WEST BRANCH MAN TO GET WELL CONTRACT

Maximum Cost of Wells For City Water Supply Will Be $2281.05

Ed. Christman of West Branch was the successful bidder on the contract to drill wells for supplying water to Tawas City. Two bids on the project had been filed. They were opened in the presence of the city council Tuesday evening and the West Branch driller was found to be $140.70 lower than his competitor, Albert Coggan of Bay City.

The two bids were: Coggan, $2421.75 and Christman, $2281.05. The contract covers not more than three test wells and the development of a 10-inch well for the city water supply. It is based on a unit price per foot on the test wells and if only one is required the cost to the city will be reduced accordingly. The specifications provide for testing the final well for 24 hours.

The successful bidder, Ed. Christman, has been in the well drilling business for 45 years. He has drilled wells for the state and some of the larger cities of Michigan. Engineer George Francis says that he is one of the most competent drillers in northern Michigan.

City Attorney H. Read Smith stated yesterday that bids on the construction of the complete distribution system would be sought within the next three weeks.

All bids on these projects are opened under the supervision of an engineer from WPA headquarters at Detroit.

TAWAS CITY SEAL SALE CAMPAIGN

Over fifty-nine million tuberculosis Christmas seals will be distributed throughout the state this year by the Michigan Tuberculosis Association. Hundreds of millions more will go out to people everywhere in the United States. The twenty-ninth annual seal sale will be opened officially on Thanksgiving Day and will continue through to Christmas.

The tremendous proportions which the tuberculosis Christmas seal movement has assumed would probably astound old Einar Holboell, the Danish postal clerk who first conceived the idea of fighting tuberculosis through the sale of Christmas seals.

As he sorted mail in a Denmark postoffice in 1903, it occurred to Holboell that a penny stamp placed on letters mailed at Christmas time might make it possible to build a hospital for tuberculous children. Shortly afterward he took up the matter with the king and queen of the country and in that same year the first tuberculosis Christmas seals were sold.

In 1907 the movement spread to the United States. A story written by Jacob Riis about the Danish seal appeared in an American magazine and was read by Miss Emily P. Bissell, who was interested in a small tuberculous hospital which was in need of funds, and she promptly adopted the idea. In the first year she raised $3,000.

From then on the Christmas seal rapidly became a nation-wide enterprise, and since 1910 has been under the management of the National Tuberculosis Association and affiliated state associations. Since 1910 the seal, in addition to the attractive design appropriate to the Christmas season, has always borne the double-barred cross, which is the emblem of the tuberculosis movement.

In Tawas City the sale this year will be conducted by personal meeting will be conducted by personal meeting. (Turn to No. 1, Back Page)

EXTENSIVE 4-H CLUB PROGRAM TO START SOON

Eaton County Man Is Newly Appointed District Club Leader

L. H. Rhodes, newly appointed 4-H club leader for this district, was in the city Monday. Mr. Rhodes is from Eaton county. He said that an extensive club program would be inaugurated in the county before January 1.

This district of the 4-H Club comprises Alpena, Alcona, Iosco, Arenac and Ogemaw counties. Mr. Rhodes will spend several days in the county each month. He will assist County Agricultural Agent C. Blumer in organizing clubs throughout the county and in arranging their activities. Mr. Rhodes has established his Iosco headquarters in the county agricultural agent's office at the court house.

Iosco county, especially at Whittemore and in the immediate vicinity, has been active in 4-H Club work for several years. Its growth has been continuous and a large amount of exceptionally fine work has been exhibited each year on achievement day. Last year 75 boys were enrolled in the six handicraft clubs. There were six girls' clubs and the outstanding five-year club in this group was the Busy Bees club of Hale in which 95 enrolled and 25 finished. More than 250 people attended achievement day held April 12 at Whittemore.

Parent-Teacher Association

The regular meeting of the P.-T. A. was held at the high school last Thursday evening.

After the business meeting, Mrs. Will Leslie, the chairman of the program committee, took charge. The musical program consisted of two selections by the band class, a violin solo by Ruth Giddings, a trombone solo by Robert Mark, and two selections by the Girls' Glee Club.

Mrs. W. J. Glendon of Hale then spoke on "The Responsibilities of Parents." She asked who was responsible for the children—the school, parents, or church. She believed that the greatest responsibility rests with the parents, but they too often are satisfied when the physical needs of the child are attended to, that they do not know where or with whom he is playing. She felt that although the influence of the teacher and Sunday school is great, yet the home training has a greater influence on the character of the child. The home, instead of being a place only in which to eat and sleep, should be the center of the family life.

HOME SAFETY STRESSED BY RED CROSS

Local Chapter Will Take Part In National Campaign

"The Iosco County Chapter of the Red Cross launches a campaign to eliminate accident-causing hazards in the home today," it was said by W. A. Evans, chairman of the local chapter. "It is the chapter's purpose," Mr. Evans said, "to make the homes of this community safe. Home accidents are due to carelessness, negligence and lack of knowledge and most of them are preventable."

According to Mr. Evans millions of people are injured in the home each year. Last year more than 34,000 were killed and the number permanently disabled by accidents occurring in the home ran into six figures. "People do not realize that the home is not safe," Mr. Evans stated, "and it is the purpose of this Red Cross program to correct this erroneous belief, to point out common and uncommon home hazards and show how each may be eliminated and to conduct an actual inspection of the homes of this community." The chapter will have the directing leadership of Max Cochran for its safety program.

A program of this nature, Mr. Cochran pointed out, is of necessity largely educational in character. The Iosco county chapter will campaign through the medium of the written and spoken word. A comprehensive public speaking schedule is being arranged in an intensive effort to make children and parents aware of the very real danger which lurks in the home itself. The generous cooperation of newspapers and various publications have been enlisted. Individuals, civic and social clubs and business groups are being contacted. Many have already pledged.

Michigan Had No Red Cross Chapter At Time Of AuSable-Oscoda Fire

The following was taken from the July 12, 1911, edition of the Washington Times and recalls the fact that Michigan had no Red Cross chapters at that time:

"The towns of AuSable and Oscoda, Michigan, lying directly across from each other on the AuSable river in northeastern Michigan, were wiped off the map and either hundreds are missing or killed by one of the worst forest fires that has ever visited Michigan."

"Not a business place is standing in Oscoda today. The fire was fanned by a fierce wind and within a few hours had destroyed the town. Sparks and burning brands swept AuSable, where the fire raged all night."

"Hundreds of persons, driven from their homes by the fire, took refuge on board the freighter Kongo which was lying off AuSable. Others boarded the regular southbound passenger train on the Detroit and Mackinac Railroad which made its way to the stricken towns by means of numerous spur tracks."

"The fire swept over the doomed cities with such rapidity that all the inhabitants could do was to flee for their lives, leaving behind all their belongings. The fierce rush of flames drove hundreds into Lake Huron and while it is impossible to ascertain whether any lives were lost, it is feared that many have perished."

"According to the stories of the refugees who arrived here this morning, when the train left Oscoda the flames were leaping 100 feet high and roaring like a furnace. The heat was so intense that those in the coaches had to close doors and windows."

Michigan, not having any Red Cross state organization at this time, was very handicapped by not being organized for emergencies. A local relief committee was organized by citizens of Bay City, which was the nearest populous community to the scene of the fire, and money collected from all over the state was placed at the disposal of this committee. The Red Cross State Board of Minnesota, desiring to contribute to the relief of the sufferers of its neighboring state, asked authority of the central committee to contribute $2,500 to the Michigan Relief Fund. From that time on we have had Red Cross. These towns are very much situated the same today as they were then, but although conditions are very much improved it would be a great setback to our community if this fire were to go through again, and if it ever does, we all hope to be on our toes and be prepared.

Christ Episcopal Church

Colorful Naval Drama Has Thrills, Romance, Music

Quezon Inaugurated First President of Philippines—Co-Ordinator Berry Has Troubles—Reassurances for Business Men—Armistice Day Celebrations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SELF-GOVERNMENT became a reality for the Philippines on November 15, according to schedule, and it is now up to the islanders to utilize their independence wisely and safely, with only general supervision by the United States. In the presence of a great throng of distinguished persons in the magnificent legislative building at Manila, Manuel Quezon, veteran advocate of independence, was inaugurated as the first president of the commonwealth.

Manuel Quezon

Representing the United States were Vice President Garner, Speaker Byrns and a large party of senators and representatives with their wives. Many foreign governments sent unoffical observers, and the leading statesmen of the islands were present. After Quezon had taken the oath of office, Sergio Osmena, vice president, and the members of the new unicameral legislature were sworn in.

President Roosevelt was personally represented by Secretary of War Dern, who made a pleasant speech and read the proclamation, simultaneously issued in Washington, terminating the old government of the islands and establishing the commonwealth government which is to lead to complete independence of the archipelago in ten years. A cablegram of congratulation also was received from Mr. Roosevelt.

Because of the danger of outbreaks by the extremist followers of Emilio Aguinaldo who have opposed Quezon, the constabulary was out in full force, thousands of its members being brought in from all over the archipelago.

The day before the inauguration the legislature held its final session and Frank Murphy, the last of the governors general, appeared before it to review the accomplishments of the American regime that lasted 36 years. "Having found democracy good for itself, America believes it will be good for the Filipinos," he said. Mr. Murphy was then sworn in as high commissioner of the new government.

The entire American delegation attended a grand reception and ball given by Mr. Quezon in honor of Mr. Murphy.

MAJ. GEORGE L. BERRY, industrial co-ordinator of the New Deal, is having a hard time co-ordinating industries. An industry-labor conference has been arranged for December 9 in Washington, but it is evident that some very considerable industries will not be represented. First, the Ford Motor company refused curtilly to send a representative; then the Automobile Manufacturers' association objected to the affair, announcing its opposition to any revival of the NRA, though most of its members signed the old NRA code; and next came a sharp letter from the National Hardwood Lumber association, one of the country's oldest and largest trade associations, flatly refusing to attend the conference. The letter, written by J. W. McClure of Chicago, secretary of the association's board of directors, labeled any attempt to impose a new NRA on industry as "impractical, unworkable, unenforceable, a menace to respect for all laws and therefore opposed to public interest."

Nevertheless, the conference will be held, and representatives of labor are expected to advocate a plan for licensing industry, a proposal that all government contractors comply with code provisions and the 30-hour week.

SECRETARY ROPER in addressing the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America in New York was speaking with authoritative knowledge of the intentions of the administration, business may feel considerably reassured. He said "the breathing spell which we are now enjoying is to be the end of governmental regimentation." He declared business was the "scapegoat" of the depression and he upheld the profit system. Of Mr. Roosevelt's announcement of a "breathing spell," the secretary said: "This declaration of the President is clear-cut and concrete. It means specifically that the basic program of reform has been completed. It means that business no longer needs to feel any uncertainty as to what may come in the future with respect to governmental measures."

According to a Washington dispatch in the New York Times, informal orders have been issued by President Roosevelt to administrative officials to cut federal expenditures under the 1937 budget to $500,000,000 less than the newly estimated total for 1936.

As a result, the dispatch says, the lives of many federal bureaus and agencies were reported to be hanging in the balance. The economy wave is heightened by signs of better business, the Times says.

THAT story, originating with the Deseret News of Salt Lake City, that George Norris had said he would not seek re-election to the senate from Nebraska, seems to have been at least premature. The veteran senator says he will make his decision at election time next year, and not earlier.

"A campaign would be a small disturbance, compared to the trouble my not being a candidate has cost me," he said in Los Angeles. "I have received hundreds of letters from all parts of the United States urging me to run next year."

ARMISTICE day was celebrated in the United States more generally and elaborately than it had been since the first of those occasions seventeen years ago. Chief of all the ceremonies, naturally, was that at Arlington National cemetery in Washington, where many thousands gathered to hear an address by President Roosevelt.

Standing before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Chief Executive paid a brief but eloquent tribute to the gallantry of America's fighting men in the World War, set forth America's hopes and intentions for world peace, and announced the imminent signing of a trade treaty with Canada which Prime Minister King had been negotiating in Washington.

At exactly 11 o'clock the President bared his head and stood silent for a minute, as did millions of his fellow citizens all over the land. The President next placed a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's tomb. For six hours, afterward, uniformed organizations marched up the hill in Arlington and laid their wreaths at the tomb.

The celebration in the national capital was culminated by a ball arranged by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Congressional Medal of Honor men headed the list of guests, others being cabinet officers, diplomats and high officials of the army, navy and marine corps.

GOV. CYLDE L. HERRING of Iowa and Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota made a bet of one hog on the football game between the universities of their states. Herring lost, and paid by delivering a fat porker to Olson. That seemed all right, but Virgil Case, a vice crusader and editor of a Des Moines monthly paper, immediately swore out a state warrant for the arrest of Herring on charges of gambling, and said he would file federal charges against Olson.

Under Iowa statutes, gambling is a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum fine of $500 and a year in prison. The federal charge is a felony, Case said, punishable by a $5,000 fine and a prison sentence.

Neither governor appeared to be perturbed by the charges. Herring named Olson as his counsel, along with Senator Dan Steck of Iowa, who accompanied him to St. Paul to deliver the pig.

BRITISHERS went to the polls in the seventh general election since the World War, to elect a new parliament. Counting and publishing the vote over there is a deliberate process, so that at this writing the results are not known. But there was no doubt of the victory of the government forces, though probably they would lose a number of seats. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin was unopposed. But the Laborites made a hot fight to defeat Ramsay MacDonald and several other members of the Baldwin cabinet.

The government, in its campaign, urged support of its League of Nations activities and its program of unemployment relief and stimulation of national trade. Liberals and Laborites took issue with the Conservative candidates on national defense questions, with Labor candidates particularly insistent on disarmament and international control of war materials.

PROMOTED by the powerful nationalistic party WAFD, riotous demonstrations against British domination in Egypt broke out in Cairo and other places. Several rioters were killed and many wounded by the police commanded by an Englishman. The WAFD party insists that Prime Minister Tewfik Nessim Pasha must resign. There is a large Italian community in Egypt, and for a long time it has been understood that Mussolini's emissaries have been stirring up discontent against Britain there.

JAPAN'S apparent determination to dominate northern China has created another crisis in that oriental country, and Shanghai is involved for the Japanese have taken advantage of the slaying of a Japanese sailor there and landed a naval unit 2,000 strong which occupied the Hongkew section of the city.

As the Japanese force began patrolling with fixed bayonets and full war equipment, international settlement authorities mobilized a White Russian regiment of Cossacks under Col. F. R. W. Graham, British army officer detailed as commander of the local volunteer units. The Cossacks, paid by the international settlement, constitute a small standing army for the foreign quarter.

The Chinese were terrified and thousands of them fled from the native quarter to the international settlement, believing the Japanese intended military action in retribution for the murder of the sailor. This the Japanese government denied, but it declared the situation was "serious."

THREE Greeks went to London to invite George II to return to the throne, in accordance with the plebiscite of the Greek people. Deeply moved, he replied: "I shall never forget the past. I shall return almost immediately to my beloved people. May we have divine guidance to bring happiness, peace, and prosperity to our Greece!"

Following the ceremony, the forty-five year-old monarch, with the Princes Paul and Peter and the Princesses Catherine and Olga, the latter a sister of the duchess of Kent, attended a special service of thanksgiving at the Greek orthodox church.

VICTOR EMMANUEL, king of Italy, celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday rather quietly because of the war in which his people are engaged in Africa. He reviewed a parade of armed forces, and with him was the real ruler of the country, Benito Mussolini. Il Duce then appeared on the balcony of his Venezia palace to address a great throng of cheering citizens in the plaza. He spoke just these two sentences: "The forces you have seen this morning with all their weapons, and especially in their spirit, are ready to defend Italy's interests in Europe, Africa or anywhere."

"In one month we have regulated two old accounts (apparently the Italian defeats at Aduwa and Makale, Ethiopia, in 1896) and the remainder will be settled later."

Mussolini that same evening sent to the nations participating in the sanctions against Italy a formal protest against their action, and warned them that Italy would be forced into reprisals with serious consequences to the economic world.

Dispatches from Rome said Pope Pius was making a supreme effort to persuade the League of Nations to postpone the imposition of sanctions, believing this not only would spare the world great economic disorder but also would increase tremendously chances for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war, which might come through collapse of the Ethiopian resistance.

Meanwhile the Italian armies in Ethiopia were advancing steadily toward the interior from both the north and south. The strategic towns of Makale and Gorrabel were occupied practically without resistance.

Haile Selassie lost one of his ablest commanders in the death of General Afewerki, who was struck by an Italian bomb splinter at Gorrabel.

NOT of vast importance, but interesting enough to command the presence of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and 100,000 other persons, was the twelfth annual national corn husking contest held on a farm at the village of Newtown, Ind.

The winner was Elmer Carlsen, twenty-six years old, of Audubon county, who was competing against 17 opponents, the winners and runners-up of nine midwestern states' contests. Carlsen shucked 41.52 bushels of the golden corn in 80 minutes, which means that he ripped the ears from the stalks, tore the flimsy husks from them and pitched a gross weight of 2,995 pounds into his wagon.

Carlsen set a new world's record, the old one being 36.9 bushels, which mark was beaten also by four others of the contestants. The first prize was a check for $100 given by the Prairie Farmer.

ONCE more Jefferson Caffery, American ambassador to Cuba, has been saved from assassination, the intelligence operatives of the Cuban army having discovered and thwarted the plot on the eve of its execution. Dispatches from Havana said the army officials believed the plot was nipped by the arrest of Cesar Villar, leader of the Confederation of Labor; that the assassination was to have taken place when Mr. Caffery left the embassy for home on November 1, and that six automobiles were ready to carry the assassins to a place of refuge. They believed the plot was inspired by radicals who seek to provoke American intervention in Cuba and hope this would bring on a revolution. It was said 29 men had been sworn to kill Mr. Caffery and certain others.

"Doll Library" in the City of Brotherly Love

IN PHILADELPHIA is to be found the only "doll library" in the world, and it is patronized by about two hundred poor children. The dolls are lent to them for a week and then they may be exchanged for others if they have been kept clean and unbroken. The photograph shows Paul D. Shriver, originator of the library, with some of the little ones waiting for dolls.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

VISITORS TO PADDY'S POND

THE hunter who was hiding near the pond of Paddy, the Beaver, hoping that Lightfoot, the Deer, would come back there and give him a chance for a shot, was a man of patience. Also he was a man who understood the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. He knew that if he would not be seen he must not move. He didn't move. He sat as motionless as if he were a part of the very log on which he was sitting.

So Mr. and Mrs. Quack Swam About Within Easy Range of That Terrible Gun.

Big River, came the whistle of swift wings, and Mr. and Mrs. Quack alighted with a splash in the pond. For a few moments they sat on the water, a picture of watchful suspicion. They were looking and listening to make sure that no danger was near. Satisfied at last, they began to clean their feathers. It was plain that they felt safe. Paddy, the Beaver, was tempted to warn them that they were not as safe as they thought, but as long as the hunter did not move, Paddy decided to wait.

Now the hunter was sorely tempted to shoot those ducks, but he knew that if he did he would have no chance that day to get Lightfoot, the Deer, and it was Lightfoot he wanted. So Mr. and Mrs. Quack swam about within easy range of that terrible gun without once suspecting that danger was anywhere near.

By and by the hunter's keen eyes caught a movement at one end of Paddy's dam. An instant later Bobby Coon appeared. It was clear that Bobby was quite unsuspecting. He had something, just what the hunter could not make out. He took it down to the edge of the water and there carefully washed it. Then he climbed up on Paddy's dam and began to eat. You know, Bobby Coon is very particular about his food. Whenever there is water near, Bobby washes his food before eating. Once more the hunter was tempted, but did not yield to the temptation, which was a very good thing for Bobby Coon.

All this Lightfoot, the Deer, saw as he stood among the little hemlock trees at the top of the ridge behind the hunter. He saw and he understood. "It is because he wants to kill me that he doesn't shoot at Mr. and Mrs. Quack or Bobby Coon," thought Lightfoot, a little bitterly. "What have I ever done that he should be so anxious to kill me?"

Still the hunter sat without moving. Mr. and Mrs. Quack contentedly hunted for food in the mud at the bottom of Paddy's pond. Bobby Coon finished his meal, crossed the dam and disappeared in the Green Forest. He had gone off to take a nap somewhere. Time slipped away. The hunter continued to watch patiently for Lightfoot, and Lightfoot and Paddy, the Beaver, watched the hunter. Finally, another visitor appeared at the upper end of the pond, a visitor in a wonderful coat of red. It was Reddy Fox.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

FOOD SUGGESTIONS

A FRUIT cocktail is liked by such a large majority of people that it is usually served as a beginner for a luncheon or dinner. Fresh fruit is always the favorite, but now that canned grapefruit is available in almost any market, it, with other canned fruits, makes a most tasty cocktail. A canned pear, peach, a bit of pineapple with some of the fruit juice will make a most delectable cocktail. Sometimes the addition of a fresh orange will add to the flavor, with a cherry or two for color.

When something different is wanted for a vegetable try:

Celery au Gratin.

Cut the celery into small bits and cook in boiling salted water until tender but not too soft. Drain and place in a baking dish with a rich white sauce, a layer of each and top with the celery, covered with a half-inch top of buttered crumbs. Bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown. Add grated cheese for a more nourishing dish, which, if a cupful of cheese is used, will do for a main dish at luncheon.

One of these chill days serve fried salt pork with cream gravy, baked potatoes and onions and apples cooked together in a small amount of sweet fat. If the apples are very tart add a little sugar which will also add to the flavor and color. Cook the onions until about half done before adding the apples sliced. Serve as a vegetable.

The daily serving of lettuce, green vegetables such as cabbage, endive or cooked spinach or chard is most important for the health of the family.

Dress the lettuce simply with hot bacon fat and a dash of vinegar or lemon juice, or melted butter, hot, if bacon is not liked. Then the old-fashioned way of serving lettuce with just sugar and vinegar is one of which few ever tire.

THE BLIND POSTMAN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

EACH day the mailman makes his rounds. His eyes forever on the ground, His mind forever on the past, For grief has found his heart at last. Each day the mailman has to bear This new, this unaccustomed, care, And men behold in his hurt eyes A look half sorrow, half surprise.

For grief has come and struck him down, The merry postman of the town, Who used to whistle up the street, And had his friends, and all things sweet.

And, in his eyes, with sorrow bent Is something of astonishment That such things happen, that one day Can come and take so much away.

And yet for thirty years he bore His missives to his neighbor's door, Black-bordered letters, or a page Scrawled by the lonely hand of age, The pleading of some woman's heart, Who hears the faithless one depart— And yet within the mailman's eyes The look is sorrow, and surprise.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool!

Dear Mr. Wynn: While walking yesterday I saw a man with a tin cup in his hand and a sign on his hat which read: "Please help the blind." I dropped 10 cents in his cup, then, looking at him, I saw he was only blind in one eye. Did I do wrong to give him a dime?

Yours truly, MISS TAKEN.

Answer: You did wrong in giving him a dime. As he was only blind in one eye, you should have given him a nickel.

Dear Mr. Wynn: My wife and I have saved up $40. Now she wants to buy a cow and I want to buy a bicycle. I claim she'll look funny riding around town on a cow. Am I right?

Truly yours, WATTEL I. DEW.

Answer: She sure would look funny riding a cow, but no funnier than she'd look milking a bicycle.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am a boy seventeen years of age. I am crazy about a girl my own age. I told my father that I was in love. He looked at me for a moment, then said: "My son, love is like a plate of hash." He then walked away from me. What did he mean by comparing "love" with a "plate of hash?"

Truly yours, WILL HUGH ANNSER.

Answer: He has experience, my boy. What he means is "you must have confidence in it to enjoy it."

Dear Mr. Wynn: I have read a great deal about beauty doctors and so-called face lifters. Can you tell me the best way for an aging woman to keep "her good looking youth?"

Truly yours, B. U. TEEFUL.

Answer: The best way for a woman to keep her "youth" is not to introduce "him" to any other women.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I am a boy twelve years of age and have just entered an essay competition. There are two subjects to be written about, one is "Grasshopper" and the other is "Grasswidow." Are these subjects alike or are they different, and why?

Sincerely, X. AMPLE.

Answer: They are exactly alike because they'll both jump at the first chance.

In Morocco

Moroccan Chieftain at His "Front Door."

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

MOROCCO, long an empire guarded from the coveting eyes of Europe by the will of a proud and exclusive people, remains in her subjection a land tempting to the traveler in search of new and even rude experiences.

She is a country up-to-date, accessible, civilized; yet barbarous, antique, and forbidden. She is French, Spanish, Berber, Arab, and Jew. She has been nursed for a thousand years on the subtle policies of the Orient, though farther west than the greater part of Europe.

Her emperors, some of whom were lords and masters of Spain, built great cities and castles and palaces and fortresses, before America had come out of the Land of Dreams. They endowed universities and colleges for the cultivation of learning, the terms of whose foundations resemble those at Oxford and Cambridge; with some of which they were contemporary. The same cloistered beauty is to be found in both; the same lofty ideals of faith and devotion.

They assembled in their prime, great armies for the conquest of the world, and fleets that swept the Christian seas. Though children born of the desert, they arrogated to themselves great pretensions; claiming the Divine Right, not merely as kings but as saints by lineage. Their tombs, where ruin has spared them, remain as lovely as any in the world; their gardens of running waters are still a delight to those permitted to enter them.

And yet, half the population of this country lives on in the ways of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Orient and Occident Mingle.

She is an eastern land in the marrow of her bones, though placed in Africa; and she has been penetrated through centuries by European influences, which lie deep under the surface of her oriental life. Her camel caravans remain coeval with the airplane; and a tribesman of the desert, wounded in battle, can find himself carried through the air to a French hospital across the whole width of impenetrable Atlas. Twenty centuries have here been compressed into as many years.

She includes within her borders mountains almost as stately as the Rockies or the Alps; valleys profound and lovely; cedars as noble as those of Lebanon; olive groves like those of Delphi; vines that grow wild, or are as cultivated now as those of Provence; cities like Fez which belong to the Arabian Nights, and Marrakech the Granada of Morocco, which glows in her fierce sunlight girdled by palm oases, within a day's march of snow-covered summits, "white as salmon" as Drake observed them in the course of his circumnavigation of the world; cities and peoples passionate with the fury and excess of Africa, yet profoundly inspired by the worship of the One God, their compassionate and merciful Allah!

For these and other reasons this country grips one, though the world be at one's disposal. Each year the pacified frontier of this violent and poetic land marches on into regions unknown. Each year one finds some new tract becomes accessible; old castles unsuspected, and chieftains living in them in medieval state; clans and tribesmen at war, now gathered into the fold; maps that record a twelve-months' progress, with all sorts of lines and spots and frontiers marked on them, each with its fascinating tale of valor or industry to tell.

And yet, this advance which seems as inevitable as the march of a Roman legion meets every now and then with sharp and compelling vicissitudes. Out of the clear sky of this Africa there rises, as suddenly as the simoon, a cloud no bigger than a man's hand, and swiftly it threatens to overwhelm and to ruin all!

The history of Morocco is one of violent unrest and order in continual balance.

Rebels Still Exist.

Since the magnificent failure of Abdel-Krim, who all but broke the power of Spain in Africa and went near to reconquering Morocco from the French, the tricolor now blows beside the flag of the sultan over nearly all of French Morocco; but not quite. There are regions in Great Atlas where die-hards still maintain their freedom, delivering shrewd blows at their conqueror from time to time; and, in the desert spaces of Sahara, horsemen and camelers who ride acknowledging no lord.

It is these gentlemen who keep France busy, and offer her young men opportunities of advancement and adventure, beyond that borderland known as the Zone of Security. One can imagine the attraction of such a life for a man grown tired of his boulevards and the charms of an overripe civilization; but it is closely sealed. No traveler may enter it without a strict permission, and there are places where even a French permit does not run.

It is not very difficult to have your throat cut if you cross that line. The rekkas, or secret messengers of France, faithful to their salt, frequently endure that fate.

But the sands of this colored and attractive life are running out, and short of another European war or some violent uprising in Asia, the triumph of France seems assured. None the less, these last pages of her story remain romantic enough; telling a tale of policy and arms, fanaticism and pride; of resistance, surrender, and swift revolt, that await a scribe.

But France in Morocco has not produced her Kipling. One doubts if she ever will. One great traveler she has produced, the Vicomte de Foucauld; and one administrator of genius, the Marechal Lyautey, grown white-haired and old in the service of France.

Those Who Serve France.

All kinds of people have taken a hand in this adventure; crafty and ambitious chieftains and fighting prophets; smooth diplomatists and hard-hitting commanders of the Foreign Legion; Christians, infidels and Jews; generals as lean as their swords—trempe, as they say—tempered, by a life in the Sahara, friends in their youth of De Foucauld and Laperrine; realists yet mystics like the people of the desert themselves, and quite the best kind of man you can hope to meet in northern Africa; meharists of the camel corps who swagger about in their vast white pantaloons; flight commanders who cross the Atlas, dropping bombs upon the gathering tribes, and making new maps from the air; royal princes with an urge for adventure; drummers and army contractors out for pelf; ladies of high rank and great virtue, and ladies of many charms who possess neither; innkeepers and cantiniers; French children who become the attached companions of retired diards; drivers of armored cars and lorries sprung from half the nations of Europe, with weird personal histories, and a knack of extricating themselves from every adventure, or dying game; literary gentlemen whose home is in Paris and whose public resides in France; missions-scientifiques; hydrologists; deputies in flights; newspaper men, unwelcomes; marshals of France with famous names; the resident general of Morocco himself, carefully guarded and surrounded with pomp and ceremonial observance; and something like 30,000 legionnaires (mostly Germans) who, having no country of their own, fight for that strange thing—the Honor of the Legion—and do the work of France for a few cents a day; Ishmaelites all.

Berbers in Opposition.

Upon the other side, and almost as quixotic, is their friend the Dissident, who provides the occasion and the battle ground for all this adventure; a queer chap, with an odd love of freedom and of his native hills, a bit of a troubadour; somewhat of a patriot and fighter for the Faith; gallant, truculent, treacherous, and cruel; but always very much of a man, with a keen sense of humor allied with a strict attention to business. While ago he raised a laugh throughout Morocco by stealing two carefree gentlemen of the resident general's household with their respective ladies; and returning them, a little damaged, in exchange for five million francs and a gramophone of the very latest design, with all recent improvements, duly specified.

The Berbers, to whose category he belongs, have always been "agin" whatever government there has been in the land; willing, as gentlemen, to follow any great leader to plunder and war; unwilling to follow anyone for long; the real nucleus of the Moslem armies who conquered Spain, and near of kin to those who marched across the Alps with Hannibal to the walls of Rome. The name of Hannibal is still, one is told, to be found among them.

During the World war they furnished battalions whose record of valor was of the highest quality, irresistible in attack; and it is with them that France must make her account. She will probably end by assimilating them, for she has a great gift that way, and the Berber has a European mind; but—there is the question of religion.

Conestoga Wagon Drivers First to Keep to Right

Why do American drivers keep to the right instead of to the left as in England and some Continental countries? In the new Columbia Encyclopedia drivers of the famous Conestoga wagons are credited with originating the custom because they rode the left wheel horse. The wagons, often called "ships of inland commerce," carted freight over the Allegheny mountains before the railroads were built in 1850.

The Conestoga wagon originated in Pennsylvania before the Revolution, according to the encyclopedists. It was pulled by a six-horse team and was capable of carrying a five-ton load. The bottom of the wagon box was curved, rising at both ends so that in going up and down hills the goods would shift less easily and the end-rails be subject to less strain. The prairie-schooner was a modification of the Conestoga wagon.

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

Possession Demands Our Service, Lest We Perish

The only hope of perfecting human relationship is in accordance with the law of service under which men are so solicitous about what they shall give. Yet people are entitled to the rewards of their industry. What they earn is theirs, no matter how small or how great. But the possession of property carries the obligation to use it in a larger service.

For a man not to recognize the truth, not to be obedient to law, to render allegiance to the state, is for him to be at war with his own nature, to commit suicide. That is why "the wages of sin is death." Unless we live rationally, we perish physically, naturally, spiritually.

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

Reunion in Michigan

ON THE last Thursday of this month the people of Michigan, like millions of their countrymen, will observe Thanksgiving Day. In doing so they will be following a thoroughly American custom, a custom which originated more than three centuries ago when the Pilgrim Fathers, immediately after their first harvest in the New World, set aside a day of Thanksgiving for the year's blessings.

The custom, antedating our Republic, survives as our oldest native holiday. Despite the interval of three centuries, despite the momentous changes they brought into American life, the annual festival continues to draw countless American families into yearly reunion at Thanksgiving; and among the modern forces that foster this ancient custom, the telephone occupies an important place.

The telephone helps to combat the distance created by the extension of our frontiers. It fills a modern need. It contributes its share in making the arrangements for any celebration—ordering supplies, extending and accepting invitations, arranging meetings, changing plans at the last minute, sending regards, regrets or congratulations.

Efficient, unobtrusive, often taken as a matter of course, the modern telephone thus plays its part in our daily lives, serving us all as readily and faithfully on holidays as during the working week.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

By Editha L. Watson

SECRET OF THE BIG HORNS

A POUCH full of "yellow bullets" which really were big gold nuggets, a "free trapper" of the old times, and a fur company's greedy representatives: mix these well and add plenty of bad whisky, and you have the story of another lost mine.

"Old Man" LaPondre, as they called him, was a stubborn old soul. Years of free trapping had made him "independent as a woodchuck," and he felt beholden to no man. He had found his "yellow bullets" lying in a creek bed, and there were plenty more where these came from. Just where the creek with golden sands flowed, he would not tell. He wanted his little triumph first, of course. He could imagine going to St. Louis, showing the nuggets, and creating a sensation of the first water. Why, he would be rich enough to buy the American Fur company, lock, stock, and barrel! The idea was balm to his soul.

And, then, he planned, he would come back. He would leave St. Louis as ignorant as he found it. If these "yellow bullets" were what he thought they must be, he would cash in on them, buy some of the things he wanted, and come back to Fort Pierre. Then he would ask his friends to join him, and they would head toward the Big Horns and wealth.

Many a man had found gold in the Big Horns, thought Old Man LaPondre. But most of them had lost out, after all. Well, he wasn't going to lose out.

"Stick around, boys!" he said to his friends at Fort Pierre. "I'll be back in the spring, and we'll go out and pick rocks out of the creek." And he winked portentously, and chuckled at his little joke.

So his Dakota friends "stuck around" rather closely, for they believed the old man. And he, in high feather, went down to St. Louis to find out what was what. He found out—the nuggets were valued at almost unbelievable prices, and he, "Old Man" LaPondre, suddenly assumed the most wonderful importance.

The American Fur company, for instance, grew interested immediately. They offered to buy LaPondre, out, or to pay well for information, which would give them a chance at the location. But, "Nope," said the old man. "I'll keep what I've got. Me and my friends get first show." And so stubborn was he that no one could pry a word out of him which might betray his secret.

He was going back in the spring, he was, and his friends who waited at Fort Pierre should have their show.

He had no more chance to get away with it than he would have today. Pushed with the dreams of his vast wealth waiting beneath the waters of that mountain creek, he "let go all holts," and began to celebrate prematurely. He was aided, of course, by the lower element of St. Louis, who clung to him and fawned, and also by men who hoped to loosen his tongue and get the secret location. These men, though they were agents of the fur company, were working for themselves, for if they could discover the secret, they would never pause to tell it to anyone else. They kept the old man filled with liquor—none too good, that it might take effect sooner. And take effect it did, but not as anyone had planned—for Old Man LaPondre grew ill, sank into a coma, and died. With him died the secret of that crystal stream paved with gold, and to this day no man knows where to look for more of those alluring "yellow bullets."

THE RABBIT-HOLE TUNNEL

IN STEVENS GULCH, near Strontia Springs, Colo., was a deposit of ore which the Indians knew of in the very early days. The men mined the ore, the women crushed and washed it, and the gold was placed in turkey quills and taken as far East as the Mississippi river to trade with the white men.

Some years before the Civil war, two young men from St. Joseph, Mo., came West and found this Indian mine. In some manner they managed to get an ox wagon into the gulch, and this they loaded with very rich ore, which they took home and sold. They made a map of the location, marking on it where they had hidden their tools.

In 1861, they started back to the mine. Near Devils Head peak they were murdered, supposedly by the Indians whom they had despoiled.

A relative who had their map sent it to Henry Jackson, a negro, who had lived in the region during Indian days. Jackson recovered the tools from the place marked on the map, but he could not locate the mine.

In 1911 a young man named Johnson found some promising ore in the gulch which, when crushed and panned, showed a rich color. He noticed a rabbit go into a hole of some brush, but at the time he did not pay much attention. Later, when he heard the story of the lost mine, he returned and tried to find the tunnel, but it was no use.

The Day Before Thanksgiving

New England Thanksgiving Busy Time

THANKSGIVING day! How these words spelled days and days of work and worry for the colonial housewife! A festive holiday it was called by proclamation, observes a writer in the Boston Herald, but actually it represented a day which demanded more preparation than most any other in the year. Our old New England traditions required it—the Puritans did, so must we—was the common understanding of the day.

In days of yore grandmother would start her Thanksgiving preparation weeks in advance. The pies must be made. Of course she wouldn't serve nice pies that hadn't "ripened." They were made in quantity and put down cellar where they frequently froze to a solidly overcome only by a hot oven just before the feast.

In passing it might be well to remind you of the custom in one New England family to have three pieces of pie for breakfast on Thanksgiving morn. Mince, apple and squash were the three dictated by tradition.

Well in advance of the traditional day one would see grandmother take down the seasoning used but a few times a year, the crackers would be ground up and gradually the stuffing for the turkey was prepared—this also went down cellar to ripen. We mustn't forget the plum pudding which was made well in advance and hung in a bag up in the attic suspended from a nail so interested mice could not approach.

Then came the days before Thanksgiving. Sons were drafted to collect and crack the butternuts, walnuts, beechnuts, etc. (and more than one finger was smashed in the process). Daughters were drafted to peel squash, turnips, carrots, potatoes, sweet and white, and of course the proverbial tear-producing onions.

The turkey must be caught, killed, plucked, singed and hung up for a day before he was brought to the kitchen. Grandmother must make her famous nut bread for William ("he does like it so when he comes home"). "Sadie, you make the fudge—Alice, you make the molasses candy—Sue, you make—" and so it goes. Everyone hustles, all wanting the same dishes, the same stove cover, the mix'n' spoon, etc.

"Johnnie, Oh Johnnie! Go down to the village and get me some more crackers—Glory me! I've run out of seasoning!"—and the errands start.

These were typical New England days of preparation for the Thanksgiving feast, all of which must be executed in addition to the regular chores of making butter for market twice a week, churning the cottage cheese, collecting the eggs, etc., etc.

Then came the day—the house must be spic and span. Dozens of pictures must be dusted, the parlor must be opened up, wood brought in for the extra stove, chestnuts gathered to put on the fireplace hearth—and on went the great process of preparation.

The folks came, hugs and kisses went the rounds, the new baby was chucked under the chin and an immediate retreat to the kitchen by the feminine members took place. By one-thirty or two the feast took place—and then the dishes. Stacks upon stacks of dishes, pots and pans (usually the turkey pan went under the sink for scouring the following day).

PLYMOUTH ROCK

BECAUSE the proprietor of a home for tourists solicited patronage on historic old Plymouth Rock in Massachusetts, he was brought before the town council of Plymouth within whose border the old rock lies. The ruling of the council was that the old rock does not belong to the town or to any private individual but to the entire country, all Americans having the same rights of ownership—in this shrine.

Games, gossip, etc., occupied a brief period until time for supper, when again the kitchen staff swung into action and made turkey sandwiches, poured the cider and cut up the pies.

As the lights were blown out it was unusual to hear the women folks say, "Didn't we have a good time, but isn't Thanksgiving a tiresome day!"

This was the Thanksgiving of yore contrasted to the modern Thanksgiving of a restful morning, a motor ride through the country or a ride "in town," a sumptuous dinner prepared by chefs who have vied with grandmother and her recipes until even she is forced to admit that she has been surprised—a delightful matinee at the theater and an evening in the game cellar at home. What a contrast—and what a pity that grandmothers of old couldn't be here now to reap the benefits of the advance of New England family traditions!

THE THANKSGIVING PIE

Thanksgiving Pumpkin Pies

From the time the first golden pumpkin makes its appearance until the last one has been taken out of storage, there's no more universally popular dessert than pumpkin pie. Although canned pumpkin is available at all times and makes excellent pies, pumpkin pie enjoys a definite season and is most appreciated during the autumn months. Everybody has his own very definite ideas of just what a pumpkin pie should be from color to taste.

The Suicide Trail

By GAYER GRAHAM

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

"H—L!" uttered Henry Hadsam. He peered about to see if anyone had overheard, but no one noticed him hunching his five-four three upon the steps of the Paramount Advertising company. The earth still turned, though he had just been fired.

Calamities are lighted by woman's sympathy, but Maizie had turned up a pert, powdered nose as he walked humbly out of Paramount—forever.

There came to Henry the most startling idea ever to tax the brain of a Hadsam. He would suicide. It was the laugh at the world. No one had cared about him since his stepfather remarried. No girl.

Funeral expenses? His insurance, made out to Maizie, had suffered a two-year lapse, usually fatal. It must cost quite a bit to die, Henry figured, thinking of the upkeep of the swell funeral homes he had seen on his way to work.

He reached into the pocket where his watch would have been if it hadn't been in a pawnshop. The last of the Hadsams hoped against hope that he would find more than the two cents in his palm.

A newsboy approached with a "Thanks, Mister," tossed a paper in his lap, and Henry was broke.

As he finished rolling a limp looking cigarette, the paper in his lap swam across his field of vision. "Protect yourself against accident and old age," a canny insurance man admonished him. "Be independent."

Henry took too heavy a draft of his cigarette, became dizzy, and within his brain the new idea rioted. He would hang onto life until he had paid up some more insurance and all his bills. Then he would shake the mud of the world from his feet and rise to higher realms where no more the burden of making a living would oppress him.

Idly, he turned the paper to the "Help Wanted—Male," but as always, found nothing but salesmen wanted. There was one ray of hope.

WASTE PAPER WANTED, 35c PER HUNDRED.

Waste paper! His landlady had a whole stack of newspapers in the basement. Must be a couple of hundred pounds. Henry knew where he could get some more.

The work was slow at first. Many housewives mistook him for a stocking salesman or a collegian selling magazines, and would shut their doors in his face. Gradually he became more assured and urbane, flashing a winning smile across the horizon as he asked gently, "Any waste paper you have no use for madam?" Then he would clean the basement for his patroness, making friends for future use.

Though he grew thinner, he stuck to it. "Many a little makes a nickel," he quoted. "No, that isn't right."

When the day came that he had two dollars left after paying room and board, Henry had an interview with Bacchus in a beer parlor and emerged with another idea. He would form his own waste paper company.

There was a headache the next morning, for the Hadsams never were drinking men. But the idea remained. There must be plenty of profit for a company, Henry figured.

Apartment owners. Hotel keepers. Private residences. The city became waste paper conscious. In the vanguard was a horse and wagon gally decorated with signs of the Hadsam Waste Paper company. "We serve to serve again."

A small truck. One man hired, then two. Soon, Henry reflected, he could take out more insurance than he had ever possessed in his life.

Then, just like that, it was done. Henry Hadsam sat in the president's office of the Hadsam Waste Paper company. "We serve to serve again." Fondly he gazed upon a twenty-five-thousand-dollar policy made out to one Henry M. Hadsam, with innumerable et ceteras and provisos.

He called his lawyer in. "Is this complete in every way?" he questioned, shoving his fifty-cent cigar to the opposite corner of his mouth. "Does it have—I mean, does it cover everything?"

The lawyer rubbed his hands. His practice had gained considerably since the great Henry Hadsam had used him for his first case. "Everything, sir. Except, that is, one thing. It has no suicide clause. Not in force for the full five years, you see—"

But the Great Hadsam had thrown his cigar at him, was on his feet screaming, "No suiciding clause! I hire you and you get me no suiciding clause!"

After the first disappointment was over and he straightened his shoulders, Henry found he didn't feel so bad as he imagined.

Men to Pray Before Working

To instill the national spirit in the minds of its 20,000 workers, the Kawasaki Dockyard company will erect a branch shrine of Ise Grand Shrine in its dockyards near Kobe, Japan. Before starting to work in the morning all employees will offer silent prayer. A statue of the famous scholar, Sontoku Ninomiya will be erected near the shrine.

O, May!

"What's all this?" asked the professor.

"Those are my Mae West problems," explained the student.

"Mae West?"

"Yeah, I done 'em wrong."—Masonic Craftsman.

The Foundation of Smartness Lies in Wrap-Around Slip

PATTERN 9070

When you've donned your first wrap-around slip you'll wonder why you haven't had one before. No bagging at the waistline, because narrow ties hold it securely in place; backless, so that it can be worn under your most abbreviated sports or dinner dress. The bodice follows the curve of your brassiere, and the skirt is shadow-proof because of the double lap at the back. Total: solid comfort and a trim silhouette. Make it in tea rose, peach or white crepe, or unshrinkable rayon. There's a lot of daintiness in a bit of lace in front!

Pattern 9070 may be ordered only in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 34 requires 3 1/2 yards 39 inch fabric and 1/4 yard 3 inch lace vestee. Complete diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 West Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

Use Lamp to Call Doctor

Morse code signals flashed by a lamp on the telephone-less Papa Stour Island of the Shetland group summoned a doctor and a nurse from the mainland the other night. The lamp signals explained an inhabitant had been taken ill and needed an immediate operation. The doctor and nurse rushed to the patient in a lifeboat.

"DUDES" WHO WASH BUT ONCE A YEAR REALITY IN KOREA

"One yard of eggs, please!" That's what the housewife says to her grocer in the Japanese colony of Korea. Eggs are here sold by the string, like sausages; they are tied together with long wisps of straw. One orders them to any length required. They cost less than a penny a dozen!

Korea is a land of unceasing surprises for the European. In a number of its villages the men wash only once a year; many are coal-mining villages, too! But these natives would be most indignant if one were to suggest that they were not well turned out, for they take great pride in their appearance.

The miner will come up from the depths covered in coal dust, then go home and change into spotlessly clean, beautifully pressed garments. He will spend a full hour "dolling himself up" before venturing out for the evening. But never, on 364 days of the year, will he dream of washing! The day when he does so is a national holiday.

There are many cows in Korea, but until the Japanese took over control of the land the people treated them entirely as pack animals. Nobody had any idea that they could be milked!

A Korean wedding is a very elaborate affair. It lasts for three days, throughout which the bride has to sit motionless on a throne, with her eyes demurely lowered, balancing an enormous headdress which weighs more than 20 pounds. Her husband is away from her most of this time; he ascends to a secluded spot in the mountains, and prays for hours on end that the two of them may be blessed with a large family.—London Answers.

2,150 Pounds Amount of Food You Eat Per Year

You will eat a ton of food this year—2,150 pounds, the statisticians say. Milk, fluid and canned, and other dairy products, will account for half of this. (Milk is heavy.) You will eat about 150 pounds of meat, and about the same amount of fresh fruit; 150 pounds of fresh vegetables, not counting 150 pounds of potatoes.

In bread and cakes and breakfast foods and macaroni, you will consume 230 pounds of flour and cereals. Sugar, 102 pounds of it, is the next most important item. Of canned fruits and vegetables, you will eat 93 pounds, states Today.

A YOUNG PIONEER

When several hundred families were sent to Alaska from the Middle West to settle the Matanuska Valley, the Red Cross sent a nurse, Madeleine de Foras, to remain with them for a year to help protect their health. Among the first friends she made were the little pioneer, Arthur Hack, 4 years old, and "Prince," the pup who went with his young master to Alaska.

their aid. A number of national organizations have signified their willingness to help the Red Cross minimize home accidents and the close cooperation of the local branches of these organizations is anticipated.

"Special home inspection forms have been prepared," Mr. Cochran said, "and are to be introduced into the homes here through the children in our schools. Arrangements have been made with school superintendents, principals, and teachers so that school children will receive these blanks, take them home and conduct an actual inspection of the home to eliminate accident causing hazards with the help of parents or relatives and return the blanks to the school, where they will be forwarded to the Red Cross for compilation of statistics to indicate what type of home accident hazard is most prevalent."

This home safety campaign, it is understood, will also include farm safety and safety while at work on the farm. Because of the inaccessibility of farms and the difficulty of securing accident statistics pertaining to them, little safety pioneering has been done in this direction.

"Preventing unnecessary death and alleviating human misery," Mr. Evans, chapter chairman, pointed out, "is a chartered obligation of the Red Cross, and home safety," he said, "is a natural outgrowth of First Aid, a Red Cross service which has been in effect for some 25 years and is annually responsible for saving many lives."

"The accident prevention campaign," he said, "will be carried out on a nation-wide scale and each of the nearly 13,000 Red Cross chapters and branches will play a part."

Mr. Cochran indicated that the campaign would not be an intensive affair of a few months which would subsequently be dropped but, rather, would be a continuing year-by-year program to prevent unnecessary deaths and accidents in the home and on the farm.

The Red Cross believes that knowledge of first aid will do much to prevent home accidents. A person instructed in first aid is accident conscious; and certainly, when an accident does occur in the home, the practical application of first aid knowledge may prevent a minor injury from crippling, a serious injury from killing.

Peanuts Are Popular

The history of peanuts in America is an interesting one. Up to the time of the Civil war a few peanut plants were grown in gardens in Virginia and the Carolinas for family use and as curiosities. During the war the soldiers found the nuts to be excellent food, with the result that in the year following the end of hostilities the acreage assigned to them steadily increased. But it was not until the peanut thrasher, the mechanical peanut picker and the sheller were invented that they were grown and harvested on a large scale.

Panics Favor Autumn

It seems that most panics occur in the autumn. Black Friday, one of the worst in September, 1869, and the panic of '73 started in September. The 1907 panic was in the autumn. An exception was the beginning of the 1920-21 depression, which broke in April. The panic of 1929 began in October.
