FRANK BARNES PASSES AWAY WEDNESDAY

Deceased Took Active Part In Iosco County's Early Lumber Operations

Frank F. Barnes, well known and highly esteemed resident of Tawas City, died Wednesday morning at the home of his son, Myrton H. Barnes, in this city. Mr. Barnes, who was 87 years old, had been in ill health for more than three years.

Frank Ferdinand Barnes was born January 31, 1848, at Rural Vale, Oakland county, Michigan. He was united in marriage in 1869 to Miss Alvira Hoard of Waterford, Mr. and Mrs. Barnes came to Iosco county in 1882, settling at Alabaster where they made their home for many years. Later they resided at Chicago, Lapeer and Alpena. About six years ago they came to Tawas City where they made their home with their son, Myrton. Mrs. Barnes died May 30, 1933. Two children survive him, Myrton H. Barnes of this city and Mrs. William Trescott of Harbor Beach. He is also survived by four grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

Mr. Barnes had been one of the few men left who were active in Iosco county's early lumbering operations. While a young man he helped to construct the Michigan Central railway between Detroit and Pontiac.

The funeral services were held Thursday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Barnes. Rev. M. A. Sommerfield officiated. Burial was in the Tawas City cemetery.

Out of the city relatives who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Glen Barnes of Jackson and Mrs. Paul J. Misner of Glencoe, Ill.

Inquest Held Monday In Fatal Auto Wreck

Insufficient lights about the truck and trailer with the poor visibility caused the wreck which killed Woodward H. Anderson last week Wednesday evening was the verdict of the jury at the inquest held Monday afternoon. The truck was owned by the Border Cities Trucking company and was parked on U. S. 23 in Tawas City near the city limits.

Anderson was on his way to Alpena to spend Thanksgiving with his mother. He was riding with Gerald King of Alpena. King maintained at the inquest that when he saw the warning flare set behind the truck he did not have time to avoid the crash.

Lawrence Jones of Detroit was the driver of the truck. He was at Detroit when the accident occurred where he had gone to secure a new wheel.

Oscoda Fishermen To See Improvements On River Harbor After Fifty Years

After waiting 50 years, Oscoda fishermen are about to see improvements at the mouth of the AuSable river which will greatly facilitate the annual catch of Lake Huron whitefish and at the same time provide a safe refuge from storms and sudden squalls. Approximately a million pounds of whitefish are caught in these waters each year.

State WPA Administrator Harry L. Pierson has approved an allotment of $19,960 for the construction of a double-arm crib jetty at the river's mouth, the Oscoda township board contributing the remaining $5,024 necessary to complete the job.

Shifting sand in the river bed where it empties into the Lake has been a tremendous handicap to Oscoda fishermen bringing in their catch. Several times since the early eighties efforts have been made to interest the Federal Government in remedying the situation, but while admitting the need the Government has contended it was a local problem. The jetty, now made possible with WPA funds, will extend 600 feet into the Lake, creating a current which will keep the channel free of sand. As a refuge from storms it will benefit not only the fishermen, but owners of all small craft.

ANNUAL FAIR WILL BE HELD IN JANUARY

Sponsored By Tawas Bay Horticulture Society and Future Farmers

The second annual fair sponsored by the Tawas Bay Horticulture Society and the East Tawas Chapter of Future Farmers of America will be held in January. A very successful exhibition was held last year. Many exhibits were entered and it drew a county-wide interest. The exact date of this year's fair will be announced later.

The show this year will be along the same lines as last year, consisting of open, Smith-Hughes, and 4-H Club Class. All who are interested in having a fair in Iosco county are requested to cooperate by starting to prepare their exhibits at once. Care should be taken with all entries, as quality, and not quantity, is the purpose of an exhibit of this type. All departments will be included and worth while cash prizes will be offered.

Special attention is directed to the class for alfalfa and clover seed, all samples of which should consist of four quarts of seed. The class in small grains will consist of wheat, barley, oats, rye and buckwheat, samples to consist of four quarts. Beans, vetch, vegetables, corn, rutabagas, potatoes and apples are included in the crops division.

The ladies will be included in the show, as there are classes for canned goods, baked goods, and articles of all seamstress' art. Handicraft clubs will have an opportunity to demonstrate their craft work in the division for 4-H Handicraft club. Classes have also been arranged for farm shops groups.

The rural schools have not been forgotten. They are asked to set up exhibits of their schools, emphasizing agriculture. Cash prizes will be offered.

Judging contests will be held for Smith-Hughes, rural school and adult teams. All are invited to enter. There will be speakers from Michigan State College and a worth while program is to be offered.

This fair is free—no entry fees, no door admission. Let us support this show as it deserves. Open to all residents of Alcona, Iosco and Arenac counties. For particulars write County Agent Casper Blumer, Harrisville; or Robert E. Jewell, agriculture instructor, East Tawas public schools, East Tawas.

Chino-Japanese War May Come From Autonomy Movement—Oil Embargo Against Italy Postponed—President Busy With the Budget.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

DOWNRIGHT war between the Chinese armies of Dictator Chiang Kai-shek and the Japanese appeared almost certain when the autonomy movement in north China was revived in eastern Hopei and Chahar provinces by Yin Ju-keng, the administrative commissioner and friend of Japan. Leaders of the rest of the region were undecided on their course, but Japanese troops began to pour in by the trainload. Three thousand of them with full war equipment arrived in Tientsin, and the garrison at Peiping was more than doubled. The Fengtai railway junction a few miles from Peiping was seized, Colonel Takasashi, military attaché, asserting this was necessary because the rolling stock was being moved south, threatening the isolation of the Japanese forces.

In Nanking officials said the National government was determined to meet with force any attempt to force autonomy on the territory south of Hopei and Chahar provinces, and the executive Yuan proclaimed five sweeping reforms designed to stop the spread of the movement. Chiang was hurrying large bodies of troops to the northward. He also sought to hold the support of the Shantung war lord, Han Fu-chu, by entrusting him with the defense of the northern Honan and Shantung frontiers and promising him money and supplies, if needed, to stem invasion. Han Fu-chu of late has been wooed assiduously by the Japanese.

Wang Ching-wei, premier and foreign minister of the Nationalist government, resigned as president of the cabinet. He has not fully recovered from the recent attempt to assassinate him.

BRASIL was experiencing another revolt, in the northern part of the country. Latest advices said the rebels had control of the city of Natal and that a hot fight was on for possession of Pernambuco. The uprising was laid to the Communists and was believed to be led by Luis Carlos Prestes, Communist leader for all of South America. It was said he planned to spread the movement all over Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay and Chile.

Under command of Gen. Manuel Rabelo, the federal troops, army and navy airplanes and two cruisers were hurriedly sent northward to combat the rebellion.

Several days later a revolt broke out in Rio de Janeiro, the capital, despite extraordinary precautions. The principal participants there were the aviation forces. They seized the aviation field but government troops recaptured it and it was announced this outbreak had been suppressed.

Finally the Brazilian government announced that the revolt in the North also had been crushed and that 138 persons had been killed in the four days of fighting.

THERE was terror throughout Germany when Hitler started what apparently was to be another "purge." Hundreds of persons were arrested and taken to prison or concentration camps, those taken including some minor officials of the Nazi party in Berlin. Many others were known as Socialists. The Association of Nationalistic Jews, composed of war veterans, was suppressed and its leader jailed.

NOVEMBER 29 had been set as the date for a meeting of the League of Nations sanctions committee to consider the imposition of an oil embargo against Italy, but Premier Laval and British Ambassador George Russell Clerk, after a conference in Paris, recommended that the session be indefinitely postponed, and this action was taken. The statesmen feared early oil sanctions would seriously aggravate the political situation, and Laval thought if he were given more time he might bring about the cancellation of the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel.

There were good reasons for the uneasiness of the French and British governments. Benito Mussolini had bluntly told the world that the imposition of an oil embargo would mean war in Europe, the warning being given through his ambassador to France, Vittorio Cerruti. Furthermore, there was doubt in London and Paris concerning the ability of the United States government to prevent the shipment of oil to Italian ports. In Washington it was reported that Ambassador Augusto Rosso had discussed the matter with Secretary of State Hull, suggesting that attempts to choke off exports of oil, copper, cotton and other commodities did not constitute "orthodox" neutrality.

in Ethiopia and cheered up his forces so that their resistance to the invasion was measurably stiffened, especially in the South. The government at Addis Ababa announced that its armies had driven the Italian troops back from Gorahai, recapturing the town of Gerlogubi by encircling movements. In the northern sector, according to the official communique, a thousand Italians occupying Makale retreated 60 miles to Adigrat. Losses on both sides were increasing.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR ICKES has revived the controversy between the New Dealers and the big steel corporations concerning steel prices. Mr. Ickes said there was "prima facie evidence of collusion" in identical bids on a Florida public works project. The PWA administrator said the four companies bidding $185,000 each on 3,300 tons of steel for a Miami dock—Inland, Carnegie, Jones & Laughlin, and Kalman (a Bethlehem subsidiary)—were the same that submitted identical bids on an ocean terminal at Morehead City, N. C., and the Triborough bridge in New York city.

In the two earlier instances German concerns underbid and were awarded the contracts. Amid protests from industry and labor Ickes then halted all additional foreign purchases and raised the differential in favor of domestic materials from 15 to 25 per cent.

There was no foreign bidder on the Miami project and Mr. Ickes said the contract would be awarded to the concern "that is farthest away and has to pay the highest freight bill—the object is to spread prosperity around."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT was mighty busy at Warm Springs studying the departmental estimates for the budget of 1936-37. Representative James P. Buchanan of Texas, chairman of the house appropriations committee, took part in the first conferences and told the correspondents that he would carry a budget of not more than $500,000,000 in excess of estimated revenues through the house by "a devil of a fight." Then Mr. Buchanan, who didn't appear to have White House support for this stand, left suddenly for Washington, refusing to explain his departure; and the conferences continued with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Acting Budget Director Bell and Mark Shields, clerk of the appropriations committee.

The President told the press they were making distinct progress in arranging the federal finances, having already cut the departmental estimates by $400,000,000. He contradicted reports that he was contemplating division of the Ickes PWA and the Hopkins WPA to ease the friction between the two New Deal officials.

ELEVEN American diplomats and naval officers, selected by Secretary of State Hull, have sailed to represent this country in the coming naval conference in London. At their head is Norman H. Davis, the President's ambassador-at-large for Europe, who participated in the preliminary conversations last year. Acting with him will be Undersecretary of State William Phillips and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations. Advisers to the delegation will be Ray Atherton, counselor of the American embassy in London, and E. H. Dooman of the State department, who knows all about Japanese and other Far Eastern affairs.

Noel H. Field of the division of western European affairs, who attended the last naval conversations, and Samuel Reber, secretary of the American legation in Bern, Switzerland, will act as technical assistants.

The navy's four technical experts will be Capt. Royal E. Ingersol, Commander Roscoe E. Schulmann, Lieut. Arthur D. Ayrault, and Lieut. J. R. Fulton.

MEETING in St. Louis, the Mississippi Valley association adopted resolutions opposing any attempt to limit the "right of water carriers to establish and maintain such port to port rates as they see fit."

The convention, which again went on record as opposing the co-ordination of transportation agencies under the interstate commerce commission, criticized I. C. C. rulings "which have the effect of permitting railroads to cut rates . . . for the purpose of killing off waterway transportation."

The delegates, representing mid-continent agricultural, shipping, and industrial interests of 25 states, again opposed ratification of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty.

Col. Robert Isham Randolph of Chicago was elected president of the association.

SOME interesting views on current problems: Raymond Moley, former member of the "brain trust," told the Association of Buying Officers in New York: "I have said many times that the whole problem of government relief and work relief is a necessary temporary expedient; but it is also a shaky and dangerous one. Every one is willing to recognize that work relief in itself is no curative. It is narcotic in its effect."

Harry W. Nice, Republican governor of Maryland, declared in Chicago that America's constitution is no more in need of change than are the Ten Commandments. The issue in the coming election, he held, is that of free institutions versus dictatorship.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, told Milwaukee Rotarians that the administration is proceeding to the "left," that 97 per cent of the business men of the United States are against it because of the New Dealers' attitude toward the profit system. As prime exponents of the government's present philosophy, Johnson cited Rexford Tugwell, Aubrey Williams, and Harry Hopkins. "The idea of dividing the nation's wealth, as proposed by these gentlemen, is not the way out," he said. "Rather, the thing to be done is to create wealth, with more persons working and each creating new wealth."

PAN-AMERICAN Airways opened a new chapter in the story of aviation when its huge China Clipper carried the first consignment of air mail from Alameda, Calif., to Manila, with stops at Honolulu, Midway Islands, Wake Island, and Guam. Capt. Edwin C. Musick, veteran chief pilot of the company, was in command of the craft and was aided by a crew of six men. Fourteen passengers started on the flight and twelve were dropped off to relieve the staffs at Midway and Wake. The 1,700 miles between Guam and Manila had not been flown heretofore.

After one or two more flights to Manila the clipper will continue to China and operate on through schedules thereafter.

The Philippine Clipper, second of Pan-American Airways' trans-Pacific air fleet, arrived at Alameda from the Atlantic coast and her crew began preparations for a flight to Manila beginning December 6.

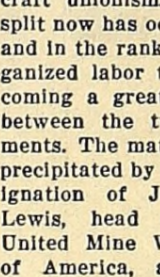

BRUNO RICHARD HAUPTMANN'S attorneys assert that some of the Lindbergh ransom money has been found in Massachusetts and that their investigators also have discovered some pieces of evidence that are of great importance to the defense. The doomed man himself issued a statement calling on Dr. John F. Condon ("Jafsie") to "make a full confession" of what he knows concerning the kidnaping and murder of Colonel Lindbergh's little son.

GOVERNORS of the federal reserve banks, in the bulletin of the reserve board, have sounded a most cheerful note concerning business conditions. Summing up facts gathered all over the country, they concluded that the United States was undergoing the most substantial economic recovery since the depression began, with every sign pointing to its continuance. Business activity has been sustained for ten months near the high level it reached the first of the year, the bulletin said, "in contrast to the course of business in the three preceding years when advances were not sustained but were quickly followed by declines."

FOR a long time it has been apparent that there would be a split in the American Federation of Labor over the issue of industrial unionism versus craft unionism. That split now has occurred, and in the ranks of organized labor there is coming a great battle between the two elements. The matter was precipitated by the resignation of John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers of America, as vice president of the federation. He is the chief protagonist for unit unionization of mass production of industries, and his opponents, the craft union advocates, are led by William Green, president of the organization. The latter have had a majority in the late conventions of the federation, but Lewis has a lot of followers and is a determined fighter. He has set up separate headquarters in Washington and seven international union leaders joined him immediately. It was reported that the "rebels" had a war fund of $10,000,000. Four-fifths of this came from a special assessment of $1 each on the 4,000,000 United Mine Workers this fall.

President Green sent a stern rebuke to Lewis and those associated with him.

ONE hundred years ago Andrew Carnegie was born in Dunfermline, Scotland, and the anniversary was celebrated not only in that town but in Pittsburgh, Pa., and in scores of towns and cities to which the iron master donated public library buildings. In Dunfermline everybody participated in the festivities, for Carnegie practically transformed that city by his gifts and his memory is highly honored. John Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, was a speaker at a formal banquet there.

Bedtime Story for Children

THE HUNTER LOSES HIS TEMPER

THE hunter, hidden near the pond of Paddy the Beaver, chuckled silently. That is to say, he laughed without making any sound. He had watched Mr. and Mrs. Quack feeding along the edge of the pond down towards Paddy's dam, behind the end of which Reddy Fox had been hidden. Reddy had been waiting for those Ducks just as the hunter himself was waiting for Lightfoot the Deer. Then along came Sammy Jay and spied Reddy Fox. At once he had begun to scream at the top of his lungs, "Thief! Thief! Thief!" Mr. and Mrs. Quack had understood him perfectly. They swam out to the middle of the pond while Reddy Fox, knowing that it was useless to stay longer with Sammy Jay about, had snarled angrily and then taken himself off through the Green Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. Quack Called Their Thanks to Sammy.

The hunter thought it a great joke on Reddy. To tell the truth, he was very much pleased. He wanted those Ducks himself. He suspected that they would stay in that little pond for some days, and he planned to return there and shoot them after he had got Lightfoot the Deer. He wanted to get Lightfoot first, and he knew that to shoot at anything else might spoil his chance of getting a shot at Lightfoot.

"Sammy Jay did me a good turn," thought the hunter, "although he doesn't know it. Reddy Fox certainly would have caught one of those Ducks had Sammy not come along just when he did. It would have been a shame to have one of them caught by that fox. I mean to get one and, I hope, both of them myself."

Now when you come to think of it, it would have been a far greater shame for the hunter to have killed Mr. and Mrs. Quack than for Reddy Fox to have done so. Reddy was hunting them because he was hungry. The hunter would have shot them for sport. He didn't need them. He had plenty of other food. Reddy Fox never kills just for the pleasure of killing.

So the hunter continued to sit in his hiding place with very friendly feelings for Sammy Jay. Sammy watched Reddy Fox disappear and then flew over to that side of the pond where the hunter was. Mr. and Mrs. Quack called their thanks to Sammy, to which he replied that he had done no more for them than he would do for anybody, or than they would have done for him.

For some time Sammy sat quietly in the top of the tree, but all the time his sharp eyes were very busy. By and by, he spied the hunter sitting on the log. At first he couldn't make out just what it was he was looking at. It didn't move, nevertheless Sammy was suspicious. Presently, he flew over to a tree where he could see better. Right away he spied the terrible gun and he knew just what it was.

Once more he began to yell, "Thief!

Thief! Thief!" at the top of his lungs. It was then that the hunter lost his temper. He knew that, now he had been discovered by Sammy Jay, it was useless to remain there. He was angry clear through. He no longer had a friendly feeling for Sammy Jay.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

ARTISTRY IN COOKERY

THE cook who really enjoys mixing ingredients as a painter does his colors will find no limit to the delightful dishes which one may originate or enlarge upon with the materials at hand. One must follow a few fundamental principles in cookery, and after that let the imagination soar, for there is no end to inspiration.

After some experience with handling foods, most toothsome dishes may be prepared from bits of leftovers. The cook who wastes nothing, but serves her food in a dainty, appetizing manner, is a real genius and her talents are ever in demand.

It is not always wise to tell all one knows as to the contents of a dish, for some conscientious objectors will refuse to try a made-over dish, or rearranged food.

Now, who will dare to call a steamed pudding a leftover? Yet one may prepare a most tasty one with a few squares of corn bread, a cupful of leftover cocoa, a bit of oatmeal, a few raisins and a couple of egg yolks left from some icing or dessert.

Use the things you have at hand—anyone who knows little about foods can prepare a good meal if the market can be called upon with no regard to expense.

Do you use the half-cupful, more or less, of leftover ice cream in a cake or pudding?

Leftover custard may be used the next day for a pudding sauce.

Accident is often the mother of new things, as the discovery of one woman when making a sponge cake that it was more fetching when the egg yolks were added unbeaten and stirred in to make the cake streaked gold and white in appearance.

TRY THIS TRICK

By PONJAY HARRAH

MYSTERIOUS CRAYONS

SEVERAL crayons are utilized in this trick. Each crayon is of a different color. The magician distributes the crayons and turns his back. He asks that one crayon be placed in his hand, the others hidden.

This is done. The magician's hands are behind his back; when he faces the spectators, he keeps his hands so he cannot see them. Again turning his back toward the people, he lets them take back the crayon which he is holding. It is hidden with the rest.

Although the wizard has gained no opportunity to glimpse the crayon, he promptly raises his fingertips to his forehead and in a mysterious tone announces the color of the crayon that was used.

The secret is as simple as it is clever. While he turns about, holding the crayon behind him, the magician marks one thumb nail. After the spectators regain the crayon, he raises his hand to his forehead. That action lets him see the color of the mark on the nail.

THE FORSAKEN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

"LET me take the grain, Mother, you sit by the fire; I will feed the chickens, and I will milk the cow. I want to get so tired, Mother, and yet I never tire; And nights I am so sleepy, yet cannot sleep somehow."

"I will do the chores, Daughter; you go walk awhile; Trip across the meadows as you used to do; Surely there are roses there to make you smile, That will bring the roses back again to you."

"No, not there, not there, Mother!—here I must abide; Willt are the roses, leaving but the stone. Fields that you have walked, Mother, someone at your side, Now you cannot walk Mother, walk again alone."

"Yonder in the town, Daughter, on the village green, Men and maids are dancing, men and maids are gay; Hurry to the village—you are yet the queen; Take your share of pleasure, pleasure while you may."

"No, I cannot go, Mother, there I cannot go, For they all remember when we both were there. They would give me pity, pity me, I know—That's the hardest burden sorrow has to bear."

"Listen, foolish daughter; him you must forget— Better lost the lover that a maid can lose; Hope is all before us, all behind regret— Life is joy or sorrow always as we choose."

"Life is joy or sorrow? Mother dear, my joy After all was sorrow, though I didn't know. Now, to give me pleasure, sorrow I employ— I can't keep from laughing—it's so funny—so—"

"Quick! Some wine! The doctor! Now she sleeps at last. Is she only sleeping? Will she ever wake? Has he even killed her? Well, the past is past. He shall be forgiven, for her great love's sake."

Life in Sweden

A Lock in the Gota Canal.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

"THIS is Sweden," says the peasant of Dalarna (Dalecarlia), as he looks out upon the rolling pastures and birch-clad hills of the province dear to him as life. "Our ways are changing, of course. The good old days are no more. But you may still find a handful of us Dalecarlians who go on living as our fathers lived, tilling the same soil, hewing timber in the forests for our houses, spinning wool and flax for our clothes, hammering out copper and iron from our mines for utensils and tools."

With quiet dignity he towers in the doorway of his home, into which his gracious "Valkommen" bids strangers enter. The wind plays with the wide brim that gives his black hat a quaintly solemn Puritan air. But against the weathered gray of log walls he is a vivid figure in his long, single-breasted blue coat, his yellow buckskin breeches, red-wool stockings tasseled at the knee, low hand-made shoes adorned with gleaming steel buckles.

Overhead, slender blades of grass of apple-green lightness shoot up from the sod of his thatched roof. Behind, framing the scene, stand silver trunks of stately birches, the graceful "white ladies" of the forests of central Sweden.

"We are a proud and independent people," he continues. "Sweden, as you know, has never submitted to alien rule. Only once, for a brief century and a quarter, Sweden joined Denmark and Norway in experimenting with a joint sovereignty. But we did not like the iron hand of our Danish kinsmen."

"In the Stockholm 'Blood Bath' of 1520, King Christian II of Denmark beheaded more than 80 Swedish nobles, therewith sealing his own destiny. It was that act of tyranny which led young Gustavus Vasa, later king for 37 years, to rouse the strong men of Dalecarlia to the country's defense. So one of the most illustrious chapters of Swedish history has been written here."

The blue eyes glow with the fervor of conviction. There is a challenging ring in the sure, soft-spoken words. "Know Dalecarlia and you will know the very heart of Sweden."

But the landowner of Skone goes a step further. Within view of crumbling fortress or surviving splendor of medieval chateau, where lazy swans swim forgetfully in the encircling moat, he halts in the shade of the wide-spreading beeches that line his fields of sugar beets or grain.

Traces of Ancient Civilization.

"The ice sheet slipped off this southern tip of the Scandinavian peninsula ten or fifteen thousand years ago," he begins. "Our scientists find traces of a civilization not unlike our own running back through seventy centuries and more. Our rune stones are not all deciphered; some of our Viking mounds are still unexplored. Not long ago we unearthed a grave from the Bronze age. Here in Skone"—lovingly he slurs the long o sound of the vowel a—"we turn up thousand-year-old traditions with our very plowshares!"

Were it not for his imperturbable poise, he might be off, at a signal, to search for the cradle or one of the cradles of the human race. But quietly he turns instead to historical fact, as he would like to read it: "Once Skone was an independent kingdom in itself." . . . He checks his flow of words and, chuckling, adds: "Know Skone and you really do not need to know the rest of Sweden!"

In Stockholm the city-dweller, born into an atmosphere of Old world leisure and acquiring by choice the ultra-modern conveniences that mechanical genius contributes to our age, wanders out to enjoy the lustrous tranquility of one of the "white nights" of the northern summer.

He passes the magnificent willows of King's gardens and halts on Norrbro, North bridge, to listen to the singing, foamy waters under its span. It forms a link between the old "city between the bridges," with its medieval quaintness of narrow lanes, and the newer Stockholm, with its many public buildings impressively modern in design, which suggest something of the splendor that legend and history have cast over the age of the Renaissance.

Before him rises the facade of the house of parliament. "With the Socialists in the majority, things are in a bad way for our country," he reflects gloomily. But he catches the incongruity in his fears, too, as he faces the commanding simplicity of the massive royal palace. Within its walls, for more than a century, rulers of the Bernadotte line have held the reins of a limited monarchy, untouched by the terrors of revolution or the tumult of war.

The quivering beauty of the amethyst twilight, which before long will begin to throb with the glow of a ruby dawn, possesses his soul. And love for his capital city, of silvery waterways and emerald islands, conquers doubts. "Courage to experiment with new forms of the changing social order, ranging widely from statecraft to architecture," he reflects, "and wisdom to direct these experiments, rooted firmly in past experience, toward evolutionary progress—something of that courage had that wisdom is the spirit of Stockholm, of Sweden, today."

In the Forest Land.

In the solitudes of the Norrland forests the frontiersman has swung his ax during the brief dusk that is high noon of the winter day. Throwing the logs on the ice-locked rivers, natural floating channels for the timber industry of the Far North, he waits for the release that comes with the thaws of spring.

Under his hand the primeval forest has almost vanished, but the regrowth of spruce and fir and pine is straight and tall. For several decades the Swedish state, stepping in to check indiscriminate waste of virgin forest, has been a zealous guardian of this its most important source of wealth.

By midsummer the rivers will have carried their cargo of logs, numbered by the millions, well down to sorting booms, near the mills, on the eastern coast, where the freighters lie in port.

It is the season of light. On the upper reaches of the Norrland rivers the midnight sun blazes unrelentingly on glaciers and snow-capped peaks, converting them into rushing torrents and swift-surfing rapids. Modern industry steps in and in turn converts that tremendous natural force into "white coal" for the country.

Electricity is conquering the wilderness of the North. White coal, not black, feeds the trains that in unending procession haul ore to seaports from the huge mountains of iron in the Arctic regions. For years the ore has been quarried down their sides, but still the mountains tower, with hundreds of millions of tons of potential wealth, black eminences against distant ranges of snowy peaks.

The tempo of life quickens in the Far North. The frontiersman catches the rhythm of the whirl of wheels in sawmill, the roar of turbines in power plant, the click of steel rails in mountain tunnel.

"Ours are the riches of the future," he exults. "Here are iron-ore fields among the largest in all Europe. Outside of Finland, probably no other European country has such a high per capita wealth (ours approximates 1,000 acres per 100 inhabitants). Excluding Norway, what European power is so lavishly blessed by nature with bounteous reserves of latent white coal? This is Sweden, the Sweden of tomorrow!"

About an eighth of the total area of Sweden is water. In addition, the long, indented coastline brings an increasing number of the inhabitants within range of the open seas or their briny inlets. In July the summer season is at its height. Every rocky or sandy beach is gay with bathers.

When there is wind, the seaside resorts around Goteborg and Stockholm suggest continuous regattas. One gets the impression that every Swedish family possesses a rowboat, motor launch, or yacht.

Enjoyment of life is an outstanding virtue. The Swedish people are not boisterous or volatile. They live quietly and contentedly. Suggest prosperity and they will contradict you. For all that, nowhere else in all Europe is the standard of living so high.

PEOPLE FEAR THE THINGS THEY DO NOT UNDERSTAND

The beautiful voice of a famous opera singer issuing forth in song caused a panic on board a ship!

Seriously—that is the content of a news dispatch from off the coast of Australia where an American ship carrying explorers was recently anchored. The voice of the singer came through a gramophone, and the audience among whom it caused a panic was composed of natives, who ran in terror from something that they did not understand.

It may seem incomprehensible to us that a beautiful voice should instill dislike or fear. Whatever the language of the song, you may say, is not beautiful singing beautiful to all who can hear—as the trilling of a bird must sound the same to men of any color and any language?

But the beauty of the voice is obscured by the fact that its source is something the natives do not understand. For that reason it is an object of suspicion—and of fear.

If we stop to think about it, it will surprise many of us to realize how much we have in common with those Australian natives in that we frequently refuse to see beauty in the things we do not understand. We too are suspicious and fearful of things we do not know. Most of the world's bigotry and prejudice springs from ignorance. And many of us, if we but realized it, create a spectacle no less foolish and unreasonable than those natives in panic over a beautiful voice issuing from a gramophone when we condemn without investigation, when we turn without consideration from things which are new, things which are different, ways to which we are not accustomed.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith, and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secretly removes a part from the motor of the plane. Huxby and Lilith taunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness. Garth begins the work of preparing for the long journey. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie. Garth experiences difficulties in getting his companions into line.

Though Garth had no pad, he stood up with the moose quarter on his back and lifted his end of the pole to his shoulder. But he was accustomed to packing. He bore the meat on his pack-board and his half of the two quarters on the pole with as little difficulty as Huxby toted the other end of the pole.

When they reached the camp Miss Ramill and her father were out gathering wood. At one end of the fire, thick smoke was rising from green sticks and leaves; at the other end, the pan of sliced muffle was boiling hard. After he and Huxby had lifted the moose quarters upon the rack, Garth brought water in the aluminum pot and cooled down the stew to simmering heat. Miss Ramill had much to learn about the culinary art.

After the meal Garth glanced at the red after-glow of sunset.

"Mr. Ramill, the leanto and blanket are for you and your daughter. Huxby can take the lee side of the fire. I'll keep it going. Turn in whenever you please."

A yawn surprised Lilith Ramill into a mocking laugh. She turned to her swollen-faced fiancé.

"What a howling farce, Vivian! Can you imagine me going to roost at sunset, instead of sunrise?"

Huxby forced a smile and felt at a particular sore cluster of bites on the back of his neck. Mr. Ramill cast a wistful glance towards the leanto.

"I presume, Lilith, you will prefer not to share the hut with me. Perhaps I can manage out here beside the fire, like Vivian."

"No," Garth differed. "You'll sleep under that blanket until you have hardened into shape, and you'll turn in now. It's been a big day for you."

The girl bridled. "How about my wishes—and the proprieties?"

"We'll leave that to you," Garth replied. "If you consider it improper to share the blanket with your father, you're welcome to sit up and help me graze these moosehides."

Huxby stiffened. "None of your insolence! You'll treat Miss Ramill with utmost respect."

"The lady shall receive from me all the respect to which she shows herself entitled," Garth said. "Why not make it mutual, all around?"

Lilith Ramill was no less completely outmaneuvered than the engineer. She spoke to her father: "Well, I must say, Dad, if you're letting him order you around, I refuse to stay up and slave all night. Come on."

He crept after her into the brush leanto. Garth at once set to making more catgut. Huxby had gathered a thin padding of spruce tips and moss at the far side of the fire and lay down. Like the girl and her father, he soon fell asleep.

After finishing his first task, Garth tended the fire and added water to the simmering muffle stew. He next began graining the hair from the moose bull hide. He could have stretched out and gone to sleep no less readily than had the chechahcos. On the other hand, he was able to keep awake as long as he wished. He scraped steadily at the coarse moose hair, the while his ears drank in the voices of the Wild.

By the time the sun glared over the jagged crests on the northeast wall of the valley, Garth had the hair grained from both the moose hides. As he started to cut into the larger skin, Miss Ramill crawled from the leanto. She blinked and yawned, straightened her rumpled sports skirt, and sat down to lace her boots. He gave her a friendly good morning.

"Good? Pah!" she scoffed. "I feel like the morning after. Here I am flat. Not a drop of anything for a bracer; no bath; no clothes or face cream or lotions; no make-up! Not even a cigarette! Yet you have the face to gibe me about it!"

At that, he could not resist giving her the old quip: "Cheer up; the worst is yet to come."

She ignored it to point at the slimming muffle in the gold pan. "Look at that filthy mess; half full of ashes. If you had a spark of decency, you'd throw it out and warm me a pan of water for my face and hands."

He finished the cutting of a moccasin piece before he replied: "In the first place, I'm too busy performing needed work to act as lady's maid. In the second place, that muffle is not filthy. You'll say it's the most delicious aspic you ever tasted. About the rest, douse your head in the rill. That will give you a combined wash and bracer. If you wish a smoke, there's the fire. For cosmetics, I'll soon be making up a batch of grease and pitch mosquito dope. My final dose of froggie went on too thin to last long."

She looked her disgust. "Grease and pitch! When I have a headnet?"

"Soon as we start traveling through brush it's a question which will go first, your net or your stockings. Dope doesn't snag on branches, and you'll find it a better cosmetic than rouge and powder."

"Ugh! If I use your nasty dope at all, it will be on my legs."

"No go. You'll be scraping against rocks and running upon snags. Won't have any knees left if you try the Highland style. How about those lynx skins for leggings, along with moose moccasins?"

For the first time since they had met, the girl gave him a genuinely friendly smile. "That's decent of you, Alan. How soon can you make them?"

"Cut me a steak off that nearest leg of moose. While you're cooking it, I'll see what can be done."

When she returned the knife and started to broil the great slab of meat she had sliced off, he laid out the pair of lynx skins. A few knife strokes cut off the great hair-padded paws and slit the legs into thongs. When the girl brought him his broiled moose steak, he showed her how to wrap a skin around each leg like a high-topped legging, tying it with the crossed thongs.

"There you are, Miss Ramill. It's a pair of leggings such as our ancestors wore when they pirated the high seas in viking ships and sailed up the Thames with Hengist and Horsa."

Huxby sat up, blinking. The thin shake-down of moss and spruce tips had done little to soften the stony ground. He rubbed his stiffened back and hips. "Confound those rocks!"

The engineer looked at the partly eaten steak in Garth's hand. "How about breakfast?"

"Help yourself to all you want. Along with your own, you might broil steaks for Miss Ramill and her father. Miss Ramill is about to take a lesson in sewing. She will soon need a pair of moccasins."

The last remark checked the girl's intended refusal. While Huxby sullenly cut the three steaks and started to cook them, she carried out Garth's suggestion to grease her lynx skins with a chunk of fat.

When Garth finished his meal, he threaded a needle with smoked catgut and showed the girl how to sew the thick moosehide. Holes punched with the awl made the work fairly easy. Within a few minutes she caught the knack of handling the awl and needle. Though her stitches were irregular, they promised to hold. He cut out the mate of the first moccasin, and another pair smaller in size.

Mr. Ramill crawled from the leanto, stiff, hungry and irritable. But sleep and the open air had whetted all appetites. As with the broiled liver, the three chechahcos—millionaire, mining engineer and fastidious heiress—went at the hot meat with fingers and teeth. They were down to bedrock—to the fundamentals of living. All the elegancies of civilized eating were absent, even the supposed necessities—forks, plates, seasonings. Yet the essentials remained. They were hungry and here was food. It was neither as tender nor as savory as had been the liver. None the less, it was food.

At the end of the meal, Garth said that the first need was to fetch in the forelegs of moose. Miss Ramill rose with her father and Huxby.

"Sorry," Garth told her. "Your father needs all the walking he can get. Someone must stay to mind the fire. I might mention there's a shallow rock pool a little way along the bank beyond those alders. You'd find the water pleasantly warm for a dip."

"Really? That's not so bad."

"Yes. Only be sure to keep the fire going. It will hold off the wolves and wolverines."

Huxby took Ramill's arm and started off with him after Garth. They kept in the rear all the way to the muskew swamp.

This time, instead of lynx mates, a family of wolves were feasting on the moose meat. As sight of the men, the whole family bristled and growled but started a slow retreat.

"Shoot, Garth!" urged Mr. Ramill. "They're making off."

"Quite all right," Garth replied. "Good thing they're gorged. I might have had to waste cartridges to get rid of them. What I'd like to know is why they chose this solid meat, instead of the offal."

As if in answer to the question, a snarling growl far deeper than that of the wolves came from the border of the muskew where Garth had killed the bull moose. Up out of the thicket reared a huge gray head. Massive forelegs stroked apart the willow stems with chisel-like claws eight inches or more long.

It was a grizzly—a full-grown ursus horribilis. Garth believed the beast to be as large as those monsters of the same breed that ruled over the southern Rockies and the Sierras in the early days when Indians still were armed only with bows, and the few white hunters carried only muzzle-loading flintlocks.

The ears of the great she-bear were flattened back. Her little pig eyes glared red. The monstrous jaws gaped to let out a roar of defiance that shook the solid ground.

"Good G—d!" Mr. Ramill gasped. "A—bear!"

Huxby gripped Garth's shoulder. "Shoot, d—n you! Shoot, or give me that rifle!"

"Shut up," Garth ordered him. "That roar is only a warning. She'll not charge if we mind our own affairs. You and Mr. Ramill take hold of that nearest untorn leg and start off quietly. Don't hurry and don't run."

The cool certainty of Garth's tone compelled belief and obedience even from Huxby. Mr. Ramill was already reaching up for one of the two moose legs that had not been pulled down by the wolves. The engineer hastily turned to help him. As they started off, Garth took the other unmangled leg on his shoulder and sauntered after them.

The grizzly mother had not repeated her roar. Had they run or given any sign of hostility, she would have charged. As it was, she stood, an enormous quivering mass of curiosity, watching their quiet retreat. Her jaws had closed their ferocious yaw, and her ears were no longer flattened back.

Garth's gray eyes twinkled as he glanced back over his shoulder at the huge beast. He could not have asked for a better bugaboo to make his companions behave. Safe out of her sight, he told the two to halt and get the moose leg on a tote-pole. Huxby at once started to curse him for not shooting.

"Go try it yourself," Garth replied. And when Huxby drew away from the offered ribs, he nodded approval. "You are wise not to attack a she-grizzly with cubs."

Spurred on no doubt by the knowledge of that gray monster behind him, Mr. Ramill managed to hold up his end of the tote-pole all the way to camp. There he sank down, purple faced, wheezing that the exertion had killed him.

His daughter sat by the fire brooding. Though refreshed by her bath in the warm pool, she had begun to feel the craving for drink and tobacco. She had done little stitching on the moccasins. But she listened to horrified alertness when Huxby told about the grizzly.

Garth forestalled an outburst of hysterics. "Keep cool. The old lady will let us alone if we keep clear of her cubs. Keep up the fire, and she will shy clear of you. She doesn't fancy fire. Burnt her paws trying to rob me of a roasting porcupine."

A look at the gold pan showed Garth that the moose muffle had begun to dissolve. He cooled some of the gelatinous broth in the small pot. Mr. Ramill not only gulped down the drink. He smacked his lips and asked for more. At that, both Huxby and the girl were stirred to try the rich drink.

Garth was glad to have all three take their fill of the savory, highly nourishing dish. He knew what was coming. He asked only that the pan be refilled to dissolve more of the muffle.

The three were accustomed to the free drinking of their kind. They had already begun to feel the lack of the usual cocktails, 'meatime wines and between-meals whisky. This was aggravated by the lack of tobacco. To ease them as much as possible, he broiled lynx meat on a grating of willow stems, basting it with moose fat. The tender meat kept them occupied until the muffle broth soothed their jangled nerves.

There was a limit, however, to eating, and once its effect began to pass, their craving returned more intense than before. First Miss Ramill, then Huxby, and last of all Mr. Ramill began to make ironical remarks aimed at Garth. He ignored them for some time. The remarks became more offensively witty and sarcastic. He dropped the moccasin upon which he had been sewing, and picked up his rifle.

"I've had enough bitters and sour berries, thank you all. Feed them to yourselves for a while. I'll go get the sleep I missed last night while acting as guardian angel of your sweet slumbers."

CHAPTER V

Mate Woman.

Far up the tundra slope, above the trough of his platinum placer, Garth found a dry moss-bedded nook on the sunny side of a boulder. He lay down, pulled his hatbrim over his eyes, and let himself fall asleep.

A full eight hours later the sun swung around its wide circle until the shadow of the rock fell upon Garth. Roused by the passing of the warm rays, he pushed back his hat and sat up. He came down to the camp. Mr. Ramill sat beside the fire between his daughter and Huxby. Two of three pouches that Garth had hidden under the moss in the leanto lay open before the men.

Miss Ramill was emptying the last contents of the sugar pouch into a pot of thick tea. She was first to see Garth's noiseless approach.

"Hall to the chief," she mocked. "My dear Mr. Garth, you are most fashionably late to dinner. Will you not join us in a cup of tea?"

Her father turned to eye the uninvited guest with a shade of uneasiness. "You see we found what you were holding out on us, Garth. It's the only trick you failed to put over."

Huxby said nothing. He tensed ready to spring up and fight.

Finland's National Bath

Is Worth Talking About

In some country districts of Finland, both sexes frequently share the same vapor bath, for preparing the "sauna," as it is called, is an arduous task and the steam for one is enough for several people, according to a correspondent in the Detroit News.

All afternoon the housewife is kept busy heating great stones in the bath house oven. Then when the bath—or bathers, as the case may be—is ready, she throws water over the rocks, so causing the room to fill with clouds of hot steam.

Wishing to make the most of opportunity, Finnish bathers stay on a platform near the roof, where the hottest steam collects. Once perspiration sets in, someone rubs the bather's back with a branch of birch leaves. The aroma from these is quite pleasant and fills the bath house.

After they have steamed well, the bathers like to cool off by taking a dip in one of Finland's many lakes. If there is none nearby, they must be satisfied with a cold shower, or in winter a hurried roll in a snow bank.

The Finns are so fond of their steam baths that farmers often build their bath houses before constructing their home, and all the large cities have public bath houses.

Drowning Persons

It is a common belief that drowning persons rise three times, but according to the United States public health service, it has no scientific basis. Many drowning persons do not come to the surface at all after their first submergence. When a person finds himself drowning he naturally makes a frantic struggle to save his life. In doing so he draws water into his windpipe, which causes him to cough and expel air from his lungs. He, then, sinks. If all the air is expelled from his lungs he will not rise to the surface at all, especially if he is fully clothed. On the other hand, a drowning person who has some control over himself may sink and rise more than three times before his strength fails completely.

Pheasants Poor Mothers

While the incubator is a satisfactory method of hatching pheasants, the hen has many advantages in caring for the little ones. As mothers, pheasants in captivity leave much to be desired. Instead of worrying with a home and family, the real mothers spend their summer roaming in a large field and "looking pretty."

BEFORE they started for the Andersons' party, Jim told Peg that if she carried on "another of those all-evening flirtations" with Ned Harding he was through! Peg stormed.

"I'm engaged to you Jim Miller, but you don't own me and you had better understand that!"

Jim took it—and gave it back. "I'm not trying to 'own' you, as you call it. I'm just trying to tell you that I've been made a sap of for the last time!"

Peg's chin went up in the air. "You're just insanely jealous, that's all. Just because Ned's a nice dancer and has an easy line, it makes you mad because he even looks at me."

"Looks at you! He was all but eating you up at the Hedges' party."

In this mood they arrived at the Andersons'. The party was fairly well under way. Ned Harding was already there. As soon as he saw Peg he moved right in, as Jim observed. Peg was less responsive than on previous occasions. But this only spurred on the self-confident Ned. Believing it must be his technique that was slipping, he proceeded to pay her constant attention, waiting eagerly for a chance to dance with her, bringing her sandwiches and drinks, and continuously trying to get her into a conversational corner.

Jim looked on, drinking more and saying less as the evening wore on. Finally he saw Ned pull Peg laughingly by the hand into the hall. Jim was off his chair like a rubber ball. Striding into the hall, his face the hue of a beet, he found Peg in a corner as he had expected. Ned was standing in front of her, his arms outstretched touching the wall behind her. For the moment neither of them noticed Jim's entrance. He walked swiftly forward. One hand clapped Ned on the shoulder and whirled him around. As he spun about his right eye contacted Jim's fast moving left fist.

"Oh, Jim, don't!"

But Jim had already finished. "Come on Peg. We're going!" he commanded, abruptly.

The scuffle had attracted attention. People came streaming pell mell into the hall as Jim walked calmly out. He was followed by Peg, now too overcome with embarrassment to do otherwise. Fumbling her way to the dressing room for her coat, she muttered an incoherent word of apology to Edith Anderson and almost ran out of the house. Jim was waiting in the car.

Peg sat on the edge of her seat biting her lip in hot anger, steeling herself for Jim's first word! But he said nothing. This irritated her more than accusing words. Finally she exploded.

"Jim Miller, you can't make a fool of me again. If you like posing as a tough bully you can go ahead, but not with me or my friends. And you can let me out as soon as we get into town. I'll take a cab home!"

Jim's face set in sterner lines, but he only said, "Okay. Have you cab fare?"

Peg stiffened.

"You don't think I'd take it from you, do you?"

Jim's answer was to jam his foot down on the accelerator. The car sped down the smooth cement highway. Peg eyed the speedometer but held her tongue. In ten minutes they were at the first traffic light. A mile farther down, Jim drew up before an outlying cab-stand. A lone cab was waiting. Jim opened the car door.

"Here you are. Good night." Peg stepped out without a word.

Putting his car in low gear, Jim started to pull away. Then his eye caught a figure standing on the curb a short distance down the street. It was a girl—alone. Jim stopped his car directly in front of her, and his door opened.

"Going downtown?" he asked in an uncertain voice.

"Why—why, I don't know." The girl peered intently at him a moment, then stepped toward the running board.

Again Jim started the car forward, only this time he was glad this strange girl couldn't see his face. For he was blushing like a schoolboy caught playing hooky. Stammering a few words about "busses few and far between this time of night," he made a futile attempt at conversation. The girl looked at him and smiled.

Jim felt himself growing more and more flustered. Mentally he kicked himself for picking up this girl because he knew Peg would see him. But perhaps she hadn't even been watching. Where had this girl said she was going? Or had she mentioned it? Anyway he was dropping her at the first opportunity. At Central square he drew up to the curb.

"I've got to stop downtown. You can get a bus along here any time."

Taken by surprise the girl mumbled something—and got out. Jim's car shot away, almost before she was off the running board.

Two blocks farther on he was brought up short by a red traffic light. As he came to a stop a taxi drew alongside. Jim, watching the light ahead, reached for a cigarette, then threw it on the floor. Hang that light, wouldn't it ever turn? Suddenly his right door opened and looking up with a start he saw Peg!

"Yes, I followed you in the taxi," she admitted, eyes wavering. "I guess I'm just as jealous as you are. And now that you've gotten rid of your girl friend, will you take me home?"

Who Are You?

The Romance of Your Name

By RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

An Alexander?

THE surname Alexander is derived from two Greek words meaning "to aid or help, a powerful auxiliary."

The Alexander family, according to antiquaries, was originally a branch of the MacDonnells, for Alexander MacDonald, younger son of the Lord of the Isles, obtained a grant of lands in the county of Clackmannan where he made his residence and his descendants took the name of Alexander as a surname.

In the reign of James V, Andrew Alexander married Catherine Graham. His son Alexander married Elizabeth, the daughter of Sir Robert Douglas. After two generations we find William Alexander tutor to the earl of Argyll, who appeared at the court of James I of England, and by him was knighted in 1614. It was he who personally conducted the colonization of Nova Scotia in America, for which service the king made him a grant of the province. In 1625 he was made governor-in-chief of Nova Scotia, and Charles I, to encourage colonization there, created an order of baronets, and made William Alexander viscount and earl.

Scottish Alexanders of the same line came to America and settled on large tracts of land on the Potomac river. The city of Alexandria near Washington takes its name from this distinguished family.

A great general of the Revolutionary war was William Alexander, whose patriotic services in the war and especially in the Battle of Long Island, 1776, are records of remarkable bravery. He was also known as Lord Stirling, having inherited this title from Scottish forbears, dating back for many generations.

The Virginia Alexanders in this country began with John, who came from Scotland in 1659 and settled in Stafford county. He married Tabitha Smart. The Colonial and Revolutionary roster records many by the name of Alexander who were loyal to their country in time of war.

Robert Alexander (1720-83) was a founder of the first classical school west of the Blue Ridge, later named Washington and Lee university.

Alexanders in the New England states were represented by George, who settled in Windsor, Conn., and Robert, a native of Scotland, who was living in Boston in 1684.

A Gibson?

THE name Gibson means "the son of Gib" or "the son of Gilbert."

Several families of this name followed James II, of Scotland, in the settlement of Ireland in 1603, and during his long reign others settled on the lands in the Province of Ulster

Gibson

In the north of Ireland. So it is that most Americans of this name are of Scotch-Irish extraction.

Among the first Gibsons to found the family in this country was John, who came to New England in 1631 and settled at Cambridge, Mass. In 1637 he became a free man.

Another settler was Richard Gibson, a clergyman of Portsmouth, M. H., in 1637.

William Gibson was a resident of Lynn, Mass., in 1665.

We Trust She Remained

a Lady Despite Her Loss

A woman, once a great beauty and the talk of two continents, has fallen on hard times. This autumn, unable to replenish her wardrobe as she would have liked, she spent nearly all her tiny clothes budget on a very handsome pair of gloves, because, according to her credo, gloves make the lady. The first time she wore them was at a luncheon party given by Baron Rothschild. Unfortunately, she lost one of them, and observed its loss only after she had arrived home. That evening she received a telephone call from one of the guests at luncheon.

"You lost one of your gloves at luncheon today, dear M. . . ." he said. "I picked it up and put it in my pocket. I shall keep it as a token."—June Provines, in Chicago Tribune.

WAR'S MENACE By VISCOUNT CREIL

THE nations, in America no less than in Europe, are preparing for war. More money is at the present time being spent for armies, navies and air forces than ever before in peacetime. Moreover, one great country, in defiance of all treaty obligations, has launched a war of conquest against another. And yet the contest which finished in 1918 was a war to end war.

We are drifting toward another world catastrophe worse even than the last. Can nothing be done to prevent it? Certainly good intentions and pious aspirations are not enough. No doubt the peace-loving nations will wish to remain at peace. But we found in 1914, and you found three years later, that in spite of our wishes we were driven into war.

What happened then may—may, will—happen again unless we take adequate steps to prevent it.

PRESENT AMERICAN ECONOMY By SECY, HENRY A. WALLACE

THERE is as much need today for a Declaration of Independence as there was for a Declaration of Independence in 1776.

The typical New England farming community of the Eighteenth century was 95 per cent economically independent of the rest of the nation and the world. The rest of the colonies might have suddenly disappeared, and the community could continue to function. Of how many communities in America could that be said today?

Merely to ask the question is to answer it. And if farmers, with the help of government, should today achieve even a 50 per cent economic self-sufficiency, as compared with their present 20 to 30 per cent, the result would be the starvation of many millions in our cities. A change of this sort might be brought about slowly, but brought about rapidly it would prove a catastrophe.

FOREIGN INVESTMENTS HERE By JOSEPH P. KENNEDY

ENGLAND is a great buyer of securities, and while France and other nations of Continental Europe are doing most of their business with England, they now are beginning to swing to America. From 15 to 25 per cent of the volume on the London Stock exchange is in American securities.

There is very great confidence abroad in the American situation and in the belief that conditions are so secure here that this is much the better place to keep money. France is still struggling with the problem of devaluation and industrial plants are suffering, but the people are bitterly opposed to it. Laval is making a brave effort to save the day, and his stature has increased all over Europe.

The leaders of both business and politics abroad feel the American recovery accomplishments are remarkable.

GREAT BRITAIN'S NAVY By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE

I HAVE gone through the figures of the Admiralty and make this statement: In effective fighting force of battleships, battle cruisers and cruisers we have a more powerful fleet even than the United States and far more than any other nation. In addition, our guns are far bigger than those of any Continental power.

Recently his 79 living children appeared in native court at Cape Town, Africa. They began arguing over the partition of 10,000 acres of land set aside for them by the Union of South Africa parliament. Each descendant of Dunn is to receive 100 acres.

"Eye" Gauges Rays Unseen Stars Cast

Device to Be Auxiliary to Largest Telescope.

Pasadena, Calif.—Astronomers have revealed plans for an electric "eye" so powerful it will sight a candle's flame thousands of miles away, to be an auxiliary to the world's largest telescope.

The "eye" is an extraordinarily delicate photoelectric cell, for use in measuring the amount of light given off by stars millions of miles out of sight of the human eye.

It will be used in conjunction with the giant 200-inch telescope, rated at a power sufficient to show up skyscrapers on the moon and soon to be constructed on a southern California mountain top.

To Gather Light Rays. Dr. George Ellery Hale, veteran astronomer and director emeritus of Mount Wilson observatory, outlined plans for the new telescope and its auxiliaries in the Astrophysical Journal.

The "eye" consists of a target of a sensitive metal inside the cell. Light rays traveling perhaps 20,000,000 or 50,000,000 miles from distant stars are gathered in by the massive round reflector of the telescope and focused on the cell.

Faint though the light rays are, they excite electrons in the sensitive metal, in turn generating electrical currents, very feeble but still measurable. By measuring the strength of the electrical current a distant star sets up the astronomer will be able to compute the star's relative brightness.

Eyes Already in Use.

Such electric "eyes" now in use with the present world's largest 100-inch telescope at Mount Wilson are powerful enough to spot a candle 3,000 miles distant with the aid of the telescope, or seven miles distant without such amplification.

With the new telescope, twice as big and four times as powerful, for which a 16-foot pyrex reflector is now cooling at a Corning (N. Y.) glass works, greater distances are expected.

Construction details of the telescope are now being worked out by scientists. The tremendous barrel will require a mount comparable to that of a big gun.

When installed, probably atop Mount Palomar near San Diego, it is expected to have a possible amplification power that would bring the moon to within an apparent distance of 25 miles of the earth.

Indiana Man Owns Watch Carried by Washington

LaGrange, Ind.—A watch, once owned by President George Washington, is possessed by Milo Tucker, farmer.

President Washington gave the watch to Tucker's great-great-grandfather, Rev. Edward Evens, at the close of the Revolutionary war in 1781, and it has been handed down to each succeeding generation.

The timepiece is two inches in diameter and seven-eighths of an inch in thickness, with a one-half inch stem. It has two cases, both of a silver color. The outer case must be removed to wind the watch.

The name of the manufacturer, N. Haushurt, New York, is engraved on the back.

The watch ran the last time it was wound, but the winding key has been misplaced.

Twinkle, Twinkle

An attractive ceiling seen recently in a child's room has been painted a deep blue. On this surface silver stars of various sizes have been securely glued.

Sailor's Message Found in Herring

Berlin.—On opening a herring that she had bought, a woman at Schocow, found a tiny bottle inside it. And inside that she found a strip of paper. On it the sailor of a fishing trawler "somewhere at sea" asked to be informed who had found his message, as he would like to know where one of the herrings he had caught had been eaten. Now he knows.

THE CRIMSON STAIN By LEONARD A. BARRETT

At the funeral service of the celebrated cartoonist, Mr. Sidney Smith, author of "The Gumps," the officiating minister sent a challenge straight home to the hearts of every person in attendance at that service.

It was an appeal for less reckless automobile driving. The death of Mr. Smith added one more to the roll of those killed in automobile accidents.

On October 29, 1935, the total killed for this year in Cook county, Illinois alone, was 795 persons. The total number killed in the United States averages about 36,000 persons, annually. This, of course, does not take into account the vast army, numbering hundreds of thousands of persons, who have been incapacitated for work. Add to this, the suffering and deprivation of those who were dependent for support upon those made cripples for life, and you have a shocking and heart-breaking picture of the crimson stain which stretches across our country.

Some people think statistics are cheap. Perhaps they are; but the flagrancy of this crimson stain can be told in no better way than in terms of figures. From the sinking of the Titanic to the recent wreck of the airship, Akron, six catastrophes have occurred which have killed 3,152 persons.

New Title Holder

John Henry Lewis is the light heavyweight champion of the world. The Arizona negro won his title in St. Louis, Mo., when he decisively defeated Bob Olin, New York fighter.

But, this "same number of people lose their lives in auto accidents every 36 days." From 1919 to the close of 1933, in the United States alone, there were 348,046 automobile deaths. One might argue that the cause of these fatalities was defective parts in the cars themselves, but this idea is at once dismissed when we remember that 92.4 per cent of cars in accidents were in good condition and less than one-half of one per cent were due to defective mechanism. We are informed that 84 per cent of accidents occur in clear weather, leaving 16 per cent for foggy weather and winter's snow and sleet; 74 per cent occur on dry surfaced roads, leaving 26 per cent for slippery roads; all of which clearly indicates that the cause of this "crimson stain" is nothing but reckless, careless, thoughtless driving.

It is high time that this menace be regarded as a moral problem, and that the solution be found in an appeal to the conscience of every person driving a car. Let conscience compel obedience to this resolution: "I will observe the Golden Rule." © Western Newspaper Union.

Relic Recalls Episode in French-English War

Campbellton, New Brunswick.—The hulk of the French merchant vessel, the Bienfaisant, relic of the last battle between the French and English in Canada 175 years ago, has been found in the Restigouche river, near here.

The vessel was abandoned by its crew and set afire in July, 1760, to prevent capture by English warships. It sank on the Quebec side of the Restigouche river and has rested there ever since.

This fall, because of unusually low tides, part of the hulk has become visible and souvenir hunters are stripping it. Using simple equipment, they have uncovered a number of cannon balls, iron riven-shaped bombs and other relics.

The Household By Lydia Le Baron Walker

IT IS the portion of everyone at some time to wash dishes. Even when a person takes meals out, or does not have to attend to kitchen work, there are times and emergencies when washing a few dishes at least, has to be done. In hotels and restaurants, and in some homes, there are dish washing machines to relieve the tedium of the task, but in the average homes, dishpan, soap and water, dish mop and dishcloth are employed three times a day.

In view of this fact, it is well for everyone to know how to do the work best. There are agents that lessen the labor—soap, in some form, is chief among them, with washing soda, ammonia, and steel wool as incidental aids, each very helpful at times and under certain circumstances.

Cold water as a first aid is essential to speedy and satisfactory washing of egg dishes, and those in which flour has been used in mixing ingredients either in making thickening or in making cakes. With eggs, the albumen hardens under heat, and sticks, so cold water which takes it off quickly, should be used first. Put cold water in egg cups as soon as used, and make washing of them easy. Also, put it in bowls in which eggs have been broken or combined with other ingredients. In the case of flour, it becomes a mucilaginous paste when hot water mixes with it, and this sticks almost as fast as glue, unless cold water is first used to clean the particles off.

Greasy Dishes. Dishes in which there is grease or fat, butterplates, bacon platters, milk and cream bottles, salad dishes, etc., should be washed in as hot water as is good for the ware, for only so will the oil be cleared out quickly. If milk and cream bottles are emptied, and not washed right away, fill them with cold water. The liquid keeps them from drying, as drying makes them adhesive. Later wash them in hot water.

Never plunge glassware into hot water. Use warm water until the glass gets tempered. Afterwards, it will withstand water that is practically scalding hot, providing, of course that the ware is perfect.

Fish dishes and utensils will not retain the fishy odors if they are put in cold water, which is gradually brought to a scalding point. Pans and pots in which fish has been cooked can be so treated, and the water be brought to a boil in them. Good dishes should be given a first washing in cold water, then warm soapy water in which a little washing soda has been dissolved and a trifle of household ammonia added. Rinse all dishes with scalding water. Incidentally they will dry almost of themselves.

Color in the Kitchen. Color has come into the kitchen. A generation ago practically all kitchens were painted a dull brown, perhaps to blend with the coal dust. The kitchen was the least attractive room in the house. But a number of things have occurred and changed our attitude toward this room in which so many housekeepers spend many hours of the day.

In the reaction from the dull kitchen of the past and with the development of sanitary open plumbing, the tendency was to make the revised kitchen white in its appointments. There is certainly something to be said for white tile and white woodwork which show every mark so easily that it just naturally demands cleaning.

A new note in kitchen treatment, however, has been sounded. The introduction of artistic linoleum was, perhaps, the first signal of this. The next note of color came into the kitchen by way of curtains and colored oil cloth. Tables in colored enamel began to be offered. Stoves adopted color for their enamel fittings, and now we have utensils in red, green, blue and yellow to harmonize with our color scheme.

Memory of a Squirrel Is Honored

Standing in solemn dignity adjacent to a statue of Beethoven and a majestic figure memorializing Los Angeles' soldier dead, a bronze plaque was erected in Pershing square, Los Angeles, in honor of "Benny, a Squirrel." For many years Benny was one of the most popular and widely known of the denizens of Pershing square. A year ago, while on one of his trips across a busy street, Benny was killed by a speeding motorist. Friends buried his broken body in Pershing square and a mock orange tree was planted to mark his resting place. Through local civic officials, a bronze plaque was engraved in honor of the late squirrel.

Lives in a Churn

Leon Plant, sixty-five-year-old handy man in the village of Rosseau, Minn., has consistently refused the aid of state and federal relief agencies, although his age and inactivity make him eligible. Plant obtained an old butter churn from the estate of a defunct creamery where he once was employed and has made it his home for the past four years. A crude bed, oil stove, clock and other scant necessities comprise the furnishings of his adopted home.
