Gangsters Were Captured In Iosco County Three Years Ago

Two men of the three-man escape Tuesday night from Jackson prison were murderers captured December 17, 1932, by the late Sheriff Charles Miller and members of the Iosco county sheriff's department. The men are Leslie Mauer and Sam Leib. The third man was Nelson Sylvester, vho had been serving time for rob-

Leib and Mauer were two of a gang which held up a St. Clair Shores blind pig December 12, 1932, spraying the place with bullets, kill-ing William Marshall, a Detroit milkman, and wounding four other people. They were captured five days people. They were captured five days later in an isolated cabin on the AuSable river near here. Two other members of the gang, captured at the time, are serving life terms. Owing to the quick work in making their capture here, the four men vere sentenced to prison eight days

It is said this is the second escape from within the walls since the walls were built. Two got away in a similar manner last year.

Stories that Senator Donahey of Ohio or some one else would be given second place on the ticket instead of Garner were laughed at by Mr. Farley. He asserted that there was no doubt about the renomination of Garner for vice president. Asked about the two-thirds rule, he said the committee might recommend its abandonment, but that any change was the business of the convention. Commenting on the Literary Digest poll, which shows a majority in the middlewest states voting against the Roosevelt New Deal, Farley said:

"So far as the poll relates to sentiment in the midwest states, like Iowa, it is 100 per cent wrong." He insisted that the President was very strong, not only in that section of the country, but in every part.

"The President will carry as many states next year as he did in 1932,' said Farley. Roosevelt carried all except six states at that time. Farley said he believed Roosevelt would win the electoral vote of Pennsylvania, one of the states that voted for Hoover in 1932, and that also there was a good chance of carrying New Hampshire.

A LFRED P. SLOAN, JR., president of General Motors corporation, was the chief speaker at the annual dinner of the Congress of American Industry in New York, and he made an earnest plea to industry to save the country from bureaucracy and possible socialism. Industry should lead the nation away from the fallacious theory of plenty "to promote the general welfare of all the people," Mr. Sloan told the nation's A. P. Sloan, Jr.

leading manufacturers. Should big business fail to accept this "broader responsibility." it will bring, he said, the "urge for more and more interference from withoutgovernment in business."

Mr. Sloan conceded the gravity and the extreme importance of problems of today-the paramount necessity of charting a sound course for the "long future." He advocated:

"1-Reduction in the real costs and selling prices of goods and services.

"2-A more economic balance of national income through policies affecting wages, hours, prices and profits."

The meeting of the congress was held in conjunction with the fortieth annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the speakers before that body were as emphatic in their condemnation of the economic policies of the administration as was Mr. Sloan. President C. L. Bardo said: "Whether we like it or not, industry has been forced in sheer selfdefense to enter the political arena or be destroyed as a private enterprise."

General Counsel J. A. Emery declared: "This gathering is a call to arms.

"The sentry call should rouse the armies of industry to repulse the forces of the alien theory that challenge our political institutions and economic system within our own household."

Robert L. Lund, chairman of the board, said: "The New Dealers have been forced to desert some of their boldest experiments. This has came to pass because the American people have demanded a return to common sense and sound business. American industry has taken the leadership in this combat."

PRIVATE bankers comprising the federal reserve advisory council have handed to the federal reserve board a report giving warning that unless the board acts to control credit, the country "faces dangerous inflation" and "speculation such as preceded the market collapse of 1929." The board suppressed the report but it leaked out.

Besides warning the reserve board against the dangers of credit inflation which lurk in the three billion dollars of idle bank reserves, the council disagreed bluntly with the do-nothing policy on bank reserves which has thus far been adhered to by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles and other federal reserve governors.

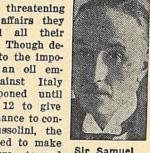

POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY, SANTA CLAUS is doing big work this year for the merchants of the country. It is estimated by officials of the Commerce department that the Christmas trade will amount to $4,500,-000,000 or half a billion dollars more than in December last year. Preliminary hollday trade reports from all parts of the country to the Commerce department indicated that retail trade already is running from 5 to 35 per cent higher than a year

Christmas clubs will pay $312,000, 000 to 7,000,000 members. Much of this money will go into Christmas trade.

EUROPEAN diplomats, especially the British and Premier Laval of France, are exceedingly clever and resourceful, but if they are to extricate their nations from the present threatening state of affairs they will need all their smartness. Though decision as to the imposition of an oil embargo against Italy was postponed until December 12 to give Laval a chance to conciliate Mussolini, the duce refused to make any gesture toward Italians were peace. authoritatively warned not to mistake diplomatic exchanges between their premier and the representatives of Great Britain and France as "peace talk," and were told there was no reason to believe Mussolini had modified his minimum terms already presented to Sir Eric Drummond and Laval's representative. Also he has declined further to conciliate Britain by removing more troops from Libya and has repeated his warning that he will consider an oil embargo an unfriendly gesture. He and all Italians are especially resentful against Great Britain, which apparently intends to insist on the oil ban. And now they are getting very sore at France, despite Laval's efforts to maintain friendly relations between the two countries. There were reports that Italian troops were being massed along the French frontier.

One more rather desperate move for peace was made in Paris when Laval gave Italian Ambassador Cerruti a "set of suggestions" which were said to be the last word from France and Great Britain before the applying of the oil embargo, due on December 12. These suggestions were said to be based principally on an exchange of territories between Italy and Ethiopia, the latter to receive its longsought seaport and to remain absolutely independent, save for the lands granted to Italy.

The feeling in Rome was pessimistic, and there was noted a general tightening up of home defenses. Troops that had been expected to depart for the Ethiopian front were being retained in Italy, and the orders to the naval and air forces were suggestive. New economic measures to resist the sanctions were being put into effect daily. The British government was engrossed with the troublous situation. Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, received timely orders from his physician to take a rest in Switzerland, and it was announced he would stop in Paris for a conference with Premier Laval. The admiralty was preparing for eventualities and ordered officers of the royal navy reserve to report at once for duty at Plymouth. These men have been serving as officers and engineers in the merchant marine.

GEN. HO YING-CHIN, Chinese minister of war, was sent to Peiping by Dictator Chiang Kai-shek to try to check the northern autonomy move-him and mobs shouted autonomy slogans outside his office, and then the Japanese army officers took the matter in hand. Lieut. Col. Tan Takahashi, military attache at Peiping, and an officer of the Japanese garri-

Ho Ying-Chin son called on General Ho and ordered him to leave the city at once. Takahashi told the war minister: "The Japanese army is convinced your continued stay in Pelping can only complicate matters."

Maj. Gen. Hayao Tada, Japanese commander in north China, said: "War between China and Japan is certain if China breaks the agreement signed last July in which Nanking agreed not to send troops into Hopel province." At the same time Japanese war planes were flying low over Peiping.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL sent to London the usual polite reminder that the semi-annual war debt installment from Great Britain was due on December 15. And, also as usual, the British government sent to Mr. Hull the reply that under the circumstances it wouldn't pay a cent, Well, we were not counting on getting this money for Christmas spending, BRITISH, Irish and Canadian delegations opened conversations in Washington with American officials looking to the establishment of trans-Atlantic air mail and passenger service. It was believed this could be accomplished as soon as reciprocal pacts are signed to allow the landing of American planes on foreign soil. Heretofore this has been blocked by the jealousies of foreign aviation interests.

The delegation from Great Britain is headed by Sir Ronald Bands, director general of the general post office. He is accompanied by C. E. Woods Humphrey, managing director of Imperial Airways, Ltd.

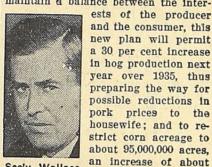

Postmaster General Farley announced that he would ask congress at the coming session for funds to start an air mail service between the United States and Europe.

CANADA'S wheat marketing policy, always a matter of great interest to wheat growers of the United States, is to be radically altered, according to the Dominion government. A new wheat board has been appointed, headed by James R. Murray, general manager of the Alberta Pacific Grain company. Instead of trying to maintain prices by stabilization operations on the Winnipeg Grain exchange, the board will endeavor to reduce the huge Canadian wheat surplus by offering wheat for sale at the world's competitive prices.

GOOD news for the building industry. President Green of the American Federation of Labor gives out the word that there will be no more jurisdictional strikes among construction workers. The factions in the building trades department of the federation have found a plan to prevent workmen from delaying construction by strikes over which of two organizations should do a particular piece of work.

In the future the contractor is to decide which union shall do the job when a dispute arises, and then if a joint committee of the unions involved is unable to adjust the difference the question is to be referred to a federal judge as arbiter.

the amount harvested this year. After appraisal by community committees and review by county allotment committees, a corn acreage base and a market hog base will be fixed. Co-operating producers must agree to plant corn next year on at least 25 per cent of their base acreages. They will be permitted to retire from 10 to 30 per cent of their base acreage for soil-improving or erosion-preventing purposes. Hog growers must agree to produce between 50 and 100 per cent of the base market production.

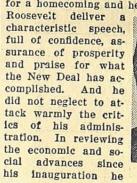

The 1936 corn adjustment payment will be 35 cents a bushel on the appraised yield times the adjusted acreage, less the pro rata share of local administrative expenses.

Corn adjustment payments will be made in two installments. The first, at the rate of 20 a bushel, is to be made about August 1. The second will come due about December 31, 1936, at the rate of 15 cents per bushel.

A payment of $1.25 per head will be made on each hog in the base. Deductions will be made at the rate of $2.50 per head if a producer fails to raise 50 per cent of his base numbers. The total payment to a producer will be the same for a production ranging from 50 per cent to 100 per cent of his base.

The 1937 rates will be announced by November 30, 1936, but the rate on corn will not be less than 30 cents per bushel and the rate on hogs will not be less than $1.25 per head.

SAMMY JAY IS MODEST

A S SOON as the angry hunter with the terrible gun had disappeared among the trees of the Green Forest and Lightfoot was sure that he had gone for good, Lightfoot came out from his hiding place among the young hemlock trees on the top of the ridge and walked down to the pond of Paddy the Beaver for a drink.

He knew that it was quite safe to do so, for Sammy Jay had followed the hunter, all the time screaming, 'Thief! Thief! Thief!" Every one within hearing could tell just where that hunter was by Sammy's voice. It kept growing fainter and fainter and by that Lightfoot knew that the hunter was getting farther and farther away. Paddy the Beaver swam out from his hiding place and climbed out on the bank near Lightfoot. There was a twinkle in his eyes. "That bluecoated mischief-maker isn't such a bad fellow at heart, after all, is he?"

Lightfoot lifted his beautiful head and set his ears forward to catch the sound of Sammy's voice in the distance. "Sammy Jay may be a mischief-maker, as some people say," said he, "but you can always count on him to provide a true friend in times of danger. He brought me warning of the coming of the hunter the other morning. You saw him save Mr. and Mrs. Quack a little while ago, and then he actually drove that hunter away. I suppose Sammy Jay has saved more lives than anyone I know of. I wish he would come back here and let me thank him."

Some time later, Sammy Jay did

"Sammy," said Lightfoot, "you are one of the best friends I have. I don't know how I can ever thank you for what you have done for me."

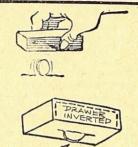

"Don't try," replied Sammy rather shortly. "I haven't done anything but what anybody else would have done. Old Mother Nature gave me a pair of good eyes and a strong voice. I simply make the best use of them I can, Just to see a hunter with a terrible gun makes me mad clear through. I'd rather spoil his hunting than eat."

"You want to watch out, Sammy. One of these days a hunter will lose his temper and shoot you, just to get even with you," warned Paddy the

"Don't worry about me," replied Sammy. "I know just how far one of those terrible guns can shoot, and I don't take any chances. RY THIS TRICK By PONJAY HARRAH

KNOCK AWAY COIN

HE magician spins a coin on the table. He strikes it flat with a match box. He asks whether the coin lies heads or tails. People guess; the box is lifted to find the answer. Again the coin is spun. Down comes the box. Once more guesses are made; some heads, some tails. "All wrong," says the wizard. He lifts the box; the coin has vanished.

In preparing for this surprising trick, the magician first empties the matches from the box; then inserts the drawer upside down. After a few preliminary spins, he is ready to make the coin vanish.

He brings the box sharply down upon the spinning coin. The stroke causes the coin to cut through the bottom of the match box. The magician lifts the box and drops it in his pocket while he points to the spot from which the coin has vanished.

SEASONABLE DISHES

THIS is the time of the year when pickles, conserves, relishes and marmalades are especially enjoyed. Most of these good things have been all ready prepared, yet there are a few most delightful ones left.

Cranberry Relish.

Take two cupfuls each of sour or cooking apples, put through the coarse knife of the food chopper with two cupfuls of cranberries, add one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of pecan meats finely shredded and set away for two or three days to season. This is delicious with turkey or goose.

Indian Chutney.

Take one pound of sour apples peeled and sliced; one-half pound of onions peeled and coarsely chopped, one pound of brown sugar (the light brown), one-half pound of raisins cut fine, four ounces each of salt and ginger, two ounces of dry mustard, onehalf ounce of cayenne, four cloves of garlic finely chopped and one quart of mild vinegar. Cook the apples, onlons, garlic and sugar, salt and vinegar until soft, then pass them through a very fine sieve. Add the raisins and ginger with the other ingredients, mix well and stand in a jar in a warm (not hot) place until the following day. The next day, seal the jar.

Students Get Gas From White Clover

HAROLD OHLGREN, twenty-two, of Cokato, Minn., and William Mahle, twenty, of Macalester college, Minneapolis, claim to have discovered a process by which usable combustible commercial gas can be obtained from wild white sweet clover. The gas, methane and ethane, says the discoverers, can be furnished to consumers at half the present cost of commercial gas in most residential communities, and the growing and manufacture would furnish a number of by-products, including honey, alcohol and acetone. Backing for the statements of the two young scientists was given by two of their instructors. R. U. Jones, head of the chemistry department of Macalester college, and R. B. Hastings, chemical professor of that institution.

SUCH IS LIFE—Funny Business

Place Names Take Strange Disguises

Spelling Altered to Fit Way They Are Pronounced.

Washington .- "Every godfather can give a name," according to Shakespeare; but keeping a name, is often a problem. Places have a harder time than people in preserving their names uncorrupted, according to the National Geographic society.

"If the spelling of names continues to be altered to fit the way they are pronounced, descendants of persons now living in Gloucester and Worcester, Mass., and Sloux City, Iowa, might even come to spell them 'Gloster," "Wooster,' and 'Soo City,'" continues the bulletin.

"English pioners in the United States encountering French names frequently pronounced them in such 'hot potato' fashion that the original form is scarcely recognizable. Thus Luray, Va., was once La Reine; Rickreall, Ore., was La Creole; Sallisaw, Okla., came from Salaison, meaning 'salt provision.'

Names Are Garbled.

"Rivers, streams and creeks fared even worse than towns and cities in having their names garbled. In Arkansas, the Chemin Couvert stream became the Smackover.

"Spanish names, as well as French ones, have proved stumbling blocks. Among the familiar is Key West, Fla., evolved from Cayo Hueso, meaning bone reef.'

"Indian names have proved tongue The Indian name lawi-

"Slurring of combined names now and then forms a new name. The swift Rapidan river in Virginia is said to have been first called the 'Anne' for Queen Anne of England. 'Rapid' was added, referring to its current.

Blame Clerical Errors. "Sometimes a clerical error is responsible for an odd name. Glasco, Kan., derived its name when a postmaster mispelled Glasgow. The classic example of a place christened erroneously is Nome, Alaska. Cartographers applying epithets to places on a map of Alaska ran out of new names, and marked a cape tentatively Name? A draughtsman mistakenly copied it as Cape Nome, and so it has remained.

"While scores of place names become peculiar after being buffeted about for centuries, others are odd to start with. Among the queer ones Golaid, Texas, formed from part of the name of the Mexican hero, Hidalgo; and Yreka, Calif., formed by transposing most of Bakery. Yewed, Okla., is the reverse of Dewey, in whose honor it was named.

"Another group of names are the hybrid pieced together out of scraps of several existing names. A wellknown patchwork name is Texarkana. Connecticut has Hadlyme (from Haddam and Lyme) and Winsted (from Winchester and Barkhamsted). California claims Calistoga (from California and Saratoga) and Calexico. Kansas contributes its share with Grenola (based on Greenfield and Kanola) Kanopolis (parts of Kansas and Centropolis) and Kanorado.

Queer Malady Throws Doves Into Tailspin

Knoxville, Tenn. - An unusual malady which causes the birds to "go into a spin and fall to the ground" has been afflicting doves

Lee McClain, nurseryman who grows seed for doves, said the cause of the birds' strange behavior had not been determined and that it is the first of its kind he has seen.

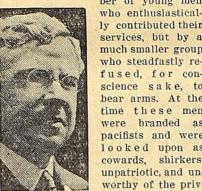

"A dove will be flying around normally when suddenly it goes into a spin and falls to the ground dead," McClain said.

He said the bird usually had a lump in its throat and its jaw appeared to be locked.

Was the Pacifist Right?

LEONARD A. BARRETT

The appeal for volunteers in the late war was met not only by a large number of young men ly contributed their services, but by a much smaller group who steadfastly refused, for conscience sake, to bear arms. At the time these men were branded as pacifists and were looked upon as cowards, shirkers, unpatriotic, and unworthy of the privileges of American citizenship. The sobering and painful experiences through which we have passed since Armistice day may cause us to inquire seriously: Was the pacifist altogether wrong? The experiences of the last decade have led many to interpret conditions in a far different light than during the crucial years of the war period. We are now inquiring in all seriousness: Was the pacifist right?

Let the Unknown Soldier speak. Were his voice audible, we might hear him thus speak-I gave my life to make the world safe for democracy. It is no more safe today than when I went overseas. For what purpose did I fight? Whom did I serve? Was it all a hideous mistake that I made the supreme sacrifice? What is our honest and unprejudiced answer? We might, also, hear him speak like this-Never again. Edith Cavell was right; patriotism is not enough. The only way to put an end to war is to refuse to fight. Let the forces opposed to war organize to resist militarism. You cannot settle the question by mere argument, but it can be settled by the creation of a better social order, composed of right-minded people who in peace organize for the purpose of abol-

Is the pacifist right when he tells us we must take pacifism out of the clouds of sentiment and make it a part of our practical politics? Is he right when he steadfastly and conscientiously affirms that war is wrong; socially, morally wrong, and therefore, has no place in a Christian civilization? Is he right when he affirms his intolerance with the theory of non-resistance to evil, and at the same moment hastens to argue that there are other ways of settling international disputes than by the shedding of blood?

The causes of war are primarily economic and social. These problems can and must be solved on the basis of an authorized system of Christian ideals. There is no other alternative. We must fight war with principles and not with swords. It is the task of no mere conscripted group, but of all of us who claim the right and privileges of citizenship.

air in a house. There are times when it is desirable to have the wind blow through rooms and fill them in every nook and cranny with the invigorating and restoring pure air. At night windows should be open, but there are few persons who can, with safety to health, sleep in draughts. When person can, there is actual pleasure in feeling the air circulating, and breathing deeply of the health-giving ozone. I find this true with myself, but also, I realize how very few persons can endure the air currents without detriment.

There is a crude and homely saying that indicates the average attitude of persons towards draughts of air. It runs like this: When you feel the air blowing on you through a hole

out-of-doors.

Make your will,

and take care of your soul. Immediately you realize that the idea of illness lurks in such a situation. The person in the draught may take cold or become so chilled that illness, with suggestions of danger, may ensue. The doggerel stanza is a warning which it is wise to heed. It also indicates that the person in the draught is in an inclosure and not

Indoors and Out.

In the house there are air currents caused by open windows or open outer doors, sometimes from open inner doors when one room is cooler than another. The tendency then is for the colder air to waft into the warmer and more volatile atmosphere. Out-ofdoors a person is seldom in a draught, but may be in a gale of wind.

Little children playing on the floor feel air currents that do not rise higher. When a child is in a play ward, or pen, there should be a blanket, or thick rug, covering the inclosed space. The play yard should pe positioned in some corner of a room free from draughts or near enough to the heating unit for the warmth from it to offset cooler cur-

Work as a Curative.

An aged person or one who is not in good health should be protected from draughts, which may be a necessary accompaniment of airing rooms. Or it may be that these persons are so susceptible to air currents that they feel them when others do not. Screens are a satisfactory aid in protecting them from draughts. By careful management of the screens, and by providing comfortable seats or sofas for patients where they can rest without being in danger of air currents, their comfort is increased. Then danger from draughts is eliminated entirely or reduced to a minimum.

When affairs are disquieting because

IT IS well at this season of the year | of discordant thoughts or exciting to be careful about draughts of times, pleasant or unpleasant, and when one gets a feeling of dissatisfaction with life, nothing is more restorative than to plunge with a will into some work which should be done. The fact that something is being accomplished is mentally steadying, and the use of the ferment of power which is created is relieving and physically steadying. Unless something restorative is done, a tension is created that may make a temper snap, or nerves break down. So it becomes important to have the steadying element of work to keep tempers and nerves nor-

> While nature requires a certain expenditure of energy in work it also demands that it be done with proper moderation, not in speed but in quantity. Hard work is not necessarily unbeneficial unless the work is physically straining, nervously draining or mentally upsetting. To work with all one's energies, without overworking, promotes physical and mental well-being. Growth in these fields results. This realization of gain is stimulating. But just as an athlete has to grow gradually by exercise into power and skill, never overworking, so must those in other fields graduate their work to suit their strength.

Work in itself is not harmful, but beneficial, even though a person is not strong. But it must be done in amounts to conform to the energy of the person doing it. To do nothing is to lose power, to do little may be all that is possible when health is poor. But in each instance performance of work is steadying.

HASENPFEFFER AND SUCH DISHES THAT OUICKEN APPETITE

It is not always that good cooks are rewarded even by the appreciation of the partakers of their creations.

Recently, however, a man cook reaped a worthwhile reward through the gift of a pleased patron of a sweepstake ticket which made him the winner of a large sum of money. The dish which brought him fortune was hasenpfeffer, which in plain English is rabbit stew. The editorial page of one of the newspapers stated: "If der Koch's windfall means encouragement of good cooks, well and good, for there can never be too much of that."

No doubt the butchers are feeling a demand for rabbit and the recipe for hasenpfeffer will be welcome. It does take several days for its completion, but takes very little actual time and labor in its preparation.

Rabbit is not used as much in this country as it is abroad, but any one who once dares to try it will be likely to use it again, as the meat is tender, the flavor is excellent and the price is low. If you use any one of the following recipes, you will surely be rewarded by the appreciation of your family.

Prepare the rabbit and cut in pieces. Cover with vinegar and water, equal parts; add one sliced onion, salt, pepper, cloves and bay leaves. Allow this to soak two days. Drain the meat and brown in hot butter, turning it often and let simmer about a half-hour or until tender. Before serving, stir one cupful thick, sour cream into the sauce.

Wipe the rabbit with a damp cloth and rub well with salt, pepper and flour. Place in a pan with a little water, and bake it in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.), basting occasionally with a mixture made with one-half cupful water and two tablespoonfuls of butter. When the meat is tender, it should be set under the flame of a broiling oven for a few minutes to brown. The rabbit should be served with its own gravy.

Clean and cut up rabbit. Brown in butter and then place in a casserole. Add one cupful red wine, a bay leaf, a few whole cloves, some parsley, and a few slices of onion. Cover tightly and cook in a slow oven, 250 degrees F. five to six hours.

If skins peeled from apples when making ples are boiled until soft, then strained into pie shell before putting in apples, the flavor of pie is improved.

When salt hardens in shakers, remove tops, turn upside down, fill with hot paraffin and place upside down on a smooth surface. Before paraffin becomes too hard open holes in shaker tops with a toothpick. Salt will keep quite dry in shaker when covers are treated in this manner.

Electric refrigerators should be cleaned once a month. Wash out quickly with a lukewarm solution of bicarbonate of soda or borax.

Always remove egg stains on table linen before sending to the laundry. Soak linen in cold water to remove stain. Hot water sets them.

To remove lodine that has been spilled on linen or cotton, make a paste of starch and cold water and spread over stain. Let stand until dry, then brush off.

When roasting beef have oven very hot at first to seal in juices, then reduce heat, cooking more slowly.

A space should be left between walls of refrigerator and dishes containing foods to allow free circulation of air. This preserves the coods.

DON'T COUGH TONIGHT

Most night coughing is due to simple throat irritation. For this cind of cough you need the soothing, penetrating, relieving action of a real throat medicine—Thoxine. In 15 minutes and with only one swallow, it will break up that harsh, irritating cough—help loosen phlegm and congestion. Also acts from within to check throat cold. Before you know it you'll be relieved—ready to sleep like a top.

If Thorine fails you tonight, get your money back tomorrow. Pure, safe even for children. 35c, 60c, $1.00 bottles. McDonald Pharmacy,

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is pre-As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilth; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to the only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, ussure Garth his claim is nearly walueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secrefly removes a part from the mo-tor of the plane. Huxby and Lillith faunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness. Garth begins the work of preparing for the long journey. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie, Garth experiences difficulties in getting his companions into line. An experience with a bear helps.

Garth laid down his rifle and came Morward. He ignored the wary hostile Book of the mining engineer, nodded to Mr. Ramill, and took off his battered that to bend low before Miss Ramill in a polite bow.

"You are too kind, my dear lady. I could not deprive any of you of your sweets. 'Eat, drink and be merry, for domorrow-' You may recall the rest of the quotation."

Mr. Ramill went red. What if Lillth did happen to find these things you were hogging for private use? We meed them as much as you."

"Far more so," Garth amended the statement. "I don't need them at all. Go right ahead and waste what's left. You of course are certain there'll be me emergencies on the way out-no oc--casions when a pinch of tea or sugar may make the difference between life and death for you."

"How frightful," said Huxby. "Quite so. While you're about it, you may as well make a clean sweep. Here." Garth tossed the gold-mounted cigar case to its owner.

"Oh, so that's how Dad lost his smokes," exclaimed Miss Ramill. "Who's the real sneak around here? Steal all those cigars, and the gold case, too. Then come whining because we've kept you from cheating us out of our share of these things you hid. Hand over the cigars, Dad. My throat's still rasped from the vile smoke of that willow bark Vivian dried for our cigarettes." Ramill handed the case back to Garth. "Wa-wait!" cried his daughter.

He waved her away. "No. The Joke is on us. He knows what is ahead. We do not. We've emptied the sugarbowl and half the teabag. Tie up that bag and the salt, Vivian, and hand them to him."

Garth shook his head, and bowed to the angry-eyed girl.

"Thank you, no. Miss Ramill has taken charge. As I recall my Anglo-Saxon, 'lady' originally meant breadcutter. She was the one who rationed out the food. I figure upon at least five weeks before we reach the Mackenzie. Miss Ramill will keep charge of the salt and tea-do with them whatever she thinks hest" She flared. "I will not! I'll do no such thing." "As you please. It's a matter of utter indifference to me. More than once I've gone for two months on meat alone. You're quite welcome to throw these pouches into the fire." He glanced around, taking stock of the camp.

"Everything in keeping, I see. No sewing done on the moccasins, muffle all eaten, woodpile nearly used up.

Wou'd better cook and eat all the meat you can before the rest of the wood is burnt. When the fire goes out, we'll have plenty of four-footed visitors to relieve us of those moose legs-wolves, foxes, wolverines. Also ravens and meosebirds. Even Mamma Grizzly and her children may turn up." There followed a silence, broken at last by Miss Ramill. She repeated her first question, but in a very different tone: "Mr. Garth, may I pour you a cup of the tea?" Thank you, I do not need it. The rest of you will. I suggest keeping It for breakfast. You'll have no other taste of sweets for over a month, unless we find a bumblebee nest." The girl silently covered the top of the pot with the inverted tin cup. Her father heaved up his soft bulk. He beckoned to Huxby.

"Come, Vivian. The agreement was that Garth should be skipper. That wood pile will not last another hour. We can't permit any bear raids on our bull market."

The engineer met the quip with a

about gathering firewood with quickness and efficiency.

Garth lifted one of the moose quarters from the smoke rack and began to cut off large thin slices. These he laid on the poles for quicker smoke curing and drying. He paid no attention to Miss Ramill.

When the girl saw he did not intend to speak to her, she picked up the salt and tea pouches and went into the leanto. Garth thought she meant to go to bed. Instead, she crawled out again, put one of the freshly cut slices of meat on a willow spit, and held it over the end of the fire where the muffle had simmered.

As soon as the steak was broiled, the cook sullenly offered it to Garth, He took it with no betrayal of his surprise, and sat down to eat. "Thank you, sister."

She frowned "I never hated anyone so much in all my life as I hate you. But that was a mean trick, stealing your sugar."

"All the more reason for you to hate me. Not that it matters a penny -the sugar or your hate. I'll admit, though, it's very interesting to watch the reactions of yourself and your father. Huxby is just a commonplace wolf. But your father and you-the lady of leisure and the millionaire acquirer-tossed from the lap of luxury into the raw wild. You'll have to acknowledge it's high comedy."

"If it is, then you're the clown," was the best she could counter.

He agreed: "That's it, the jesterthe fool of the play-the loon who was to have been gulled and bilked. Who knows? He may be yet. But he will have had the fun of the game."

Miss Ramill turned her back on him and went to crawl into the leanto. Her father and Huxby came with still more wood to pile on the already high heap of fuel. The engineer went to lie down at his sleeping place on the lee side of the fire. During the day he had gathered a much thicker bed of spruce tips and dry moss.

The long hours of twilight slowly faded to the semi-dusk of midnight and as slowly brightened towards full day. Sunrise found the three visitors from the cities still asleep. Along with the tea and sugar, they had gorged on the muffle gelatine and the tender lynx meat. Garth did not waken them. He looked speculatively at the smoke rack. All the lynx meat had been eaten. But the wide spread of moose hindquarter slices made a great showing around the two uncut moose forelegs. He decided to let the tongues and the remaining muffle keep on smoke curing. Two hours or so later the crack of moose bones under the blows of the belt-ax wakened Huxby. He sat up to turn hungrily in the direction from which came a savory odor. Garth had drawn a thigh bone from the fire an I was buttering a piece of broiled meat with hot marrow.

"You Are Too Kind, My Dear Lady, I Could Not Deprive Any of You of Your Sweets."

The engineer came around and laid one of the thigh bones on the fire. Above it he slanted a steak on a spit. Neither be nor Garth spoke. He started to eat his steak and marrow before either was more than half cooked.

Garth finished his own breakfast and began to sew a moccasin. As soon as Huxby had bolted down his food, he picked up the emptied gold pan. Miss Ramill had sat up in the front of the leanto to lace her boots. Her father crept out past her.

"Morning, Vivian," he greeted. "I see you're going to set the pan on the fire again. Good idea. That muffle aspic is all Garth told us it would be." "No." Huxby's tone was almost curt. "We've lost too much time already. I am going to make a complete test of that placer deposit."

He looked with cold wariness at the rightful claimant of the placer. Garth smiled. "Go to it. The more rather thin smile. However, he get you pan out, the more of my 60 per little concern for someone else than man.

cent I'll be able to jingle in my pocket."

That sent the engineer off with a crease between his hard eyes. Mr. Ramill studied Garth's amused face. "What is the Idea?" he inquired. 'Do we infer you still stand by the terms you offered?"

"Well, I may at least allow you fourtenths of what your Man-Friday sweats out of my placer. The laborer is worthy of his hire.-I'm going for a dip. You and Miss Ramill might get your moose bones to roasting. The marrow goes well with the steaks. Let me suggest that you build a large fire in the regular cook hole. When it burns low, rake out the coals and lay in one of the forelegs, thickly smeared with mud. Then rake on dirt, embers and ashes, build a small fire on top, and keep it going four or five hours."

Miss Ramill looked down at her slender hands. They were already roughened and grimed, and two of the highly manicured nails had been broken. The large diamond of her engagement ring flashed blue-white fire up into her angrily flashing blue eyes. She jerked her head up to flare out at Garth. He was already disappearing in the brush on his way to the rock pool.

When he returned from his plunge, a fire was flaming high in the cook hole. Well away from it, the heiress to millions was smearing one of the moose legs with mud brought up from the lake shore by her father in his expensive soft hat.

Garth raked the thigh bones from the smudge-fire and set back the spits of the partly burnt steaks. He then dripped melting moose fat into a small twist-cup of birchbark that he had brought back with him. The cup already held two or three gills of spruce pitch.

The mud-daubers washed their hands in the rill and came for their overcooked breakfast. While Mr. Ramill cracked open the marrow bones with the belt-ax, Garth stirred his dope together with a twig. He took off his hat before starting to smear the dope on his face. Miss Ramill gazed at him.

Garth offered his dope. "Best cosmetic in the North. You may as well go the limit."

"I'll die first!"

Her father dipped his fingers in the dope and smeared the stuff on his face and neck as Garth had done.

Garth said: "Eat your fill. Miss Ramill will stay to tend the fires. You and I are to climb. You'll wear Huxby's leather trousers outside your own.

"But they're too small for me around the belt."

"They'll not be after a few days. You'll wear the jacket also."

A taste of hot marrow roused the girl's appetite. Hunger overcame her other cravings. She said nothing even when, at the end of the meal, her father drew on Huxby's flying suit over his clothes and started off with

Though Garth had spoken of a climb, he first led along the lake shore to the beginning of the muskeg swamp. Then turned and slanted gradually up through the belt of spruce trees until the west side of the trough was reached at timberline. He stopped to look at Huxby while Mr. Ramill caught his second wind. The mining engineer gave no heed to them. He was hard at work panning out gravel, midway up to the discovery stake. Garth led across to the east side of the trough. After every halt he started the portly millionaire on again as soon as he could draw a deep breath. They kept plodding up the tundra slope until at last Mr. Ramill's legs gave out. He staggered and collapsed. He lay, purple-faced and quivering, spent. When able to speak, he gasped an appeal: "Ka-quit! 'U'll kill-me!"

"No such luck," Garth bantered him. 'It's only the fat. If it was your heart, you'd have died long before this. Open your coats and let the sun soak in."

The exhausted man turned flat on his back and basked. Within a few minutes he drowsed off. Garth let him nap a long two hours, then started him on up the long climb.

Three hours later found them still below the lower end of the glacier. Garth at last called a halt to the climb. He headed back.

Midway down to timberline, Ramill collapsed, so utterly spent that he could not get up even after a long rest. Garth took him on his back and packed him on down to the camp, without a halt.

Huxby and Miss Ramill were feasting. They had pried the moose leg out of the fire hole and broken off the clay shell. The meat had baked to juicy tenderness. Even the gristle was melted into gelatine.

When Garth laid her father in the leanto, the girl brought a big chunk of the best meat. But the millionaire climber was too exhausted even to eat. His daughter turned upon Garth. "Another of your damnable jokes!

He's dying! You've killed him!" Garth smiled approvingly. after all, you're capable of feeling a yourself. Boil the cup two-thirds full of water, and put in enough of that sweet tea to cool it for drinking." "The tea is hot already. I've kept back Dad's share. I'll give it to him straight." "You'll warm that water." The mining engineer stood up. "I've told you to speak respectfully to Miss Ramill.' Garth paid no more attention to him than to the buzz of a mosquito. The girl looked expectantly at her fiance. He stood waiting for Garth to apologize. When Garth neither replied nor so much as glanced around at him, the engineer's cold assurance gave way to doubt. He turned and went down

Miss Ramill's eyes widened. She glanced from his stiff back to the buckskin clad shoulders that had so lightly toted her father into camp. All this had been a matter of seconds. In another moment she was darting over to the rill with the tin cup.

When she came to the leanto with the almost scalding hot mixture of boiled water and tea, her father muttered, between groans, that he did not want it. "No-no! Uh-oh-h! Let me die-in peace!"

Garth heaved up the lax head and shoulders, and held the cup to the quivering lips. "Drink, or I'll pour it down your throat."

A few minutes later the "dying" millionaire began to eat. He bolted down the juicy tender meat until sleep overtook him in the midst of a bite.

"Roll the blanket over him and let him sweat," Garth directed. . "He'll wake up a new man. I'll wager he has worked off ten pounds of fat, to say nothing of the toxins he's burned up. Next climb he'll make the foot of the glacier."

Though spoiled, Lilith was far from being a fool. She had begun to realize that to get what she wanted, something more than wishing was necessary. Her father had gone over to Even Huxby had failed her. She could not believe her flance a coward. He was undoubtedly brave in his way. Garth had admitted as much. He had called the engineer a wolf, not a fox.

The rub was over for Garth. Miss Ramill's surrender meant that he was now the acknowledged master of the party. Huxby had also admitted the fact by going off, instead of following up his implied threat of attack. He, however, would require watching.

No Evidence That Ships

Founder in Sargasso Sea Sargasso sea is the name given to a region between the Azores and West Indies where seaweed is kept in a slow swirl by the action of the Gulf stream and the equatorial current. The weed collects much in the same way that floating debris collects on the surface of a river back eddy or wash. On his first voyage, notes a writer in the Indianapolis News, Columbus noted this sea. The name comes from the Spanish word sargazo, meaning seaweed. In the days of small sailing craft, navigation was hindered by the seaweed, and mariners sought to avoid the region. In this way was encouraged the legend that the sea is a gravevard of ships.

A scientific survey of the region was made in 1925 by William Beebe, who headed an expedition sent out by the New York Zoological society. He reported that only at certain seasons dothe weeds collect in the "floating meadows" referred to by some observers, and that these surface mats of seaweed are soon scattered by the wind. Beebe cruised for a month in the Sargasso sea and found no rafts of seaweed sufficiently heavy to impede his progress, or even to excite attention. There is no evidence that the storybook references to lost ships floating about in the sea are based

Naming "Greenwich Village"

Two hundred years and more ago, when New York was only the tip of Manhattan island and the rest was given to pleasant farms, there lay to the north of the city a suburban community which the late Dutch owners had called the Bossen Bouerie. But the English, who had taken over the Dutch colony and renamed New Amsterdam New York, were beginning to call the Bossen Bouerie by the name of the London suburb Greenwich. It is not known exactly when this name was first applied, but a deed of 1721 speaks of "the Bossen Bouerie, alias Greenwich." In subsequent years "Greenwich Village" became a favorite suburban place of residence, until it was finally absorbed by its growing neighbor. But a good many old families still kept their homes within its precincts, and in one way or another it has always maintained sufficient distinctiveness to keep its name alive.

HE gray day was settling into a grayer night. A white mist obscured the pine covered hills and spread itself over the valley like a vast curtain shutting out familiar objects. The shriek of a locomotive sounded ghostly and unreal, as its glaring headlight penciled the darkness for a moment and disappeared. The doorway of the little railway station was outlined in a blaze of light as the attendant entered.

Despite the chilling blanket of mist a campfire a few hundred yards down the track crackled and glowed cheerily, bringing into sharp relief the figures of a man and boy. The latter, seated on a log, gazed moodily into the fire as the pine boughs rapidly consumed. His beardless face had the healthy tan of the open road, his clothing showed its neglect. The heavy shoes, soggy with the moist earth, steamed as the heat waves beat upon them, but he was unmindful of any discomfort.

The man was grizzled and weather stained, a typical person of the outof-doors life. For the moment he was intent on arranging slices of bacon on a flattened piece of tin, later to be slid over the red coals where a can of bubbling coffee already sent out an appetizing odor. He worked deftly, as one long used to this method of preparing meals. Occasionally he cast anxious looks at the boy, as he turned the sizzling bacon and sandwiched it between thick slices of bread. With steady hand he poured the steaming coffee into separate cans, then called to the boy:

"Sit up, Jimmy! Ye must be starved after the day's tramp. Walkin' the rails is hard work, but we're not ones for stealing rides, we pay like gintlemen or walk, eh, lad?

The boy started from his reverie. 'Hitch hiking beats walking for rapid transit if vou're in a hurry, Tim,' Jimmy grinned, "Gee, that bacon smells great. I'm as hungry as a camp rob-

They ate in silence, each busy with his own thoughts. When the meal was finished, the man produced a shortstemmed pipe from an inner pocket of his heavy woodsman coat, filled it, crowding the tobacco in with his thumb; then stooping he scooped a live coal from the fire and puffed a moment in quiet satisfaction; watching the boy from under his shaggy eyebrows as he added fresh fagots to the dwindling blaze.

The boy, with hands thrust deep in his pockets, continued to move restlessly about. "Gee, Tim, this weather is getting on my nerves. We've had days of it. I'm beginning to want to see the sun again."

The old man laid aside his pipe. 'Now, lad, suppose ye tell Tim all about it. What's botherin' ye-I've missed that whistle of yourn. What's on yer mind?"

Jimmy resumed his seat on the log. 'Oh, nothing much, Tim. I guess I'm sort of cuckoo tonight, just thinkingoh, shucks! it's nothing, anyway." 'Go on, lad, I'm listenin'."

A slow color mounted to the boy's face. "It's thinking of Christmas, Tim. It's only three days off, and-and I've never been away before. It doesn't matter, forget it." He hastily threw a pine bough into the fire.

"Three days, ye say, lad? An' me forgettin' it. Now, where'd ye say ye come from?" "Iowa, Tim."

"Now, do tell. I been in Ioway meself, lad, but it's a long time ago-a long time. Ye're from a farm, mebbe?" "No, Dad's no farmer. He's a carpenter, and got along fine till hard times struck-you know how things went." "Sure I do," Tim supplemented. "An there wasn't much work."

"That's right, Tim, and I wasn't keen on school. I wrote a note telling Mom and Dad not to worry about me-they have three more to look out for-and I hit the trail for the great Northwest." Tim gave him a reassuring pat, "1

see, lad. An' ye're fed up an' sort of disapinted an' homesick?" "I guess that's right, Tim. But, gosn, t was thinking of Christmas that got under my skin. They'll all be there but me. Nobody to get the tree-that town-not so hot for size, but it has about everything a fellow needs there, and the best grid team in the county. Gee, Tim you ought to see them huskies go after that ball and smash the line-and the crowd roaring like mad, rooting for their teams." The eager look faded—he rose abruptly.

"Guess I'll be turning in. See you later."

where you'd like to see?"

"Sure, lad," Tim ignored the break in the conversation. "Better bank them pine boughs under that shed over there. This drizzle will likely be snow by mornin'. I've an errand of me own to do, but I'll be back in no time. Git yer rest whilst ye kin."

An hour later the boy was awakened by a hand on his shoulder, and Tim's voice calling: "Wake up, Jimmy, I wants to talk to ye."

Jimmy sat up, rubbing his eyes. 'Okay, Tim, what's on your mind? Shoot.'

Tim fumbled in his pocket and produced a bit of paper. "First I want to say Merry Christmas from Timothy Ryan to Mr. James Madden of Mobray, Ioway. Here it is-a ticket to ye're old home town. An' the fast train will pick ye up in exactly forty minutes. We got to get goin', lad.

"But Tim," Jimmy blinked the last bit of sleep from his eyes. He turned the paper over and over until he was convinced it was genuine. "I-I don't understand, Tim. How did you get this and where?"

Tim laughed merrily. "One at a time, lad. First: I got it over you at the little railway station where they sell tickets. Second, I paid fer it with money, earned money I laid by when work was good."

"That's fine of you, Tim, but I can't take your money. You need it for yourself."

"Sure ye kin, lad, an' there's enough left fer me-an' yer welcome to it. Ye see, Jimmy, I sort of tuk to ye the day we walked inter the loggin' camp jest as they were closin' down fer the winter an' we tuk the trail togither. An' when ye talked of Christmas, an' sich, ye set me thinkin'. The gift is not fer you alone, but fer yer folks who misses ye more than ye know. Old Tim's made many a mistake, I says to myself, but this ain't one, an' mebbe it will help square some of the others."

He laid a gnarled hand on the boy's shouder. "There's only one thing I'm askin', lad, an' that is: ye'll stay off the road. It's not fer the likes of ye. Go home an' finish yer schoolin'."

"You're right, Tim," Jimmy replied soberly. "I've come to realize that. You've helped me to see things differently, Tim. I've got a dandy idea." His face glowed with eagerness. "Go home with me. Mom and Dad would make you welcome; and you say you have money." But the old man shook his head. "No, no, lad, I bin on the road too long. I know yer folks wud be grand to me: much obleeged to ve fer thinkin' of it-I'll be gettin' along where there's housin' quarters, an' mebbe a bit of work."

The eastbound train came to a stop. As the slender youth was climbing aboard, with a last handclasp, old Tim pressed a crumpled bill into his hand. 'Ye must eat, lad, an' don't lose yer ticket. Don't fergit ye're ridin' like a gintleman." The old man laughed, but there was an undertone of wistfulness.

Jimmy took the money. "I hadn't thought of eating, Tim. It is just that I'm going home. Home, Tim, and I owe it to you. I'll pay it back some day-I'll tell Mom and Dad what a good pal you've been-and you promised to write. I'll be thinking of you Christmas."

"Thankee, lad, thankee, Tell yer folks howdy, an' Merry Christmas fer The train roared away in the white fog. Old Tim watched till the red light disappeared and the rumble grew faint in the distance. He rubbed a moist hand across his brow. "An' he called me pal. 'Tis a fine lad he is, an' I'll be missin' him. Three days to Christmas; he'll make it." By the dim light from the station window, he pulled a worn purse from his pocket and emptied the few remaining coins into his hand. He shook his head slowly. Reaching into an inner pocket he drew forth a letter addressed to a small town in Iowa; slowly he read: "Dear Tom: I been hankerin' to see ye an' the old home agin. I'll be comin' fer Christmas. Yer brother Tim." He tore the letter into blts. "He's worth it," he said. "The lad will be home fer Christmas." Old Tim smiled happily as he trudged back to camp.

Child Will Read Story That He Thinks Is Good

"Who shall define interest for another person, compounded as it is of the raw material of which personality is made?" queries a writer in the Parents' Magazine, declaring that there is apt to be one of two reasons why a child does not like to read. Either he has not mastered the technique of reading to an extent where no voluntary effort must be exerted or else he has not had access in sufficient numbers to books which corrospond to his idea of a good story.

"Your child will read if he but discovers the books particularly right for his interests and tastes," declares the writer whose experiences with children and books has convinced her that there does not live the youngster who will not listen to a good story, and since reading is only a method of listening to a good story, will not read if the book is about something in which he is either actually or potentially interested; is written in words and style suitable to his reading ability; has the degree of advancement suitable to both his emotional and intellectual age levels. Those two developments, by the way, are at entirely different rates of speed. As the writer adroitly puts it: "Children do the strangest juggling and somersaulting as regards these ages, going into a handspring a poised adolescent, coming up at the end, an emotional eightyear-old."

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara - both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pensin You just take regulate doses till Nature restores regularity.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES By Editha L. Watson

DOGS OF THE MIST

SOMEWHERE in the region where the Continental Divide crosses the Mexican border, there is a wonderful lost mine. Who first discovered it, who sank the first shaft or drove the first tunnel, and brought the first gleam ing gold out into the sunlight, no one knows. And no one has any idea why the mine was abandoned, since great chunks of "chispa"—high grade ore still lie on the dump.

At least, they should be lying there. Only one man ever saw them, and he did not live to benefit from his discovery. In fact, if it were not for the piece of ore, heavy with gold, which goes to prove the story, one might wonder if this lost mine were not just another creation of legend. And as for the piece of ore-well, who can say that he has seen it? Yet there are hundreds of Mexicans in the little mining towns among those New Mexico mountains who would swear that it

A strange, eerie superstition has grown up about the lost mine: on nights when the young moon makes a light only a little brighter than the stars, and there is a misty look to the hills which renders the most familiar landmarks strange, the man of the house will stroll out to the edge of town-perhaps farther-slowly and quietly. He listens intently. Then perhaps a coyote howls, or a dog barksand he is all attention. He seems half afraid, half eager.

Usually, he finally strolls home again, looking a shade disappointed. But once in a while-ah, then! The sounds for which he is listening become clearer-they resolve into the bark of two dogs together, at some little distance from the man who waits and listens with every nerve tingling with excitement, As soon as he can locate their direction, off he goes, slipping along as silently as possible, and stopping now and then to make sure that they are still baying.

He is following "Los Perros de la Niebla"-the Dogs of the Mist. If he can keep their trail, guided only by their ghostly barking, he will come to the place where is this marvelous mine, and its riches will be his. He will know it because the skeleton of a man lies there somewhere close-the man who long ago went hunting with his two great black dogs, found the mine, and then shot himself, accidentally, in his nervous excitement. As he lay dying within reach of the glittering ore, he wrote a note in his own blood on a scrap of paper-or, as some say, on a rag torn from his clothing. He folded this about a piece of ore and tied it to the neck of one of the dogs. Then he commanded them to go for

Exactly what the note said, no one can tell, but apparently its few words conveyed a plea to follow the dogs back to him. The man whom the animals searched out, believing that they were mad, shot them both before he saw the message-and spent the rest of his life in a futile search for the

It was a misty moonlight night when the great, black, eager dogs appeared, jumping and barking to attract atten-(One can scarcely blame the Mexican for shooting first and investigating afterward). Ever since thenand it has been many years-their ghosts return on such nights, unseen but not unheard, and try to lure someone to the place where their master lies. Sometimes an ardent believer will follow them for miles, only always to lose them at last-and it is said that one man became quite deaf from listening to their barking.

DEVIL'S HEAD STANDS GUARD

DEVIL'S Head, Colorado, is a great rough pile of rocks which forms a landmark for all the country around it. There are many stories told about the region, which is wild and little traveled except on the main roads. Even at this time desperadoes sometimes hide out in the vicinity, although a national forest fire lookout tops the Head. In early days robbers and desperate men knew that region, too, and without doubt there is treasure hidden about the Devil's Head which has never been-and perhaps never will be-

For instance, in the early 70s, a gang held up a government train at Big Springs and got away with $60,000 in gold eagles. The men managed to hide in the forest near Devil's Head, but the posse hunting for them knew that country rather well themselves, and pursuit came entirely too close for safety. Accordingly the holdups buried their loot, sticking a long knife into a tree to mark the spot, and got out of. the country for the time being.

In 1923 an old man appeared in the region, who seemed to be hunting for something. He searched for days, and when a forester at the lookout, who had been watching him, finally asked him what he was looking for, he told the story of the holdup that had happened so long before. He had been one of the gang, the old man said, and he hoped to find the buried loot. But he had not reckoned on forest firesthe trees he had once seen, and the knife he knew to have been left above the gold, had long ago gone up in billows of thick smoke.

Isle Ranks High in Cleanliness

Lanai was a cattle ranch 20 years ago, but today is noted for pheasants and pineapples. Sixth island in size in the Hawiian group, its Lanai City is called the most immaculately kept American municipality in all the islands. Roofs are painted in various colors, streets are shaded by Norfolk pines and yards glow with hibiscus blooms and flowering trees.

Grandmother Believes Health and Wealth Responsibilities old-fashioned and ignorant of modern methods of life," the two grandchildren of a famous financier publicly asked for her removal as their guardian.

The shortcomings of which these children of sixteen and seventeen complain on the part of their grandmother are not with reference to knowledge of financial affairs.

It is not her faults as an investor of which they complain in asking to have her removed as their guardian. No. The matters in which she is 'too old-fashioned" doubtless come closer-in their opinion-than that!

Probably she is old-fashioned in such annoying matters as health. At her age she may be foolish enough to imagine that at sixteen and seventeen one is still growing mentally and physically, and that wholesome living is of paramount importance. Probably she cannot see the benefit of burning the candle at both ends. Faced with a choice between dancing

"Did you fish with flies?" asked the boy of his friend who had spent the summer at camp.

"Fish with them?" replied the other. "We fished with them, ate with them and slept with them!"

A Fresh One

A college professor and his wife entertained at dinner a few weeks black brothers wished to raise to ago. In the midst of the gayety at the table a child's voice was heard up a stone, and carved on it-a coming from the floor above. "Mother!"

"What is it, Archie?" she asked. "There's only clean towels in the athroom. Shall I start one?"

Interference

"Are you still writing profound articles?" asked the lady with a roll of manuscript.

"No," answered Miss Cayenne, "I found it interfered with my more serious duties. You can't spill ink and pour tea simultaneously."

Asserting that their grandmother is | and sleep, she is probably unreasonable enough on occasions to rule out the dancing. And perhaps she is old-fashioned in money matters. Having been accustomed to wealth long enough to have a true sense of values, she probably objects to extravagance. Too old to see clearly, she probably feels that merely having money is no reason for dissipating it. Indeed she may even feel the possession of wealth as a responsibility, and try to train her grandchildren to self-respecting handling of it from that point of view.

Being old-fashioned, she may feel, too, that having money is not enough to bring one complete satisfaction in life. She may be urging them to sow the seeds of future usefulness-and therefore content and happiness-in study and serious thought about taking their place in the world as the grandchildren of a man who from humble beginnings became the ruler of millions. That, of course, would seriously interfere with their preoccupation of having a good time.

Yes, the grandmother is doubtless old-fashioned in all of those ways. And they are ways which can be very annoying when one is sixteen or seventeen with plenty of money and no dearth of people who are quite willing to let one be one's own master. @ Bell Syndicate.-WNU Service.

Marks "D" and "C" on Silver Some New York silversmiths of the ate Eighteenth and early Nineteenth century marked their pieces with the etter "d" or "c," presumably meaning dollar or coin. Early in the Nineteenth century the word "coin" was sometimes stamped on plate. As the use of this word was open to some question, certain states passed laws requiring plate so marked to be 900 parts fine, and that the word "sterling" should indicate silver of 925 parts fine BATTERIES CHARGED and re- the English standard. Peanuts Are Popular

The history of peanuts in America is an interesting one. Up to the time of the Civil war a few peanut plant were grown in gardens in Virginia and the Carolinas for family use and as curiosities. During the war the sol diers found the nuts to be excellen food, with the result that in the years following the end of hostilities the acreage assigned to them steadily in ereased. But it was not until the peanut thrasher, the mechanical peanu' picker and the sheller were invented that they were grown and harvested on a large scale.
