Road Commissioners Attend Lansing Meet

Ernest Crego of the Iosco County Road Commission and J. N. Sloan, engineer, attended a joint meeting of the Northern Michigan Road Commissioners association and Upper Peninsula Road Commissioners together with representatives of the Grange and Rural Letter Carriers association in Lansing, where these organizations met the State Administrative Board requesting additional funds to take care of snow removal in the northern counties of the lower peninsula and the upper peninsula.

In the snow belt the sum received from the Holbeck-McNitt bill is not enough in many cases to plow snow, leaving little or nothing for summer maintenance and betterments. The money as now returned to the counties does not make any allowance for snow removal. In other words, counties with a big expense for snow removal get the same per mile as those in the southern part of the state that have much less expense in keeping roads clear in winter. In Alcona county, for instance, last winter 49% of their 1934 funds were spent in plowing snow. In such counties as Crawford, the snow removal program requires a much larger percentage and in bad years might use all of these funds, leaving nothing for road improvement.

The Administrative Board stated that it was not within their power to turn money over to the road commissions. It was entirely a legislative matter. However, they were very sympathetic and stated that they believed it would be taken care of at the next session of the legislature.

The board agreed to turn over to the various counties all the gas and weight tax due them January 15th, and in addition, to advance a quarter of the first payment due the counties under the Horton Act. While this does not in any way solve the problem of snow removal in the northern counties the advance payment will be of considerable help in some instances.

School Notes

High School

The Michigan Department of Public Instruction gives a program each Thursday on W.K.A.R. at 4:30 p. m. The program of next Thursday, January 23, will be given by Harry Nesman. His topic will be, "The relation of the teacher to the school officer."

Data from the office of the auditor general show that the sum of $12,440,669 in delinquent taxes was collected during the month of August, 1935. The sum of $2,696,700 was collected during the same month of 1934. Schools are interested in the collection of delinquent taxes, as these institutions receive their much needed share.

The Seniors sponsored a dancing party at the city hall on Friday evening of last week.

The final examinations for the high school begin Tuesday noon of next week and continue until Friday night.

The following students received no mark lower than a "B" and are on our honor roll for the month of December: Patricia Braddock, Isabelle Dease, Lucille DePotty, Robert Fitzhugh, Opal Gillespie, Albertine Leidman, John Katterman, George Laidlaw, Myrton Leslie, Robert Mark, (Turn to No. 2, Back Page)

Adults More Interested Than Young People in Community College, Says N. D. Vaughan

"That the adults of the county were more interested in the new community college than the youth was brought out Monday at the registration," states N. D. Vaughan, director. "A far greater number of older people came to say that they would attend the classes offered."

"The number of young people who wanted to attend freshman college credit classes was extremely low," said Mr. Vaughan. "However, it is hoped that during this week more will register. It seems queer that so few young high school graduates would like to work for the credit that is offered. It must be understood that the classes in the freshman college credit courses are of a college level—accepted by all Michigan colleges."

"The classes offered in the freshman college unit take place in the afternoon and are as follows: French, English, economics, accounting, history, mathematics and sociology."

"The adult classes, which take place in the evening, beginning at seven o'clock, are typing, shorthand, business arithmetic and art.

"In connection with the adult non-credit program is a special course in sailing offered in collaboration with the Tawas Bay Yachting association. This course, prompted by the organization of a new international boat class, promises to be a subject which should interest all people here, inasmuch as Tawas bay is very well known in state yachting circles. Everyone who is interested is invited to attend."

"Other courses may be offered for adults. If enough people register for additional subjects, they undoubtedly will be taught. The community should understand that enrollment in these adult classes may be arranged for those who may wish to enter after classes have begun."

The tentative hour schedule of adult classes is as follows: Monday and Wednesday, 7:00 to 9:00 p. m.; Tuesday and Thursday, the same hours. The sailing class will meet Mondays and Wednesdays at 8:00 p. m.

D. & M. WILL RUN "SNOW TRAIN" SUNDAY, FEB. 2

Low Fares From Bay City To Tawas, Oscoda, Harrisville and Alpena

The Detroit & Mackinac railroad will run a "snow train" Sunday, February 2, from Bay City to Tawas, Oscoda, Harrisville and Alpena, announced officials of the railroad company yesterday. This is an experiment and if it proves satisfactory extra "snow trains" will be operated every two weeks or more often, if necessary, state the officials.

E. A. Leaf was elected Wednesday evening as general chairman of the committee to arrange entertainment for visitors from Bay City, Saginaw and Flint who arrive on the "snow train" Sunday, February 2. Wm. DeGrow will be in charge of sleigh rides. Bell decked teams with old fashioned sleighs will be used. The rides will be to Buck creek where there will be ski slides and other entertainment. Warren Murphy and T. George Sternberg are in charge of the ski slides and skating on Tawas bay.

Perch fishing through the ice is expected to be one of the principal events for the visitors. O. W. Rowley, Victor Marzinski and Arthur Lietz are arranging this portion of the program. Ice boating, king of winter sports on Tawas bay, will furnish some thrilling pleasure. Harold Gould will have charge of ice boating. Horace Meyer heads the committee on publicity.

The "snow train" will stop at the depot in Tawas City and at the Michigan State park in East Tawas in both directions. The fare from Bay City to Tawas, Oscoda or Harrisville and return will be 75c; from Bay City to Alpena and return, $1.00. The train will leave Bay City

Legion Bridge Tournament Opens Wednesday Evening

The American Legion bridge tournament opened Wednesday evening with six tables. Several more teams plan to enter next week and it is hoped that there will be at least ten tables.

The prizes will be the same as last year, provided there are enough teams entered to warrant such prizes, namely, first prize, $10.00; second prize, $7.50; third prize, $5.00.

Teams entering the second night will be credited with 2 won and 2 lost for the first night provided the first night's fee is paid. Come out and enjoy a season of bridge.

SUPERVISORS DECLARE WAR ON STRAY DOGS

Large Sheep Claims Bring About Action Offering $2.00 Bounty

At the January session of the Iosco county board of supervisors held this week Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday a resolution was passed offering a $2.00 bounty on stray dogs and coyotes. This action was deemed necessary by the board in order to curtail sheep and chicken claim expenses of the county.

Nearly $800.00 was spent by the county for sheep and chicken claims at the last two sessions of the supervisors. At that rate, for a year's time more than $1500.00 would be expended for claims of this nature. The dog tax fund, out of which these claims are to be paid, amounted to approximately $575.00 last year. It is clearly evident then, that the major portion must be paid for out of the general fund of the county.

Sheep raising is a major industry in a large portion of the county. Their flocks damaged by marauding dogs, a number of farmers have become discouraged and have sold their flocks or are now considering such a move.

The board authorized that ballots be prepared and that an election be held on the sale of the Iosco County Fair grounds. The people of the county will vote on this proposal at the spring election.

In consideration of the extra work entailed in the supervision of the various WPA drain projects in the county, the board voted an additional $2.00 per day salary for County Drain Commissioner R. C. Arn.

Supervisors Willis Kraus of AuSable, James MacGillivray of Oscoda and W. A. Evans of East Tawas and Prosecuting Attorney John A. Stewart were appointed a committee to secure a hearing with the State Administrative Board relative to the state's attempt to recover delinquent tax money paid the city of AuSable years ago.

The city of AuSable assessed a certain piece of property in the city and the taxes being unpaid it was eventually sold at a delinquent tax sale. A. L. Watkins of Jackson was the purchaser. The money received from the sale was distributed to the state, county and city of AuSable. A few years ago AuSable abandoned its charter and became a part of the township of AuSable. It was then discovered that the property had been assessed the taxes through an error of the city officials and that it belonged to the state at the time of the assessment. Watkins sought to recover the money and in January, 1934, won in a suit before the supreme court. He was reimbursed by the auditor general. That department seeks to recover the bill, which now amounts to about $1600.00, from the county and is holding any credits accruing to Iosco county in that office. At present these credits amount to about $1200.00. The original tax assessed was $108.00. (Turn to No. 3, Back Page)

Plan To Make 1936 Biggest Year In Ford Sales History

Plans for making 1936 the biggest year in the history of Ford sales in Michigan were discussed at a meeting of Ford dealers from the northern half of the state held Wednesday at Saginaw.

Orville Leslie, local Ford dealer, attended the meeting, where he conferred with officials from the Dearborn Branch of the Ford Motor Company from Dearborn, Michigan.

Ford sales in the Michigan territory in 1935 were 69 percent ahead of 1934, according to Harry A. Mack, manager of Dearborn Branch, who presided at the meeting. This gain is in line with an increase of more than 77 percent in production of Ford cars in the United States and Canada for 1935 as compared to 1934, announced by the Ford Motor Company this week.

Plans for 1936 discussed at the Saginaw meeting included a discussion of the new "$25-a-month" plan for financing retail purchases of Ford cars offered through Ford dealers by the Universal Credit Company.

Under this plan, car purchasers are offered liberal credit terms, involving substantially reduced finance charges and broad insurance protection. The three essential features of the plan, according to Mr. Leslie, are: (1) maximum monthly payments of $25; (2) finance charges at the rate of one-half of one percent per month (6 percent for 12 months), computed upon the total of the original unpaid balance plus insurance cost; and (3) insurance protection at regular conference rates, including not only fire and theft coverage, but also $50 deductible collision insurance and protection against other accidental physical damage to the car.

Myrna Loy at Family Theatre in "Whipsaw"

Myrna Loy, the star you've been waiting for, comes to the Family Theatre, East Tawas, on Sunday and Monday, January 19-20, in "Whipsaw," an absorbing drama of a jewel thief who is trapped by romance.

Spencer Tracy is Miss Loy's costar. It is the first time these vital personalities have appeared together.

Long associated in the public mind with exotic roles, Miss Loy became a vivid new personality in "The Thin Man," and followed it with another equally intriguing in "Evelyn Prentice." Now, in "Whipsaw," she has a role of even greater depth and power. The picture presents her as a fascinating adventuress with a fortune in smuggled jewels.

Tracy, recently signed to a contract by the studios, appears as a government agent on the trail of Miss Loy, and becoming involved with her in a series of romantic and humorous situations.

Supreme Court Finds AAA Unconstitutional—Democrats Pick Philadelphia for Convention—Bonus Measure Is Pushed Through House.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

SIX justices of the United States Supreme court, including Chief Justice Hughes, joined in an opinion that killed the Agricultural Adjustment act. Three associate justices, Stone, Brandeis and Cardozo, dissented. The majority decision, read by Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, held that the AAA was wholly unconstitutional because it invaded the rights of the states in seeking to control farm production. The whole system of processing taxes imposed to finance the program was swept into disarray.

Not only are the processing taxes illegal but the court apparently declared the farm benefit contracts void and put up bars against any attempt of the federal government to regulate farm production by whatever means. Senators and representatives who immediately began planning legislation to continue benefit payments to farmers and to balance agricultural output did not seem to grasp the full significance of this part of the decision. The court said flatly that regulation of farm production is not within the scope of the federal government and of its powers to accomplish this, nor can it purchase adherence to a control scheme by federal payments.

The decision destroyed not only the original AAA but also the amended act of the last session of congress.

The dissenting opinion held that the AAA was a legitimate employment of the power to tax for the general welfare. It attacked the theory that the preservation of our institutions is the exclusive concern of the Supreme court and suggested that under the majority decision the unemployment work relief act is unconstitutional.

In his budget message President Roosevelt included revenue from processing taxes, so the Supreme court decision had the effect of throwing the 1937 budget still further out of balance by something like a billion dollars.

IN HIS speech at the $50 a plate Jackson day dinner in Washington, President Roosevelt declined to comment on the Supreme court decision killing the AAA. "It is enough to say," he said, "that the attainment of justice and prosperity for American agriculture remains an immediate and constant objective of my administration."

Secretary Wallace called into consultation at Washington about 100 representatives of farm organizations to try to formulate some plan for speedy legislation to supplant the discredited law. Assurance that farmers who have fulfilled contract agreements would be paid was given by President Roosevelt when he advised administration leaders in congress to push through a $250,000,000 appropriation.

Clarification of the status of $1,200,000,000 paid in taxes by processors was expected when the court decides the eight rice processing tax cases argued recently. Legal experts in congress said an act of congress would be required if the $979,000,000 in processing taxes paid into the treasury are to be refunded.

AUCTIONED off to the highest bidder, the Democratic national convention of 1936 was sold to Philadelphia by the party's national committee. The price was $200,000, plus some prizes and concessions. Chicago and San Francisco also bid for the convention. The former offered a certified check for $150,000. The California city made the same bid and later raised it to $202,500.

During a brief recess Chairman Farley telephoned, presumably to the White House, and Vice President Garner moved among the members of the committee urging the selection of Philadelphia. Therefore the City of Brotherly Love won the prize. The opening of the convention was set for June 23, two weeks after the Republican convention in Cleveland.

NO TIME was lost in putting through the house the bonus measure that had been agreed upon by veterans' organizations and approved by the ways and means committee. It carries the name of the Vinson-Patman-McCormack bill and is a compromise that authorizes immediate payment of the bonus but offers no definite plan for raising the money. It would provide 3 per cent interest until 1945 for veterans refraining from cashing their adjusted service certificates at once, and cancel all interest still due on loans on the certificates.

NEUTRALITY legislation desired by the administration does not meet with the approval of Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois who, though a loyal Democrat, is sometimes opposed to measures fostered by the President. He says the law under consideration in senate and house committees would close the markets of the Middle West to world commerce, and has asked the Illinois Manufacturers' association and the Chicago Association of Commerce to support his opposition to it.

As a substitute for the general neutrality law proposed by the President, Senator Lewis advocates enactments granting the chief executive authority to issue regulations placing embargoes upon shipments of commodities which would threaten American neutrality, but stipulating that these regulations should be submitted to the senate for acceptance or amendments.

WITH the obvious intention of building up public sentiment in favor of the special brand of neutrality legislation he desires, Senator Nye had before his senate nominations committee for several days J. P. Morgan, Thomas W. Lamont and other members of the great Morgan banking company. Nye and Stephen Rauschenbusch, investigator for the committee, sought to prove that the United States was drawn into the World war by the loans made to the allies by Morgan & Co. and its associates. The testimony concerning these loans and their implications was long and complicated. The financiers were well prepared for the inquiry and were armed with a great quantity of documents, and though there was a good deal of acrimonious talk, Mr. Morgan appeared entirely unperturbed.

J. P. Morgan

WHEN the delegates to the naval conference in London resumed their deliberations Admiral Osami Nagano, chief representative of Japan, firmly repeated his demand that Great Britain and the United States concede the parity claims of Japan as preliminary to any agreement. This attitude stopped all discussion of the British, French and Italian proposal for exchange of information about naval building plans and threatened the conference with early collapse. The crisis was so serious that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden himself took a part in the affair, calling the Japanese to his office in an attempt to induce them to adopt a more conciliatory attitude. Japanese spokesmen declared they were interested first and last in the total tonnage question—under which they demand equality—and were not at all interested in other aspects of naval limitations.

SURROUNDED by klieg lights, microphones and movie cameras, President Roosevelt stood before the senate and house in night joint session and delivered what was nominally his annual message on the state of the nation. Actually it was not that at all, but a statement concerning the war and international disturbances on the other continents, followed by what the press generally considered an eloquent and militant political speech addressed to the people of the United States, who by the millions were listening in on their radios. Partisan opinion of his message is perhaps worthless. Of course his supporters praised it highly, and his opponents were equally emphatic in derogation.

Democrats and Republicans alike commended the President's opening paragraphs in which he boldly condemned the aggression of Italy and Japan, though without naming those nations; and there was little dissent from his assertion that the United States must maintain its neutrality while seeking to "discourage the use of belligerent nations of any and all American products calculated to facilitate the prosecution of a war in quantities over and above our normal exports to them in time of peace."

The remainder of the message, devoted to domestic affairs, was devoted chiefly to a belligerently worded defense of the New Deal measures of the administration, an attack on those who oppose them and a spirited passage in which Mr. Roosevelt defied and dared his critics to move for the repeal of those measures instead of "hiding their dissent in a cowardly cloak of generality." In only two paragraphs did the President dwell on "the state of the nation." In these he said that after nearly three years of the New Deal national income is increasing, agriculture and industry are "returning to full activity," and "we approach a balance of the national budget."

One passage in the message was interpreted by some as a threat to close the lower courts to suits attacking the constitutionality of federal laws. The President told congress that its enactments require "protection until final adjudication by the highest tribunal," and added that congress "has the right and can find the means to protect its own prerogatives."

JAPANESE military commanders in the North China area are evidently preparing for further encroachments. Their latest complaint is that two Japanese stores in Tientsin were looted and a Japanese flag trampled on by soldiers of Gen. Sung Chel-yuan, chairman of the Hopen-Chahar political council. While Japanese airplanes flew threateningly over Peiping and Tientsin, the Japanese commanders filed a demand for an apology for the incident, an indemnity, punishment of the culprits, complete elimination of anti-Japanism, a guarantee against its repetition, and the appointment of Japanese advisers in the Chinese police departments.

THOUGH the rainy season that will check his campaign is fast approaching, Mussolini continued to send fresh troops by the thousands to Ethiopia. It was estimated that Italy's East African forces already numbered more than 250,000, and there were reports that 100,000 more would be sent in the near future.

The Ethiopian government, accusing Italy of continued employment of poison gas in a policy of "merciless extermination" of the Ethiopian people, urged the League of Nations to dispatch a commission of inquiry to the scene of strife. League officials announced that the request would be handled by the league council, which meets January 20.

SECRETARY of Labor Frances Perkins found in the developments of the last year much of benefit for the American workman. In her annual report she cited these five great advancements for labor:

1. Unemployment compensation, accomplished through the social security act.
2. Old-age security, brought about also by the social security act.
3. Establishment of boards for settling industrial disputes locally.
4. Greater co-operation between the states and the Labor department, through regional conferences.
5. Development of the United States employment service.

Even the large number of strikes during 1935 could be viewed with some satisfaction by her, for she said they were "due in part to the natural expectation of labor to share in the early fruits of business improvement."

IN HIS message to congress submitting his approved budget for the 1937 fiscal year, beginning July 1 next, President Roosevelt followed the double system of accounting his administration has always employed—one set of books for regular expenditures and income and another set for emergency spending and appropriations. He asserted that receipts from all sources in the next fiscal year will aggregate an estimated $5,654,000,000. Expenditures for all regular government departments are estimated at $5,649,000,000. So the "regular" budget will be in balance, with a surplus of $5,000,000.

But the message went on to say, after explaining that the regular government books will show fiscal affairs in the black, as to income and outgo, they will show red to the extent of $1,103,000,000 in works-relief spending, less the $5,000,000 "surplus," this leaving the new appropriation for further works-relief open for at least two months.

That figure of $1,103,000,000 represents the President's estimate of unexpended balances on July 1 from the $4,880,000,000 and previous emergency appropriations. It does not take into account probable new appropriations for similar purposes yet to be determined.

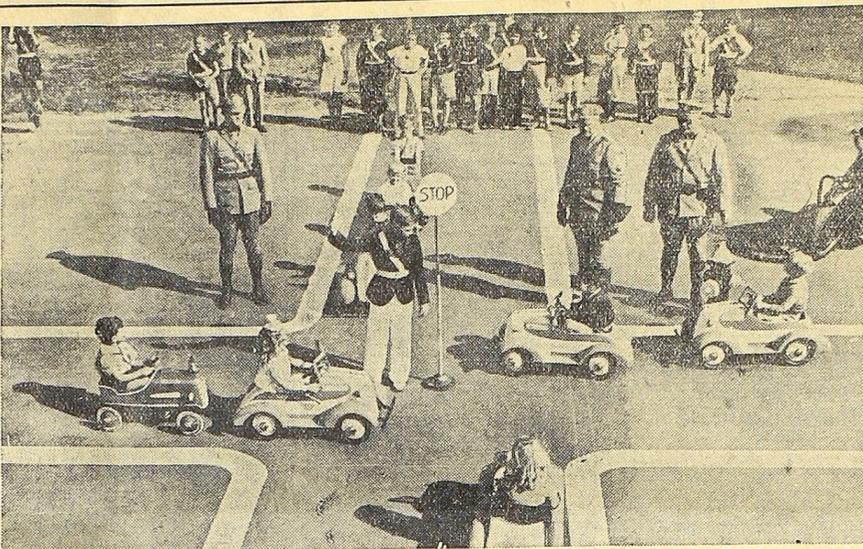

HAROLD L. ICKES, in his capacity of administrator of the PWA, went to Brooklyn to take part in the ceremony of breaking ground for the $12,789,000 Williamsburg slum clearance project, and took the opportunity to speak very harshly about those who oppose the New Deal, dubbing them "the coupon clipping gang," "the Lord Plusbottoms of the club windows," and "reactionists" who "shout that enlightened progress is unconstitutional."

"The slum is but one vicious product of that old order whose passing, we hope, is at hand," Mr. Ickes said. "I refer to the old order of special privilege, the creator and upholder of a social system containing vicious contrasts of opulence and squalor that have shamed the democracy of our own times. Its day in America is facing the western sun, but the harsh cracklings of its senile prophets are still heard in opposition to every progressive proposal; predicting disaster for every humanitarian attempt to ameliorate the lot of the least fortunate of our people."

"There are those who take an almost sadistic delight in dashing the hopes of our underprivileged citizens by ill-advisedly proclaiming that the public housing program of PWA is a failure. The facts prove the contrary. Somewhere a housing program had to be started."

"We have 47 active projects on our demonstration program, all under construction. Eleven thousand persons are already enjoying the splendid modern accommodations of limited dividend housing projects financed by PWA, and the first federal developments will be occupied early in the spring."

THE HUNTER IS DISAPPOINTED

HOW he knew he was safe, Lightfoot the Deer couldn't have told you. He just knew it, that was all. He couldn't understand a word said by the man in whose yard he found himself when he climbed the bank after his long swim across the Big River. But he didn't have to understand words to know that he had found a friend. So he allowed the man to gently drive him over to an open shed where there was a pile of soft hay, and there he lay down, so tired that it seemed to him he couldn't move another step.

It was only a few minutes later that the hunter who had followed Lightfoot across the river reached the bank and scrambled out of his boat. Lightfoot's friend was waiting just at the top of the bank. Of course the hunter saw him at once.

"Hello, friend!" cried the hunter. "Did you see a deer pass this way a few minutes ago? He swam across the river, and if I know anything about it he's too tired to travel far now. I've been hunting that fellow several days, and if I have any luck at all I ought to get him this time."

"I'm afraid you won't have any luck at all," said Lightfoot's friend. "You see, I don't allow any hunting on my land."

The hunter looked surprised, and then his surprise gave way to anger. "You mean," said he, "that you intend to get that deer yourself?"

Lightfoot's friend shook his head. "No," said he, "I don't mean anything of the kind. I mean that that deer is not to be killed if I can prevent it, and while he is on my land, I think I can. The best thing for you to do, my friend, is to get into your boat and row back where you came from. Are those your hounds barking over there?"

"No," replied the hunter promptly. "I know the law just as well as you do, and it is against the law to hunt deer with dogs. I don't even know who owns those two hounds over there."

"That may be true," replied Lightfoot's friend. "I don't doubt it is true. But you are willing to take advantage of the fact that some one else's dogs have broken the law. You know that those dogs had driven that deer into the Big River, and you promptly took advantage of the fact to try to reach that deer before he could get across. You are not hunting for the pleasure of hunting but just to kill. You don't know the meaning of justice or fairness. Now get off my land! Get back into your boat and off my land as quickly as you can! That deer is not very far from here and so tired that he cannot move. Just as long as he will stay here, he will be safe, and I hope he will stay until this miserable hunting season is ended. Now go!"

Muttering angrily, the hunter got back into his boat and pushed off. But he didn't row back across the Big River.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

FRUIT SOUPS

COCKTAILS are more popular as a fruit beginner for the dinner than soups, though in Europe the soups are enjoyed by prince and peasant, summer or winter; chilled with shaved ice they make a most nourishing dish. With fruit soups the nourishment depends upon the ingredients used, as with other soups. Prunes, raisins, figs, bananas, persimmons and pawpaws have more food value in themselves, though lacking in other things. With the addition of stock, milk and egg, the food value is increased. Dried or canned fruits are used as well as the fresh fruits.

Strawberry and Orange Soup.

Sprinkle a pint of strawberries with sugar and let stand on ice for one hour. Make a sirup of one and one-half quarts of water and a pound of sugar, cook for ten minutes, add a quart of fresh berries with the juice of one lemon. Mash and strain, adding a cupful of orange juice with the berries, which have been iced. Serve cold.

Apple and Rice Soup.

Core and slice thin eight unpeeled apples. Cook them with one-half cupful of rice until both are soft, using two quarts of boiling water. Put through a sieve, add spices and one-half cupful of orange juice or grapefruit marmalade. Serve hot.

A very appetizing salad may be made by stuffing well plumped and stewed prunes with cream cheese and finely minced celery. Serve on lettuce with a spoonful of french dressing, or any other kind preferred.

Prune and Peach Soup.

Take one-third of a pound of dried prunes and two-thirds of a pound of dried peaches, soak overnight. In the

MAGIC NUMBERS

THIS is a mystic prediction. The magician writes something on a slip of paper which he seals in an envelope. A person is asked to write a number of three figures—all figures different. For instance, 193.

The magician does not see the number. He merely tells the person to reverse it and subtract the smaller from the larger. Example: 193, reversed, is 391. The subtraction leaves 198.

That, too, is kept from the wizard. He says to reverse the result and add. And 198, reversed, is 891. The two, added, produce 1089. The envelope is opened. On the paper is the number 1,089.

Whatever the original number used, the final total will be 1,089. That is the secret of the trick. One point: always mention that a zero must be placed in front if the subtraction brings a two-figure number. Thus, 99 (which sometimes arrives) is treated as 099. Reversed, it is 990.

QUAINT FREIBURG

Clear Water Runs Through This Freiburg Street.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

FREIBURG, gateway to the Black Forest of Germany, not only thrills tourists with its quaintness, but is a city of historical monuments. Many of the monuments are churches, but numerous lay monuments also flank Freiburg's streets. Martin Waldseemüller, the geographer who was the first to put the name "America" on a map, was a Freiburger, and his ancestral dwelling not only still stands but flourishes. Martin's father was a prosperous butcher, who apparently held views unpopular in Germany even then, for he was known as "King of the Jews" and met a violent death.

The family were at the time living in what is now No. 9 Lowenstrasse, then the Pike's Head house, and Martin was a student at the newly established Albert-Ludwig university. Later, when Waldseemüller's "Cosmographie Introductio" and the world map, on which for the first time the newly discovered Western World was called "America," became famous, neighbors probably remembered that a family of that name had lived on their street. But it was only in recent years that a tablet was placed over the door of the little two-story yellow house, stating that here from 1480 to 1492 dwelt Martin Waldseemüller, who in his famed World Atlas of 1507 bestowed on the continent of America the name it bears.

It is a beauty shop now, with a shiny brass dish, sign of the hairdresser, swinging over its door. No one looking at its positively "prissy" front would dream that it had weathered the storms of 450 years.

The Whale house—why "Whale" no one seems to know—is probably the most spectacular of all Freiburg's lay monuments. It was built by Kaiser Maximilian I, but only three years after its completion he died, in 1519. Save for a brief month when Maximilian's grandson visited Freiburg, it was never occupied by royalty. But the place has been meticulously kept up, and now, one of the town's largest savings banks, it stands, all warm red and glittering gilt, a classical example of the dwelling of a prosperous medieval noble.

Oldest Inn in Germany.

The Bear Inn is generally conceded to be the oldest inn in Germany. There it is, a deep-yellow, three-story stone building with a high, domer-windowed roof and maroon shutters, set slightly edgewise and bulging a little with the bend of the street; but natty withal and rather snapping its fingers to the 500-odd years that are chalked up against it.

The inn appears on Freiburg's town records as a going concern in 1390, and since that date the names of its proprietors are all on file. This is something of a miracle when you consider that the poor old Bear has kept his ground with his back against the city wall and his nose uncomfortably near the city's most vulnerable gate, and that he has survived the onslaught of Austrian, French and Swedish armies.

All Freiburg's old buildings carry their age well, though, and are singularly lacking in a depressing museum atmosphere. They are kept up and painted, and, above all, lived in. About them hangs a jaunty air of character and usefulness such as you see in sturdy old people who refuse to be shelved. The Kaufhaus (Merchants' Hall) in the Munsterplatz, an amazing example of Late Gothic in bright red and gold, since it was begun, in 1524, has been a trading center for the Schwarzwald farmers.

The flat-faced yellow Kornhaus, or Granary, across the square, with its enormous step gables and its red trimmings, was completed the year after John Cabot visited North America. Today, as always, it is the place where the market people store their wares. The mellow buff building beside it, which was old Freiburg's orphan asylum, has become a very dignified public library.

Freiburg and the surrounding country has the church to thank for industries as well as for historic monuments.

With the spread of Christianity, monasteries sprang up all over the Schwarzwald. Now, although the Rhine valley plain is known as the "Garden of Germany," the Schwarzwald is in an entirely different category. Bordering the streams the slopes are steep, timber-covered, and not conducive to agriculture.

The flatter uplands, as in our own New England states, were once ice-covered and are consequently stony and not highly productive. That the land was not capable of supporting a large population was early recognized by a law prohibiting the splitting up of farms among the descendants of their owners. In those days the land used to and still does go down to a single owner, leaving the rest of the family to shift for themselves.

Famous for Its Industries.

Soon the surplus population, scenting a market for foodstuffs as well as for labor, settled about the monasteries in swarms, and the monks found themselves saddled with an unemployment problem, which they solved so successfully that in time Schwarzwald industries became famous the world over.

The occurrence of timber and abundant clean sand started the glass industry. During the Age of Discovery the manufacture of glass for barter with the American Indians fanned this industry to fever heat.

The exploitation of silver-lead veins opened up a mining district which was once important and which was worked until a few years ago.

Water power led to gem-cutting. The house occupied by the Guild of Gem Cutters still stands, and when Marie Antoinette passed through Freiburg on her way to France to marry the Dauphin, the burghers presented her with a thousand cut garnets. Today in nearby Waldkirch is a large gem-cutting establishment. This same water power has been used for nearly 200 years to run Freiburg's silk-thread mills.

Forests made lumbering, clock-making (Schwarzwald clocks have wooden wheels), and woodcarving possible. Even in the Middle ages Schwarzwald timber-drivers delivered their log rafts as far away as Rotterdam.

Sheep led to hat-making and weaving, willows to basket-making; and the Schwarzwald peddler, carrying hats and cloth, baskets and clocks, glassware and silver ornaments, was known at every door in Europe.

Even now handwork goes quietly along on a small scale in the forest, as if there had been no industrial revolution. In their own houses, men and women make clocks and music boxes and furniture, as well as funny little wooden toys that delight the heart of the most blasé and hardened child.

Vineyards in the City.

The monks also planted the first-known vineyards of the district. As far back as the Eighth century there are vague accounts of grape-growing and wine-making in Breisgau, but the earliest official record of such activities comes from the Holy Ghost hospital in the middle of the Thirteenth century.

The most distinctive note of the Freiburg wine industry is that some of the vineyards are actually a part of the city. In Colombi park, almost the center of town, the sunny slopes are thriflily planted with vines that yield a particularly delicious wine, and the Schlossberg vineyards roll down to the Schwabentor.

So that's that for Freiburg's romantic past, which overlaps its present so neatly that the seam hardly shows. It also carries us on to her claim to jollity.

This claim depends upon one's standard of jollity. If you are a student, you will find all that the heart could desire in the way of gaiety, typical college gaiety that doesn't seem to vary a hair's breadth the world over. But if you are seeking sophisticated night life, Freiburg will leave you cold; for it is essentially a university town and a place of retirement for people of considerable wealth and position.

The streets, down to the smallest, are immaculately clean, and during the warm weather flowers are everywhere—in the City Gardens, in the park along the Dreisam, in the open squares, and in rioting masses at all the windows, up to the tiny dormers high on the roofs.

IS WAR MADNESS, OR ADVENTURE, AS YOUTH SEES IT?

The hovering threat of World war is protested in a document signed by more than 340 psychiatrists who warn that the world is drifting toward a war madness.

War means all destructive forces are set loose by mankind against itself, they assert. On the shoulders of the statesmen to whom the document is addressed, they place the responsibility for the developing war psychosis.

"The suggestive force of speeches made by leading statesmen is enormous and may be dangerous," they say. Whole peoples, swayed by the influence of the hypnotic words of their leaders—the cries of danger and of "atrocities"—may be carried away by hallucinations and delusions and become neurotic. Nations unbalanced emotionally and mentally!

The other side of the picture is also pointed out by psychiatrists. War provides an outlet for the destructive aggressive forces in man, ordinarily repressed by modern civilized society. For this reason many find release and a fierce joy in the cruelties and bloodshed of battle. These do not become neurotic. They have a glorious time. Laughter may be seen on the faces of the youths setting forth gallily for the "great adventure."

It has taken generations of stern discipline to teach man to master the impulses that lead him to anti-social conduct; to make him learn to work in peace with his fellow man toward a common good. If a World war takes the confining lid from the boiling cauldron of man's aggressive instincts, what will be the price to the future?—Science Service.

The new 1936 Ford V-8 Stake Truck on the 157-inch wheelbase

THE GREATEST LINE OF FARM TRUCKS FORD HAS EVER BUILT

IN THE old four-cylinder days, farmers relied upon their Ford trucks as their most dependable farm implements. With the coming of the V-8, farmers soon found out that here was a powerful, rugged modern truck as easy on the pocketbook as the old four-cylinder Ford.

The 1936 Ford V-8 Trucks are the greatest farm trucks that ever bore the Ford name. There are no experiments, no untried features in them. They have been PROVED BY THE PAST in millions of miles of farm hauling, over all kinds of roads, in all kinds of weather. And farmers now acknowledge them outstanding in economy and reliability, as well as in performance.

This year, they have been IMPROVED
FOR THE FUTURE. See the 1936 Ford V-8
Trucks. Accept your Ford dealer's invitation for an "on-the-job" test on your own farm, with your own loads . . . and find out what V-8 Performance and V-8 Economy will do for you.

New low monthly terms — $25-a-month time payments and a new UCC 6% finance plan. See the

Byron Lomason Celebrates 81st Birthday

Byron Lomason celebrated his 81st birthday anniversary last Saturday. He gave a birthday dinner to all his relatives in the evening. This was followed by a free dance at the Roll-Inn hall. Friends were present from far and near. Music for this grand affair was furnished by the Irish brothers from near Prescott and Wm. Hasty of Sterling.

Mr. Lomason was born in Avon township, Oakland county, on January 11, 1855, and has lived his entire life in Michigan. In 1880 he was married to Miss Eva Moore. They moved to Ogemaw county in 1887 to what was then known as the "Lost City of Damon." Ogemaw county at that time consisted of vast plains. In 1894 they moved to Isoco county to a farm three miles west of Whittemore, which he still owns. Fourteen years ago he retired and moved to Whittemore. His wife died a short time later. On September 14, 1925, he was married to Mrs. Minnie Koyl, who is still a faithful companion.

Mr. Lomason goes deer hunting every fall and enjoys the art of living despite his years. No St. Patrick's day goes by without his being conspicuous around town with a bright green ribbon adorning his hat.

Skeletons in Armor Suits

Are Found on Battle Site
 Skeletons fully arrayed in medieval armor have been found in excavations in the vicinity of Venice, all in a perfect state of preservation. Workers engaged on excavations for the new great canal which is under construction in the picturesque district surrounding Stra, came across what undoubtedly must have been the scene of a great battle in the days of the ancient Venetian republic. One of the many skeletons in armor was found to have a sword still between the ribs. Presumably the man fell in battle and has lain undisturbed all these centuries. Quantities of ancient weapons and armor also were found, together with beautifully modeled vases which, when the centuries old dirt had been washed away, were found to be painted by hand with designs and figures, the colors being perfectly preserved.

Poverty

Poverty is dishonorable, not in itself, but when it is a proof of laziness, intemperance, luxury, and carelessness; whereas in a person that is temperate, industrious, just and valiant, and who uses all his virtues for the public good, it shows a great and lofty mind.—Plutarch.

It always works

Just do what hospitals do, and the doctors insist on. Use a good liquid laxative, and aid Nature to restore clocklike regularity without strain or ill effect.

A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

Photographs Show Earth's Curvature

Stratosphere Flight Films Interest Science.

Washington.—Striking pictures from high in the stratosphere, showing the earth's actual curvature on the horizon more clearly than ever before, and revealing how the world looks from the greatest height at which photographs ever have been made, have just been developed from films exposed during the recent stratosphere flight of the National Geographic society—Army Air corps balloon, Explorer II.

The photographs were shown for the first time in connection with ceremonies at which Capt. Albert W. Stevens, commander of the balloon, and Capt. Orvil A. Anderson, its pilot, received Hubbard Gold Medals, highest award of the National Geographic society, in Washington.

The photographs were taken by Captain Stevens while the Explorer II, was at its "ceiling," 72,395 feet above South Dakota, a new world altitude record. He showed them during a lecture describing the flight following the presentation of the medals.

Covers 220-mile Stretch.
 The picture showing the lateral curvature of the earth includes a stretch of the horizon 220 miles in length. This represents more than three degrees of a circle—nearly

CUBA HONORS HER

It became known recently that Mrs. Marion Hughes Pierce wife of Andrew Granville Pierce III, of New York, heir of the American Woolen millions, gave the last $5,000 necessary for the success of the revolt against Machado in Cuba. So Mrs. Hughes has become the new national idol of the islanders and she was invited to be the guest of honor at a state banquet in Havana and to receive Cuba's highest decoration, the Carlos de Cespedes cross.

1/100th of the total circumference of the earth. The curve of the horizon is easily noticeable when the picture is projected on a screen—photographic evidence that the world is round. When the edge of a ruler is laid along the horizon the curvature is even more plainly visible.

In taking this picture the camera used by Captain Stevens "saw" a distance of approximately 300 miles, far beyond the range of the human eye. The horizon showing in the photograph is estimated to have been at that distance from the camera. The photograph was taken by infra-red light which is capable of piercing distant haze. All of the other colors of sunlight are shut out of the camera by a red filter in making this kind of long-distance photograph.

The picture shows a vast stretch of western South Dakota, covering more than 33,000 square miles. The Black Hills, from which the flight started and which have an area of about 6,000 square miles, appear as a large dark area at one side of the picture 100 miles in the background. The picture was taken from a position above Parmer, S. D.

The horizon line in the photograph is represented by a stratum of haze estimated to lie about 10,000 feet above the earth. This stratum of haze, however, conforms closely to the sea level surface of the earth and its curvature reflects accurately the curvature of the earth itself.

Rivers Like Delicate Tracery.

Both still and motion pictures taken directly downward from the stratosphere balloon while it was at its ceiling of 72,395 feet, the highest-altitude pictures of the earth ever taken, also were shown by Captain Stevens. They reveal the earth as a huge plain marked with tiny checkerboard-like farms and fields. Cutting into the level, smooth farm lands are regions of erosion, with innumerable small stream courses, arroyos and creek beds, forming intricate patterns of delicate tracery like frost on a window pane. Roads appear as thin, knife-edge lines. Towns are practically invisible.

Make Men Bigger Than Trees on Indian Rugs

Sault Ste. Marie.—Indians hereabouts are long on art but short on perspective, a study of the designs they work into their hooked rugs on sale in local stores would indicate.

Frequently the rugs, sought by tourists because of their eccentricities in proportions, have men taller than trees, canoes so small they wouldn't support a child but shown carrying two or three men, and bears of the size of elephants worked into the designs.

Sometimes when they get a man finished they don't have room for a big tree so they just make a small one. "The picture is the thing—not the size," explains "Pete" Vigeant, friend of the Indians who seeks on outlet for much of their handicraft.

The League and World Peace

By

LEONARD A. BARRETT

Since the Ethiopia-Italy uprising the League of Nations has been given front page publicity in many of our newspapers and magazines. Certain groups have criticized the league severely, while other groups, with no uncertain voice, have praised it. Perhaps the controversy over the merits or failures of the league are due to a misunderstanding of its functions and powers.

The league was organized for the promotion of peace and it was inspired very largely by Woodrow Wilson. It was officially created January 10, 1920, with headquarters at Geneva. The covenant of the league includes a provision which binds all member nations to refrain from warfare for a period of three months during which time they agree to submit their disputes to arbitration. The league has a noble record. In many cases it has averted hostilities and promoted interest in the limitation of armaments. In the realm of economic problems its influence has been constructive and profitable. But the power vested in the league is limited. Some persons expect it to accomplish results for which it was never organized. One of these is the prevention of war. The league can function only as a court of arbitration, penalizing nations which violate their covenants and establishing "sanctions" against nations provoking war, as in the case of Italy. The league, however, has no power to annihilate the war spirit. It has administrative but no creative powers. A desire for war must arise first before the league can function, but it is powerless to prevent the rise of the passion of war. We must look elsewhere for the source of that creative power which substitutes for the war spirit the passion for peace.

According to the record, when the Founder of Christianity was born, the angels sang, "On earth, peace to men of good will." This passion of "good will" cannot be legislated into reality. No court of arbitration, however powerful, can create it. It is a passion of the heart which seeks to express through the international mind, its irrevocable obedience to the command: "Thou shalt not kill."

Indeed, it may be seriously questioned if the military way ever accomplished the real purpose for which men fought and died on battlefields. The struggle for international peace by way of the Cross is more potent than by way of the sword.

Bashful Irishmen Offers

The Household
 By Lydia Le Baron Walker

IT IS a bad habit that should be broken, this one of calling up friends, acquaintances, and especially business persons, when they are eating.

It is amazing but strangers sometimes do this very thing, evidently in the hopes of getting a job for themselves or for a member of his or her family or for some friend. It is a distinct intrusion on the quiet privacy of home life. The person calling up realizes that it is during meal times that people are most sure to be in, but this is no reason why he should disturb the routine of a household, as the call most certainly does.

Meal time telephone calls are actually infringements on the peace and quiet of the home. A busy person must have hours of relaxation, and part of such time is taken up with meals. Moreover, it upsets everyone at the table to have one of the group called off, though it be for just a few moments. Conversation is broken in upon and food gets cool. The family is likely to be annoyed and shows it, sometimes even going to the lengths of blaming the person called, when in reality he is just as provoked as anyone else. Many a happy meal has been turned from its pleasant channel by an importunate caller on the telephone, who probably would not consider calling in person at such an hour. At least if he did he would expect to wait to see the individual until after the meal was over.

No Response

A person of affairs, either in the business or social world, seldom pays attention to a telephone call made during meal hours. The servant is instructed to say, "Not at home," or to inform anyone calling up at the time, that he or she cannot be interrupted until after a certain hour later on, or until the next day. The person calling up has no reason to feel slighted or bothered when so informed. The term "not at home" is recognized merely to mean, not at home to receive callers either in person or on the phone. Once it was common parlance, but is not in such common use today, although it is sometimes used with the significance given.

Of one thing there is certainty—it never works to the advantage of the person calling up when the time chosen is the dinner hour, or the time of any other meal. The one exception is when matters are urgent and will brook no delay. These times are few and far between.

A Child's Attitude

Children respect parents who do not spoil them. They fear parents who are too severe and harsh and who punish to give vent to their own tempers rather than to correct misdeeds of their youngsters. After all, the size and strength of individuals has a great deal to do with such chastisement. Parents are like giants in these respects in comparison with children. Such punishment as just referred to has nothing to do with that type of correction that helps character building. Physical power and not courage is represented by such parents.

Courage to discipline a child begins when the child is very little. An early instance of it is when the infant cries for something that is not good for it, and the mother, who longs to let the dear little baby have everything, must steadfastly refuse.

It is the courage of love that underlies family discipline, the courage that is self-sacrificing, that is steadfast in refusing but is equally determined to grant permission whenever possible, and which will overcome obstacles to do this. The courage to give and to withhold are balanced.

Irked Sergeant Keeps Warrant for Ten Years

New Haven, Conn.—The most joyous moment in the long career of Sgt. James J. (Scop) O'Brien will come when he finally serves the warrant he has been carrying for 10 years.

It's not the fugitive so much as his "insolence" that strengthens O'Brien's determination.

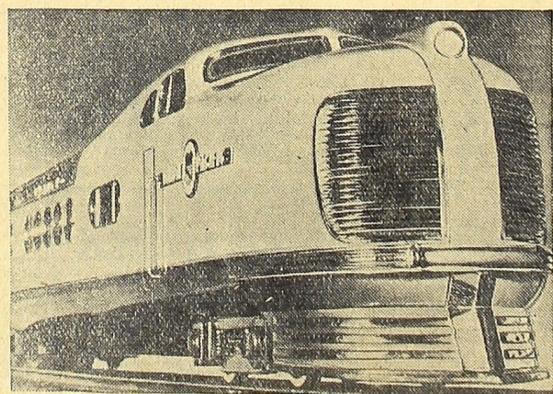

Always one step ahead of the law, the fugitive has faithfully kept the sergeant posted as to his whereabouts. His latest "insult" came from Paris in the form of a postcard which read:

"Dear Scoop: Having a good time. Glad you're not here."

On the reverse side was a picture of a youngster wearing boxing gloves and a notation:

"I'm the champion. Come over and take me some time."

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches, or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains... and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Mr. Ramill had reacted in his own way. His temporary friendliness had disappeared. He was again the bland, droll investor in mines who so generously presented worthy prospectors with a thousand, and in return took over claims worth many thousands. Huxby of course had been a hopeless case. But Garth had fancied there were possibilities in the older pirate.

Lilith Ramill, however, was the real disappointment. Though she had done nothing, so far as Garth could tell, to disprove her declared hatred of him, she had seemed more and more to show a spirit of fair play. It had led him into thinking she possessed a true spirit of sportsmanship.

Yet now the girl avoided looking at him. Occasionally she gazed rather hard at her fiancé and murmured about the hotel at Edmonton. But for the most part she sat in moody silence. The grease that dulled the brilliant blue diamond of her engagement ring seemed to annoy her. She rubbed at it with a bit of dry moss, between bites at her meat.

By the time Garth finished his own half-spoiled meat, he managed also to swallow his bitterness. After all, what else could he have expected? The girl was the daughter of Burton Ramill—the selfish spoiled daughter of an unscrupulous business sharper.

He broke in upon her rubbing of the begrimmed diamond: "May I ask you for the salt and tea bags, Miss Ramill? They're as good as empty, I see. But I can refill them for my return to the valley."

She stared at him, wide-eyed. "Valley! You—you're going back there?" "To be sure. Why not? You can't suppose I'll abandon all that million in my platinum placer."

Huxby's face had gone blank. His agate eyes stared with all their cold rancor. But Mr. Ramill chuckled. "Of course, my dear—the placer. He will be going back to his placer next spring."

The girl did not turn her astonished gaze away from Garth. "Dad does not understand. I do. You mean now! You planned it from the first. All that caribou meat and—"

"Good guess," he broke in. "It has taken a bit longer than I expected to get you out. But in my light birch-bark, I fancy I can make the head of canoe water before the freeze-up. After that, frost and snow will make no difference. I'll have a pair of webs—snowshoes."

The millionaire spoke in place of his wild-eyed daughter: "But, man, the cold?"

Garth smiled. "Have you forgotten I told you that I wintered with the Eskimos at Coronation Gulf?"

"They have dog teams."

"Some of those teams were reared from wolf pups. I might experiment. There are several wolf families in the valley."

"You're stark mad! If you think you can—"

Mr. Ramill paused. He listened to what Huxby was muttering in his ear. His frown smoothed out, and he again favored Garth with the smile that did not go up as high as his shrewd eyes.

"Oh, well, my boy, if you're bound to risk your life in foolhardy adventuring, that's of course none of our business."

"Quite so," Garth agreed. "If our sixty-fourth deal had not fallen through, it would have been your business to do the legal assessment work on the claim. But as things stand, I may as well put in the winter doing the work myself. The metal I sited out with my wolf team should pay enough to buy me a fair-sized freight plane."

The millionaire beamed. "Yes—ah—true!"

Garth smiled back at him. "By the way, I meant to let you discover for yourselves at Fort Smith the happy surprise I've had all along for you. But since you're so pleased already over my prospects, I'll let you into the secret right now."

"Secret—at Fort Smith?"

"Yes. I forwarded my papers by the southbound Bellanca before I had the pleasure of meeting you and Miss Ramill. My claim has been on record for the past four weeks or so."

Huxby glared with a sudden change from gloating to cold rage: "You lie! You were going out in your canoe."

He was on his feet almost as soon as Garth. His fists swung in blows driven by all the force of his furious anger. Garth side-stepped both, and clipped in a hook to the jaw. Huxby dropped as if hit by a sledge. Yet it was not a complete knockout. After three of four seconds, he sat up, blinking like a dazed owl, and rubbing the flattened wad of beard on his jaw.

Garth had stepped back. He said: "Apologize, or get up and take what is coming to you."

Huxby stopped blinking. The daze cleared from his eyes. They took on their usual calculating look. He felt again at his sore jaw, and replied with cold deliberation: "I withdraw the term."

Arrogant as was the tone, the words were an unqualified apology. Garth turned to Lilith, who stood gazing at him with a peculiar hard glow in her blue eyes. He spoke as if nothing had happened:

"Some of the ashes are now cool enough for you to use, Miss Ramill. Rub them on as a mud paste till the potash cuts the grease, then scour with sand, and rinse. Better take your ashes in the blanket, and use it for protection while you do your laundering. The skeets and bulldog flies are swarming. You'll find a bit of sand beach just under that clump of spruce."

Without a word, of thanks, she dragged the blanket to the edge of the nearest outburst fire and began brushing the fluffy gray wood ashes upon it with a spruce spray. Her father had been gazing thoughtfully at Garth. He took up his empty foxskin bag.

"Come on, Vivian. This is washday. Take Lilith's bag and get your potash."

The wolfskin knapsack, with its platinum alloy treasure, had been left attached to the mooring line of the canoe. There was no bag for Garth. He made one by opening the front of his buckskin shirt and hand-ladling wood ashes inside.

Lilith went over beyond the spruce thicket with her blanket-bagged ashes. Garth led Mr. Ramill and Huxby to the strip of sand below the beached canoe. There he showed them how to cheat the buzzing insect pests. Instead of stripping for his laundry work, he muddled his ashes and plastered the paste all over his body and on the inside and outside of his clothes.

He rubbed in the mess and gave the weak solution of potash lye time to act. After that came the rinsing. He waded out and sat down in the water up to his neck. Thus protected from the swarms of stingers, he stripped off one garment at a time, washed it clean of ashes, and tossed it upon the edge of the beach. Before coming out, he took a luxurious swim in the clear river water.

First Ramill and then Huxby rather gingerly copied Garth's method. Like him, both wound up with a swim. Neither, however, ventured far out into the vast slow flood of the Mackenzie.

With the landing came the comedy. The others ended their bathing before Garth. He tread water to watch them. Both had wrung out their clothes and flung them well up the beach. The moment they splattered ashore, the waiting swarms of blood-suckers buzzed to the feast.

Huxby cursed, snatched up his half-dry rags, and dashed back in, to dress under water. Mr. Ramill, however, had no desire to put on wet clothes. He beat at the zizzing pests with his tattered union suit. It enabled him to get into the leather trousers and coat without being stung more than half a hundred times.

Garth's mirth was mixed with admiration for the mine investor's nerve. Along with this he felt a glow of satisfaction over the results of what his rigorous training had done for the once-soft millionaire. Though still heavy-set, the portly gentleman had become something of an athlete in appearance. His flabby muscles had been hardened; his loose jowls were now firm. His paunch had disappeared. He was lean about the waist and hips, and full-chested.

"My word, sir," Garth sang out, "you look fit for the football squad. That should be worth more to you than a dozen platinum claims. At least, you might toss me my buckskins."

Mellowed by the bath and swim to a temporary return of friendliness, the millionaire chuckled and came down the beach to fling the sodden garments out to their owner. His loitering afterwards may have been for Huxby. Yet he went back to the dead fires with Garth, when the engineer muttered something about having dropped his penknife.

As the two disappeared over the top of the ice-gouged bank, Huxby sprang to open the wolfskin knapsack. From it he snatched out a piece of rancid bear-cub fat, a clip of pistol cartridges, and his "lost" automatic.

With swift, purposeful movements, he rubbed the fat on the rusty pistol and began working the mechanism. It jammed repeatedly. But as the sun-melted fat soaked the rust, the action became normal.

Still quick yet unhurried, he loaded the clip into the hollow butt and slid back the outer barrel to throw a cartridge into the breach.

As was of course to be expected Lilith Ramill had not returned from her own dip and wood-ashes laundering. Garth sat down beside the tin cup and little aluminum pot to mend a rip in the left leg of his buckskin trousers.

Still in a friendly mood, but with shrewd calculation in his eyes, Mr. Ramill stretched out on his back in the long grass beside Garth.

"Well, young man, it appears that the game is played out. The joke on us is that you had the cards stacked. A cold deck, and no stakes up."

Garth differed: "Why not put it according to the facts, sir? I offered a square deal—a straight business proposition. The placer was in on that. Had I not sent out my papers for record, I would have had no legal claim to offer in my bargaining."

"Why—er— But when I refused your terms, and you refused mine, you said you preferred to play out the game."

"My game," Garth qualified; "not yours. It was you and Huxby who thought you had the cards stacked to win. You fancied it a sure-thing gamble."

"But—your game? You had the placer clinched. Why not have said so at once, or at least there at the lake when you turned the tables on us? I might have accepted your terms. At least we could have flown out together, instead of going through all these weeks of privation and hardship."

The last words won an amused glance from Garth.

"Hardship—privation? You must know several fellow millionaires who call it prime sport to spend a month in the bush."

"Sport?"

"Oh, well, if you can't see that side of it, just recall yourself as you were when I had to hoist you out of the monoplane cabin."

That held the millionaire for a long moment. Then—

"Admitting how much I've benefited from your health cure, Doctor Garth, your methods have done my future son-in-law no good. As for my daughter, to drag a delicately nurtured lady into the dirt and privations and dangers of your raw wilds—"

"Delicate!" Garth cut in. "Do you know of anyone more hard? The point in her case is that she was only a brittle, harsh alloy. Now she's at least partly tempered into true steel. I had hopes of still better results from the both of you. But hate and treachery blacken the blood."

At the bitter statement, the millionaire flushed with anger. He started to turn over on his side to frown at Garth. The movement drew Garth's glance. Above a clump of wild currants, less than ten paces distant, he glimpsed the top of Huxby's hat and the outthrust muzzle of the automatic.

As Garth ducked forward, the pistol blared. Garth pitched down on his face. At the same instant, startled by the shot, Mr. Ramill jerked up on his elbow. The long grass had hidden him. Huxby could not have known that his partner was lying so close beside Garth.

In the excitement of the moment, he must have thought he had missed his kill and that Garth was bounding up again. He instantly pulled the trigger a second time. Knocked over by the shock of the bullet, the millionaire sprawled across the faccid body of Garth.

Even as the roar of the second shot dinned in his ears, the killer saw what he had done. The pistol dropped from his paralyzed hand. He stiffened erect on his knees to glare at that upermost body. It did not move.

Before he could recover his wits, Lilith burst screaming from the spruce thicket. Half clad, wet hair flying, she dashed forward to fling herself down on her bare knees beside her father. Under the partly washed off coat of mosquito dope, his face was the same sallow gray as Garth's.

She looked up, her eyes black with horror. Huxby had risen to his feet. He was advancing, once more cool. She flung out a forbidding hand.

"Stop! Keep away! You—murderer!"

His lips tightened. "You're mad, darling—clear off your head. I shot to save your father, not at him. No, listen—you must listen to me! The d—d rounneck attacked your father—with the knife—had him down. At my first shot he dodged. I thought I missed. Your father sprang up just as I fired again. It's the truth."

"Truth!" she cried—"truth! You've killed them—both!"

A great shuddering seized her—shook her like a fit of ague. Almost swooning, she sagged forward on the body of her father.

Huxby advanced with wary quickness. But at sight of the two men he had shot, he thrust his coat-hidden pistol into its sheath. All the back of Garth's sideward turned head was a crimson blotch. What need of wasting powder on a man shot through the head?

Mr. Ramill's wound gave him no less satisfaction, though for an exactly opposite reason. The bullet had struck high up on the shoulder blade, between neck and arm. Huxby pulled the thickest body from under Lilith and opened the front of the leather coat. The steel-jacketed bullet had drilled clean through and come out below the collarbone.

"Look!" he shouted his relief. "Your father—he's not killed, only knocked out. The wound's not serious, so high up through the chest. Same way one of my classmates was shot by a hold-up. Take hold. We'll get him into the canoe and make a quick run down across to the refueling post. That fellow Tobin will have a medical kit."

The pulling of her father from under her had let the girl down upon the body of Garth. Huxby's eager assurance roused her from the semi-swoon. She struggled partly up, to peer at her father, her hands braced upon Garth's lax side.

Even as she gazed, the gray of her father's face became less ghastly. But in place of the smile of relief for which Huxby looked, she sprang up to glare at him in another outburst of denunciation:

"Murderer! liar! There's his knife where I left it. He did not have it! Liar! sneak! He did not attack Dad. But you—you crawled up and shot him—without warning!"

Huxby dropped his mask.

"What of it? The d—d wood louse led first. He thought it funny to keep mum about having recorded his claim—to play your father and me all this time. Great joke that. Only it back-fired on him. I'm the only plot who can find the valley. No one can say that the claim we file on is the same as the one he recorded."

The girl quivered, tensed, and bounded sideways. The belt-ax was lying near the knife. She clutched one in each hand and straightened erect, her eyes ablaze.

"You beast!" she cried. "Go! Go, or I'll kill you!"

Arkansas' Pronunciation Decided by Legislature

From 1844 to 1848, Arkansas was represented in the United States senate by Chester Ashley, born in New England, and Ambrose H. Sevier, born in Tennessee. Ashley pronounced the name as spelled, while Sevier always said Arkansasaw. Sevier contended that the French got the name from the Indians, and spelled the last syllable "sas" because that was pronounced "saw" in the French language. The Vice President in recognizing Senator Ashley always said "the senator from Arkansas," while in recognizing Senator Sevier he said "the senator from Arkansasaw." The people were divided on the subject.

In 1881 the Arkansas legislature caused the appointment of a commission of learned men to investigate the subject, and on the strength of its report passed the following resolution:

"The only true pronunciation of the name of the state, in the opinion of this body (the legislature), is that received by the French from the Indians, and committed to writing in the French word representing the sound, and that it shall be pronounced in three syllables, with the final "a" silent and the "a" in each syllable with the Italian sound and the accent on the first and last syllables, being the pronunciation formerly universally and now still most commonly used, and that the pronunciation with the accent on the second syllable with the sound of "a" as in man and the sounding of the terminal "s" is an innovation to be discouraged." The resolution was passed in March, 1881. The name of the river, however, is pronounced Arkansas by many citizens of the state who are careful to call their state Arkansasaw.

Wrens in Our Garden

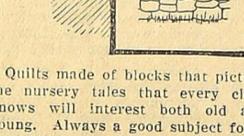

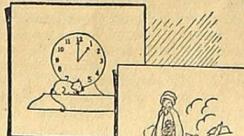

The house wren is one of the most economical birds we have, a friend to be cherished in any orchard or garden. He feeds entirely upon insects and if ever one did any harm it must have been a mistake. They rear two or three broods of four or five babies each in a season. Daddy and Mother Wren both work, taking turns sitting on the eggs or feeding the young. For a few days after a brood has hatched the father is so proud and happy that his song tumbles all over itself. Then he cools down as his duties become more arduous.

Future Written on Stars

The Chaldean sages studied the heavens to wrest from them the secret of the influence of the heavenly bodies on human affairs. They fancied that the future was written on the stars, and that it was possible for the human mind to decipher the scroll of the heavens. From that study of the movements of the heavenly bodies developed the science of astronomy, the astrologer of one age was the astronomer of the next.

Outfit No. 49-1 consists of four 9-inch blocks stamped on a good quality bleached quilting material and will be mailed to you for 10 cents. The embroidery work is in the outline stitch. Use any color thread. Address Home Craft Co., Dept. A—Nineteenth and St. Louis Ave., St. Louis, Mo. Inclose a stamped addressed envelope for reply when writing for any information.

Now You See It, Now You Don't; and Then Chief Does

A San Francisco lunch stand proprietor counted his money—$19 short. He counted it again—O. K. He repeated the process and called Police Captain Thomas B. Foster.

"You count it," he said. "I'm going crazy."

Foster counted the money—O. K. He counted it again—$19 short. Then he found a bill, $20 on one side, $1 on the other.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

When an apple pie is two-thirds baked, sprinkle grated cheese over the top. It adds much to the flavor of the pie.

To cut marshmallows easily dip a dry scissors used for cutting into powdered sugar.

If apples are pricked with a fork before putting into the oven to bake, skins will not crack open in baking.

Sprinkle the buds and leaves of tulips, hyacinths, etc., grown in the house. It prevents their shriveling.

Place a turkey or chicken with breast down in pan for the first half hour of roasting. Juices will then flow into the breast and meat will be much more tender.

To prevent fruit settling on bottom of gelatin desserts, whip until gelatin is of the consistency of whipped cream.

A soft cloth moistened with kerosene instead of water will clean windows quickly and well in freezing weather.

Mourning Doves
Mourning doves subsist chiefly on seeds, but bird lovers say that the service they perform is almost equal to that of the insectivorous species. The season for feeding their young comes opportunely, says the Indianapolis News, as they consume great quantities of weed seeds. Such grain as they eat is mostly waste in stubble fields. The United States Department of Agriculture, through its biological survey, has classed the dove as one of the useful birds and while it is shot in the South as a game bird, it is protected in most of the states and Canada.
