here."

Garth smiled. Toben did the answering: "Hub, crazy loon—lighting matches in here. Can't you read the sign? No smoking! Bounce him, lad." The pilot thrust a hand inside his leather jacket. "Try it. I'll drill both of you."

"How frightful," said Garth. "You must imagine this is a Wild West show. Please don't shoot until the lady can get outside. Shots are even more apt than matches to explode all this gasoline."

The portly man snapped shut his cigar case.

"That's so! You have no cause to be ruffled, Vivian. The fellow seems to have acted on a well-intentioned impulse."

The pilot's hand came out empty from inside the jacket. "Why couldn't the fool have spoken a warning?"

Garth had sized up the man. He expected neither an apology for the abuse nor thanks for saving the visitors from possible annihilation. With an indifferent smile, he shifted the gaze of his gray eyes to examine the woman member of the party.

A first glance had led him to think her older than the pilot. Under her rouge and powder her face was thin and drawn. Its lines might have belonged to a woman in the mid-thirties. Her blue eyes looked more than bored and cynical. Their tiredness matched the lined face. Her body was thin almost to boniness.

Yet, upon examination, Garth saw she could not be even in the mid-twenties. Traces of girlish freshness still lingered in her painted face, under the blemishes of dissipation and disillusionment.

As she faced away from him, the pilot spoke to Tobin: "Get busy. Truck down sixty gallons of gas and five of oil—and be quick about it. While your helper is refueling the plane, you'll cook us the best meal you can throw together."

Down came Tobin's shaggy eyebrows. "Who d'you think you're bossin'? Shove along to a tradin' post for yer grub an' gas. This here cache is the compny's emergency deepo."

The portly visitor took a billfold from his coat and drew out a paper. "Take a look at this order, my man. It authorizes me to requisition any of the Airways' stations for whatever supplies I wish."

Tobin read the order, and thrust it back, with no lessening of his dourness. "So you're Burton Ramill, are you? Looks like a straight order. All the same, you'll sign the book before you'll get a drop."

He turned about to open an oily account book on one of the stacks of gasoline cases. Mr. Ramill drew a fountain pen from his vest pocket with plump white fingers, and limped forward to write.

"There's your receipt," said the pilot. "Now have this dumb helper of yours rush out our gas, and get your pans on the fire. We want service."

"Yuh? Well, you're welcome to want it till doomsday. That compny order calls for supplies. Don't say nothin' about cookin' nor service."

Mr. Ramill interposed: "All right, man. I see you're stiff from rheumatism. I will pay this young fellow to refuel the plane."

Garth turned his cool gaze upon the pilot. "Why not give this bird of yours the chance to earn a little more pay?" "Because Mr. Huxby has flown my plane all the way from Chicago, with only short stop-overs. Also, he is my partner, not a mechanic."

"Well, he's not the only party present who's not a kiwi." Garth pulled a small poke from inside his buckskin shirt, hefted it as if considering, and put it back. "Nor do I need your pay."

Huxby's supercilious eyes glistened with sudden keen interest. "What's that? You're from the new gold fields?"

"No." "But your gold sack?" "Gold?" Garth muttered.

He drew out his poke again and opened it to shake a few small nodules of metal into his palm. Both Huxby and Mr. Ramill stepped close to peer at the grayish silvery bits. The older man looked puzzled. The younger took a nodule into his own palm, eyed it a moment, and handed it back in an indifferent manner.

"Galena. I'm a mining engineer. You're out of luck, not making a gold strike. Never before in history has silver been so low."

Garth looked disappointed. "Too bad, isn't it?"

He picked out a nodule that had been rubbed to a rather bright polish. The girl was leaning with her left hand on one of the lower piles of gasoline cases. A ring with a large blue diamond banded the "engagement" finger. Garth thrust the nodule up close beside the ring.

"Yes," he said, "I always did think gold looked prettier than galena—even white gold."

The girl drew her hand away as if he had smirched it. "My ring is not gold. You pretend to be a prospector, yet do you know platinum from gold?"

"Platinum?" Garth questioned. "But your friend here called it galena."

Mr. Ramill interposed: "Permit me, Lilith.—Young man, I am largely interested in metalliferous mines. If you have located a lode of galena, the lead might pay for development of the prospect."

"That depends," put in Huxby. "Where's the place?"

"Three weeks—paddle and portage," Garth answered.

"Slow travel. But by airplane?"

"The bird distance can't interest you. Neither lead nor silver would pay for airplane freighting. Nor would packing. I lost ten pounds of this—galena. Canoe upset, running one of the rapids."

As Garth spoke he put up a hand to cover a yawn. "If you don't mind, Tobin, I'll roll in. It's a long travail to Great Slave."

The portly investor in mines caught the eye of his engineer partner. He spoke to Garth: "You are going outside?"

"Perhaps."

"Well, a day or so should make no difference to you. Is there a lake or pond near your prospect?"

"One about four miles long; half as wide."

Huxby repeated his question: "It could be reached how soon by air?"

The fish were no longer nibbling; they were hooked. Garth had only to haul in on his line. But he took his time about it. He paused to consider. Not all fish prove to be desirable catches.

Neither Mr. Ramill nor Huxby looked like a crook. They had the appearance of reputable business men. On the other hand, neither looked easy. Huxby broke in on Garth's weighing of the chances: "Well, Jack, let's have it."

"Two to three hours," Garth replied. "I don't know the speed of your plane."

"Fastest type of cabin cruiser. Call it six hours to go and return, and the same to inspect your prospect. It's possible there may be a trace of gold in your ore. I'll test it while you get your sleep."

The girl spoke to Mr. Ramill: "I shall take a nap myself, Dad. Ten hours of flying, with no chance to dance off the Scotch, is enough to kill a horse."

In the act of handing a nodule to Huxby, Garth paused to stare at the girl. So that was the answer—liquor, tobacco, paint, and all the rest of the flapper-jazz rot.

She stiffened and stared back at him haughtily. He dropped the nodule into Huxby's cupped palm and crossed into the rear room to stretch out on one of the bunks.

A tug at his shoulder roused Garth from his six-hour sleep. Tobin's hoarse voice croaked in his ear:

"Roll out, sir. Sun's up. The pair of 'em are keen to be a-wing. Looks like their test of your nugget livened 'em up. Grub's on."

Garth pulled on his buckskins and moccasins and stepped into the storehouse. Miss Ramill was coming in at the front door. She paused to remove her headset. Huxby and Mr. Ramill were already putting down a hearty breakfast of bacon, sourdough bread and oatmeal porridge. Garth crowded past them and Tobin to the end of the little shelf table.

Jefferson's Rules

Rules compiled by Thomas Jefferson included: Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today. Never trouble another for what you can do yourself. Never spend your money before you have it. Never buy what you do not want because it is cheap; it will be dear to you. Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst and cold. We never regret of having eaten too little. Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly. How much pain is suffered in evils which have never happened. Take things always by the smooth handle. When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, a hundred.

Amazing Juggling Trick

The most amazing juggling performance ever presented on a stage was the billiard-ball-and-cue act of the famous German juggler, Paul Cinquevalli. This feat, which required eight years to perfect, consisted of balancing two balls on the top of a cue, which in turn was balanced on another movable ball in a drinking glass that he held in his mouth.—Collier's Weekly.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Editha L. Watson

THE VALLAGRANA LEDGE

DON TOMAS AGUILA was the richest man in Monterey. Surely he had no need for more, but such wealth that no one ever thinks he has enough. Don Tomas, certainly, felt that he would like to add to his riches. There was a silver mine in Lower California—the Vallagrana—which brought forth enormous quantities of the pale metal. Don Tomas wished to own a part of this mine—a third would do—and he would pay $150,000 for the privilege. But why should its owners part with a third of their wealth? Alas, no, senior, it could not be!

To whom the Don made his offer is slightly obscure. The Vallagrana was an Indian mine, owned and worked by the natives of Baja, California. Surely he did not imagine that they would be interested in the transaction. Or perhaps he was gambling in futures, and made his offer to the men who started out to locate the fabulous ledge of silver—the offer to become valid if and when that location had been successfully made.

The mine was real—there is no doubt of that. It takes its name from the Mexican governor of Lower California, who, due to one of those political tempests which have flurried every so often over Mexico, was forced to flee in 1880 to La Paz. On the way, Vallagrana and his followers took refuge for a time in an Indian camp.

The governor evidently had a manner of making friends. Before he left the hospitable Indians they had showed their guests the wonderful ledge of silver which was their treasure. Wonderful it certainly was, for the outcrop could be traced for over 1,800 feet, and was over 25 feet wide at the surface!

After promising absolute secrecy, the governor and his party were given seven specimens of the ore for souvenirs, and later they departed for La Paz. Various vicissitudes befell them, then, and a year later only one man still had his piece of ore. At last he had it assayed. It ran 3,900 ounces of silver to the ton!

The prospect of obtaining more of this precious ore overcame the memory of promises made. Vallagrana told, then, what had happened; and in July of 1883 he and five other men landed in La Paz on their way back to the wonderful ledge.

But Indians had strict codes of justice. After the former governor and his men left La Paz, they were never seen nor heard of again.

Every year since 1883 there have been others who hoped to find the ledge of silver. They have started out confidently; often they have paid an Indian or two to guide them to their goal. But these "guides" have never seemed to find the location of the silver.

UNPROFITABLE MURDER

AN OLD Uintah Indian told Pete Madison, prospector-at-large, a story of gold. There were two miners, the tribesman said, who spent the winter in the Pat's Hole section of Moffat county, Colorado. They worked all winter, in spite of storms, and at last collected about 25 pounds of gold.

Finally they ran out of provisions. It would seem pleasant to see other people again, a sort of vacation after the long, tiresome winter, so the two left their camp and started west toward a settlement where they expected to buy supplies.

In the early days of the West, "bad men" seemed to be hidden in the most unexpected places. A band of such outlaws appeared after the two miners had crossed the Utah line, and they found that they must fight for their lives.

There was a ledge back of them; they stood against this and defended themselves as best they could against the desperadoes.

It was an uneven battle. One miner went down; the other tried to fight his way through but a bullet stopped him.

Much to the chagrin of the outlaws, the miners had only enough gold with them to pay for their supplies and a modest spree. It had been scarcely worth while killing them for this. And now the point arose that if these bodies should be discovered, posses would certainly trail down the murderers.

The only thing to do was to conceal the corpses where they lay. Accordingly, the outlaws pried off the face of the ledge so that fallen rocks and dirt covered the two dead men, and hurried away from the scene.

This was the story that the old Uintah Indian told Pete Madison, and Pete, a characteristic chaser of golden phantoms, made up his mind to hunt out the mine. He went as far as the ranch of Harry Chew, an old-timer in that region, and here he found substantiation to the story of the fight: Years before, while Chew was exploring a steel cliff in Pool canyon, Utah, he had found a human skull, exposed by erosion, at the foot of a ledge. Curious to know what lay out of sight, he dug around and uncovered two bodies—evidently those of the unfortunate miners.

Beyond this neither man was able to trace. The mine remains hidden among the hills, perhaps concealed by fallen trees or rock slides, and the lucky discoverer has not yet come along.

"A" AND "AN"

Most American writers and critics now consider "an" historian, "an" hotel, archaic or affected. The article "a" is correct and in good use before any initial "h" that is pronounced, even though the initial syllable is not accented. In present American usage "a" historian, "a" hotel is the correct and preferred form. "An" historian, "an" hotel usually suggested affectation.

In Mexico City

Indians Selling Toys In Mexico City.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

IN CONTRAST to the situation in any great city of the United States, one finds in Mexico City practically no night life in cafes, cabarets and showplaces. By 9:30 p. m., except for patrons returning from moving-picture houses, the streets are almost deserted. Climate causes this. Because of high altitude, nights are often exceptionally cool. Dinner is usually served in the early afternoon and a light repast at night.

Late in the afternoon you see the city's busy shopping streets at their best. Crowds throng the famous avenues; taxis, busses, and private motor cars crowd the streets, where traffic is handled by policemen in white gloves. An odd cosmopolitanism marks the larger stores of Mexico City. In German stores you may see American-made machines, typewriters, tools, hardware, ice boxes, and furniture. Fancy American groceries and preserved meats are sold by Spanish merchants. Women's wear, soaps, perfumery, jewelry, silks, millinery, and other department-store goods are retailed often by the French, and in nearly all large stores English is spoken. In the past it was obvious that fashionably dressed Mexican women preferred hats, clothing, and shoes imported from Paris. Now, to a growing degree, American styles, especially in sport and street clothes, are closely followed. This is an influence, no doubt, of the moving-picture shows and increasing travel between the United States and Mexico.

American style and influence are reflected again, not only in dress, but in the occupation of Mexican women. There is more social and industrial freedom. Now a growing number of Mexican girls are employed as stenographers, bookkeepers, clerks, and telephone operators, and have well proved their fitness for a place in the new world of Mexican economics.

Since the passing of the Diaz regime, changes have come fast. You see such change not only in new buildings, but in better communications, more people who speak English, more skilled workers, and a high standard of living.

People Eager for Knowledge.

The popular thirst for knowledge is bona fide and deep-rooted. Free libraries multiply and all classes and ages frequent them. In the library of the department of education is a room for children, with a famous artist's panels depicting a charming version of Little Red Riding Hood. Out in Chapultepec park, amid giant ahuehuete trees that were there in Aztec days, stands the fascinating Quixote fountain. Tiled seats run around it and a statue of Don Quixote faces one of old Sancho Panza on his mule. Fitted into the base of the statues are bookshelves, with copies of Cervantes' tales and the works of Plato, Plutarch, Homer, Stendhal, and Goethe. Here flock the young and old men, who wish to be quiet and read the classics. Around the basin of the fountain runs a sentence, the first line of Cervantes' immortal romance: "At a place in La Mancha whose name I do not care to recall."

This forest of Chapultepec, inherited from the Aztecs, remains one of America's beauty spots. Its giant cypresses, known as ahuehuetes, were old when Cortez was a baby. It surrounds a hill on which stands the castle of Chapultepec, a presidential palace. Here, in the old days, Montezuma had a summer palace. (The name in Aztec means Grasshopper hill. When Maximilian and Carlota came they remodeled the old viceroys' palace into a Tuscan style of almost Pompeian voluptuousness. Here is displayed that famous painting showing Cortez torturing the last Aztec emperor.)

Tourists, especially in the cold winter months, through the city in ever-increasing groups. Many come now by airplane, for regularly established lines tie the Mexican capital to various American cities. Between Mexico City and the Pacific coast port of Acapulco a motor highway has been opened, following in general the ancient military road used when Spanish galleons from Manila discharged cargo at Acapulco for shipment to Spain via Mexico City and Vera Cruz.

Out to historic Cuernavaca, where the American ambassador and others have country places, a scenic motor highway now leads, and likewise to Puebla, ancient and prosperous city. From the American border, motor highways, like the one to Monterrey, are beginning to penetrate, and it is only a question of time until touring motor parties from the United States will be a common sight on the streets of Mexico City. It is a curious fact that nearly a century ago one visitor predicted that some day a public stage-coach line would ply from Philadelphia and Washington to the old Aztec capital!

Native Art Is Amazing.

The art of the Indian and the modern Mexican intrigues every tourist. Whether one is lured by Aztec art in the museum, by native serapes or ceramics, by the many fine old paintings in the churches and galleries, or sometimes by the more futuristic murals and canvases of the moderns, Mexico City is, beyond question, the conspicuous seat of Spanish-American artistic culture in North America.

The brush-and-pen achievements of mere school children and their plastic work in clay is inevitably a source of astonishment to foreign visitors.

Even in early colonial days, a few Indian painters, trained by the padres, painted pictures which attracted much attention in Europe; and today an increasing number of artists come to Mexico, not only to study the work of the ancients, but to mingle with modern native artists and to work in the atmosphere of the old Aztec capital.

Not only is the city the cultural center of the nation, but it is also the center of the publishing and book trades. Practically all newsprint and book paper used is made locally. Most Mexican writers—barring a few of the older men of letters who cling to the provincial capitals—reside here, and each year there is issued from local presses about 200 new titles, often reaching more than 2,000,000 volumes. Besides these, the numerous bookstores, large and small, sell a steady stream of books printed in Spain and France. The works of Spanish writers appear more popular than those of Mexican writers. About 4,000,000 books printed in Spain are sold in Mexico each year and perhaps 500,000 from France.

Some of the most colossal structures built by prehistoric men anywhere in the Western Hemisphere are found in Mexico. Mitla, Uxmal, Palenque, Chichen Itza, the incomparable pyramid of Cholula, its base greater than that of Cheops—all these are monuments left by forgotten civilizations.

The Ancient Pyramids.

Skirt Lake Texcoco, on a fine motorway from Mexico City, and you soon reach San Juan Teotihuacan. Here, before even the Aztecs came, some mysterious race appeared, building its temples and pyramids with a symbolic art strangely like that of ancient Egypt. Here is the Pyramid of the Sun. On its summit, according to tradition, once stood a giant stone figure, which bore on its breast a great plate of burnished gold, fixed there in such a position that it reflected the rays of sunrise. A few furlongs from here, on a strange road called the Path of the Dead, stands the Pyramid of the Moon. About the moon temple are many ruins of other structures adorned with oddly evil serpent faces which are carved from stone.

Who built these marvelous works, now so still, unreal and empty? Certainly no native race in the last half dozen centuries has produced any architecture to compare with these ruins.

Persistent as Indian conservatism has been and deep as is the native Mexican love for handicraft, you see it yielding now to the machine age. Cigarette factories here are marvels of modern speed, efficiency, and mass production. Tourists visiting one famous factory, which employs hundreds of men and girls and has its own private chapel, medical department, school, post and telegraph offices, as well as a complete lithographing plant for its advertising work, are fascinated at the velocity of the great machines, which make nearly 16,000,000 cigarettes a day.

It is the mushroom growth of small shops, fostered by electric power and the new import tariff laws, which is most significant. In recent years an amazing number of necessities, formerly imported, have come to be made here. From a veritable host of tanneries comes leather of good quality, which is skillfully worked into trunks, harness, saddles, belts, boots and shoes, and handbags. Candy and cakes and soft drinks are important manufactures, and the output of ready-made clothing from cotton, wool, and linen has grown hugely in recent times. Railroad shops, iron and steel mills, as well as smelting and refining works, now give employment to thousands; and a new industry, airplane construction, is growing up.

Little Lights on LIVING

RESPECT FOR LAW

ALL creation is an expression of law, from the suns and stars of the universe to man. Man, the highest creation, has the least respect for law of any living thing, for nature itself is law abiding. In plant life the great trees to the smallest flowers grow by law, and in the lower animals, we find them guided through their generations by instinct. Because man has the greatest authority of all created beings, he also has the greatest responsibility. This he has not taken too seriously, for man is erratic. The greatest freedom on earth has the man who is most law abiding, for freedom is not license; it is law on its highest level.

If man be law abiding spiritually his faith frees him from worry. If he be law abiding mentally his attitude is one of tolerance, justice and open mindedness. If he be law abiding morally he respects his own body for its highest creative function, that of life giving—not life squandering. If he be law abiding physically he thinks and acts in positive health terms daily, to the point of sacrifice pleasure for health. If youth could learn that freedom is not license but the conforming to law whereby he may climb to steeper heights and fuller experiences of life, fewer wild flings would cramp his body and soul with disease and disaster.

Self-realization, not self-expression, the world needs. Maude Royden said we cannot break a natural law, for such laws as that of gravity and of growth cannot be broken. But, continues the wise teacher, we can break ourselves against these laws. Youth is taught to respect fire, why? Because familiarity with fire is consequential. He should be taught to respect law for the same reason. Life is built by law, not luck.

Parents do wrong to frighten children by threats of the policeman. He is not to be feared but revered, for he protects people who do right. Children should be taught to reverence certain fundamentals for right living, such as "the inflexible honesty" of George Washington. The man who respects these is protected by the law. Stop and go lights are a protective not a prohibitive measure. Children can be trained by parents in creating an attitude of respect for law which will deepen as the years pass and responsibilities grow heavier. Life is built by law, not luck, and freedom comes this way.

WHEN WORK IS TOIL

AN AMERICAN traveler, was walking down a dusty road in France when he came upon workmen breaking rock. Stopping the first he asked, "My good man, what are you doing?" "Breaking rock," doggedly answered the workman, without looking up. A second workman near by, he plied the same question. "Earning $3 a day," came the second indifferent response. Approaching a third, he tried again to gain information. This time the workman stopped, raising up with difficulty. He placed his hand on his tired back. When his eyes met those of the stranger, a light broke over his face. Pointing across the road to a building in construction, he said proudly, "I am helping to build that cathedral."

We have often heard this story, but I am wondering if we have ever thought what made the difference in the spirit of the workmen. The first two men were laboring hard at toil. Life to them was drudgery. No light higher than the rock pile or the pay roll came to their vision. Work becomes toil when the love light for our work grows dim, whether our work be chopping wood or writing verse, "Enthusiasm is the best hill climber" in this old world. It has carried many sailors through storms into port, has brought convalescents to health, has kept la joie de vivre in the hearts of many through long lean years of poverty and depression.

What is it that brings such power? Nothing more nor less than love—the greatest life giving force on the planet. Just as the love for a new life takes the mother through travail, so was it love that made the third workman, through the fatigue of breaking rock, see the vision of the completed cathedral with its service to God and man.

There is a spiritual comeback, a buoyancy to work well done. Failure to do one's best is a depressant. Success is something of a habit.

When the builder of a fireplace sees for the first time the draught pull firmly up the chimney—there is spiritual satisfaction that does something to him that even his pay check fails to do. This, I say, is the real profit of good work. It brings to one a sense of having achieved, it is a spirit of success in one's soul, as it were.

A college lad came into my office one morning with the query, "How much do you think one should love his work to make a success of it?" Immediately I answered, "As well at six at night as at nine o'clock in the morning!" "When we love our work, we do not know that we are working."

CROCHETED FLOWERS FOR POT HOLDERS

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Pot holders crocheted with heavy string are very practical and when made in flower forms are really lovely. They are heavy enough to protect the hands without requiring padding. These three pot holders are crocheted in the same manner but in different combinations of red, yellow and green. The petals are crocheted separately of one color and then slip stitched together and finished in contrasting colors. Size when finished about six inches.

Instruction sheet No. 731 with illustrations and instructions how to crochet these holders, also how to arrange the colors, will be mailed to you for 10 cents. Material can also be bought from this department. Information and price are given when mailing instructions.

Healthy Eye Can Exist Only in Healthy Body

"It may be put down as a general and obvious truth that a healthy eye can exist only in a healthy body," says Dr. Hyman Cohen in "Hygiene of the Eye," in Hygeia.

Progressive shortsightedness with its inherent tendency to grow worse during the growth and school period requires special hygienic care. The eyes should be re-examined frequently. Glasses should be worn constantly. School tasks should be shortened as to time and amount, and no extra tasks, such as music, sewing and special studies should be imposed on near-sighted children. Good print in the books that are read, proper light and proper posture are important.

Sents and desks in schoolrooms should be adjusted to the height of the children so that the erect sitting posture may be maintained and the habit of tilting the head to one side may be avoided. Light is the medium in which the eyes work, as air is the medium in which we breathe. Light should be sufficient in quantity, free from glare, evenly diffused and properly directed.

103 and No Stomach

Ferdinand Waggoner, a retired florist, died recently at Springfield, Ill., at the age of one hundred and three after having lived for 43 years with silver tubes for a stomach. Waggoner was wounded accidentally in the back by a shotgun during the Chicago fire in 1871 and 21 years later doctors found it necessary to remove the stomach and substitute an artificial one.

HOW Firestone GIVES YOU LOWEST COST PER MILE

FIRESTONE TIRES are built different—they have three patented construction features not used in any other truck tire. The body is built with Gum-Dipped High Stretch cords. Gum-Dipping, the patented Firestone process, soaks the cords in pure liquid rubber, insulating and coating every strand in every cord. This is why Firestone Tires run cooler and are stronger.

The tread is made of a new and tougher rubber compound which gives greatest resistance to wear. This, together with the scientific non-skid design, gives greater traction and longer non-skid mileage. Firestone locks this wider, heavier and more rugged tread securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body of the tire by building two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords (patented) under the tread.

These exclusive construction features result in lowest cost per mile. The largest operators in the country and operators of all types of equipment buy Firestone Tires year after year on their cost-reducing performance.

Call on the Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Tire Dealer nearest you today, and start reducing your operating costs. When buying new equipment be sure to specify Firestone Tires.

meeting in which many of the delegates participated.

Through the courtesy of Supt. A. E. Giddings, a group of Juniors was present from the Tawas City public school. To these children Mrs. Nyda Campbell Leslie taught a lovely Christmas carol. Mrs. Leslie's attractive personality, together with her remarkable ability, made this part of the program most pleasing as well as instructive.

Mrs. W. C. Davidson then led the group in a worship service suitable for use in the one-room Sunday school, with special attention centered about the children. Scripture and prayer and the beautifully told story of "The Fault-Finding Barley Grains" were outstanding features of this service. The interested attentiveness of the entire group was an enviable tribute to Mrs. Davidson's ability and earnestness.

Mrs. W. E. Glendon of Hale then taught the children as a Sunday school class, using the Scripture story of the talents as lesson material. Mrs. Glendon's own interest and enthusiasm are contagious and adults as well as children thoroughly enjoyed her presentation.

Mrs. Frank Dease gave the financial status of the Iosco Council of Religious Education reporting contributions from the Hemlock Road Baptist, Tawas City M. E. and Tawas City Baptist Sunday schools, and soliciting financial assistance from the other Sunday schools of the county, as well as individual contributions. The institute offering totaled $8.54.

Mrs. Helen N. Shattuck, children's division superintendent, suggested projects for the near future and the following were selected by the group:

1. The urging of P. T. A.'s, Women's Clubs and Men's Clubs of the county to hold at least one meeting during the year on "Religious Training of the Child," for which the council will supply a speaker if desired. Already the P. T. A.'s of Hale Tawas City and East Tawas are planning such meetings.
2. A county-wide Children's Music Festival for early December.
3. Another Children's Workers Institute to be held in the early spring.

Mr. Nisbet of Indian Lake, one of the most loyal workers and former president of the Iosco Sunday School Association, closed the institute with prayer, and the delegates departed feeling that it was good to have spent this day of Christian fellowship together.

Wornout Money Into Sewer

An average of $60,000,000 in Canadian money goes down the sewer annually from the parliament building in Ottawa, observes a writer in Capper's Weekly. This total represents Canadian paper money of all denominations taken out of circulation due to wear and tear. The average life of Canada's paper money bills is less than ten months. The wornout paper currency is boiled beyond recognition with the aid of chemicals to obliterate the print and coloring. The bills are then put through a heater and then dumped into the sewer pipe.

Potteries Show Chinese Ritual

The potteries found in the early tombs of the Chinese represent copies of their earthly belongings as well as objects prescribed by ritual for burial with the dead.

Blackwell's Island

Blackwell's Island is in East river and belongs to New York city. It has an area of about 120 acres, and contains the penitentiary, almshouse, lunatic asylum for women, workhouse blind asylum, hospital for incurable and a convalescent hospital. Nearly all these buildings were erected from convict labor, the style of architecture being of a turreted and battlemented design of the feudal character. The island is bordered by a heavy granite wall, also built by the convicts, and a large amount of farming and gardening is carried on by the inmates of the penitentiary.

No Cows Brought by Pilgrims

No cows were brought by the Pilgrims to the United States in 1620. The first cows imported were in 1624, by Governor Winthrop, according to Albert S. Bolles in the Industrial History of the United States. These cows were raised primarily for hides, secondarily for meat, and only incidentally for milk.

Choose Poison or Rope

Persons condemned to death in Estonia are allowed to choose whether they prefer to be hanged or take poison, according to a criminal law. Under the law the executioner remains anonymous and his name is not even mentioned in the tribunal's record.

The Well of St. Keyne
