COUNTY HIRES FULL TIME FARM AGENT

Wilton Finley, Three Rivers, Will Take Position January 15

At a meeting of the Iosco County Agricultural committee final arrangements were made for the employment of a full time agricultural agent. Wilton Finley of Three Rivers, Michigan, was hired to take over the work. C. V. Ballard of the Michigan State College, state county agent leader, attended this meeting.

Employment of a full time county agricultural agent was authorized at the October session of the Board of Supervisors. During the past two years C. Blumer of Harrisville has acted as agricultural agent for Iosco and Alpena counties. The two counties were a large field for one man, but the value of Blumer's work satisfied a majority of the supervisors that Iosco county needed a full time agricultural agent. The agricultural committee, consisting of Supervisors Lewis Nunn of Plainfield, Ferdinand Schmalz of Tawas, Harold Black of Reno and Elmer Britt of Burleigh, chairman of the board of supervisors, was empowered at the October session to secure the services of an agricultural agent.

Mr. Finley, the newly employed agricultural agent, will take charge of the work about January 15 and he will move his family here this month. He was born on a farm in southern Michigan and graduated four years ago from the Michigan State College. Mr. Finley majored in animal husbandry and leaves work as manager of the well known Fabin Farms at Three Rivers to come here. His college work and experience on the Fabin farms fits him for Iosco county where live stock raising is the principal farm industry.

Iosco county employed an agricultural agent for several years, but the service was discontinued in 1920. C. P. Milham was agent at that time. Mr. Milham is now agricultural agent in Lenawee county.

Sheriff John Moran Ends Flint Youths' Crime Career

A robbery episode, begun in Flint Sunday afternoon, was brought to a sudden end here early Monday morning when Sheriff John Moran arrested Gerald Marshall, Gerald Hunt, Kenneth Blackmar (alias Turner) and Harold Fletcher, all of Flint.

The youths, all under 19 years of age, were frightened away from an oil station in Oscoda when the sound of breaking glass attracted the attention of a watchman. The license number of their car as a clue, Sheriff Moran began the search. After a 40-mile chase they were captured near West Branch. They admitted to stealing the car and two other attempted robberies. They were taken to Flint.

LEON SCHROYER PASSES AWAY

Had Been ROTC Instructor At Michigan State

Leon W. Schroyer, 38, a former colonel in the Michigan State college ROTC unit and also a bayonet instructor there, died last Friday night, December 27, in the Veterans Facility, Battle Creek, following an illness of nearly a year.

Born March 22, 1897, at Marengo, he was the son of John W. and Abbie E. Schroyer. He graduated from Albion high school in 1915, and entered Michigan State college in the fall of that year.

On the entry of the United States into the World war, Mr. Schroyer enlisted as a private at Gladwin, and was stationed with the 21st company Central Officers Training school at Camp Gordon, Ga. He was discharged November 30, 1918, to accept a commission as second lieutenant in the infantry reserve corps.

At the close of the war Mr. Schroyer returned to Michigan State college to continue his studies. He was made instructor in bayonet at this time, and held the rank of colonel in the ROTC unit there. He was a member of the Hesperians, a campus society.

Mr. Schroyer was graduated as a civil engineer in 1921, and received employment with the state highway department, for which he had worked during his vacation periods. His last employment was with the Monroe Piers Land Co. of Monroe, where he remained until his illness nearly a year ago. He was a member of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Whittemore.

Mr. Schroyer is survived by his mother, Mrs. John W. Schroyer, of Whittemore; a sister, Mrs. W. A. Curtis, also of Whittemore; and a brother, Charles A. Schroyer, of Battle Creek.

Funeral services were held Monday with the Rev. Harry Quant in charge. Burial was in Oakridge cemetery, Marshall.

OSCODA, Jan. 3—Sheril Cassidy, 26, received a serious wound in the thigh when he was accidentally hit with a charge from a shot gun while hunting last Thursday near White Fish point. His companion, Gerald Tebo, was swinging his shot gun around to aim at a rabbit.

HAVE ICE MACHINE and will cut ice at Sand Lake. Price reasonable. John Miller, R. D. 1.

Courtade-Rickard

Announcements have been received of the marriage of Miss Helen Courtade to Paul W. Rickard on Saturday, December 28. Mr. Rickard was the childhood friend and schoolmate of his bride, graduating in the same class with her from the Traverse City high school. He attended the University of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Rickard, who has been instructor in English and Latin in the East Tawas high school for the past seven years, attended Alma College and obtained a Master of Arts degree from the University of Michigan. She will return to her duties in East Tawas after the holiday vacation to complete the present school semester.

The young couple are enjoying a wedding trip in the eastern states, making visits especially in Philadelphia and Washington, D. C. After January 24th they will make their home at Traverse City, Michigan.

Everyone is urged to attend this meeting.

MRS. WM. LATTER DIES DEC. 25TH

Wife Of Prominent Reno Farmer Ill 5 Years

Mrs. William Latter of Reno township passed away Wednesday, December 25, after an illness of over five years. She was 69 years, five months and 16 days of age at the time of her death.

Annie Rowley was born July 9, 1866, in Tuscola county, Michigan. At the age of 12 years she moved with her parents to Bay City. Early in life she gave her heart to the Master, joining the Fremont Avenue Baptist church of that place.

In 1887 she came to Whittemore to live. She was united in marriage to William Latter of Reno on January 9, 1889, and spent the remaining years of her life in that township. Nine children were born to this union, two of whom preceded her to the better land.

Left to mourn are her loving husband, William Latter; seven children, Iva M. Latter, Fred C. Latter and Mrs. Will Waters of Reno township, Byron Latter of Lansing, Florence Latter of Barranquilla, Porto Rico, Mrs. Chester Smith of Flint and Mrs. Merritt Phillips of Elgin, Illinois; one sister, Mrs. Jennie Ostrander of Whittemore; one brother, Norman C. Rowley of Flint; and 13 grandchildren.

For the past five years she has been an invalid confined to her bed most of the time. She has borne her suffering with great Christian fortitude. Her patience and cheerfulness in spite of almost constant pain has been only understood when we realize how great was her faith and trust in her Master. Last August she suffered a paralytic stroke and failed rapidly until the end came.

Funeral services were held on Saturday from the Reno Baptist church with the pastor, Rev. Mack, and Rev. Harvey of North Branch, former pastor, officiating. She was laid to rest in the Reno cemetery.

Relatives from out of town who were present at the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Byron Latter and daughter of Lansing; Mr. and Mrs. Chester Smith and children of Flint; Norman C. Rowley of Flint; Mrs. Archie Coggins of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ostrander of Pontiac; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Ostrander of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Latter, Clifford Latter, Will Latter and Mr. and Mrs. William Bamfield of Curtisville, and Miss Edwina Campbell of Bay City.

DISTRICT 4-H MEET IS HELD HERE TUESDAY

Plans For Full Year Program Made By District Leaders

A district 4-H club conference was held here Tuesday with A. G. Ketunen, state club leader from the Michigan State College. District leader Rhodes and co-leaders, Ralph Coulter of Ogemaw county, James Gorsline of Arenac county, Charles Blivin of Alpena county and C. Blumer of Alpena and Iosco counties, were present.

Plans were made at this conference to organize a full year program for each county in the district. Opportunity will be given every boy and girl in the district to enroll in one of the many winter or summer projects which will be offered.

County Agricultural Agent Blumer said Tuesday that more than 20 clubs were in the process of organization in Iosco county and indications were that eight or ten more clubs were nearly ready to be organized. He said that Iosco county would have more than double the number of clubs that it had last year.

Oscoda Press Prints Interesting Story of Iosco County House

The job of cleaning, repairing, re-decorating, and to some extent re-erecting Iosco county's $12,000.00 court house is in progress under the supervision of Custodian W. M. Taylor.

Desks, files, bookcases and other impedimenta have been removed to allow the painters and cleaners to do their stuff. However, the various office rooms are being gradually worked back to their customary spic and span appearance, in keeping with the efficient, courteous and accommodating county officialdom personnel.

The court house is a credit to the county, notwithstanding it is beginning to show signs of silver threads among the gold. We noted in one of the offices some volumes of records magnificently bound in calf, a testimonial to the superior craftsmanship of yesteryear. But the bindings were badly warped and we were told that the "fire-proof" vault in which they had been kept leaks, and that the books had gotten wet.

In the circuit court room, upstairs, we stood by while a couple of old timers chatted interestingly of Midland's beautiful court house; of the new court house being built at Alpena, and reminisced of the history of Iosco county's capitol building—of how the basement, where the county jail was originally located, was built some time prior to the erection of the building proper; of how the counterfeiter, "Hank" Ferrington, convicted of an atrocious murder committed in AuSable, together with another prisoner, dug his way through the masonry of the basement jail, and presumably took to be lake in a row boat and may have been drowned. At any rate, he never afterward showed up here.

They spoke of the long and faithful service as county clerk of the venerable (Turn to No. 2. Back Page)

James Cagney Coming To Family In "Frisco Kid"

"Frisco Kid," Warner Bros.' dramatic picturization of the thrilling pioneer days of old San Francisco when the Barbary Coast seethed with activity and life within its borders was the wildest adventure, is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday and Monday, January 5-6.

The picture is set in the colorful background of the early fifties when the waterfront at the Golden Gate was a flaming panorama of gilded gambling halls and palaces of pleasure.

The characters are based on historic personages of the time who flocked to the city of gold from every port in the world.

The all star cast is headed by James Cagney, who is supported by Margaret Lindsay, Ricardo Cortez, Lili Damita, Barton MacLane, Donald Woods, Robert McWade and Joe Sawyer.

The Romance of Your Name

By
RUBY HASKINS ELLIS

A Sterling?

THIS name is classified as a "place name," being derived from the town of Stirling, in Stirlingshire, Scotland. The family of Stirling (or clan) assumed this name about the beginning of the Twelfth century. At this time family names began to come into use among the Scots. Prior to this date men were designated in various ways as sons of their fathers' Christian names or members of their respective clans.

During the process of time there has been various spellings of the name, different vowels being used, but this has no bearing on any theory of an individual origin of each form. In Scotland the name has been spelled in every conceivable way during the 800 years of its history, some of the for-being Stirling, Sterling, Starling. However, for more than 150 years the form Stirling has been in general use in Scotland, and wherever it is found spelled in this way, one may be reasonably sure that there is a close relationship to the Scottish family.

The earliest known progenitor of this family was Walter de Sturley who was born about 1100. He mentioned in the charter granted King David I of Scotland.

Another early bearer of this name was William Stirling, a ship carpenter and miller, of Scotch descent, who came to America and was a resident near London, England, in 1637. He came to Salem, Mass., in 1660. He removed to Lyme, Conn.

Other early settlers were John David Stirling, who made their home in Charlestown, Mass. Thomas Stirling came from Scotland and settled in Calvert county, Maryland. He entered land and was a man of great wealth and called his estates on the western shore of the Chesapeake "Stirling's Nest."

In Ireland the form Sterling has been used since the Scotch Crofters crossed over into northern Ireland during the first half of the seventeenth century. This spelling is prevailing form in America.

Rev. Andrew Sterling, from Ireland, was a member of the Scotch Irish settlement in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1720.

The English Sterlings came to Hertfordshire, and settled in Massachusetts. The above-mentioned Dr. born in 1622, was of this branch.

There are fifty or more coats of arms of the Stirling and Sterling families, thirty-nine of which bear the same emblem as the Sterling of Aberdein, viz.: the three buckles upon a shield.

THE name of Grout had its origin in central Germany at a very early time, and was first spelled Gros, Grote. In Prussia it was spelled Graus. This name is supposed to have been brought into England by Flemish immigrants.

Great Britain Lining Up the Nations Against Italy—More Trouble in the Orient—Death of Senator Schall.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

WAR clouds over Europe were growing denser and blacker during the Christmas holidays when all the Christian world was supposed to be singing "Peace on Earth, good will toward men." Under the skillful guidance of Anthony Eden, the new British foreign secretary, a solid front against Italy was being built up. There was no present talk of further sanctions against Mussolini, but it is expected added penalties will be put in force late in January. Meanwhile the general military and naval staffs of Great Britain and France concluded conversations which were declared "satisfactory," meaning that those nations were prepared to stand by each other in case Italy makes what Prime Minister Baldwin called "a mad dog attack." In the capitals of other members of the League of Nations similar plans were being laid by military and naval attaches.

Turkey came into line with the other presumptive opponents of Italy, but is reported to have made a suggestion that France doesn't like. This is that it be permitted to fortify the Dardanelles, the strait between Europe and Asiatic Turkey which was demilitarized under the treaty of Lausanne after the World war. The Turks also, according to Paris advices, ask the eventual return of the island of Rhodes in the Aegean sea, which has been under Italian sovereignty since 1923.

Eden is a firm believer in the League of Nations and, though he is moving with caution, is determined to bring Italy to terms through the sanctions provided the other members of the league give the necessary support. The British government certainly doesn't want war with Italy, but it is fast preparing for armed conflict if that shall prove to be unavoidable.

That Mussolini, too, is getting ready for extreme eventualities was evidenced by orders canceling all Christmas leaves of all officers and men of the army. The same orders directed the return to their units of the 100,000 army men demobilized in November in order that they might do the needed work on their farms. The Italian press ceased its attacks on Great Britain, and this was taken to mean that some peace move was on foot or that Mussolini had said his last word in that way and that he and his government were prepared to meet their fate. In Rome the hope is still entertained that Laval will not go all the way with Britain in the policy of extreme sanctions. The French themselves hope that the advent of the wet season in Ethiopia will halt the Italians there before it is necessary to impose the final penalties decreed by the league.

Egypt's cabinet was taking steps to protect the Libyan frontier against invasion by the Italians. The Egyptian leaders are urging the speedy conclusion of a treaty with Great Britain that will give the Egyptians the rights they claim, remove their resentment against England and enable them to line up with the British if war with Italy comes.

OUTER Mongolia is aroused by threats of invasion by the Japanese troops and their puppets, the Manchukuoans. Already the border has been crossed by the latter and five Mongol guards killed and eleven carried off by the raiders. The Mongol government has filed a strong protest, demanding an apology and the return of the captives. Most of this news comes from Moscow and naturally the Russian Soviet government is deeply interested, for this and similar incidents may bring on the long expected war between Russia and Japan.

The Japanese authorities in Tokyo let it be known that they are preparing, through the autonomy government in North China and hoped for cooperation by Chiang Kai-shek, Chinese dictator, to combat the spread of sovietism in China. In line with this is the proclamation of Prince Teh, Mongolian ruler, declaring the independence of the western part of Inner Mongolia, a vast territory with a population of two million pastoralists and rich mineral resources.

Chinese students continued their riotous demonstrations against North China autonomy, demanding that it be stopped by armed force. In Shanghai thousands of them took possession of the railway terminal, demanding free transportation to Nanking to present their protests to the central government. Chiang Kai-shek invited their leaders to confer with him on January 15.

The tenseness in China was increased by the assassination in Shanghai of Tang Yu-jen, vice minister of railways and known as pro-Japanese. This and other anti-Japanese demonstrations led to the declaring of martial law in Shanghai and Nanking.

LIBERTY league has put out a 12-point program which it thinks the incoming congress should follow for the sake of the country. It is designed "to put the government's house in order."

In its statement the league accuses the New Deal of "doing violence" to the Constitution and charges the Roosevelt administration with "gigantic waste" in handling relief funds, "promoting pet theories of monetary cranks," responding to "socialistic influences" in competing with private industry, and capitalizing on the nation's emergency to make centralization of power in the federal government a permanent policy.

Continued deficit financing will destroy government credit and may lead to chaos and dictatorship, the league warned in demanding a balanced budget and repeal of tax laws aimed at "redistribution of wealth."

Emphasizing adherence to the Constitution will be the vital issue in next year's election campaign, the league called upon congress to defeat two "threatened" amendments which would bring about "a virtual change in our form of government." These proposals would create an "unhindered dictatorship," the league declared, by extending federal authority "to permit complete regimentation of industry and agriculture" and by taking away the Supreme court's power to declare laws unconstitutional.

SENATOR THOMAS D. SCHALL of Minnesota, who was struck by an automobile as he was being conducted across the highway near his residence in Maryland, succumbed to his injuries. The blind statesman had been one of the bitterest opponents of the New Deal and President Roosevelt. He had started his campaign for re-election, and Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota had announced he also would seek the nomination for Schall's seat. The governor said after the senator's death that he would soon appoint his successor; that he had no intention of resigning in order to be himself named to fill Schall's place.

Mr. Schall, who was born in 1878 in Michigan, lost his sight in an accident after he had been practicing law in Minnesota four years.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT declared himself satisfied with the progress made by Harold Ickes and Harry Hopkins in carrying out the relief program. He said that the Works Progress administration had come within 20,000 of reaching its goal of 3,500,000 men at work, and that 77 per cent of public works projects were under way. By January 15, he predicted, PWA will be functioning 100 per cent.

Mr. Roosevelt repeated that the government assumed no responsibility for those not hired under the program. He had asked congress for four billions last January, he said, based upon an estimate that there were 3,500,000 needy men who could work. He got the four billions and the 3,500,000 have been put to work, he said. The remaining unemployed must be cared for by "states, municipalities, counties, and private charity," he added.

When reporters said that some estimates placed the total of unemployed at 11,000,000, the President held that it was often difficult to say whether a person should be classed as unemployed. He cited the case of people who have resources, but desire part-time employment for supplemental income.

He also said, in discussing unemployment further, that 5,000,000 persons had found employment since the spring of 1933 in industries which report such statistics.

UNEXPECTEDLY early decision as to the validity of the Guffey coal act was assured when the Supreme court agreed to pass on the constitutionality of the law without waiting for a ruling by the Federal Court of Appeals. Both the government and Kentucky soft coal producers had asked the Supreme court for this "short cut."

REPEATED threats of kidnaping and even murder for their little son have driven Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh from the United States. They have sailed with their boy, Jon, for England, and plan to establish a residence there, though they will not give up their American citizenship. Where they will live has not been revealed to even their closest friends. It is believed the colonel will not sever his relations with the two air transport companies for which he is a technical adviser.

HARVARD university received a handsome Christmas present from Thomas W. Lamont, one of the partners in J. P. Morgan & Co. It was $500,000 for the establishment of a new chair in political economy, one of the "roving" professorships to be created by gifts from alumni in recognition of the university's three-hundredth anniversary that comes in 1936.

WHEN the Supreme court passes on the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley act, its opinion will not be unanimous, is the prediction of those who were present during the oral arguments. The case was taken up to the highest tribunal by fourteen preferred stockholders of the Alabama Power company.

During arguments by Forney Johnson, Birmingham, Ala., attorney for the stockholders, and by John Lord O'Brian, New York attorney, for TVA, justices shot many questions at the lawyers.

Justice McReynolds, known as a "conservative," appeared to challenge the TVA lawyer to defend the right of the government to sell surplus power produced by Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals.

On the other hand, Justices Brandeis and Stone, who are known as "liberals," inquired into the right of minority stockholders of the Alabama Power company to bring the suit which led to the Supreme court test. The stockholders sought to enjoin performance of a contract under which the company was to sell lines to TVA for transmission of power.

FEDERAL Judge Merrill E. Otis at Kansas City has held unconstitutional the Wagner labor dispute act which gives employees the right to organize and bargain collectively. The judge granted the Majestic Flour mills of Aurora, Mo., a temporary injunction against a National Labor board complaint which cited it for alleged refusal to bargain concerning a wage and hour agreement with a union of its employees.

TWO grand juries, a house committee and an army court martial have been investigating lobbying at the War department for two years. The climax came with the indictment in Washington of a dismissed army officer, a former member of congress, and two alleged lobbyists on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government.

Those named were former Brig. Gen. Alexander E. Williams, one time acting quartermaster general of the army, who was convicted by a military court last spring of accepting an improper loan and ordered dismissed from the service; Thomas Jefferson Ryan, lawyer and former representative from New York, and the well known Silverman brothers, Joseph, Jr., and Nathan, surplus army goods dealers.

The four men were charged with conspiring to prevent the house military affairs committee from questioning Frank E. Speicher, "mystery witness" of the long inquiry by hiding him out in New York city while federal agents were hunting him throughout the nation.

GOVERNMENT ownership of America's railroads is the objective in a campaign which has been started by the Railway Labor Executives' association. Describing the carriers as "chips in a financial poker game," the executives, in a circular to members of congress, ask for government ownership as "the only way out of the morass in which the roads have been placed by the bankers."

The financial practices, the circular said, "endanger the equities in the roads of insurance companies, educational institutions, mutual savings banks, philanthropic institutions, and last but not least, the individual investor who, in many instances, has his all in the securities of railroads."

IF WISCONSIN Republicans wish to make Senator Borah their candidate for the Presidential nomination, it is all right with the veteran from Idaho. State Senator P. E. Nelson of Maple, Wis., and former State Senator Bernhard Gettelman of Milwaukee called on Mr. Borah in Washington and asked permission to circulate nominating petitions for him in their state. This was granted.

Mr. Borah told reporters that Nelson and Gettelman had suggested a campaign for "a delegation representing the liberal forces in the party out there, and in my name." He had agreed, he said, to "go along with them."

Later Mr. Borah issued this statement: "My primary objective is a convention of liberal delegates which will write a liberal platform and name a liberal candidate. To that end I shall devote my efforts. If in any state or district the liberal forces think that it will help the liberal cause to pledge delegates to me, I shall co-operate fully with that plan. If, however, it is thought better to pledge the delegates to some other liberal, I shall co-operate just as fully. In other words, inflexible as to the objective, flexible as to the tactics."

"As I see the political situation in this country, a man would be seeking political immolation to take a nomination upon any other than a liberal platform. So the first thing to do is to get a convention committed to liberal principles. So far as my efforts count, I am not going to permit personal matters, either my own or those of others, to interfere with the main purpose."

CONTRACTS have been awarded for 103 new bombing planes for the army air corps. The Douglas Aircraft company, Inc., of Santa Monica, Calif., was given an order for 90 all-metal, low wing, twin-engined monoplanes, costing a total of $6,498,000.

Thirteen giant four-motored "sky cruisers" were bought from the Boeing company of Seattle, Wash. The price for the Boeing craft was not given in the announcement by Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war.

Arizona Has New Cotton Picking Machine

THIS cotton picking machine, built by J. D. and M. D. Rust, is being tested in Salt River valley, Ariz., and seems to be a success. Claw-like spindles rip the cotton from the pods, another apparatus removes it from the spindles and a blower carries it to the sack. The machine picks 1,400 pounds an hour. A hand-picker gathers about 100 pounds a day.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

LIGHTFOOT'S LONG SWIM

THE Big River was very wide. It would have been a long swim for Lightfoot had he been fresh and at his best. Strange as it may seem, Lightfoot is a splendid swimmer despite his small, delicate feet. He enjoys swimming.

But now Lightfoot was terribly tired from his long run ahead of the hounds. For a time he swam rapidly, but those weary muscles grew still more weary, and by the time he reached the middle of the Big River it seemed to him that he was not getting ahead at all. At first he had tried to swim toward a clump of trees he could see on the opposite bank above the point where he had entered the water, but to do this he had to swim against the current, and he soon found that he hadn't the strength to do this. Then he turned and headed for a point down the river. This made the swimming easier, for the current helped him instead of hindering him.

Even then, he could feel his strength leaving him. Had he escaped those hounds and the terrible hunters only to be drowned in the Big River? This new fear gave him more strength for a little while. But it did not last long. He was three-fourths of the way across the Big River, but still that other shore seemed a terrible distance away. Little by little hope died in the heart of Lightfoot the Deer. He would keep on just as long as he could, and then—well, it was better to drown than to be torn to pieces by dogs.

Just as Lightfoot felt that he could not take another stroke and that the end was at hand, a foot touched something. Then all four feet touched. A second later he had found solid footing and was standing with the water only up to his knees. He had found a little sand-bar out in the B's River. With a little gasp of returning hope, Lightfoot waded along until the water began to grow deeper again. He had hoped that he would be able to wade ashore, but he saw now that he would have to swim again. So for a long

TAUGHT TO READ

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THEY put it first of our three R's. The fathers of our stripes and stars. Yes, when they gave the land a tool Of liberty, the public school. They placed it in the teacher's hand With this requirement, this command: Whatever else the land may need, The children must be taught to read.

But there is not a nation known To earth but may be overthrown And books, since books are made by men,

May teach us error now and then. For fools may write, or treason print And one thing say, another hint, And children must be taught, indeed Much more than merely how to read.

And so I say, to those who teach, Who shape our morals and our speech, Who would not let the children drink Polluted water, there is ink Polluted also, there are those Who would on innocence impose— And we who would the children lead Must teach the children what to read.

Kaolin, a Variety of Clay

Kaolin is a variety of clay, formed by the weathering of granite and certain other rocks. It burns to a pure white, and is used for the manufacture of pottery, such as porcelain and white earthenware. It is also employed in making some kinds of paper and in filling fabrics. Kaolin is found in a good many places in the United States, and though this country still imports a good deal of it, the domestic production is steadily rising. Vermont, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Delaware, North Carolina and Georgia all have productive deposits.

Big Velvet Cape

This enormous cape of parma violet silk velvet, trimmed with bands of shirred ruffles, is worn over a pale violet lace satin gown. Cut with low fullness in the back, the one-piece gown is made with a peplum effect. The costume is from Bonwit-Teller.

Kosciuszko's Tomb

The tomb of Kosciuszko, who served as Washington's adjutant during the Revolutionary war, is now a vault of the Cathedral of Cracow, in Poland. Every year hundreds of Americans visit it and the huge mound of earth which the Polish people built to honor him. The dirt for the mound was brought by peasants from all over the country in their long-flowing sleeves and aprons.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

THINGS SO GOOD

WE ALL enjoy good noodles—baked, in soup, with cheese, and now they are being served in place of pastry, a much more wholesome pie than the usual rich crust, much as we still enjoy it. Spaghetti, macaroni and noodles may be used in exchange in the following dishes:

Apricots in Nest.

Cook one-half pound of spaghetti until tender, blanch and drain. Add two slightly beaten eggs, the grated rind of a lemon, one-half cup of sugar, one tablespoon of lemon juice, cook until the eggs are set, stirring carefully. Place in a baking dish or mold and fill the center with a can of apricots, sprinkle with finely shredded almonds and a dash of cinnamon, bake until just lightly brown. Serve chilled with whipped cream.

Egg Noodles Corona-Chef Maurice.

Take a package of egg noodles or a similar amount of the home prepared, cook them until tender and drain. Butter a ring mold and fill with the noodles. Bake one hour in a moderate oven.

Fry one small onion in a tablespoon of fat, add one pound of veal and brown well. Cover with one and one-half cups of water, one-half teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce and salt and pepper to taste. Cook gently for 45 minutes. Thicken the gravy with two to three tablespoons of flour mixed with the same amount of cold water. Add one can of peas or small lima beans. Unmold the ring on a hot platter and fill the center with the veal and peas. Garnish with mushrooms.

MAGNETIC DICE

SOME of the cleverest of impromptu tricks require a bit of "bunkum" to make them mystify. This is the case with the "Magnetic Dice." Most persons will doubt you when you tell them that dice are magnetic. So you proceed to prove it.

You set one of the dice with the six side up. Taking the other, you carefully place it on the first, holding the six side down. The same surfaces must contact, you tell your friends. Sixes are the best sides to use.

Whereupon, you lift the uppermost of the dice. Invariably, the lower one comes along. There are the dice, magnetized as you promised.

Sides have nothing to do with it, nor has magnetism. That is your story to cover the real secret. Simply moisten the lower side of the upper cube. Press the dice together and they will stick until you separate them.

Ski-Stadium for Winter Olympics

AT GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, are these two jumps which have been prepared for the winter Olympics to be staged February 6 to 16, 1936. On the left is the "Little Olympic Jump," from which the jumping competitions in the combination event (18 kilometre cross-country race and jumping) will be carried out. At the right is the "Big Jump," the regulation Olympic take-off place. On the hillside are the judges' pavilion, the referees' tower and the judges' tower.

Garth himself was ready to quit when, in the twilight, they came down to where the steep pitch eased off on a small patch of tundra. He opened his pack and spread the blanket on the dry gravel in a hole under a pile of boulders.

At sight of the fat with the frozen caribou and smoked moose meat in the pack, Lilith at once gathered dry moss. This time the raw caribou flesh was seared over a fat-fed fire of the moss before being eaten. After the meal, Garth opened the gold-mounted cigar case and handed one of the Havanas to his owner.

Mr. Ramill hastily bit off the end and lighted the cigar in the flame of the fat and moss fire. As he put it to his lips he hesitated, then, with a perceptible effort, he turned to offer it to his daughter.

"Uh—ladies first, my dear." Lilith started to thrust out her hand. Something seemed to catch it. She glanced at Garth and stood up.

"You need it more than I do, Dad. Good night, everybody. I'm dog tired."

Her father and Huxby looked at each other in astonishment. Garth was less surprised. He smiled to himself as he put more moss and fat on the fire and coiled up beside it.

The short nights were already getting longer and darker. When awakened by the chill of midnight, Garth saw Huxby lying on the other side of the fire hole. The fire had burnt out. He built a new one. As its small flame lightened the darkness, he saw the half-inch stub of the cigar clutched in Huxby's fingers.

Before sunrise, Garth was again awake. He filled the little pot with ice and set it in the edge of the rebuilt fire, then began cooking caribou meat. The others awakened almost too stiff to move. But all managed another big meal of the meat. To top it off, Garth had Lilith boil a little tea in the water from the melted ice.

After the hot drink, even Mr. Ramill managed to hobble down the now fairly easy slope. The exercise gradually warmed and relaxed stiffened muscles.

The end of a long day's hike at last brought the party down the miles of tundra slopes to the edge of timberline. There was no trail—none at least that the city dwellers could detect. Time and again Huxby declared that Garth was lost no less utterly than the rest of them; that he was wandering at random. To silence the cavalier, Garth began foretelling small landmarks before they came into view. This at last forced the engineer to realize that their guide was following his former trail through the forest maze as surely as if it were a beaten path. The most positive proofs of all were the mounds of dirt-covered ashes where Garth had smothered his camp fires going to the last valley and returning from it to the Mackenzie.

He predicted they would reach canoe water on the seventh day. But during that morning Mr. Ramill turned an ankle. Even after much soaking in a cold spring and tight bandaging by Garth, the sprain held the millionaire down to a slow hobble. An aspen staff enabled him to travel slowly until the noon meal. After that the pain overcame him. He refused to move.

Garth looked doubtfully at the none too large supply of food that was left. His pack now weighed little more than the platinum alloy in Huxby's wolf-skin knapsack.

He had allowed everyone to eat without stint. That had been necessary in order to keep up the strength of the cheechacos. But, as he had foretold, the country was barren of game. There was none too much meat left in his pack.

"If you can't carry on, Mr. Ramill, you'll have to stay here and keep bathing your ankle in this rill," he said. "We're too short of food, though, to lose any time. The stand of birch at the stream is so small that I'll need a full three days to build our canoe. The three of you follow down this brook as soon as you can."

When he picked up a few pieces of meat and the rifle, Huxby spoke: "I should have the gun to protect Miss Ramill."

"There's nothing here to attack you," Garth replied. "Just possibly, I may find game at the stream."

"Could another pair of hands be helpful in making the canoe?" Lilith asked.

"Well—yes."

The girl looked at Huxby. He did not speak or move. She stood up. "Dad, you'll be all right with Vivian. I am going to help Alan."

Her father shook his head. "You should stay here with me. Let Vivian go."

Huxby rose, frowning. He looked at Garth with cold rancor. "I see no need for anyone to go. I certainly cannot permit my fiancée to accompany you."

"She might have helped. You'd be only a hindrance," Garth replied.

He swung away at a rapid pace. But behind him he heard the girl speak sharply: "Don't be silly, Vivian. Get out of my way."

After that came a quick patter of moccasins. Garth kept on for some distance as if he did not hear the sound. Then he halted behind an alder thicket to face the girl. She was so close behind that she almost ran into him. He smiled into her eager eyes.

"This is a happy surprise, Lilith." Her eyelids sank, and her cheeks crimsoned under their coat of pitch-and-grease mosquito dope. "You needn't fancy I'm running after you. It's—it's only because I want to get out of this beastly North country of yours—and be rid of you, too!"

"So that's it. Well, you're a good hater, but you're a real sport. You're game. Tag along, if you wish."

He set off again at a pace twice as fast as the best her father had been able to travel. An occasional snap of a twig behind him told that the girl was still following. Yet he did not once slacken his gait or look back until, three hours later, the brook began to meander through a stretch of muskeg.

At the edge of the swamp he stopped beside a game trail. Lilith came up beside him, breathing deeply from the long and rapid walk. He pointed to the big water-filled hoof prints in the mud.

"We may be in luck. Moose passed here yesterday—the water is clear in the tracks. They may not have gone too far. Stay here, or be quiet."

An upstossed leaf showed that the wind was in his favor. He started along the trail. The tracks were still a day old when they turned out into the muskeg toward a lily pool. A mother swan and her brood of cygnets were swimming around the lily pads.

Garth skirted on along the border of the swamp to where a bend of the stream twisted in close to dry ground. Here was the grove of birch of which he had spoken. He pointed to the fringe of willows below the birch.

Those bitten twigs—still white. They've been eaten off less than an hour ago. Stay here."

After another test of the wind, he went ahead alone, silent as a lynx. Luck was with him. As he rounded the bend he saw the immense antlers of an old bull moose rise above the willows on the bank. Before the startled beast could plunge into the water Garth dropped him with a bullet through the brain.

At the crash of the shot, three moose cows with calves broke cover beyond the bull. The distance was considerable and brush obscured Garth's aim. He had to shoot four times to bring down one cow and her calf. But that was enough.

His shout brought Lilith on the run. She looked delightedly at the bull. "Oh, no chance now of starving!"

"That's not all," he said. "I can build a nice canoe in two days; a better one than can be made from those small birches."

When, a day later, Mr. Ramill came limping after Huxby to the smoke-marked camp, Lilith was still banging moose meat on alder poles over the smudge-fire.

Huxby dropped his full-stuffed knapsack and wiped his sweaty forehead with the back of his hand.

"Pah! To think I've lugged all that old meat, and he's killed again. Why didn't he come back and tell me?"

The girl gave him an odd glance. "We've been too busy, old dear. Where's the blanket?"

"I couldn't pack everything. If I'd known, I could have left this confounded smoked moose and brought the blanket instead."

"Why not have left your load of metal? Didn't you consider that Dad and I will get far more than fifteen thousand dollars' worth of comfort out of that blanket?"

His lips tightened. "Sorry, darling. The thought of a common dirty blanket as against all the platinum—I did not even think of it. Now of course I realize. But it's too late."

"Yes," she agreed. "It's too late. Dad, you were a real sport not to wait for Alan to come back and carry you."

The millionaire had slumped down to rub his swollen ankle. He looked up at Huxby, with a bantering smile. "We couldn't permit our girl to elope with a woods vagabond, could we, Vivian?"

The engineer did not smile. His face went blank. "Where is that roughneck, Lilith?"

"Down in the willows, working hard for us. Won't you be glad when we're rid of him?"

"Won't you?"

"Well, I'm not so sure as I was. At present he is far more agreeable company than you are."

Huxby stiffened and went off towards the willows without any reply. Mr. Ramill peered up shrewdly at his daughter.

"That was pretty hard even from you, Lilith. Try to keep in mind how matters will stand as soon as we get out of this damnable mess. Remember that Vivian is my partner in the profits of all our Northwest Territory deals. Garth is responsible for our being marooned in this woods hell. He set the plane adrift to go to smash over those falls."

For a long moment Lilith Ramill stood silent. She looked down at her grimy tattered sports suit, at her bloodsmeared hands and broken finger nails. The dimmed glitter of the diamond in her engagement ring failed to hold her gaze. It passed on down to her foxskin leggings and moosehide moccasins.

"Squaw," she murmured. "Dirty squaw! He certainly has put us through the mill. And more to come! We're not yet out of the woods. Dad, do you still have Vivian's pistol?"

"Why, no. He asked me for it this morning. Said that the less weight I carried, the better for me."

She reached down a hand, to help him to his feet.

"Listen, Dad. No matter how much we hate Alan Garth, we'll never get out of the muskogs without him. Haven't you noticed Vivian's eyes? You must ask him to give you back the pistol."

"But—it's his. And to rasp his self-esteem with such an intimation of distrust—"

"What's more important—his feelings or Alan's guidance—if anything happens to Alan—Make some excuse."

Mr. Ramill got to his feet and limped beside her down to the stream bank. Huxby stood with his morose gaze fixed upon Garth, who was tying willow ribs on the gunwale of his canoe frame with rawhide thongs.

The millionaire spoke in a casual tone: "How long will it take to put on the birch bark?"

"We'll use the moose hides, sir. They weigh more but will be much stronger. You might ask Huxby to chop down a birch and cut it into five-foot lengths. We'll have to split the wood to make paddles."

"So?" Mr. Ramill turned to his prospective son-in-law. "You may as well return the pistol to me, Vivian."

"Squaw," She Murmured. "Dirty Squaw!"

It will hamper your chopping, and as we're now to be in a canoe, its weight will not bother me."

Huxby sat motionless, taken aback. Before he could think of an excuse to refuse, he met Garth's coolly inquiring gaze. He turned away and drew the pistol from inside his tattered coat, with a show of careless indifference. In the same offhand manner, he picked up the belt-ax and went to hack at the base of the nearest birch tree.

Another day saw the canoe complete. The cow and bull hides, gummed and sewn together, formed the cover, hair side in. The result was a craft large enough for the party but shorter and broader than the average canoe.

At Garth's suggestion, Lilith had begun tanning the calfskin. Mr. Ramill tended the smudge-fire. After cutting the birch billets, Huxby had at first sat around brooding. Then, suddenly, he went off up the brook. He did not come back until after the canoe was finished. But he brought the abandoned blanket.

Garth was beginning to shape into paddles the slabs of wood that he had rived from the birch billets. He glanced from the blanket to the clouds overhead, and from them to Lilith's tattered skirt.

"Not half bad, Huxby. That blanket will soon be needed. Too splendid a sunrise this morning. We're in for a storm. Miss Ramill, that calfskin is cured enough for you to wear. Make a skirt of it."

"How about Vivian's shoes?" she asked. "He's walking on his uppers."

"He's welcome to my old moccasins. They may last out our portages."

Though Huxby's ears reddened, he accepted the castoff footgear of the man from whom he had sought to bilk a claim worth at least a million dollars. He could not refuse. His thick shoe soles had scuffed through on the rocks that the plant rawhide moccasins passed over with slight wear.

When Garth launched the canoe, he fastened it to the bank with a line made from the trimmings of the moose hides. For anchor he used the wolf-skin knapsack with its weight of platinum alloy.

"May as well make it useful," he met Huxby's look of moody protest.

"You are to have the bow seat, and so can continue to guard my 60 per cent, along with—"

A clap of thunder and the swish of a wind gust through the birch tops checked Garth's banter. He spoke a quick order: "Leanto the blanket on that knoll between the trees, front this way."

A glance at the onrushing black clouds of the thunderstorm sent even Huxby hurrying to help the others. While they tied the upper corners of the blanket with rawhide thongs and weighted the back edge with logs, Garth pulled the canoe ashore and placed it bottom up over the smoke racks.

When, three hours later, the crashing thunderstorm passed over and the heavy downpour of rain ceased, all the party were wet from the drip through the blanket. But the fire still smoldered and the half-smoked meat was dry under the canoe.

"Had you been used to canoeing," Garth said, "we need not have lost all this time. But you'll get enough drenchings later on. Wring out the blanket and fetch the meat."

He launched the canoe again, unaided, and directed the others to their places. All had to kneel, facing the narrower prow of the double-stemmed craft. First came Huxby, with his wolfskin treasure bag for knee-pad. Lilith knelt on the front part of the lengthwise folded blanket. Her father had the end of the blanket behind her. At the wobble of the unsteady craft, he squatted back on his heels and clutched the gunwales.

The others held to willow branches while Garth loaded in the meat behind his own place. He stepped aboard and began to paddle with a steady stroke that sent the canoe gliding out into the swamp stream.

A paddle lay beside each of the others. Lilith was first to dip hers overboard. At a murmured word from her, Huxby followed suit. Both of them had done a bit of amateur canoeing at the fashionable beaches. They were able to start in at once and help a little. But two days passed before Mr. Ramill gained enough balance and assurance to rise on his knees and try stroking his paddle.

Left-Handedness Occurs in Four to Eight Per Cent

There are various theories concerning left-handedness, some believing it a matter of heredity, others claiming it is due to instinct or socially acquired habit. The percentage of left-handedness among normal individuals is estimated to run from 4 to 8 per cent, says a writer in the Detroit News.

Statistics published by the Journal of Heredity have shown that in families with one or both parents left-handed, a much higher percentage of the children are left-handed. Authorities have told child behavior experts that the nervous systems of left-handed persons are attuned to left-sided makeup in which the left eye dominates.

To attempt a distortion of this makeup by forcing the person into right-handed action results in throwing the whole nervous system out of balance, and the child may be made "irritable, pugnacious, exclusive and tending toward theft, lying and tantrums." On the other hand, if left to work out their own left-handed destinies, these persons are fully as bright as any right-handed person. Another authority has shown that when the naturally preferred left hand is interfered with, as is often done, the general dominance of that hand is not affected by the change but may be strengthened by this action.

Bridal Beads

When the Borneo maiden becomes a bride her gown has no graceful train or entrancing veil. Instead she dresses herself in a bead garment of bathing-suit proportions. The Borneo bride is decidedly décolleté, for her bridal array covers her body only from below the armpits to the knees. Her costume for this momentous occasion is decorated solely with beads, which cover the entire gown and form designs of native origin. The hem of the dress is decorated with a long fringe.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Boarded Wrong Ships

When the American revolution broke out Britain's admiralty offered a large money reward and three years' exemption from service to any of her seamen who embarked on board an American ship and made themselves masters of her. Unfortunately for Britain, Englishmen who sought for the rewards did not always trouble to distinguish between American and French ships, inflaming France and hastening France's alliance with America.

The Oldest Plow

What is believed to be the oldest plow in the world is exhibited at the Provincial museum, Hanover. A wooden plow discovered on a moor in West Friesland, it affords an interesting insight into the agricultural methods employed in lower Saxony in prehistoric times. Its age is estimated to be between 5,000 and 6,000 years.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES

©W.N.U. By Editha L. Watson

THE SILVER GUNSIGHT

SIXTY-TWO men on their way to the goldfields of California. Sixty-two men who knew nothing of the country, resting at Salt Lake City, listening to all advice, wondering if there weren't a pass through the Sierras that they might find if they went the southern route through the Colorado desert. Sixty men traveling to certain death.

Death awaited in that valley which bears its name. But it grew impatient, and went ahead to meet some of the party. They were glad of that, we may be sure, after their troubled wanderings through unknown country, hungry, thirsty, weary. They were surely ready to die. And by the time Death Valley had been reached, all but four of the 65 had lost their lives. They might better have stayed in the East and clerked in stores or kept books. But the year was 1854, and '49 was not far in the past. Fortunes lurked in the hills and valleys of California. They did not realize that death took precedence of everything, and especially of fortune.

Somewhere in Inyo county the forlorn four men wandered on. They had come thus far, and they must reach wealth before they, too, died.

George Dennis took up his gun, and sighted along the barrel. Now, that was a pretty howdy-do! The sight had come off. It was lost somewhere on the back trail, and needles in haystacks would be easy to find compared with that gunsight. What could he do now? He needed that little aid to aiming.

There was grayish metal of some sort in the ledge at his side. Perhaps it would be soft enough to cut. He tried; he managed to whittle out a crude sight, and to attach it to the gun. Well, that was better. They needed that gun if they expected to eat until they came across gold.

The next day, after a night spent in the shelter of the friendly ledge, the four weary men stumbled on. Two of them died. George Dennis and one other man kept going. At last they reached San Bernardino.

If Dennis had not met the old prospector when he did, he might never have known that hideous nightmare which haunted him ever afterward. But the experienced miner saw that gun—saw the gunsight—saw, too, that it was made of almost pure silver.

Where did it come from? Oh, from a ledge back there in the Death Valley region somewhere—why?

He found out why! They counted the days since he had made that gunsight, guessed at the miles, hoped for the direction. They went back, as well as they could, toward the ledge of silver. But the Southwest is a large place, and even a square mile can conceal many things beyond finding.

THE SNOWSLIDE ON SLATE MOUNTAIN

IN OCTOBER, 1849, thirty men made a party to hunt for gold. They traveled as far as Slate mountain, near Red Cliff, Colo., and here they were successful in their search. The diggings were rich, and before long they had taken out about $100,000 worth of ore.

Snow came early to the region, and provisions would soon give out. No man wanted to leave the diggings, so at last, lots were cast to decide who should make the trip, and one "Buck" Rogers was the chosen one. Taking $500 in dust, he started out on the 26th of November for town.

It took him a week to get there, as the weather was stormy and made traveling slow. But at last he reached town, and here he forgot his mission and celebrated his arrival in a spree that took him six weeks to recover from, and cost all the money he had.

Stricken by his conscience as sobriety dawned, Rogers started back to the mine for more gold. He felt as if some terrible thing had happened—and so it had, for when he reached Slate mountain he found that a snowslide had swept over mine and men, and nothing remained to show that 29 human beings had lived and perished there.

Rogers had kept some information about the place in a notebook, and this fell into the hands of an old miner, who went to Slate mountain with the idea of finding the mine. He had to dig about here and there, for the snowslide had covered the whole countryside and changed its appearance, but at last he came on a tunnel, fragments of tools, human bones, and pieces of ore, all thrown together by the force of the slide.

The miner, satisfied that he had found what he was hunting, covered up all evidence of his discovery, and went back to Red Cliff, intending to get an outfit together before uncovering any more. Two weeks later he was killed in a drunken row.

A man named James Fulford, who had heard the story, went to the old prospector's cabin and there found some papers which gave directions and locations. He outfitted at once and went out, heading for Slate mountain. A month later he was seen in the hills, and said that he would soon return to town. Then snow set in again, and he was apparently caught in a storm on his way in, for his body was never found.

And neither was the mine.

Festive Trappings Bring Joy to Brides of Moscow

Weddings in Soviet Russia are beginning to take on the romantic trimmings of the bourgeois West. In the October quarter of Moscow a special room has been provided in the registration bureau where couples may sign the marriage contract. It is furnished with oriental rugs, elaborate hangings, overstuffed furniture, and flowers. The young woman registrar is smartly gowned and wishes the couples happiness with all the grace of French and Italian municipal marriage officials.

Formerly weddings, deaths, and births were all recorded in one room. But brides protested vehemently against being married in the same room where weeping widows were recording the deaths of their husbands.

Periodic Cop

Iona, an island of the Hebrides, sees a policeman only once a week. He comes over from Mull, and as evidence of his appearance an inhabitant is asked to sign his note-book. Motor cars, bicycles and roads are unknown on the island.

Indian Elephant in Gay Trappings.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—W.S.U. Service.

THE elephant, goliath of modern animals, is decidedly different in anatomy from all other mammals. He looks more or less alike at both ends; his trunk is shaped much like his tail, both being practically hairless, wrinkled, and of about the same length. A sleeping elephant, with ears at rest and the very small eyes closed, looks like a case of "heads I lose, tails you win." Because of this uniformity at the terminal points of his anatomy, and the wrinkled condition of his epidermis, the animal seems unfinished.

The wrinkles cover his back and sides and sag down over his straight, column-like legs to his knees, which are always baggy. His trousers are never pressed and his clothes never fit him, because his tailor, Mother Nature, abhors elephant duds. If you examine the epidermis minutely you will find it finely reticulated or stippled, giving it a distinctive character peculiar to the elephant.

The only really well-groomed or well-tailored elephants are some stuffed specimens in natural history museums, which possess skins as smooth as rubber balls. The original skin has been covered by a coat of black enamel paint which fills up and hides every wrinkle in the skin.

Such taxidermy was changed by Carl Akeley, who knew his elephants and mounted them as nature had made them. He invented a method of tanning the skins and reducing them to the thinness of a kid glove. After the tanned skin was placed over the papier-mache manikin Akeley skillfully modeled the skin from the top or outside by injecting fluid papier-mache underneath the skin. In this way the fine reticulations were retained. Not a drop of paint touched the skin of his elephants.

Because of the hooflike nails on their huge feet, elephants are assumed to be related to the hoofed animals, such as horses and cattle; but this is a mere superficial resemblance. The secret of the elephant's ancestry was discovered by paleontologists some years ago in the Fayum beds of Egypt in the Libyan desert. In these beds of Tertiary age were found the remains of animals related to modern elephants, but less than half their size, which had short trunks, as indicated by their abbreviated nasal bones.

His Teeth Are Peculiar.

The elephant has a peculiar tooth arrangement. The teeth do not fit into permanent sockets or cavities in the jawbones, as teeth do in other animals. Instead, they pass through the jaws from behind forward.

The grinding teeth are often enormous in size, the crown being 12 inches long in the older teeth and often quite as deep. These huge molar teeth are thrust upward and forward exactly in proportion to the wear on their crowns; so that when the tooth is worn down and useless it is pushed to the tip of the mouth and falls out as a mere fragment, one-thirtieth or less of the bulk of the original tooth. Six of these molars, or cheek teeth, pass thus through each jaw on each side of the mouth. Thus the elephant in his lifetime uses 24 teeth.

The only other group of mammals in which the teeth pass thus through the jaws are the manatees. And, oddly enough, in the Fayum beds of Egypt have been found remains of mammals intermediate between elephants and manatees. These fossil manatee-like animals imply a common ancestry for the two groups, which are today widely diverse in anatomy and habits.

Fables About Elephants.

Much of the elephant lore that is widely accepted is equally fabulous. There are stories told of how they never forget an injury and how they always get their man and trample him to death. The elephant has a wonderful memory, but the beast does not often resent a wrong. If elephants habitually resented every wrong and revenged every beating, there would be a very high mortality among elephant trainers and attendants. They try to bully and test the "nerve" of each new trainer and attendant.

If the trainer or keeper fears the animal and does not at once subdue it with force, then that particular elephant will continue to intimidate him and he may eventually be killed. If, however, he subdues it at once by force, it will then usually submit to his authority ever afterward.

It is often said that African elephants cannot be trained, and therefore are seldom seen in circuses or zoos. The African elephant is as easily trained as the Indian. The great Jumbo was taught to carry children on his back in the London zoo and was a docile and safe elephant. The Belgians at Api, one of their stations in the Congo, are using trained African elephants to plow fields and to pile and carry logs and lumber.

Perhaps the most frequent misconception about elephants is their age. Animals estimated by circuses to be far beyond fifty years old are usually without exact history in youth. A common error is to overestimate the age of an elephant purchased as a fully grown adult. Such an elephant is often said to be thirty or forty years old when actually it is fully grown when only ten or twelve years old. It then lives 30 or 35 years in captivity.

"Graveyards" Never Found.

The story of elephant graveyards circulates in the African wilderness, where ivory hunters still entertain hopes of a find of graveyard ivory some day. The tradition runs that when they feel death coming upon them, elephants leave the herd and trek to an elephant graveyard, a remote spot in the wilderness where all the elephants of the district go to die. There the ground is supposed to be thickly strewn with the huge bones of elephants, many having died 100 years ago or more. The tusks which form a part of the skeletal remains of the beasts in such a graveyard would be worth many thousands of dollars, as ivory does not decay or lose quality with age. Many hunters have sought for these graveyards, but none has been rewarded by the discovery of such treasures.

The Indian, or Asiatic, elephant differs physically in many particulars from the African elephant. In reality they belong to different genera, the African being an old-fashioned elephant, with fewer enamel plates in its molar teeth and with a rounded skull like that of the ancient mastodons. The Indian elephant is a much more modern type, with more complicated or complex teeth—the last word in elephants.

The chief external difference between the African and Indian animals is in the ears. In the latter they are small and only one-third the size of the African's, and the upper margin does not fold inward behind the ear where it borders the neck. The dorsal profile differs in the Indian by having the crown of the head on the same level as the back, instead of the head being held higher and the neck sloping downward to the withers, as in the African.

In the Indian elephant the forehead is marked by a depression, or valley, separating two rounded knoblike bosses (bumps of wisdom) which part it along the middle line.

Ranges of the Elephants.

The Asiatic elephant ranges through the forested parts of India and is today more numerous in Burma or eastern India and in the island of Ceylon than elsewhere. From Burma it ranges eastward through the Malay peninsula to Siam and also farther east to Cochin-China. Southward it extends to the island of Sumatra.

The African species originally, before white men slew it, ranged over every foot of tropical Africa from sea level to the tops of all forested mountains, or to the upper limits of forests on the snow-capped mountains, such as Kilimanjaro, Kenya, and Ruwenzori. On these equatorial peaks timber line occurs at an altitude of approximately 10,000 feet.

On the sands of the Sahara the animal is not found, but it occurs in the bush-covered deserts and grasslands on its southern border, and from that latitude southward to the Cape of Good Hope. On the east coast or border lands of the Indian ocean the elephant extends through Ethiopia and eastward through the deserts of Somaliland. Half at least of this vast area is still inhabited by elephants.

A third distinct species of elephant occurs in extreme western Africa, in Liberia, the land of the pygmy hippo, and eastward to the Cameroons. This elephant is also a pygmy of sorts and is usually known to the zoo public as a "pygmy elephant." The name "pygmy" will doubtless stick in the public mind and replace the older or first name bestowed on this species, of "round-eared," or cyclops. The ear is different in shape from that of the large African species, being circular in outline, without the fold inward at the neck, and only half the size, proportionately, of the African elephant's.

GERMS JUMP EIGHT FEET IN SNEEZE, AUTHORITIES FIND

Because health officials have long contended that germs causing the common cold, from which several millions of the population suffer annually, are spread chiefly by coughs and sneezes, the American Institute of Sanitation recently conducted a series of experiments to determine just how far a germ can travel in a sneeze.

Test plates were prepared with a suitable medium to receive bacteria and were held at different distances from persons afflicted with cold to catch germs projected into the air by sneezes and explosive coughs. After being exposed to the sneezes the test plates were examined after the colonies of bacteria that had developed from the seed were large enough to be counted. Precautions were taken to prevent contamination of the plates from outside sources. It was found from the experiments that a deep sneeze can project germs as far as eight feet. Conversation carried on in ordinary tones may result in a germ screen being sent out to a distance of two or three feet.

"In view of the ease by which countless germs may be rained on surrounding objects by a sneeze or cough, the best way to prevent colds is to keep from contact with sufferers, both directly and indirectly," comments the institute. "Reading a book or using a pencil after sneezers should be avoided.

"Rigid rules of sanitation should prevail in buildings used by a number of persons. First, all the sunshine possible should be admitted. Drawn shades are favorable to prolonging the life of disease bacteria outside the body. In schools and offices a modern, efficient disinfectant should be added to the mop water. Dry sweeping and dusting should be avoided. Brooms and dusters extend the range of the original sneezes. Instead of dusting the desks should be wiped off with a cloth wrung out frequently from water containing adequate disinfectant.

"The use of antiseptic mouth washes by cold sufferers may be regarded as both a personal and a public health measure. Through such reduction of the number of bacteria in the mouth, there are less bacterial buckshot in a sneeze."

BROWN HAND BAG TO BE CROCHETED

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Crocheted hand bags are still popular. They look good, are easy to make and cost very little, and the personal pride in hand-made articles must not be overlooked. This neat looking bag measures 5 1/2 by 9 inches and being made of dark brown cotton is a very serviceable bag. Can be made in a few days in spare time.

Package No. 739 contains sufficient brown Mountain Craft crocheted cotton to complete the bag, also instructions and crocheted hook. Zipper and bag lining not included. This package will be mailed to you for 40 cents. Should you want the instructions only, send us 10 cents.

Salary of U. S. Justices
It is provided in the Constitution that the compensation of Justices of the United States cannot be reduced during their term of office—which since it is during good behavior, is the same as life. This does not apply to retired pay. A retired Supreme court justice ordinarily draws full pay, $20,000 annually.

Use Tails as Weapons
Some animals swing a wicked tail. Whales are famous for this and so are certain large lizards. The octopus has the prize weapons of all in his eight arms, each equipped with a double row of suckers.

Caterpillars Big Eaters
"Probably no creature eats more in its existence than a silkworm caterpillar," writes an authority in "Wonders of Animal Life." The lifetime capacity of one of these caterpillars is approximately 4,700 times its own initial weight.

Common Stock
Common stock is that part of the capitalization of a company upon which dividends may be paid only after satisfying the requirements of the floating debt, bonds, and preferred stock. It is common stock represents the speculative ownership in a corporation as a whole.

able John A. Mark; they spoke of the forensic attributes of the late George Sutherland, for long years mayor of the city of AuSable, and, we believe, with a record for length of service as chairman of the board of supervisors of Iosco county. They chatted of the various spirited political battles which had been staged in the court room—notably the county convention at which the late Peter E. Shien, backed by the Greene Pack faction of Oscoda, finally won the nomination for sheriff in a session which lasted all day and all night. They chatted of the stormy political judicial career of Judge Albert Wilder, which was perhaps climaxed when he made the headlines of the metropolitan newspapers by exercising his judicial power to hold the county solons in contempt—and of various other circuit court cases which contributed to the high lights of county history. Arranged around the walls of the court room and seemingly giving attentive ear to the discussion, were the framed portraits of judges who had served the district. We are informed that the pictures which adorn the walls are those, respectively, of Judge W. F. Woodward, Judge J. G. Sutherland, Judge Theophilus C. Grier, Judge Sanford M. Green, Judge J. B. Tuttle and Judge William H. Simpson. Judging from hirsute appendages and dress, some of them might be characters of Dickens. Succeeding them, those who have since worn the ermine in the court room, have been Judge Main J. Conine (who, with those who preceded him, has gone to his reward), Judge Widdis, now a resident of California, and the present judge, Hon. Herman Dehnke.

Delving into the records, briefly, we find that upon the first page of the circuit court journal it is written that the term of court for the county of Iosco was commenced in the court house at Tawas City on Tuesday, the 17th day of May, 1859. The court house, however, was not really the court house, but a room upstairs over Gideon O. Whittemore's store; and that, as a matter of fact, Judge Woodward had car trouble, or something, and failed to arrive on that date and that no circuit court business was transacted in Iosco county until August 9, 1859.

The act of the legislature under which the court house was finally erected provided that the county seat should be located at "Ottawas Bay." (Some of the older Indians at Oscoda still speak of "Ottawas Bay.") But somebody evidently thought some pruning was needed and developed the name "Tawas."

Just across the "Ottawas River" from the present site of the court house is a square of ground marked on the original plat as "Union Square." It was designed that this should have been the site of the structure, but in 1867 the present site was donated by residents of the settlement. The board of supervisors accepted the donation and established the site as the county seat, on lots 8 and 9, in block A. The grounds are unique in that they do not support a war cannon.

In 1874-75 the question of removing the county seat to East Tawas was strongly stirred up and was finally voted upon by the people of the county. As a result of the vote Tawas City retained the county seat. Some years later there was an agitation to move the county seat to AuSable, then the most populous part of the county, and the town from which most of the court business emanated; but a compromise was effected and alternate sessions of the court were held there. The "red ribbon hall" was utilized as a court room. It burned. Later, sessions of the court were held in the Buckley hall in AuSable.

The present court house was built in 1867-68 at a cost of $12,000.00—Oscoda Press.

Weight of Bushel of Oats
The official weight of a bushel of oats is 32 pounds.

Density of Fog Laid to Dust
The apaqueness of the modern London fog is not due to humidity but largely to dust, is the conclusion of London research.

Length of Life
All life insurance records show a marked superiority in the health and longevity of the more privileged classes and also show that length of life is largely a matter of inborn heredity.

Four Classes of Car Service
Both railroads and street cars in French Indo-China have four classes of service, with Europeans permitted to ride first, second and third but not fourth class, which is reserved for natives.

Man's Memory
Man has memory, which is a flight into the past of time; and hope which is a flight into the future.
