M-65 Will Be Hard Surfaced To Hale

PRELIMINARY WORK WILL START SOON

Will Provide Employment For 215 Men Over 11 Months

Plans for the construction of 14 miles of oil aggregate surfacing on M-65 from Hale south through Whittemore to the county line were announced Wednesday. The project for construction from the county line to U. S. 23 has been previously announced.

State Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner and Lewis Nims, director of the WPA projects and planning division, joined in revealing that the project will cost $141,107 and will provide work for 215 men over a period of eleven or twelve months. Preliminary work will get under way immediately, they said.

This project is part of a program for improvement of farm-to-market and tourist routes submitted to Federal authorities by Commissioner Van Wagoner for inclusion in the WPA program. Supervision of the work will be supplied by the state highway department and the works progress administration will handle all details of construction.

Oil aggregate surfacing is a recent development which provides a hard, dust-proof surface for roads which do not carry heavy traffic loads. It can be applied for approximately one-fourth the cost of concrete and will result in considerable savings in maintenance costs.

FORMER IOSCO JUDGE DIES AT MUSKEGON

Judge W. H. Simpson Here During Lumbering Days

News Review of Current Events the World Over

President Raps Tugwell for Budget Prediction—WPA Job Program Moves Rapidly—Farmers Indorse Corn-Hog Control for 1936.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

REXFORD G. TUGWELL, undersecretary of agriculture and once considered head man of the "brain trust," made a speech at Los Angeles the other day that called for a sharp rebuke from President Roosevelt.

Addressing a Democratic gathering, Tugwell asserted that the administration could satisfy every humanitarian demand and still balance the budget in 1938.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a press conference, scolded the newspapers for printing what he called "crazy stories" and went on to declare that Tugwell's assertion was almost as unfounded as the predictions thrown out by many political observers that the budget probably would never be balanced again.

Tugwell's statement wasn't quite as "wild" as the newspaper stories, he remarked, because Tugwell knew a little more about the budget than the newspaper men.

The President said he and his advisers were about to make a study of the financial situation, and that until the budget is finally drafted about the first of the year not even he knows what shape it will take.

Every effort, he said, would be made to hold the regular government departments down to the figures of this fiscal year, but he would make no predictions as to emergency expenditures.

JOBBS for 3,500,000 needy persons by November 15, and an end of the dole by December 1. That was the forecast made by the New Dealers in Washington, and it appeared probable of accomplishment.

Officials said states will receive no direct relief allotments from the government for December and that the November grants will be greatly reduced.

The loans will be made on corn which, if shelled, would grade No. 3 or better. The grade requirement last year called for No. 4. The loan rate then was 55 cents a bushel.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI defies the League of Nations and its sanctions. In a speech at the inauguration of the new university in Rome he said:

"In the face of an economic siege toward which all civilized people of the world should feel supreme shame, in the face of an experiment which they wanted to test, for the first time, against the Italian people, let it be said:

"We will oppose it with our most implacable resistance, with our most firm decision and with our most supreme contempt."

However, it was announced in Geneva that the duce was willing to negotiate for peace with Ethiopia, and there was a possibility the league would delay for 15 days the application of further penalties.

King Victor Emmanuel issued a decree putting the entire Italian merchant marine on a war basis.

Prime Minister Baldwin's reply to Mussolini's defiance was a blunt assertion that Great Britain was prepared to resort to force, if necessary, to carry out the sanctions. Said he: "We mean nothing to the league if we are not prepared in the end, and after grave and careful trial, to take action to enforce its judgments."

The British government made new protests to Italy against Italian press attacks on Britain and anti-British propaganda in Egypt, and three more destroyers were sent from Gibraltar to Malta.

WHILE the League of Nations was going forward with its plans for the imposition of sanctions against Italy, its officials asked the United States government to comment on this policy, for the attitude of this country is considered vital to the success of the program.

Secretary of State Hull replied promptly but with extreme caution, avoiding comment on the action taken by the league powers and inferentially declining to cooperate in the sanctions.

The answer, whose tenor was dictated by President Roosevelt, was sent to Minister Hugh Wilson at Bern. It only set forth the moves made by the United States under the neutrality act and restated our government's hope for world peace.

In press conferences Mr. Hull stressed the fact that this country will continue to move independently to keep free and untangled as President Roosevelt has promised.

AMERICAN citizens are not respecting the embargo on shipments to Italy and Ethiopia to an extent that satisfies the administration. Therefore the President issued this statement:

"In dealing with the conflict between Ethiopia and Italy I have carried into effect the will and intent of the neutrality resolution recently enacted by congress. We have prohibited all shipments of arms, ammunition, and implements of war to the belligerent governments. By my public statement of October 5, which was emphasized by the secretary of state on October 10, we have warned American citizens against transactions of any character with either of the belligerent nations except at their own risk.

"This government is determined not to become involved in the controversy and is anxious for the restoration and maintenance of peace.

"However, in the course of war, tempting trade opportunities may be offered to our people to supply materials which would prolong the war. I do not believe that the American people will wish for abnormally increased profits that temporarily might be secured by greatly extending our trade in such materials; nor would they wish the struggles on the battlefield to be prolonged because of profits accruing to a comparatively small number of American citizens.

"Accordingly, the American government is keeping informed as to all shipments consigned for export to both belligerents."

Secretary of State Hull issued another statement calling upon American citizens to desist from trading with either Italy or Ethiopia. Such trade, he declared, was conducted "at the expense of human lives and human misery."

EARTHQUAKE tremors that were felt in many localities all the way from Spokane and Calgary to New York and Boston were severest in Helena, where at least two persons were killed and many injured. Numerous buildings weakened by the former tremors in the Montana capital were thrown down and the property losses were considerable.

CONSTITUTIONALITY of the Guffey coal act, a highly controversial measure, is to be passed on by the Supreme court. The way was opened when Justice Jesse Adkins of the District of Columbia Supreme court granted to the Carter Coal company a temporary injunction restraining government enforcement of the act.

In allowing the issuance of a temporary injunction, Justice Adkins denied another order which would have restrained the government from collecting the penalty prescribed by the act for noncompliance. He directed that the coal company post a bond of $1,500 a day for ten days to insure stockholders of the company against a loss through imposition of the penalty should the act be held constitutional.

Regardless of the District Supreme court's decision on the constitutionality of the act, the test case will be carried to the Supreme court for a final decision by the company or the government, attorneys said.

LIBERTY League's committee of 58 more or less eminent lawyers got into trouble by offering free legal services in anti-New Deal litigation. Someone protested to the American Bar association and that body's grievance committee has been asked for an opinion on the ethics of the offer. It was reported that the members of the league's committee had been cited for unethical practices, but the bar association denied this had yet been done.

THERE is no lack of potential candidates for the Republican Presidential nomination. The latest boom to be informally launched is for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, often mentioned as a possibility.

The other day there was a gathering in Topeka of party leaders, including members of the state committee, state office holders, congressmen and Senator Arthur Capper, and after some oratory they unanimously and enthusiastically endorsed the governor for the nomination.

Landon had not indicated whether he would be a candidate. If he will, the movement will probably be given formal status at the annual Kansas day dinner in Topeka on January 29, the seventy-fifth anniversary of the state's admission to the Union.

TWO tragic airplane accidents marked the week in the United States. The huge Boeing bombing plane built for the army, largest land plane in the country, was being tested near Dayton, Ohio, when it fell and burst into flames. Maj. P. P. Hall, chief testing pilot, was killed and four others were injured. Lieuts. R. K. Giovannioli and L. F. Harman risked their lives to rescue those trapped in the wreck and were themselves painfully burned.

Another Boeing plane, re-built and undergoing tests by the United Air Lines, crashed against a small hill near Cheyenne and the four occupants were hurled to death.

HONDURAS suffered one of the worst floods in its history. Fully 115 deaths resulted, and the property damage is estimated at $12,000,000, half of it sustained by the United Fruit company. Reports of the disaster reaching Tegucigalpa were meager and vague, and the mortality list may be greatly increased later.

WANG CHING-WEL, premier of China, and two other officials were wounded by an assassin in Nanking. Martial law was declared there immediately. The Rengo (Japanese) News agency, crediting Chinese sources, said the assassin was a member of the central executive committee of the Kuomintang (ruling Chinese party). Chinese sources asserted he was a citizen of a foreign power. The Reuters (British) News agency reported Wang's assailant was a Japanese newspaper man.

POLITICAL gossip in Washington is that Senator Vic Donahey of Ohio may be invited by the administration to be the Democratic candidate for Vice President next year. Mr. Garner, of course, can have a re-nomination if he really wants it, but there is some reason to believe that he would prefer to retire to private life after nearly forty years of public service. Donahey's impressive victory over Simeon Fess in 1932 and his well known vote-getting ability lead some prominent Democrats to think it would be wise to put him on the ticket as Mr. Roosevelt's running mate.

JIMMY WALKER, former mayor of New York, has ended his three years of self-imposed exile and returned to the metropolis. Tammany Hall, which "made" him politically, took no part in the welcome accorded him, but enough others joined in the affair to fill seven or eight boats that met the liner Manhattan at quarantine. These included delegations from the Friars club, the Lambs club and the Grand Street Boys' association of which Jimmy was vice president. At the docks there was a tremendous throng to greet Walker and his wife, the former Betty Compton.

RELATED reports told of the terrific hurricane that swept across the southern peninsula of Haiti and that was followed by devastating floods. There was no way of estimating the number of fatalities, but they were believed to be as many as two thousand. Entire populations of many valley villages were wiped out.

HOW PADDY WARNED LIGHTFOOT

IT WAS a queer partnership, that partnership between Lightfoot and Paddy, but it was a good partnership. They had been the best of friends for a long time. Paddy had always been glad to have Lightfoot visit his pond.

To tell the truth, he was rather fond of handsome Lightfoot. You know, Paddy is himself not at all handsome. On land he is a rather clumsy looking fellow and really homely. So he admired Lightfoot greatly. That is one reason why he proposed that they be partners.

Lightfoot himself thought the idea a splendid one. He spent that night browsing not far from Paddy's pond. With the coming of daylight he lay down under some thick growing hemlock trees near the upper end of Paddy's pond. It was a quiet, peaceful day. It was so quiet and peaceful and beautiful that it was hard to believe that hunters with terrible guns were searching the Green Forest for beautiful Lightfoot. But they were, and Lightfoot knew that sooner or later one of them would be sure to visit Paddy's pond. So, though he rested and took short naps all through that beautiful day, he was anxious. He couldn't help but be.

The next morning found Lightfoot back in the same place. But this morning he took no naps. He rested, but all the time he was watchful and alert. A feeling of uneasiness possessed him. He felt in his bones that danger in the shape of a hunter with a terrible gun was not far distant.

But the hours slipped away and little by little he grew less uneasy. He began to hope that that day would prove as peaceful as the previous day had been. Then suddenly there was a sharp report from the farther end of Paddy's pond. It was almost like a pistol shot. However, it wasn't a pistol shot. It wasn't a shot at all. It was the slap of Paddy's broad tail on the surface of the water. Instantly Lightfoot was on his feet. He knew just what that meant. He knew that Paddy had seen or heard or smelled a hunter.

It was even so. Paddy had heard

Hot smoked salmon sandwiches are particularly good if seasoned with horseradish and a little worcestershire sauce.

Do YOU Know—

That the Constitution, the most famous vessel in the history of the United States navy, earned her popular nickname, "Old Ironsides," from the hardness of her planking and timbers? Built at Boston and launched October 21, 1797, her most famous battle was the defeat of the English frigate Guerriere, August 19, 1812.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have a very dear friend, a Scotchman, who has just gone back to Scotland. I happen to know that he would never spend his own money to go back, yet he has gone. How do you think he got back?

Yours truly,
TOM KATT.

Answer: Your friend most likely heard some one sing "The Blue-bells of Scotland" and it carried him back.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I know a lady who never got married and she is now 42 years old. I asked her why she hadn't married and she said: "Why should I get married as long as I have a parrot and a monkey?" What did she mean by that?

Sincerely,
ROME E. OHE.

Answer: Probably her parrot swears and her monkey chews tobacco and she figures therefore she doesn't need a husband.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My husband was saying that he knows a man who uses "smokeless" tobacco.

I've known of horseless carriages, wireless telegraphy, seedless oranges, but what in the world is "smokeless tobacco"?

Yours truly,
IMA YAPP.

Answer: Chewing tobacco.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My father says he washes his eyes out every night before going to bed. If this is true how does he get them back in again?

Sincerely,
I LIDD.

Answer: He probably wears glasses.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Is it true that everything that goes up must come down?

Sincerely,

Answer: Everything that goes up does come down excepting a bank.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

HOT BREADS FOR COLD DAYS

A FLAKY, tender, white and well-browned baking powder biscuit is no mean accomplishment. To be successful, such hot breads should be made quickly and baked in a hot oven.

DAVID

By ANNE CAMPBELL

HE WAS a happy boy who did not know
One hour of disillusionment and strife.
All unacquainted with our deepest woe,
The bluest skies hung over his young life.
For him there were no tears, but only joy.
He never will be called upon to share
The bitter loss that robbed us of our boy,
And gave us such a troubled load to bear.

Youth's mirror was untarnished; he who gazed
With such clear eyes to futures bright with bliss,
Will never live to see the hopes he raised
Come tumbling 'round his head. . . .
And we who miss
His boyish laughter ringing through the halls,
His happy plans, so confident and gay,
Approach more eagerly the crystal walls
Of heaven, where we all will meet some day.

Dear boy, whose spirit lingers in the rooms
Where you lived joyfully for fifteen years,
Forgive us if we shadow your bright plumes
By giving way to grief and hopeless tears.
Only one ray of comfort shines for us,
Our day is long, and heavy is the night,
But your brave soul finds heaven glorious,
And where you are is happiness and light!

GRANITE STATE

Granite Quarry in New Hampshire.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

NEW HAMPSHIRE, the Granite state, claims primacy in many things. In 1776 its Colonial assembly adopted the first written constitution to be enjoyed by any of the states. Two years before this, it was on New Hampshire soil that the first armed blow was struck at British domination, when a band of patriots, led by John Sullivan and John Langdon, overpowered the small garrison at Fort William and Mary. In Portsmouth harbor, and took away the stores of powder. These were hidden beneath the pulpit in the old meeting house at Durham and were later taken to Bunker Hill, where another New Hampshire patriot, John Stark, used the ammunition in the engagement which first showed the quality of the New England rebels.

Apropos of Stark at Bunker Hill, there is a story that two British officers were watching the embarkation of their troops and were looking toward the crest of the hill where the Colonists had gathered. "Will they fight?" said one to the other. And his companion, who had served with Stark during the Indian wars, replied, "If one John Stark is there, they'll fight." The annual celebration of Bunker Hill day in Boston is in consequence something of an irritation to the New Hampshire mind, because it recalls that New Hampshire furnished most of the men, and that it was the strategy of John Stark of that state which gave the Colonials their success.

It is somewhat surprising to note that this same John Sullivan who led the midnight marauders at Fort William and Mary should have proved so cautious as a member of the Continental congress which formulated the Declaration of Independence. But when the die was cast, none was more courageous than he, and his march against the six nations is celebrated, even to this day.

Had First Free Library.

Among the other firsts, and one which gives New Hampshire much satisfaction, is the fact that at Peterboro, was established the first free public library supported wholly by public taxation. This library is now housed in a handsome building, the gift of a successful son of the town; and in many another community may be seen similar proofs of affection for the old state and the home town.

For two centuries New Hampshire was a nursery of seamen, and from Colonial times its seaboard resounded to the stroke of the calker's mallet. From Portsmouth set forth the expedition to Louisburg with New Hampshire men carried in New Hampshire bottoms, and it was at Portsmouth, too, that John Paul Jones fitted out the Ranger and sailed with her, flying the Stars and Stripes to which the first official salute was paid by a foreign nation.

The navy yard at Portsmouth dates back to the Revolutionary period. The house in which John Paul Jones lived while superintending the building of his Ranger is still standing and is the home of the Portsmouth Historical society. Another of the handsome old properties of those days, the Moffatt-Ladd house, is now the home of the Colonial Dames, who, upon occasion, renew the traditions of the house for gracious hospitality.

During the days of wooden ships, while we were dependent for our defense, as was ancient Athens, upon "wooden walls," the Portsmouth navy yard was a busy place. The Constitution, "Old Ironsides," was rebuilt there; and now, rebuilt again, she has in recent years paid a visit to her foster-mother in New Hampshire. During the World war, Portsmouth again hummed with industry, and the yard has now become the country's principal base for the construction of submarines, one of the two largest of the craft having slid from Portsmouth ways.

Ships for the World War.

During the World war, there sprang up on the banks of the Piscataqua, just above Portsmouth, two shipyards, one for wooden and the other for steel vessels. These craft of Portsmouth origin did their full share in the winning of the war, and the yards are now turned to the uses of peace, one as a dye plant, and the other for the manufacture of gypsum products, the raw material being brought from Nova Scotia.

At Portsmouth, too, was built the Kearsarge, with oak timbers taken from the slopes of the mountain whose name she bore. She laid her bones upon a Caribbean reef, but New Hampshire does not forget that her record is written—Portsmouth, Cherbourg, Roncador.

So important, indeed, was the ship-building industry in New Hampshire that the state seal bore, and still bears, the representation of a ship upon the stocks, though its heraldry has recently been revised; and, while the ship still remains upon the state's escutcheon, the barrel of rum which stood so prominently in the foreground was erased, in deference, perhaps, to the Eighteenth amendment.

The embargo act laid a heavy hand upon our shipping, but coincident with it came the beginning of that development of our water powers which has created the industrial cities of which we continue to be proud.

Thus New Hampshire stands forth today, the little state with the big history. Its population is almost stationary, succeeding censuses giving it little beyond the natural increase. Its taxable inventory, though jacked high by the ingenious devices of modern taxing boards, is probably exceeded by several private fortunes in the United States; but still the people of the state manage to have most of the things which modern life insists to be necessary.

New Hampshire's automobile registrations, for instance, are in such number that it is possible to take the entire population of the state for a Sunday afternoon ride. To accommodate them the state has developed a series of trunk highways, three in number, which traverse the state from the Massachusetts border to the Canadian line, piercing the White mountains and following the course of the state's greatest rivers. To these the commonwealth is adding cross-state roads, which will gridiron New Hampshire with modern highways.

Good State Institutions.

New Hampshire's state institutions provide for all the needs of the state's dependent, delinquent, and defectives; and for its enterprising youth the University of New Hampshire presents expanding courses for the training of young men and women, who, unfortunately, in too great numbers, do not remain in the state to enable it to enjoy the fruits of its bounty to them.

Its public schools are now so arranged, so equipped, and so supported through state aid that no child need lack full 36 weeks of schooling each year, with free bus transportation and in some instances with a free lunch thrown in.

Its agriculture in particular is a subject for pride. The farmers are hard-working and thrifty, and many of them upon their stony acres can realize the truth of the old jest, that even sheep in New Hampshire had to be provided with steel muzzles to enable them to graze, and that most of the crops of the state had to be planted with a shotgun. New Hampshire agriculture has specialized of late particularly in the dairying and truck line; but, even at its best, it cannot yield the rich rewards which farmers have secured in other states.

In common with the entire agricultural brotherhood of the country, New Hampshire farmers have suffered from changed conditions and from existing depression. But they are still self-respecting and self-supporting. As a matter of fact, in the volume of per capita federal taxes paid, New Hampshire farmers will be found contributing mightily to the proclaimed necessities of their more querulous brethren in other sections.

But a native points out he supposes that the state's chief product will continue to be men, in token of which, as Webster said, "The Almighty has hung out a sign high up in our hills," where the Old Man of the Mountain, with the storms of ages beating upon his rugged brow, broods ceaselessly over the moving scene which is unfolded before him.

These men New Hampshire has contributed without number to sister commonwealths; and wherever there have been brave deeds to be done, wise public policies to be formulated, generous philanthropy to be administered, mighty doctrines to be declared, or, indeed, any demands upon the skill, genius, learning, or courage of mankind, there the sons of New Hampshire have had, still have, and will continue to have their full share in the advancement of human destiny.

THE ANGEL OF MICHELANGELO

Returning home one sundown from his work on the Vatican in Rome, Michelangelo saw a discarded piece of marble lying on the roadside. He called two workmen to help him lift and carry it to his home. He overheard them say to each other as they left, pocketing the coins he gave them: "That old stone isn't worth a lira, what can he want with it?"

The stone lay untouched days in the artist's studio. One night when weary, his head resting on his hand, he sat dreaming until a wee late hour. A small angel, pure and white, came to him, bending with outstretched sympathetic hands, as if to relieve his fatigue. He reached out to touch her, she was gone, a fleeting visitor. He arose, went to his sculptor's table upon which the discarded stone lay, and worked the night through. As the dawn streaked the sky, with light that early morn, another angel came to earth, small, pure and white, bending with outstretched sympathetic hands as if to relieve the fatigue of the world. This visitor was not a fleeting one, for it had come to stay, chiseled by the master touch of Michelangelo from the discarded piece of roadside marble. It can be seen today in one of the great galleries of Europe.

There is a potential angel in every life. Even in those lives that have been discarded by human society, like the piece of marble Michelangelo found on the roadside. It takes the master touch to bring it forth. How often a life is reformed by the remembrance of a mother, or perhaps a father's word awakens the soul of a wandering boy.

The great lesson in this story is for parents—they are the sculptors of human life. It is for them to chisel the angel of character in their child in the tender growing up years and see that it grows as he grows—a strong, dominating force. I cannot help but feel if all our criminals had had the master touch in their lives in their childhood, where sin is not, their paths would be greatly divergent from where they now are.

Were I an unbeliever, thank God I am not, I believe the most serious obstacle to my unbelief would be the redeeming power of God in man's life. He never fails in his achievement of chiseling the angel out of a discarded life if we but permit him, no matter how long it has lain discarded by the roadside.

INSIDE BRACES

The story is told of a certain senator who voted for a measure unfavorable to the best interests of the people. Met by a friend the next day he was asked how it happened, as many people had placed all confidence in him. He replied in a poor effort at defense, "The outside pressure was so strong." His friend laying his hand on his shoulder looked the senator straight in the eye, and inquired, "Where were your inside braces?"

The whole world is insecure at the present time because of the lack of inside braces. During the last three years of financial uncertainty many contributing causes have been recounted, as reasons for the world's unrest, but slowly, very slowly are a few of our country's leaders, men in public life, coming to one central cause of the world's greatest need. They have gone back to other earlier crises of our country, to the dominating thought and convictions of some of our earlier leaders who were passing through deep tribulations, and are finding out what inside braces carried them through. Their inside braces were character and religion.

Contrast this with selfish graft and greed in some high places today, and one will find real reason for our country's insecurity. Because the outside pressure was so strong for some, others have lost life savings and homes.

America's God of the last decade has been gold, a different goal from the founders of our nation. Let us see what some of our early statesmen lived and believed. George Washington said, "It is impossible to govern the world without the Bible." Andrew Jackson, sensing the great truth later as President of our nation, once remarked, "That book, sir," pointing to the Bible, "is the rock upon which our republic rests." It is said, when all of Abraham Lincoln's cabinet disagreed with him in the most critical time of our country, realizing he stood alone, he withdrew to pray for fear he might be wrong. Abraham Lincoln said of the Bible, "I believe that the Bible is the best gift which God has ever given to man. All the good from the Saviour of the world is communicated to us through this book."

Coming to our present day—Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Henry A. Wallace, has written a new book on "Statesmanship and Religion." Perhaps the need for the character and spiritual strength of our early statesmen is slowly being recognized. If character and religion again become the sovereign interests of America, she will not need to fear about her inside braces when the outside pressure becomes so strong.

Charges shall constitute a lien on the property served by such connections, and if not paid within ninety days shall be collected in the same manner as general city taxes.

Section 9. The rates hereby fixed are estimated to be sufficient to provide for the payment of the interest upon and the principal of all such Bonds as and when the same become due and payable, to create a bond and interest redemption fund therefor, to provide for the payment of the expenses of administration and operation and such expenses for maintenance of said System as are necessary to preserve the same in good repair and working order, to build up a reasonable reserve for depreciation thereof and to build up a reserve for reasonable and proper improvements, betterments, and extensions thereto other than those necessary to maintain the same in good repair and working order. Such rates shall be fixed and revised from time to time as may be necessary to produce these amounts, and it is hereby covenanted and agreed at all times to fix and maintain such rates for services furnished by said System as shall be sufficient to provide for the foregoing.

Section 10. The Department of Public Works may make such rules and regulations governing the operation of said System and the collection of the service rates as it shall deem necessary. The Department of Public Works may make such rules further by-laws, not inconsistent with the rules and regulations of the Common Council, as it may deem necessary for the management and protection of the System. Such rules, regulations and by-laws shall have the same force and effect as ordinances.

Section 11. The said System shall be operated on the basis of a fiscal year commencing on April 1st and ending on March 31st.

Section 12. The gross revenues of said System, to the extent necessary, are hereby pledged and ordered to be set aside and distributed into separate funds, as follows:

(a) Operation and Maintenance Fund: There shall be first set aside out of the gross revenues and paid into an Operation and Maintenance Fund monthly or oftener amounts sufficient for the payment of the current reasonable and necessary expenses for operation, administration and maintenance of the System, including insurance.

(b) Bond and Interest Redemption Fund: There shall be next established and maintained a Bond and Interest Redemption Fund (hereinafter called the "Bond Fund"), which shall be used solely and only for the purpose of paying the principal of and interest upon the Bonds. On the last business day of each month there shall be paid into the Bond Fund an equal and proportionate monthly portion of the interest becoming due on the next succeeding interest payment date and the principal becoming due on the next succeeding Bond maturity date, and also, until there shall have been accumulated and unless there shall be held undiminished in the Bond Fund an amount equal to the aggregate interest and principal requirements on the Bonds for the next ensuing 24 months, an equal and proportionate monthly portion of a sum equal to 10 per cent of said interest becoming due on the next succeeding interest payment date and said principal becoming due on the next succeeding Bond maturity date, as a reserve for deficiencies to be accumulated and used if necessary for the payment of any portion of the interest on or principal of the Bonds in the payment of which there would otherwise be default; provided, however, that no further payments need be made into the Bond Fund at any time when the amount held therein shall be equal to the aggregate principal amount of all Bonds then remaining outstanding together with interest thereon to maturity. If in any month the City of Tawas City shall fail to pay into the Bond Fund the full amount hereinabove stipulated then the amount of any deficiency shall be added to the amounts required to be paid into the Bond Fund in the next ensuing month.

(c) Depreciation Fund: Out of the remaining revenues there shall be set aside and paid into a Depreciation Fund from time to time sums sufficient to build up a reasonable reserve for depreciation of the System.

(d) Contingent Fund: Out of the remaining revenues there shall be set aside and paid into a Contingent Fund from time to time sums sufficient to build up a reserve for reasonable and proper improvements, betterments and extensions to the System.

(e) Surplus: Any surplus accumulated in the Operation and Maintenance Fund which may be in excess of the cost of operating and maintaining the System during the remainder of the then present and the next ensuing fiscal year shall be transferred to the Bond Fund; any monies in the Depreciation Fund in excess of the amount necessary for probable replacements to be needed during the then present and the next ensuing fiscal year, as determined by the Department of Public Works, shall be transferred to the Bond Fund; and any monies in the Contingent Fund in excess of the amount necessary for reasonable and proper betterments to the System during the then present and the next ensuing fiscal year shall be transferred to the Bond Fund or used to purchase outstanding Bonds, and, if used to purchase in the open market outstanding Bonds not yet due, such Bonds shall be purchased at not more than the fair market value thereof and shall thereupon be cancelled provided, however, that any such transfers from the Operation and Maintenance Fund and/or Depreciation Fund and/or Contingent Fund to the Bond Fund shall not operate as an abatement of the Bond Fund requirements hereinbefore set forth.

Section 13. The gross revenues derived from the operation of the System shall be deposited in a bank which is duly qualified and doing business in the State of Michigan and which is a member of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, for the account of the separate funds hereinabove described, and each of said designated funds held therein shall be impressed with a trust for the benefit of those entitled thereto.

Always Hem Dish Cloths

Some housewives use unhemmed cloths as dish cloths. This is not advisable because the lint which comes off these cloths is likely to go down the sink drain and result in stoppage. The time and trouble to correct the stoppage will be far greater than the time and trouble it takes to hem the cloths.

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

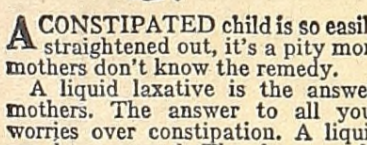

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows her contempt for Garth.

The plane nosed down so steeply that the pontoons went under. Fortunately the craft was almost fool-proof. She bobbed up without plunging to the bottom. Huxby taxied shoreward against the current from the stream and the thrust of the down-gulch breeze.

Garth stood up to pilot the plane. A clump of spruces stood a few yards in from the water-smoothed ledge on the right bank of the stream mouth. Huxby obeyed the signal to shut off the motor. As the propeller ceased to spin the plane glided in between the banks of the outrushing stream.

Uncoiling the line as he went, Garth ran out on the right wing. From the overhang he leaped down on the shelf ledge and bounded along it to the nearest spruce. The plane had already lost its headway and was starting to drift backwards in the swift outswirl of the stream.

The line tautened as Garth whipped it around the tree trunk. To make doubly safe, he used the last foot for a pair of half hitches. He knew what would happen if the plane should drift free with no pilot aboard.

Snubbed fast, the monoplane swung to the near bank and lay with the right-hand float snug against the polished waterline of the ledge. Huxby came out on the wing and jumped off to peer down the glassy slope of rock at the pontoon.

"Not so bad," he admitted. "I had the place picked out," Garth replied. "The rock is very slick. There'll be no need of fenders during our few hours' stay."

The engineer pilot shoved his goggles up on the front of his helmet. "How's that? 'Picked out,' you say. Been around airplanes, have you?"

"I know how rough stone will chafe a boat," Garth replied. "Your floats are a kind of canoe. Can you get Mr. Ramill and his daughter ashore by way of the wing?"

Miss Ramill called from the cabin: "Why didn't you pick a decent landing place, Vivian? We never can get ashore up this smooth sloping rock. The steps are no use. You'll have to make a gangway for Dad and me."

Garth vaulted upon the wing and walked in along it to the fuselage. The girl leaned from the big rear window of the cabin. "Give me your hand," Garth said. "I'll swing you up on the wing."

He knelt above her on the cabin roof and reached down. Her lips curled in a contemptuous smile.

"If that's the best you can do, I'll stay right here. I've no wish to go bathing."

"In that case, get out of the way. Your father wishes to see my prospect. I'll not waste time building a needless gangway."

She was the heiress to millions and had been reared in prodigious luxury. Never had she been treated so cavalierly as by this buckskin-clad prospector. She turned to her fiancé.

"Vivian, you heard the insolent fellow!"

Huxby grasped the wing tip to pull himself up. The girl's father spoke over her shoulder: "Stay where you are, Vivian. We're here to look at Garth's mine. He has agreed to help Lilith and me ashore. If she prefers to remain aboard, she may do so."

The girl looked both surprised and angered. She drew back into the cabin. Her father thrust out his hand from the window to look up at Garth.

"Won't it be more than you can manage? I weigh over two hundred."

For reply, Garth reached down. The portly millionaire hung in Garth's grasp almost like a dead weight. Yet Garth swung him bodily up and around on the wing.

He led the limping gentleman out to the far end, near the tip, and lowered him down upon the top of the ledge. Before he could follow, Miss Ramill called out to him: "Come back for me. It should be safe enough. You did not drop Dad."

Garth looked up the gulch, smiled, and went to swing the girl out of the window. Up on the wing she clutched his shoulder as if to steady herself. Her scarlet-smeared lips curved in a patronizing smile.

"You're wonderfully strong!" "More knack than muscle."

"Both! It was simply marvelous how you lifted Dad without losing your balance."

Out near the wing tip Garth drew his arm free from her clasp, caught her by the elbows, and lowered her into Huxby's upthrust hands.

She looked up and smiled. "So nice of you, old dear. Now, if you'll fetch a cup. I'm dying to try a drink of this delightful-looking milky water."

"The dying would be more apt to follow your drink," Garth replied. He sprang down beside her father. "Your milk is rock-floor ground off by the glacier. It's apt to be a dangerous drink. There's clear water where we're going."

He caught up his rifle, and set off aslant the easy upslope from the lake shore. The others followed after him, picking their way between the scraggy branches of the spruce trees. Before long the trees dwarfed down into timberline scrub.

"What an odd-colored stone!" The girl turned to stare resentfully at the desolate grandeur of the mountains across the valley. "Did you ever see such a horrible place? It's almost as bad as those ash-heap mountains in the Mohave desert. Come along, Dad. Don't keep us here forever. This raw hole makes me sick."

Her father spoke irritably: "You wouldn't listen when I advised you to remain at Edmonton. Why didn't you stay in the cabin, instead of following me ashore?"

"Oh, tune off," she complained. "It's quite enough to've dragged myself out on this God-for-saken dirt pile. Even the berries are sour. I'm going back. There ought to be a dance program on somewhere. Only thing, can Vivian get me up into the cabin?"

He looked expectantly at Garth. The smile she gave him jerked the attention of her fiancé away from the purpose that had brought them ashore.

"I'll swing you aboard easy enough, Lilith," he said.

Garth spoke to him without a trace of amusement: "If you ask me, I think this little walk to the mine would be good exercise for Miss Ramill. When I left here, last month, there was a shaggy grizzly with two cubs back along the lake shore. They may have gone off; maybe not. That pistol of yours wouldn't be of much use if you happened to blunder between the old lady and her young ones."

"You saw the beast, yet did not kill her," scoffed Huxby. "Pretty thin!" "Not at all; she was quite fat. It happened, though, I had no need of meat or bear skins. Also, she was as willing as I was to live and let live, just so I kept away from her cubs."

Mr. Ramill started to overtake him. "Lead ahead, Garth. I came here to see your prospect, not to talk about shooting."

Garth went on, up aslant the tundra. When he came to where the smooth slope dropped into a shallow trough, a barkward glance showed the girl and Huxby loitering along behind her father. The portly millionaire came panting up beside Garth.

"Well?" he asked.

"There's my claim," Garth answered. "My lower stake is down at that cross dyke of gneiss, a thousand feet or so from the lake shore. The upper one stands about three hundred feet below those slide ledges. You could stake a claim above mine, but I doubt if you'd find pay dirt. There is none at all between the lower stake and the lake. The dyke stopped the downdrift of the alloy. I sampled several acres. Beginning at the grass roots and going down to frost, the dirt ran from five to ten dollars a pan. This trough is a placer pocket—a cache filled by the age-long downdrift from those disintegrated veins up the mountain. My claim covers all or nearly all the deposit, and it is worth several hundred thousand dollars, if not a million."

The cool certainty of Garth's statement compelled belief. Mr. Ramill's ruddy face went blank.

His daughter looked at Garth with a sudden change from boredom and disdain to an interest that verged on respect. Here was sensation—something new. The despised woody vagabond of the wilds was not a pauper, after all! It was like a play, the wandering beggar boy disclosing himself to be the true prince. He had said, "a million!"

Like the older man, Huxby had put on his poker face. He was not so successful, however, in keeping the glint out of his eyes. He had yet to make his fortune.

"So it's a million?" he scoffed. "No wonder you prospectors go crazy. Find a little placer you guess has some gold in it, and you think you've located a mint. Five to ten dollars a pan! Why, Jack, your metal wouldn't give you half a dollar a pan, even if your small percentage of gold was alloyed with silver, instead of lead."

Garth smiled. "My mistake bothering you to test that sample. Just chew on this, my friend: A good many sourdoughs might not be able to identify that gray-white metal. But only a chechaho would be unable to recognize that it is not galena or silver."

This silenced the engineer for the moment. Mr. Ramill favored Garth with his blandest smile.

"Technicians like Huxby are too apt to imagine that the rest of us know nothing. Now, admitting for the sake of the argument that your guess regarding the alloy is correct, suppose we sample your prospect."

For reply, Garth led down into the trough to where a moss-bedded spring trickled down from pool to pool. He stopped beside a shallow dugout, roofed with spruce branches, moss and dirt. Under it lay a small shovel and pickax, a worn gold pan, and a little aluminum cooking pot.

Garth turned to Huxby. "There's the pan. Get your samples and go to it."

"How do I know your holes aren't salted?"

"You don't know anything. Why not scratch down to gravel yourself? Or perhaps I salted all the trough, before I laid on this blanket of grass and moss."

Mr. Ramill interposed: "Mining engineers have to guard against fraud as well as error, Garth. I was salted once myself, in my mallow days. Just to ease his professional conscience, suppose you clear gravel for us midway between here and the staked hole down there."

"That's my discovery stake," Garth replied. "Wasn't looking for gold in this trough. Just happened to notice the gray metal where the spring gush of the rill had torn the moss from the gravel. About my digging, I must beg to be excused. What if I should happen to drop a handful of that galena into the hole, when your expert was not looking?"

Ignoring the irony, Huxby pulled the shovel from the dugout shelter and gogged into a bed of moss. Mr. Ramill stooped his portly body to pick up the gold pan.

Huxby shoveled clear the moss and black humus from a space two feet or more square. He tossed aside a few stones the size of his fist, and took the gold pan from Mr. Ramill to load it with gravel. They went a few steps downslope to the edge of a lower pool.

None too deftly, Huxby dipped water into the pan and began to rotate the contents. After more than twice the time an old prospector would have needed for the operation, the mining engineer worked the pan clear of all except a spoonful of small dull nodules.

Miss Ramill had stretched out to bask in the summer warmth. With the upslant of the sun towards the noon of the nineteen-hour day, the breeze had died down. The calm brought a swarm of mosquitoes upslope from the lake shore. The girl put on her headnet, covered the unbooted part of her legs with caribou moss, and resumed her sun bath.

Out of the tall of his eye Garth watched Huxby and Mr. Ramill. When he saw the two get their net-draped heads together over the gold pan, he rose and went towards them. The tread of his moccasins was noiseless. Before the two noticed his approach, he stood looking down over their shoulders.

"Not half bad for a starter," he said. "At least five dollars in your first pan."

"Hardly that value," replied Mr. Ramill. "Admitting there is some platinum in this alloy, I am afraid you're a far too sanguine young man. Call it five per cent platinum and five of gold. That leaves ninety per cent of silver and lead, with of course traces of iridium and osmium."

"Yes, move the decimal point of your million three places to the left, Jack," said Huxby. "It brings your wonderful fortune down to a few thousands. To sluice this placer, freight out the alloy, and pay for separating the metals will leave slim profits. There may be none at all."

"Too bad you've had all your trouble for nothing," Garth replied. "I counted on your finding it a real strike—the first big platinum deposit located in North America."

Mr. Ramill rose to lay a consoling hand on his shoulder.

"Never mind, my boy. You'll recall what I told you about my encouraging worthy prospectors. I stand by that now. I will give you two thousand dollars for this prospect, and take the chance of getting back my money by large-scale placering."

"You're too generous," Garth protested. "I couldn't think of taking your money. In fact, I'll have to own up I had a little testing acid with me when I happened upon this gray alloy. So, as I do not believe in cheating, suppose we head back for the Mackenzie."

The millionaire mine buyer chuckled and clapped him on the back. "Boy, you're a whole lot less a fool than you look."

Huxby stared hard. Then, pocketing the alloy, he went for the shovel.

"Good idea," Garth said. "A pan from above Discovery, one below, and the same from three or four hundred feet out each side—they'll tell you whether or not it's merely a small pocket."

Without replying, Huxby set off up the trough. Mr. Ramill limped slowly after him.

Miss Ramill appeared to have fallen asleep. She lay still, protected by her net from the mosquitoes that tinged about her head.

Relieved from the company of his unpleasant travel mates, Garth stretched out like the girl. He thought of the vast length of time that had been required to erode the side of the mountain above him. Nature had spent ages in collecting these hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of precious alloy upon which he now lay basking. And he had chanced to stumble upon the treasure near the end of a trip of which exploration and adventure had been the prime motive and prospecting only a side issue. Now, by law, he was sole owner of all this wealth.

He thought of the two men upslope whom he had brought to share in his good fortune. They had thanked him by seeking to lie and cheat him out of it all. But that was the nature of far too many men. There was no reason to be surprised or angered. They had failed to outplay him with their stacked cards. He looked at a clump of alpine blossoms close beside his elbow, and smiled.

Upslope he heard the swirl of gravel in the gold pan. After a time the sound died out. His keen ear caught the dull tread of heavy feet on the turf.

Mr. Ramill turned toward Garth. "We will go back to the plane for lunch while considering the matter."

"Only for a short time," Huxby qualified. "I intend to return here for more sampling. No need of your troubling to join us."

Garth saw that his company was not wanted. "Thanks. I'm not hungry. Come to think, I'll go down to the lake and make sure my old lady grizzly isn't lurking in the bush."

"Your phantom bear," mocked Miss Ramill. "Watch out she doesn't make a ghost of you."

Under cover of his smile at the gibe, Garth caught the glance that passed between her father and Huxby. The girl had said it. "Watch out" was the word.

He swung down the trough with no sign of hurry. The length of his gliding stride made his movements appear leisurely. Without looking back, he slanted in among the scrubby spruces. A mass of the dense evergreens put him out of sight of the three chechacos up on the open tundra. He turned sharp to the right. Midway down the brush-fringed lake shore, the tall spruces stood well spaced. He broke into a run.

A vista between the trees offered him a view upslope. He halted behind a screen of young aspens to look. The three had already reached the side of the trough. They started to hurry on aslant the mountainside. Lilith Ramill and Huxby had the girl's heavy-bodied father between them. They were helping him along twice as fast as he could have made it without their aid.

Alcohol in Body Cannot Ignite, Chemists Assert

According to popular belief, the body of a person soaked with alcohol is combustible. Cases of the spontaneous combustion of the body have been reported, especially in France, when the first instance of this kind is said to have happened in 1725.

The spontaneous burning of an alcohol-soaked body is a popular belief in Rumania, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Prof. A. Elfer of Cluj, in a lecture before the Hygienic society, is reported by the Bucharest correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association as saying that "in past centuries it was earnestly deemed possible that the alcohol laden breath of a tippler may catch fire from the glow of an oven or even from his own pipe."

In 1847, the Countess Gorlitz was said to have become ignited spontaneously in Darmstadt, Germany, and burned to death. A commission whose members included the greatest chemical experts of the age, Leibig and Bischoff, studied this case and completely refuted the theory of spontaneous combustion.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake
© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

I always liked the old phrase, "With all its dips, spurs and angles," which was to be found on the sales papers employed in selling gold mines.

It seemed to me that this was as inclusive a clause as could be possibly drawn.

"Dips, spurs and angles," meant all of a gold mine that lay directly under the surface of the ground clear down to the center of the earth.

The man who bought such a property knew exactly where he stood, and nobody could entrench on his property without falling foul of the courts.

To me the words signified more than that. It meant a complete knowledge of one's property.

And a man who knows exactly what he owns, if it is valuable, is pretty sure to possess before long a pretty fair knowledge of himself, his assets and his liabilities.

Before you can increase your mental assets you must understand what they are. Before you can sell your services, you must estimate their worth.

With times as they are you cannot expect to get lucrative employment unless you can with confidence tell your prospective employer what you have done, what you are capable of doing, and what you are convinced you can do if given the right kind of an opportunity.

There are a great many people out of employment, not because there is no opening for them, but because they cannot point definitely to any one thing in which they have specialized, and which they understand thoroughly.

If you are just beginning your career the wisest thing for you to do is to make a specialty of one particular thing.

Confine your study largely to that. Make the acquaintance of people who are doing the same kind of thing. As a rule everybody likes to talk about his business—likes to interest other people in it.

Prove that you are interested in it, too. Tell what you have done, and how you have done it. Don't be hesitant or shy.

A job hunter cannot afford to be diffident. But remember that unless you have more knowledge of a given task or series of tasks than most people, you cannot talk yourself into any kind of a pay situation. You will be questioned. You will be put on the grill. You must list past performances.

If you can get recommendations, so much the better.

I once heard Woodrow Wilson say in his campaign that it was not as important for a candidate to carry an election as it was to get the people of the country interested in an election.

Those who take a real interest in a Presidential campaign learn every day something they ought to know about the issues that are involved and the men who are asking the voters to put them in a position to carry out these issues.

It is undoubtedly a good thing for the people of the United States that the old party prejudices are dying out.

When I was a child a man who left his party to support a candidate from an opposition party was regarded as a kind of a traitor.

When long years ago my father announced that, although he had been a life long Republican he intended to vote for Grover Cleveland, all his friends were filled with indignation or sorrow.

That a man who had been a Republican since the Civil war should merely because he admired Cleveland vote for him, instead of supporting the regular party candidate seemed incredible to them.

But, I am glad to say, the old gentleman stood his ground.

And, in after years the strict party loyalty that was demanded became not quite so necessary to one's standing in the community.

Today in the United States there are not anything like the stern party divisions that there used to be.

Men leave the ranks of old parties in which they have served faithfully, and go over to the other side without being branded as mugwumps.

I suppose there is nobody in politics today who knows what will happen ten or fifteen or twenty years from now.

But I am sure that the old personal politics are wearing out, and that new standards are being set up in their place.

And I am convinced that this is all for the best interests of the country.

The party system is not what it used to be. The expression "turn coat" has passed out.

As long as you are honest and sincere, nobody will call you a "rat" for leaving one party and joining forces with another.

That was proven in the last election. All you need to do is to think and talk and read during a campaign and then support the man you think is best fitted for the job.

You may make mistakes, but men have made mistakes on election day ever since this country was organized on the basis of supporting the best man.

Florida's Canal to Join Gulf of Mexico and Sea

Mother Nature Has Made Work an Easy Task.

Washington—Steam shovels are chugging where helmeted Spaniards once pushed through silent, tangled jungles in search of the Fountain of Youth and tall masts eventually may mingle with the tall pines in Florida's northern forests; for the new ship canal there has been begun.

"If the canal is completed as planned, squat freighters, proud passenger liners, and even grim war craft from the seven seas will steam through inland waters on which in bygone days keen-eyed Indians and gold-crazed white men paddled primitive canoes," says the National Geographic Society.

"Chugging engines and deep-throated whistles will break the silence in quiet bayous where once only the occasional splash of an alligator or the brilliant flight of a flamingo colony disturbed the solitude.

"Furnishing a convenient short cut for vessels between the Atlantic ocean and the Gulf of Mexico, the canal is designed to utilize the channels of three picturesque Florida rivers—the St. Johns, the Ocklawaha and the Withlacoochee.

Through Pine Forests. "Much of the country through which the canal will pass consists of pine forests, many already cut over, for lumbering is a leading Florida industry.

To Be Sea-Level Route.

"Like the 100-mile waterway at Suez, the Florida canal will be a sea-level route, with none of the huge locks and mountain-slicing 'cuts' necessary at Panama. Canal building is comparatively easy in Florida, for the highest point in the peninsula is less than two-thirds the height of the Washington monument, and most of the state is only a few feet above the ocean.

"From the Atlantic, ships will enter the canal at bustling, versatile Jacksonville, whose exports range from pine boards to ground oyster shells, the latter to aid chickens' digestions! Jacksonville, only 25 miles from Florida's northern border, is the state's largest city, its industrial center, and a leading lumber shipping point.

"Through this city, the gateway to Florida's vast winter playground, a huge traffic rolls down to Miami beach on the east and St. Petersburg on the west coasts, and to other southern resorts when winter's first chills appear 'up North.' In some years this 'sun-worshiper' travel has reached as high as a motor car a minute.

"From Jacksonville south, ocean vessels already navigate 64 miles of what is planned to be part of the canal route. This is the St. Johns river, which strangely enough in so flat a region, flows due north 125 miles before reaching the sea.

"A sluggish stream—it drops only 70 feet in 100 miles—the St. Johns carries a large water-borne commerce to Jacksonville.

"Palatka, busy little shipping center on the upper St. Johns, is now the head of navigation for ocean vessels. Palatka's lumber piles, seen from the air, resemble a city in themselves, and the city boasts what is believed to be the only camphor plantation in the United States.

Through Pine Forests. "Much of the country through which the canal will pass consists of pine forests, many already cut over, for lumbering is a leading Florida industry.

"Leaving the Ocklawaha, the canal will cut across to the Withlacoochee, 'Little Big River' of the Indians, which flows into the Gulf of Mexico. Navigable now for 60 miles by boats of shallow draft, the Withlacoochee carries cargoes of fish, oysters, farm pro-

Stuttering Is Due to Fear, Doctor Says

Specialist Finds Cure for 1,000 Every Year.

New York—Stutterers are being cured at the rate of 1,000 a year in one of America's unique institutions, the "Stutterer's Clinic" in New York city.

Dr. James S. Greene, medical director of the National Hospital for Speech Disorders, destroyed many long-accepted legends about stuttering in a report to the American Medical association. Stutterers, Doctor Greene found, don't need to learn to talk; all they need is to get rid of some hidden "fear complex."

"Stuttering," Doctor Greene said recently, "is usually caused by a conflict with environment, which results in an anxiety-fear complex. In all cases where there is no mechanical difficulty, psychological treatment is certain to succeed. When there is physical disability, we cure the mechanical trouble and then clear up the complex.

"Stuttering speech," Doctor Greene explained, "is not a speech disorder. It is a nervous mal-adjustment. All stutterers can talk. So I don't teach them to talk; I teach them to overcome the neuroses which interfere with their expressing themselves.

"I say to my patients, 'You can talk as well as I can.' And I prove it to them."

Demand for Horses Is on Increase in Canada

Ottawa, Ont.—The horse is staging a comeback in Canada.

The Canadian department of agriculture reports that demands for horses from United States brewers and for the use on farms in western Canada has increased the value of the heavy type of horses by 30 per cent in the last two years, giving a great impetus to horse breeding.

In 1931, when the end of prohibition was in sight, exports of horses from Canada to the United States leaped from 672 in 1930 to 6,020, and in 1932 to 6,713.

The trade dropped in 1933 and 1934, but is again being revived by demands for Canadian draft horses from United States brewers. A recent shipment from Lambton county in Ontario brought a price of $250 per head in the United States.

The principal demand, however, is a domestic one. In 1921 there were

Golden Phantoms Fascinating Tales of Lost Mines By Edith L. Watson

PILLARS OF GOLD

WHEN the Spanish conquerors were following the northward windings of the Rio Grande, they went as far as the northern part of what is now New Mexico. Here, Spanish legend relates, some of the padres, with soldiers at their command, turned to the westward.

What these pillars were they did not know, but with the curiosity to which we owe so much of our information about the early southwest, the padres halted to examine these monuments. To their surprise and delight, they found that some of the stones were pieces of rich gold ore, which argued that their source must be somewhere in the vicinity.

So it proved; the lode was rich beyond all dreams, and the party immediately set to work, the soldiers laying down their arms to become miners. They remained in the hidden valley long enough to take out all the gold they could carry with them.

After this time, others who passed that way hunting wealth saw the lonely pillars in the center of the valley, but for a long time no one thought to examine them, and consequently passed on without knowing that their opportunity lay near by, and that a few hours searching might disclose that mine that the padres saw.

At last an old miner by the name of Mike O'Leary, rambling about through this region on a prospecting trip, found the ancient workings, and appeared in Parrot City some time later with enough ore to finance an expensive spree for several weeks.

The old prospector of the western mountains was a wily creature. He preferred hunting alone or with one partner, and if he did strike gold he could be "as mum as a clam" about its location, even though he loved to boast about his good fortune. Knowing the hills as he did the streets of his home town, he usually eluded all those who tried to follow him.

O'Leary was just such a man. He might show up every now and then with enough gold to pay for a celebration, but he always drifted out of sight before anyone could see where he went. Finally he disappeared for good—nothing more was seen of him, and it is supposed that either he went to some distant city to spend his money, or else the mountains claimed him for the final sacrifice.

With O'Leary's passing, however, the secret of his mine did not remain a secret. Once in a while some miner comes to the front with ore which he claims came from that little valley in the mountains, and there are even said to be maps, made by others who came into sight of the two rock pillars. However, as far as anyone knows, the location of the mine has never been filed as a claim.

SECRET OF THE PRAIRIE

COUNCIL of war! A party of freighters camped under an old lightning-killed cottonwood, talking earnestly. The year was 1856; the place was Kearney county, Kansas, on the Santa Fe trail. There was $70,000 in Spanish gold in that wagon train, being carried from Mexico to Fort Leavenworth. Would it ever reach its destination?

Indians had begun to follow the wagons in New Mexico. They hung on, making no move to attack, but drawing a little closer day by day. Now, as the freighters consulted with each other around the campfire, the Indians lurked out yonder in the darkness, waiting—waiting—

It was decided to bury the gold. Here, where the great dead tree formed a landmark on the trail, was as good a place as any, and there was no time to lose. There was no telling when the Indians might make up their minds to attack.

It was midnight. The full moon shone brightly on the camp and on the cottonwood, and cast a shadow along the ground. Here, where the shadow fell, they buried the Spanish gold.

Next day they moved on. The Indians followed as usual, drawing a little closer. Three days later they attacked, when the train had reached Pawnee Rock. Only one man survived; he reached Fort Leavenworth, told his story, and died.

There was no chance, just then, to send out after the gold. It was safe; it must wait until the opportunity presented. And so a year passed before a party set out on the Santa Fe trail to recover the hidden coin.

But during that year lightning had struck the old cottonwood again, and this time had destroyed it completely. There was nothing left to show where it stood. Only the tall buffalo grass rippled in the wind—grass which had grown closely over all the countryside.

Buffet Suppers Popular Custom

Fashion That Fills a Need; How They May Be Served.

Buffet entertaining is becoming increasingly popular in the United States. For generations it has been a custom in England both for breakfast and luncheons. In houses where servants are many there can be a freedom about meal hours—except dinner—that is impossible in the homes without them.

Luncheons may be as intermittently enjoyed, and when guests come from distances, and may not arrive simultaneously, buffet service is most satisfactory.

In this country buffet serving of refreshments is frequently followed, and buffet suppers are in vogue. They may be in spacious houses for reasons similar to those abroad, or it may be because of the smallness of living quarters that the buffet idea is welcomed. When a fashion fills a need, and is pleasing to those of wealth and of moderate means alike, it is doubly popular.

Self-Service.

If a hostess wishes to be in the living room and yet have her guests well served, she can manage excellently either with or without servants provided the meal is in buffet style. If she has no maid whatsoever, all foods must be ready and in abundance, on the dining table and the buffet or serving table. She will have to see, either herself or with the aid of assistants among her friends, that enough plates, dishes, and silver, are kept clean and ready to use whenever needed.

At a buffet supper, host and hostess may, and should, be ready to see that guests are supplied, not that they are required to serve them, but by saying such things as they pass among guests, as:

"I hope you will enjoy the rarebit. It's in the chafing dish."

Or, if oysters are to be enjoyed:

"Now, as there's an R in the month I hastened to have some scalloped oysters. I trust you like them. It's a favorite dish of mine. Please help yourself."

When Hostess Serves.

Often the hostess or the host serves one dish from the buffet, at least for a few servings, and asks the others to help themselves to whatever they find on the table. This may be needed to get guests started. If either host or hostess notice some one without coffee, or minus sandwiches or biscuits, it is graceful to pass them things—whatever they are.

Buffet refreshments are apt to be very simple. It is sufficient to have a punch bowl with ice in it and the beverage with a tray of fresh glasses, and one for used ones; a ladle by it, and plates of cakes, and perhaps sandwiches also. Plates, silver, napkins, and candies, salted nuts, etc., are on buffet dining table.

United States Consumes Half of World's Lumber

According to "The Year Book" of the New York Society of Architects, "the United States produces and consumes, roundly, half of all the lumber of the world. About 80 per cent of all residences in the United States are wood-built; and on the farms, 98 per cent of all structures. On account of its abundance, prevalence and comparative cheapness, lumber has been crucially associated with the economic history of the country."

"Even today, after the advent of many different competing materials, the lumber industry ranks near the top with some 20,000 mills, $7,000,000,000 of capital investment, employing directly and indirectly more than a million men in good times and a larger producing capacity than it had when the mills were twice as numerous. With the disappearance of the frontier, the industry is changing from a purely extractive to a reproducing industry. The private forests are beginning to be systematically regrown and perpetuated; already about 40 per cent of all lumber comes from renewed forests. Back of this adaptation are the vast public forests containing about one-half the total standing timber, which are on a sustained yield basis."

SAFER . . .

Because Every Feature Of The New Ford Measures Up To The Standard Of Its V-8 Engine

They ride with greater safety in the new Ford for 1936. It's not so much that V-8 engine power and pick-up whisk them clear of traffic tangles—although this, too, helps make the new Ford a safer as well as a more thrilling car to drive.

But it's mainly because every feature of the new Ford measures up to standard of V-8 engine quality. The Ford Motor Company was not satisfied with putting an engine from the luxury class into a car selling as low as $510. It insisted that everything else be in keeping with the fine-car quality beneath the hood—safety, as well as roominess and comfort.

We invite you to check critically and in detail the Ford's many luxury-class features.
